Foreword

1. WHAT IS ELSA?

ELSA is a non-political, non-governmental, non-profit making, independent organisation which is run by and for students. ELSA has 44 Member and Observer countries with more than 375 Local Groups and 50,000 students. It was founded in 1981 by 5 law students from Poland, Austria, West Germany and Hungary. Since then, ELSA has aimed to unite students from all around Europe, provide a channel for the exchange of ideas and opportunities for law students and young lawyers to become internationally minded and professionally skilled. Our focus is to encourage individuals to act for the good of society in order to realise our vision: “A just world in which there is respect for human dignity and cultural diversity”. You can find more information on <http://www.elsa.org>.

2. LEGAL RESEARCH GROUPS IN ELSA

A Legal Research Group (LRG) is a group of law students and young lawyers carrying out research on a specified topic of law with the aim to make their conclusions publicly accessible. Legal research was one of the main aims of ELSA during our early years. When ELSA was created as a platform for European cooperation between law students in the 1980s, sharing experience and knowledge was the main purpose of our organisation. In the 1990s, our predecessors made huge strides and built a strong association with a special focus on international exchange. In the 2000s, young students from Western to Eastern Europe were facing immense changes in their legal systems. Our members were part of such giant legal developments such as the EU expansion and the implementation of EU Law. To illustrate, the outcome of the ELSA PINIL (Project on International Criminal Court National Implementation Legislation) has been the largest international criminal law research in Europe. In fact, the final country reports have been used as a basis for establishing new legislation in many European countries.

The results of our more recent LRGs are available electronically. ELSA for Children \(2012\) was published on Council of Europe's web pages and resulted in a follow up LRG \(2014\) together with, among others, Missing Children Europe. In 2013, ELSA was involved in Council of Europe's 'No Hate Speech Movement'. The final report resulted in a concluding conference in Oslo that same year and has received a lot of interest from academics and activists in the field of discrimination and freedom of speech. The results of the LRG conference, a guideline, have even been translated into Japanese and were presented in the Council of Europe and UNESCO!

3. WHAT IS THE LEGAL RESEARCH GROUP ON MIGRATION LAW?

The International Legal Research Group on Migration Law is a cooperation between ELSA and the Council of Europe (CoE) and the Parliamentary Assembly. The cooperation derived from a need to give law students' across Europe the opportunity to expand their knowledge on this relevant topic. The LRG serves as a significant step towards increasing knowledge about migration law and providing additional learning opportunities to law students everywhere.

In order to conduct the research, CoE provided ELSA a foundation for the Academic Framework to ensure that researching. Based on those materials 28 ELSA National Groups analysed their national legislation and compiled a through-rough report.

Acknowledgements

The achievements of the International Legal Research Group on Migration Law would not have been possible without the kind support and help from many individuals.

The International Coordination Team would first and foremost like to thank and congratulate the National Research Groups for their extraordinary effort. More than 312 students and academics from more than 30 countries have participated as Researchers, Coordinators, Linguistic Editors and Supervisors. Thanks to your great work, this project has put migration law on the agenda of many law students and you have provided a valuable source of information for readers who seek to learn more about the legislation of migration around Europe.

Academic and institutional support is crucial for a student initiative. We are very grateful for the assistance we received from Penelope Denu, Deputy to the Head of the Secretariat of the Committee on Migration, Refugees and Displaced Persons of the Council of Europe Parliamentary Assembly. Without you, we would not have been able to guarantee the success of the project.

Thankfully yours,

Introduction

This Legal research reflects one of today's most important legal matters: Migration's rights and more specifically its regulation on the Republic of Albania.

The research is focused on the integration of migrants, asylum seekers and the migrant rights related to different aspects of their life, such as health care, education, political participation and other related issues.

This research mainly refers in Albanian legislation: The law on Foreigners, Asylum Seekers, Albanian Citizenship, on procedures and documentation for obtaining, reinstatement and removal from Albanian citizenship and the law on treatment of foreigners.

1. How is the right to asylum regulated in national law? Give a description of the national regulations governing asylum; What is the procedure for granting asylum and who is responsible?

The Republic of Albania guarantees the right of asylum of a foreigner or stateless person who, because of fear based on persecution, for reasons of race, religion, nationality, membership in a particular social group or political conviction, is located outside the country of his / her nationality or outside the usual residence and has no opportunity or desire to seek protection of that country as a result of such events for the sake of such fear.¹ The Albanian law on asylum refers to responsible authority for asylum and migration/ministry, giving guidance to refer to other laws and bylaw that regulate this area. The Ministry of Internal Affairs is the one that has the major responsibility in the field of migration and asylum. The General Directorate for Border and Migration is responsible in the selection of the asylum seekers, the registration, and the collection of data, the analysis and assessment relating to asylum issues. The Asylum Directorate is the authority for granting, removal and exclusion from the right to asylum and the international protection, a directorate part of the structure of the Ministry of Internal Affairs. Hereinafter when the law has defined the responsible authority/ministry will be substituted with the one that has currently these competences, to make the research more definite and clear.

- Complete the application for asylum at the General Directorate for Border and Migration and complete the application for asylum.

1.2. Specific Procedure and Competent Authorities

The Albanian law also explains the procedure when an asylum is guaranteed and which the competent authorities are. These authorities are as the following:³

- General Directorate for Border and Migration is the responsible body in the relevant ministry on asylum and refugee issues.
- The competent border authority for the treatment of persons seeking international protection is the structure responsible for border and migration.
- The National Commissioner for Asylum and Refugees is the leader of the National Commission for Asylum and Refugees.
- The National Asylum and Refugee Commission is the only competent decision-making authority for appeals against the decisions of the Asylum Directorate.

The file also sets out the recommendation given by UNHCR on asylum application.¹⁴ The Asylum Directorate shall take a decision within 30 days from the date of the hearing of the asylum seeker and without delay sends asylum seekers and UNHCR a copy of the decision, but in any case, not later than 5 days from the date of making a decision. As also included in the law³⁴ the asylum seekers may also benefit from humanitarian aid. The law gives information on the termination of the temporary protection.³⁵

This protection concludes: -upon termination of the term; - when the reasons for provisional protection no longer exist; - when a foreigner leaves the Republic of Albania; - if a foreigner has been granted another type of protection under a particular law or an international agreement; - if the foreigner enjoys international protection or resides in the Republic of Albania on a regular basis; - if the foreigner is subject to the deportation measure. During the execution of the deportation measure, the responsible authorities shall respect the rights, freedoms and dignity of the foreigner to whom the temporary protection has been completed.

1.4. Special programs that grant asylum or humanitarian protection to vulnerable persons (e.g. Syrian, unaccompanied children, etc.)

Referring to programs that grant asylum or humanitarian protection, there is one program for asylum seeker in Germany (Albanian ones). REAG-/GARP-Program 2017 Reintegration and Emigration Program for Asylum-Seekers in Germany (REAG) Government Assisted Repatriation Program (GARP).³⁶ This program is to support the Albanians in Albania that have returned voluntary and describes the whole procedure and the types of aid provided under this program.

The IOM applies this project at the order of the Federal Ministry of Internal Affairs and Ministries responsible of the provinces in cooperation with the local and regional administration, humanitarian organizations as well and the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR). This program serves for the organized preparation and implementation of the return of returnees and migrants. The requirement to benefit from the project is that neither asylum seeker / returnee who submit a request for return, nor any other person or entity responsible for support cannot afford travel expenses. For benefit of return preparation costs (e.g. passport and visa fees, travel to the airport or in the consulate for an interview), the application must be submitted to the relevant social work entity or any other person the other responsible sponsor. For emigration to third countries, you must have valid visas beforehand stay in that state. Within this program, these benefits may be eligible: Travel expenses (by plane, train or bus; fuel costs if you travel by car: in the amount of 250 €.

The International Organization for Migration (IOM) has set up a host camp for immigrants in Gjirokaster.³⁷ Located between Gjirokaster and Lake Viroi, the 3-container camp has a reception capacity of 60 temporary immigrants, which can come from the border with Greece. Currently there is not much information how this center will work, whether it will be closed, administered by the State Police, or will be a temporary immigration reception center. Although there is still no official data, it is thought that the camp will function as a short-term host country for illegal immigrants entering the Albanian territory. Although the influx of clandestine, mainly from Syria, Afghanistan, or other Middle Eastern and North African countries, has declined compared to the previous year, again there were no reports of the police for illegal violations of Albanian territory.

The Albanian law on Asylum has a defined procedure under which the procedure to get asylum is suspended or terminated. The procedure for granting asylum shall be suspended when the asylum seeker:³⁸ a) Withdraws the application for asylum; b) Does not appear in the hearing of the case, without justified reasons; c) Does not inform on time the responsible authority for asylum and refugees regarding the change of their address without a justified reason or, in some other way, obstructs the notification; ç) Does not participate in the verification of his identity; d) avoids disclosure of facts and circumstances or relevant evidence in its possession for determining the lawfulness of the application; dh) leaves the Republic of Albania during the procedure for examining the application for asylum.

The renewal of the refugee status can be refused when:⁴⁰

- The refugee voluntarily claims in any form whatsoever that he or she enjoys the protection of the country of origin or of any other country of his former habitual residence;
- The foreigner acquires citizenship and enjoys the protection of the country of citizenship acquired;
- There are no circumstances for which the refugee status has been granted;
- the foreigner who has obtained asylum has presented untrue facts and circumstances for obtaining refugee status, which have been decisive in obtaining status;
- When the foreigner has another citizenship;
- has left the territory of the Republic of Albania by issuing a written statement or leaving the Republic of Albania for more than 90 days without notifying the responsible authority for asylum and refugees;
- He has been notified of the removal or expulsion measure.

On the other side the law grants the right to appeal.⁴¹ All decisions on granting, revoking, terminating the removal of refugee status, supplementary protection status, and any other decision-making act of the responsible authority for asylum and refugees may be appealed to the National Commission for Asylum and Refugees within the deadlines and according to the procedures provided by the Code of Administrative Procedures.⁴² The decision may be appealed to the competent court for administrative matters in accordance with the legislation in force.⁴³

2. How does your national law regulate immigration from EU member states and non-EU states?

According to the legislation of the Republic of Albania an immigrant is a person who has left the territory of its country of origin and is, has been or will be employed or self-employed legally in a profitable, non-profit or public activity, with or without a time limit. However an immigrant may be illegal too. A person will be charged with the status of an illegal immigrant if he/she does not fulfill the condition required by the host state for the entry, transit or the stay of the person in its territory and exercise a profitable, non-profit or public activity in the territory of that State.⁴⁴ If a foreign citizen wants to enter, stays, leaves or pass transit to/from the Republic of Albania must turn up at the border, where is not otherwise defined by bilateral agreement, fulfilling the beloved conditions; having a travel document recognized by the Republic of Albania with a validity period of at least 3 months before the date of its expiration; a valid entry visa or valid residence permit issued by the competent authority of Albania (Ministry of Foreign Affairs).⁴⁵ To enter into the territory the foreigner must not present a threat to the public order and security or to national security and must not violate the international relations between the Republic of Albania and other states; must be not a debtor against of administrative measures imposed on him according to the provisions of this law; must have no record in the national register for foreigners that restrict his/her enter and finally must not present a risk for Public Health in the Republic of Albania. In case of transit, the foreigner must document that he/she is allowed to enter the destination country and leave the territory of the Republic of Albania.

2.1. Entrance of the Foreign Citizen to the Republic of Albania

The entrance of foreign citizen in the territory of the Republic of Albania is regulated by a Visa regime. According to the law, there are 3 types of visa provided for foreigners:

- A-type airport transit visa
- C-type for tourist purpose visa
- D-type for long-stay visa, to apply for residence permit in Albania

Despite of this regime, some foreign citizens does not need a visa to enter in the territory of the Republic of Albania. For these reason, the Council of Ministers approves a list with the name of the countries the citizen of which may skip visa.⁴⁶

Therefore may enter in Albania without visa:

- A foreign citizens who has a valid, multiple-entry US or UK visa, which has been previously used in the respective country of issuance, or has valid permit of stay in the US or UK.
- A citizen, who is coming in Albania for tourism reasons, from Saudi Arabia, Belarus, Georgia, Qatar, Oman and Russia, may enter the Republic of Albania without the requirement of type “C” visa (short term stay), in the period of time from 31 May until 15 November 2017.⁴⁷

Banning a person in a center is not the only way; the law guarantees some temporary measure. These measures are taken as an alternative measure to banning a person into a closed center. Temporary measures are provided from article 115 to article 119 and consist in measures such as: the obligation to appear in front of the authority, blocking the travel ticket or the travel documents or the duty to stay in a specific territory.

A different regime is used for children who are not accompanied. An unaccompanied minor to whom a detention order is issued is held in a state social center specifically opened for this purpose, from or to another center within the framework of cooperation with international

5. How have the decisions by the European Court of Human Rights concerning migrants been implemented at national level?

The European Court of Human Rights has played an important role, protecting migrants despite the fact that the European Convention on Human Rights only includes a few provisions on aliens. ECtHR protects asylum, which, indirectly, is a right that is not recognized by the European Convention on Human Rights on the basis of Article 3 which prohibits torture and inhuman or degrading treatment.⁷⁷ Article 3 of the Convention has provided the most developed case law initiated by Soering in 1990. The State may not act in such a way that the person concerned is exposed to a real risk of the death penalty, torture or inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment, persecution, or serious violation of other fundamental rights which would, under international or national law, justify granting protection. The Court has firmly reiterated that this prohibition is absolute and permits no derogation, even for terrorists.⁷⁸

Arriving migrants (including irregular migrants and asylum-seekers) shall be treated with full respect for their human dignity. They shall be provided with necessary social and medical assistance, including emergency treatment. Accommodation facilities (e.g. reception or detention centers), food and living conditions provided to migrants must meet basic standards of decency. Article 5 of the ECHR, which allows the arrest or detention of a person to prevent his affecting an unauthorized entry into the country or of a person against whom action is being taken with a view to deportation or extradition. The Strasbourg Court has also investigated the issue of the right to family reunification through Article 8 of the European Convention, which protects the right to family life. Article 8 of the Convention on the right to family life could also constitute an obstacle to expulsion and allow aliens to uphold their right to the maintenance of the family group in certain cases. At first, the Court dealt with second generation immigrants who often have deeper attachments to their country of immigration than to their country of origin which meant that it had to consider family life as well as the private lives of those concerned.⁷⁹ Article 13 of the ECHR (right to an effective remedy) enables persons that have an arguable claim that the conditions of their detention amount to an ill treatment to complain to an authority capable to provide redress.⁸⁰

Regarding to Albania, we can make a summary of legal acts that have an impact on the migration field, where the most important role is played by the Constitution. The Constitution of the Republic of Albania is the most important safeguard for the protection of human rights. Under Article 17, human rights restrictions cannot undermine the essence of freedoms and rights and in no case may exceed the limits set forth in the European Convention on Human Rights. Also, Article 16 of the Constitution of the Republic of Albania ratified treaties are placed in the second rank after the Constitution, thus understanding that the ratifications have the same legal power as the Constitution.⁸¹ For these reasons, the Constitution of the Republic of Albania is considered as the main instrument foresees these mechanisms. Also, the Civil Procedure Code with the changes made in 2008 provides that in cases of review of the decision that has taken final form is also provided and the case when the ECHR finds violations of the European Convention of Justice and its protocols ratified by Albania. This provision provides that the effective execution of the final decisions of the European Court of Human Rights constitutes one of the main commitments of the High Contracting Parties which, following the ratification of the European Convention on Human Rights, are required to comply with the ECHR Decisions - in any case where they are parties.⁸² This procedure is also foreseen in the Criminal Procedure Code, which provides for the reopening of criminal proceedings, taking into account the decisions of the European Court of Human Rights in cases when they have found a violation of the ECHR.⁸³ Also, the Organic Law of the Constitutional Court in its Article 71 / c foresees the obligations arising from the decision-making of the International Courts, including here ECHR decisions.⁸⁴ Albania applies the international standard established by the ECHR in its Articles 1 and 46. The difference between Articles 1 and 46 of the European Convention on Human Rights is based on the fact that Article 1 of the ECHR deals with the obligations which the contracting States are required to take, regardless of the cases of individual violations, while the obligations arising from the article 46 relate only to contracting States that are parties to the relevant proceedings before the Court. The Council of Ministers is the body responsible for overseeing the process of executing the decisions and through the Council of Ministers' Decisions makes this process possible.⁸⁵

6. How have the recommendations of the European Commission against Racism and Intolerance and of national human rights bodies concerning the integration of migrants been implemented?

The legislation of Albania provides a provision for the integration of foreign citizen living in Albania. The law no.108 “On the treatment of foreigners” has a whole chapter about the integration of aliens in the economic, cultural and social life. According to article 143 of the law authorities should ensure the conditions for integration into the economic, cultural and social life of foreigners who have the right of residence in the Republic of Albania, according to the definitions made in the legislation in force for the integration of foreign nationals in the Republic Of Albania. However ECRI on its report on Albania makes it clear that it has no information of any integration program that Albania follows for the foreigners. ECRI has requested that the provision contained at Chapter X of the law must be applied in practice by adopting effective measures on the integration of foreigners, within the new Strategy on Social Inclusion and Social Protection.⁸⁶ Until now no measures are taken for the integration of foreigners in practice unless the provisions mention at the law. Regarding to the integration of asylum Law No. 121 “On Asylum in the Republic of Albania” provides conditions for granting asylum, measures for their integration. According to this law a refugee has the right to education, the right to work, rights to social protection and housing and the right to family reunification. Despite this ECHRI at its report on Albania recommends the authorities to adopt the by-laws under Article 86 of Law No. 121/2014 so that refugees’ access to education, employment, housing and health is guaranteed in practice.⁸⁷ Until now no measures are taken for guaranteed in practice the integration of asylum seeker in the Republic of Albania. The Ombudsman of the Republic of Albania has made some recommendation according to the crises of refugee and the integration of the returned Albania. In the recommendation regarding the crises the Ombudsman requires from the government of Albania to make possible the recognition of the refugees who have entered the territory of Albania in order to provide them with the necessary documentation for the application in administrative processes regarding their status. Also the Government must declare according to the law “On Asylum in the Republic of Albania” a temporary protection of the persons coming from countries with a common background. Refugees and immigrants must be guaranteed with the access to asylum procedures without discrimination. The recommendation also request from the government to ensure an interaction against racism and xenophobia in order to protect the rights of immigrants and the principle of diversity and tolerance.

7. How is migrants' right to access to healthcare regulated within the national legislation?

The foreigner, who for different reasons may live in the territory of the Republic of Albania, may be registered with the social insurance scheme and contributions to foreign nationals are recorded according to the number of the insurance and, in case it does not exist, the personal number identification that the person has in the passport.⁸⁸ Recording procedures, basic documentation and checking of the accuracy of data transfer, from basic documents to individual contributions cards, are defined by a regulation approved by the Social Insurance Institute. Foreign nationals and stateless persons, employed, self-employed or self-employed persons in registered taxpayers in the Republic of Albania are protected and provided by the law on social security, where foreign nationals have the same rights as Albanian citizens.⁸⁹ proceeding, they are registered with a work contract and an ID (passport). In order for foreign nationals to be insured under Albanian social insurance, they must be in employment, so they must have economic ties.

Regarding exchange students, their health insurance is possible based on the agreement that links the Albanian Ministry of Education with the foreign ministries of education of foreign countries. Foreign nationals who are not regular residents in Albania cannot benefit from the social insurance scheme. Health insurance is accessible to all Albanian and foreign nationals who are registered in the social insurance scheme, any other person who is not registered must pay certain fees. Every citizen can obtain health insurance information at health insurance centers. Persons who are not registered in the social insurance scheme and pay taxes do not obtain assistance. The assistance is only obtained when it is paid under the social insurance scheme. Regarding the security of life, everyone gets paid for the service because it is not state-service but a private one and can not be included in the social insurance payment.

8. How do migrant children benefit from the right to education under your national legislation (Article 2 of the first Protocol to the ECHR)?

Article 16 of the Constitution of the Republic of Albania expressly states that the fundamental rights, freedoms and the obligations provided in this Constitution for Albanian citizens apply equally to foreigners and stateless persons in the territory of the Republic of Albania. An exception to this rule is when the constitution specifically links Albanian citizenship with certain rights and freedoms.⁹¹ Also, the Republic of Albania has ratified the Convention on Human Rights, which in Article 2 states that every individual has the right to education without distinction.⁹² According to the Convention, the holders of the right guaranteed in Article 2 of Protocol No. 1 are children, but also adults, or indeed any person wishing to benefit from the right to education. By maintaining this standard, Albania in the law for “Pre-university education system in the Republic of Albania” recognizes this right to foreign nationals and non-nationals, and also the law “For Higher Education and Scientific Research in Higher Education Institutions in the Republic of Albania” gives the right to continue higher education to all those who have completed secondary education and every other individual that this right is recognized by law and here we can quote the law “On Asylum in Republic of Albania.”⁹³ The foreigner who participates in a practice or training is provided with a residence permit for not more than one year. During recent years the number of foreign students in Albanian universities has increased: from 471 in 2012, 709 in 2013 to 690 in 2014. The decline in the number of foreign students in 2014 is explained by the reform of the higher education and the closure of some private universities in Albania.⁹⁴

The Asylum Law states that refugees in the Republic of Albania have the right to pursue education in public institutions likewise the Albanian citizen. Public institutions are obliged to register the refugee. The responsible minister determines the evaluation criteria, and the refugee has the right to apply for higher education.⁹⁵ Regarding the education of Albanian children abroad, the Ministry in cooperation with the diplomatic missions, supports the implementation of special programs for teaching Albanian language and for the recognition of the cultural inheritance. Also, regarding readmission, the government has foreseen as a measure for the integration of free professional education for returned migrants into society, thus creating employment opportunities in the domestic market. Nevertheless, it is still necessary to draft a new strategy or document on the integration of returned Albanian citizens.

9. How are foreign school and university diplomas recognised in your country (e.g. through national law under the CoE/UNESCO Convention on the Recognition of Qualifications concerning Higher Education in the European Region of 1997) and what are the practical procedures?

The Republic of Albania has defined a clear procedure for the recognition of foreign school and university diplomas. This procedure framework is clarified in the law, bylaws which are also in accordance with the CoE/UNESCO Convention on the Recognition of Qualifications concerning Higher Education in the European Region of 1997. It has an electronic and paper based service for the whole procedure. The information can be provided at the Ministry of Education and Sport (MES) and can be also easily accessed at their website.⁹⁶ Regarding mutual recognition of professional qualifications, the organization of a special session of the state exam for the regulated profession of physicians was approved by order of the Minister of Education and Sports. A new law on crafts was tabled by the government in January and is pending enactment by parliament. For the first time, the law provides for a model of the dual system of vocational education and training.⁹⁷

For the recognition of foreign school and university diplomas the electronic service is to assist citizens applying for the unification of foreign certificates and diplomas belonging to levels 5 to 8 of the Albanian Qualifications Framework issued by foreign higher education institutions. Qualifications at levels 5 - 8 of the Albanian Qualifications Framework include Professional Diploma, Bachelor, Master and Doctorate. 10. How is participation of migrants in political decisions regulated in your national legislation? Are they legally allowed to participate in their country of residence the same way as in their country of origin?

The fundamental rights and obligations contemplated in the Albanian Constitution for Albanian citizens are also valid for foreigners and stateless persons in the territory of the Republic of Albania, except for cases when the Constitution specifically attaches the exercise of particular rights and freedoms with Albanian citizenship.¹⁰⁰These rights and obligations contemplated in this Constitution are valid also for legal person as long as it comports with the general purposes of this person and with the core of these rights, freedoms and obligations.¹⁰¹Based on the Albanian Constitution every citizen who has attained the age of 18, even on the date of the elections, has the right to elect and be elected.¹⁰²Citizens who have been declared mentally incompetent by a final court decision are excluded from the right of election.¹⁰³Exempted from the right to be elected shall be the citizens being sentenced to imprisonment upon a formally and substantially final decision, in connection with the commission of a crime, under the rules set out

In order to be included in the voter list, a person must meet the following criteria:¹⁰⁶ hold Albanian citizenship; be 18 years old, including those who reach this age on the election date; be not found incapable to act by a final court decision; be registered with the National Civil Status Register; have the registered domicile in the territory of one of the polling units; be registered as a voter in the voter list of only one polling unit.

All citizens aged 18 years or older are eligible to vote, except those found incompetent by a court decision.¹⁰⁷ Non-citizens are not eligible to vote in local elections, irrespective of their length of residency.¹⁰⁸ Blanket restrictions of voting rights for these two groups are not in line with international obligations and standards for democratic elections.¹⁰⁹ Also based on the Law for the Asylum the asylum seekers and refugees cannot create, unite or support and act in political groups or other organizations that violate the order and security of the Republic of Albania.¹¹⁰ Broadening the picture to the international legal framework, there are different documents that guarantee the political right. Political rights of citizens are also provided in the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, which has been ratified from Albania. All people have the right of self-determination. By virtue of that right they freely determine their political status and freely pursue their economic, social and cultural development.¹¹¹ The States Parties to the present Covenant undertake to ensure the equal right of men and women to the enjoyment of all civil and political rights set forth in the present Covenant.¹¹² Every citizen shall have the right and the opportunity, without any of the distinctions mentioned in article 2 and without unreasonable restrictions:¹¹³

The Convention defines the following rights: the right of expression, organization and consultation with local native communities; establishment of consulting structures of foreigners at local level;¹¹⁵ the right to vote at administrative elections;¹¹⁶ the right to information.¹¹⁷ The Convention urges the Government of Albania to consult migrant workers on local developments and policies affecting their work and life in Albania. documents, the Albanian Constitution and following that Electoral Code, have the defined conditions for granting political rights to foreigner.

11. How can migrants acquire citizenship in the country? Is there a possibility of double nationality?

According to the law, Albanian citizenship is acquired by birth, naturalization and by inheritance. A foreign citizen who wants to acquire the Albanian citizenship by naturalization must fulfill some formal condition determined in article 9 of the Law no. 8389 date 05.08.1998 "On Albanian Citizenship". Therefore he/she should have reached the age of 18 years old; should have legally lived in the territory of the Republic of Albania consistently for no less than 5 years; should have a dwelling and sufficient income; should have never been convicted in his/her country or in the Republic of Albania or in a third country, for criminal offenses, for which the law provides the sentences of no less than 3 years in prison except if the punishment is given for political reasons; must have at least initial knowledge of the Albanian Language and finally his/her acceptance does not affect the security of the Republic of Albania.

Despite of the above mentioned conditions, for a foreign person who has reached the age of 18 years old and the Republic of Albania has an scientific, economic, cultural and national interest, the Albanian citizenship may be won by naturalization even if it does not meet the requirements of this law, with the exception that accepting him as an Albanian citizen does not affect the security and protection of the Republic of Albania. A different regime is used for a foreigner who proves that he/she is of Albanian origin on up to two degrees, even from one parent. The time required by the law to have been staying in the Republic of Albania will be reducing at less to 3 years. However the other conditions required by the law that are necessary for obtaining Albanian citizenship will be intact.¹¹⁹ If a foreign person is married to an Albanian citizen for not less than 3 years, if he/she wants, may win the Albanian citizenship by naturalization without fulfilling some normal conditions required by the law for other foreign persons, with the conditions that he/she must have lived continuously and lawfully in the Republic of Albania for at least one year.¹²⁰ If the parents have both acquired Albanian citizenship by naturalization may request that their children that are under 18 years old and living with them have Albanian citizenship too. If the child is at the age of 14-18 years old it's necessary the consent of him/her.¹²¹ As mentioned at the first paragraph, another way of gaining Albanian citizenship is by birth. When a child born within the territory of the Republic of Albania, from foreign parents who are legally resident in the country, may get Albanian citizenship if both of his/her parents' consent so.¹²²

The Albanian citizenship may be won by deposits a request to the President of the Republic who is the competent institution for giving citizenship. A foreign person aiming to gain the citizenship should make a request which has to contain the fully identity of the seeker (surname, date of birth, birthplace, nationality), the exact address of the permanent residence and the address where you are waiting for the information about the progress of the application, the reasons for the request of the acquisition of the Albanian citizenship. After the applicant request has been deposited to one of the above mention institution, the Ministry of Interior, within 6 month from submission date of the application, decides whether or not to present the request to the President of the Republic of Albania.¹²⁵ If the foreign, after becoming known with the decision of the Ministry of Interior to submit or not the request to the President, is not satisfied with he/she can sue that decision to the district court of Tirana. If the Ministry of Interior has decided to send the request, the President of the Republic within three months from the submission of the request of the Ministry of Interior, issue the relevant decree.¹²⁶

The final step that a foreign person must do to win the citizenship is an oath before an official of the Citizen Registration Office to be faithful to the state and for the respect the Constitution and the laws of Albania.¹²⁷ Albanian citizenship becomes effectively the day of oath.

A foreign person who may have another citizenship is allowed to acquire the Albanian citizenship and also to maintain the other one. The legislation of the Republic of Albania legitimates dual citizenship.

12. How is your country assisted by EU programmes and funding with regard to the integration of migrants?

Specifically, as set out in Regulation (EC) no. 491/2004 of 10 March 2004 establishing the Aeneas program, the latter aiming to promote cooperation between the Community and third countries by contributing to the third countries concerned and in partnership with these countries, must achieve some objectives.¹²⁸ Development of legislation in the field of migrations has specifically aimed the status of returnees, their integration and non-discrimination. Having in mind the demographic, economic and social situation that existed in the country of origin and then studying the capacity of the host countries, a different premise was put in place which directly related to public awareness of the advantages of migration and the consequences of illegal migration. The Geneva Convention together with Protocol of 1967 were two of the acts which provided for the establishment of another purpose which should ensure compliance with the principle of "inaction" and capacity building for asylum seekers and refugees. Albania as a third country should include an effective and preventive policy in the fight against illegal migration, the fight against trafficking in human beings and the smuggling of migrants. Based on the abovementioned regulation, it was decided as one of the goals for third countries the readmission of persons who have entered illegally or remained in the territory of the Member States or of persons who have applied for asylum in the European Union but have not been able to benefit from it or those who benefit from international protection. This readmission procedure should be carried out in full compliance with the law. All these different strands were developed in a balanced manner within the framework of the implementation of the Aeneas program, through supporting 107 projects which were 3 presented by different types of applicants, covering a broad range of regions and countries. Within the project "Establishing Mechanisms for the Sustainable and Effective Implementation of the Readmission Agreements" between Albania, the European Community and third countries interested in this Agreement, which are implemented by the Ministry of Interior.

The project¹²⁹ aims at assisting the Government of Albania (GoA) to fully and successfully implement the obligations that stem from the EC/Albania Readmission Agreement (RA), ratified by the Albanian Parliament on May 1, 2006. In particular, it facilitates the strengthening of the Albanian institutions to implement the third country clause of the RA, which will come into force in 2008. The implementation of the Readmission Agreement is considered a priority under the Stabilization and Association Agreement (SAA) concluded between Albania and European Commission on 12 June 2006 and the Albanian National Action Plan for implementation of the SAA.

The project also supports Albanian authorities regarding the issue of return migration within the context of migration management, as envisaged by the National Strategy and Action Plan on Migration, approved by GoA in May 2005. The project gives assistance to Albania for being able to fulfill the future requirements of the EU standard Readmission Agreement, as well as to foster the capacity of Albania to exchange information and best practices concerning the implementation of readmission agreements with third countries, through improved knowledge and expertise of Albanian counterparts. This project runs from 2006 to 2009. The main outcome of this project was the establishment of mechanisms for the implementation of the EC-Albania Readmission Agreement as a good example in the implementation of readmission agreements, and prepared the situation for the entry into force of the Readmission Agreement, the third country clause Agreement in 2008. Regarding the phenomenon of return, readmission and re-integration, Albania has undertaken a very important initiative since 2013. Agreements have been signed with all member states in the European Union and beyond.

The implementation of return, readmission or re-integration is supported by contact officers and Albanian consulates abroad participating in co-operation practices with the authorities of the respective countries to support the return of persons. After refusing asylum from European Union countries to Albanians, this process of perpetration has turned into a volunteer. In the new re-integration¹³⁰ process, many central and local level institutions involved in the implementation of policies for reintegration of returnees are involved. Among the most important are the Ministry of Social Welfare and Youth, Ministry of Education and Sports, Ministry of Health etc. The Ministry of Social Welfare and Youth¹³¹, through the reintegration programs, supported by the International Organization IOM (and not only) is responsible for the reintegration of returned Albanian citizens, specifically a special assistance is given to citizens who have an economic problem, unemployed Can benefit from employment programs. Identify existing needs for professional training of Albanian returnees. One of the main points of the program is the regional training of Albanian citizens for vocational training. The program has enabled the establishment and functioning of Migration Seats at all Local Employment Offices.

Conclusions

In conclusion of this research it can be assumed that the Republic of Albania guarantees the right of asylum of a foreigner or stateless person who, because of the fear of persecution, for reasons related to race, religion, nationality, membership in a particular social group or political conviction, is located outside the country of his/her nationality or outside the usual residence and has no opportunity or desire to seek protection of that country as a result of such events and for the sake of such fear. The Albanian law on asylum refers to responsible authority for asylum and migration/ministry, giving guidance to refer to other laws that regulate this area such as the Ministry of Internal Affairs which has the major responsibility in this field.

According to the legislation of the Republic of Albania an alien who wants to enter, stay, leave or pass transit to/from the territory of the Republic of Albania must turn up at the border by fulfilling the conditions required by law.

The entrance of a foreigner citizen to the territory of the Republic of Albania is regulated by a visa regime but citizens who have a valid multiple-entry Schengen visa or Us-UK visa does not need to apply for it. If an Alien is planning to stay for a temporary or permanent period should apply for residence permission. The residence permission for temporary period is not required for citizens of European Union or Schengen if they follow one of the purposes required by law while the residence permission for aliens who are planning to stay for a permanent period will be enable if they fulfill the conditions required by the law.

The Albanian state manages the emigration of Albanian citizens evaluating it as a choice of the individual and in respect of the freedom of free movement of citizens. The Authorities that are responsible for this create legal and administrative facilities necessary for Albanian citizens who wish to legally migrate or wish to return. The European Court of Human Rights has played an important role, protecting migrants despite the fact that the European Convention on Human Rights only includes a few provisions on aliens. Regarding to Albanian legislation the most important role is played by article 16, 17 of the Constitution, the Civil Procedure Code and the Penal Procedure Code, which play an important role in maintaining the European Court of Human Rights Standards.

The ECRI has required from Albania to apply in practice the measures for the integration of foreign citizens living in Albania (for example a real measures must be the adoption of a new Strategy on Social Inclusion and Social Protection) however still no measure is taken for the real integration of the foreigners living in the territory of Albania. The same situation is presented even for asylum seekers. The foreigner, who for different reasons may live in the territory of the Republic of Albania, should be registered with the social insurance scheme and contributions to foreign nationals. Health insurance is accessible to all Albanian and foreign nationals who are registered in the social insurance scheme, any other person who is not registered must pay certain fees.

The Constitution of the Republic of Albania expressly states that the fundamental rights, freedoms and the obligations provided in it for Albanian citizens apply equally to foreigners and stateless persons unless the Constitution otherwise provides.

The recognitions of foreign school and university diplomas the legislation has defined a clear framework which is also in accordance with the CoE/UNESCO Convention on the Recognition of Qualifications concerning Higher Education in the European Region of 1997.

With regard to the citizenship, every alien who has reached the age of 18 years old, has lived in the territory of the Republic of Albania and has never been convicted in his/her country or in the Republic of Albania for a criminal offense may acquire the Albanian citizenship by depositing a request to the President of the Republic of Albania.

In the new re-integration process, many central and local level institutions are involved in the implementation of policies for reintegration of returnees. The most important responsible institutions are the Ministry of Social Welfare and Youth, which in accordance with IOM is responsible for the reintegration of returned Albanian citizens, Ministry of Education and Sports and the Ministry of Health.

Introduction

During the 20th century, the international community, including Armenia, consistently recruited a number of refugee conventions, directives and laws to provide equal treatment and protection for human rights. In July 1951 the Diplomatic Conference in Geneva adopted the Convention on the Status of Refugees (which entered into force on 4th of October 1951), which was subsequently completed in 1967 by agreement. These documents clearly defined who is a refugee and what legal protection and social rights are given to them. It also defines refugee responsibilities towards a country that has granted him asylum and mentions a group of people, including war criminals, who are not subject to refugee status.

United Nations Convention on the Status of Refugees (1951) (hereinafter “the Convention”) and its Protocol (1967) (hereinafter the Protocol) for the Republic of Armenia (hereinafter “the RA”) entered into force on October 4, 1951 and July 6, 1967 respectively. These important international documents were the basis for adoption of the Law on Refugees and Asylum (hereinafter in the frameworks of this question Law). The first law on Refugees was adopted by the RA National Assembly on March 3, 1999. Afterwards during development of the legislation raises the necessity of adoption a new law which would conform to international principles and guidelines. As a result, on November 27, 2008, the RA National Assembly adopted the RA Law on Refugees and Asylum (hereinafter “the Law”).

This Law is a cornerstone in domestic law relating to asylum and refugee status. The latter regulates the relations relating to the refugee recognition, asylum, as well as guarantees the application of the Convention and the Protocol and recognizes the right all foreigners and stateless people to seek and enjoy asylum in the territory of the Republic of Armenia and at the state border crossing points of the Republic of Armenia, if they meet the requirements specified in this Law for granting asylum. Law defines asylum as the protection afforded to a foreign citizen or a stateless person in the Republic of Armenia, which guarantees the application of the principle of non-refoulement, as well as all rights granted to internationally recognized refugees by the Convention, this law and other legal acts. The Law also provides the basic rights and obligations of asylum seekers and refugees, defines the procedures of provision, termination, deprivation and cancellation of the refugee status, the scope of asylum seekers and refugees with special needs, the consequences of refusing to grant asylum, the grounds for reapplying for asylum, and other crucial issues related to seeking asylum and refugee status.

Besides the abovementioned, the RA Government approves the national migration program every year. On 31 August, 2017 the Government of RA confirmed the National program of Migration by the protocol on the 2017-2021 of strategic measures aimed at the development of the Armenian migration policy. These are visa facilitations, internationalization of education, development of integration policies and more.

So we can state that the government of the RA always pays more attention to the migration and tries to regulate this sphere accordance with the international contracts. For that aim the RA makes legal appropriate amendments for effective protection of human rights in the area of migration law.

1. How is the right to asylum regulated in national law? Give a description of the national regulations governing asylum; What is the procedure for granting asylum and who is responsible?

The list of the competent state bodies of RA, as well as their functions regarding granting asylum to foreign citizens and stateless people (hereinafter referred to as foreigners), refugee recognition, the exercise of asylum seekers' and recognized refugees' rights and other relations in the RA are clearly defined in the RA Law on Refugees and Asylum. According paragraph 1 of Article 34 of the Law the designated Body on Migration Issues is The State Migration Service of Ministry of Territorial Administration and Development of the Republic of Armenia. The processes of refugee recognition and asylum granting in the Republic of Armenia are being implemented through the State Migration Service of the Ministry of Territorial Administration of the Republic of Armenia (hereinafter, “the SMS”).

Paragraph 1 of article 2 of the Law prescribes Asylum as the protection granted to a foreign citizen or stateless person in the Republic of Armenia, which guarantees the application of the principle of non-refoulement defined in Law, as well as all the rights granted under the Convention, present Law, and other legal acts of the Republic of Armenia to refugees recognized as such in the Republic of Armenia. According Paragraph 2 of article 2 of the Law asylum, as defined in the Paragraph 1 of this Article, shall further be extended to any foreign citizen or stateless person recognized as a refugee by another State, if he/she has legally entered the territory of the Republic of Armenia and has one of the resident permits issued based on the legislation of the Republic of Armenia, providing the right to legally reside in the country.

A person, who is seeking asylum in RA, may apply to the SMS in a written form after his / her entry to the territory of the Republic of Armenia, as well as at border crossings (airports) orally or in written form. A person has the right to apply for asylum even if he/she has entered RA illegally. According Paragraph 1 of Article 13 of the Law an asylum application shall be the asylum request or asylum application submitted by a foreign citizen or stateless person to the bodies defined in Paragraphs 2 and 3 of the present Article.

According Paragraph 2 of Article 13 of the Law any statement regardless whether submitted orally, in writing, with the help of gestures, or by any other means of communication, made in person to the Border Guards of the Republic of Armenia (hereafter: border guards) within the State body on national security issues designated by the Government of the Republic of Armenia (hereafter: designated body for national security), at the state border crossing points of the Republic of Armenia, and to the designated body in the territory of the Republic of Armenia, as well as to the state body designated by the Government of the Republic of Armenia for combating crime and unlawful activities and keeping public order (hereafter: Police), which expresses his/her willingness to find protection in the Republic of Armenia, shall be considered an Asylum Request.

According Paragraph 3 of Article 13 of the Law the written request for asylum submitted by a foreign citizen or a stateless person to the designated body within the territory of the Republic of Armenia shall be considered an Asylum Application. The person must submit an application form defined by the Government of the Republic of Armenia.

According Paragraph 4 of the Article 47 of the Law the asylum application shall be presented by the asylum seeker in writing in Armenian, or in his/her mother tongue or in one of the United Nations languages. When filling in the application, it is necessary to specify the circumstances which caused the asylum seeker to leave the country of his nationality or permanent residence.¹³²

Asylum application requires the following documents:

- a copy of the passport (copies of other identification documents);
- a copy of the birth certificate;
- available documents that, in the opinion of the person applying, prove the persecutions against him/her;
- 4 photographs¹³³.

A person may apply for asylum even if he does not have a passport or other identification document. Upon completion of the above-mentioned actions, the seeker's application will be accepted and registered in the SMS as an asylum seeker in Armenia. According paragraph 1 of Article 51 of the Law Every asylum seeker, with the exception of family members who have refrained from filing an individual asylum application pursuant to Article 13, Paragraph 4 of the present Law, shall participate in the interview conducted by the Designated Body. The Designated Body can make a decision on granting asylum or recognizing as a refugee without an interview, if in the particular case there is sufficient information for making such a decision or asylum seeker is not able or cannot participate in the interview for reasons beyond their will, which have a lasting nature.

Within 15 days after the application is registered in the SMS, an interview with the applicant is carried out by an SMS employee. The main purpose of the interview is to get detailed information about the reasons for leaving the country by the asylum seeker. If the applicant is a woman, the interview may be carried out by the SMS's female worker. If a person does not speak Armenian, then an interview is conducted through an interpreter. The interview is confidential. The Information provided by the person will not be disclosed to the authorities of his country or to any other person. The confidentiality of the interview is guaranteed by law. The SMS within 3 months after filling in the application for asylum will make a decision either recognize a refugee in the RA and grant asylum, or refuse the application. If a person has already been recognized as a refugee by a country which has signed the Convention, only a decision on granting or refusing an asylum will be made on his application¹³⁴.

It is also to be noted that asylum requests and asylum applications for the entire family seeking for asylum can be filed for the entire family by one family member present on the territory of the Republic of Armenia, which, however, shall not impede the right of other family members to file their own individual applications¹³⁵.

In addition to the general procedure for asylum application, it is also possible to apply the accelerated one. This is possible only when the application is obviously groundless, as well as in the case of re-applying. When re-applying where there is a negative final decision on the first application, and the individual has submitted other circumstances that were not included in the first application. These circumstances should not be included in the first application for either good reasons, or being newly emerged. In the case of an accelerated procedure, the SMS will review the application and make a decision within 10 days. Because of the difficulty of obtaining and examining specific information, the SMS may extend the decision making for a maximum of one month.

According paragraph 8 of Article 52 of the Law the seeker needs to be informed within 3 days after the decision is made. Attached to the decision a written notification is also given which includes a description of further actions of the asylum seeker: in case of a positive decision shall contain information on the legislation regulating issues related to his/her further residence issues in the Republic of Armenia, and in case of a negative decision – necessary information on appealing the decision. If the application of asylum seeker has been denied and the person disagrees with it, he/she has the right to appeal the decision in court. According paragraph 1 of Article 57 of the Law Asylum seekers and refugees shall have the right to appeal to the court against any negative decisions issued by the Designated Body to them in the course of the asylum procedure or any other administrative procedure based on the present Law. Appeals may be launched within 30 days after notification on decision.

According to the Law asylum seekers have the right to appeal to the court against any negative decisions issued by the Designated Body to them in the course of the asylum procedure or any other administrative procedure based on the present Law. Appeals may be launched within 30 days after notification on decision. If the deadline is not met, the decision of the Designated Body becomes final. The period for launching an appeal may be renewed if there are valid reasons, which do not fall within the sphere of influences of the appellant. After the reason (reasons) for missing the appeal period disappears, the asylum seeker can present an appeal to the court within 15 days, but not later than within 3 months starting from the day he/she got acknowledgement of the decision by the Designated Body regarding his/her asylum application. Negative decision of the Designated Body shall include information on the right to appeal and the periods for launching an appeal, as well as on applying to respective court. Negative decisions of the Designated Body on asylum application or refugee recognition shall be considered final, if the asylum seeker did not appeal against¹³⁶.

The Law guarantees the right of asylum seekers and refugees to contact the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees at any time. The UNHCR is endorsed by the above-mentioned bodies in the field of oversight and co-operation for the application of the Convention and the Protocol in Armenia. However, as mentioned, the state body that implements the asylum procedure and is responsible for it is the State Migration Service of the RA Ministry of Territorial Administration. The legislation of RA also prescribes humanitarian protection for the asylum seekers and vulnerable persons.

According article 23 of the Law refugees granted asylum in the Republic of Armenia shall have the right to benefit from the social services, state-allowances and other financial assistance, including allowances granted for temporary unemployment, injuries, accidents and work-related diseases, guaranteed free medical care and services by the State, which are defined by the legislation of the Republic of Armenia for the citizens of the Republic of Armenia, as well as shall have the right for social protection with regard to pension security and unemployment prescribed by the legislation of the Republic of Armenia, if they fulfill the requirements set in the legislation of the Republic of Armenia, regulating this concrete area. Asylum seekers and refugees not granted asylum in the Republic of Armenia shall have the right to receive free medical care and services guaranteed by the State for citizens of the Republic of Armenia, if they fulfill the requirements set in the legislation of the Republic of Armenia, regulating this concrete area¹³⁷.

According paragraph 1 and 2 of article 14 of the Law asylum seekers who need accommodation are placed in temporary reception center until the final decision on their asylum application is adopted. In case of impossibility to accommodate in reception center, asylum seekers who are unable to meet the basic livelihood needs are provided with financial assistance in the manner prescribed by the Government of the Republic of Armenia. According article 24 of the Law Asylum seekers and their family members shall be accommodated in the temporary reception centre, as defined in Article 14 of the present Law, and provided with food (three times per day), bed linen, hygienic kits, in case of need, clothes and shoes (hereinafter: subsistence means) by the Designated Body. Also the legislation of RA takes attention to the vulnerable persons e.g. unaccompanied or separated children.

According article 50 of the Law designated Body on Migration Issues appoints a representative for the unaccompanied or separated children asylum seeker(s), which shall be required to represent the best interests of them properly. According paragraph 2 of article 50 of the Law designated body on labour and social issues jointly with the Child Protection Units shall initiate the process of accommodating and appointment of guardian for unaccompanied minor asylum seekers. Moreover, if the accommodation in the temporary reception centre is not appropriate designated body on labour and social issues jointly with the Child Protection Units shall initiate the process of accommodation consulting with their representative.¹³⁸

Meanwhile unaccompanied or separated children are accommodated in the temporary reception centre with priority. Besides above mentioned regulations there are not other specific guaranties for vulnerable persons but they also with other asylum seekers have equal rights for getting the social protection set by the Law.

Turning to the grounds for exclusion of refugee protection, according Article 11 of the Law a foreign citizen or stateless person, shall not be considered a refugee, if there are serious reasons to believe that:

- he/she has committed a crime against peace, a war crime, or a crime against humanity, according to the international instruments drawn up to make provisions in respect of such crimes;
- he/she has committed a serious non-political crime outside the Republic of Armenia, before he/she became an asylum seeker in the Republic of Armenia;
- he/she has been guilty of acts contrary to purposes and principles of the United Nations.

Moreover, asylum may be denied to any refugee, who arrives from a safe third country, where he/she does not fear persecution, human rights violation, or refoulement of some requirements of the Law, or external aggression, occupation, foreign domination, internal conflicts, or other events seriously disrupting public order and he/she can lawfully return to that country. Decision on refusal from the recognition as a refugee and from granting asylum shall be established only by the designated body according to the respective procedures prescribed by the Law (Article 53) According article 12 of the Law the recognition as a refugee by the designated body shall be cancelled when it becomes evident that he/she should not be granted a status of a refugee including the case when the grounds for exclusion was applicable for that person during the process of deciding the status.

According article 6 of the Law on foreigners a foreign citizen may enter the territory of Armenia if he/she has a valid passport, on the basis of a document attesting entry visa or residency status and with the permission of the body implementing border control if no other order is defined by the legislation of the Republic of Armenia or international treaties. The entry of foreigners to the territory of the Republic of Armenia, who have arrived at the RA state border, is not prohibited if they arrive with the view of seeking asylum.¹³⁹ Foreigners can exit the RA with a valid passport and a valid document confirming the legality of their stay and residency in the territory of the RA up until the moment of exit.¹⁴⁰

2. How does your national law regulate immigration from EU member states and non-EU states?

Although the Republic of Armenia is not EU member state, the cooperation with the European Union is one of the priorities of Armenia's foreign policy. Armenia and EU maintain an active political dialogue. Since Armenia's independence, cooperation with the EU has been essential in carrying out reforms in the fields of economy, justice and state institutions building, strengthening democratic society and institutions dealing with the protection of human rights and fundamental freedoms. In 2004, Armenia joined the European Neighborhood Policy (ENP)¹⁴¹ and the Armenia ENP Action Plan was adopted in 2006.

The 2005 Armenia Country Report highlights areas in which bilateral cooperation could be feasibly and valuably strengthened.¹⁴² It points out the large migration flows produced by Armenia that resulted to a drop in the country's population. Armenia is described as a country of origin and transit of both migrants and victims of trafficking. Specific reference is made to refugees, most of which are ethnic Armenians displaced from neighboring countries due to conflicts.

Refugees are granted basic social and economic rights however, their integration is challenge. Victims of trafficking are transiting from Armenia to the United Arab Emirates, Turkey and Russia for both sexual and labour exploitation. The 2006 ENP Action Plan contains a comprehensive list of specific areas of cooperation under migration issues, which include enhanced dialogue on prevention and control of illegal migration and readmission of own nationals, stateless persons and third-country nationals, modernization of the national refugee system in line with international standards, facilitation of movement and fight against organized crime and trafficking in human beings. In 2009, the EU adopted the Eastern Partnership¹⁴³, as a specific eastern dimension of the ENP Instrument¹⁴⁴.

The Eastern Partnership aims to deepen and strengthen the relation between the EU and Armenia, Azerbaijan, Belarus, Georgia, Moldova and Ukraine. The stronger political engagement envisaged with the EU includes, inter alia, the prospect of a new generation of Association Agreements, visa liberalization and measures to tackle illegal immigration. According to the ¹⁴¹ The European Neighborhood Policy (ENP) was developed in 2004 with the objective of strengthening relationship between the EU and its neighbor countries. The ENP is further enriched with regional and multilateral cooperation initiatives: the Eastern Partnership, the Union for the Mediterranean and the Black Sea Synergy. ENP is proposed to Algeria, Armenia, Azerbaijan, Belarus, Egypt, Georgia, Israel, Jordan, Lebanon, Libya, Moldova, Morocco, Occupied Palestinian Territory, Syria, Tunisia and Ukraine. Roadmap to the autumn 2013 Summit of the Eastern Partnership,¹⁴⁵ by the autumn of 2013 negotiations on the Association Agreement with Armenia should be well advanced, if not finalized. Armenia and the EU started negotiating an Association Agreement in 2010 in order to replace the Partnership and Cooperation Agreement. The Association Agreement will also include a Deep and Comprehensive Free Trade Area (DCFTA).¹⁴⁶ DCFTA negotiations with Armenia should also be well advanced, if not finalized by autumn 2013, and substantial progress should have been made in the area of regulatory approximation, in accordance with the Commission's recommendations. In 2011, the EU-Armenia Mobility Partnership was adopted regulating cooperation in four areas: (1) legal migration and integration, (2) migration and development, and (3) fight against irregular immigration, and (4) asylum and international protection.¹⁴⁷ This is the third EU Mobility Partnership with an Eastern Partnership country, after the ones with Moldova and Georgia. Mobility Partnerships are innovative and comprehensive tools to foster cooperation on migration and mobility issues, including legal migration, the fight against irregular migration, international protection, and migration and development. Important aspects of the EU-Armenia Mobility Partnership along the four areas of cooperation are the following: the facilitation of temporary and circular migration, strengthening of Armenia's capacity to manage migration, the provision of information to potential migrants on opportunities for legal migration to the EU accompanied by pre-departure training, the prevention of brain drain and brain waste (especially through return policies), the support of voluntary return and sustainable reintegration, the enhancement of cooperation with the Armenian diasporas, the fight against irregular migration and human trafficking through strengthened implementation of border management, the enhancement of security of identity documents, the provision of international protection according to best international standards, the facilitation of the asylum seekers' reception and submission of asylum requests and the improvement on exchanging information and best practices for the fight against irregular migration. There has been no evaluation of the progress of implementation of the Mobility Partnership Agreement so far.

¹⁴⁶ In 2011, Armenia made significant progress in the preparations for the DCFTA negotiations by advancing with the implementation of necessary reforms, focusing on sanitary and phytosanitary issues, technical barriers to trade and on intellectual property rights. Following a recommendation from the Commission, in February 2012 the Trade Policy Committee agreed that Armenia had made sufficient progress on implementation of the Commission's key recommendations and that negotiations on a DCFTA could start soon. The following EU Member States participate in the Mobility Partnership Agreement: the Kingdom of Belgium, the Republic of Bulgaria, the Czech Republic, the Federal Republic of Germany, the French Republic, the Republic of Italy, the Kingdom of the Netherlands, the Republic of Poland, Romania and the Kingdom of Sweden.

In 2012, Armenia and the EU started negotiations for a Visa Facilitation Agreement and a Readmission Agreement. Visa Facilitation Agreements are signed as an intermediate step towards visa free travel.¹⁴⁸ The Visa Facilitation Agreement was signed on 17 December 2012 and its aim is to facilitate the issuance of visas for an intended stay of no more than 90 days per period of 180 days to the citizens of Armenia. Issues not covered by the Visa Facilitation Agreement, such as the refusal to issue a visa, recognition of travel documents, proof of sufficient means of subsistence, refusal of entry and expulsion measures are regulated by the national law of Armenia or of the Member States or EU law.¹⁴⁹ The agreement facilitates the issuance of visas for Armenian citizens, especially frequent travelers, reduces the visa fee and waives the visa fee for certain categories of persons. The Readmission Agreement between Armenia and the UE was signed on 19 April 2013. It covers both readmission of own nationals as well as of third-country nationals and stateless persons. However, strict conditions need to be fulfilled for the readmission of third-country nationals or stateless persons to take place.¹⁵⁰

Advice is provided to the Armenian authorities by the EU Advisory Group in areas such as human rights and democracy, justice, liberty security and the DCFTA. In particular with regards to migration, the EU Advisory Group is assisting Armenia in (1) monitoring and providing advice on the implementation of the Migration Action Plan,¹⁵¹(2) raising awareness on the Mobility Partnership Agreement and Visa Facilitation Agreement, (3) elaborating terms of reference for an EC funded support project to the EU-Armenia Mobility Partnership, and (4) advising the State Migration Service in its coordinating role regarding migration management.¹⁵²

It is to be mentioned that the RA legislation does not contain any definition such as migrant although this term is being used in a range of legislative acts and official documents. Taking into consideration this fact, the term immigrant was defined as a foreigner or a stateless person having a permanent residence in the Republic of Armenia by Government Decree No. 28 of 21.07.2016. However, domestic legislation does not provide a separate definition of this term. Turning to the legal regulations of immigration, we'd like to mention the fact, that the national law of RA does not separately regulate immigration from EU member and non EU-states. Both EU member and non EU-states are considered to be foreign countries and their citizens are considered as foreigners. Foreigners shall enter the Republic of Armenia through state border crossing points, on the basis of availability of a valid passport, on the basis of an entry visa or a document attesting the residence status and in case of authorization by the public administration body authorized by the Government of the Republic of Armenia carrying out border control,

It is to be mentioned that According Paragraph 1 of Article 14 of the law in the Republic of Armenia, the following residence statuses are established for foreigners: (a) temporary; (b) permanent; (c) special. Such circumstances can be found in Paragraph 1 of Article 15 of the mentioned law. The grounds and terms for granting permanent residence status are given in the Paragraph 1 of Article 16.

Special residence status shall be granted to foreigners of Armenian origin. Special residence status may also be granted to other foreigners who carry out economic or cultural activities in the Republic of Armenia. Special residence status shall be granted for a term of ten years¹⁵⁵. So, according Article 30 A foreigner shall be obliged to voluntarily leave the territory of the Republic of Armenia, if: (a) the validity period of his or her entry visa or of residence status has expired; (b) the entry visa has been revoked on the grounds referred to in Article 8(1), (2), and (3) of [this] Law; (c) his or her application for obtaining a residence status or extending the term has been refused; (d) he or she has been deprived of residence status on the grounds referred to in Article 21 of [this] Law. Expulsion expenses shall be borne by the State Budget of the Republic of Armenia, in case they are not covered by the foreigner¹⁵⁷.

3. Is there a ministry, government agency or other public authority specifically dealing with migrants? If so, please provide a description of the framework this authority works under.

In the Republic of Armenia authority which specifically deals with migrants is the State Migration Service of Ministry of Territorial Administration and Development of the Republic of Armenia. It's a state agency of the executive department of the Republic of Armenia acting as part of the Ministry of Territorial Administration and Development of the Republic of Armenia, which renders services in the field of migration acting on behalf of the Republic of Armenia in cases prescribed by the law or, in certain circumstances, by the legislation of the Republic of Armenia. Service was established by the Decree of the RA President NH-286-N of 18 November 2009.

The tasks and objectives of the Service are: development of a policy of state regulation of migration procedures and enforcement of that policy within the framework of its jurisdiction; coordination of agencies with functions related to migration: development of migration policy and legal acts ensuring its enforcement; exercising the powers laid down by the laws of the Republic of Armenia in granting asylum to foreign nationals and stateless persons; development and enforcement of the policy of integration of the refugees deported from the Republic of Azerbaijan in 1988-1992 and other displaced persons into the society; development and implementation of relevant projects with the concerned Ministries of the Republic of Armenia, diplomatic missions, as well as international organizations, with a view to preventing illegal migration; development and implementation of a state policy encouraging the immigration of the citizens of the Republic of Armenia.

State Migration Service is not the first authority dealing with migration matters during the history of Republic of Armenia. Until the establishment of service state policy in the sphere of migration has been implemented by the Refugee Committee attached to Council of Ministers of the RA formed in December 1990; the State Agency on Refugee Affairs of the RA established in February 1992, The Department of Refugees and Migration established in the Ministry of Social of the Republic of Armenia¹⁵⁹ At the same time we'd like to emphasize that there are no such responsible local authority specifically dealing with migrants.

4. What are the recent statistics regarding migrants (i.e. asylum-seekers, immigrants, transitmigrants, trends in migratory flows) in your country?

The majority of refugees and asylum seekers in the Republic of Armenia are from Syria, Iraq, Iran, African countries (Cote d'Ivoire, Mali, Congo) and Ukraine. According to the 2016 year-end data more than 3.313 people have been granted refugee status by the State Migration Service. According to the UNHCR Armenia's report 2015, there were 19955 persons-of-concern as of December 31, 2015 (refugees, asylum seekers, persons found in refugee situations by countries) the overwhelming majority of whom (about 17000) were from Syria. Christoph Bierwirth, the UNHCR representative, said in an interview with the Armenpress news agency that the Republic of Armenia has adopted more than 22000 people after the tragic conflict in Syria (the absolute majority were Armenians).¹⁶⁰ The expert also pointed out that according to the data of June 2017, about 15000 of them still live in Armenia, and the rest have left for the Arab states of the Persian Gulf as migrant workers, have taken the opportunity of resettlement or have joined their family members. On 19 June 2017 during the press conference held by the State Migration Service the head of Division for asylum-related issues – Mr. Petros Aghababyan – highlighted that Armenian nationals are obvious majority among the whole asylum-seekers. In his speech Mr. Aghababyan stated that since 2000 until now nearly 4000 foreigners have asked protection and asylum from the Republic of Armenia and 3000 applications have been granted.¹⁶¹ It can be inferred from the above-mentioned that the largest number of transit-migrants in Armenia (about 7,000 people) were in 2011-2016. Here is some statistic data on migration.

5. How have the decisions by the European Court of Human Rights concerning migrants been implemented at national level?

The Republic of Armenia is a member state of Council of Europe, thus it recognizes the legal power of the European Court of Human Rights (hereinafter ECtHR) and its judgments. According paragraph 4 of Article 15 of RA Judicial Code the reasoning of a judicial act of the Cassation Court or the European Court of Human Rights in a case with certain factual circumstances (including the construal of the law) is binding on a court in the examination of a case with identical/similar factual circumstances, unless the latter court, by indicating solid arguments, justifies that such reasoning is not applicable to the factual circumstances at hand.

Moreover, the Court of Cassation shall accept the appeal for examination, where the Court of Cassation finds that the appeal substantiates that the judicial act under review contains commentaries of legal regulations other than made by ECtHR and contradicts prima facie the decisions previously adopted by the European Court of Human Rights. So, under the light of abovementioned we can state that decisions by the ECtHR are binding for the courts of Armenia and are directly applied by them.

At the same time we'd like to emphasis that the decisions by the ECtHR are not only directly applied by the courts of Armenia, but also have a strong influence on the domestic legislation. In particular, based on the decisions delivered by ECtHR against the Republic of Armenia sometimes certain changes and additions in appropriate laws are being made. It is to be noted that as of 28.10.2017 there are no judgments in respect of Armenia connecting migrants delivered by ECtHR. However, we find it reasonable to analyze well-established case-law of the Court and reflect the fact of implementation of the Court's judgments although not delivered in respect of Armenia .

The right to freedom of movements is guaranteed under Article 2 Protocol No. 4 ECHR, which states in its second paragraph that “everyone shall be free to leave any country, including his own”. However, in exercising control of their borders, member states must act in conformity with ECHR standards. In the inter-state case Cyprus v. Turkey The Court stated that in certain specific categories of cases, member states may be required by the ECHR to permit a migrant to enter or to remain: where a migrant meets the criteria for protection of his/her life (Article 2 ECHR) or of his/her physical integrity (Article 3 ECHR); or where deportation or extradition of an alien who had strong family ties in the country concerned could violate the right to respect of his/her family life (Article 8 ECHR).

Migrants seeking entry to a member state of the Council of Europe must be protected from discrimination on grounds of race, colour, sex, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, property, birth or other status. In the case of Abdulaziz, Cabales and Balkandali v. the United Kingdom the Court strictly defined - there should thus be no such discrimination in the process of immigration controls and in the decision of granting entry. All citizens of a third state entering the territory a Council of Europe member state, or falling under its jurisdiction, should be allowed to seek inter- national protection in the state concerned, regardless of their visa regimes. In this case the applicants, citizens of third states, claimed that their husbands were refused permission to remain with them or to join them in the UK. The ECtHR concluded that the applicants had been victims of discrimination on the ground of sex, in violation of Article 14 taken together with Article 8 because, under the domestic law, it was easier for a man settled in the UK than for a woman so settled to obtain permission for his/her non-national spouse to enter or remain in the country for settlement).

Article 29 of the Constitution of the Republic of Armenia guarantees the prohibition of discrimination thus is in line with the ECtHR case-law and states as follows: Discrimination based on sex, race, skin colour, ethnic or social origin, genetic features, language, religion, world view, political or other views, belonging to a national minority, property status, birth, disability, age, or other personal or social circumstances shall be prohibited.

The ECtHR have also recognised a series of economic, social and cultural rights for migrants living on the territory of a contracting state. The ECtHR recently stated that, in light of the vulnerable situation of asylum seekers, states' failure to take any measures to alleviate their suffering from extremely poor living conditions could amount to inhuman or degrading treatment. In addition, non-nationals should be guaranteed the right to adequate housing, health, education and work. The jurisprudence of these organs has therefore indirectly established a right of migrants to minimum standards of living. While no specific standards of living can be inferred from the rights guaranteed by the ECHR, the Court has found that, in certain cases, conditions of extreme poverty of vulnerable individuals, such as asylum seekers, may amount to a violation of Article 3 ECHR. In the landmark case M.S.S. v. Belgium and Greece, the ECtHR held that the living conditions of the applicant in Greece during the examination of his claim, combined with his vulnerability and the inaction of the state, amounted to inhuman and degrading treatment. The ECtHR took note of the fact that the applicant had been living in the street for several months “with no resources or access to sanitary facilities, and without any means of providing for his essential needs”, that he had been a “victim of humiliating treatment showing a lack of respect for his dignity”, that he was undoubtedly subject to “fear, anguish or inferiority capable of inducing desperation” and also that the state could have reduced this suffering by a prompt examination of the applicant’s asylum claim. These elements, combined with the prolonged uncertainty of an improvement of his situation, led to the conclusion that the living conditions in which the asylum seeker had found himself were in breach of the ECHR.

Article 23 of Law of the Republic of Armenia on refugees and asylum states that refugees granted asylum in the Republic of Armenia shall have the right to benefit from the social services, state-allowances and other financial assistance, including allowances granted for temporary unemployment, injuries, accidents and work-related diseases, guaranteed free medical care and services by the State, which are defined by the legislation of the Republic of Armenia for the citizens of the Republic of Armenia, as well as shall have the right for social protection with regard to pension security and unemployment prescribed by the legislation of the Republic of Armenia, if they fulfill the requirements set in the legislation of the Republic of Armenia, regulating this concrete area. Furthermore, asylum seekers and refugees not granted asylum in the Republic of Armenia shall have the right to receive free medical care and services guaranteed by the State for citizens of the Republic of Armenia, if they fulfill the requirements set in the legislation of the Republic of Armenia, regulating this concrete area. The law also lists the responsible state bodies on asylum issues.

According to Article 32 In the Republic of Armenia the responsible State Bodies for granting asylum to foreign citizens and stateless persons (hereafter: foreigners), recognizing as refugees as well as facilitation of the rights to asylum seekers and refugees and for all other legal relations stipulated by the present law, are: 1) The Government of the Republic of Armenia; (...), 6) The Designated State Body of the Government of the Republic of Armenia for Labor and Social issues (hereafter: Designated Body on Labor and Social Issues);(...), 8) The Designated State Body of the Government of the Republic of Armenia for Health Issues (hereafter: Designated Body on Health Issues).

Under the ECHR, the right to education is guaranteed by Article 2 Protocol No. 1 ECHR. The ECtHR has raised the right to education to one of the “most fundamental values of the democratic societies making up the Council of Europe”, and, as such, constitutes a right to which every person is entitled. It insisted on the fact that such a fundamental right cannot be interpreted restrictively, and affirmed the universality of the right to education by holding that the exclusion of children because their parents were not regularly registered migrants violated the ECHR and the right to education. In the case of LeylacSahin v. Turkey (GC), The Court stated “it is clear that any institutions of higher education existing at a given time come within the scope of the first sentence of Article 2 of Protocol No. 1, since the right of access to such institutions is an inherent part of the right set out in that provision”. In another case the Court stated “the Court observes that the applicant’s children were refused admission to the school which they had attended for the previous two years. The Government did not contest the applicant’s submission that the true reason for the refusal had been that the applicant had surrendered his migrant’s card and had thereby forfeited his registration as a resident in the town of Nalchik. As noted above, the Convention and its Protocols do not tolerate a denial of the right to education. The Government confirmed that Russian law did not allow the exercise of that right by children to be made conditional on the registration of their parents’ residence. It follows that the applicant’s children were denied the right to education provided for by domestic law. Their exclusion from school was therefore incompatible with the requirements of Article 2 of Protocol No. 1”¹⁶³.

It is to be mentioned that the case-law of ECtHR is being strongly respected by domestic courts when some issue of migration is being examined, for example see decision no. VD/7865/05/16 (ՎԴ/7865/05/16). In the framework of the mentioned case, the court has based its judgment on ECtHR and ECHR standards and made its assessments under the light of following decisions: The case of Collins and Akasiebie v. Sweden (Dec) application no. 23944/05, The case of Matsiukhina and Matsiukhin v. Sweden (Dec.) application no. 31260/04, The case of N.v. v. Finland application no. 38885/02, §167, The case of NA v. the United Kingdom application no. 25904/07, § 111.

6. How have the recommendations of the European Commission against Racism and Intolerance and of national human rights bodies concerning the integration of migrants been implemented?

As it is stated in ECRI report on Armenia adopted on 28 June 2016, There are currently neither comprehensive integration policies in Armenia, nor practical measures for facilitating migrants’ integration in a structured way. It is worth to be mentioned that the authorities have adopted targeted measures, for instance for people fleeing Azerbaijan in 1988-1992 or, more recently, for all asylum-seekers from Syria. For instance, in May 2004 the Government approved a priority housing program focusing on persons forcibly displaced from Azerbaijan. More recently, for people fleeing Syria, the authorities have adopted various measures covering accelerated refugee status determination procedures and access to refugee status, facilitated naturalisation, simplified granting of short or longer term residence permits, as well as other measures (including exemption or reduction in various taxes and fees) for their prompt administrative integration. In 2014, the State Migration Service opened an “Integration Centre” to accommodate up to 29 persons.

ECRI noted that these programs had been mostly funded by external donors, including intergovernmental organizations such as UNHCR. The Armenian authorities have drawn ECRI’s attention to the fact that the economic situation does not allow them to free up resources to fund comprehensive integration policies. However, ECRI noted that various Ministries have actually earmarked funds to support some of the initiatives described above, either directly or through grants to NGOs taking such action.

According to existing laws, citizens, dual citizens, refugees, stateless persons and foreigners are in general treated equally with regards to policies concerning access to housing, employment, education, welfare and health care. It is also to be highlighted that asylum seekers and refugees have the right to seek employment under the same conditions as citizens, and that there are also no general prohibitions on starting up a business as any Armenian citizen would. With regard to the priority housing program adopted for persons forcibly displaced from Azerbaijan, ECRI noted that, during the years 2005-2008, 718 families became owners of apartments. Since 2009, no funds have been allocated from the state budget for that purpose. Despite the lack of funds, ECRI stated that the authorities, in 2015, resolved the situation for 21 families, but the case of 903 families still considered as beneficiaries of the program remains unsolved. According to the Armenian authorities, 9,5 billion AMD would be required to finalize this program.

As it was understood by ECRI, for asylum seekers who are of non-Armenian ethnic background, the recognition rate is lower, and the number of pending procedures higher, ECRI invited the Armenian authorities to take these recommendations into account. In this regard, the recent initiatives of the Academy of Justice to set up courses on the protection of the rights of refugees and application of standards on the status of refugees are welcomed, as well as the cooperation agreement it signed with the UNHCR in March 2016.

In general, ECRI considers that the existing elements of integration policies and programs described above place too much focus on people of ethnic Armenian origin and on the agreed principle that their ethnic background makes integration efforts pointless. This is particularly the case for language policies. According to a Migrant Integration Policy Index (MIPEX) assessment published in 2013, migrants made up 10.5% of the population of Armenia, composed mostly of labour migrants from CIS countries.¹⁶⁴ The results of the 2011 census show that, for Armenian citizens, Russian is the most commonly used second language. However, Syrian-Armenians, for instance, speak Western Armenian, one of two variants of the modern Armenian, and Arabic rather than Russian as a second language. Several NGOs and other International Organisations have drawn ECRI's delegation's attention to cases of possible discrimination in the private sector. For instance, landlords have been reported as charging higher rents for Syrian refugees, and undue linguistic requirements have been found in job adverts. In absence of equality data and statistics, of comprehensive anti-discrimination legislation and of effective recourse mechanisms, it is difficult to assess the extent of this phenomenon.

In this respect, ECRI noted that the documents on migration and human rights protection do contain indicators for assessing the overall efficiency of the implementation of these programs. However, they do not provide indicators that could be used to monitor the actual impact of these programs on the situation of the various vulnerable groups of concern to ECRI. Similarly, ¹⁶⁴ Migration Policy Group (2013): p. 7.

ECRI noted that Armenia neither collects data nor produces statistics on equality in a general and systematic way¹⁶⁵.

In a context where there is no system in place for collecting data and producing statistics on equality, where there are no clear indicators for evaluating the impact of integration-related programs on migrants and refugees, and where the Armenian authorities have to extensively rely on external resources to fund such programs as well as on co-operation with various implementing bodies, ECRI considers that there is an urgent need to prioritise resource mobilization and fund raising initiatives, even prior to adopting comprehensive integration policies in the future.

ECRI recommended to develop a national integration strategy. This strategy should be prepared in consultation with representatives of the vulnerable groups concerned. It should also establish clear co-ordination mechanisms between all relevant ministries, implementing agencies and potential donors. ECRI recommended that the various action plans containing programs for the integration of vulnerable groups include a description of their objectives, understood as changes to be obtained in the situation of all vulnerable groups concerned, a complete set of criteria for assessing their impact on these groups, and a clear financial plan, identifying actions to be funded by the State budget and actions for which financing has to be sought from external donors. This recommendation applies to existing stand-alone programs and to any future programs deriving from the comprehensive integration policies currently being developed.

We'd like to emphasize that the abovementioned recommendation is being in the process of execution now. Action Plan of 2017-221 migration strategy of RA was adopted¹⁶⁶, which contains a special chapter about integration of migrants. In particular, it is planned to entitle a special public authority with the functions dealing with integration of migrants. It is also planned to organize training courses for such employers. What is important, it is planned to ensure a string cooperation between mentioned public authority and relevant international organizations.

7. How is migrants' right to access to healthcare regulated within the national legislation?

First of all, it is to be noted that the social protection legislation does not use the term "migrant" but it uses the term "foreigners", which according to Article 2 of the RA Law on Foreigners includes persons who are not citizens of the Republic of Armenia who have citizenship of another State (foreign citizens) or do not have citizenship of any State (stateless persons). And although the law does not use the term of a separate migrant, it is included in the notion "foreigners". Consequently, legal regulations regarding foreigners are also relevant to migrants, as, in essence, the migrant is a foreigner or stateless person residing in the Republic of Armenia.

¹⁶⁵ ECRI notes that line of action No. 4 of the Action plan for implementation of the policy concept for the state regulation of migration in the republic of Armenia in 2012-2016 includes action for the development of statistics. However, nothing similar can be found in the Action plan for the national strategy on human rights protection.

Consequently, considering the above, we will try to address the right of access to the health care of the foreigner.

In the national legislation the article 85 of the Constitution RA¹⁶⁷ defines everyone's (as Armenian citizens as foreign citizens and refugees) right to healthcare. According to the RA law about healthcare everyone has the right to healthcare in the Republic of Armenia without distinction as to nationality, race, language, sex, religion, age, health, political or other opinion, social origin, property or any other status. Foreign citizens residing in the Republic of Armenia, persons without citizenship and refugees have the right to protection of health in accordance with the legislation of the Republic of Armenia, as well as international agreements of the Republic of Armenia¹⁶⁸. According to the national legislation the right to protection of health implies hygienic, sanitary and anti-epidemic security, favorable conditions for work and leisure, access to medical care and services

According to the RA law about sanitary and epidemiological safety of the population of the Republic of Armenia the foreign citizens residing in the Republic of Armenia have the same rights and responsibilities as the citizens of the Republic of Armenia. In order to ensure the hygienic and anti-epidemic security of Armenia was established the state hygienic and anti-epidemic service (SHAS), whose management is carried out by the chief sanitary doctor. Accordingly foreign citizens have the rights of favorable environment, sanitary and epidemiological safety, the right to receive reliable and complete information and awareness on the environment and sanitary-epidemic situation, right of the development and adoption of decisions and programs relating to sanitary and epidemiological safety of the population, and to participate and monitor their implementation, the right to compensation for damage to health as a result of violation of sanitary rules, the right to appeal against the actions and inaction of officials.

At the same time they are obliged to care for their health, their children's health, and hygiene education, to comply with the sanitary requirement of RA, decisions and orders of the SHAS organisation and the government officials to ensure sanitary and epidemiological safety, and to participate in the implementation of sanitary and anti-epidemic measures. By the decision of the RA Government of March 30, 2006 N 420-N foreign citizens residing in the Republic of Armenia have the right to a doctor, whom they may voluntarily choose as a primary health care¹⁶⁹ (hereinafter PHC) doctor among doctors working in PHC in any health establishment within the administrative boundaries of their permanent residence, they register and make use of the primary health care services on paid basis according to the price list of the health establishment, unless provided otherwise by international treaties of the Republic Armenia. The PHC services are provided free of charge to Armenian citizens and refugees by a PHC doctor chosen by them. Thus primary health care are provided foreign citizens in contrast to the refugees on a paid basis. However, the exception is the foreign citizens, whose state and the Republic of Armenia have concluded an international treaty, which has established a privileged of legal status for the citizens of that country. For example, according to the Armenia and Russia treaty about the legal status of Armenian citizens residing permanently in the Russian Federation and Russian citizens residing permanently in the Republic of Armenia¹⁷⁰, Russian citizen has the same rights and responsibilities as Armenian citizen in the area of health. That is, the PHC service is provided free of charge to Russian citizens.

¹⁶⁹ The Primary health care is based on more affordable methods and technologies, which includes the treatment of diseases that do not require the most common and in-patient treatment, prevention, promotion of healthy lifestyles and the implementation of measures medical assistance and service, if needed.

Foreign citizens of Armenian nationality are not granted privileges in the area of health, in contrast to the other legal institutions. Foreign citizens and refugees, like Armenian citizen, have the rights at any time without motivation or reason to change their PHC doctor. Foreign citizens residing in Armenia, like Armenian citizens have the right to choose medical care and person doing it, receive medical care and service in accordance with medical and sanitary-hygienic conditions, as well they may receive the information about their health status and treatment methods, information about possible risk and consequences.

Specialized medical care¹⁷¹ and service are being implemented for foreign citizens, like for Armenian citizens on paid basis¹⁷², however certain individual groups have the right to receive free medical care and service. Foreign citizen who has damaged in emergency situation has the right to receive free medical care and service. Foreign citizen, who is suffering from the dangerous diseases threatening for others, is received free medical care, service and treatment, the diseased has to be treated, in the case of necessary he have to undergo a medical examination and research, otherwise the treatment of the disease is carried out forcibly. As it is already mentioned above, national legislation of RA does not contain a definition of vulnerable migrant and its certain legal status. The analyze of domestic legislation makes it clear that migrants and foreigners have the tight to healthcare on an equal basis.

8. How do migrant children benefit from the right to education under your national legislation (Article 2 of the first Protocol to the ECHR)?

Article 38 of The Constitution of The Republic of Armenia states:

- Everyone shall have the right to education. The programs and duration of compulsory education shall be prescribed by law. Secondary education within state educational institutions shall be free of charge.

¹⁷² See the decision of the RA Government of March 4, 2004 N 318-N.

- Everyone shall, in the cases and under the procedure prescribed by law, have the right to receive free education on a competitive basis within state higher and other vocational education institutions.
- Higher education institutions shall, within the scope prescribed by law, have the right to self-governance, including academic and research freedom.

Within the framework of such regulation the third part is to be underlined. The previous Constitution (reformed in 2005) granted the right to free higher education merely to its citizens. The regulation acknowledged today has rather expanded the scope of subjects including migrants as well. In accordance with the Constitution RA Law on Education gives more comprehensive regulation to this sphere. Article 51 of the law settles the relations that occur concerning the international cooperation in the field of education. According to the last;

- International cooperation in the field of education shall be carried out in compliance with the legislation of the Republic of Armenia and international treaties of the Republic of Armenia. Where international treaties of the Republic of Armenia provide for norms other than those provided for by this Law, the norms of the international treaties shall apply.
- Educational institutions shall be entitled to co-operate with foreign educational, scientific and other organizations in compliance with the legislation of the Republic of Armenia and international treaties of the Republic of Armenia.

Article 25 of the law about "Migrants and asylum" is named "Public education". It provides the following:

- The ones seeking asylum in the Republic of Armenia and the migrants who received asylum have equal rights to education as the citizens of the Republic of Armenia.
- In the matters concerning the accessibility of education, acknowledgement of foreign school certificates, diplomas and scientific degrees, release of taxes and duties and awarding scholarships, migrants who received asylum in the Republic of Armenia have rights equal to citizens of the Republic of Armenia.

This means that migrants are granted the same rights as the citizens of RA in the field of education. According to the same law Ministry of education is given the right to supervise over the process of realizing migrants' right to education. To sum up, the rights of migrants in the field of education are not significantly limited and national legislation treats migrants and foreigners on an equal basis.

9. How are foreign school and university diplomas recognised in your country (e.g. through national law under the CoE/UNESCO Convention on the Recognition of Qualifications concerning Higher Education in the European Region of 1997) and what are the practical procedures?

According to Article 25 of the Law on refugees and asylum "Refugees granted asylum in the Republic of Armenia shall be treated as favorable as other foreign citizens with regard to the access to studies, recognition of foreign school certificates, diplomas and degrees, the remission of fees and charges and the award of scholarships. Article 8 of the RA Law on higher and postgraduate professional education provides the opportunity of recognition of qualifications and documents of higher and postgraduate professional education of foreign States and approval of the equivalence thereof. Likewise, according to the Article 20 of the same law "Recognition and confirmation of equivalence of documents of foreign States on scientific degrees and scientific titles of higher and postgraduate professional education shall be carried out in accordance with laws of the Republic of Armenia as well as interstate and intergovernmental treaties and agreements covering this field and concluded between the Republic of Armenia and foreign States".

As native legislation does not provide any norms on recognizing foreign diplomas, the answer to this question is to be searched for in international treaties. The Republic of Armenia has bilateral agreements with more than 30 countries. Those agreements are directed to mutual recognition of diplomas and educational qualifications, e.g. "Agreement between the Government of the Republic of Armenia and the Government of People's Republic of China on mutual recognition of documents concerning education and scientific degrees". Identical agreement exists between Armenia and Lebanon. According to it, the sides should regularly publish the list of acknowledged educational institutions for making the process of mutual recognition of qualifications easier. Another agreement between the governments of Armenia and Lithuania forces the sides to co-operate in the field of education promoting the process of mutual recognition of diplomas and other qualifications.

The agreement about "Cooperation in the field of education" between the countries participating in Commonwealth of Independent States has more global character. The 5th article of the above mentioned agreement states: "The State Parties guarantee termless recognition in the territories of documents of the state sample on secondary, professional, secondary vocational, higher education, retraining of personnel, about award of the academic degrees and academic statuses issued in the State Parties by the time of the conclusion of this agreement".

Separate bilateral agreements in the field of education, in some cases higher education, exist with Great Britain, Czech Republic, Romania, Islamic Republic of Iran, Egypt, Turkmenistan, Russian Federation, Belarus, Ukraine, Cyprus, Argentina, Slovenia and other states. However not many of them unconditionally allow reciprocal recognition of qualifications and scientific degrees. The Bilateral Agreement between Russian Federation and Armenia permits mutual acknowledgement on condition to pass additional training in cases of differences.

Armenia has been one of the full members of Bologna educational system since 2005. The Ministerial Communiqué of Bucharest (2012) about European higher education area underlined the necessity of taking further serious steps towards the solution of the matter relating to mutual recognition of diplomas. Armenia has also ratified the convention of Lisbon (1997) named "Convention on the Recognition of Qualifications concerning Higher Education in the European Region". The convention provides separate norm about migrants. Partially, Each Party shall take all feasible and reasonable steps within the framework of its education system and in conformity with its constitutional, legal, and regulatory provisions to develop procedures designed to assess fairly and expeditiously whether refugees, displaced persons and persons in a refugee-like situation fulfill the relevant requirements for access to higher education, to further higher education programs or to employment activities, even in cases in which the qualifications obtained in one of the Parties cannot be proven through documentary evidence.

For the purpose of providing the procedural part National Informational Center for Academic Recognition and Mobility was founded in 2005. The Network of National Academic Recognition Information Center (NARIC) jointly with European Network of National Information Center on Academic Recognition and Mobility (ENIC) are international networks that aim to promote the professional and academic recognition of higher education qualifications completed abroad. The NICARM is considered a member of the international network of ENIC-NARIC organizations, which obliged to contribute to the implementation of the challenges mapped out in the Bologna declaration.

As mentioned above the fund NICARM was established with a view of Bologna implementation. The NICARM is responsible for providing information on Armenian and International higher education system to the local and foreign organizations and affiliates.

The tasks to be fulfilled by the NICARM are the following:

- NICARM implements the assessment of foreign qualifications, recognizing it as appropriate according to the provisions of the Lisbon Convention and existing intergovernmental agreements.
- The qualifications acquired abroad are undergoing evaluation and recognition in Armenia. After evaluating a foreign qualification, a complete recognition is granted if there are no significant differences between foreign and national comparable qualifications otherwise, partial recognition is given or denied. Complete, partial recognition or rejection is provided in the form of reference in Armenian or English in accordance with international standards.
- Provides information on national qualifications.
- The qualifications acquired in the Republic of Armenia go through a process of assessment and recognition carried out by the host country (and not Armenia) authorities in accordance with the provisions of the Lisbon Convention, intergovernmental agreements and national legislation. To that end, the NICARM provides information and advice to members of the network, as well as advises individuals who intend to continue their education abroad or work abroad.
- Provides advice on foreign educational systems;

- Contributes to the introduction of the European Diploma Supplement and Credit System (ECTS)
- Provides information on citizens' rights related to their recognition.

10. How is participation of migrants in political decisions regulated in your national legislation? Are they legally allowed to participate in their country of residence the same way as in their country of origin?

The list of political rights is longer than the ones that are actually connected to making political decisions. The common thing in all of them is that they most often refer only to citizens of Armenia. This cannot be considered a groundless restriction because security is one of the basic concerns of any country, especially for small states like Armenia. The risk is too high that non-citizens may attempt to lead the country in favor of their country of origin rather than their country of residence.

The basic questions concerning the participation of migrants in political decisions are regulated by the Constitution of the Republic of Armenia. Chapter two of the Constitution is named Fundamental Rights of the Human Being and the Citizen, which means that many of those rights are granted to all human beings, including migrants. The fundamental political rights are stated in articles 44-55 which include the freedom of assembly, the freedom of association, the right to create a party and join a political party, the right to vote and right to participate in a referendum, the right to enter public service and so on.

Acknowledging the right and raising one's voice by taking part in a referendum can be considered the most important political decision, as referendum is organized to discover the opinion of residents about the most significant issues. For instance, adopting the Constitution, participating in supranational organizations and adopting treaties which are related to the territorial changes of Armenia are great illustrations of issues that are only decided upon by a referendum. As in many other states, Armenia grants this right only to its citizens. People who do not hold citizenship of Armenia cannot be allowed to suffrage in a referendum. Nevertheless, there is one exception in the Constitution of the Republic of Armenia. It states that the law may prescribe the right of persons not holding citizenship of the Republic of Armenia to take part in the elections of local self-government bodies and in local referenda.

Thus, the Electoral Code of the Republic of Armenia allows the participation of non-citizens in self-government bodies' elections. It states that non-citizens of the Republic of Armenia can take part in local self-government bodies' elections if they have minimum one-year registration in the community register of the population. Therefore, in the law concerning local referenda and local self-government bodies citizenship is not a vital factor since anyone who has a year's registration can participate. It is also regulated by national legislation that persons declared, upon civil judgment of the court having entered into legal force, as having no active legal capacity, as well as persons sentenced and those serving the sentence, upon criminal judgment having entered into legal force, for a grave criminal offense committed intentionally shall not be entitled to elect or be elected or participate in a referendum. Persons sentenced and those serving the sentence, upon criminal judgment having entered into legal force, for other criminal offenses shall not be entitled to elect as well. As this statement shows, this rule concerns not only citizens but all the human beings, including migrants.

In 2013 the Council of Yerevan endorsed the regime of public hearings. It is stated in the decision that every physical or legal entity that is concerned can take part in public hearings. Public hearings are organized for finding out people's opinion on bills of important laws or decisions: hence this is one more possible solution to the issue concerning migrants' participation in political questions. Anyway, public hearings in Armenia are not mandatory, they are advisory and local self-government bodies are not compelled to be guided by public opinion.

Political rights such as establishing and becoming a member of a political party are also vital since they provide an opportunity to participate in political decisions. These parties are created to form people's will concerning to politics. Parties are elected to take part in National Assembly and form the entire legislation, decide on declaring wars and negotiating to stop them, authorizing other state bodies, ratifying international treaties and so on. As Armenia became a parliamentary republic in 2015 due to the amended form of RA Constitution, National Assembly (parliament of The Republic of Armenia) has turned into the most powerful state body. Deputies are promoted only by political parties and, as a result the role of the latter in a decision-making process has rapidly grown. National legislation demands that no one is compelled to join any political party. Nevertheless, only citizens of Armenia are allowed to form a political party or become a member of one. Thus, migrants who have not acquired citizenship are not entitled to this political right.

The right to petition was granted only to citizens by RA Constitution of 2005. But with the amendments made in 2015 the right to petition was granted to non-citizens too. Consequently, every member of the society has the right to submit, either individually or jointly with others, petition to state and local self-government bodies and officials and to receive an appropriate reply within a reasonable time period. Details shall be prescribed by law.

Besides political rights, Constitution provides people with many other advantages and freedoms some of which can affect the political decisions. It is a generally accepted practice that associations can cooperate with political parties and state bodies to achieve favorable conditions for themselves. Constitution and other legislative acts do not impose a ban for migrants to form and join different associations. Article 45 of Constitution which regulates the Freedom of Associations states that everyone shall have the right to freedom of association with others, including the right to form and join trade unions for the protection of labour interests. No one may be compelled to join any private association. The Freedom of Associations may be restricted only by law, for the purpose of state security, protecting public order, health and morals or the basic rights and freedoms of others. The activities of associations may be suspended or prohibited only upon court decision, in the cases and under the procedure prescribed by law. As shown above, migrants are permitted to form any kind of associations and join them. If the union created is powerful enough to influence a political party it can have a huge impact on making political decisions. This, of course, is not a direct way to participate in a political decision-making process, yet, sometimes it can be a very effective one.

To sum up, the rights allowing migrants to participate in making political decisions is rather limited. The limitation of political rights can be overcome by any migrant as he/she acquires citizenship of The Republic of Armenia. As double nationality is allowed in Armenia, they will be able to take part in the decision-making process both in their country of origin and country of residence at the same time. Prior to acquiring citizenship of RA the scope of their political rights will differ in two countries depending on their status. Moreover, in Armenia there are some restrictions for people who have double nationality. The highest officials of the state, such as the President, the Prime Minister or the Deputy of the National Assembly can only be a citizen of The Republic of Armenia. Except this, there are no other limitations concerning decision making for migrants who have acquired citizenship of The Republic of Armenia.

11. How can migrants acquire citizenship in the country? Is there a possibility of double nationality?

According to the law on citizenship adopted by the Republic of Armenia, the citizenship can be required by foreigners who achieved the age of 18 and who were residents in Armenia for last three years (Government decree N 1390) At the same time, in order to obtain citizenship the applicant should have some knowledge of Armenian language, as well as, to be familiar with the Constitution of the Republic of Armenia. In order to start the process of obtaining citizenship, the applicant must visit the Passport and Visa Office (Police of the Republic of Armenia) and in the case of absence the applicant must apply to the Embassy of the Republic of Armenia or consular office with the necessary documents. The list of the necessary documents is defined by the Gov. Decree N 1390.

It is interesting to mention that the RA legislation does not contain any definition such as migrant and on its own does not mention about the concept of migration. At the same time, the RA Law on Citizenship does not consist any other separated regulation for migrants, but only regulates it indirectly by defining the rights of foreigners and stateless individuals who are interested in applying for the Armenian citizenship. In particular, the law gives a definition of foreign citizen as a person who is not a citizen of the Republic of Armenia while being a citizen of another state. As for stateless individuals, Article 8 of the same law establishes the absolute absence of citizenship for those people or the lack of proof of having any. In this case, the Republic of Armenia encourages the acquisition of citizenship by stateless individuals, which supposes the opportunity for all migrants of being granted with citizenship or temporary residence status.

By this, the law of the Republic of Armenia defines the cases when individuals can obtain a citizenship by following the procedures 1) if he / she is married to a citizen of the Republic of Armenia or have an Armenian child (2) if his or her parents had previously been citizen of the Republic of Armenia and he/she applied for the citizenship during three years after achieving the age of 18 (3) who have Armenian origins (4) people who renounced their citizenship after 1st of January 1995 (5) who provided exceptional services to Armenian nation. The Republic of Armenia does not restrict the right of having citizenship of two countries, at the same time, the law clearly defines that the person who had two citizenships¹⁷³ is recognized by the state as a citizen of the Republic of Armenia. This is a provision that applies to individuals whose citizenship had been ceased since 1995, and after what they had received citizenship of another State (in case of receiving new citizenship, the receiver should inform about it within one month to the authorized body of the Government of the Republic of Armenia) or refused Citizenship of the Republic of Armenia unilaterally.

Since adopting a dual citizenship, individuals have all the rights provided for the citizen of the Republic of Armenia. At the same time, they have all the duties and responsibilities as the citizen of the Republic of Armenia, meanwhile counting on exceptional cases stipulated by international treaties or law of the Republic of Armenia. Based on political considerations of the Ministry of Diaspora together with other legal bodies they have to visit to a homeland Armenia at least one-time in order to get the Armenian passport¹⁷⁴. The problem with the process was the thirty days deadline for getting a passport. For this reason, by the decision of the government and taking into account the fact that a person may not always be able to be physically present in the country for thirty days, it is under a citizen's convenience to get his or her passport after receiving a notification about getting a citizenship within ten days¹⁷⁵.

Another step forward by the Ministry of Diaspora was participating in the amendments in Law of the State Registry, in particular the article on citizens' registration process according to which foreigners who have been granted RA citizenship are registered in the RA State Register under the address of the government in order to facilitate the process of registration for citizens who does not have permanent address in Armenia¹⁷⁶.

12. How is your country assisted by EU programmes and funding with regard to the integration of migrants?

Still in 1999, the founding document "EU-Armenia Partnership and Cooperation Agreement" came into force, which served as a basis for the joint activities of the European Union and Armenia. Through it, different areas (political dialogue, trade, investment, economy, law-making processes and cultural trends) of common interest have been expanded. In 2004 Armenia was included in the European Neighborhood Policy. The inclusion of Armenia in the European Neighborhood Policy to the EU-Armenia relations is a new quality. First, Armenia had a new status in EU neighboring country. Membership to the ENP gave Armenia a chance to establish political, economic, cultural relations with the EU, to strengthen regional and cross-border cooperation, and to take responsibility for conflict prevention and resolution.

In November 2006, the ENP Action Plan was approved. The Action Plan is a political document outlining the strategic objectives of cooperation between Armenia and the EU. The EU-Armenia Action Plan within the European Neighborhood Policy has had its impact on complying with the EU standards of legislation, legal norms and standards of the Republic of Armenia. This program has created a solid foundation for economic integration, based on the adoption and application of rules and regulations in the field of economy and trade that promote trade, investment and economic growth. Among the top priorities are safe and lawful movement, fighting against illegal migration, trafficking in human beings and smuggling. Twinning and TAIEX tools have been actively used in Armenia. Starting from August 2012, the "Support to Migration Service Strengthening the Migration Management in Armenia in Armenia" EU Twinning Project, with which 2.5 years of expertise has been given to us in connection with various issues related to migration.

The European Neighborhood and Implementation Tools through the TAIEX Instrument: Its assistance has been largely shaped according to the beneficiary countries' respective services of the European Commission and the requirements of the Member States. TAIEX project started in 2012 August 7 and ended on November 6, 2014. The main beneficiary of the program was the State Migration Service of the RA Ministry of Territorial Administration, as well as the RA Ministry of Labor and Social Issues, the RA National Security Service, the RA Police and other state bodies. - Developed and presented a model for compiling a migration policy report.
- Study visit to Sweden.

As a result, the program was completed successfully and had its results with all 3 components of its activities, such as legislative amendments, strengthening cooperation between state bodies in the field of migration and a migration statistical reporting model.

Turning to the question how the migrants integrated in Armenia are financed, it is to be noted that Armenia is one of the countries which does not have a large number of migrant inflows. By comparing it, we can mention that the number of returning migrants prevails in Armenia. The flow of returning Armenian citizens is historically a new migration flow to Armenia, which has emerged as a result of large-scale migration flows that emerged after independence. Obviously, representatives of this group do not have immigrants in classical terms because of the origin of their country of origin and their citizenship, including their return to their own cultural environment, have no integration issues with immigrants, but instead there is a need for their reintegration.

The issues of reintegration of the citizens who returned to Armenia from the beginning of the process have been in the focus of attention of state bodies, as well as international and non-governmental organizations. Initially, this was expressed by international organizations in Armenia in this field, as well as in bilateral formats with different European countries. The European Union is the largest donor of cooperation for the development of Armenia, which provides support to Armenia since Armenia's independence. Following the signing of the 1999 Partnership and Cooperation Agreement, annual assistance is increasing year by year, and now they are in line with 2014-2025 development strategy of Armenia.

As of 2016, the EU Delegation to Armenia has 129 existing projects with a total budget of 269 million Euros. The implementation of the first implementation of the Mobility Partnership Declaration on the Strengthening Armenia's Capacity in Migration Management, focusing on reintegration measures has given a new impetus to the reintegration of returnees to the RA. The "Targeted Initiative for Armenia" project is funded by the European Union, consisting of 4 components relating to the reintegration of returning citizens to Armenia, strengthening the capacities of RA state bodies and Diaspora organizations on legal migration opportunities and migration issues. The 36-month program has been launched since December 2012 by 6 EU member-states, one of which is France, on behalf of the French Immigration and Integration Office.

Within the framework of the project, on March 11, 2014 the Reintegration Guidance Center was opened at the RA Ministry of Territorial Administration. The Center serves citizens returning to Armenia as a "one window" where they are informed about reintegration opportunities and are guided by their respective services. The Center is closely cooperating with government agencies and civil society organizations that provide reintegration support.

Conclusions

Nowadays the issues of migration law are very actual because of the recent political complicated situation when the increase of the flow of migrants challenged developing and developed countries including the Republic of Armenia. During this research it becomes obvious that the legislation of the RA does not contain strict regulations in the area of migration and sets effective mechanism for the protection of migrants' rights. Particularly, the legislation of the RA sets not only basic rights of the migrants but provides guaranties for social protection. But also there are some problems in the field of migration conditioned by the economic situation in Armenia. Nowadays the condition and shortage of accommodations are serious problems in the RA.

Moreover, migrants sometimes need legal assistance and translation which also demands financial expenses. Though the international organizations fund certain programs regularly but the issue of fundraising still remains problematic.

So, summing up we can state that though RA's legislation regulates the main issues of migration but because of the rapid development of the society there is a necessity of some legal amendments for more clear formulations which is included also in National program on migration for 2017-2022. Meanwhile besides the necessity of legal regulation the issue of funding is also crucial as it is impossible to ensure effective protection of migrants without sufficient financial means.

Introduction

Throughout its history the territories of today's Austria have been heavily influenced by migration. In its more recent years Austria has seen refugees from its neighbouring countries, e.g. after the Hungarian uprising in 1956/57, the Prague Spring in 1968 or from Bosnia-Herzegovina in the early 1990s. The recent crisis in the middle east were the cause for an uprising immigration from Afghanistan, Syria, Iraq, Iran and Pakistan¹⁷⁷ 2015 marked the peak of asylum applications caused by the Syrian Civil war. In addition, there is also a rise of more and more African migrants, above all, Somalian and Nigerian Citizens. Austria has not only been a country of destination or transmigration for refugees, but also for labourers e.g. in the course of the "Gastarbeiter"-treaty with Turkey, or resulting from the eastern enlargement of the EU in 2004. With the upcoming general elections and last year's presidential election migration is again a hot topic in everyday life in Austria. The public dialogue is minted by a populist approach were recognized refugees, subjects of subsidiary protection, asylum seekers and labour migrants are treated undifferentiated.

Hereinafter shall be investigated how the migration waves of the last decades have influenced Austria's society and how the country is coping with the effects of long term migration in sectors like health care and education. Another key question is the approach to Islam with the launch of the Islam Act 2015, including a ban on face veils, the ban on foreign religious funding and Islamic kindergartens or schools. What is more, in recent years, a comprehensive administrative reform has been carried out in Austria, which has also caused a change in the administrative structure of migration authorities. In the following, the main players in the Austrian migration policy system will be shown and the change in the administrative structure is to be examined in more detail. As a result, the often complex design of the Austrian migration law shall be presented in a comprehensive way.

1. How is the right to asylum regulated in national law? Give a description of the national regulations governing asylum; What is the procedure for granting asylum and who is responsible?

1.1. Asylum procedure in Austria

Austria is a federal republic with nine federal states¹⁷⁸. Each state has its own legislation. The distribution of competences between the federal government and states is based on Austrian Constitutional Law and, in particular, Articles 10 – 12, wherein the constitutional legislator delegates certain legal areas exhaustively either to the federal government or to federal states.¹⁷⁹ Regarding Article 10 of Austrian Constitutional Law (B-VG), the federal government is responsible for legislation and its execution. There are two instances for the Austrian asylum procedure: the first instance for deciding in admission procedure and regular procedure is the Federal Office for Immigration and Asylum (BFA) with nine regional directorates for each federal state.¹⁸⁰ The second instance for the asylum procedure is the Federal Administrative Court (BVwG).¹⁸¹

1.1.1. Admission procedure

Application of international protection: An application for international protection can be lodged in writing or orally before any police station.

First interview: If such an application is filed, the applicant must be interviewed by any member of the public security service within 48 hours, but no later than 72 hours.¹⁸² The first interview is based on questions regarding the applicant's name, nationality, his flight route and identification by taking his fingerprints. After the first interview, the security authority forwards all documents, including the protocol of the first interrogation, to the BFA and provides the applicant with an order, in accordance with Article 43 BFA Procedures Act (BFA-VG), to show up before the respective regional directorate within 14 calendar days.

Green Card: The asylum seeker receives a green card including his photo, name, date of birth and registration number for the admission procedure. The following initial reception centres (EAST) are responsible for the admissibility proceedings: Traiskirchen, Thalham and Airport Vienna Schwechat.

Responsibility of the state: The BFA has to determine whether Austria is responsible for the asylum procedure. The Dublin III Regulation lays down the criteria for determining the member state responsible for an application lodged in one of the member states by a third-country national or a stateless person ("the Member State responsible").¹⁸³ European Dactyloscopy (EuroDac) is the fingerprint database, which enables authorities to examine whether applicants have "illegally" transited¹⁸⁴ through another member state ("principle of first contact") or have already applied for asylum in another EU member state.

Decision: In case of expected responsibility of Austria, the BFA must determine the asylum procedure and has to provide the asylum seeker with a white card.¹⁸⁵ If the BFA decides the responsibility lies with another member state, the BFA must issue a decision regarding the admission procedure with a legal right for appeal within two weeks.¹⁸⁶

1.1.2. Regular Procedure

White Card: After receiving the white card, the asylum seeker is officially in the regular procedure and will be provided with temporary accommodation in a federal facility until the closure of the asylum procedure. The application of international protection automatically contains the application of asylum, the application of subsidiary protection and finally the application of right of residence for humanitarian reasons.¹⁸⁷ The BFA determines if the reasons for asylum according to the Geneva Refugee Convention apply.

Second Interview: The asylum seeker gets invited for the second interview wherein he will be interviewed about his reason(s) for seeking asylum and for the consequences he would face in case of deportation to his country of origin. In all cases, the asylum seeker must be provided with an interpreter who is fluent in the asylum seeker's native language or in a language the asylum seeker is deemed to sufficiently understand. After the interview, the asylum seeker receives a protocol thereof including a translation in the aforementioned language. The BFA must then examine all possible circumstances ex officio and has to issue a decision within 15 months.¹⁸⁸

Decision:

Asylum: According to Article 1 of the Geneva Refugee Convention, the asylum seeker must have a well-founded fear of being persecuted based on their race, religion, nationality, membership of a particular social group and/or political opinion in their country of origin.

With respect to the amendment to the Asylum Act in June 2016, according to Article 3 Asylum Act, the status of asylum is limited to three years for those who applied for asylum after 15 November 2015 or haven't received the decision until the day the changes become law.

(Asyl auf Zeit).¹⁸⁹ The status might be changed ex officio to unlimited residence permission, if none of the reasons for denial according to the exclusion clauses of the Geneva Refugee Convention applies.¹⁹⁰

Subsidiary protection is granted if asylum seeker would face any real risk of violation against human rights in respect of European Convention on Human Rights (ECHR) in case of the alien's rejection at the border, forcible return or deportation to the country of the nationality.¹⁹¹ The decision for granting of subsidiary protection status shall be issued during the international protection process and in conjunction with the asylum status withdrawal ruling as referred to in paragraph 7.¹⁹²

¹⁹² See grounds for revocation of asylum status.

The right of residence for humanitarian reasons is granted if the asylum seeker has such an intense familiar and personal bond in the country of current residence in terms of Article 8 ECHR, is well-integrated and has no criminal records.¹⁹³

Although the United Nations' High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) Austria is not directly involved in the asylum procedure, it must immediately be informed by the Federal Office of Immigration and Asylum about the initiation of any procedure related to an application of international protection (first instance decisions¹⁹⁴ and rejected "airport applications"¹⁹⁵).

Ineligibility for and revocation of asylum status:

Grounds for exclusion of refugee protection: According to paragraph 6 of the Asylum Act an alien shall be rendered ineligible for asylum status if and for as long as she/he enjoys protection pursuant to article 1 section F of the Geneva Convention on Refugees¹⁹⁶; any of the grounds set forth in the exclusion clauses in Article 1 section F, of the Geneva Convention on Refugees exists; there are valid reasons for considering that the alien constitutes a danger to the security of the Republic of Austria or he/she has been convicted, by final judgment of an Austrian court, of a particularly serious crime and, by reason of such punishable act, represents a danger to the community.

In cases where a reason for exclusion exists, an application for international protection may be dismissed in regard to the granting of asylum status without further examination.

Grounds for revocation of asylum status: Regarding paragraph 7 of the Asylum Act, an alien's asylum status shall be withdrawn ex officio by administrative decision if a reason for ineligibility for asylum status as referred to in paragraph 6 exists; any of the grounds set forth in the cessation clauses in Article 1 section C of the Geneva Convention on Refugees¹⁹⁷ has arisen or the person having entitlement to asylum has the centre of his/her vital interests in another country. A procedure for the imposition of an asylum status withdrawal ruling shall in all cases be initiated if the alien has become an offender and it is also likely that the conditions referred above exist.

¹⁹⁷ Grounds regarding article 1 section C of the 1951 Convention are voluntary re-availment of national protection, voluntary re-acquisition of nationality, acquisition of a new nationality, voluntary re-establishment in the country where persecution was feared; the person can no longer, because the circumstances in connexion with which he/she has been recognized as a refugee have ceased to exist, continue to refuse to avail himself/herself of the protection of the country of his/her nationality and being a person who has no nationality he/she is, because the circumstances in connexion with which he/she has been recognized as a refugee have ceased to exist, able to return to the country of his/her former habitual residence, Handbook and guidelines on procedures and criteria for determining refugee status <http://www.unhcr.org/3d58e13b4.pdf> accessed on 14 September 2017.

1.1.3. Legal Remedies

1.1.3.1. Federal Administrative Court

In case of a negative decision, the asylum seeker has a right to appeal with free legal support that has to be submitted within two weeks (for adults) or four weeks (for unaccompanied minors) of the receipt of the decision. The appeal has to be forwarded by the BFA to the Federal Administrative Court (BVwG). On the last page of the decision, the asylum seeker can find the address of the responsible free legal counselling organisation which is contracted by the Federal Chancellery and also an explanation of the rights of appeal.¹⁹⁸ Yet, at first appeal, a representation by an attorney is not mandatory. According to the General Administrative Procedures Act (AVG), decisions of the BVwG have to be taken within six months after the appeal has been submitted. After reviewing the application with the documents, the BVwG can conduct an additional court hearing in the appeal proceedings. This is not obligatory, however. The BVwG may change the decision in any direction (reject, annul or change the decision).

1.1.3.2. Higher Administrative Court and Constitutional Court

In case of a (second) negative decision from the BVwG, the asylum seeker has the right to appeal (again) to the Constitutional Court¹⁹⁹ (VfGH) and/or to appeal with a revision to the Higher Administrative Court (VwGH) within six weeks. For both courts, there is mandatory legal representation but the asylum seeker can apply for free legal aid.

1.2. Amendment of Alien's and Asylum Act (FrÄG 2017)

The first part of the Amendment of Asylum Act and Alien's Act has been passed by the national parliament on 30 June 2017.

The second part of the amendment to the Asylum Act and Alien's Act: Although criticised by UNHCR Austria²⁰⁰ and by NGOs, the recent draft of the government bill contains the following main amendments:

According to paragraph 15b of the Asylum Act, the freedom for the asylum seeker to choose their place of residence shall be restricted for the whole duration of the asylum procedure by an order of the BFA after they are admitted to the regular procedure in Austria. The decision deadline of the BVwG as second instance for appeal procedures will be extended from six months to 12 months. To deportation of asylum seekers who have exhausted instances and facing deportation at any time, asylum seekers are committed to be at certain states in refugee accommodation centres.

2. How does your national law regulate immigration from EU member states and non-EU states?

Matters of admission, deportation and expulsion are regulated by the Aliens Police Act 2005 (FPG) and the Aliens Police Act Executive Order 2005. Questions of settlement and residence of non-Austrian nationals is regulated in the Federal Law on Settlement and Residence in Austria 2005 (NAG). It applies to foreigners, who are defined as anyone not holding an Austrian citizenship. Regulations differ for nationals of states, which are part of the European Economic Area (EEA) and Switzerland on one hand and Third Country Nationals (TCN) on the other. Residence is defined as the “factual or intended stay on national territory with the purpose of establishing an abode for longer than six months per year, the establishment of one’s centre of life or the commencement of permanent occupation.”²⁰¹ The primary correspondent authority is the federal governor and authorized district authorities according to §22 NAG 2005.

2.1. EEA/Swiss nationals

As member of the European Union and the Schengen Area, Austria is subject to Article 49 TFEU ensuring freedom of establishment.²⁰² EEA and Swiss nationals are entitled to admission to Austria for up to three months without obtaining a visa.²⁰³ They can settle in state territory for more than three months depending on their economic situation meaning (self-)employment or other forms of self-subsistence with sufficient health insurance or for the purpose of studying with sufficient health insurance.²⁰⁴ Regardless of whether these requirements persist, EEA/Swiss nationals are entitled to a permanent right to settlement after five years.²⁰⁵ After five years of uninterrupted residence, relatives are entitled to a long-term residence-card.²⁰⁶ The official certificates to document the right of residence in Austrian state territory are Registration Certificate, “Anmeldebescheinigung”: for EEA/Swiss nationals for a stay exceeding 3 months on request. Family members of these, defined in paragraph 52 para 1 NAG, who are EEA/Swiss nationals are authorised to a stay extending three months.²⁰⁷ The subjects have to register with the relevant authority within four months of their entry to state territory. Required are passports and documents certifying the economic self-subsistence, health insurance, school or university admission or family relation.²⁰⁸ Long Term Residence Certificate, “Bescheinigung des Daueraufenthalts”: for EEA/Swiss nationals who obtained residence under paragraphs 51, 52 leg cit after five years of lawful and uninterrupted residence on request.²⁰⁹

Relatives eligible for this title are spouses and civil partnership partners, direct descendants not older than 21, or else older, if they receive alimentation, direct ascendants if they receive alimentation. This title is issued for a maximum length of five years.²¹⁰

These subjects are entitled to a

Long Term Residence Card, “Daueraufenthaltskarte” after the passing of a lawful, uninterrupted residence for the duration of 5 years.²¹¹

The right to residence under paragraphs 51, 52, 54 NAG does not persist for reasons of public safety. It is bound to the submission of documents certifying the circumstances entitling to a stay under paragraph 51 (e.g. (self-)employment); marriage or civil partnership or other forms of familial or economic relationships entitling to residence under paragraph 52 leg cit. In case the circumstances entitling to a residence permit under paragraphs 51, 52 and 54 leg cit cannot be proven or cease to exist, the appropriate authority is to inform the subject as well as the Federal Office for Affairs related to Foreigners and Asylum (BFA), which are authorized to enact an expulsion according to paragraph 66 FPG.

2.2. Third Country Nationals (TCN)

2.2.1. Admission with visa

The admission for TCN to Austria is bound to holding a passport and visa.²¹² Besides transit and tourist visas, Austria issues a residence visa (“D Visa”) which entitles its holder to a stay in Austria between 91 days and six months. The visa is generally issued by the Austrian representation prior to arrival in Austria, under certain circumstances visas may also be issued at the border crossing point.²¹³ D Visas are issued upon request and require a valid travel document an ensured departure and no reasons to deny the issue, which are listed in paragraph 21 para 2 FPG (e.g. insufficient health insurance or funding). D Visas may be applied for for a variety of reasons: long-term admission with no work permit (paragraph 21a leg cit), humanitarian reasons (paragraph 22 leg cit), temporary employment or self-employment (paragraph 24 leg cit), job seeking (paragraph 24a leg cit), the issue of a residence permit (paragraph 25 leg cit).

2.2.2. Procedure for residence permits

Generally, first-time applications have to be filed and decided before admission to national territory. Various exceptions are made, e.g. for family members of Austrian and EEA/Swiss nationals, children, and holders of residency permits. The authority decides per decree.²¹⁴ The application is to be filed with the competent Austrian representation (e.g. embassy) and forwarded to the governors of Austria’s federal states²¹⁵ who may authorise the district authorities to rule in their names.²¹⁶ Remedies are ruled by the federal administrative court and thereafter by the Supreme Administrative Court.²¹⁷ TCN have to provide a proof of rudimentary German skills with the first time application, exceptions are made for minors and family members to comply with Article 8 of the ECHR.²¹⁸ Extension applications are to be filed with the correspondent local authority within Austria no longer than three months prior to their expiration date.²¹⁹

2.2.3. Types of residence permits

Austria offers different pathways for immigration to TCN: They differ in length, subject, purpose and nationality. Admission to permanent residence for the purpose of employment for TCNs is dependent on professional qualifications of the applying subject and political considerations for the labour market. Subjects can apply for two different titles: The red-white-red card (paragraph 41 NAG) is issued for the duration of 12 months and can be filed for by highly qualified workers, workers in shortage occupations, other key workers, graduates of Austrian universities and artists.²²⁰ The red-white-red card plus (paragraph 41a leg cit) can be granted to red-white-red card holders if employed for ten months within the past twelve months, holders of the blue-card EU if employed for 21 months in the last 24 months²²¹ or family members of holders of the red-white-red cards, blue-card EU or permanent residency.²²² The blue-card EU is issued for TCN, who have completed studies at universities lasting a minimum of three years, have received a binding job offer for at least one year, will earn a certain income and the labour market test reveals that there is not Austrian national available for this position.²²³ Holders of the red-white-red card plus and certain settlement permits are obliged to fulfil Module 1 of the Integration Agreement proving German skills for an in-depth basic conversation within two years after granting of the title. There are exceptions for minors, people in bad health condition and anyone not staying longer than 12 months.²²⁴ The completion of Module 2 is mandatory for anyone applying for the title “long term residence – EU” excluding minors and people in bad health condition.²²⁵ Temporary residence may be granted to TCN as employee sent on temporary duty, as rotational employee, self-employed individual, researcher, artist, in special employment cases, or to students and pupils.²²⁶

2.2.4. Non-voluntary departure

If the requirements set by paragraph 11 NAG are no longer met, the foreigner is to be informed that paragraphs 52 – 61 FPG will be enacted. The responsible authority is the Federal Office for Affairs related to Foreigners and Asylum (BFA). A grace period is set for a voluntary departure (paragraph 55 leg cit), after which the authorities are eligible to deport a TCN according to 46 leg cit.

2.2.5. Voluntary departure

No steps have to be taken regarding the NAG, according to the Act on Registration (MeldeG) a relocation has to be reported with the municipality.

3. Is there a ministry, government agency or other public authority specifically dealing with migrants? If so, please provide a description of the framework this authority works under.

3.1. Legal framework

Migration is a cross-sectional matter. It therefore falls within the competence and jurisdiction of various authorities. The “Federal Office for Affairs related to foreigners and Asylum” [“Bundesamt für Fremdenwesen und Asyl”, BFA] can be considered as the “central special authority” for the area of migration.²²⁷ It was established on 1 January 2014 as the successor of the former “Federal Asylum Authority” [“Bundesasylamt”]. Basic provisions concerning the organisation of the BFA are laid down in the “BFA-facility law” [“BFA-Einrichtungsgesetz”]. The “BFA-procedural law” [“BFA-Verfahrensgesetz”] defines the detailed procedural rules of the BFA. Articles 2, 3 and 8 ECHR must be given particular attention by the federal office in the exercise of its tasks, according to paragraph 14 BFA-procedural law.

3.2. Competences of the BFA

According to paragraph 3 para 1 BFA-facility law, the BFA is responsible for the execution of the BFA-procedural law, of the “Asylum Act 2005” [“Asylgesetz 2005”], of the “Aliens' Police Act 2005” [“Fremdenpolizei-Gesetz 2005”] and of the “Federal Basic Care Act 2005” [“Grundversorgungsgesetz-Bund 2005”]. To be more concrete, the Federal Office is responsible for the granting, denial and withdrawal of asylum and subsidiary protection, taking measures terminating a residence, ordering deportation, as well as issuing Austrian documents to foreigners.

Furthermore, according to paragraph 3 para 2 leg cit the BFA is responsible for the exchange of information within the meaning of the Dublin Regulation as well as in cases, in which a contract concerning the competence to examine an asylum application or an application for international protection is applicable.

Similarly, in accordance with paragraph 5 para 1 leg cit, the BFA has to carry out a “public state documentation” in which relevant facts about the states concerned, together with sources, are to be recorded for the procedure before the BFA.

3.3. Governance system of the BFA

According to paragraph 1 BFA-facility law the Federal Office is directly subordinated to the Federal Minister of the Interior. It has federal jurisdiction and is based in Vienna. In addition, there is one regional directorate office in each federal state. They are not to be qualified as “authorities”.²²⁸ Besides this, the Federal Minister of the Interior is entitled to establish external offices of the regional directorate offices according to paragraph 2 para 2 leg cit as well as first-time-admission-offices [“Erstaufnahmestellen”] according to paragraph 4 leg cit.

The head of the BFA is the so-called “Director”, as stipulated in paragraph 2 para 1 leg cit. In accordance with paragraph 2 para 3 leg cit, he determines the number of organisational units in the Federal Office, in the regional directorates, in the external offices and administers the division of tasks. The staff at the BFA mainly consists of former speakers of the Federal Asylum Office as well as of employees of the aliens’ police.²²⁹ According to paragraph 2a para 1 leg cit, employees of the federal states as well as of the municipality of Vienna can be consulted on the service in the Federal Office. The public security organs must support the Federal Office “in the execution of its tasks”, in accordance with paragraph 2 para 6 leg cit. These organs are entitled to use “direct compulsory force” [“unmittelbare Zwangsgewalt”] while exercising detention warrants, search warrants or identifications as stipulated in paragraph 47 BFA-procedural law.

3.4. Sources of funding

Since the BFA is a federal authority, it is financed by the federal government.

3.5. Monitoring and evaluating system

Complaints against the decisions of the Federal Office for Foreign Affairs and Asylum can be lodged with the federal administrative court [“Bundesverwaltungsgericht”]. The Constitutional Court [“Verfassungsgerichtshof”] and the higher Administrative Court [“Verwaltungsgerichtshof”] control the decisions of the Federal Administrative Court.

3.6. Redress against maltreatment

Certain state organs have the possibility to file administrative complaints [“Amtsbeschwerde”] in order to preserve the objective legitimacy of the administration. Moreover, the national ombudsman board [“Volksanwaltschaft”] can be called in cases of maladministration.

3.7. Excursus

²²⁹ Peyr, Neugschwendtner, Schmaus, Fremdenrecht [ÖGB 2016] 257 [German].

Residence titles of foreigners who wish to stay or live in the federal territory for more than six months are regulated in the “Settlement and Resident Act” [“Niederlassungs- und Aufenthaltsgesetz”] and not in BFA-provisions. Only residence permits for “exceptionally considerable reasons” stay within the BFA’s scope of competence.

Persons holding a residence title according to Asylum Act 2005 and who are not relatives of EEA-citizens are explicitly excluded from the Settlement and Resident Act. The competent authorities in the scope of the Settlement and Resident Act are provincial state governors [“Landeshauptmänner/frauen”] respectively provincial administrative authorities [“Bezirksverwaltungsbehörden”] during first instance and provincial administrative courts [“Landesverwaltungsgerichte”] during appeal proceedings.²³⁰ The area of migration does not cover the full scope of tasks of these authorities, but is merely a sub-division in addition to numerous other administrative tasks.

4. What are the recent statistics regarding migrants (i.e. asylum-seekers, immigrants, transitmigrants, trends in migratory flows) in your country?

4.1. Asylum Seekers

The first line graph provides an overview of the fall in number of applications from 2017 in comparison to 2016 and 2015. Due to the humanitarian crisis caused by the Syrian conflict and the instability of some other countries (e.g. Iraq or Libya) in 2015, there was an enormous increase in applications; Austria recorded 88.340²³¹ applications in total. In the following year, the applications went down to 42.285.

From January to June 2017, the number of applications fell back to 12.490 from 22.668 in the period from January to June 2016.²³² The share of citizens from the top four countries went down; Syria from 5,055 to 4,80, Iraq from 1,809 to 644, Nigeria from 927 to 790. The biggest fall compared with 2016 is recorded for Afghans (from 8,002 to 1,971).

Applications from unaccompanied minors (January – June 2017):

January (244), February (195), March (136), April (92), May (107), June (152).²³³

Most of the minors come from Afghanistan, Syria, and Nigeria.²³⁴

4.2. Trends in Migratory flows

This line graph is based on aliens who acquired Austrian citizenship. Since 2010, the number of naturalised citizens has been increasing slightly each year. In 2016, 8,626²³⁵ persons acquired Austrian nationality. In 2016, the top five countries for naturalised foreigners were Bosnia and Herzegovina (1,262), Turkey (820), Serbia (752), Rumania (258) and Germany (195).

By 2016, Austria had 8,599,200 residents, 6,701,100 of those are Austrians (citizenship), 711,800 are citizens of other EU countries, and 1,186,200 are foreigners ("Fremde").

The majority of foreigners (524,900) have their origins in former Yugoslavia, 271,600 in Turkey and 389,000 in other States.²³⁶

5. How have the decisions by the European Court of Human Rights concerning migrants been implemented at national level?

5.1. Decisions concerning residence restrictions and expulsion due to convictions of crimes

In Maslov v Austria, the Court found a violation of Article 8. Mr Maslov, a Bulgarian national with an unlimited settlement permit for Austria, was deported to Bulgaria due to an exclusion order imposed on him following convictions for aggravated burglaries, extortion and assault. The Court awarded Mr Maslov EUR 3000 non-pecuniary damages and EUR 13,097.06 for costs and expenses.²³⁷ The total of EUR 16,097.06 was paid to Mr Maslov in 2009.²³⁸ In 2005, Mr Maslov was awarded a residence certificate including access to the labour market.²³⁹

In Yildiz v Austria, the Yildiz group (Turkish nationals residing in Austria with a daughter born in Austria) was separated due to a residence ban imposed upon the father after accumulating convictions of theft and administrative offences. The Court found that the offenses were not negligible but, due to the moderate fines imposed, were regarded as minor by the Austrian authorities. Further, that the family life is to be examined as presented at the time of the confirmation by the Administrative Court (as already established in *Bouchelkia v France*²⁴⁰), meaning the decision interferes with Article 8 and therefore needs to fulfil the requirements of Art 8 (2), namely accordance with the law and necessity in a democratic society. The Court ruled that the decision was in accordance with national law, paragraph 18 of the 1992 Alien Act, but is unbalanced between the interests of the applicants and the Austrian state. The Court awarded the Yildiz group EUR 8,000.²⁴¹ The total including interest of EUR 8,042.78 was paid in 2003.²⁴² Mr Yildiz was granted a Type D visa until August 2004 and a tourist visa until May 2006. A settlement certificate was issued in 2005, which Mr Yildiz never collected nor did he apply for a residence permit.²⁴³

In Jakupovic v Austria, the applicant, a national of Bosnia-Herzegovina, was deported after being issued a residence ban due to two burglary convictions. He had no family ties to Bosnia-Herzegovina since his mother and siblings were resident in Austria. The Court found that the residence ban violated Art 8 since the considerations between respect for family life and prevention of crime are disproportionate.²⁴⁴ Mr Jakupovic was awarded EUR 7,936.09 which were paid in April 2009.²⁴⁵ The applicant was awarded a Type C visa in 2003 and an unlimited residence permit in 2005.²⁴⁶

In Radovanovic v Austria, the applicant, a national of Serbia and Montenegro at the time, was expelled from Austrian state territory following convictions of aggravated robbery. The residence ban of unlimited duration was in accordance with national law, namely the Aliens Act 1997 and interfered with Art 8. The Court found that the mild conviction shows the minor concern of Austrian authorities towards the prevention of crime and, thus, an indefinite ban is not balanced. The request for non-pecuniary damage was not met.²⁴⁷ Later, the applicant was awarded EUR 8,315 for costs and expenses which were paid in April 2005.²⁴⁸ Mr Radovanovic was awarded a certificate of residence in the same year.²⁴⁹

5.1.1. Law amendments and practical implementation

The Aliens Act 1992 has been replaced twice. In the Aliens Act 1997, major changes relevant to the mentioned cases are the new qualifications of convictions justifying a residence ban (e.g. custodial sentences have to exceed one year,²⁵⁰ compared to three months in the Aliens Act 1992²⁵¹) and the explicit reference to Article 8 para 2 in paragraph 37 para 2 as well as the mandatory assessment of length of residence, integration, family ties and the State's interest in his residence ban (paragraph 37 para 2). An inadmissibility of residence bans if the subject has grown up in Austria has been added in paragraph 38 para 1. In 2005, the Asylum Act 2005, the Settlement and Residence Act 2005 and the Aliens Police Act 2005 were introduced, following a split at the European level.²⁵² The court decisions were published in two major law publications (the Austrian Institute for Human Rights' Newsletter and the Österreichische Juristenzeitung) as well as distributed to courts and authorities cognizant of residence matters.²⁵³

5.2. Decision concerning social security of migrants:

In Gaygusuz v Austria, the Court found a violation of Article 14. The applicant worked in Austria from 1973 to 1984. After being unemployed, partly certified unfit of employment, and receiving unemployment benefits until 1987, he then was denied Emergency Assistance ("Notstandshilfe") on the grounds of his nationality based on his nationality. Mr Gaygusuz was awarded 200,000 Austrian Schillings for pecuniary damage and 100,000 Austrian Schillings for costs and expenses with interests.²⁵⁴ Austria paid the awarded sum in in September 1996.²⁵⁵ The Austrian Parliament passed a new law not including the disputed prerequisites which would have entered effect in 2000.²⁵⁶ Before that, the afflicted clauses had been suspended by the Austrian Constitutional Court.²⁵⁷ Following that, the Parliament launched a law bringing the clauses to effect in April 1998. The ruling was published in numerous Austrian law papers (e.g. Österreichische Juristenzeitung).²⁵⁸

5.3. Decision concerning the expulsion of asylum seekers:

In Ahmed v Austria, the Court found that the expulsion of the applicant, a Somali national, would put him in real risk of being subject to inhuman and degrading treatment thus interfering with Art 3 and awarded him 150,000 Austrian Schillings for costs and expenses.²⁵⁹ The sum was paid to the applicant in May 1996.²⁶⁰ The Austrian Government committed to not deporting the applicant as long as the status of risk persists and guaranteed a stay until March 1998. During the reassessment, the applicant committed suicide.²⁶¹ The ruling was distributed to affected authorities and the Court's evaluation of the situation in Somalia has been applied to cases also from other countries with similar situations.²⁶² Six years later in 2002, the Aliens Act 1997 was amended accordingly, integrating Art 3²⁶³ and, as a result, recognising the principle of non-refoulement.²⁶⁴

In Mohammad v Austria, the Court found a violation of Article 13 in conjunction with Article 3. The applicant, a Sudanese national, filed for asylum for the first time in 2010 and was rejected on the ground of the Dublin Regulation. His second request for asylum did not have suspensive effect under Austrian law which the Court ruled as a denying of access to effect remedy. The applicant was awarded EUR 4,868.28 for costs and expenses.²⁶⁵ The amount was paid to the applicant in December 2012.²⁶⁶ The ruling itself and an analysis in a Circular Note of the Federal Chancellery has been disseminated to affected authorities as well as published on the homepage of the Prime Minister's Office.²⁶⁷

5.4. General impact of the ECtHR on Austria's legal system concerning migration

Under the ECHR and the rulings of the ECtHR, the principle of proportionality has been emphasised in the rulings of the Constitutional Court as well as legislature.²⁶⁸ Prior to that, the legislature, judicature and executive were merely limited by the principle, that the state should not use its power in a disproportionate way as well as the requisite of a legal basis to restrict fundamental rights.²⁶⁹ More precisely, the Constitutional Court now considers the proportionality of interferences with fundamental rights as well as their coverage by public interest.²⁷⁰ The authority responsible for the implementation of Court decisions is the Constitutional Service (Division V) of the Austrian Federal Chancellery cooperating with affected ministries and the Constitutional Court as well as reviewing draft legislation.²⁷¹ Further, the Constitutional Court and the Constitutional Committee of the Austrian National Assembly review federal legislation which interferes with the Convention or judgements.²⁷²

6. How have the recommendations of the European Commission against Racism and Intolerance and of national human rights bodies concerning the integration of migrants been implemented?

6.1. General recommendations by the ECRI and national human right bodies

6.1.1. Concerning family reunion:

Family members are defined as parents of underage minors, spouses or civil partners and unmarried children, who are underage when the application is filed.²⁷³ This is criticised by the UNHRC which advocates the inclusion of other family members to whom close ties persist.²⁷⁴ It further finds faults in the Austrian law requirement for the existence of a marriage in the country of origin, which causes difficulties for marriages contracted under religious terms²⁷⁵ as well as the requirements of official documents and the intrusion into privacy through DNA-tests²⁷⁶ and the costs imposed for the issuance of the required documents.²⁷⁷ The minimum age for spouses is set to 21, which contradicts the recommendations.

The entity constitutionally responsible for the protection and promotion of human rights in Austria, “Volksanwaltschaft”, continues to criticise the length of lawsuits in its annual reports.^{278/279}

subsidiary protection are only entitled to file an application for family reunion three years after awarding the title of subsidiary protection,²⁸² whereas as relatives of refugees are entitled to do so as soon as a positive decision on asylum has been awarded.²⁸³ A discrepancy between subjects of subsidiary protection and refugees further persists concerning the requirements for the awarding, which are proof of residence, insurance and self-subsistence²⁸⁴. Relatives of refugees only need to provide evidence of these if they file the application later than three months after the awarding.²⁸⁵

The procedure for refugees and subjects of subsidiary protection differs widely from the process for relatives of TCN residing under the NAG which differentiates depending on the title of residence.

6.1.2. Concerning long term residence:

TCN are entitled to the legal status “long-term resident EU” after a lawful five-year stay in Austria and fulfilment of the general granting requirements (proof of self-subsistence, insurance and accommodation) as well as proof of German skills for in-depth autonomous language use.²⁸⁶ Exemptions are made for minors and applications with permanently bad physical or mental condition. The general granting requirements are criticised by the UNHCR as the obtaining of self-subsistence and accommodation might pose difficulties²⁸⁷. Deviations from the recommendations exist concerning the allowability of the titles “residence permit for a temporary stay” and “residence permit individual protection” which are only counted for half their duration.²⁸⁸ The period between filing for asylum/subsidiary protection and granting is also counted for half unless it exceeds 18 months.²⁸⁹ Courses on the level requested for “long term resident EU” are funded to the extent of EUR 750 per participant.²⁹⁰ The documents required and fees charged are not disproportionate. The title “long term resident EU” grants unlimited access to the labour market²⁹¹, including the public sector with the exception of duties requiring certain ties to Austria only expected from Austrian nationals.²⁹² It also grants social benefits connected to residency (e.g. child support²⁹³). State laws put long term residents on a level with nationals concerning the guaranteed minimum income (e.g. Vienna²⁹⁴). University tuition fees differ depending on nationality: EEA/Swiss nationals are subject to the same provisions as

Austrian nationals, whereas TCNs are obliged to pay tuition fees with exceptions for refugees and subjects of subsidiary protection.²⁹⁵

6.1.3. Concerning Language and Integration Courses:

Austria requires a TCN staying under the titles Red-White-Red Card, Red-White-Red Card plus, all Settlement Permits and Family Member to complete Module 1 of the Integration Agreement meaning proof of German language skills for in-depth basic conversation within two years after granting the title for the first time,²⁹⁶ thus following the commissioner's recommendation to mandatory language classes. The Austrian Integration Fund (ÖIF) can certify language institutes for offering German-integration courses²⁹⁷ which then may receive funding from the state.²⁹⁸ Other than recommended, this courses only focus on a level of language needed for the Integration Agreement.²⁹⁹ Specific courses are offered for poorly and highly educated migrants.³⁰⁰ Language courses for specific professions are currently only available to a certain extent during competency checks at the job centre and for specific fields and are not connected to internships or the like.³⁰¹ Furthermore, efforts of companies promoting language trainings are not yet bolstered through tax cuts or similar benefits.³⁰² Concerning offers directed at stay-at-home parents, the Integration Report 2016 finds a lack of coupling language courses and kindergartens or schools, thus not offering the needed flexibility.³⁰³ In general language courses lack in attractiveness for working migrants due to the lack evening courses, child care and reimbursement for travel expenses.³⁰⁴ On a positive note, the government voted to allocate funds of EUR 75 million for integration measurers, establishing a closer collaboration between the government, the states, the interior ministry, the ministry of integration and the job centre and including asylum seekers with a high probability of granted asylum in basic German courses.³⁰⁵ The involvement of volunteers in language courses has been a crucial part and needs to be promoted through trainings, education and connections between volunteers. Various initiatives have been formed in the past years which desirably should be connected to the states' measures, but no steps into this direction have been taken so far.³⁰⁶ As far as integration courses are concerned, so are these offered by the ÖIF and are also included in the job centre course program. The Integration Report concludes, that courses are offered to a sufficient extent.³⁰⁷

6.1.4. Concerning employment:

Austria has ratified the European Social Charter but only accepted 76 of 98 paragraphs. In September 2016, a meeting was held to assess possible developments. In the context of migration Art 18 para 3 of the charter is relevant: National labour law restricts foreign workers with complicated admission procedures and the “priority rule” meaning positions can only be filled with TCN if no EEA/Swiss national is available.³⁰⁸ Of further interest here is Article 19 (8): Austria reserves to expel foreigners for various reasons additionally to endangering national security or offending against public interest or morality thus not complying with the standards set by the Charter.³⁰⁹

Austria opens the labour market for applicants for asylum three months after filing the claim, but restricts it to tourism, agriculture and shortage professions as well as a labour market test.³¹⁰ After being granted the asylum status, refugees have full access to the labour market, the same applies to subjects of subsidiary protection.³¹¹ Asylum seekers are dispersed over the national territory based on the population of its municipalities, a practice, which ignores labour market demands and might lead to lower employment rates.³¹² Concerning the evaluation of skills of migrants, there is no systematic assessment³¹³ but the job centre has started to offer competency checks in all states, which not yet have been interwoven with further trainings or job opportunities.³¹⁴ In 2016 the Law on Recognition and Assessment has been enacted and eases the recognition of foreign qualifications, a financial hurdle has yet to be cleared via scholarships.³¹⁵ Refugees are widely treated equal to Austrian nationals concerning social security, whereas subjects of subsidiary protection are often deprived which also is due to the federal authority in matters of social security.³¹⁶

6.2. Recommendations after the 2015 report from ECRI

6.2.1. Concerning the Integration of Asylum Seekers

The ECRI states, in its report on Austria 2015, that integration measures should also be directed towards asylum seekers and seekers of subsidiary protection³¹⁷. As for now, applicants for asylum are not entitled to the same working rights as refugees. In June 2016, the federal government announced that asylum seekers shall be entitled to unpaid jobs, mainly coordinated by the municipalities.³¹⁸ The Act on Integration 2017 (IntG 2017) also only applies to refugees, subjects of subsidiary protection and TCN holding a residence title, further differentiating between the two former and the later.³¹⁹

6.2.2. Concerning the status of Islam

In the 2015 report, the Islam Act 2015 is criticised for its ban of foreign funding of Islamic religious societies (paragraph 6 para 2 Federal Law on Islam 2015). No steps have been or are about to be taken to undo this measure. On the other hand, by 1 October 2017, the Anti-Face-Covering Act enters into force providing that in public spaces facial features may not be hidden by veils or the like, offences may be fined with up to EUR 150.³²⁰

7. How is migrants' right to access to healthcare regulated within the national legislation?

7.1. Legal framework

Basic provisions regulating health care are laid down in the “Patient Charter” [“Patientencharta”] and the “hospital and sanatoria act” [“Krankenanstalten- und Kuranstaltengesetz”]. Special regulations for foreigners who are in need of assistance and protection are regulated in the framework of the so-called “basic provision” [“Grundversorgung”]. Comprehensive health care for recognised asylum seekers and persons with subsidiary protection can be granted within the framework of the so-called “demand-oriented minimum security” [“bedarfsorientierte Mindestsicherung”]. Due to the federal system in Austria, legislation and its implementation is divided between the federal government and the federal states in many areas.

7.2. Patient Charter

The “Patient Charter” is an agreement between the federal government and the federal states which defines the essential rights of all patients. The federal government and the federal states are mutually dependent on the regulations resulting from the Charter regarding legislation and legal implementation. Article 4 para 2 of the Patient Charter stipulates that “treatment of non-Austrian nationals must be carried out only if the costs of the treatment are borne by the patient himself or a third party”. Exceptions exist for “cases of imminent danger to life, impending delivery or serious health damage that requires immediate treatment”.

7.3. Hospital and sanatoria act

The “hospital and sanatoria act” is a federal law which regulates the principles for admission in hospitals and sanatoria. They are further elaborated in the implementing laws of the federal states. In public hospitals, “absolutely necessary medical assistance” must always be provided, according to paragraph 23 para 1 of the act. What is more, so-called “irrefutable” persons must be hospitalised in accordance with paragraph 22 para 2 leg cit. According to paragraph 22 para 4 leg cit a person has to be considered as “irrefutable” whose “mental or physical condition requires immediate hospitalisation due to danger of life or because of the risk of serious damage to health which cannot be avoided any other way” as well as “in any case, women, when the childbirth is imminent”.

Through a federal state’s law, it is possible to exclude persons who are in need of hospitalisation but not “irrefutable” from hospital care. According to paragraph 29 para 1 leg cit, a person can only be rejected from hospital if he/she is not resident in Austria and if the incurred fees or the anticipated actual treatment costs cannot be paid or sufficiently secured by him/her. Paragraph 29 para 1 leg cit is applicable to all persons, regardless of their citizenship, who present themselves as self-payers, even if the costs are subsequently reimbursed by a foreign social insurance institution.³²¹ This provision could be considered as indirectly discriminatory according to European Union law. Nevertheless, it can be justified in order to protect the “financial equilibrium of the social security system” against “serious threats”.³²²

7.4. Basic care

Foreigners who are in need of assistance and protection are granted full medical care through the framework of the so-called “basic care” [Grundversorgung]. General provisions are stipulated in the “Basic Care Agreement” [“Grundversorgungsvereinbarung”, GVV]. Just like the Patient Charter, the Basic Care Agreement is an agreement between the federal government and the federal states. The latter regulates the allocation of tasks and costs of the basic care between government and states. Based on this, the “Federal Basic Care Act 2005” [“Grundversorgungsgesetz-Bund 2005”] regulates the rights of asylum seekers and certain other foreigners during the admission to the asylum procedure. The rights during the actual asylum procedure are regulated by different basic care laws of each federal state.

The target group of the basic care is defined in Art 2 para 1 GVV as “foreigners who are eligible for assistance and protection”. A person is “eligible for assistance” if he or she “cannot, or not adequately provide, the necessary means of living for him/herself and his/her family members living with him/her from his/her own resources or other persons and institutions”. Persons

³²² ibidem.

“eligible for protection” are defined as foreigners who are subject to the admission procedure or to admitted procedures, foreigners with denied asylum applications who cannot be deported for legal or factual reasons, foreigners who can be either be subject to deportation custody or to laxer measures or whose temporary basic care is ensured by the federal states until the de-facto deportation or during the first four months after asylum has been granted.

According to Article 6 para 1 leg cit, the following measures have to be taken in the context of health care:

No. 4: Medical examinations in the case of need, during the initial admission into country, according to the regulations of health authorities

No. 5: Assurance of health care within the regulations of the “General Social Security Act” [“Allgemeines Sozialversicherungsgesetz”] by paying health insurance contributions

No. 6: Granting of any necessary additional services not covered by health insurance after considering the individual case

No. 7: Measures for persons in need of care

Basic care of “foreigners who consistently and lastingly threaten the order in an accommodation through their behaviour”, can be restricted or discontinued. According to Art 1 para 2 leg cit, the provisions of Directives 2003/9/EC and 2001/55/EC must be observed. Emergency medical care must not be jeopardised in any case.

Paragraph 2 para 7 of the Federal Basic Care Agreement 2005 implements Art 20 para 5 Directive 2013/33/EU, according to which refugees have to be provided with basic care until the moment of de-facto deportation. Eligible persons have a legal claim to these benefits.³²³

7.5. Demand-oriented minimum security

The structure of demand-oriented minimum security [“bedarfsorientierte Mindestsicherung”] is regulated individually by each federal state. Irrespective of this, all recognized refugees who are not fully self-sustaining as well as persons granted subsidiary protection and third-country nationals of five years of legal residence have to be included in the statutory health insurance.

7.6. Access to information

Formally, all persons in Austria have equal access to health care. Nonetheless, due to information deficits migrants partially face barriers to access health care services. In order to receive comprehensive health care, patients have to show a lot of self-initiative.³²⁴ Major deficits exist for example with regard to supporting structures for disabled persons. Surveys showed that migrants often were not informed about governmental support for caring relatives.³²⁵ What is more, in some cases the health care staff itself lacked the appropriate expertise, so that it could not properly inform the patients about various support options.³²⁶

In migrant communities, information exchange about health and social services mainly takes place within friends and family or in conversations with friends, neighbours, or relatives.³²⁷ Due to the complexity of our highly developed health care system, it requires a certain degree of socialization in order to use health care services extensively.

8. How do migrant children benefit from the right to education under your national legislation (Article 2 of the first Protocol to the ECHR)?

8.1. Multinational Legislation

The first Protocol to the European Convention on Human Rights (ECHR), which is a multilateral contract under international law, enjoys constitutional status in Austria.³²⁸ According to Article 2 of the first Protocol to the ECHR nobody should be deprived from the right to education.³²⁹ Although this article is drafted negatively, it still guarantees an individual's subjective and constitutional right to education, primarily focussing on the education in elementary school; however, according to the prevailing theory, it also includes all other types of schools, as ruled by the ECtHR in 1975.³³⁰

Moreover, according to Art 6 Abs 3 of the Treaty of the European Union (TEU), fundamental rights as guaranteed in the ECHR are part of the fundamental principles of the EU; according to art 6 Abs 2 TEU the EU joins the ECHR; therefore, also Art 2 of the first Protocol to the ECHR is incorporated in the EU; the scope of application is, however, limited to the union legislation.³³¹

8.2. Schooling Obligation Act

All children that permanently reside in Austria are according to paragraph 1 para 1 Schooling Obligation Act [Schulpflichtgesetz, SchPflG] subject to nine years of compulsory education, which starts according to paragraph 2 SchPflG with September 1st after reaching the age of 6. This obligation is independent of the child's citizenships as well as the residence or place of abode of their parents. However, as mentioned the child itself needs to permanently reside in Austria, which is not clearly defined under Austrian law as no time limit is given. Therefore, the circumstances on whether the child has the intention to stay permanently or only temporarily have to be considered.³³²

Children that only temporarily reside in Austria are according to paragraph 17 SchPflG allowed to attend school under the same circumstances as those that are part of the compulsory education according to paragraph 2 SchPflG.³³³

Apart from reaching the mandatory school age, children must be ready for school, which implies that they are able to follow the lectures without being overextended physically or psychologically. If this is the case, parents or other legal guardians are obliged to sign the child in at the primary school in the belonging district; otherwise children need to be registered in preschool.³³⁴

In case children have already attended school in a foreign country, existing reports do not have to be recognised under Austrian law; however, a placement examination needs to be taken in order to classify if they are able to attend an age-appropriate school level. If this examination is failed, it can be repeated only once; otherwise, the child needs to take the placement test for entering a lower school level. Under certain circumstances, including the constant contribution and sufficient performance of the child during lectures, these placement examinations can remain undone.³³⁵

Service departments which will inform migrants about their own educational obligations and possibilities as well as the ones of their children are available in every Austrian federal state. As parents or legal guardians are responsible for the fulfilment of the schooling obligation and might not be aware of the Austrian schooling obligation, migrants are advised to contact these offices as early as possible in order to prevent any harmful consequences.³³⁶

8.2.1. Extraordinary pupils

Since child migrants often do not have any or just little command of the German language, they are regarded to as extraordinary pupils for 12 months.³³⁷ This period can be extended by another 12 months, in case the child is still unable to speak German without fault. Extraordinary pupils attend the same classes as coeval children; however, when grading, the children's language skills will be taken into account. If the child is completely unable to perform due to missing knowledge of the German language, they will not be graded insufficient, but not graded at all. Yet, as soon as the pupil is regarded as an ordinary pupil, the same rules apply as for any other student.³³⁸

According to paragraph 8e para 1 School Organisation Act [Schulorganisationsgesetz, SchOG], language support classes must be provided, if more than eight students have been accepted as extraordinary pupils, due to insufficient German language skills, in order to enable them to follow the lecturers in the respective school level. These courses have to be offered for a maximum of two years to an extent of eleven lessons per week according to paragraph 8e para 2

SchUG. Extraordinary pupils do not need to be in the same school, level of school or type of school.³³⁹

In order to ensure that child migrants are not discriminated, a 10-point plan for a non-discriminatory educational system was issued by the members of the initiative for a non-discriminatory educational system (Initiative für ein diskriminierungsfreies Bildungswesen), which for example aims to establish complaints offices, offer workshops in schools, hire school counselors, diversify the teaching staff as well as to include Articles 28, 29, 30 of the Convention on the Rights of Children (CRC) in the Austrian constitutional legislation.³⁴⁰

8.3. Other Possibilities

On the occasion that the migrant is already 15 years old, they are not allowed to enter the standard educational system. Still, there is the possibility to catch up on the school-leaving qualification, by applying to be authorized to take this examination at a New Secondary School [Neue Mittelschule]. For preparation purposes, courses at adult educational centres are offered; however, the attendance of those is not obligatory.³⁴¹

9. How are foreign school and university diplomas recognised in your country (e.g. through national law under the CoE/UNESCO Convention on the Recognition of Qualifications concerning Higher Education in the European Region of 1997) and what are the practical procedures?

Depending on which education has already been completed in one's country of origin, these diplomas as well as certain exams might get recognised.³⁴²

9.1. School diplomas

According to paragraph 75 para 1 SchUG diplomas regarding school attendance in foreign countries can on request be recognised by the Federal Ministry for Education [Bundesministerium für Bildung, BMB] if the person's main residence is in Austria. According to a ruling of the Austrian Verwaltungsgerichtshof (Higher Administrative Court, "VwGH") several exams completed abroad can be together recognised in one Austrian diploma as well.

Assuming that the preconditions in paragraph 75 para 3 and 4 are fulfilled and the recognition is successful, the diplomas can be regarded as equivalent. Therefore, recognised diplomas provide under paragraph 75 para 5 SchUG the same entitlements as those to which they are equivalent, except if the nostrification is subject to limiting conditions. The recognition functions comprehensively; therefore, it is subject for all legally relevant spheres of life.³⁴³

The recognition under paragraph 75 para 1 SchUG is not necessary, whenever the migrant aims at attending a school and the rejection of a placement exam is permissible.³⁴⁴ Furthermore, when intending at pursuing a higher education that requires the successful completion of a school-leaving exam, the recognition of the foreign school-leaving exam must not be recognised, if school was attended successfully for at least eight years. However, if the migrant did not pass the subject German, an external exam [Externistenprüfung] must be taken at a New Secondary School.³⁴⁵

9.1.1. Practical Procedure

As mentioned in Chapter 9.1, the recognition must be requested at the BMB. This request must not only include proof of the completed exams, but also one's certificate of birth and proof of a permanent residence in Austria according to paragraph 75 para 2 SchUG. The Federal Ministry then has to decide if the school attendance as well as passed exams meet the requirements of those diplomas, to which they should be equal, according to paragraph 75 para 3 SchUG. Therefore, the foreign school must be comparable with respect to the level of education. Conceding that those conditions are only partially met, certain levels of school or specific subjects must be attended as an extraordinary pupil or an exam must be passed, to which the conditions of paragraph 75 para 4 SchUG apply. Referring to the latter, the BMBF is obliged to issue a founded response according to paragraph 58 para 2 General Administrative Procedures Act [Allgemeines Verwaltungsverfahrensgesetz, AVG], stating which circumstances are used as reference.

If the diploma is recognised, it must be certified, either on the original diploma or a rigidly connected appendix. On the other hand, if the preconditions for the recognition are not fulfilled, the BMs must dismiss the request according to paragraph 75 para 6 SchUG.³⁴⁶

9.2. University diplomas

According to the UNESCO Convention on the Recognition of Qualifications concerning Higher Education in the European Region of 1997, also referred to as the Lisbon Recognition Convention, study time, as well as exams, completed in another member state must be recognised, unless there is a severe difference between the countries. This convention was implemented in Austria as federal law and is therefore directly applicable.³⁴⁷

Furthermore, Austria has concluded several bilateral and multilateral agreements regarding the equivalence of academic degrees, which are referred to as leges specialis as opposed to the previously mentioned Lisbon Recognition Convention. Additionally, directives of the Council of Europe (CoE), including the directive on the "Recognition of diplomas, certificates and titles awarded after higher education of at least three years' duration", have had a significant influence on the Austrian legislation.³⁴⁸

When recognising foreign degrees, paragraphs 51 para 2 Z 28, 90, 124 para 7 University Act [Universitätsgesetz, UG] apply; however, these provisions only refer to the legal basic parameters, giving the universities autonomy for material details. However, for the recognition of only specific exams, paragraph 78 UG applies.³⁴⁹

9.2.1. Practical Procedure

Precondition for the recognition of university diplomas is the submission of proof that the academic degree is crucial for the practice of one's education or career. The recognition of diplomas acquired abroad must be requested at a university or university of applied sciences that offers a study program that is equal to the completed one; yet, simultaneous or repeated applications are prohibited under paragraph 90 para 2 UG. Passport, proof of the completed degree including translated information on this study program as well as the intended career must be submitted.³⁵⁰ According to paragraph 90 para 3 UG a notification must be issued by the competent governing body, stating to which Austrian degree the foreign degree is equivalent and therefore which academic title the applicant is allowed to carry.³⁵¹ In case of a successful recognition, a certificate of equivalence is issued; however, a new academic degree is not awarded. Equivalence refers to the fact that the person whose degree was recognised immediately acquires all rights that are according to the Austrian legislation connected to the possession of an Austrian degree.³⁵²

The fee for the recognition process is EUR 150 and needs to be paid in advance. In case the application is dismissed or is withdrawn, the fee expires.³⁵³

9.3. Authentication

Prior to being recognised, foreign diplomas often need to be authenticated, depending on the country of origin.³⁵⁴ For demonstrational purposes, some case examples will be given:

Given that the diploma was issued in for example Bosnia-Herzegovina or Serbia, the original diploma has to be presented; however, it does not have to be recognised. If the diploma was received in for instance the Russian Federation or India, the foreign minister of the country of origin has to issue an apostille. In order to being able to recognise diplomas from Iran, Nigeria and Pakistan, not only the foreign minister from the country of origin, but also the representative Austrian authorities in the home country need to issue an apostille. This also applies for diplomas issued in Syria; yet, in 2013, the Federal Ministry for Science, Research and Economy

10. How is participation of migrants in political decisions regulated in your national legislation? Are they legally allowed to participate in their country of residence the same way as in their country of origin?

For the regulation of participation of migrants in political decisions, the Austrian legislator differentiates between migrants who are European Union citizens and migrants who are third country nationals.³⁵⁶ Whereas European Union citizens enjoy electoral rights at least to some degree, as it will be explained further below, the participation of third country nationals in the process of political decision making is highly restricted in Austria. In fact, third country nationals do not have the right to vote for any of the general representation bodies, which is the National Council [Nationalrat] at federal level, the provincial parliaments [Landtage] at state level and the municipal councils [Gemeinderäte]. For third country nationals, neither the type of residence permit, nor the length of the permanent residence will change anything with regards to the right to vote in these elections.³⁵⁷

In 2003, the Vienna state legislature wanted to extend the right to vote for the municipal council also to third country nationals who have been permanent residents in Austria for more than five years. 37 representatives of the Vienna state legislature immediately appealed the decree and shortly after in 2004 the Austrian Constitutional Court ruled this provision as unconstitutional. The court held that granting third country nationals the right to vote for the municipal council would need an amendment of the Austrian constitution first.³⁵⁸ However, until now the parliament has never agreed upon such an amendment.

Nevertheless, a unique regulation concerning the participation of migrants in the local political process is found in the Styrian Municipal Code. It obliges every Styrian municipality to establish a Migrant Advisory Council [MigrantInnenbeirat] if more than 1,000 citizens who are third country nationals have their main residence in the municipality.³⁵⁹ A similar obligation to establish such an advisory institution cannot be found in any other state, although there also exists a similar Migration- and Integration Advisory Council [Migrations- und Integrationsbeirat] in the city of Linz in Upper Austria.³⁶⁰ The goal of these advisory councils is to advocate for the interests of migrants in local politics and advise the municipality in all political decisions affecting migrants.³⁶¹ Neither at state nor at federal level such a migrant advisory council exists in Austria. European Union citizens residing in Austria have the right to vote in municipal elections.³⁶² The relevant EU Council Directive 93/109/EC of 6 December 1993 on local elections has been fully implemented when Austria joined the European Union in 1995.³⁶³ There has been no case law in Austrian courts regarding European Union citizens' right to vote at the municipal level and Austrian law does not provide a possibility for Union citizens to vote for the provincial parliaments or the National Council at any time. Further, Union citizens – just as third country nationals – are not allowed to vote in the elections for the federal president. Only Austrian citizens have the right to vote at state and federal level.³⁶⁴ Taking into account that the acquirement procedure to obtain Austrian citizenship is linked to high fees and the necessity to proof a secure livelihood (which is in comparison to other European countries rather high), it becomes apparent that migrants with low income are systematically excluded from participating in political decision making in Austria.³⁶⁵

³⁵⁶ A legal definition of the term “third country national” can be found in several Austrian statutory regulations concerning asylum and migration law. They all define a ‘third country nationals’ as a foreigner who is neither a citizen of one of the member States of the European Economic Area (EEA), nor a citizen of Switzerland (paragraph 2 para 1 Z 6 Settlement and Residence Act [Niederlassungs- und Aufenthaltsgesetz], paragraph 2 para 4 Z 10 Law on the Immigration Police 2005 [Fremdenpolizeigesetz 2005] and paragraph 2 para 1 Z 20b Asylum Act 2005 [Asylgesetz 2005]). Hence, this definition of third country nationals includes stateless persons as well.

With regard to the elections for the European Parliament, European Union citizens with a permanent residence in Austria have to apply for the entry into the register of EU-voters in order to be able to vote in the elections.³⁶⁶ Austria is the only member state where European Union citizens are allowed to vote for the European Parliament at the age of 16.³⁶⁷ Third country nationals are not allowed to vote for the European Parliament.

In 2017, the Austrian law concerning the freedom of assembly was adopted. It now grants the Austrian federal government the right to prohibit the campaign appearances of foreign politicians in Austria under certain circumstances.³⁶⁸ Nevertheless, Austrian law does not prohibit migrants the participation in elections of their country of origin. Therefore, no form of redress is foreseen if migrants are unlawfully impeded to participate in political decisions in their country of origin.

Procedure and Requirements. According to Article 6 of the Federal Law concerning Austrian Nationality (1985 Nationality Act, StbG 1986), nationality can be obtained by descent, naturalisation (long-term living in Austria, marriage) or by notification.

11.1.1. By Descent

Children, born in wedlock, obtain Austrian citizenship from birth, if one parent is an Austrian citizen at the time of the child's birth.³⁶⁹ Children born out of wedlock obtain citizenship either if their mother is an Austrian citizen at the time of the child's birth or by legitimation if their mother is a non-Austrian citizen but the child is still a minor and unmarried at the time of their parents' marriage and the father is Austrian citizen at this time.³⁷⁰

Minors, aged 14 and above, may obtain citizenship if they and their legal representative consent to the acquisition of Austrian citizenship.³⁷¹

11.1.2. By Application

Austrian citizenship may be granted to an alien under the following conditions:

- residence in Austria
- at least 30 years of constant residence in Austria or
- at least 15 years of lawful and constant residence in Austria with proof of personal and professional integration or
- at least six years of lawful and constant residence in Austria in case of:
 - granting the refugee status regarding Geneva Convention or
 - citizenship of one of the EEA countries or
 - born in Austria or
 - excellent and extraordinary (expected) performance in science, economics, art or sport in the interest of the Republic of Austria or
 - proof of personal integration meaning sufficient knowledge of the German language (either B2 level or B1 level in addition three years' experience in voluntary work).

general requirements (also by marriage)

- integrity meaning no convictions which have not been abrogated, no pending penal procedures (in Austria as well as abroad) and
- sufficient knowledge of the German language, Austrian history and current affairs proven by undertaking exams or a high school diploma on 8th grade and
- proof of secure livelihood of 36 months in the last six years, however the secure livelihood must be proven mandatorily 6 months before the date of the application and

- no prohibition of entry or stay and no return decision.

11.1.3. By Marriage

The foreign wife/husband of an Austrian citizen may obtain Austrian citizenship after at least six years of lawful residence in Austria if they have been married and living in a common household for at least five years. An EEA citizen may also be granted Austrian citizenship after at least six years permanent residence in Austria.

11.2. Dual Nationality

In general, the Austrian Nationality Act does not allow dual citizenship except for persons who obtain two citizenships at the date of birth. If a person acquires Austrian nationality, they must renounce the other citizenship they are holding. The only exception is stated in Article 28 of the Austrian Nationality Act:

A person shall be permitted to maintain Austrian citizenship

- if the maintenance is in the interest of the Republic of Austria, or
- if personal reasons are worth considering (the law does not regard all personal reasons an individual might deem worth considering as such, for example older relatives living in Austria, career prospects, reasons related to property issues etc.).

Only born Austrians may make use of this legal provision stated under b).³⁷²

12. How is your country assisted by EU programmes and funding with regard to the integration of migrants?

In 2014, the European Parliament and the Council established the Asylum, Migration and Integration Fund (AMIF) with the Regulation 516/2015/EU.³⁷³ The AMIF serves for the period of seven years from 1 January 2014 to 31 December 2020 and is the main financial instrument with which the European Union supports initiatives in the member states that “promote the efficient management of migration flows and the implementation, strengthening and development of a common Union approach to asylum and immigration.”³⁷⁴

At national level, in Austria, the Department III/5/a “Supporting Asylum and Returns” of the Federal Ministry for Internal Affairs [Referat III/5/a “Förderungen Asyl und Rückkehr“ des Bundesministeriums für Inneres, BMI] is the responsible authority for the management and control system of the AMIF in principal. However, for the implementation regarding the measures for the integration of migrants is delegated to the Department VIII.3 of the Federal Ministry for Europe, Integration and Foreign Affairs.³⁷⁵

One of the specific objectives, laid down in Article 3(2)(b), of Regulation 516/2014/EU states that the AMIF aims to promote the effective integration of third-country nationals at national, local and regional levels. However, this does not include all third-country nationals, since, in the opinion of the Austrian Federal Ministry for Europe, Integration and Foreign Affairs asylum seekers are not included in the targeted group of the AMIF. Only third-country nationals lawfully residing in Austria with a long-term residence perspective are considered to be in the targeted group of the AMIF.³⁷⁶

The integration initiatives which are funded by the AMIF focus on the integration of persons with refugee or subsidiary protection status. Furthermore, initiatives supporting a stronger emphasis of the common values for a good social coexistence and projects helping to implement the 50-point-plan for the integration of persons with refugee and subsidiary protection status in Austria are supported financially.³⁷⁷

The total budget of the AMIF is EUR 3.137 billion. Thereof EUR 64.53 million are allocated to Austria for the period of seven years.³⁷⁸ 44% of the national funding in Austria is planned to be used for integration initiatives.³⁷⁹ In the 2017/2018 period, 48 projects were supported by the AMIF in Austria with EUR 6,67 million in total.³⁸⁰

Besides state and federal authorities, local public bodies, non-governmental organisations, humanitarian organisations, private and public law companies and education and research organisations can also be beneficiaries of the programmes. An example for a project funded partly by the AMIF are the Integration- and Education Centres in Salzburg by the Diakonie Flüchtlingsdienst GmbH where third country nationals are supported in finding housing, learning German and are counselled with regard to job applications. A list of all the selected initiatives for Austria which are supported by the AMIF can be found on the website of the

Austrian Federal Ministry for Europe, Integration, and Foreign Affairs [Bundeministerium für Europa, Integration und Äußeres, BMEIA].³⁸¹

Besides the AMIF, Austria has also been assisted through the European Social Fund (ESF) of the EU with regard to facilitating the integration of migrants into the labour market in particular. The programme focuses on contributing to creating jobs and strengthening social cohesion in Austria. One of the main challenges that are addressed through projects funded by the ESF is the improvement of education outcomes of vulnerable young people including those with a migrant background.³⁸²

The managing authority for the ESF is the Federal Ministry for Work, Social Issues and Consumer Protection [Bundesministerium für Arbeit, Soziales und Konsumentenschutz]. The total budget that the EU contributes to the program for Austrian projects is EUR 442 million.³⁸³

An example for a project partly funded partly by the ESF is the “start2work” project by Caritas Vorarlberg where refugees are supported through German courses and coaching for job application procedures.³⁸⁴

Conclusions

The Austrian asylum procedure has been heavily influenced by international and European Union law provisions, due to the direct applicability of the regulations imposed the European Union, for example, the Dublin Regulation. Moreover, paragraph 3 of the Asylum Act 2005 solely refers to Art 1 of the Geneva Refugee Convention with respect to the definition of who a refugee is. These constant links and interactions between international, European and national provisions complicates this legal field immensely.

Since 2014, the competent authority for asylum procedure is the Federal Office for Immigration and Asylum (BFA). Appeals in asylum procedures are possible to the Federal Administrative Court (BVwG), against whose decisions one can appealed in front of the Austrian Administrative Court and/or Constitutional Court. Whereas in 2015 Austria experienced an enormous increase in asylum applications, leading to 89,098 applications in total; the number has decreased in the past one and a half years. When comparing the period from January to June of 2016 2017, the number was cut in half.

The Austrian legislation concerning foreigners' right to vote is restrictive, as it excludes third country nationals from participating in the main elections of the general representative bodies. Additionally, only absolute minimum standards with respect to voting rights of EU citizens at the municipal level are provided. Taking into account that the acquisition of Austrian citizenship for migrants has a high financial barrier, due to high application fees and the requirement to proof secure livelihood, it is apparent that migrants with low income are completely excluded from participating in national political decision-making.

On the other hand, migrant children do also benefit from the Austrian educational system, by giving them the opportunity to be accepted as an extraordinary pupil in the first two years as well as the legal obligation to offer additional courses. Moreover, school and university diplomas might get recognised, depending on the country of origin and the respective curricula. Through the AMIF and ESF the European Union financially supports projects in Austria to facilitate the integration of migrants.

To conclude, the legal framework which regulates migration and related issues is one of the most complex and unclear legal areas in Austria, due to constant changes and amendments of respective different laws, including regulations on immigration, residence, asylum and integration. For instance, the Asylum Act 2005 has been changed ten times; the Settlement and Residence Act has even been changed eleven times - only in the past five years. Furthermore, decisions of the Administrative and Constitutional Court have caused some of these changes.

Introduction

During the initial years of its independence, Azerbaijan underwent major challenges, among which occupation of 20% of its territories by the Republic of Armenia engendered massive flow of people within the region. Subsequently, about a million Azerbaijani citizens converted into refugees and internally displaced persons. The economy of the country, gradually, has become a subject to the speedy growth leading to Azerbaijan to become both a country of departure and destination. Furthermore, convenient geographical location of the country has brought about the acceleration of transit migration. All the mentioned factors have contributed to formulation of diverse migration issues among which the integration of migrants has had a pivotal role.

Hence, the report submitted by the ELSA Azerbaijan encapsulates the legislation of the country on rights of migrants in the fields of healthcare, education, political and civic participation. It also scrutinizes the cooperation initiatives of Azerbaijan with the organizations, such as the EU, UNHCR, IOM, etc. to ameliorate the institutional issues regarding the mentioned matter. In the end, report generalizes the main findings, reforms and statistics on integration schemes.

1. How is the right to asylum regulated in national law? Give a description of the national regulations governing asylum; What is the procedure for granting asylum and who is responsible?

1.1. Description of the National Regulations Governing Asylum

The right of asylum is the legal opportunity granted by the state to each person to enter and reside on its territory because of the persecution of that person for political and other reasons in the state of which he is a citizen. The international community is responsible for ensuring the basic rights of an asylum seeker, since they no longer enjoy the protection of any state. This responsibility is formalised in the 1951 UN Convention relating to the status of refugees (and its 1967 Protocol), which has also been signed by the Republic of Azerbaijan. In addition to this Convention, article 14 (1) of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights (to which Azerbaijan is a party state) further provides that “everyone has the right to seek and enjoy in other countries asylum from persecution”³⁸⁵ Moreover, the Republic of Azerbaijan has ratified the 1954 Convention relating to the Status of Stateless Persons and 1961 Convention on the Reduction of Statelessness.³⁸⁶ Azerbaijan has committed itself to the terms of the Geneva Convention of 1951, which is reflected in the Law on the Status of Refugees and Internally Displaced Persons (IDPs) of 21 May 1999 and the Presidential Decree on the Rules for Examination of Applications of Refugee Status - National RSD Procedure (November 13 2000) Both the law and the decree describe the procedures and requirements for asylum applications in Azerbaijan.

Although asylum seekers shall enter, like all entrants to Azerbaijan, through regular, established border checkpoints, article 5 of the Law on Refugees and IDPs states that refugees who do not enter the country at these regular border checkpoints "...shall be exempted from amenability envisaged in the legislation..." According to article 11 of the Law on the status of Refugees and IDPs, applicants for refugee status have the right to temporary residence on the territory of Azerbaijan; use of an interpreter (free of charge); temporary employment; obtain medical care; use of living space at the temporary accommodation settlement, which is provided until the refugee status granting procedure is completed; freely practice his/her religion; be in contact with the UNHCR. Article 3 of the Law of the Republic of Azerbaijan on Refugees and IDPs of May 21 1999 is about granting political asylum in the Republic of Azerbaijan to the foreigners and stateless persons. Therefore, based on article 3, we can note the following: Political asylum shall be granted to the foreigners and stateless persons in accordance with article 70, part 1 and article 109, point 21 of the Constitution of the Republic of Azerbaijan.³⁸⁷ Azerbaijan Republic grants political refuge to foreign citizens and stateless persons in accordance with recognized international legal standards. The President of the Azerbaijan Republic settles questions concerning granting political asylum.³⁸⁸

1.2 Procedure for Granting Asylum and Who is Responsible?

The main competent agency for the granting of asylum is State Migration Service, whose capacity includes the issues of applications regarding refugee status. Determination of Refugee Status Department is one of the major branches of the mentioned institution (see Question 3.1. for more detailed information about State Migration Service) Since the Republic of Azerbaijan is a member state to the 1951 Convention Relating to the Status of Refugees, it has incorporated the "refugee" definition into its legislation. Hence, under the Azerbaijani law, refugee is a non-Azerbaijani citizen who owing to a well-founded fear of being persecuted for reasons of race, religion, nationality, membership of a particular social group or political opinion, is outside the country of his nationality and is unable or, owing to such fear, is unwilling to avail himself of the protection of that country; or who, not having a nationality and being outside the country of his former habitual residence as a result of such events, is unable or, owing to such fear, is unwilling to return to it. Article 9 of the Law of the Republic of Azerbaijan on Refugees and IDPs of May 21 1999 refers to the bodies dealing with granting and depriving the refugee and IDP status. Therefore, based on article 3, we can note the following: decisions on granting the refugee and IDP (person displaced within the country) status and depriving the refugee status shall be made by the appropriate executive authorities of the Republic of Azerbaijan.³⁸⁹ A favorable resolution of the application results in the recognition of refugee status for the applicant and his or her relatives. Successful applicants and their families also receive a 'Refugee Card' and, in compliance with the 1951 Convention Relating to the Status of Refugees, are provided with travel documents allowing them to travel beyond the borders of Azerbaijan. Refugee status will not be granted if: a) as established by international legislation, the applicant is held guilty of committing a crime or a military crime against peace or humanity; b) the applicant for refugee status has committed a serious crime of a non-political character before arriving to Azerbaijan; c) the person has been found guilty of committing acts against the objectives and principles of the UN.

³⁸⁷ Law of the Republic of Azerbaijan on "Refugees and IDPs" 1999 [Qaçqınların və məcburi köçkünlərin (ölkə daxilində köçürülmüş şəxslərin) statusu haqqında Azərbaycan Respublikasının Qanunu] [Azerbajani]

³⁸⁹ Law of the Republic of Azerbaijan on "The Status of Refugees and IDPs" 1999 [Qaçqınların və məcburi köçkünlərin (ölkə daxilində köçürülmüş şəxslərin) statusu haqqında Azərbaycan Respublikasının Qanunu] [Azerbajani]

1.2.1. Application procedure

Foreigners and stateless persons intending to be granted a refugee status in the Republic of Azerbaijan should directly or via the government agencies (Ministry of Internal Affairs, State Border Service, local executive bodies) apply to State Migration Service of the Republic of Azerbaijan in either border checkpoints, penitentiary institutions or in other territorial areas of Azerbaijan. In case such persons do not possess any relevant documents confirming identification or grounds for a legal entry to the territory of the Republic of Azerbaijan, identification and dactyloscopy procedures should be conducted on the account of the principles of the international law. Immediate information on such persons is provided for the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, afterwards. The Ministry of Internal Affairs, State Border Service and local executive bodies deliver the application of refugee status to State Migration Service of the Republic Azerbaijan within three working days. A person filing the application form on the refugee status should indicate the incentives behind the wish of being granted such status, note personal details, such as, country of origin, place of birth and marital status by mentioning the information on both himself/herself and family members and hand the travel and identification documents over the State Migration Service. However, absence of the aforementioned documents does not adversely affect the decision on the granting of refugee status. If the individual is not able to apply himself/herself due to health conditions and other reasons, plenipotentiary may present the application together with medical documents. The individual is voluntarily placed in the detention centers of illegal immigrants of State Migration Service until the issue of granting refugee status is solved in accordance with the provisions of Migration Code of the Republic of Azerbaijan. The person applying to get a refugee status should be provided with the information on the Law on the status of refugees and IDPs and the Presidential Decree on the Rules for Examination of Applications of Refugee Status by the agency which he/she delivered the application. Then, State Migration Service registers the application and makes a decision of approval or denial on the examination of application according the outcomes brought about after the interview held with the applicant. The positive decision on the examination of application is considered a legal ground for the person to temporarily stay in the territory of the Republic of Azerbaijan. Information on the people being granted a refugee status is included in the Unified Migration Information Database of State Migration Service.

In case the decision on the examination of application is negative, State Migration Service and its local agencies deliver the written notification to the individual within 5 days stating the details on decision and method of appeal to it. In case decision on the examination of application is positive, State Migration Service presents a temporary certificate of identification (until the time when application is scrutinized) to the individual and his/her family members within 24 hours. Information on the family members under 16 years is mentioned in the certificate of one of the parents and when there are no parents, the certificate of guardian or one of the relatives older than 18 and took the upbringing, behavior and guardianship responsibility of the individual in a voluntary way includes such information. Individuals under 16 years coming to Azerbaijan with an intention of getting refugee status are provided with a temporary certificate of identification in case there are neither parents nor guardians. Individual putting in an application for refugee status (with his/her family members) shall participate in compulsory medical review as well as sanitary regulation, vaccination and laboratory examination in treatment-prophylactic institutions when needed. Such examinations carry no charge of fee. Then, individual applying for a refugee status is invited to the interview held by the competent officers of State Migration Service. The interview is conducted on an individual basis and its content is not downright. In the course of the interview, individual should provide officers with detailed information on the reasons of application, his/her previous residence places, travel routes, motives behind resting in the territory of other states, whether the individual has applied for a refugee status in those countries and other necessary facts. In case the individual refuses to inform officers about his/her personal details or consciously provides them with false information, examination of application is terminated within different levels and the granting of refugee status is denied under the legislation of the Republic of Azerbaijan. All the information on individual and his/her family members, as well as the data spoken out during interview are depicted in the inquiry paper. The application, questionnaires, inquiry papers, medical document on prophylactic examination and other necessary documents are considered collection of documents on personal paper. State Migration Service, then, looks through the personal paper of the individual and sends the copy of it to the Ministry of Internal Affairs within a month. The latter conducts investigation on the personal paper and deliver the relevant information to the State Migration Service within a month, as well. The decision of granting or not granting refugee status is made by State Migration Service within three months since the application was registered. In case the decision on granting refugee status is negative, written notification on the right to appeal on the base of administrative and judicial procedure should be delivered within 5 days. 2. How does your national law regulate immigration from EU member states and non-EU states?

The main goal of national legislation of the Republic of Azerbaijan on migration is to maintain both bilateral and international cooperation with the other states for combating illegal migration, regulating and forecasting migration processes as well as developing migration management system.

Azerbaijan is a member of several international organizations, such as United Nations (UN), Commonwealth of Independent States (CIS), and International Organization of Migration (IOM). It also cooperates with the EU and UNCHR. Azerbaijan carries out joint projects with them to achieve development in the migration issues.³⁹⁵ The cooperation with such organizations helps to harmonize the national law of Azerbaijan with international legal agreements on migration.

3rd article of the Migration Code includes the definitions of “foreigner”, “stateless person”, “labour migrant” and “family members of a foreigner or a stateless person” Under the legislation, foreigner is a person who is not a citizen of the Republic of Azerbaijan and has a citizenship of another country. Stateless person is a person that is not considered a citizen of any country based on their legislations. Labour migrant is a natural person legally moving from one country to another to engage in paid labour activity. According to the Migration Code, wife/husband, children under 18, children older than 18 with no ability to work and parents (that are guarded by individual) of a foreigner or a stateless person are considered family members of his/hers.

2.1. Right to remain and leave as a clause applicable to both the EU and non-EU citizens Foreigners and stateless persons have a right to remain in and leave the Republic of Azerbaijan through passing the border crossing points by visa or relevant border crossing documents. They can enter the territory of the Republic of Azerbaijan without visas according to the relevant international agreements concluded between foreign states and the Republic of Azerbaijan or if determined by the relevant executive government agencies. Foreigners and stateless persons with refugee status shall use travel document to leave the territory of the Republic of Azerbaijan and not be required a visa when travelling back to the country. However, prohibition on entering the territory of the Republic of Azerbaijan might be imposed for 5 years under specific conditions depicted in the Migration Code (see Question 1.2 for more detailed information) Additionally, temporary restrictions on the right of foreigners and stateless persons to leave might be exhausted based on the following grounds: a) if the right to leave brings about a barrier to the provision of national security (until this ground ceases); b) if arrested in accordance with the Criminal-Procedural Code of the Republic of Azerbaijan or in case preventive measures have been taken (until freed or the termination or cancellation of the period of a preventive measure);

Only foreigners and stateless persons who have temporarily stayed in the territory of the Republic Azerbaijan in accordance with a temporary residence permit may put in an application for permanent residence permit. Regarding the labor activities of migrants, it is worthwhile to mention that, no privilege is given to either the citizens of the EU or the non-EU countries. Under the article 61 of Migration Code of the Republic of Azerbaijan, every foreigner and stateless person may work in the Republic of Azerbaijan after getting a work permit via the employer legal person, individuals engaging in entrepreneurship without establishing a legal person and branch and delegations of foreign legal persons. 2.2. National Law on Immigration from the EU Member States

One of the main documents between the EU and Azerbaijan on regulation of migration issues is the Action Plan of the OSCE on cooperation on human trafficking approved in Maastricht in 2003. The III, IV and V Chapters of the Action Plan discuss the regional cooperation and enhancing the relationships among international organizations on realization of recommended measures on migration issues. Furthermore, the Action Plan on mutual cooperation between the EU and Azerbaijan was adopted in 2004 to reach the goals of the EU-Azerbaijan Partnership and Cooperation Agreement. Article 4.3.2 of this document is called “Development of cooperation on migration issues” (legal immigration, illegal immigration, visas, asylum procedures, readmission) One of the paragraphs of this article is called “Facilitating the mobilization of people” which concerns the issues, such as exchanging the knowledge on visa procedure, travel document formulated with the harmonized international standards and readmission. Article 4.3.3 of Action Plan is dedicated to the human trafficking mainly focused on women and children as well as cooperation on transferring illegal immigrants. Azerbaijan is keeping cooperation on migration issues with the EU through the Eastern Partnership (EaP). Eastern Partnership (EaP) Panel on Migration and Asylum established in 2011, focuses on areas such as border security and management; capacity for asylum and migration management; international refugee and human rights law; rights of asylum seekers, refugees and migrants; information on neighborhood country legislation and structures; irregular migration and harmonizing legal standards.³⁹⁷ Azerbaijan takes part in different projects of the EU related to the migration policy to reach the harmonization of national law with the EU standards. Several significant achievements have been observed in this process.

2.2.1. Visa facilitation

According to the Agreement between the EU and Azerbaijan on the facilitation of the issuance of visas on November 29 2013, it was desired to facilitate people to people contacts as an important condition for a steady development of economic, humanitarian, cultural, scientific and other ties, by facilitating the issuing of visas to citizens of the Union and the Republic of Azerbaijan on a basis of reciprocity.³⁹⁸ Under the mentioned agreement, written application of close relatives or written invitation letter/application for various exchange programmes, cultural, scientific, artistic events, official meetings, etc. is enough for maintaining the reason of travel for the citizens of both the Republic of Azerbaijan and member states of the EU. Furthermore, diplomatic missions and consular services of the Republic of Azerbaijan and member states of the EU are obliged to issue the multiple entry visas for 5 years for the following persons: a) husband/wife, children under 21 or dependent (including those who are adopted) and parents (including guardians) who intend to visit the citizens of the EU member states legally residing in the Republic of Azerbaijan or the citizens of the Republic of Azerbaijan legally residing in the EU member states or the citizens of EU member states legally residing in the country of nationality or the citizens of the Republic of Azerbaijan residing in the Republic of Azerbaijan; b) permanent members of the official delegation who have to regularly participate in the events organised in the Republic of Azerbaijan or one of the member states of the EU and by intergovernmental organisations or in meetings, consultations, negotiations and exchange

2.2.2. Readmission and mobility partnership

Moreover, the Agreement between the EU and Azerbaijan on the readmission of persons residing without authorization (which aims to tackle irregular migration by effectively readmitting people under the prima facie (upon initial examination) evidences confirming the citizenship of people) was signed on February 28 2014. Under the article 12.3 of the agreement, convoy escorts accompanying persons readmitted to the country of origin are not required to have an entry visa. The Joint Declaration on a Mobility Partnership between the Republic of Azerbaijan and the EU and its participating Member States was also signed in 2013. The project specifically focuses on strengthening the capacity of the government to improve and implement the national migration policy.³⁹⁹ The project achieved significant goals with national institutions of Azerbaijan on the components, such as building of analytical capacities for informed migration policy making, legal migration from and to Azerbaijan, document security, improvement of the asylum decision making procedure, return and reintegration.

2.3. National Law on Immigration from Non-EU Member States

Azerbaijan cooperates with non-EU member states on migration issues according to the rules of international migration agreements and the rules of bilateral agreements between the specific countries. The situation is different comparing to the EU Member States. Generally, the cooperation between non-EU member States and Azerbaijan is based on bilateral agreements, for instance, Azerbaijan signed bilateral agreements on visa-free regimes with Turkey (February 28 1992) and Georgia (February 03 1993). Azerbaijan also signed several bilateral agreements on social protections of migrants with different countries, such as the Agreement on labour activity and social protection of labor migrants between the Government of the Republic of Azerbaijan and the Government of the Republic of Kyrgyzstan on April 23 1997 and the Agreement on cooperation in the field of labor, employment and social protection of population between the Ministry of Labor and Social Protection of the Republic of Kazakhstan and the Ministry of Labor and Social Protection of the Republic of Azerbaijan on May 24 2005. Furthermore, Azerbaijan signed several agreements in the field of migration within the framework of CIS, such as the Convention on legal status of migrant workers and members of their families of the State Parties of the CIS. Azerbaijan is enjoying the visa-free regime with 9 CIS countries. Additionally, Azerbaijan has signed readmission agreements with Montenegro (2017), Switzerland (2016) and Norway (2015) to prevent the irregular migration on a reciprocal basis. Currently, Azerbaijan is conducting negotiations with Russian Federation, Moldova, etc. for the further readmission agreements.

3. Is there a ministry, government agency or other public authority specifically dealing with migrants? If so, please provide a description of the framework this authority works under

After restoring the independence on October 18 1991, challenges on migration led to the establishment of certain government agencies, such as the State Migration Service, State Committee on Affairs with Refugees and Internally Displaced Persons and so on. Migration had become an issue due to economic consequences of the aggression, consequent occupation of territories of Azerbaijan by neighbouring Armenia and the emergence of more than a million refugees and IDPs. On the other hand, being a transit country and growth of a significant number of huge projects in the fields of energy, transport, and others have transformed Azerbaijan into an attractive destination country for migrants. Faced with many challenges of migration processes with their multiple facets, the Republic of Azerbaijan has accomplished reconstruction measures both at legislative and institutional levels to accurately manage these processes.⁴⁰⁰

3.1. The State Migration Service of Azerbaijan Republic

With a view to uniform implementation of state migration policy, improvement of the migration management system, and coordination of activities of relevant public agencies and on the basis of approved State Migration Program of the Republic of Azerbaijan, State Migration Service of the Republic of Azerbaijan was established by the President of the Republic of Azerbaijan, who, taking into account the importance of establishment of a special state authority implementing unified state policy in the migration sphere, signed the Decree on Establishment of State Migration Service of the Republic of Azerbaijan № 560 dated on March 19 2007. In the sphere of migration, the main goals of the State Migration Service of Azerbaijan Republic is to better control national security, ensure economic and demographic development and rational use of workforce as well as to tackle irregular migration processes. Functions of the service agency are enforcing state policies in the field of migration; developing a sophisticated migration management system; to forecast migration processes; preventing illegal immigration; engaging in international cooperation; organizing migration monitoring; granting or denying permissions on temporary and permanent residence to foreign citizens or people without citizenship; maintaining data about migration of Azerbaijani refugees, etc. The service also takes part in holding investigations, analysis and inspections of irregular immigrants in cooperation with Ministry of Internal Affairs, Ministry of National Security, Ministry of Labor and Social Protection and State Border Service of Azerbaijan Republic. To regulate migration processes with single procedures and facilitate the documentation, Decree on Application of “one-stop-shop” principle in the management of migration processes No 69 dated on March 4 2009 was

According to the decree the “one-stop-shop” principle began to be applied in the management of migration processes from July 1 2009, and the competencies of unified state authority on this principle were entrusted to State Migration Service of the Republic of Azerbaijan. In the framework of “one-stop-shop” principle State Migration Service carries out issuance of permits for temporary and permanent residence in the Republic of Azerbaijan and relevant cards to the foreigners and stateless persons, registration of them, extending temporary staying period in the country of the foreigners and stateless persons arriving in the Republic of Azerbaijan, as well as issuance of work permits for engaging in paid labour activity on the territory of the country. Furthermore, the Service participates in citizenship issues and determines refugee status.⁴⁰² To enhance preventive measures against illegal migration and improve the activity of the service, SMS obtained law enforcement status with the Decree No 76 dated April 8 2009.

The agency is headed by the chairman. The organization subdivided into Management, Apparatus and other entities within the State Migration Service. The Management consists of Chief of Service and three Deputy Chief of Service. The Apparatus is divided 14 sectors, among which Migration Policy and Legal Support Head Department, Migration Process Regulation Head Department, Migration Control Head Department and others are the most important. The third issue of the newsletter published by MOBILAZE stated that ‘the State Migration Service of the Republic of Azerbaijan is currently implementing a number of institutional and organizational events and carrying out important work to formulate a migration policy in line with up-to-date requirements’⁴⁰⁴ On July 07 2017 at the first meeting of Public Council of SMS the confidence was expressed as ‘the assurance of applicants’ satisfaction which is a main priority for SMS and to realization of flexibility and transparency principles’⁴⁰⁵ Regarding the form of redress, one way would be to submit online application for appeal on the website. On this form person should include text of appeal, resident country and address, personal information, social status and so on.⁴⁰⁶ The Board of

4. What are the recent statistics regarding migrants (i.e. asylum-seekers, immigrants, transitmigrants, trends in migratory flows) in your country?

On June 4 2010, under the decree of the President of the Republic of Azerbaijan on approval of regulation on Unified Migration Information Database of State Migration Service of the Republic of Azerbaijan, the database was created to facilitate the registration of foreigners and stateless persons as well as improve the documentation procedures regarding migration and provide the relevant state agencies with necessary information.⁴¹³ Hence, the mentioned database plays a very important role in getting acquainted with statistics regarding different categories of migrants, and generally, migration processes. Besides, the State Statistics Committee of the Republic of Azerbaijan publishes the numerical data on migration by year under the classification entitled "Demographic statistics"⁴¹⁴ Regarding the international organizations, it is worthwhile to mention International Organization for Migration which provides invaluable details on the situation of migration through country reports and different publications. In accordance with current statistics on legal immigration, 689118 applications on registration upon place of stay, 53214 applications for obtaining permission for temporary and permanent residence and 38791 applications on establishment of citizenship have been received by the State Migration Service. Among the illegal immigrants, 2372 foreigners' residence on the territory of the country was legalized, however, in 18540 cases decisions on leaving the country within 48 hours were adopted. 5523 foreigners were expelled from the country in administrative order, furthermore.⁴¹⁵ Regarding the latest data on net migration rate provided by State Statistics Committee of the Republic of Azerbaijan, it was indicated as 1,5 thousand with approximately 3,2 thousand immigrating to and 1,7 thousand emigrating from the country.⁴¹⁶ 51,710 people were given a residence permit in 2016, and in the same year 9,480 people among the foreign applicants for labor activity were granted a work permit under the labor migration quota scheme. 95 foreigners (209 with the family members) intended to further possess a refugee status. Out of those, 73 persons from third country nationals are in the database of State Migration Service as the ones being granted a refugee status. Under the readmission agreement signed between Azerbaijan and the EU, 120 people who have been determined as Azerbaijani citizens were effectively readmitted until 2016.⁴¹⁷ Most of the readmission requests came from Germany (60) and Sweden (45).⁴¹⁸ 3558 persons have migrated to foreign countries because of educational purposes through "State programme on education of Azerbaijani youth in foreign countries in 2007-2015" within the mentioned timeframe.⁴¹⁹ With regard to the statistics on transit migration, the latest publication (conducted in 2003) by the International Organization of Migration states that, in 2002, 348 foreign citizens who aimed to access to the territory of the third country through Azerbaijan's borders with forged documents were detained, and 61 people were detained for this reason in the first half of 2003. In 2002, most of the detained transit migrants were from Afghanistan, Pakistan, India, Iran and some African countries.⁴²⁰ According to the latest figures on transmit migrants in Azerbaijan provided by International Organization for Migration (2003), 92% of legal and 90% of illegal transit migrants stayed more than a year in the country.⁴²¹ People more than 45 years old prevailed among the legal transit migrants (23%), closely followed by 34-44 years olds (22%). Among illegal transit migrants, 34-44 years olds held the majority with 26% indicator.⁴²²

Among the 1421 refugees protected by the UNHCR Azerbaijan, persons from Afghanistan and Chechnya prevail, and asylum seekers from Iran, Pakistan and Syria complete the top 5.

According to UNHCR Population Statistics-Data-Asylum Seekers⁴²³, Germany(1800), USA(INS/DH)(280), Canada(186), France(166), Sweden(105) are the countries which has the most number of azerbaijani asylum-seekers in 2017. According to the “Migration in the South Caucasus : Links Between Migration and Economics” publication by Alexi Gugushvili within MOBILAZE project (Support to the implementation of the Mobility Partnership with Azerbaijan) Turkey (6264), Uzbekistan (2101), United Kingdom (1798), India (1162) and Bangladesh (976) were the top 5 countries of origin for the work permits in 2015.⁴²⁴ Russian Federation (930), Georgia (782), Turkey (164), Iran (144), Kazakhstan (103) were considered the countries with the most number of permanent residence permits in the same year.⁴²⁵ Starting on early 2000s, the growth rate of the Azerbaijani economy was one of the highest in the world, peaking in 2006 with an incredible 34.5% (World Bank data)⁴²⁶ Azerbaijani officials underlined that, “Especially after the installment of the Baku – Tbilisi – Ceyhan oil pipeline in 1999 and after the activation of Western and other oil companies in the Caucasus the number of legal and irregular labor migrants has notably increased in Azerbaijan. Thus, Azerbaijan has at the same time become a leading labor provider in South Caucasus for other countries, and the gravity center for labor and transit migrants, mostly from the countries of the Near East and South Eastern Asia.” Before 1995 the reason for emigration was associated with the conflict between Azerbaijan and Armenia as well as the collapse of the Soviet Union. After 1995 economics took over as the main factor in emigration. As a result of the strong economic crisis immigration in Azerbaijan as a labour emigration has increased significantly. The main flow of migrants from Azerbaijan headed for Russia and the CIS countries. At the same time, since 1996 Azerbaijani migrants had become interested in emigrating to the West. Most Azerbaijani citizens preferred Germany, as well as the US. The third phase (1998-current) began after the August 1998 economic crisis in Russia, which was a serious blow to the financial hopes of Azeri migrants. They refocused on the West and the Middle East. It significantly reduced the migration flows from Azerbaijan to Russia.⁴²⁷ As a conclusion, it should be mentioned that, most of the immigrants to Azerbaijan come from neighbouring countries, CIS countries and South Asia. The former two hold the majority within the permanent residence permit applications as opposed to the latter one which can frequently be seen in the statistics regarding work permits, asylum seekers and transit migration. Finally, Azerbaijan works hard to implement readmission procedures to tackle irregular migration from and to country.

5. How have the decisions by the European Court of Human Rights concerning migrants been implemented at national level?

As Azerbaijan became the member of the Council of Europe (CoE) in 2001, it ratified the European Convention on Human Rights (ECHR) in 2002 and fell under the jurisdiction of the Convention.⁴²⁸ Since that time many applications have been made, but only a few is concerning the current topic of our research. It also should be mentioned that, while some cases are about the people who became internally displaced persons and refugees because of the Nagorno Karabakh conflict (the Republic of Armenia and Republic of Azerbaijan being the parties of conflict), the other cases are about the extradition of Chechens who are Russian citizens. Besides, in spite of recommendations of the European Commission against Racism and Intolerance (ECRI) made several times, Azerbaijan is not party to the Protocol 12 of ECHR which provides general prohibition of discrimination. Although the signature took place in November 12 2003, Azerbaijan has not ratified the Protocol 12 yet. In its National Human Rights Program adopted in 2011, the Government of Azerbaijan recorded Government Agent, executive ministries and the Supreme Court of the Republic of Azerbaijan as the institutions which deal with the implementation of ECtHR judgments.⁴²⁹ Additionally, the mandate of the Plenipotentiary of the Republic of Azerbaijan to the ECtHR was specified by the Presidential decree of the Republic of Azerbaijan of November 8 2003. In accordance with decree, the Government Agent is appointed by the President of Azerbaijan, and coordinates the enforcement of ECtHR judgments with relevant executive bodies, particularly Ministry of Justice and the MFA. Besides, he/she informs the President on cases by and against the Republic of Azerbaijan; conducts negotiations to attain friendly settlements within cases in which the Republic of Azerbaijan involved; investigates the possibility and expediency of claims on breach of Convention which might be raised by the Republic of Azerbaijan; informs ECtHR and Committee of Ministers on implementation of decisions by the Republic of Azerbaijan, etc. Once the ECtHR adopts a formal judgment, it is dispatched to the Supreme Court of the Republic of Azerbaijan by the Office of the Government Agent. The Civil⁴³⁰ and Criminal-Procedural Codes⁴³¹ of the Republic of Azerbaijan indicate that, ECtHR judgment is a ground for re-examination of a case and entitles the Plenum of the Supreme Court to decide on the re-consideration of the cases in which the ECHR has found a violation of the Convention.

Cases concerning migrants are mostly about the violation of article 3 (prohibition of torture, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment) of the ECHR. Another noticeable side of these cases is that they all are connected with the extradition of people migrated to Azerbaijan. One of these cases, entitled Garayev v Azerbaijan is about an Uzbek citizen who moved to Azerbaijan from Uzbekistan and was accused of the crime of which he insisted he was not guilty. In accordance with the decision, the crime was falsified against him. He sent application before he was extradited to Uzbekistan. Although he had applied for the refugee status to the delegation of United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) in Azerbaijan, he did not receive any answer to his request. After evaluating case materials and paying attention to the reports of United Nations Human Rights Committee and UN Committee against Torture, ECtHR decided that decision of Azerbaijan about extradition of Mr. Garayev to Uzbekistan where there was not any safeguard for him from torture was in breach of Convention. However, the Court did not find any violation regarding the article 6 (right to a fair trial) of ECHR, as well as article 1 of Protocol 7 (procedural safeguards relating to expulsion of aliens) and article 3 of Protocol 4 (prohibition of expulsion of nationals) even though the claims on these articles have been raised by the Garayev, likewise. In the end, applicant was indemnified to EUR 16.000 due to the moral damage as well as EUR 2.500 as compensation for court expenses. Despite Garayev's EUR 9.000 financial claim, ECtHR held that the copies of receipt allegedly indicating monthly wages of the applicant which were presented as confirmation of the claim, display the full name of another individual. The Court hasn't been delivered any other document of evidence on claim and therefore, rejected the compensation claim of Garayev on pecuniary damages.⁴³² Other two cases were about the extradition of two members of Chechen rebel groups to Russia. In Chankayev v Azerbaijan and Tershiyev v Azerbaijan cases applicants disputed the decision of extradition to Russian Federation where they could be subject to torture or inhuman treatment. In *Chankayev v Azerbaijan*⁴³³ case, authorities granted extradition for standing before the Russian courts for the crimes he was accused after he served his sentence for the crimes he committed in Azerbaijan. In *Tershiyev v Azerbaijan*⁴³⁴ case circumstances were almost the same, but the difference was Mr. Tershiyev had applied to the UNHCR Azerbaijan for being granted a refugee status, but initially he was rejected and he appealed against that decision. However, in its judgments ECtHR expressed that there was not a violation of article 3 of the Convention as there were not substantial grounds for believing that they would be exposed to ill-treatment and Russia is also High Contracting Party to the Convention and had to guarantee fundamental rights. Furthermore, Tershiyev laid a claim of EUR 50.000 as a means of amelioration of non-pecuniary damages and additional EUR 5.000 for each infringement of his rights. ECtHR considered violation of article 13 in conjunction with article 3 of the Convention as basis of just satisfaction which was later paid to the applicant.

The first case being brought in front of the ECtHR about the protection of right to property under the article 1 of Protocol 1 of the ECHR was one of the most famous cases concerning IDPs- *Chiragov and others v Armenia*⁴³⁵ case. In the case, the Court recognized that Armenia was de-facto in control of Nagorno Karabakh and other 7 adjacent regions (possessing extra-territorial jurisdiction) and breached fundamental human rights such as right to property, right to private and family life (as the applicants have lost the connection with the towns they've lived even a while after they became internally displaced, the Court decided that the refusal of access to the own homes of applicants is the breach of right to respect to private and family life as well as to houses of theirs) and right to an effective remedy as almost one million people became IDP because of this conflict and were deprived of their basic humanitarian needs. After Nagorno Karabakh conflict happening between the Republic of Armenia and the Republic of Azerbaijan, about 700 thousand people became internally displaced persons and these people were in emergency situation for basic human needs such as apartments, food supply, etc. According to the Regulations on Settlement of Internally Displaced Persons in Residential, Administrative and Other Buildings Fit for Residence, adopted by the Cabinet of Ministers Resolution No. 200 of December 24 1999, if internally displaced persons inhabited in the apartment during 1992-1994, then the occupancy vouchers which were given to the future owners of the property and proved the property rights, could be suspended till these IDPs could return their homes or provided with flat by government. Also, in cases where the temporary settling of internally displaced persons breaches the housing rights of other individuals, the former must be provided with other suitable accommodation. In *Akimova v Azerbaijan*⁴³⁶ case applicant raised the issue that her right to property was violated as internally displaced persons lived in her apartment without her permission and national courts accepted that Mrs. Akimova had property rights on this apartment, but replacement of these IDPs could not happen as these people did not have any home to move. The ECtHR ruled out that there was a violation of article 1 of Protocol 1 to the ECtHR as it was State's duty to provide these IDPs with houses according to the above mentioned regulations. After the government's payment in amount of AZN 10.000 to the Akimova as well as reach to the friendly settlement between parties of the case, it had been struck out of the list in 2008. Almost the same case was *Gulmammadova v Azerbaijan*⁴³⁷ and *Hasanov v Azerbaijan*⁴³⁸ where in 2010 the Court reiterated that burden of provisions for IDPs cannot be laid on social groups or individuals, but on state. In respect to the former case, the Court has unanimously held that the Republic of Azerbaijan had to pay EUR 3.600 as non-pecuniary damage in addition to any tax that might be charged from the applicant. Regarding Hasanov v Azerbaijan, decision of the Court was to award EUR 15176 (EUR 10376 in respect of pecuniary and remaining 4800 in respect of non-pecuniary damage) to the applicant. Both judgments were implemented within 3 months. After these cases, Azerbaijani government took more prompt actions for providing IDPs with houses which began in 2001 and accelerated after 2010.

Owing to the emergence of the aforementioned cases, the Republic of Azerbaijan has accomplished manifold legislative reforms to augment the situation of migrants from distinct groups. The adoption of Law on provision of rights and freedom of individuals in detention facilities in 2012, in this regard, is one of the major outcomes of refinement procedures. The 15th article of the Law encompasses the rights of people arrested or imprisoned, which include prohibition of torture and inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment and access to lawyer/legal representative, as well. The Law also stipulates the right to deliver the appeals, suggestions and applications to some human rights institutions, such as ECtHR, Ombudsman of the Republic of Azerbaijan, European Committee for the Prevention of Torture and Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment (CPT), etc.⁴³⁹ Moreover, amendment on the Law on Extradition which came into force in 2015 establishes that in case of existence of grounds to assume the gross violation of a right to a fair trial of the individual, the Republic of Azerbaijan shall refuse to implement extradition procedures.⁴⁴⁰ Regarding cooperational reforms, since January 1 2015 Training of Trainers sessions, study visits, conferences have been organized within the CoE project named “Application of the European Convention on Human Rights and the case-law of the European Court of Human Rights in Azerbaijan” to contribute to the betterment of judicial system and make Human rights Education for Legal Professionals (HELP) materials accessible to the institutions of the Republic of Azerbaijan. In the framework of the blueprint, training sessions on a right to fair trial, family and private life, prohibition of discrimination have also been carried out.⁴⁴¹ Azerbaijan has also actively participated in implementation of ECtHR judgments of which it was not a party state. Interesting example is Ahmut v the Netherlands case, focusing on the principle of family reunification. On account of Dutch authorities’ refusal to a minor with dual Moroccan and Dutch nationality who aimed to pay a visit to his father to grant residence permit, the Court held that the article 8 of the Convention has been violated within this case. Azerbaijan has committed itself to implementation of this principle in various agreements, including the readmission agreement signed between her and the EU. Under the 5th article of the treaty, Azerbaijan sends the irregular migrants with their minor children as well as spouse not having a right of residence together to the requesting Member State.

6. How have the recommendations of the European Commission against Racism and Intolerance and of national human rights bodies concerning the integration of migrants been implemented?

The European Commission against Racism and Intolerance is a body of the Council of Europe of which the goal is to fight against racism, xenophobia and intolerance for the protection of human rights. After Azerbaijan joined the CoE, the Commission made its first report on Azerbaijan in 2003. Afterwards, within its statutory mandate, the ECRI conducted monitoring of the country and published other three reports on Azerbaijan in 2007, 2011 and 2016.

In its first report, the ECRI appraised what Azerbaijan had done for combating racism and intolerance as it signed several international agreements and adopted codes and other legislations containing anti-discrimination provisions. But the Commission also recommended the country to take actions in some fields, including the need to become aware of the various dimensions of racism and different types of discrimination. Further, the Commission also paid special attention to the refugees. In its first report, the ECRI indicated that, as a result of the Nagorno-Karabakh conflict happening between the Republic of Armenia and Republic of Azerbaijan, there were hundreds of thousands of refugees and IDPs, for the most part ethnic Azerbaijani, on the territory of Azerbaijan. The State Committee on Affairs with Refugees and Internally Displaced Persons was established to help solve the problems. The Commission stressed that, it was aware of difficult humanitarian situation in the country, but also encouraged the government to take further steps to improve access to medical services and schools and other primary needs of all refugees including refugee determination procedure.⁴⁴² It is worthwhile to mention that State Program on enhancing the employment and improving the life standards of refugees and internally displaced persons was approved on July 1 2004. Regarding the recommendation on educational needs of refugees, in 2004 Ministry of Education decided that refugees that either are from Armenia, or were born in the timeframe of 1988-1992 are exempted from paying tuition fees in secondary state schools and universities. Besides, under the Order No 298 of the President of the Republic of Azerbaijan, private institutions, private schools and universities were declared liable to assist refugees and IDPs in providing them with decent work and make discounts from tuition fees. Cabinet of Ministers have adopted some decisions regarding medical needs of refugees and IDPs, as well.⁴⁴³

In its second report published in 2007, the ECRI highlighted that Azerbaijan made progress in the areas of education, combating illegal behavior on the part of law enforcement officials. However, a number of recommendations have not been implemented or have been partially implemented. The Commission emphasized the role of Ombudsman in the field of fighting against racism and called the authorities to ensure the competence of it. The ECRI was satisfied that government took into consideration recommendations about establishing refugee determination procedure. However, the Commission also emphasized that there were still problems with the social rights, although there were legislative provisions for refugees where it was indicated that the refugees have the same rights and duties as the Azerbaijani citizens, unless otherwise provided by the Constitution or legislative acts. In this report, the ECRI recommended Azerbaijan to ensure that the Law on the status of Refugees and Internally Displaced Persons was applied in such way that applicants could benefit from protection, and it stressed that for this purpose, it was important that officials should go under training in the human rights field, including right to be free from racism. The Commission especially emphasized that Russian citizens from Chechnya were facing problems in the exercise of the rights and authorities had to take urgent measures to make situation better. It advised to consider granting a temporary status on humanitarian grounds to those who did not have any legal status and would meet the conditions for obtaining this status.⁴⁴⁴ Taking into consideration the recommendations set up by the ECRI, Justice Academy of Ministry of Justice of the Republic of Azerbaijan has co-organized trainings on 2nd, 3rd (November 26-27 2015), 5th, 6th (December 1-2 2015), 8th, 9th (December 15-16 2015), 10th, 11th (December 3-4 2015), 14th articles and 1st article of the 1st Protocol (December 17-18 2015) of the ECHR in the course of project named “Application of European Convention on Human Rights and case-law of European Court of Human Rights in Azerbaijan”. The project was funded and implemented by the EU and the CoE, respectively.⁴⁴⁵

After these recommendations Azerbaijani government began to work more actively in the field which was shown in the third report. The Commission appraised all efforts to reform the judicial system and improve the training dispensed to all the actors in this system, including as regards racist offences and discrimination. A number of measures had been adopted with the aim of simplifying the procedures in force with respect to migrant workers. In this context, a State Migration Service had been established in 2007⁴⁴⁶, a one-stop service point for migrants has been set up, and non-citizens and stateless persons holding a residence permit were no longer required to apply for entry and exit visas. Moreover, in 2010 Presidential decree was given which had to facilitate the refugee’s access to social rights. However, the ECRI also stressed its concern regarding some growing issues. In this report special attention was given refugees and internally-displaced persons who were suffering because of Nagorno-Karabakh conflict together with migrants and asylum seekers. In connection with migrants, ECRI recommended that the authorities closely monitor the situation of non-citizens temporarily or permanently staying in Azerbaijan. Azerbaijan became a party to the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families in 1999. According to the Committee on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of their Families (CMW), as far as Azerbaijan was concerned with the migration flows which had changed in recent years and became more complex. As Azerbaijan was not only a country of transit, but also of destination many migrant workers live within its territory, ECRI noted in this connection that, since its second report, the authorities had adopted a number of measures aimed inter alia at simplifying the procedures in this field. With specific regard to migrant workers, they had to possess a valid work permit for working legally. According to the legislation, it is the employer who should carry out the formalities for obtaining the required work permit. ECRI emphasized that cases had been reported where employers knowingly hired migrant workers without work permits and, for example, subsequently confiscated their passports and other identity documents, imposed extremely harsh working conditions. In addition, any undocumented migrant who was stopped by the authorities could be deported immediately. The persons concerned were usually unaware of the substantive rules governing residence in Azerbaijan; even though the authority that delivering the deportation decision was required to inform the individuals concerned of the remedies available, without access to counselling or legal assistance, they did not have any real means of challenging the deportation measure in the courts before they were removed from the country. As a result of all these shortcomings, ECRI recommended Azerbaijan to provide effective remedies for rights safeguarded by international instruments, to ensure that migrants were not removed from the country without benefitting legal assistance and to adopt Migration Code. ECRI recommended that the Azerbaijani authorities should closely examine the practical impact of the new presidential decree which aimed at ensuring full recognition of the official documents issued to refugees and take all the necessary measures to eliminate the administrative obstacles refugees and asylum-seekers were facing. ECRI was also concerned about information that the refugee status recognition rate in cases examined by the Azerbaijani authorities was extremely low⁴⁴⁷.

In 2014 the ECRI adopted an interim follow-up on Azerbaijan regarding the last recommendations of the Commission. Three main issues were indicated and among them the second one- issue on the protection of migrants have almost been ameliorated via adopting the Migration Code in 2013. This issue was completely eliminated by Azerbaijani government according to ECRI experts.⁴⁴⁸ In its last report published in 2016, ECRI welcomed many developments in the field of integration and protection of migrants, refugees and asylum seekers. Azerbaijan hosted international forums on intercultural dialogues, Ombudsman organized campaigns for promoting tolerance, there were no hate crimes based on ethnic affiliation. The recommendation of ECRI on adopting Migration Code was implemented which laid ground for integration of migrants. Nevertheless, some strict problems occurred again. Article 71.2 of MC stipulates that migrant workers have to leave the country automatically within 10 working days if their employment contract is terminated and they have no other valid legal basis to stay. The Migration Code does not grant them a time period in which to seek alternative employment. Recommendations regarding this problem have been included in the last report, therefore.

Moreover, it should be mentioned that main national human rights body dealing with migrant, refugee and other human rights issues is the Commissioner for Human Rights (Ombudsman) of the Republic of Azerbaijan. Under the 1st article of the Constitution Law of the Republic of Azerbaijan on the Commissioner for Human Rights (Ombudsman), ombudsman institute was

Commissioner also implements the functions of national prevention mechanism in the framework of the Protocol of Convention against Torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment. In this regard, Commissioner has a right to regularly visit the places which arrested people cannot leave on their own wills. Besides, Commissioner makes suggestions to the National Assembly for the adoption or re-consideration of human-rights related legislation and amnestions. Suggestions are also referred to the President on issues related to pardon, citizenship and political asylum.⁴⁴⁹ Ombudsman of the Republic of Azerbaijan has submitted information on the state of human rights protection of IDPs in the Republic of Azerbaijan to the UNHRC throughout the 8th session of the organisation in 2008. The Commissioner noted the lack of employment of IDPs and recommended to particularly, focus on the improvement of agricultural sector in rural areas to furnish IDPs with necessary economic opportunities.⁴⁵⁰ As a result of realization of alterations, the number of working IDPs has increased to 161.000 and new labor places have dedicated to them within budgetary organisations. 3000 IDPs have been conducted vocational trainings for and loans in amount of AZN 44.000.000 have been given to more than 2.000 IDPs through the National Fond on Support to Entrepreneurship to finance the investment projects of IDPs' entrepreneurship subjects.⁴⁵¹

7. How is migrants' right to access to healthcare regulated within the national legislation?

In Azerbaijan, state institutions took major steps in healthcare system to improve the situation where people can reach thorough medical care. According to the Constitution of the Republic of Azerbaijan, foreigners and stateless persons living or staying temporarily in the territory of the Azerbaijan Republic have the same rights with Azerbaijani citizens if not specified by legislation or international agreements wherein the Azerbaijan Republic is one of the parties. Article 1 of the Law on Protection of Health of Population indicates that medical-social assistance is feasible for all living in Azerbaijan. Regarding the migrants irregularly residing, article 19 of resolution of Cabinet of Ministers on application of discipline rules in the detention centers of illegal migrants illustrates medical and psychological assistance, medical-sanitary provision, medical-inspection to

Migrants' access to information about healthcare services is provided by the Constitution, the Law on Access to information, the Law on Protection of Health of Population and the Law on Prevention of spread of disease derived from immune deficiency virus of humans. Under the 50th article of the Constitution, everyone has freedom to legally search for, access to, transmit, prepare and share the information.⁴⁵³ Law of the Republic of Azerbaijan on access to information displays that everyone may get information through written inquiries. Moreover, refusal of the written inquiries is forbidden.⁴⁵⁴ In accordance with the article 11 of Law on Protection of Health of Population citizens have right to get regular and correct information about factors affecting their health which is also applicable to the stateless persons living permanently in Azerbaijan as they have the same rights with citizens in the field of healthcare. This information can be delivered to them via mass media or relevant executive authority on base of their inquiry⁴⁵⁵. Also, article 4 of the Law on Prevention of spread of disease derived from immune deficiency virus of humans states that, the Republic of Azerbaijan provides delivery of thorough information about HIV/AIDS prophylaxis to people⁴⁵⁶. Additionally, Azerbaijan is a party state to the CEDAW (Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women), which means, the government takes measures to realize the article 10 (h) and provides access to specific educational information (such as, family planning) to guarantee the health and well-being for men and women on an equal basis.⁴⁵⁷ In compliance with article 10 of the Law on Protection of Health of the population, stateless persons permanently living in the Republic of Azerbaijan have rights to protect their health conditions on the same bases like citizens of the Azerbaijan Republic. Right to health of foreigners, however, are regulated by the international agreements signed by the Republic of Azerbaijan. Healthcare services both for legal and illegal immigrants are fulfilled by the institutions of Ministry of Healthcare and special medical institutions. Cabinet of Ministers compiles a list of state medical institutions which serve free. Also, the legislation of the Republic of Azerbaijan indicates that migrants can receive immediate and special medical assistant without any restriction and Stateless persons residing permanently in Azerbaijan have equal rights with citizens in the medical insurance system unless otherwise provided by law or international treaty to which the Republic Azerbaijan is a party⁴⁵⁹. Medical inspection and treatment for foreigners and stateless persons living permanently in Azerbaijan at oncologic institutions are implemented on paid basis but urgent cancer care to them is free of charge. If stateless people living permanently in the Azerbaijan Republic and people with refugee status given by the Azerbaijan Republic are infected with HIV/AIDS, they take medical care (also specialized medical care) at state hospitals on account of state budget defined by corresponding executive authority for certain amount. Regarding internally displaced persons, they enjoy the right to free medical examination in public medical institution.⁴⁶⁰ The 3rd article of the Law on Prevention of spread of disease derived from immune deficiency virus of humans states that the law also addresses the foreigners and stateless persons. 8th article allows foreigners and stateless persons to voluntarily benefit from the right to medical examination and the examination might be implemented anonymously if they wish so. Foreigners and stateless persons have also the right to medical examination of epidemiological surveillance under the 9th article.⁴⁶¹ Medical assistance to displaced persons is provided directly by medical institutions in the territories where they are placed. Medical assistance to displaced persons placed outside localities is arranged by a corresponding self-government body. Displaced persons are put in public medical institutions on a preferential basis and enjoy all types of medical care free of charge. They are provided with pharmaceuticals free of charge, according to the procedure identified by corresponding self-government bodies provided in accordance with article 10 of the law on social protection of displaced persons and persons equalized to them. Besides, it is important to stress that, Convention on legal status of migrant workers and members of their families of the State Parties of the Commonwealth Independent States (CIS) adopted in 2008 was incorporated into Azerbaijani legislation after the country joined this initiative in 2010. Under the 7th article of convention, migrant workers and their family members enjoy to get free first aid paid medical aid. This article also includes the right of migrant workers and their family members to register the newly-born babies. Under the 17th article of Convention, the Azerbaijan cooperates with other CIS countries in the field of medical insurance of migrant workers.

Since May 2000, on the expense of the means of the UNHCR, the international humanitarian organization Amkor built a clinic that renders medical service to asylum seekers. Asylum seekers and refugees can address to Refugee Clinic for getting medical advice from Monday to Friday and from 9:00 to 17:00 during a day. Medical advice is given by general practitioner and in case of emergency patients who need treatment are referred to specialist. UNHCR's health programme concentrated mainly on reproductive health, working through four NGOs which ran clinics and engaged in health promotion activities. The programme included the establishment of Health Action Committees in 15 communities; training of Community Health Advocates; community-based family planning education for IDPs and the local population; the distribution of contraceptives; the establishment and/or upgrading of family planning centers in four regions in partnership with the health authorities; baseline surveys; health outreach activities in 13 IDP settlements conducted by two mobile teams; and train-the-trainer courses. One UNHCR-assisted NGO gave 15,000 consultations to women in 30 settlements. Six functioning reproductive health facilities were handed over to the Ministry of Health in 1999 (of which three were subsequently closed) All women and children who are under the protection of UNHCR to receive medical advice from children's doctor can turn to Clinic operating within UNHCR. Patient can be hospitalized only in cases of emergency and in need of saving life. Some kinds of treatment for instance, treatment of chronic diseases, plastic operation, medical treatment for infertility, construction of dentures and others are not included in the medical care program. The whole list of this kind of treatments is available in the Clinic supported by UNHCR. When talking about refugees' integration to healthcare field, it is noteworthy to say that as a result of contract signed between UNHCR and MediClub of Azerbaijan UNHCR has appointed 2 doctors for providing refugees with medical care on second and third level. Besides, in 1996 Azerbaijan joined the European Agreement on Provision of Medical Care to Persons during Temporary Residence. Article 5 of this agreement states that person concerned for getting medical care has to submit certificate which proves the entitlement to medical care and this proof is submitted in the form of attestation given by competent authorities. If the person concerned has the right according to the legislation of the party which enables all citizens to the right of using medical care, then that person can submit his own passport or identity document instead of aforementioned attestation if the competent authorities of the Contracting Party approves them to be satisfactory. Therefore, this provision is available in Azerbaijan, as well. In the cases of emergency even if the person concerned is not able to submit the certificate or one of the documents referred to on needed time the competent institutions cannot refuse to help medically to that person.⁴⁶²

In 1998, State programme on solving the problems of refugees and internally displaced persons was approved according to the order of president of Azerbaijan Republic. This programme provided a number of measures on social protection of this kind of migrants. These measures have intended to improve the healthcare system for refugees and IDP, to struggle against infectious diseases and the unsanitary conditions where they live, to intensify surveillance on assignment of medical preparations given by international humanitarian organizations and other organizations. Moreover, to organize travelling X-ray laboratories where IDPs live densely, to supply the hospitals of occupied regions with medical equipment, medicine and other necessary stock and to provide refugees and IDPs with free medical inspection and treatment, also with medicinal preparations are the main goals of this programme. Main executive institutions for implementing aforementioned measures are Republican Commission for International Humanitarian and Technical Help and Ministry of Healthcare. According to the Migration Code of Azerbaijan, foreigners and stateless persons, about whom decision on removal from the territory of the Republic of Azerbaijan has been made, can be voluntarily placed in the detention centers for illegal migrants of the relevant executive authority in a way defined by the Law for removal from the territory of the Republic of Azerbaijan within the period envisaged by the Administrative Offences Code and Code of Execution of Punishments of the Republic of Azerbaijan. Article 86.0.16 of this Code indicates that internal discipline rules defines the issues like medical and psychology aid to detained person, provision of medical-sanitary, medical treatment, their placement in hospitals.⁴⁶³ Most recently, in 2013, the Law on compulsory dispensarization of children was adopted to determine the organizational and legal basis of the protection and enhancement of health of children as well as treatment and prophylactic measures among children. According to the 8th article of the Law, compulsory dispensarization measures are also referred to stateless persons and foreigners permanently living in the Republic of Azerbaijan.⁴⁶⁴

Despite not having specific non-discriminatory laws in the field of healthcare, the various legislative acts furnish the rights for stateless persons and foreigners either in the same bases like citizens or stipulated by international agreements of which the Republic of Azerbaijan is a party. Azerbaijan has joined the CEDAW, and provides adequate healthcare facilities and services for migrant women on an equal basis, as well. In cases of discrimination, migrants might appeal to the Ombudsman of the Republic of Azerbaijan (see Question 3 for more detailed information) Appeal stemmed from the actions or inactions of administrative bodies (in this case, Ministry of Healthcare of the Republic of Azerbaijan and Nakhchivan Autonomous Republic, local departments and offices of former and the Republican Center for Hygiene and Epidemiology) might be given based on law on administrative proceedings. (see Question 1.2 for more detailed information).

8. How do migrant children benefit from the right to education under your national legislation (Article 2 of the first Protocol to the ECHR)?

According to the article 45.1 of the Constitution, everyone has a right to study in the language he/she desires. On the grounds of article 22 of the Convention on the Rights of the Child, the Republic of Azerbaijan has implemented relevant measures regarding protection of refugee children or children seeking refugee status, including the enjoyment of right to the education. Furthermore, the right to education is provided on the basis of equal means and primary education is free for all the children. Higher education as well as educational and vocational guidance is accessible to all the children under the article 28. In addition to that, article 6 of the

⁴⁶⁴ Law on compulsory dispensarization of children of the Republic of Azerbaijan 2013 [Uşaqların məcburi dispensarizasiyası haqqında Azərbaycan Respublikasının Qanunu]

Law on the rights of child depicts that all the children enjoy the same rights under this legislation. Children cannot be discriminated on the basis of social and property status, health, racial and national affiliation, language, education, religion, political conviction and residence place of their parents or guardians. Every child has a right to education under the educational legislation of the Republic of Azerbaijan. According to the article 44 of the Law of Republic of Azerbaijan on Education, the education of foreigners and stateless persons in any level is implemented in accordance with: a) the international treaties to which the Republic of Azerbaijan is a party state; b) quota determined by the state; c) agreements signed by educational institutions, legal persons and individuals. Foreign students who get the right to study in Azerbaijan are eligible to receive education visa from consular department of the MFA based on a support letter from the Ministry of Education. With respect to the irregular migrants in detention facilities, textbooks and required educational materials are allowed to be delivered to those studying under the Annex 6 to the Internal Discipline Rules of detention centers of illegal migrants. Furthermore, on the grounds of article 7 of the Law of the Republic of Azerbaijan on the Status of Refugees and Internally Displaced Persons, relevant circumstances for refugees and IDPs are provided to learn the Azerbaijani language. Article 6 of the same law states that refugee and internally displaced children have the right to study at kindergartens as well as youngsters and teenagers at educational institutions.

The right of education has been mentioned in the article 7 of Convention on legal status of migrant workers and members of their families of the State Parties of the Commonwealth of Independent States among the rights migrant-workers and their family members enjoy. Moreover, migrant workers' family members have the same rights with the citizens regarding general and additional vocational education in Azerbaijan under the article 13 of the same Convention. Under the same article, party states provide assistance to the family members of migrant workers in learning the state language and do not engender any obstacles regarding learning of their own languages. Azerbaijan cooperates with other CIS states regarding the issues on implementation of vocational education in the fields where labor market has more demands, furthermore. Besides, State Program on resolution of problems faced by the refugees and internally displaced persons, dated September 17 1998 has also some provisions regarding the right of refugees and IDPs to education. The seventh provision of the 3rd chapter states that pupils from the families of internally displaced persons and having the secondary education should be provided with free textbooks and necessary accessories during all forms. The competent authorities on this provision are Ministry of Finance, Ministry of Education and the State Committee on affairs with Refugees and Internally Displaced Persons.

Regarding the projects set out for the educational needs of refugee children, Azerbaijan is one of the six European (alongside with Georgia, Ukraine, Belarus, Russia and Moldova) beneficiary states of the DAFI (Albert Einstein Academic Refugee Initiative) programme that provided 1900 refugee youngster with study opportunities in 2010. 11 Afghan students got total amount of USD 30.257 scholarship in the framework of aforementioned blueprint and 3 students have their graduations in the same year. DAFI Clubs were established in Azerbaijan to reinforce the network of graduates and scholarship holders of DAFI programme. Azerbaijan has been the only CoE member state generating such clubs. The most recent accessible UNHCR report (2015) on DAFI programme, furthermore, broaches that, the highest average cost of a DAFI programme in the Europe region was recorded in Azerbaijan (USD 4,643). 9 of the scholarship holder refugee students were of Afghan (4), Russian (3) and Iranian (2) origins in the domains of architecture & town planning; commercial and business administration; engineering; mathematics & computer science and social & behavioral science. Students have been supplied with English courses and trainings on information and technology network, as well. Recruitment of an Afghan refugee graduate through DAFI programme by the Embassy of Afghanistan in the Republic of Azerbaijan should be marked as a precious fact, moreover.⁴⁶⁵ In the course of another UNHCR project, entitled CTA (Community Technology Access), computer centers for refugees and returnees have been pitched.⁴⁶⁶ Notwithstanding the fact that, Azerbaijan has not had specific non-discrimination laws in the field of education, abovementioned provisions and some international agreements the country joined form the basis of equality for all in terms of access to information on education facilities and education. Azerbaijan is one of the four European countries (the other three being Albania, Bosnia & Herzegovina and Turkey) ratifying International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families. Irregularity of the child's stay or one of the parents' employment and/or stay cannot be an incentive behind the refusal of right to access to public pre-school educational institutions or schools in Azerbaijan in accordance with the 30th provision of the Convention. Additionally, access to educational institutions, services, subject to the admission requirements and other regulations of the institutions/services are offered to migrant workers and their family members on the same basis with the nationals of the country.⁴⁶⁷ In cases of discrimination, complaints can be given to Ombudsman via third persons or NGOs with applicant's consent within one year (see Question 3 for more detailed information) Appeal stemmed from the actions or inactions of administrative bodies (in this case, Ministry of Education of the Republic of Azerbaijan and Nakhchivan Autonomous Republic, local departments of former and the State Agency on Vocational Training under the Ministry) might be given based on law on administrative proceedings. 9. How are foreign school and university diplomas recognised in your country (e.g. through national law under the CoE/UNESCO Convention on the Recognition of Qualifications concerning Higher Education in the European Region of 1997) and what are the practical procedures?

Regarding the recognition of foreign school and university diplomas, it should be noted that, Azerbaijan has ratified the Convention on recognition of higher school diplomas, scientific degrees, educational curriculum obtained in the region of the European states (1996), the Convention on recognition of higher school diplomas, scientific degrees, educational curriculum obtained in the region of Asia and countries of Pacific Ocean (1996), the Convention on recognition of professional specialties (1997) and the Convention on recognition of specialties in the field of higher school in the European region (1997) on the recognition of the diplomas. Besides, Azerbaijan is a party to the Convention on the Recognition of Qualifications concerning Higher Education in the European Region (referred to as the Lisbon Convention, developed by the CoE and UNESCO and adopted by national representatives meeting in Lisbon on April 8 - 11 1997) According to Law of the Republic of Azerbaijan on Education, one of the responsibilities of the state in the field of education is to identify the procedures on recognition of education documents issued by foreign countries and provide nostrification services.⁴⁶⁸ After receiving a package of documents, they shall be submitted to the Ministry of Education officers or experts. According to international practice, the procedure for recognition of diplomas being considered takes more than four months. The procedure for recognition of specialties in the higher education area is being implemented based on existing international contracts and recommendations, state educational standards and normative legal acts, which regulate the education system of the Republic of Azerbaijan.

The higher education specialties shall be: a) recognized by the country issued the document; b) specified in the international contracts of the Azerbaijan Republic. The Ministry of Education is the institution in Azerbaijan that issues a certificate of recognition. You shall create an application on www.nostrifikasiya.edu.az and submit a request accompanied by the following documents: a) filing application form; b) document on higher education (original and copy certified by a notary and translated into Azerbaijani); c) appendix to the diploma with details of study programs, their volume, total assessment, results for internship, essays and theses as well as other indicators for educational process (original and copy certified by a notary and translated into Azerbaijani); d) identification document (copies of passport and identity card duly certified by a notary); e) copy of work record card and/or unemployment certificate from the place of residence; f) full-time graduates should submit a document (application form or certificate duly certified) which confirms that they have lived in the city, where the university is located, during their study; g) part-time graduates should submit documents (certified) confirming their attendance at winter and summer sessions during their study; h) copy of military record or certificate of registration for military service.⁴⁶⁹ However, specific procedures are not conducted in cases of applications by refugees, asylum seekers or any other vulnerable groups of migrants. Department on recognition of education documents has been created within the ministry, in accordance with the provisions of the Law on Education of the Republic of Azerbaijan, Regulation on Ministry of Education of the Republic of Azerbaijan, Lisbon Convention, Hague Convention on abolishing the requirement of legalization for foreign public documents and Executive order of the Cabinet of Ministers of the Republic of Azerbaijan for confirmation of regulations on recognition and determination of equivalence of higher education specialties of foreign countries. The main duties of the department are to implement the nostrification procedures, provide the functions of Group of Experts on Nostrification of Ministry of Education and cooperate with international partners to adopt the best foreign practices in the mentioned field. Firstly, the department imposes the reception and research on the documents and delivers the relevant requests, and then presents the prepared personal letter to the Group of Experts on Nostrification. The Department might conduct an additional research in case Group of Experts on Nostrification provides further comment about the significant importance of it. If the decision of Group of Experts on Nostrification is positive, certificate on recognition and determination of equivalence of higher education specialties of foreign countries is presented by the department. Otherwise, the department presents letter of explanation on the reasons of non-recognition.⁴⁷⁰ Applicants have a right to appeal in cases of refusal of the officers to implement the services or due to actions of the officials. 71st article of the Law of Republic of Azerbaijan on Administrative Proceedings, furthermore, indicates the right of stakeholders to appeal of administrative act or refusal of issuance of the administrative act. Under the 71.3.2nd article of the same law, individuals' appeal to the higher administrative body or institution having competence to examine the appeal might be on the basis of objection regarding the administrative act..⁴⁷¹ (see Question 1.2 for more detailed information)

Regarding the specific requirements, the documents on higher education should firstly be legalized in the country of origin. It is worthwhile to mention that, the diplomas and appendixes given in the countries which are party states to the Hague Convention on abolishing the requirement of legalization for foreign public documents should be legalized by apostille certification. Documents provided in other countries should be legalized in accordance with the national legislation by the Ministry of Education before getting legalized by the embassy (consulate) of the Republic of Azerbaijan in that country. Expert fee for recognition and determination of equivalence of higher education specialties of foreign countries are AZN 50 compared to duty fee which is estimated in AZN 15 under the Law on State Duties of the

Under the article 3.7 denial of recognition can be given if: a) duration of study in higher education specialty of foreign country is more than a year less than education standards of Republic of Azerbaijan; b) the rights guaranteed under the education document provided in a foreign country are less than the rights guaranteed under the education document provided in Azerbaijan; c) Azerbaijan Republic does not provide distant study or mix of distant study and full-time education on the relevant specialty. The certificate of recognition and determination of equivalence of higher education specialties of foreign countries is being signed by the Minister of Education of the Republic of Azerbaijan and approved by the official stamp of the ministry. Afterwards, it will be presented to the applicant or its official representative, or delivered via email.⁴⁷³

10. How is participation of migrants in political decisions regulated in your national legislation? Are they legally allowed to participate in their country of residence the same way as in their country of origin?

Pursuant to article 55 of the Constitution, foreign citizens and stateless citizens may be employed into state organizations in an established order.⁴⁷⁴ Migrants enjoy the right to freedom of speech and expression, also pursuant to article 58 of the Constitution (every person enjoys the right to associate with others, create associations, including trade unions, and to join established associations). Article 8 of the Law on non-governmental organizations (public associations and funds) shows that foreigners and stateless persons may be participants of NGOs operating in the Republic of Azerbaijan. Also, according to the article 9 of this law, foreigners and stateless persons who have a right to permanent residence in Azerbaijan can be founders of an NGO in the territory of the Republic of Azerbaijan. However, foreigners and stateless persons cannot become members of the political parties of the Republic of Azerbaijan.⁴⁷⁵

These will not restrict the rights of foreigners and stateless persons to freedom of opinion and assembly.⁴⁷⁶ Regarding the public participation of migrants, the Commissioner for Human Rights can be indicated as another protection mechanism. The post of the Commissioner was established for prevention and restoration of human rights and freedoms - determined in the Constitution and international agreements which the Republic of Azerbaijan is party to - violated by the state and local self-government authorities, and officials. Ensuring protection of civil and political rights is the one of the main spheres of competence of the Commissioner. According to the article 8.1 of Constitutional Law of Azerbaijan on the Commissioner for Human Rights (Ombudsman) of Azerbaijan Republic, the Commissioner shall examine complaints on violations of human rights from citizens of the Republic of Azerbaijan, foreigners and stateless persons as well as legal entities.

In accordance with article 10 of this Convention, everyone has the right to freedom of expression. Article 11 stresses out about freedom of assembly and association, furthermore. Article 14 on prohibition of discrimination indicates that the enjoyment of the rights and freedoms set forth in this Convention shall be secured without discrimination on any ground such as sex, race, colour, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, association with a national minority, property, birth or other status. (with the participation of at least 7 members).

11. How can migrants acquire citizenship in the country? Is there a possibility of double nationality?

Since Migration Code does not cover the refugee and citizenship issues, acquisition of Azerbaijani citizenship is only regulated by the Law on Citizenship of the Republic of Azerbaijan (1998) The second chapter of the Law is entitled as "Acquisition and re-acquisition of citizenship of the Republic of Azerbaijan" Under the article 11, acquisition of citizenship of the Republic of Azerbaijan might have one of these following grounds: a) if the person was born in the territory or from the citizens of the Republic of Azerbaijan; b) if the person is granted a citizenship of the Republic of Azerbaijan; c) if there are grounds under the international agreements to which the Republic of Azerbaijan is party; d) if there are other grounds stipulated by the Law on Citizenship of the Republic of Azerbaijan.

Children with two foreigner or one foreigner and one stateless person parents and who were born in the territory of the Republic of Azerbaijan are not considered the citizens of the Republic of Azerbaijan. However, if the child was born in the territory of the Republic of Azerbaijan and his/her both parents are stateless persons, then he/she is considered a citizen of the Republic of Azerbaijan.

Furthermore, regardless of the origin, racial and national affiliation, sex, education, attitude to the religion, political and other kinds of conviction, the acquisition of the citizenship of the Republic of Azerbaijan might be incorporated into reality if a foreigner or a stateless person : a) lives permanently in the territory of the Republic of Azerbaijan over the last 5 years on a legal basis; b) has a legal source of income; c) took liability to obey the Constitution of the Republic of Azerbaijan as well as its legislation; d) presented a document on the knowledge of the Azerbaijani language. The duration of a foreigner's or a stateless person's permanent stay in the territory of the Republic of Azerbaijan is counted from the day he/she has been granted a permanent residence permit or refugee status determined by the legislation. In case the individual has not left the country more than three months within a year, duration of his/her permanent stay is considered continuous. In the following cases, without fulfilling the criteria on permanently staying 5 years within the territory of the Republic of Azerbaijan, foreigners or stateless persons might acquire Azerbaijani citizenship: a) if an individual has had significant achievements in the field of science, technology, culture or sports; b) if an individual carries specific interest for the Republic of Azerbaijan or c) other exceptional cases. However, in such instances, relevant executive bodies should confirm the expedient of the acquisition. Afterwards, SMS sends the collected materials to Citizenship Issues Commission under the President of the Republic of Azerbaijan to scrutinize them. The President, then, adopts an order on the acquisition of the citizenship of the Republic of Azerbaijan based on the decision of aforementioned Commission. (According to the Constitution of the Republic of Azerbaijan President makes the final decision on acquiring the citizenship) SMS and MFA furnish a letter for the applicants regarding the outcome of the application. However, persons who were stateless until January 1 1992 but registered in the Republic of Azerbaijan and applied to acquire the citizenship until September 30 1999 have to, additionally, present the certificate from the residence place and document on statelessness to MIA, as well. Subsequently, MIA shall provide such applicants with an identification card. The applications should be examined within a month by the competent state authorities. However, individuals have a right to re-apply for the citizenship if the grounds leading to refusal have been ceased.⁴⁷⁸ The application of the foreigner or a stateless person is denied if he/she: a) attempts to change the state structure determined under the Constitution of the Republic of Azerbaijan violently; b) expresses a thought on the violation of the territorial integrity of the Republic of Azerbaijan; c) conducts activities which are considered hazardous for the state security, public order, health and morals for the population; d) advocates racial, religious or national separatism; e) has connections with the terroristic acts.

If citizens of the Republic of Azerbaijan adopt the foreigner or stateless child, the latter automatically get acquired an Azerbaijani citizenship. In case one of the parents adopting a foreigner or a stateless child is the citizen of the Republic of Azerbaijan and another one is a foreigner, the child might get acquired an Azerbaijani citizenship by the consent of both parents. The foreigner child adopted will also automatically get the Azerbaijani citizenship, if one of the parents is the citizen of the Republic of Azerbaijan and another one is a stateless person. Under the article 10 of the Law of the Republic of Azerbaijan on Citizenship, dual citizenship is possible in only two cases: 1) if stipulated by the bilateral agreements to which the Republic of Azerbaijan is party or 2) through the permission of the President. In other cases, the foreign citizenship of the dual citizenship holder is not recognized under the Azerbaijani legislation.

12. How is your country assisted by EU programmes and funding with regard to the integration of migrants?

The EU has implemented major reforms to reach a thorough migration policy and Global Approach to Migration and Mobility adopted in 2005 may be considered one of the most powerful tools in this sense. In accordance with this framework, the EU has started to build up migration cooperation projects with third countries, including the region of EaP. EaP Panel on Migration and Asylum, EaP Panel on Integrated Border Management, Prague Process have been the first main initiatives of the EU in relation to EaP countries in terms of collaboration in mentioned sphere. Moreover, Communication on "A common immigration policy for Europe: principles, actions and tools" developed in 2008 refers to partnership with third countries on the issues related to migration phenomenon as one of the ten principles of EU's migration policy.⁴⁷⁹ Therefore, despite the fact that Azerbaijan is not a member state to the EU (hence, not being able to benefit from the EU integration fund, Asylum, Migration and Integration fund and European Social Fund), the latter has given specific attention to the joint actions with Azerbaijan over the especially, last ten years, by the instruments, such as mobility partnerships, visa facilitation and readmission agreements.⁴⁸⁰

12.1. Support to the Implementation of the Mobility Partnership with Azerbaijan

The duration of project which commenced on January 15 2016 is 3 years. Nine agencies from seven countries, including Republic of Bulgaria, Czechia, Republic of Latvia, Republic of Lithuania, Kingdom of the Netherlands, Republic of Poland and the Republic of Slovakia are the participants within the project. The budget of the project is EUR 2.5 million. The first part of the project was completed in 2015 and on December 15-16 2015 the opening ceremony of the 2nd part of the project was held during the Stockholm conference. In the framework of the project, UNHCR established information database on country of origins as well as human rights and protection of refugees.⁴⁸⁵ As an outcome of Asylum Systems Quality Initiative in Eastern Europe and South Caucasus, refugees settling in urban areas are provided with assistance to become self-reliant.

Conclusions

Most of the migrants coming to Azerbaijan are the citizens of neighbouring countries, such as Russia, Turkey, Iran and also Arabic countries and Afghanistan. Moreover, Azerbaijan has signed manifold visa facilitation agreements with Japan, Saudi Arabia, Kingdom of Bahrain, Sultanate of Oman, the EU expediting the movement of the citizens of aforementioned states to the country. Besides, the launch of electronic visa system through which citizens of 94 countries, including all the EU Member states can receive their e-travel documents within three working days was another factor causing the rapid increase in immigration to Azerbaijan. Nonetheless, the number of applications to possess a refugee status has not been statistically significant. The major innovation in the migration field has been incorporated into reality by the establishment of the State Migration Service operating under the principle of 'one-stop-shop' according to which the granting of work permits, temporary and permanent residence permits as well as extension of duration of temporary residence permits of foreigners and stateless persons are the responsibilities of the institution. One-stop-shop principle has been considered one of the most transparent and democratic migration management scheme in Azerbaijan and the world. Azerbaijan recognizes that foreigners and stateless persons living or staying temporarily in the territory of the Republic of Azerbaijan possess the same rights with its citizens unless specified by the legislation or an international agreement of which the country is a party. Legislation on refugees and internally displaced persons has also experienced substantial reforms, among which inclusion of provisions on unaccompanied minors and negotiations on subsidiary protection are the most recent successes. Azerbaijan has committed itself to the requirements of international/regional conventions through which considerable rights have been granted to the migrants in the integration in domains of political and civic participation, education and healthcare, particularly. To conduct further refinement in the mentioned sphere, Azerbaijan cooperates with organizations, such as UNHCR, the EU, Council of Europe, etc. Various project held within the framework of the cooperation back the local integration of migrants and enhancing the capacity of country officials in the field and also legal background of it, such as ECHR provisions. All in all, Azerbaijan continues its tradition of respecting migrants' rights and regularly makes reforms to achieve better results in the aforesaid domain.

Introduction

Bosnia and Herzegovina can be only transit country but not the target country for thousands of refugees, which are trying to reach the more developed states on the west of Europe. Because of the economy situation in BH and some other countries, they are not the countries which will be in the interest of refugees. They know that BH system is not able to give them the relevant social assistance, so they don't want to stay here. In fact, a large number of them fled from their country to avoid the bad situation and it is not the best solution for them if they are willing to stay here. Unfortunately, in BH we have a certain number of empty facilities which can be used for their accommodation. But refugees will take the first chance they get to continue the way toward EU countries.

1. How is the right to asylum regulated in national law? Give a description of the national regulations governing asylum; What is the procedure for granting asylum and who is responsible?

The migration and asylum legislation in Bosnia and Herzegovina has been harmonized with relevant EU and international standards. The right to seek and enjoy asylum is a constitutional right in BH based on Universal Declaration on Human Rights.

The area of the migration and asylum of Bosnia and Herzegovina is regulated by the following legal documents:

- Law on Movement and Stay of Aliens and Asylum (“Bosnia and Herzegovina Official Gazette”, no. 36/08 and 87/12);
- Decision on Visas (“Bosnia and Herzegovina Official Gazette”, No. 54/12);
- Rulebook on Visa Issuance for Long-term Stay (Visa D) and the procedure of issuing such visas (“Bosnia and Herzegovina Official Gazette”, No. 104/08);
- Rulebook on issuance of short-term visas (Visa C) and airport transit visas (Visa A) in the diplomatic and consular missions of Bosnia and Herzegovina (“Bosnia and Herzegovina Official Gazette”, No. 69/13);
- Guidelines for the procedures of diplomatic and consular missions of Bosnia and Herzegovina upon a visa application to enter the territory of Bosnia and Herzegovina for the citizens of Kosovo;
- Rulebook on Entry and Stay of Aliens (“Bosnia and Herzegovina Official Gazette”, No. 27/13);
- Law on the Border Control (“Bosnia and Herzegovina Official Gazette”, no. 53/09 and 54/10).

The first law that regulated the issue of immigration and asylum at BH level was the Law on Immigration and Asylum. The provisions of this law were unclear and incomplete and there was a conflict of competencies between the institutions and some vital issues such as: registration of stay, placement of the foreigner under surveillance, specialized institutions for reception, foreigners – victims of human trafficking, and sanctions for failure to comply with the Law on Immigration and Asylum were insufficiently regulated. Although the aforementioned law due to the numerous gaps and unclear areas caused number of reactions of the bodies authorized in its implementation, it has basically fulfilled its mission, since the area of immigration was harmonized with constitutional set up and created pre-conditions for further legal and institutional development in this area.

1.1. Give a description of the national regulations governing asylum.

Ministry of Security determines the merits of the request for international protection, or whether an alien meets the requirements for recognition of refugee status or subsidiary protection status. The decision on the request for international protection shall be made by the Ministry of Security, Asylum Sector.

The decision on the request for international protection is final and binding (no possibility to appeal against the decision) whilst an alien may initiate an administrative dispute before the Court of Bosnia and Herzegovina within 60 days. In cases of unfounded applications (emergency procedure as defined by law) the deadline for initiating an administrative dispute is shorter and is no longer than 8 days. In case where the procedure at the request shall be suspended by conclusion or rejected, the deadline for initiating an administrative dispute is 8 days and the complaint does not postpone the execution of the decision.

An alien with recognized refugee status has the right to stay for the duration of international protection. Besides his/her stay in Bosnia and Herzegovina they are entitled to the right to work, education, health and social care under the same conditions as nationals of Bosnia and Herzegovina and the right to family reunification.⁴⁸⁷

1.1.1. The Strategy of Bosnia and Herzegovina in the Area of Migration and Asylum (2016-2020)

The Strategy with the belonging Action plan was adopted upon the proposal of Ministry of Security by the Council of Ministers of BH on 31th of March 2016. This comprehensive document aimed to strengthen institutional capacities in the area of migration and asylum, increase the state border control efficacy, set-up a system for monitoring foreigners' integration, harmonisation of national migration and asylum-related legislation with the EU standards. Particular importance rests on the geo-strategic position of Bosnia and Herzegovina, observed migration trends, constitutional legal framework, obligations arising from international treaties, movement towards joint migration policy of the EU and adopted policies of authorized bodies of Bosnia and Herzegovina.⁴⁸⁸

For the implementation of these strategic goals 37 measures were defined together with 173 activities to be implemented by relevant BH institutions in precisely set deadline eventually by year 2020. This strategic document came as a result of a joint coordinated effort taken by representatives of competent institutions in BH dealing with the area of migrations and asylum. The document is particularly evident in the context of the Stabilization and Accession Agreement's entry into force, which obligates Bosnia and Herzegovina in the area of migrations and asylum to cooperate intensively with the member states and institutions of the European Union in the areas of visas, border management, migration and asylum.

Identification of relevant legal sources in domestic legislation is very important in the drafting of such a strategic document as this one, for the purpose of legitimacy of the set strategic goals, as well as harmonisation of their content with the provisions of specific laws and bylaws.

There is a series of international treaties that Bosnia and Herzegovina is a party to, which directly or indirectly impact the content and composition of the Strategy in the field of migrations and asylum (2016-2020). Strategy in the field of migrations and asylum (2016-2020) is the provision of Bosnia and Herzegovina's Constitution, Article III paragraph 1. item f), stating that state-level institutions hold exclusive competence to create policies concerning immigration, refugees and asylum. The said provision is one of the legal bases for the adoption of legal and political documents regulating, in a planned, organized and harmonised manner, the activities of competent institutions in this domain, with view to creating the most efficient control mechanism for the said phenomena in Bosnia and Herzegovina.

The Strategy in the field of migrations and asylum (2016- 2020), regulates the following activities:

- competencies of individual institutions of Bosnia and Herzegovina in the field of migrations, asylum and international refugee law (Law on Council of Ministers of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Law on Ministries of Bosnia and Herzegovina and Other Administration Bodies of Bosnia and Herzegovina);
- matters of protection of borders, entry and stay of aliens on the territory of Bosnia and Herzegovina (Law on Border Control, Law on Aliens, and bylaws);
- matters of asylum in the territory of Bosnia and Herzegovina (Law on Asylum, with bylaws);
- competencies and organization of institutions directly involved in law enforcement in practice (Law on Administration, Law on Service for Foreigner's Affairs, Law on Border Police of BiH, Law on State Investigation and Protection Agency, Law on Police Officials, Law on Civil Service);
- other matters of significance for the overall regulation of migrations and asylum (Law on Administrative Proceedings, Law on Administrative Disputes, Law on Personal Identification Number, Law on Citizenship, Law on Protection of personal Data, Law on Protection of Confidential Data, Law on Travel Documents of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Framework Law on Primary and Secondary Education, Criminal Code of Bosnia and Herzegovina).

The bylaws in the field of migrations and asylum adopted in the previous period and presented in the attachment to the Strategy are also considered to be a very important source.

Other relevant legal documents are important part of the strategy, in particular Decision by the Council of Ministers of Bosnia and Herzegovina on instruments for harmonisation of legislation of Bosnia and Herzegovina with acquis communautaire.

This document instructs the ministries and other administration bodies in Bosnia and Herzegovina to ensure harmonisation of all domestic legislation with acquis communautaire.

1.2. What is the procedure for granting asylum and who is responsible?

Ministry of Security is in charge of the implementation of immigration policy and asylum procedures in BH, and is responsible for the regulation of procedures and methods of organizing services dealing with the issues of the movement and stay of aliens.

Asylum Sector performs administrative and other professional tasks related to the execution and implementation of asylum procedure in BH. The Immigration Sector is responsible for delivering second instance decisions on appeals of aliens on the decisions issued by the Service for Foreigners' Affairs and the Border Police.⁴⁸⁹ Procedures at the border – Pursuant to the Law on Movement and Residence of Foreigners and Asylum, if an individual expresses his intention to apply for international protection at a border crossing point in BH, the Border Police is obliged to inform, without delay, the nearest Field of Office of the Service for Foreigner Affairs ("SFFA") which then takes jurisdiction over the asylum seeker. If an individual states the reasons indicating the necessity to apply the principle of non-refoulement, the authority to which they have given such a statement must inform, without delay, the relevant Field Office of SFFA, which then takes jurisdiction over them. When a foreigner has expressed his intention to apply for international protection, the Field Office of SFFA issues them a confirmation of the expressed intention which is valid for up to seven days. After that the Sector for Asylum of the Ministry of Security conducts the registration and the RSD interview.⁴⁹⁰

1.2.1. Registration and asylum procedure

After an asylum application has been submitted, an asylum officer of the Sector for Asylum registers the asylum seeker. Following the registration procedure, an asylum seeker card is issued to the asylum applicant and the nucleus family members accompanying him or her. The asylum seeker card is valid for three months and is regarded as a permission to stay in BH pending a final or enforceable determination of the asylum application. An asylum seeker must apply for extension of an asylum seeker card no later than 15 days prior to the expiration date, and they are assisted to do so by the organizations providing free legal aid.⁴⁹¹ Following the registration process, an interview of the asylum seeker is scheduled by the Sector for Asylum. The Law does not expressly state deadline within which the interview has to be conducted, except that it has to be done "without delay"; in practice, this can take several months, depending on the number of applications that have been submitted at the time. An interview is an oral hearing conducted to establish properly the facts of the case and, as a rule, pursuant to the provisions of the Administrative Procedure Act. A notification of an interview is sent to the asylum seeker or their legal representative at least eight days prior to the date of the interview.⁴⁹²

1.2.2. Reception, shelter, assistance

Pursuant to the Law on Movement and Residence of Foreigners and Asylum, if an individual expresses his intention to apply for international protection at a border crossing point in Bosnia and Herzegovina, the Border Police is obliged to inform, without delay, the nearest Field Office of the Service for Foreigner Affairs (“SFFA”) which then takes jurisdiction over the asylum seeker. If an individual states the reasons indicating the necessity to apply the principle of non-refoulement, the authority to which they have given such a statement must inform, without delay, the relevant Field Office of SFFA, which then takes jurisdiction over them.

When a foreigner has expressed their intention to apply for international protection, the Field Office of SFFA issues them a confirmation of the expressed intention which is valid for seven days maximum. After that the Sector for Asylum of the Ministry of Security conducts the registration and the RSD interview. After an asylum application has been submitted, an asylum officer of the Sector for Asylum registers the asylum seeker. The registration form must be filled in for all adult asylum seekers. Following the registration procedure, an asylum seeker card is issued to the asylum applicant and the nucleus family members accompanying them. The asylum seeker card is valid for three months and is regarded as leave to stay in BiH pending a final or enforceable determination of the asylum application. The asylum seeker card may be extended beyond the expiration date until an enforceable or final decision on the asylum application is taken. The validity period of an asylum seeker card is extended by the Field Office of SFFA, with the approval of the Sector for Asylum. An asylum seeker must apply for extension of an asylum seeker card no later than 15 days prior to the expiration date, and they are assisted in this by the organisations providing free legal aid.

Following the registration process, an interview of an asylum seeker is scheduled by the Sector for Asylum. The Law does not expressly provide for the deadline within which the interview has to be conducted, except that it has to be done “without delay”; in practice, this can take several months, depending on the number of applications as the same time. An interview is an oral hearing conducted to establish properly the facts of the case and, as a rule, pursuant to the provisions of the Administrative Procedure Act, a notification of an interview is sent to the asylum seeker or their legal representative at least eight days prior to the date of the interview. The Law sets an obligation on the Ministry of Security to provide asylum seekers with the appropriate conditions of reception, including those relating to primary health care. An asylum seeker has the right to follow the proceedings through an interpreter or a sign language interpreter³⁸ who will be provided by MoS. They also have a right to use the services of legal counseling in an asylum procedure. Asylum seekers exercise the right to free legal aid from the moment of the expression of their intention to apply for international protection, and from that moment, Ministry of Security, the Border Police and SFFA have a legal obligation to inform asylum seekers of this right. Free legal aid is provided, with the financial support of UNHCR by

NGOs specialized in providing free legal aid, Association Vaša prava BH, which has been providing free legal aid to such categories since 2004, and Foundation of Local Democracy NGO, since 2010.⁴⁹³

2. How does your national law regulate immigration from EU member states and non-EU states?

Removal of aliens from BH is a measure undertaken by the Service for Foreigners' Affairs in cases when an alien issued with an executable order to leave BH fails to leave BH voluntarily within the deadline provided in the order for voluntary return. This measure entails the forcible removal of such alien from BH. According to the data from the Service for Foreigners' Affairs Report for 2014 and 2015, there were 5 issued conclusions on the approval of execution of decisions on deportation. Such a low number of forcible removals results from aliens' decisions to voluntarily leave BH by their own accord. Presented indicators show that voluntary return to the country of one's origin is promoted and conducted as a more humane and effective procedure in comparison with forcible removal. Readmission agreements prove to be easier, quicker and cost effective means of removal of aliens, and are used in cases when Bosnia and Herzegovina had signed a readmission agreement with the country to which the alien is sent, provided that the agreement came into force. The Ministry of Security's Service for Foreigners' Affairs is responsible for the admission of third country nationals and stateless persons, as well as for their return from BH.

Ministry of Security's Asylum Sector is first instance authority, whereas the Court of Bosnia and Herzegovina is the second instance handling the submitted appeals. The asylum procedure primarily concerns evaluation if there are grounded reasons for recognizing the international protection in BH in the sense of fulfillment of criteria for provision of such status. Furthermore, in the asylum procedure a special attention is devoted to the principle of "non-refoulement". Upon filed application for international protection (asylum), the first instance authority may reach one of the following decisions:

- The application for international protection (asylum) is approved, and the applicant is granted status of a recognized refugee in Bosnia and Herzegovina;
- The application for international protection (asylum) is approved by deciding that instead of refugee status, the applicant would be granted status of subsidiary protection;
- The application for international protection (asylum) is rejected and the applicant is given a deadline for voluntary departure from Bosnia and Herzegovina;
- The procedure for international protection (asylum) is terminated and the applicant is given a deadline for voluntary departure from Bosnia and Herzegovina;
- The application for international protection (asylum) is terminated and the applicant is given a deadline for voluntary departure from Bosnia and Herzegovina; or

⁴⁹³ ibid

- The application for international protection is rejected, but the applicant would not be removed from BH due to the “non-refoulement” principle.

An alien who has exhausted all available legal remedies upon his/her application for international protection that was rejected by a final and binding decision under Article 116 (Decisions upon the application for international protection) Indents c) and f), but for whom it was determined in the asylum procedure that he/she cannot be removed from the territory of Bosnia and Herzegovina for the reasons prescribed by the “non-refoulement” principle would be transferred under competence of the Service for Foreigners’ Affairs. In such a scenario, the alien remains at the BH territory for as long as the reasons for such decision exist. Refusal of entry is a measure implemented in line with the Law by the BH Border Police only towards aliens and stateless persons attempting to legally cross the BH state border and enter BH, but who do not fulfill the conditions for entry stipulated by the Law. In such cases, the BH Border Police refuses entry to such persons and in line with the provisions of the Law issues a decision on refusal of entry. The alien or stateless person may appeal this decision with the Ministry of Security, but filing an appeal does not enable entry into BH. Illegal border crossing entails persons discovered in an attempt to illegally cross the BH state border into or out of BH.

An alien who does not fulfill the general requirements for entry into BH as per Article 19 and 25 of the Law on the Movement and Stay of Aliens and Asylum of BH, and does not come under an international agreement or decision on entry under special conditions, may be refused to entry into BH. The reasons for refusal of entry into BH to aliens were: lack of valid travel document (57%); inability to prove or provide information on the purpose of intended stay (21%); lack of visa for entry, stay, transit through the territory of BH or approval of stay as per the Law (13.5%); lack of sufficient means of subsistence, including health insurance (5%); existing measure of deportation, cancellation of stay or prohibition of entry into the BH territory (1%) and other reasons (2.5%). The majority of refusals of entry at the state border are due to the lack of valid travel document and the lack of visa. A measure of deportation also includes prohibited entry of the alien into Bosnia and Herzegovina in the period varying from 1 to 5 years.⁴⁹⁴

Visa free stay is a right to stay in Bosnia and Herzegovina of an alien who comes from a country with a visa-free regime. Aliens who are exempt from visa entry into the territory of Bosnia and Herzegovina, have the right to enter and stay in the country for up to 90 days over a period of six months from the date of first entry. According to the Article 21 of the Law on Movement and Stay of Aliens and Asylum the Council of Ministers of Bosnia and Herzegovina determines the countries whose citizens can enter Bosnia and Herzegovina without the obligation of obtaining a visa, using a passport or other identification document for entry, exit, transit or stay on the territory of Bosnia and Herzegovina.

Temporary residence is granted for a period of up to one year, provided that the validity of the alien’s passports extends for at least three months past the granted term of temporary residence. Pursuant to the Law on Amendments to the Law on the Movement and Stay of Aliens and Asylum that came into force in November 2012, temporary residence permits may be issued on the following grounds: education, marriage with a BH national, employment based on a work permit, employment without work permit, family reunification, ownership over fixed assets, common law marriage of a foreigner with a BH citizen, humanitarian reasons, and on similar grounds or grounds stemming from an International agreement to which BH is a party, stay in a nursing home, medical treatment and other legitimate reasons.

Agency is responsible for analyzing of gathered information and providing it to authorized officials and bodies (highest authorities and its representatives), as well as collecting, analyzing and disseminating intelligence with aim to provide support to the authorized officials, as it is defined by the Criminal Code of Bosnia and Herzegovina, and to other relevant bodies in Bosnia and Herzegovina, when it's necessary for repressing threats to security of Bosnia and Herzegovina. In the area of immigration legislation, the competence of the Intelligence - Security Agency is reflected in the security clearance of foreigners. It is important to emphasize that the Agency carries out its duties in accordance to regulations of Constitution of Bosnia and Herzegovina, including regulations of European Convention for Protection of Human Rights and Main Freedoms and its Protocols, international contracts and agreements that Bosnia and Herzegovina signed or acceded to.⁵⁰⁴

3.4. Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Bosnia and Herzegovina

Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Bosnia and Herzegovina as an administrative body responsible for the implementation of the established policy in line with guidelines defined by the Presidency of Bosnia and Herzegovina that has, in such capacity, some responsibilities regarding the migration management system in Bosnia and Herzegovina, and regularly inspects the operations of diplomatic and consular missions of Bosnia and Herzegovina in the area of visa and passport issuance. On the basis of migration trends in Bosnia and Herzegovina, the Ministry, together with other responsible State bodies and institutions, takes activities aimed at preventing illegal migrations and managing migration processes.⁵⁰⁵

3.5. Migration Coordination Body of Bosnia and Herzegovina

In 2013, the Council of Ministers of Bosnia and Herzegovina appointed by its decision a Migration Coordination Body in BH. The Coordination Body was established at the level of high-ranking officials of the State Border Police of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Service, Immigration Sector, Asylum Sector and SIPA that are all within the Ministry of Security, International legal Affairs and Consular Missions Sector within the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Refugees, Displaced Persons, Readmission and Residential Policy Sector and the Immigration Sector of the Ministry for Human Rights and Refugees and the technical assistance to the operation of the Coordination Body is provided by the Immigration Sector. The Coordination body is responsible for continuous monitoring of the overall situation in the area of migration and asylum, for encouraging and ensuring inter-ministerial cooperation between relevant institutions dealing with the migration and asylum issues, for assessing future migration trends and suggesting, to the responsible institutions, measures to improve the migration policy as well as for following the implementation of the strategic documents. Furthermore, the Coordination Body creates and proposes to the Minister of Security policies in the area of migration or asylum.⁵⁰⁶

4. What are the recent statistics regarding migrants (i.e. asylum-seekers, immigrants, transitmigrants, trends in migratory flows) in your country?

When it comes to recent statistics regarding migrants, in last report of Ministry of Security of Bosnia and Herzegovina for 2016 it's written:

- During 2016, 2,243 aliens were refused entry to BH by the BH Border Police.
- Discovered Illegal State Border Crossings
- During 2016, the number of discovered illegal state border crossings in BH was 218 (141 illegal entries and 77 illegal exits from BH), which is an increase by 21.79% when we compare to 2015 when 179 illegal border crossings were discovered.
- Revocation of Residence
- The number of revoked non-visa or temporary residences in 2016 was 508, which is a decrease by 24% in comparison to 2015, when 670 non-visa or temporary residences were revoked. As for revocation of permanent residences in 2016, a decrease of 17.46% was noted due to 52 revoked residences, whereas the year of 2015 marks 63 such revocations.
- Expulsion Orders
- Number of expulsion orders in 2016 amounted to 418, thus showing an increase by 42.18% in comparison to 2015 with a total number of 294 expulsion orders. Also, in 2016, there were 31 issued decisions on revocation of non-visa or temporary residences with a measure of deportation.
- Placing Aliens under Surveillance in the Immigration Centre

International Protection (Asylum)

In 2016, 79 persons applied for international protection (asylum) in BH, while in 2015 that number was 46. If we search data and compared period from 2007 to 2016, a total of 1,180 persons applied for asylum in Bosnia and Herzegovina.⁵⁰⁷

5. How have the decisions by the European Court of Human Rights concerning migrants been implemented at national level?

Regarding lawsuits of migrants from Bosnia and Herzegovina in front of European Court of Human Rights, there have been only three of them (Case of Al Hanchi v. Bosnia and Herzegovina⁵⁰⁸, Case of Al Husin v. Bosnia and Herzegovina⁵⁰⁹, Case of Al Hamdani v. Bosnia and Herzegovina⁵¹⁰). All three of them applied to European Court of Human Rights to stop their deportation since a reason for their detention was “threat to national security” and they were afraid that in their country they will be tortured. In all three cases, Court found no reasons that applicants will be tortured so they allowed their deportations. Since this Court has bigger power than national courts, they were obliged to implement their decisions which they did. Unfortunately, these are the cases we could only find regarding this question in Bosnia and Herzegovina.

6. How have the recommendations of the European Commission against Racism and Intolerance and of national human rights bodies concerning the integration of migrants been implemented?

Regarding the report of the European Commission against Racism and Intolerance for 2010, in accordance to the principle of non-refoulement as defined by Article 3 of the European Convention of Human Rights, the recommendation for Bosnia and Herzegovina was to ensure that no person will be returned by force to his or her country of origin.⁵¹¹ Also, its duty is to provide social rights to all asylum seekers and provide them real integration in society if they have been living in Bosnia and Herzegovina for a long time. Amnesty International report from 2010, emphasizes migrants and asylum seekers lack social rights in the measure they deserve.⁵¹² In their report for 2010⁵¹³, European Commission against Racism and Intolerance (here and after: ECRI) gave a recommendation to the authorities of Bosnia and Herzegovina to provide training for judges, prosecutors and lawyers on the subject of the Law on the Prevention of All Forms of Discrimination (hereinafter: Antidiscrimination Law) in particular and on racial discrimination issues in general. Despite this recommendation, lawyers did not receive any other training on the Antidiscrimination Law except for one information meeting. However, during 2013 and 2014 this situation changed and lawyers started attending trainings which resulted in higher attendance - from 30% had increased to about 50%. ECRI is planning to continue with this set of training programmes both in the Federation and in the RS. ECRI's delegation was also informed that this subject matter became a part of the bar exam for lawyers in the RS which, in long term, can be considered as big success.

7. How is migrants' right to access to healthcare regulated within the national legislation?

Migrants' right to access to healthcare in Bosnia and Herzegovina is mostly regulated by:

- Constitution of Bosnia and Herzegovina;
- Law on Asylum (Official Gazette of Bosnia and Herzegovina, no. 11/16, 16/16);
- Rulebook on the manner of realization of health insurance and medical coverage for the persons with recognized international protection in Bosnia and Herzegovina (Official Gazette of Bosnia and Herzegovina, no. 54/10);
- Under the Constitution of Bosnia and Herzegovina, immigration, refugee, and asylum policy and regulations are responsibilities of the Institutions of Bosnia and Herzegovina.⁵¹⁴

The Ministry of Human Rights and Refugees of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Sector for Refugees, displaced persons, readmission and housing policy, performs within their competence the tasks of ensuring the rights and access to rights guaranteed by law to refugees and persons with to integration assistance that the Ministry of Human Rights and Refugees - Sector for refugees, displaced persons, readmission and housing policy ensures in cooperation with other ministries, institutions and services.⁵¹⁵

Health care systems are basically regulated by the Entity Laws on Health Care and on Health Insurance. These laws define general principles for the provision of medical services by various medical institutions, and outline the appropriate procedures for accessing health care facilities. While most people in Bosnia and Herzegovina are covered by Laws on Health Care and on Health Insurance, further complicating matters there are also special laws relating to the provision of health care to particular categories of persons, such as refugees.⁵¹⁶ There aren't any special or specific services or programs for vulnerable migrants.

The Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR)⁵¹⁷ in Sarajevo, in particular, has noted an increased demand from many sectors for improved and comprehensive information on the workings and quality of the health care system in Bosnia and Herzegovina.⁵¹⁸

⁵¹⁴ Art. 3, Constitution of Bosnia and Herzegovina

⁵¹⁵ ibid 21.

⁵¹⁶ Refugee is an alien or a stateless person who is recognized as such by the Ministry of Security of Bosnia and Herzegovina, in accordance with the 1951 Convention relating to the Status of Refugees and the 1967 Protocol relating to the Status of Refugees and this Law: Art. 2, Law on Asylum (Official Gazette of Bosnia and Herzegovina, no. 11/16, 16/16)

⁵¹⁷ Ministry for Human Rights and Refugees of Bosnia and Herzegovina, in consultation with UNHCR, is bound to provide reception conditions for asylum seekers, including accommodation, food, access to health care and education.

According to the Law on Asylum, aliens under temporary protection as well as asylum seekers are entitled to primary health care.⁵¹⁹ Under the Law of Bosnia and Herzegovina, asylum seekers are permitted to remain in the territory of Bosnia and Herzegovina until a final decision on their application has been taken. Asylum-seekers shall exercise the aforementioned rights on the basis of their asylum-seeker cards. The funds for the expenses incurred thereby shall be provided by the Ministry from the budget of the Bosnia and Herzegovina institutions, which has been approved for this purpose, or through donations for asylum in Bosnia and Herzegovina.⁵²⁰

In this regard, the Ministry of Human Rights and Refugees has passed Rulebook on the manner of realization of health insurance and medical coverage for the persons with recognized international protection in Bosnia and Herzegovina.⁵²¹

Decision by the Council of Ministers of Bosnia and Herzegovina on instruments for harmonisation of legislation of Bosnia and Herzegovina with acquis communautaire in general is a very important source in the field of migrants' right to access to healthcare, considering that Bosnia and Herzegovina has the prospective EU membership candidate status.⁵²²

The European Convention on Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (1950) is an international legal source of human rights directly applicable in the legal system of Bosnia and Herzegovina, as an integral part of the Constitution, and has supremacy over all domestic valid legislation, including Article 14 of the Convention, which prohibits any form of discrimination, that is directly applicable in the Bosnia and Herzegovina legal system as well as Protocol 12 which contains a general ban on discrimination.⁵²³

According to information from Public Health Institute of Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina when it comes to migrants right to access to healthcare there is a great need to strengthen cooperation with WHO, UNHCR, UNICEF, UNFPA, UNAIDS, European Commission, International Organization for Migration and other national and international organizations that can help solving the health issues of migrants.

Since April 2016, the Public Health Institute of Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina has been working on action plans for providing support to migrants in case of mass influx. Unfortunately, the plan is still in the draft stage.

As mentioned previously, the Ministry of Human Rights and Refugees of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Sector for refugees, displaced persons, readmission and housing policy, performs within their competence the tasks of ensuring the rights and access to rights guaranteed by law to

8. How do migrant children benefit from the right to education under your national legislation (Article 2 of the first Protocol to the ECHR)?

In BH a several legal acts regulate children immigrants' education. Regarding the rights of migrants in BH, the most important laws regulating this area are the Law on Foreigners in BH,⁵²⁵ the Law on Movement and Residence of Foreigners and Asylum in BH,⁵²⁶ Law on Immigration and Asylum in BH,⁵²⁷ Law on Immigration and Asylum,⁵²⁸ Law on Asylum of BH.⁵²⁹ On the basis of the aforementioned laws, the bylaws related to the protection of migrants arise.

Law on Movement and Residence of Foreigners and Asylum in BH prescribes in Article 3 that the refugee status is also recognized by the person with whom he/she is married, and its children, as well as other members of the immediate family living in the same household in BH. A foreigner with a recognized refugee status will be allowed to work, to educate, to have health and social protection under the same conditions as citizens of BH, and has the right to family reunification. According to Article 76 of the Law on Asylum, for asylum seekers, as one of their basic rights which belongs to them, is the right to primary and secondary education.

A member of the family of asylum seekers, refugees, foreigner under subsidiary or temporary protection shall be considered to be a spouse, children under the condition they do not have their own families, their juvenile adopted child, juvenile adopted child of each of them, parents or other legal representative of juveniles, adult unmarried children of asylum seekers.

The Regulation on the Manner of Exercising the Right to Education of Persons Recognized by International Protection in BH⁵³⁰ determines a more detailed issue of educating immigrants. This Regulation prescribes the competent authorities, basic principles and special conditions governed by the competent authorities in the process of exercising the right to access to the education system in BH by persons recognized under international protection in BH, the conditions and the way to access the educational system in BH, as well as recognition of the level of education acquired in the country of origin or country of previous residence.

Refugees have the same rights to education as BH's people when it comes to the state education system. Moreover, according to Article 4 of this Regulation, persons who exercise the right to international protection have the right to attend supplementary education carried out within the framework of the regular program and basic education program under the same conditions as the children of BH citizens. In addition to supplementary classes, primary school pupils from members with difficulties in mastering the curriculum and are beneficiaries of the Refugee Center in BH under the jurisdiction of the BH Ministry of Human Rights and Refugees, receive supplementary education within that centre.

When it comes to providing assistance to students at the refugee and reception centre, Article 28 of this Regulation prescribes:

- Elementary and secondary school students who are in a poor financial situation, and are beneficiaries of the Refugee-Reception Centre in BH are under the jurisdiction of the Ministry for Human Rights and Refugees, providing transport to school, free textbooks and snacks.
- For the children referred to in paragraph above of this Article, under the same conditions as well as children of BH nationals attending the same school, if the school is located at a distance of more than 2 km from the Refuge and Reception Centre, transport is organized by the Ministry of Human Rights and refugees.

If needed, it will be provided learning one of the languages of the constituent peoples in BH as needed for immigrants' children.

If juveniles immigrants are enrolled in one of the lower or upper grades of elementary education, and they are not able to prove the level of previously completed education, in accordance with the applicable legislation regulating this area in BH, with exception of enrolling the first grade of elementary school, in that case, the competent authorities for the implementation of the above mentioned Regulation will determine the level of knowledge of these persons on the basis of which they will be enrolled in one of the lower or upper grades of primary school.

The following levels of education are provided to persons under the international protection, under the same conditions as citizens of BH: preschool, primary, secondary and higher education.

Law on Movement and Residence of Foreigners and Asylum in BH contains the whole article on non-discrimination of foreigners. It is forbidden to discriminate foreigners on any grounds, such as: gender or sex, race, skin, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, connection with a national minority, property status, status acquired by birth or other status. In regard with children's right, the Law contains part juveniles' protection. The competent authorities in BH are obliged to treat the juvenile foreigners with special care and respect and to act with them in accordance with the Convention on the Rights of the Child and the regulations in BH related to the care and protection of minors. However, no clear penalties for acting contrary to the above have been prescribed, e.g. for cases of discrimination against juvenile foreigners or their parents.

In general, immigrants' children in Bosnia and Herzegovina have equal access to education system as well as residents' children. There were no cases of any discrimination between children regarding better conditions of learning quality of professional teaching staff. Moreover, a lot of money, time and effort are invested to make Roma children more numerous in BH schools. Many projects have been implemented with the aim of increasing the involvement of these children in the BH education system.

9. How are foreign school and university diplomas recognised in your country (e.g. through national law under the CoE/UNESCO Convention on the Recognition of Qualifications concerning Higher Education in the European Region of 1997) and what are the practical procedures?

In BH, each person, whether a resident or an immigrant, has the right to validate his/her secondary or higher education degree. At the state level, the Ministry of Education, Science and Culture of BH is responsible for the recognition/validation of high school diplomas, while the recognition of higher education diplomas is carried out by the Centre for Information and Recognition of Documents in the Higher Education Area.

The legal framework for the recognition of diplomas of higher education institutions is primarily made up of the following documents:

- Convention on the Recognition of Qualifications Concerning Higher Education in the European Region (Lisbon Recognition Convention)⁵³¹,
- Joint declaration of the European Ministers of Education (Bologna Declaration)⁵³²,
- Framework Law on Higher Education in BH ⁵³³,
- Qualification Framework in BH ⁵³⁴,
- Recommendations on the Criteria for Assessment of Foreign Higher Education Qualifications in the Procedure of Recognition for the Purposes of Employment and Further Education⁵³⁵,
- Recommendations on the Recognition of Foreign Higher Education Qualifications in BH to the Persons with Insufficient Documentation or without Documentation⁵³⁶,
- Recommendations on Recognition of Foreign Higher Education Qualifications Acquired Through Cross-border Education⁵³⁷,
- Recommendations on the Recognition of Foreign Higher Education Qualifications Acquired through Joint Programmes⁵³⁸
- ECTS Users Guide.

In BH, there is a Center for Information and Recognition of Higher Education Documents (CIP), established by the BH Council of Ministers in 2008, based on the Framework Law on Higher Education in BH, as an independent administrative organization. This institution is an umbrella institution that should simply implement the process of recognizing foreign diplomas. However, the layers of administration in our country also reflected on this issue. The competence in the process of recognition of higher education diploma in BH have twelve institutions. In the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, the process in ten cantons is carried out by the competent ministries of education, in the Republika Srpska it is Ministry of Education and Culture, and in the Brcko District it is Education Department of the District. All these levels of government have their own rules when recognizing diplomas, which are quite similar but non-unified. CIP makes recommendations to the competent ministry on the recognition of diplomas obtained abroad, on the basis of which a certain ministry or faculty makes recognition of the academic title gained. Transparency of the CIP/CIR's work is ensured pursuant to the Law on Freedom of Access to Information in BH, and through submission of reports to the CIP/CIR's Steering Committee, Council of Ministers of BH, Parliamentary Assembly of BH, through issuance of public announcements, and publishing of information on the CIP/CIR website.

Under the Framework Law on Higher Education in Bosnia and Herzegovina, CIP/CIR is in charge of:

- information and recognition in higher education;
- coordination and international exchange of members of academia, students, and programs in higher education;
- representing BiH in international projects in higher education; through the international network of information centres (ENIC/NARIC network), CIP/CIR provides information to the higher education institutions in Bosnia and Herzegovina on higher education institutions and programmes as the basis for recognition of degrees and diplomas for further education at higher education institutions in BH, and it represents Bosnia and Herzegovina in those networks.

In addition to the non-unified system of recognition of foreign diplomas, a distinct price list of these services is an evident problem. The Lisbon Convention recommended that the costs of recognizing foreign qualifications should be as low as possible in order to cover only the basic costs. However, depending on whether you want to continue to study with a foreign degree or want to work in BH, the price of recognition of this diploma is also determined.

With respect to the competence pertaining to the information and recognition of qualifications in higher education, this independence is achieved in accordance with legal, transparent and public procedures.

For example, for a validation of undergraduate degree diploma, with the application shall be accompanied by:

- Diploma/certificate of education abroad;
- Translation of the original diploma/certificate in one of the official languages BH, verified by a court interpreter;
- The curriculum and program on the basis of which the applicant obtained education for which it requires nitrification;
- A testimony of the previous degree of change;
- Evidence of the amount paid for the costs of the validation process one University;
- Certificate of passed exams during the original study and in translation in one of the official BH languages verified by the court interpreter,
- Applicant's CV;

- In the application for diploma validation or the equivalence of public documents, among other information provided, the information that the same request was not previously submitted to another higher education institution or body in BH.

10. How is participation of migrants in political decisions regulated in your national legislation? Are they legally allowed to participate in their country of residence the same way as in their country of origin?

In BH it is strictly determined that only citizens of BH can participate in politics. According to the BH Election Law,⁵³⁹ Article 1.4 - Right to vote is precisely prescribed that every citizen of BH (with no under 18 years) is entitled to vote and to be elected, in accordance with the provisions of this Law. In order to exercise his voting right, a citizen of BH must be registered in the Central Voter List, in accordance with this Law.

In general, foreign citizens in BH do not have the right to participate in political decisions. According to Article 10 of the Law on Movement and Residence of Foreigners and Asylum in BH, foreign citizens in BH also have no right to establish political parties in BH, nor can be members.

Considering that BH is a country with three constituent nationalities (Bosnians, Croats and Serbs), that there are three presidents, even national minorities (such as Roma and Jews) do not have an adequate way of participating in the decision-making process at the level of BH.

Moreover, the most important judges according to participation of minorities in political decisions in BH is Sejdic and Finci v. Bosnia and Herzegovina.

The judgment found discriminatory the constitutional arrangements, put in place by the Dayton Peace Agreement, according to which only people declaring affiliation with Bosnians, Croats or Serbs were eligible to stand for election to the tripartite State presidency and the second chamber of the State parliament. Violation of Article 14 (prohibition of discrimination) taken together with Article 3 of Protocol No. 1 (right to free elections) Violation of Article 1 of Protocol No. 12 to the Convention (general prohibition of discrimination).

10.1. Political Participation as an element of Citizenship

Political participation represents one of the rights and responsibilities that maintain the legal bond between a citizen and a State. In most jurisdictions, the rights to vote, to be elected and to stand for office are what most clearly distinguish a citizen from an alien. Restrictions on these rights, particularly on the suspect grounds of race and ethnicity, are not only discriminatory, but undermine the meaning of citizenship itself.

10.2. Marginalization

Aside from being an important right linked with citizenship, political participation is particularly important for ethnic minorities and essential to their integration. This is particularly true following an ethnic conflict, where legally entrenched distinctions based on ethnicity can exacerbate tensions, rather than foster the constructive and sustainable relations between all ethnicities that are essential to a viable multiethnic state.

This landmark ruling strikes at the heart of the power-sharing arrangements established under the Dayton Peace Agreement and assesses the compatibility of peace-making mechanisms with the fundamental principle of non-discrimination within the Convention. The court found that while the urgent need to restore peace at the time of the agreement could explain the absence of representatives of other communities at the peace negotiations, the maintenance of the current system fifteen years after the fact no longer satisfied the requirement of proportionality.

10.3. Implementation

Implementation will require a vital review of the Constitution.

In BH, there are cases of dual citizenship, when persons acquire the citizenship of BH and retain the citizenship of the country from which they come. In such cases these persons have the full right to participate in the elections of the country they come from. In BH, polling stations for these citizens are opened and thus have the opportunity to participate in the country they come from, or country of origin, while staying in BH.

In regard with migrants, persons without BH citizenship acquired, there are no specific policy documents which would provide participation in politics in political decisions in their country of residence as well as for unlawfully impeded to participate in political decisions in their country of residence or in their country of origin.

11. How can migrants acquire citizenship in the country? Is there a possibility of double nationality?

Law on Citizenship⁵⁴⁰ determines the conditions for the acquisition and cessation of citizenship of Bosnia and Herzegovina, in accordance with the Constitution of Bosnia and Herzegovina.

In accordance with the present Law, BH citizenship is acquired:

- By descent;
- By birth on the BH territory;
- By adoption;
- By naturalization;
- By an international agreement.

⁵⁴⁰ “Official Gazette” of Bosnia and Herzegovina, 4/97. This law has been adopted by BiH Parliamentary Assembly and published in the Official Gazette of Bosnia and Herzegovina 13/99.

BH citizenship by descent is acquired by a child born after the entry into force of the Constitution:

- Whose both parents were BH citizens at the time of the child's birth, regardless of the place of the child's birth;
- Whose one parent was a BH citizen at the time of the child's birth, and the child was born on the BH territory;
- Whose one parent was a BH citizen at the time of the child's birth, and the child was born abroad, if the child would otherwise be stateless;
- If the child was born abroad, and one of his/her parents was a BH citizen at the time of his/her birth, provided that by the time the child attains the age of 23 he/she submits the application for registration of BH citizenship to the competent authority.

BH citizenship is acquired by a child born or found on the BH territory after the entry into force of the Constitution, whose both parents are unknown or of unknown citizenship or are stateless, or if the child is stateless.

A foreigner who has submitted an application for acquisition of BH citizenship may acquire it by naturalization if he/she fulfils the following conditions:

- That he/she has reached 18 years of age;
- That he/she has been a permanent resident on the BH territory for at least the years preceding the application;
- That he/she has an adequate knowledge of an alphabet/script and a language of one of the constituent peoples of BH;
- That he/she has not been subject to the security measure of expulsion of a foreigner from the country or to the safeguard measure of removal of a foreigner from BH, by an authority established in accordance with the Constitution, and that this measure is still in force;
- That he/she was not sentenced to a term of imprisonment for a premeditated crime for longer than three years within 8 years of the submission of his/her application;
- That he/she renounces or otherwise loses his/her former citizenship before he/she acquires the BH citizenship, unless a bilateral agreement mentioned in Article 14 provides otherwise. The renunciation or cessation of the former citizenship shall not be required if it is not allowed or cannot be reasonably required;
- That he/she is not subject to criminal proceedings, except when it is not reasonable to require a proof of fulfilling this condition;
- That he/she does not pose a threat to the security of BH;
- That he/she has a permanent source of income in an amount that allows his/her existence or that he/she is able to provide a reliable proof of funds available for his/her support;
- That he/she has settled all taxes or other financial obligations;
- That he/she has signed a statement on accepting the legal system and constitutional order of BH; and
- That he/she has effective assurances of acquisition of BH citizenship.

Naturalization shall not be granted, even when the applicant fulfils the general naturalization requirements, if there are reasonable grounds to believe that the State security and public order and peace will be jeopardized by such act, or if naturalization is not consistent with the State interests for any other reason as determined on the grounds of the overall assessment of the applicant.

A stateless person and a recognized refugee may acquire BH citizenship, without fulfilling requirements, only if he/she has continually resided in BH, as a stateless person or a recognized refugee, for a period of five years preceding the application.

A minor child of a person who has acquired BH citizenship in accordance with paragraph (1) is entitled to BH citizenship, without fulfilling the requirements, if he/she has been granted a refugee status or temporary residence in BH, regardless of the duration of his/her stay.

If the child is over 14 years of age, his/her consent is required.

The Constitution of Bosnia and Herzegovina has restricted the possibility of having dual citizenship, so that is possible only with countries that BH has a relevant bilateral Agreement signed. This concept is also reflected in the BH Law on Citizenship.

Since BH has one of the highest Diaspora to population ratios in the world, it would logical to assume that signing the dual citizenship bilateral agreements has been an issue of huge importance for the government. However, until this day, only three have been signed, Croatia (signed on 29.03.2007), Serbia (signed on 29.10.2002) and Sweden (signed on 20.12.2004).

12. How is your country assisted by EU programmes and funding with regard to the integration of migrants?

Bosnia and Herzegovina divides migration competences among a large number of agencies and though the capacity exists, there is a need to reinforce and enhance existing structures to ensure that the Ministry of Security can liaise promptly and effectively with the EU and other relevant stakeholders.

There is thus a need to strengthen mechanisms for collecting, sharing, and data analysis, and to augment the sharing of information. The strengthening of a structure to serve as point of reference for the EU and other relevant counterparts to attain any information pertaining to migration in BH, as well as an overview of the general situation in the country, would not only serve to enhance communication and efficiency, but also the coherence of migration management, ensuring that all state and non-state actors in BH are able to pursue a consistent agenda.

Building on existing structures of the Ministry of Security, such as the Sector for Immigration, this structure should not be operational, but rather focus on the collection, processing, and analysis of data from all relevant institutions, in order to produce reports and analysis on migration issues. These should be then distributed to all competent bodies in the Ministry of Security and the relevant agencies in order to define policies, enhance strategic planning, and augment operations.

As this strengthened body would be in line with structures existing in the EU and in other countries in the region, such an initiative would assist the process of EU integration as well as enhancing regional cooperation.

The strengthened structure should therefore be supported and capacitated to provide direction with regards to irregular migration as well as security, asylum, and economic migration and development. This would allow policy makers to better understand existing issues and challenges; strengths and weaknesses; and gaps and external needs, in order to create clearly defined baselines for formulating realistic and reasonable implementation plans for national risk assessments, for the effective functioning of the migration management system.

Introduction

In a time when the world is more globalized than ever before, when it opens its routes for international trading and policy making, when the word “global citizen” is brought to completion, the rule of law has to adapt to the criteria of a newly build society. It has to develop in such a sense so as to provide a common understanding of justice not only on a national, but also on a universal, multicultural level. The law of migration and immigration is one of the systematic branches which specifically reflect these social trends. Introducing humanitarian values as fundamental legal principles and at the same time, regarding the ongoing migration and refugee crisis in Europe, this branch creates a strict scheme for regulating the current events in a righteous way.

As a member state of the European Union, Bulgaria is on the path of adopting the European standards and policies with the aim of providing a judicial system, adequate to the needs of the 21. century. And while a development in the legislation is present, there is still a lot to be done for breaking common stereotypes and preventing the emergence of discrimination and hate crimes. In that sense, Bulgaria receives support and funding by the EU through distinct Funds, targeting the development of the EU migration and integration policies.

The following research analyses basic legal principles and norms on the topic of Bulgaria’s migration and immigration law, aiming to produce a thorough perspective on the development of the country’s legal system in the sphere.

1. How is the right to asylum regulated in national law? Give a description of the national regulations governing asylum; What is the procedure for granting asylum and who is responsible?

1.1. Protection under Bulgarian Legislation

The right to asylum is incorporated in the highest in hierarchy act in Bulgaria – the Constitution. Art.27 para.2 governs the right to asylum granted to foreigners who are persecuted due to their convictions or actions in defence of internationally recognized rights and freedoms. Further, it states that the right and the procedure for obtaining asylum protection are regulated by a special act⁵⁴¹ – The Law on Asylum and Refugees (referred to as the Act in this question). It sets forth the rights and obligations as well as the procedures which ensure the various ways of protection provided to foreigners within the territory of the country.⁵⁴² The Act was passed in 2002 and has been amended several times since then. It embodies international obligations⁵⁴³ and transposes the provisions of European Union legislation⁵⁴⁴. The procedure on determining the Member State responsible for examining an application for international protection in section IA of the Act applies the rules of various European Regulations on the matter⁵⁴⁵.

First we should examine the legal language used in the Act. The basic terms are clarified in the Additional provisions. The fundamental term foreigner is a legal definition of a person who is not a Bulgarian citizen nor is s/he a citizen of any other European Union Member State, nor a citizen of any country signatory to the European Economic Area Agreement, nor a citizen of the Swiss Confederation, nor is a person citizen of any country as per that country's legislation.⁵⁴⁶ The definition is used in court decisions of the Administrative court of Sofia City when it serves as a second instance for appealing rejection on application for international protection.⁵⁴⁷ The second term of vital importance is listed under § 1 Item 2 as a foreigner seeking protection which is defined as an individual who has expressed his/her desire to be granted protection under the Law on Asylum and Refugees until the completion of his/her application proceedings. The above-mentioned terms will be used forward with their legal definitions as described in the legal act.

Second, the Law on Asylum and Refugees governs the different types of protection which the Republic of Bulgaria can provide to foreigners in need. They are listed under Art. 1 para.2 as follows: (1) Asylum; (2) International protection; (3) Temporary protection. Art. 1a makes a distinction between the above-mentioned terms.

Finally, when exploring the matter on protection within the country's boundaries one should bear in mind that the term "asylum" can have two meanings – (1) asylum as a synonym of protection in general, or (2) the right to asylum as a specific type of protection granted under particular circumstances. The different types of protection, together with the procedures, will be thoroughly examined below.

1.2. Asylum

Asylum is a special type of protection provided when a person is being persecuted due to his/her convictions or actions in defence of internationally recognized rights and freedoms.⁵⁴⁸ The President of the Republic of Bulgaria has the power to grant asylum not only in such cases⁵⁴⁹ but also when the country's interests or particular circumstances indicate the need for such action.⁵⁵⁰ Art. 104 of the Constitution states that the President can assign these powers to the Vice

Convention on the protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights; the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment.

President together with the powers to give, take or retrieve Bulgarian citizenship and the power to give amnesty. The current Bulgarian President has issued a special Decree No. 43 from January 23 2017 with which he assigned the right to grant asylum to the Vice President.⁵⁵¹ The President can withdraw asylum if the circumstances which led to its granting have changed or ceased to exist.⁵⁵² An Asylum Committee with advisory functions acts as a supporting body.⁵⁵³ The Committee assists the Vice President in exercising her powers regarding the granting of protection.

The person who wants to be granted asylum has to lodge an application with the President. If s/he lodges an application for asylum with a different organ of the state, the application has to be automatically sent to the President.⁵⁵⁴ Case law supports the established rule - Case form July 23 2009 Administrative Court Sofia City Report 835 [2009] [Bulgarian] and Case 9417 from September 19 2008 Supreme Administrative Court Report 8766 [2008] [Bulgarian]. In cases when the organ of state failed to apply the rule and decided upon the application without having the jurisdiction to do so, the court sends the application for asylum to the competent body – the President. The application for asylum is registered in the administration of the President.⁵⁵⁵

There is no legal obligation for the President or the Vice President to respond to the application. What is more, there is no procedure through which the foreigner can appeal the decision other.

1.3. International Protection

International protection consists of granting refugee or humanitarian status as defined in the Geneva Convention Relating to the Status of Refugees (referred to as the Refugee Convention) and the Protocol relating to the Status of Refugees. The body which has jurisdiction to grant such protection is the State Agency for Refugees (referred to as the Agency). The Chairman of the Agency has the jurisdiction to provide international protection.⁵⁵⁶

International protection will not be provided if there is an assumption that the person has committed a war crime or a crime against peace and humanity; serious grounds to assume that s/he has committed a serious non-political crime outside the territory of the Republic of Bulgaria; serious grounds to assume that s/he commits, incites, assists, participates in trainings or prepares to commit acts contrary to the goals and principles of the United Nations Organization and its Resolutions regarding the measures against international terrorism; or, serious grounds to believe that s/he is a risk to national security or to society.⁵⁵⁷

International protection can be withdrawn on several occasions listed under Art. 17 of the Act. International protection will be withdrawn if the foreigner wishes to re-avail him/herself to the protection of his/her government or s/he decide to not use the provided protection anymore.

⁵⁵⁷ ibid. Art. 12 para. 1.

However, if one or some of the mentioned perils in the previous paragraph are found then international or temporary protection will cease.

1.3.1. Refugee Status

A refugee is a person who fulfils the criteria of Art.8 of the Act. Refugee status is granted to a foreigner who for reasons of a well-founded fear of persecution due to his/her race, religion, nationality, political opinion or membership of a specific social group is outside of his/her country of origin and who, for those reasons, is unable or unwilling to avail himself/herself of the protection of that country or return thereto. However, the mere fact that the persecutors attribute the person to a protected group is reason enough for her/him to apply for refugee status, no matter whether or not s/he actually belongs to such. The persecutors can be the State, parties or organization, or non-State agents. The act of persecution can vary in its nature⁵⁵⁸. Refugee status will not be granted if the person can safely and legally travel to safe parts of his/her own country. The prerequisites and the definitions follow the ones provided by the Refugee Convention. Foreigners recognized as refugees under the mandate of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees receive refugee status if they are within the territory of Bulgaria.

1.3.2. Humanitarian Status

Art. 9 para.1 states that humanitarian status is granted to foreigners who are not eligible for refugee status and who do not wish or are unable to receive protection from his/her country of origin as s/he may face a risk of suffering serious harm, such as: (1) Death penalty or execution; (2) or, torture or inhumane or degrading treatment or punishment; (3) or, serious threat to a civilian's life or person by reason of indiscriminate violence in situations of international or internal armed conflict. A necessary prerequisite is the unavailability to receive protection in the country of origin. Humanitarian status can be provided on the grounds of other humanitarian nature or for the reasons stated in the Conclusions of the Executive Committee of the UN High Commissioner for Refugees.

1.3.3. Procedure

First, a foreigner who wants to receive international protection has to lodge an application with the Agency. If the request for protection is submitted to a different organ of the State, the latter has the obligation to send the application to the Agency. There is no specific form of the application - it can be both verbal and/or written. Translator or interpreter is provided if the applicant needs one. If the application is verbal, a competent official writes it down.⁵⁵⁹ The Agency creates a personal record of each applicant and keeps his/her documents until the end of the procedure. They conduct personal search of the foreigner, take a photograph and fingerprints, and mark all identifying features under the procedure established by the Ministry of Interior and with respect to the applicant's dignity.

⁵⁵⁸ ibid. Art.8 para.5 items 1-6.

⁵⁵⁹ ibid. Art. 59.

Second, after the application is registered, a date for an interview is appointed. The applicant must present all substantial evidence for the need of protection. S/he is informed in advance that the interview is audio or audio-visually recorded. Each interview finishes with a protocol which is read to the applicant and signed by him/her. The interview is conducted either in a language requested by the applicant or in a language that s/he understands. The applicant can be assisted by a translator, interpreter, legal representative or a lawyer.

Third, within 4 months of the beginning of the initial procedure the interviewing authority prepares an unbiased and impersonal statement and presents it to the Chairman of Agency together with the personal case of the applicant. Then, within 6 months of the beginning of the procedure, the Chairman decides whether to grant or refuse refugee or humanitarian status. All established facts are taken into account. The maximum length for deciding upon an application is 21 months. The decision is announced to the applicant in a language that s/he can understand. A copy of the approval or refusal is handed in and the applicant should sign it upon receiving.

Fourth, the decisions of the Chairman of the Agency can be appealed within 7 or 14 days of the receiving of the refusal before the Administrative court Sofia City or the Administrative court where the applicant has a current address.⁵⁶⁰ The appeal should be submitted through the Chairman of the Agency. The execution of the decision of the Agency is suspended for the period of the appeal. The hearings are open and the parties are subpoenaed. The decision of the lower court can be appealed before the Supreme Administrative Court, which decision is final.

The status of the applicant is decided by a final court decision, withdrawal of international protection or when the proceeding for the obtaining of status has been ceased.⁵⁶¹ A compulsory administrative measure – withdrawal of the right to remain in the country; forced return to the borders; expulsion; or, prohibition to enter the country is issued after the end of the court proceedings with a final court decision. If international protection or asylum is provided to the person the administrative measure will not be imposed.⁵⁶² The person is also presented with the opportunity to voluntarily leave the country within an expressly stated period. The period after which the person can try to re-enter and receive a status depends on the administrative measure. For example the prohibition to enter the Republic of Bulgaria can be for 5 years or more if circumstances provide for it.⁵⁶³ There is also a procedure on preliminary consideration of a subsequent application for international protection.⁵⁶⁴

People belonging to vulnerable groups can benefit from some special conditions. A psychiatric expert examination or an expert opinion to establish the applicant's age may be conducted if there is such need.⁵⁶⁵ Vulnerable condition should be taken into account during application process. The accelerated procedure cannot be used to determine the status of a special type of vulnerable people (unaccompanied minor or a minor foreigner).⁵⁶⁶ The accelerated procedure can be applied when within 10 days of the application the Agency reaches a decision to deny status due to groundless reasons. Unfortunately, the above mentioned procedural guarantee is not available to other types of vulnerable people such as torture victims who often find it hard to present consistent and nonconflicting facts to support their application due to the trauma of the experience.

1.4. Temporary Protection

Temporary protection is provided in cases of massive entering of foreigners, which are forced to flee their country of origin due to an armed conflict, civil war, act of aggression, breach of human rights or enormous amounts of violence within their country or in some parts of it and therefore they cannot return back. The Council of Ministers of Bulgaria grants temporary protection after a decision of the Council of the European Union is issued. The latter determines the time period of the protection.⁵⁶⁷ In such cases protection is provided to a group of people due to the above mentioned reasons and not on the grounds of individual application and assertions.⁵⁶⁸ Still, temporary protection can be withdrawn if the foreigner does not meet the conditions set out in Act.⁵⁶⁹ The Chairman of the Agency has the power to withdraw the provided protection when the mentioned facts are established. He or she is also the competent body who informs the Council of Ministers for the need of temporary protection or the prolongation of a current one.⁵⁷⁰

Temporary protection has never been provided in Bulgaria.

2. How does your national law regulate immigration from EU member states and non-EU states?

Migration is a ceaseless process and an innate feature of human nature. The derivative term migrant is widely used although rarely defined by national legislation due its' universal understanding as *a broader-term of an immigrant and emigrant, referring to a person who leaves one country or region to settle in another, often in search of a better life*⁵⁷¹. Bulgarian legislation does not provide a legal definition of the term either. One of the main legal acts regulating migration uses different terminology. The Law on the Foreigners in the Republic of Bulgaria (referred to as the Law on the Foreigners) in its General provisions introduces the term foreigner meaning a person who does not have a Bulgarian citizenship or any citizenship at all⁵⁷². However, the broad definition is narrowed by preceding article which refers to the Law on Entering, Residing and Leaving the Republic of Bulgaria of European Union Citizens and Members of Their Families (referred to as the Law on Entering, Residing and Leaving)⁵⁷³. The distinction between the two legal acts is based on the citizenship of the person who wishes to enter, reside or leave the country. As a Member of the European Union, the Republic of Bulgaria adopted the latter act in October 2006 to regulate the specific rules applicable to European Union citizens and members of their families. The act also applies to citizens of countries parties to the European Economic Area Agreement, the citizens of Swiss Confederation and the members of their families, who are not citizens of the European Union, the European Economic Area and Swiss Confederation, but who by virtue of international agreements with the European Union, are entitled to free movement.⁵⁷⁴

Bulgaria as an external boundary of the EU plays an essential role in applying the Union's migration policies with regards to the increased migration flow in recent years. The country also is a popular destination for the citizens of the surrounding non-EU Member states who wish to benefit from the many opportunities the EU membership presents especially in terms of education and work.

2.1. Entering the country

The country shall be entered only on a legal ground after presenting required documents to the respective authorities otherwise a person will be considered an illegal migrant and will be denied permission to stay within the boundaries.⁵⁷⁵ Foreigners under the Law on Foreigners need a valid passport or valid document to travel abroad, and a visa, if such is required, to enter the Republic of Bulgaria. Visa is not required if the foreigner has a valid permission for extended, long-term or permanent residence, or when Council Regulation 539/2001/EC provides for it. There are three types of visas – (1) airport transit visa; (2) short-term visa; (3) long-term visa.⁵⁷⁶ The web page of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs provides further information for the different type of visas and a list of countries whose citizens do not need to apply for visa in order to reside within the country for a short period of time (up to 90 days).⁵⁷⁷ The information is available in English.

On the other hand, EU citizens and others to which the Law on Entering, Residing and Leaving applies are required to present a valid ID or valid passport. A family member who is not EU citizen should have a valid passport and visa, if such is required. If that person has a residence card of a member of the family of EU citizen and accompanies or joins EU citizen, then visa is not required.

Visa is not required, if Council Regulation 539/2001/EC, binding acts of the EU, international agreements or acts of the Council of Ministers of the Republic of Bulgaria state so. If the person has a permission to stay in the country visa is not required either.⁵⁷⁸

Visa or permission to enter the country may be denied on several grounds most of which related to criminal behaviour or disturbing public order.⁵⁷⁹

2.2. Residence in the country

A foreigner may reside in Bulgaria on the grounds of an obtained short or a long-term visa, international agreements on visa free regime, EU acts or permission by the administrative control officials on foreigners.⁵⁸⁰ Foreigners may reside for (1) a short duration – up to 90 days within 180 days period from the moment of entry; (2) for an extended period – up to 1 year; (3) long-term - up to 5 years or (4) permanently for unlimited time. In order to obtain permission for permanent residence, additional conditions should be met such as having a specific status or purpose of stay and obtaining a long-term visa⁵⁸¹.

EU citizens and the members of their families who are not EU citizens can reside within the country for a set period of time or permanently. The period is with a short duration of max. 3 months; (2) long duration of up to 5 years; (3) or, permanently.⁵⁸² If EU citizens or members of their families wish to stay for a long period, they should obtain a certificate of permission from the Migration Directorate of the Ministry of Interior.⁵⁸³ Such person should prove that s/he is (1) employed or self-employed; (2) have a health insurance and sufficient funds to support himself/herself without burdening the national social-security system; (3) or is enrolled in an educational institution.⁵⁸⁴ Issues regarding the national security and public order and health may serve as a ground for restricting the right of free movement to which EU citizens are entitled.⁵⁸⁵

People with valid documents for residence do not have to fulfil any other requirements in order to maintain their status. They are entitled to all rights with the exception of those reserved for Bulgarian citizens.⁵⁸⁶ All people should obey the law and comply with the general rules⁵⁸⁷ otherwise they can be subjected to civil, penal or administrative responsibility⁵⁸⁸.

2.3. Leaving the country

Foreigners can freely leave the country upon presenting their passports or substitute travel documents at the official board checkpoints. A person cannot leave if a compulsory administrative measure is issued against him/her.⁵⁸⁹ The same rule applies to EU citizens and the members of their families.

Types of compulsory administrative measures which can be imposed include: (1) expulsion; (2) withdrawal of the right to reside within the country; (3) prohibition to enter into the country.⁵⁹⁰ Two more measures are added regarding foreigners - return to the country of origin, transit to

Still, even after an issued administrative measure the person is presented with the opportunity to voluntarily leave the country within an expressly stated in the order period.⁵⁹² When imposing the compulsory administrative measures various factors are taken into account such as the duration of the stay, the attribution to a vulnerable group of the person, family background, the existence of a family, cultural or social link to the state of origin.⁵⁹³

Expulsion is imposed when the person is considered to be a real and sufficient threat to national security and public order.⁵⁹⁴ Additional grounds for foreigners can be found in Art. 10 para. 1 points 1-4 of the Law on Foreigners.⁵⁹⁵ On the other hand, deportation (removal) can be imposed only on foreigners when they fail to leave the country after their permission to stay has expired or if they have entered or tried to leave with invalid documents or not through the official border checkpoints.⁵⁹⁶

3. Is there a ministry, government agency or other public authority specifically dealing with migrants? If so, please provide a description of the framework this authority works under.

3.1. Introduction

At present there are three public authorities in the Republic of Bulgaria, specifically established to deal with migrants: The Migration Directorate of the Ministry of Interior, the State Agency for Refugees with the Council of Ministers and the National Council on Migration and Integration.

3.2. The Migration Directorate

It is a national specialized structure in the Ministry of Interior, established in 2003.⁵⁹⁷ It is a legal person, whose tasks include:

- issuing permits for short-term, durable, long-term or permanent stay;
- extending the term of stay of foreigners in the Republic of Bulgaria;
- withdrawing the right to an issued permit for a short-term, durable, long-term or permanent stay, if needed;
- annulling an issued visa or reducing the determined via visa period of stay of a foreigner in the country;

⁵⁹¹ Art. 39a para. 1 Law on Foreigners.

⁵⁹² Art. 39b Law on Foreigners; Also Art. 27 Law on Entering, Residing and Leaving.

⁵⁹³ Art. 44 para. 2 Law on Foreigners.

⁵⁹⁴ Art. 25 para. 1 Law on Entering.

⁵⁹⁵ Art. 42 Law on Foreigners.

- carrying out coordination procedures with the Consular Relations Directorate of the Ministry of Exterior for the issuance of residence permits in the Republic of Bulgaria;
- giving opinions on applications for acquisition, restoration and release from Bulgarian citizenship, for issuance of work permits
- giving opinions to other institutions which, in the sense of a normative act, have a bearing on the residence of foreigners in the Republic of Bulgaria;
- providing administrative service to the citizens of the European Union, the citizens of the countries of the European Economic Area Agreement, the citizens of the Swiss Confederation and the members of their families under the Law on Entering, Residing and Leaving the Republic of Bulgaria of European Union Citizens and Members of Their Families;
- imposing coercive administrative measures.⁵⁹⁸

The Migration Directorate is managed by a Director, appointed by the Ministry of Interior. Its structure includes several departments: "Legal Migration and Bulgarian Citizenship", "Countering Illegal Migration", "Special home for temporary accommodation of foreigners - Sofia", "Special home for temporary accommodation of foreigners - Lyubimets".⁵⁹⁹ The Migration Directorate is funded through the budget of the Ministry of Interior, which is a part of the State budget. The work of the directorate is monitored by its director and the Minister of Interior, supported by Inspectorate Directorate. Annual reports, analyzes and program documents are regularly published on the website. In cases involving maltreatment caused by that body, a redress can be obtained in at least three ways: by referring the question to the Minister of Interior, by filing a complaint before the Ombudsman of the Republic of Bulgaria or by commencing a judicial procedure before the competent administrative court.

3.3. The State Agency for Refugees with the Council of Ministers

It is a legal person financed by the State budget with a seat in the capital of Bulgaria and territorial units in the country.

The Agency is managed by a Chairperson who is an executive authority organ entrusted with a special competence. The Chairperson is designated by a decision of the Council of Ministers and is appointed by the Prime Minister. They manage, coordinate and control the implementation of the state policies related to the granting of refugee status and humanitarian status to aliens in the Republic of Bulgaria. According to the Law on asylum and refugees (in force from 01.12.2002), the Chairperson of the Agency shall:

- grant, refuse, withdraw and discontinue international protection in the Republic of Bulgaria;
- withdraw temporary protection;
- suspend and discontinue the procedure for international protection;
- make decisions on applications requesting family reunifications;

- notify the Council of Ministers in cases of a necessity for the establishment of temporary protection on the territory of the Republic of Bulgaria or for the extension of the temporary protection period;
- manage and allocate the distribution of budget funds and supervise disbursement for appropriate purposes;
- in coordination with the Minister of Finance and the Minister of Labour and Social Policy, define the expenditure thresholds for in-kind and financial support to aliens who seek or have been granted international protection;
- at the request of the President of the Republic of Bulgaria, give an opinion on an asylum application lodged⁶⁰⁰.

In performing their duties, the Chairperson is assisted by two Deputy Chairmen, who are appointed by the Prime Minister after a proposal of the Chairperson and whose functions are defined by the Chairperson of the Agency⁶⁰¹. The Chairperson establishes a subordinate political cabinet that provides assistance in formulating and developing specific decisions for the implementation of the governmental policy in the field of the Agency's competence⁶⁰².

The Agency is the administration, which supports the Chairperson through technical assistance and provision of administrative services to natural and legal persons. The Agency's staff numbers 303 people on pay roll⁶⁰³. The structure of the Agency includes an inspectorate, an information security officer, a financial controller, a general administration organized in three directorates, a specialized administration, organized in three directorates, and territorial units⁶⁰⁴. A Chief Secretary, appointed by the Chairperson, shall exercise the administrative management of the Agency in accordance with the Chairperson's lawful instructions. The Inspectorate exercises administrative control, monitoring and evaluation over the activities of the Agency. The Transit and the Registration-acceptance centres are territorial offices of the Agency, which work for the registration, accommodation and medical examination of aliens under protection, as well as for the conducting of procedures to determine the State responsible for examining the application for international protection. The employees of the Agency are obliged not to disclose any official information, as well as data related to the personality of the aliens, seeking or receiving protection, which became known during the procedure for granting international protection or during their stay in the territory of the Republic of Bulgaria after obtaining international protection⁶⁰⁵. The Agency is funded by the State budget. In cases of maltreatment, redress can be obtained by filing a complaint before the Council of Ministers, before the Ombudsman or by referring the issue before the competent administrative court.

3.4. The National Council on Migration and Migration Integration

It is a collective consultative body, formulating and coordinating the implementation of state policies on migration and integration of foreigners. It has 14 members - Deputy Ministers and Chairmen of State agencies and 2 Chairpersons - the Minister of Interior and the Minister of Labor and Social policy⁶⁰⁶. The Council is assisted by a Secretariat made up of experts from the departments, represented in the Council. Its tasks are related to the development of an updated strategic document on migration and integration on the basis of the existing strategic documents, and its proposal to the Council of Ministers; coordination of the implementation of migration and integration policies on a national and European level; development of amendments' proposals, aiming at a more effective implementation of the migration and integration policies.⁶⁰⁷

4. What are the recent statistics regarding migrants (i.e. asylum-seekers, immigrants, transitmigrants, trends in migratory flows) in your country?

4.1. Migration

International migration is the change of usual residence in Bulgaria with a residence abroad or vice versa. Migration growth of a given country territory is the difference between the immigration to and emigration from the area during the year.

The statistics regard persons who have changed their usual residence (current address). The total migration is calculated as of December 31st, 2016.

4.1.1. Migration growth for 2016

According to the official data from the National Statistical Institute⁶⁰⁸ the migration growth for 2016 is -9 329. That means that more people have left the country than they have come in. However, that data only includes the people who have declared change of address. The data also makes it evident that most changes of address happen in the age groups 15-39.

A breakdown of migration statistics by citizenship⁶⁰⁹ shows that only 1 310 of the immigrants in the country have EU citizenship and the remaining 10 677 are from non-EU countries.⁶¹⁰

4.1.2. Asylum- seekers

In the period 1993 - middle of 2017 a total of 81 385 people has searched protection in Bulgaria. Only 12 818 of them were given refugee status, while another 10 950 were given humanitarian status and 11 952 had their requests denied. Some of the cases still haven't been reviewed, but the majority of cases, or a total of 41 128, have been terminated.

In 2015, there were 20 391 people who applied for protection from the Bulgarian state. 4 708 of them were granted refugee status and 889 - humanitarian status. There were 623 denials and 14 567 cases were terminated. In 2016 the total number of people searching for protection dropped to 19 418, and in the first half of 2017 only 2 084 applications have been submitted. In 2016, 764 people received refugee status and 587 - a humanitarian one. However, that year also marked an increase in denials – since there were 1 732 such in 2016. This number further increased in 2017, marking at 2 281, with the total number of applications from 2017 being 2 084, meaning that some of the denials are from previously unresolved cases. That comes to show the unwillingness of the Bulgarian authorities to provide protection for migrants.

4.1.3. Immigrants

Most applications in Bulgaria for the period January 2017 - June 2017 have been submitted by Afghan nationals – 828, followed by Syrian nationals – 547, and Iraqi nationals – 314.⁶¹¹ According to the State Agency for Refugees with the Council of Ministers most of the applications in Bulgaria in the last 23 years come from the same three countries in the exactly same order.

4.1.4. Transit migrants

For most migrants Bulgaria is a transit zone on their way to Western Europe. It is very hard to receive a refugee status and the general economic situation makes Bulgaria an undesirable spot for economic migrants. Recent data from the Ministry of the Interior also proves this, showing that 80% of the migrants have been apprehended while trying to illegally exit the country.⁶¹² The exits used are located on the Bulgarian- Serbian border, Serbia being yet another transit zone. The data also show that there is a 7% decrease in transit migrants, compared to the same period in the previous year.

4.2. Trends in migration flows⁶¹³

On the following chart, there is information about the number of people caught without registration either on the border or in the inside of the country. It displays weekly statistics, covering the period between January 2016 and April 2017. Migrants trying to enter the country are marked with red, the ones trying to exit it without registration – with blue, and with green are the ones caught in the inside of the country. There is a clear tendency of a decrease in these numbers. The reason behind this, however, may partially be based on the severe weather conditions in the winter months.

4.3. Camps

However, it should be noted that there is a practice among the Bulgarian authorities to automatically put anyone who is caught on the border in a closed camp before giving them a chance to tell their story or have proceeding for refugee or humanitarian status.

What is more, together with the detention order, there is also a deportation order issued in every case. Both of these orders can be challenged before an administrative court within a period of 14- days. Most of the migrants however do not understand the documents they sign in Bulgarian and the period for appeal turns to be already over before they meet a lawyer who can help their case. Further, there is a practice for detention to be prolonged in every 6 months for a total period of 2 years, all of which time migrants spend in closed camps and in most cases without having valid legal grounds for detention.

5. How have the decisions by the European Court of Human Rights concerning migrants been implemented at national level?

5.1. Introduction

Pursuant to Art.46 of the European Convention on Human Rights (ECHR) the judgments of the court are binding upon States parties to them.⁶¹⁴ When a judgment finding a violation becomes final, the European Court of Human Rights (ECtHR) forwards the file to the Committee of Ministers of the Council of Europe (CM), which is responsible for monitoring the execution of the Court's judgments. That brings the proceedings before the Court to an end.⁶¹⁵

The CM monitors the execution of judgments, particularly to ensure payment of the amounts awarded by the Court to the applicants in compensation for the damage they have sustained. For example, Resolution CM/ResDH(2015)44⁶¹⁶ concluded the supervision over four cases against Bulgaria, recognizing the general measures adopted and important steps made in execution of the process, and invited the country to abide their obligations regarding payment of any sums awarded to by the Court. General measures are also being monitored, following the changes in national legislation to reflect the required in the judgment.

There are two big groups of national cases with regard to the main problems in Bulgarian legislation on migration law. The first one is *Al-Nashif v. Bulgaria*⁶¹⁷, which also includes the following cases: Musa and others v. Bulgaria, Hasan v. Bulgaria, Basbir and others v. Bulgaria, Baltaji v.

5.2. Implementation

5.2.1. Al-Nashif v. Bulgaria (group)

This group of cases concerns the issue of the lack of independent control on the State's expulsion measures and orders to leave the country. In Al-Nashif the Court stated: "this Court finds that Mr. Al-Nashif's deportation was ordered pursuant to a legal regime that does not provide the necessary safeguards against arbitrariness"⁶¹⁹ - in the light of the lack of judicial review of measures and orders to leave the country, based on national security grounds, as well as the lack of such review of detention pending expulsion.

5.2.1.1. General measures

The response of the Bulgarian authorities was the Aliens Act's amendments from 2007⁶²⁰ in Article 46, namely the introduction of an independent review before the Supreme Administrative Court. Moreover, as from 2003 the Supreme Administrative Court changed its case-law and started examining such appeals, admitting being bound by the Convention in this respect. Since 2011⁶²¹ according to Articles 42(4) and 44(2) of the Aliens act the authorities are required, before deciding to expel an alien, residing permanently in Bulgaria, to take into account their personal and family situation, their level of integration and the strength of their connections with the country of origin. Concerning the possibility to challenge the lawfulness of the detention pending expulsion, a legislative reform was consequently introduced in years 2009⁶²² and 2013⁶²³, namely: time-limits for the detention of aliens pending expulsion were established (Art. 44(8), obligation for the courts to review the lawfulness and necessity of continued detention at six-month intervals, and upon request of the detainee or on their own motion (Art. 46a(4), the time limit for an appeal of the detention order was extended to 14 days (Art. 46a(1).

5.2.1.2. Individual measures

As the 9th Annual report of the CM on the Supervision of the execution of judgments and decisions of the ECtHR (2015) states: "all the applicants who were detained pending expulsion have been released, and the compensation awarded by the European Court as non-pecuniary damage has been paid."⁶²⁴

5.2.2. C.G. and others v. Bulgaria (group)

This group of cases is related to "shortcomings in the judicial control in the area of expulsion or deportation based on national security grounds."⁶²⁵ It concerns the effectiveness of the remedies introduced as a response to the cases in the Al-Nashif group.

5.2.2.1. General measures

In regard to the lack of adequate protection against arbitrariness (Articles 8 and 13), the Protection of Classified Information Act has been amended⁶²⁶. Thus, according to Art. 39a, the foreigners and their lawyers are authorized to acquaint themselves with all content on file, while the Supreme Administrative Court is eligible to request the submission of any evidence by the administration, subject to the "need to know" principle.

In regard to the automatic suspensive effect of the appeal, if based on public order, and the risk of ill treatment in the destination country, amendments are currently being discussed in the Government and with the Ministry of Interior.⁶²⁷ Legislative measures are still necessary to give automatic suspensive effect to this remedy. It is necessary to provide that the destination country should be mentioned in a legally binding act and that every change in the destination country should be amenable to appeal.⁶²⁸

In its recent case-law the Supreme Administrative Court has started requiring the provision of specific facts, so as to prove the presence of a threat for the public order, and thus, to enable an assessment of the proportionality of the measures imposed.⁶²⁹

According to the information submitted to the CM by Bulgaria in its Updated Action Plan from December 2016 (DHDD (2017)8) "all sums awarded by the European Court were transferred to the applicants' bank accounts".⁶³⁰

In regard to the cases of Madab and others v. Bulgaria and Amie and others v. Bulgaria, where violations of Art.8 and 13 ECHR have been found, it has been necessary to ensure that the applicants will not be expelled without a proper reexamination of the expulsion orders against them.⁶³¹ The implementation of these judgments is the following: Mr. Madah's order for expulsion, the revocation of his residence permit and the prohibition from entering the territory of Bulgaria, all imposed in 2005, have been repealed by the Supreme Administrative Court (24.4.2014); Mr. Amie's appeal against the order for expulsion, the revocation of residence permit and the prohibition from entering the territory of Bulgaria, has been dismissed by the Supreme Administrative Court (02.04.2014). The Court based its decision on an older judgment against Mr. Amie from year 2006, where he pleaded guilty of a crime under Art.339, para.1 of the Criminal Code (holding of munitions without the necessary permit). The Committee has already found that no additional individual measure is required in five cases of this group.⁶³²

5.3. Other forms of implementation

On September 21, 2012 it was decided by the Bulgarian General Assembly that the Minister of Justice shall give an annual report on the execution of the judgments of the ECtHR as a step to help bettering the implementation of the ECtHR decisions. The ECtHR's judgments have been translated in Bulgarian and are available on the official website of the Ministry of Justice of the Republic of Bulgaria. The National Institute of Justice has organized several courses for judges in relation to the implementation of Art.8 ECHR.⁶³³

5.4. Conclusion

A number of measures have already been taken in order to address the specific reasons for the violations of the ECHR. This includes law amendments, individual compensation to victims of human rights violations, etc. Their effectiveness is still questionable, but discussions for new amendments are underway.

6. How have the recommendations of the European Commission against Racism and Intolerance and of national human rights bodies concerning the integration of migrants been implemented?

6.1. Awareness-raising campaigns

In 2014, in its fifth monitoring cycle, the European Commission against Racism and Intolerance (ECRI) issued a report on Bulgaria, in which it strongly recommended that the authorities urgently organised an awareness-raising campaign promoting a positive image of and tolerance for asylum seekers and refugees, and ensuring that the public understands the need for international protection.⁶³⁴

⁶³⁴ The European Commission against Racism and Intolerance (ECRI) report on Bulgaria (fifth monitoring cycle), adopted on 19 June 2014, published on 16 September 2014

Unfortunately, current events have shown that this recommendation has not been successfully implemented. On the contrary, as the European Union Agency for Fundamental Rights (FRA) stated in its paper, the amount of violence, harassment, threats and xenophobic speech targeting asylum seekers and migrants remain pervasive, whether committed by state authorities, private companies or individuals, or vigilante groups.⁶³⁵

A vivid example regarding this phenomenon is the Bulgarian Prime Minister's publicly expressed gratitude to the existing vigilante groups⁶³⁶ in 2016⁶³⁷ and stated that any help to the authorities is welcome.⁶³⁸ These kinds of statements, especially coming from a governing authority, are in contradiction with the obligation to promote a positive image of and tolerance for migrants, seeking international protection. In opposition to this statement the Bulgarian Helsinki Committee filed a complaint with the Prosecutor General, claiming that it constituted incitement to discrimination and ethnic violence.⁶³⁹ As a following reaction the Prime Minister stated that his words were misinterpreted, and that unlawful or inhumane acts will not be tolerated and will be prosecuted.⁶⁴⁰

Moreover, in February 2017 in the city of Elin Pelin⁶⁴¹ residents refused to accept a Syrian family, who was granted a humanitarian status from the State Agency for Refugees, to settle in their municipality. Influenced by the residents' opposing behaviour the town's mayor refused to issue personal identity numbers (EGNs) for the family and to register them in the population register, although he is obliged to do that in correspondence to Article 35 of LAR.⁶⁴² This undoubtedly verifies the sparked tension between local residents and refugees that has been overspread throughout the country and has not decreased in the last years.

As a consequence from such events, in March 2017 ECRI also concluded that since 2013 the situation for asylum seekers and refugees in Bulgaria has not met any development and a reason for that is the lack of relevant information, provided by the authorities, the national specialised body, international organisations or civil society, indicating implementation of the above recommendation.⁶⁴³ Instead of lowering, the levels of xenophobia and intolerance are in fact sharply intensified.

6.2. Hate Crimes

The above mentioned overall climate in the Bulgarian society without any hesitation leads to increased rates of “hate crimes”. Despite the fact that these types of crimes, committed against others for racial and xenophobic reasons, are specifically enacted in the national legislation,⁶⁴⁴ they are rarely identified, investigated and prosecuted under the criminal law provisions. Furthermore, very often hooliganism or other offences (involving minor to major body harms) are invoked instead, without the discriminatory motives being indicated.

All of this disables the creation of comprehensive statistics on hate crimes in Bulgaria and ironically may lead to the false assumptions that the rate of racist violence cases is not high. In its report from 2014 ECRI establishes that few cases of hate speech have reached court and the conviction rate is very low. This creates an atmosphere in which such attacks are likely to be repeated without any consequences for the criminals.

6.3. The Commission for Protection against Discrimination and the Ombudsman

There are two institutions that have prerogatives in the area of anti-discrimination and could also deal with the various forms of hate crimes. The first one is the Commission for Protection against Discrimination (CPD), which is the state body responsible for protection against discrimination and guaranteeing equal rights. The CPD accepts complaints and signals of acts of discrimination.

The second institution is the Ombudsman of the Republic of Bulgaria. It monitors and advocates any violations of the rights and freedoms of citizens. Complaints and signals to the Ombudsman can be submitted by both Bulgarian citizens and third-country nationals.⁶⁴⁵

In May 2017 the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination (CERD) expressed its concerns about the effectiveness of the functioning of the CPD and the Ombudsman. In addition to this CERD also noted the lack of public reliance in both institutions and the need of promoting the issuing of complaints, and of ensuring these procedures are accessible to everyone.⁶⁴⁶

The above statements come in relation to the ECRI recommendation towards CPD to produce and publish information on the topic of discrimination, and to explain and widely disseminate in a variety of languages the procedures for issuing discrimination complaints. In regards to this recommendation, CPD has made a significant improvement, providing on its website information in Bulgarian, English, French, German and Russian for its users, who can click on the relevant flag or select one of these languages. The CPD website also contains a built-in translation tool, which converts information into an extensive list of world languages upon the submission of a complaint. On the other hand, in Article 51, para.1 of the Law for Protection from Discrimination it is clearly stated that any complaint written in a foreign language must be accompanied by a translation into Bulgarian, which limits the possibilities of certain vulnerable groups to submit a discrimination complaint.⁶⁴⁷

6.4. The National Integration Programme

The National Integration Programme does not function well, especially in terms of legislation. At the end of March 2017, the President of Republic of Bulgaria revoked the Decree №208/2016 and the Regulation on the Integration of Refugees adopted by the Decree. The prime minister of the interim government stated that there are no clear criteria laid down in the old regulation to implement the measures of integration and especially the ones related to the foreseen agreement on integration of foreigners⁶⁴⁸. An official new draft regulation on the integration of refugees was published for a public discussion on 7 April (until 21 April) but in general it does not differ substantially from the previous one. Indeed, the new act is more detailed, but in no way gives any further solution to the questions related to the inefficiency of the old one⁶⁴⁹. Up to this moment the government has not yet accepted and put in force a new act.

On the other hand, a positive outlook is the fact that SAR operates an Integration Centre which is directly engaged with the implementation of a National Programme for the Integration of Refugees. The Integration Centre works in close cooperation with governmental institutions such as the Ministry of Labour and Social Policy, the Employment Agency, the Ministry of Education and Science, the State Agency for Child Protection, local administrations, and Sofia Municipality. It partners with non-governmental organisations for exchange of information and coordination in the field of employment, education and social integration of foreigners who have received international protection.

6.5. Conclusion

In conclusion, the recommendations of the European Commission against Racism and Intolerance concerning the integration of migrants have been partially but not sufficiently implemented. As a result, the levels of hatred in the society are rising significantly, and the authorities have not taken any preventive measures against that process. Furthermore, the national human rights bodies are still not easily accessible for complaints, especially to migrants, mainly because of financial and language barriers, which on the other hand contributes to the

7. How is migrants' right to access to healthcare regulated within the national legislation?

7.1. National legislation

According to Article 35 of the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union the right to benefit from medical treatment has to be established by national laws and practices. In relation to migrants the Bulgarian legislation has implemented this principle and regulated the access to medical assistance of migrants within various acts such as the Law on Health (LH), the Law on Health Insurance (LHI), the Law on Asylum and Refugees (LAR) and a number of secondary legislation acts. For the purposes of this research, the migrants who fall under the scope of these laws would be conditionally divided into two groups:

migrants who have received permanent residence permit and foreign students;
asylum seekers.

7.1.1. Migrants who have received permanent residence permit and foreign students

Migrants who have received permanent residence permit in Bulgaria as well as foreign students and PhD students who have been accepted in higher educational institutions or in scientific organizations in the country have equal rights and obligations to those of the Bulgarian citizens in regard to medical care accessibility.⁶⁵⁰ This means that they have access to health insurance at the National Health Insurance Fund from the date they receive a permanent residence permit, respectively- enrol in the relevant higher education institution or scientific organization.⁶⁵¹ As a consequence, according to Article 35 LHI, they are provided certain rights - to receive medical care within the scope of the package of health-care activities guaranteed by the budget of the National Health Insurance Fund, dental care, to choose a general practitioner (GP), the right of an emergency medical assistance, wherever they are, the right to lodge complaints to the relevant administrative bodies in case of violations of their rights etc. It is of high importance to be noted that according to Article 87, para. 1 LH all medical procedures can only be conducted after an informed consent from the patient.

In order to ensure the accessibility to medical services and guarantee migrants' physical, mental and social well-being, the national legislation in Article 2, point 1 LH states the principle of equal treatment when accessing health services, giving only priority and special health protection to vulnerable groups such as children, pregnant women, mothers of children up to 1 year old⁶⁵² and people with physical disabilities and mental disorders⁶⁵³. Moreover, Article 136 LH firmly states that any form of discrimination against a person based on his genome is forbidden.

⁶⁵⁰ Article 83 para. 1 and 3 in connection to articles 81, and 82 Law on Health (Закон за здравето) - January 2005 (last amendment on 27 December 2016, State Gazette No. 103)

⁶⁵¹ Article 34, para.1, item 2 and 4, Law on Health Insurance (Закон за здравното осигуряване) - July 1999 (last amendment on 9 December 2016, State Gazette No. 98)

⁶⁵² Article 2, point 2 of the Law on Health

⁶⁵³ Ibid Article 2 point 5

In case any form of discrimination occurs, on the basis of which a person has been mistreated or a health care rejected, the law allows individuals to pursue a discrimination case through the court system or through the Commission for Protection against Discrimination.

The National Health Insurance Fund does not pay the treatment of individuals who do not have health insurance or whose rights to it have been disconnected (which happens if the patient has not paid more than three monthly insurance contributions due for a period of 36 months until the beginning of the month preceding the month of the medical care provided). In these cases, if the migrant requires to be provided a medical service, she/he would have to pay its full estimated price.⁶⁵⁴

Out of the scope of the compulsory health insurance shall be conceded medical services, connected to medical aid at emergency status, stationary psychiatric care, prophylactic examinations, tests and midwifery care for all women who are not health-insured, regardless of the manner of birth, ensuring blood and blood products, transplantation of organs, tissues and cells, compulsory treatment and/or compulsory isolation, expertises for degree of damages and durable inability to work, payment of treatment for diseases according to an order, determined by the Minister of Health, medical transport and assisted reproduction⁶⁵⁵. The children up to 16 years of age have the right to medical care out of the scope of the obligatory health insurance⁶⁵⁶.

7.1.2. Asylum seekers

Aliens who have been granted refugee protection or asylum and those who have obtained humanitarian protection also have the same rights and obligations as the Bulgarian citizens, unless the specific right requires Bulgarian citizenship (right to vote in elections, referendums etc).⁶⁵⁷ That means they have the rights and obligations mentioned in the previous paragraph and they also have access to medical care. Although the Law on Health does not mention these specific groups of migrants anywhere, the Law on Health Insurance does include them in Articles 33, para.1, item.4 and 34, para.1, item.3, alongside with migrants who have a permanent residence permit and provides them with the same access to health insurance as migrants with permanent residence permit from the date of the initiation of their refugee or asylum procedure. Article 58(8) of LAR explicitly mentions the obligation of the State Agency for Refugees to provide written (or orally, in case the applicant is illiterate) information to asylum seekers within 15 days from the submission of their application. This information must be provided in a language that the asylum seeker would understand and it is usually translated in the languages spoken by the main nationalities seeking asylum in Bulgaria, such as Arabic, Farsi, Dari, Urdu, Pashto, Kurdish, English and French. It normally comes in the form of a leaflet, provided from the initial application (e.g. at the border) and includes information about the asylum procedure, social assistance (that includes health care rights) and other rights and obligations of asylum seekers⁶⁵⁸.

Health care for migrants is provided either by health staff working in small clinics within the centres, or by local GPs chosen by the migrants.

During the procedure and before obtaining international protection or asylum, the asylum seekers' health insurance is paid by SAR.⁶⁵⁹ After a (potentially) successful end of the procedure, they become responsible for the payment of their own health insurance contributions, depending on whether they are employed, self-employed or unemployed.⁶⁶⁰ There are, however, some medicines, laboratory tests and diagnostic procedures that are not covered by the National Health Insurance Fund, and migrants are obliged to pay for these out of their own pocket⁶⁶¹.

In addition to these regular medical services and with the aim of protecting public health, it is required that all registered asylum seekers undergo a medical examination during the period of their international protection acquisition. This examination is carried out at the SAR refugee registration and reception centres by a doctor, nurse or a paramedic. Refugees remain quarantined until the issuing of the results. This medical examination should determine whether the alien, who is seeking for international protection, belongs to a vulnerable group and whether they have special needs.⁶⁶² In this regard, during the procedure of protection acquisition, the interviewer may also, with the alien's consent, request the completion of a medical examination (by a doctor or a psychologist), in order to analyze the presence of any physical or psychological symptoms of previous persecutions or serious violations of the alien's integrity. The alien's refusal to conduct such an examination does not affect the decision of the interviewer whether or not the asylum seeker meets the requirements for international protection. Last but not least, the medical examination may also be initiated by the alien on their expense.⁶⁶³

7.2. Conclusion

To sum up the national legislation provides the necessary regulations to ensure the well-being of migrants. However, there are series of practical problems which intrude the provision of proper medical service. First of all, there is a lack of translators, especially of ones, capable of interpreting rare languages such as Farsi, Persian, Arabic etc. This leads to the situation which might be referred to as "lost in translation". Numerous difficulties occur in the communication between the examining doctors and the patients, which as a consequence, may result in wrong diagnoses or refusal of conducting an examination at all.

Furthermore, medical professionals also have a hardship adjusting to the cultural peculiarities of the aliens, such as the need of a woman from Iraq to be examined by a female doctor, for example.

All in all, in the future these issues need to be solved and a way to do this might be by conducting trainings of professionals to ensure their capability of providing high-quality healthcare.

8. How do migrant children benefit from the right to education under your national legislation (Article 2 of the first Protocol to the ECHR)?

8.1. Education

It is a fundamental human right and it is essential for the exercise of all other human rights. It promotes individual freedom and empowerment and yields important development benefits. In democratic societies, the right to education, which is indispensable to the furtherance of human rights, plays such a fundamental role; such that a restrictive interpretation of the first sentence of Article 2 of Protocol No. 1, which is named Right to Education and reads that “No person shall be denied the right to education”, would not be consistent with the aim or purpose of that provision.

A clarification in purpose to clear the meaning of this first sentence Article 2, first sentence, of Protocol No. 1 – Right to education requires it to be scoped as a principle, regarding individuals. The right to education covers the right of access to educational institutions existing at this period of time, the transmission of knowledge and intellectual development, but also the possibility of drawing profit from the education received. That is to say, the right to obtain, in conformity with the rules in force in each EU- State, and in one form or another, official recognition of the studies which have been completed by the means of a qualification.

8.2. Article 2 of Protocol No. 1

It concerns elementary schooling, but also secondary education, higher education, and specialized courses. The holders of the right guaranteed in Article 2 of Protocol No. 1 are children, but also adults, or indeed any person wishing to benefit from the right to education. Furthermore, the State is responsible for public but also for private schools. In addition, the State cannot delegate to private institutions or individuals its obligations to secure the right to education for all. And while Article 2 of Protocol No. 1 guarantees the right of one to open and run a private school, it does not give any positive obligation to the States to subsidize any particular form of teaching. Moreover, it cannot be said that the second sentence of Article 2 of Protocol No. 1 to the Convention imposes the admission of a child to a private school. Lastly, the State has a positive obligation to protect pupils in both State and private schools from ill-treatment. The right to education guaranteed by the first sentence of Article 2 of Protocol No. 1 by its very nature calls for regulation by the State, regulation which may vary in time and place, according to the needs and resources of the community and of individuals. Such regulation shall never injure the material substance of the right to education, nor conflict with other rights enshrined in the Convention. The Convention therefore implements a just balance between the protection of the general interests of the Community and the respect towards the fundamental human rights.

The EU does not have an automated recognition process for accreditation of higher education diplomas received abroad and quite often the individuals have to undergo a national procedure for recognition of a diploma and acknowledgement of the degree of education. The need of a degree recognition, coming from a foreign state, purpose of the recognition of the degree from a foreign school is comes so as to facilitate the access to further education, requalification, obtaining of a degree, and other matters, concerning the applicant. Every member state has the right to determine a national procedure of accreditation of foreign educational diplomas and transcripts. However, the member states are required to follow the basic guidelines and policies of the Union.⁶⁶⁴

8.3. In Bulgaria

National legislation regarding migrant children is provided by Article 9. of Pre-school and School Education Act as it follows:

(1) The compulsory pre-school and school education at state-owned and municipal kindergartens and schools shall be free for children and pupils. The migrant children and their parents have full access to information regarding rights and obligations in terms of applying in Bulgarian schools, they have the possibility to require it from the school administration, where they want to enroll their inheritor.

(2) School education at state-owned and municipal schools shall be free also above the compulsory school age for: 1. Bulgarian citizens; 2. citizens of another Member State; 3. citizens of third countries: (a) holding a permanent residence permit; (b) entitled to long-term or prolonged stay in the country, as well as members of their families; (c) admitted in accordance with acts of the Council of Ministers; (d) admitted in accordance with an international treaty or agreement on these matters; (e) in accordance with a special law; (f) seeking or granted international protection in the country.

(3) Foreign minors, seeking or granted international protection in accordance with the Asylum and Refugees Act, shall receive free education and training at state-owned and municipal kindergartens and schools in the Republic of Bulgaria under the terms and conditions applicable to Bulgarian citizens –from this paragraph we can make a conclusion that Bulgarian legislation treats all kids equally.

There are several key points regarding rights/obligations - right to free education shall be exercised by not paying tuition fees for the training financed from the state budget, and using free-of-charge the facilities for training and development of the interests and abilities of children and pupils. No fees shall be paid also in the case of sitting for state matriculation exams and state exams for awarding professional qualifications in the theory and practice of the occupation for the purposes of acquiring a secondary education degree. In the cases other than those under paragraph 2, citizens of third countries above the compulsory school age shall be educated at state-owned and municipal schools upon the payment of tuition fees at rates approved by the Council of Ministers.⁶⁶⁵ When the recognition is with the purpose of completing further education, the recognition body concerned is the intended university or school of the applicant. In this case one must contact the higher education institution for further information regarding the procedures for recognition.

In that order we must provide also how exactly migrant children benefit the right of education under Bulgarian legislation – the recognition of the foreign diploma and grades from I to VI classes is done by the headmaster of the receiving school in which the student wishes to continue their education. The legal procedure includes the obligation of students to extend all documents from their previous school, including documents issued by their schools throughout any periods of foreign education. The documents, which are referred to, have to be translated, legalized and authenticated, in accordance to the international treaties of the Republic of Bulgaria from the country of origin. After submitting the following documents to the school administration – application to the headmaster, student diploma and several documents, directly connected to the administration of the receiving school and the legal requirements in Bulgaria, the superior of the local school inspectorate publishes a permission for the applicant to continue their education in this school. There also exists a procedure which offers for the students to complete their get latter grade in the Bulgarian educational system, so as to in order to adapt better. Considering the Bulgarian law – it must be noted that students, which continue their education in grades 9 to 12 in Bulgaria, shall also take a state exam of the Bulgarian language.⁶⁶⁶ There are non-discrimination laws that prohibit any form of discriminatory behaviour towards migrant children and their parents/guardians – they sustain in absolutely same conditions as Bulgarian citizens and they have the same amount of right and obligations.

Their rights are implemented in practice in the Law on protection against discrimination -Article 2 - The purpose of this Law is to ensure for every person the right to: 1. quality before the law; 2. equality of treatment and of opportunities for participation in the public life; 3. effective protection against discrimination.⁶⁶⁷ Article 35 1) Persons, providing training or education, as well as the compilers of textbooks and learning materials, are obliged to give information and to apply methods of training and education in a way, focused on overcoming the stereotype of the roles of women and men in all spheres of the public and family life. (2) The kindergartens, schools and high schools shall include in their educational curricula and plans training on the problems of the equality of women and men.

8.4. In conclusion

It shall be pointed out that if the migrant family has received a long-term legal permission to stay in Bulgaria, migrant children follow absolutely the same application requirements as Bulgarian students do and we have observed many aspects of this question in previous ones.

9. How are foreign school and university diplomas recognised in your country (e.g. through national law under the CoE/UNESCO Convention on the Recognition of Qualifications concerning Higher Education in the European Region of 1997) and what are the practical procedures?

9.1. Introduction

Academic recognition⁶⁶⁸ is a formal written acknowledgment for the value of a foreign educational qualification, corresponds to completed university studies. It can be issued only by educational institutions established and recognised by the State in which it is situated.⁶⁶⁹

Only diplomas for bachelor's degree, master's degree or other types of accredited degrees, issued by the authorized national bodies of the respective State where the education took place, can be recognised. Diplomas issued by non-authorized entities or such that do not correspond with the State requirements in Bulgaria cannot be recognised.

The recognition is done by different State entities with regard to the purpose of the recognition. The general law framework, as well its corresponding procedures, is established in the Academic Recognition Regulation and its related entities.

9.2. The requirements

Since September 2016, there is a simpler procedure for recognition of diplomas, originating from member States of the European Union, or of any of the states of Iceland, Norway, Liechtenstein and Switzerland. Following the updated procedure, the diploma shall be sent with a Bulgarian translation, done by a translator accredited by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

For States, parties to a bilateral treaty on that matter, such as Algeria, Armenia, Belarus, Vietnam, Yemen, Cuba, the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia and several others,⁶⁷⁰ and in case of texts with no requirement of an apostille⁶⁷¹, documents should only have a seal of the corresponding entity authorized in the bilateral contract. The required documents in that case only include a university diploma and a translation, authenticated by the Bulgarian embassy or consulate in the respective country.

If the diploma is issued in a State party to The Hague Convention (also known as APOSTILLE) documents should be authenticated by the specific apostille of the country they were issued in.

No other authentication is needed, except for an authenticated Bulgarian translation, completed by an authorized translator.⁶⁷²

If the documents come from a State which does not fall into the mentioned categories, general rules apply. The diploma and attachments to it are authenticated by the ministry, agency or entity which regulates university education in that State. The seal of the Ministry of Foreign affairs of the issuing country must be authenticated by the Bulgarian embassy in that State, or if there is no such embassy, by the embassy of that State in Bulgaria. The Signature and the seals of the consulate service should be authenticated by the Bulgarian ministry of Foreign affairs.⁶⁷³

9.3. Procedure

In order for a foreign diploma to be recognised in Bulgaria, there are certain documents that need to be presented in front of the the National Centre for Information and Documents (NACID). This includes: filled request for academic recognition; original and copy of the diploma of higher educational degree together with a translation made by an authorized translator; original and copy of attachments to the diploma together with a translation made by an authorized translator; copy of identification documents of the person, applying for recognition. The original documents are returned to the applicant in a fourteen-days period.

There is an online option for completing the application through the NACID website.⁶⁷⁴ In this case scanned copies of the documents signed with universal electronic signatures are required. The original documents shall be sent to the centre in a 30-days period, as stated under Art. 8 para.1 (2) (5) If the time period is not met, the procedure is cancelled.

After the recognition is completed, the applicant receives a certificate with the following data: Name of the applicant, user ID, date and place of birth, citizenship, recognised degree, name of the entity and State where the degree was acquired. This certificate is only valid in Bulgaria.

The standard time period for the completion of this procedure is 2 months, as of the date of sending the documents.

Stages: The procedure starts with an acceptance of the request for recognition of educational degree. It is then followed by an examination procedure on the presence of all the required information. Then a check on the academic status of the entity issuing the diploma is taking place. The authenticity of the documents send is finally monitored. If one of these checks shows irregularities, the procedure is stopped. Then an evaluation on the compliance between the data in the diploma and the requirements for acquiring a State diploma is made. The final stage is coming up with a decision to recognize the diploma or to deny it and informing the applicant on the matter. If denied, the applicant has the right to appeal the decision.

Upon decision, the following criteria are taken into account: the criteria of acceptance in the educational entity, the time period of the studies, the credits and number of classes taken, the difference between classes giving theoretical, practical and specific knowledge on the subject, the resulting knowledge and experienced gained, the criteria of graduation.

9.4. Access to procedures for acknowledgment by asylum-seekers

According to the EU directive 2011/95/EC Art. 28 (2) Member States shall endeavour to facilitate full access for beneficiaries of international protection who cannot provide documentary evidence of their qualifications to appropriate schemes for assessment, validation and accreditation of their prior learning.⁶⁷⁵ This is presented in the national Regulation on State Requirements for Acknowledgment of Acquired Higher Education. For persons, who under unexpected circumstances such as natural disasters, military actions in their country etc. cannot provide document certifying their education can ask from the court to establish the relevant facts.⁶⁷⁶ All Bulgarian citizens, foreigners and asylum-seekers have access to the procedure for acknowledgment of their previous education.⁶⁷⁷

9.5. Conclusion

The *UNESCO Convention on the Recognition of Qualifications concerning Higher Education in the European Region of 1997*⁶⁷⁸ is implemented in the Bulgarian legislation, with simpler and faster procedure introduced with regard to States members of the European Union and several other countries which leads to better service and enables all people of the region to benefit fully from the diversity and access between the different States and Bulgaria, and stimulates their efforts to continue their education or to complete a period of studies in higher educational institutions in other States.

10. How is participation of migrants in political decisions regulated in your national legislation? Are they legally allowed to participate in their country of residence the same way as in their country of origin?

10.1. Terms and Definitions under the Constitution of the Republic of Bulgaria

The process of political decision-making in Bulgaria is on the first place described in the Constitution of the Republic of Bulgaria⁶⁷⁹. The Constitution reviews the division of power in the Republic – on legislative, executive and judicial – through the administrative institutions, standing for each of the upper mentioned three branches. While formulating the roles of these institutions, the Constitution also describes their methods of functioning. In these parts of the legislative text⁶⁸⁰, the term “Bulgarian citizen” is continually used. An explanation of this term can be found in Art.25 para.1, which states that: “Any person, whereof at least one of the parents is a Bulgarian citizen, or has been born within the territory of the Republic of Bulgaria, shall be a Bulgarian citizen, unless acquiring another citizenship by decent. Bulgarian citizenship may furthermore be acquired by naturalization.”⁶⁸¹ Moreover, Art. 26 para.2 states that: “Any alien citizen in the Republic of Bulgaria shall have the rights and duties under this Constitution, with the exception of such rights and duties, whereof the Constitution and the laws require Bulgarian citizenship.”⁶⁸²

10.2. Participating by electing

The question of migrants’ eligibility to participate in the making of political decisions in Bulgaria is furthermore addressed in the Election Code of the Republic of Bulgaria⁶⁸³. Section 2 of the Code reviews the rights of people to elect and to be elected in distinct branches of the political apparatus. Participation of migrants in Bulgarian politics is restricted by the declaration of Bulgarian citizenship as one of the requirements for a person to be eligible to vote for National Representatives, a President and Vice President of the Republic of Bulgaria⁶⁸⁴. The right of alien citizens to vote for members of the European Parliament, mayors and municipal councilors, however, is also issued.⁶⁸⁵ The requirements stated for such election to be eligible are, as follows:

- the said person needs to be a national of a member state of the European Union;
- to have attained the age of 18 years by polling day;
- to have not been interdicted;
- to not serve a custodial sentence;
- to enjoy a durable or permanent residence status for the Republic of Bulgaria;
- to have not been deprived of the right to elect in the Member State of which the person is a national;

⁶⁸⁵ Election Code of the Republic of Bulgaria, 2011. Art. 3. para.3 & 5

- to state in advance, by a declaration in writing, the desire thereof to exercise their right to vote within the territory of the Republic of Bulgaria;
- 8.1) for European Parliament elections - to have resided in the Republic of Bulgaria or in another Member State of the European Union at least during the last three months;
- 8.2) for municipal elections - to have resided in the respective nucleated settlement at least during the last twelve months.

10.3. Participating by being elected

Accordingly, Article 4 of the Election Code of the Republic of Bulgaria addresses the right of people to be elected, which is once again restrained for alien citizens, when it comes to the election of National Representatives, President and Vice President of the Republic of Bulgaria⁶⁸⁶. The right to be elected as a European Parliament member is, however, granted to any national of a Member State of the European Union, who is not a Bulgarian citizen, under the following conditions:

- to have attained the age of 21 years by polling day,
- to not hold the citizenship of any State which is not a Member State of the European Union,
- to have not been interdicted,
- to not serve a custodial sentence,
- to have not been deprived of the right to be elected in the Member State of which the person is a national,
- to enjoy a durable or permanent residence status for the Republic of Bulgaria,
- to reside in the Republic of Bulgaria or in another Member State of the European Union at least during the last two years,
- to state, by a declaration in writing, the desire thereof to be elected, when it comes to running for the European Parliament.⁶⁸⁷

The right to be elected in municipal elections is also granted to any national of a Member State of the European Union, who is not a Bulgarian citizen, under several conditions:

- not to hold the citizenship of any State which is not a Member State of the European Union,
- to have attained the age of 18 years by polling day,
- to not have been interdicted,
- to not serve a custodial sentence,
- to enjoy a durable or permanent residence status for the Republic of Bulgaria,
- to have resided in the respective nucleated settlement at least during the last twelve months,
- to have not been deprived of the right to be elected in the Member State of which the person is a national,
- to state by a declaration in writing, the desire thereof to be elected.⁶⁸⁸

⁶⁸⁷ Election Code of the Republic of Bulgaria, 2011. Art. 4. para.3

10.4. Participating through election commissions outside the territory of the Republic of Bulgaria

Emigrants from Bulgaria (Bulgarian citizens, residing outside the borders of the Republic) can participate in elections of National Representatives, President and Vice President of the Republic of Bulgaria, and Members of the European Parliament for the Republic of Bulgaria, upon the appointment of section election commissions abroad for each voting section. The procedure is to be completed by the Central Election Commission of Bulgaria no later than twelve days in advance of the polling day⁶⁸⁹.

10.5. Forms of redress

The Constitution of the Republic of Bulgaria does not issue specific forms of redress to be addressed by migrants in the case of unlawful impediment of their right to participate in elections of their country of residence, or of their country of origin, but instead, the Constitution states that: *“Everyone shall have the right to legal defence whenever their rights or legitimate interests are violated or endangered. He shall have the right to be accompanied by legal counsel when appearing before an agency of the state”*⁶⁹⁰, thus issuing a general right of redress in the case of violation of any rights, stated under this Constitution.

10.6. Conclusion

Migrants can participate in the elections of members of the European Parliament, municipal councilors or mayors in the Republic of Bulgaria, as long as they follow a number of criteria, the most important one of them being EU citizenship. Therefore, it is only migrants, coming from an EU country, who can take part in the political life of Bulgaria, while migrants from other countries, are not legally allowed to do so.

11. How can migrants acquire citizenship in the country? Is there a possibility of double nationality?

11.1. Ways for migrants to acquire Bulgarian citizenship

The ways of acquiring a Bulgarian citizenship are regulated by the Bulgarian citizenship Act and are, as follows: by origin, by place of birth, through naturalization, by marriage and by adoption. It should be noted that in 2014 Bulgaria granted citizenship to less than 1 000 migrants.⁶⁹¹

⁶⁹¹ Eurostat, Migrant integration statistics, <http://ec.europa.eu/eurostat/statistics-explained/index.php/Migrant_integration_statistics_-_active_citizenship> accessed on 23 August 2017

11.1.1. By origin

In most cases this way of becoming a citizen would not apply for migrants. However, Article 9 of the BCA stipulates that “Any person who has been fathered by a Bulgarian citizen or whose descent from a Bulgarian citizen has been established by way of a court ruling shall be a Bulgarian citizen by origin.” Therefore, it is possible that an individual, coming to Bulgaria as a migrant, later turns out to be fathered by a Bulgarian. In this case and after a court decision, the individual would be considered a Bulgarian citizen by origin.

11.1.2. By place of birth

According to Article 11 any child found in the territory of the Republic of Bulgaria whose parents are unknown shall be deemed as born in this territory. Consequently, if a migrant family abandons their child or for other reasons, it is found alone in the territory of the country and has unknown origin, it shall acquire a Bulgarian citizenship as a person born on the territory of the country. The two requirements are cumulative and in cases of known origin, Article 11 would not apply.

11.1.3. By naturalization

There are general requirements⁶⁹² every person applying for a Bulgarian citizenship through naturalization should fulfill. They:

- should be of age;
- should have been granted a permission for permanent residence in the Republic of Bulgaria not less than five years ago;
- should have not been sentenced by a Bulgarian court for premeditated crime of general nature and should have not been subject of criminal proceedings for such crime, unless the person concerned has been rehabilitated;
- should have an income and occupation enabling them to support themselves in the Republic of Bulgaria;
- should have a command of the Bulgarian language subject to verification in accordance with a procedure established by an order of the Minister of Education and Culture;
- should be released from their previous citizenship as of the moment of acquiring Bulgarian citizenship.⁶⁹³

The residence requirement is different for refugees, people with humanitarian status and people without citizenship. According to Articles 13 and 14 these groups of people can acquire a Bulgarian citizenship no less than three years after receiving their status. The requirement for them to be released from their previous citizenship does not apply neither.

⁶⁹² Article 12 BCA

⁶⁹³ According to article 16 all the requirements do not apply in case the Bulgarian country has interest of the naturalization or the person concerned has made a special contribution to the Republic of Bulgaria in the social and economic spheres, in the field of science, technology, culture or sports.

11.1.4. By marriage

If a migrant marries a Bulgarian citizen, he or she can apply for a Bulgarian citizenship after three years of residence in Bulgaria instead of the standard five.⁶⁹⁴ What is more, if for any reasons one of the spouses is deprived of a Bulgarian citizenship, that does not affect the citizenship of the other.⁶⁹⁵

11.1.5. By adoption

This applies for children under the age of 14 who are adopted by Bulgarian citizens. In this case the requirements for knowledge of the language, ability to support themselves, to have permission for permanent residence and to have been released of their previous citizenship do not apply.

11.2. Double citizenship

According to Article 3 of the Bulgarian citizenship Act⁶⁹⁶ - “Any Bulgarian citizen who is also a citizen of another state shall only be considered a Bulgarian citizen in the application of the Bulgarian legislation unless otherwise provided for by law.”

Article 12 requires for people applying for a Bulgarian citizenship to have been released from their previous citizenship as of the moment of acquiring the Bulgarian citizenship. However, there are few exceptions to this rule. It doesn't apply for spouses of Bulgarian citizens; for citizens of a member state of the EU, the European economic area and the Swiss Confederation; or for citizens of countries with which Bulgaria has dual agreements. It is also not required for people with refugee or humanitarian status and stateless people.

11.3. Difficulties migrants face in acquiring citizenship

If a migrant acquires citizenship by origin or through their place of birth, that should not cause many difficulties. However, those are pretty exotic cases. On the other hand, the most spread way of acquiring citizenship by foreigners – the naturalization proves to be very difficult for migrants because of the set conditions.

Firstly, there is a requirement that they have permission for permanent residence. But in fact, Bulgarian courts rarely give such permissions to migrants.

Secondly, there is a requirement that they should have an income and occupation enabling them to support themselves in the Republic of Bulgaria. The case with most migrants is that since they don't have permission for residence, they are also not legally allowed to work. And on the other hand, although some of them work and have enough money to support themselves and their families, this fact alone can't be a reason enough for acquiring citizenship.

⁶⁹⁴ Article 13 BCA

⁶⁹⁵ Article 25 BCA

⁶⁹⁶ The text of the Bulgarian citizenship act in English as published by the Bulgarian embassy in London <http://www.bulgarianembassy-london.org/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=107> accessed on 23 August 2017

Thirdly, the applicant should not have been sentenced by a Bulgarian court for premeditated crime of general nature and should have not been subject of criminal proceedings for such a crime unless the person concerned has been rehabilitated. That might be a problem if, for example, the migrant has caused a serious car accident, in which case the chances for them to ever acquire a Bulgarian citizenship through naturalization severely drop.

11.4. Conclusion

In conclusion, the possibility for migrants to acquire a Bulgarian citizenship is limited because they are rarely granted permission for permanent residence, as it is evident from the statistics.

12. How is your country assisted by EU programmes and funding with regard to the integration of migrants?

12.1. The migration policy of the EU

It is formed with a regard to between two poles – freedom and security – and is closely dependent on the foreign, economic, financial and R&D policy. The European Union strives, in the face of all Member States, to adopt a single coherent approach regarding migration policies within states.

The EU provides Member States with financial resources to support efforts in the areas of legal and irregular migration, return, asylum, border management and integration. During the 2014-20 period, the principal EU financial instruments supporting these areas are the Asylum, Migration and Integration Fund and the Internal Security Fund - Borders and Visa, under which €3.6 billion are allocated directly to Member States. Emergency assistance is also available to Member States throughout their new funding period. During the previous funding period, 2007-13, the previous financial framework allocated €3.7 billion (including emergency assistance) via four Funds: the European Fund for the Integration of third-country nationals, the European Refugee Fund, the European Return Fund and the External Borders Fund.⁶⁹⁷

The Commission granted €5.6 million of emergency support from the European Refugee Fund. The money was used to increase refugee' accommodation, to speed up and raise the quality of processing asylum requests and lastly to provide food, medical and psychological assistance. This emergency support ensured the minimum to answer the needs of conditions for up to 6000 persons seeking international protection.

The Automated surveillance system of the Bulgarian-Serbian border at Border Police Station (BPS) Kalotina is so far, the only one real-working and efficient implement of the program to threating this problem so far. The Programme was announced in 2010, with the whole project coming to a cost of cost 600000 EU. The funding erected an automated system for technical surveillance of the Bulgarian-Serbian border in the area of Border Crossing Point Kalotina. The existing two surveillance posts were also modernised and automated, and a new surveillance post and a local coordination centre were set up at the Border Police Station premises. This project is vital for the future border management and the reason why can be found in the recent political movements on the Balkan region, but there is logical explanation why - recent political developments in the Balkan region indicate instability formed as a result from migration flows from the Middle East, and these processes create and the resultant pressure on the borders of the Republic of Bulgaria. In 2014 the number of asylum applicants in the Republic of Bulgaria exceeded to 11000, which is approximately twice as many as the number in 2013 and over ten times as many as that of 2012. According to reports of national agencies in 2015-2017 numbers are almost equal. It is important to clearly notice that these emergency measures are not directly connected to the aim of an integrating of migrants or asylum-seekers, but to the with goal possibility of providing a more efficient border policy.

⁶⁹⁷ Funding in the areas of migration and border management < https://ec.europa.eu/home-affairs/sites/homeaffairs/files/what-we-do/policies/european-agenda-migration/background-information/docs/funding_country_sheet_bg_en.pdf> accessed on 24 August 2017

12.2. The 2007-2013 period

Over the 2007-2013 funding period, Bulgaria was allocated €6.9 billion under the European Regional Development Fund (ERDF), the Cohesion Fund and the European Social Fund (ESF). Bulgaria allocated 3.2% (€37 million) of its total ESF budget towards integrating disadvantaged people. These funds support a wide range of sectoral investments, including those that concern the Roma, such as financial help for housing and school infrastructure.

For the 2014-2020 period, Bulgaria will be allocated a total of €7.2 billion in EU funds (current prices), out of which €5.1 billion will come from the ESF and the ERDF. At least 28.7% of this amount will be spent on the ESF, with at least 20% of that going towards promoting social inclusion and combating poverty. The latter amount could also finance Roma-related measures.⁶⁹⁸

12.3. The partnership principle

It proved effective in involving Roma civil society in the planning of operational programmes (OPs) most relevant for Roma inclusion. National authorities took over many of their proposals. Participation of Roma civil society within the monitoring committees will continue during implementation. Positive elements include: combination of mainstream and targeted approaches; clear objectives; support for comprehensive local interventions, including addressing negative stereotypes. Challenges include: need for strengthening coordination at national level and building capacities of municipalities; limited ambition of the objectives and budget allocation for the targeted investment priority.⁶⁹⁹

12.4. Conclusion

There is a lack of efficiency, when it comes to governmental policies in Bulgaria regarding the integration of migrants or asylum-seekers. Several Non-government organizations present to give the migrants and asylum-seekers the opportunity to get a cheap private lesson in Bulgarian – which is obviously not enough for creating an efficient integrational process.

In the past years the important role of achieving integration lays on those NGO. On the one hand migrant associations stimulate the development of services that are sensitive to the culture of the immigrants and reflect the demands of the immigrants themselves, but on the other hand the government should implement reasonable integration policies. An example for really working EU project regarding Integration of migrants is Migrants Integration Driving Licence – which was established in past years and it is absolutely free for migrants.

Introduction

The following text provides an insight into the legal frameworks regulating the immigration-related issues in the Czech Republic. The introductory chapter explores how the asylum-linked obligations stemming from the international and European law have been translated into the national law. Chapter Two sheds light on the different immigration regimes for immigrants coming from the other EU Member States and from Third Countries, focusing on legal immigration options available for the former and the latter. Chapter Three deals with the specific agents involved in designing and enforcing the immigration policy, followed by the Chapter Four concentrating on migration-related data collection. Chapter Five discusses the relevant case-law of the European Court of Human Rights and its implementation on national level, followed by the Chapter Six exploring the reflections of the recommendations of the European Commission against Racism and Intolerance and other national human rights organisations. Chapter Seven scrutinizes a particular issue of migrants' access to healthcare and various diverging insurance regimes covering medical treatment, while Chapter Eight draws attention to the access to education and Chapter Nine focusing on recognition of university diplomas and qualifications. Chapter Ten presents the political rights conferred to immigrants, Chapter Eleven provides an overview of the ways to acquire the citizenship. The last chapter is devoted to available EU-administered funding programmes aimed at facilitation of migrants' integration.

1. How is the right to asylum regulated in national law? Give a description of the national regulations governing asylum; What is the procedure for granting asylum and who is responsible?

When concerned with legal regulation of asylum, first of all it has to be emphasized that Czech asylum (and international protection in general) regulation is strongly connected with the regulation on the level of the European Union. Most parts of Czech regulation (at least when speaking about substantive law) are either directly affected by European legislation (the regulations of the Council of EU) or transposed directives. And also Czech Republic is, as a member state, bound by primary legislation of EU. In combination with international treaties that Czech Republic ratified, it is necessary to perceive the national regulation governing asylum as a complicated and in no way independent legal system, influenced continuously, by external impulses, actual migration situation and political views and powers.

1.1. National Regulations Governing Asylum

The most important regulation of the refugee status (which is within the EU legislation viewed practically as the same as the asylum) worldwide is the Convention relating to the Status of Refugees which in the Czech Republic came into effect on February 24 1992, including the 1967

Protocol amendments.⁷⁰⁰ The Czech Republic is bound by the content of the Convention because of the Article 10 of Czech Constitution which states that “promulgated treaties, to the ratification of which Parliament has given its consent and by which the Czech Republic is bound, form a part of the legal order”. And also due to the Article 78 of the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union which states that the Union's common policy on asylum, subsidiary protection and temporary protection “must be in accordance with the Geneva Convention of 28 July 1951 and the Protocol of 31 January 1967 relating to the status of refugees, and other relevant treaties”.

The conditions for declaration of refugee status according to the Convention are crucial for the Czech regulation governing asylum as there are copied and pasted to the Directive 2011/95/EU on Standards for the Qualification of Third-country Nationals or Stateless Persons as Beneficiaries of International Protection, for a Uniform Status for Refugees or for Persons Eligible for Subsidiary Protection, and for the Content of the Protection Granted (“Qualification Directive”), and so they form fundamental reasons for granting asylum according to the Law n. 325 (Asylum Act) 1999 [Zákon o azylu] as is analysed below.

Czech law recognizes several types of granted protection for persecuted or in other way endangered foreign citizens or apatrides. The fundamental form of protection is international protection consisting of asylum and subsidiary protection, when the asylum also has its own sub-forms with different conditions for being granted and based on different sources.

1.1.1.1. Asylum According to the Section 12 Subsection a) of Asylum Act

The definition of fundamental reasons for granting asylum can be found in Section 12 of Asylum Act, and the provision of its Subsection a) could be described as the international asylum as it is based on the Article 43 of Czech Charter of Fundamental Rights and Freedoms⁷⁰¹, stating that ‘the Czech and Slovak Federal Republic shall grant asylum to aliens who are being persecuted for the assertion of their political rights and freedoms’.⁷⁰²

The Asylum Act itself does not define what should be understood as the assertion of the political rights or freedoms, but the Charter of Fundamental Rights and Freedoms in Division 2 recognizes (although that meant primarily for the Czech citizens) several fundamental political rights and freedoms:⁷⁰³

- The freedom of expression and the right to information (Article 17)
- The right to petition (Article 18)
- The right to peaceful assembly (Article 19)

⁷⁰³ ibid 85.

- The freedom of association and the right to form political parties and political movements and to associate therein (Article 20)
- The right to participate in the administration of public affairs (including the right to vote, Article 21)

The Charter itself also contains in the Article 43 the ground for denying the international asylum exceeding the scope of general reasons for denial defined in the Asylum Act, stating that “asylum may be denied to a person who has acted contrary to fundamental human rights and freedoms”.

1.1.1.2. Asylum According to the Section 12 Subsection (b) of Asylum Act

The grounds for granting asylum contained in the provision of Section 12 Subsection b) are based on the refugee status as we know it from the Convention relating to the Status of Refugees, stating that the asylum shall be granted if the applicant has well-founded fear of being persecuted for reasons of:

- race
- religion
- nationality
- membership of a particular social group
- or for advocating their political opinion
- or, in addition to the wording of the Convention, also for reason of sex.⁷⁰⁴

Regarding the term “persecution” the Asylum Act contains in its Section 2 Subsection 4 the definition:

persecution means serious violation of human rights, as well as measures inflicting psychological pressure or any other similar act, or acts that, when combined, constitute persecution in their intensity, if carried out, supported or tolerated by actors of persecution, while:

an actor of persecution or serious harm means the state body, party or organisation controlling a state or a substantial part of its territory of the state of which the foreign national is a citizen or in which the stateless person had his/her last permanent residence. An actor of persecution or serious harm also means a private person, if it can be proved that the state, party or organisation, including any international organisation, controlling the state or a substantial part of its territory are unable or unwilling to provide adequate protection against persecution or serious harm, as is stated in Subsection 6.

But the persecution or serious harm is not constituted if it applies only to a part of the territory of the country and the foreign national or apatride can safely and legitimately travel to another part of the country and settle there, or has access to effective protection from persecution or serious harm. By effective protection are meant adequate steps by the responsible government authorities, party or organisation, including an international organisation controlling the country or a substantial part of its territory, focused towards preventing persecution or infliction of serious harm, not merely temporary.⁷⁰⁵

On the contrary of the international asylum according to the Section 12 Subsection a) of Asylum Act, the granting of asylum according to the Subsection b) does not require the actual ongoing prosecution, but only the well-founded fear of being prosecuted. For granting asylum suffices merely the possibility of initiating the prosecution, however the threat has to be real (or at least the applicant has to reasonably suppose and believe that the threat is real). The Asylum Act does not contain any specification of the intensity or frequency of such fear.⁷⁰⁶

1.1.1.3. Asylum for the Purpose of the Family Reunification

A family member of a recognised refugee who has been granted asylum can be granted, in a case of need of a special consideration, asylum for the purpose of family reunification, according to the Section 13 of Asylum Act. This applies only to the “nuclear family”: the spouse or partner (if the marriage or partnership existed before the asylum was granted), unmarried child or sibling under the age of 18 years or reversely the parent of or the adult responsible for the asylum holder under the age of 18 years.

1.1.1.4. Humanitarian Asylum

The asylum for humanitarian reasons, as defined in the Section 14 of Asylum Act, could be together with asylum for the purpose of the family reunification mentioned above, also called as international protection, although both those options are mentioned in the Point 15 of the Qualification Directive.⁷⁰⁷ If there are no reasons found for granting international protection in the form of asylum pursuant to the Section 12 of Asylum Act, but the case is in need of special consideration (by Czech Supreme Administrative Court not very usefully interpreted as a situation where would be inhuman not to grant the protection) asylum may be granted for humanitarian reasons.⁷⁰⁸ Typically those reasons are very high age, serious illness that is unlikely to cure in the state of origin or humanitarian catastrophe.⁷⁰⁹

1.1.1.5. Reasons for Not Granting Asylum

The Asylum Act in its Section 15 also specifies (based on the reasons regulated in the Convention relating to the Status of Refugees) when the granting of asylum is excluded. In case there is a well-founded suspicion that the applicant committed a crime against peace, a war crime, or a crime against humanity, a serious non-political crime outside the country or he/she has been guilty of acts contrary to the purposes and principles of the United Nations. The well-founded suspicion must be based on good reasons and certain foundations in fact, however the administrative authority does not decide guilt or innocence and does not need guilt evidence necessary for the sentencing in the criminal procedure. Based on the Qualification Directive the person is also expelled if he/she incites or otherwise participates in the commission of the mentioned crimes or acts or if he/she enjoys the protection or assistance from organs or agencies of the United Nations other than the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees.⁷¹⁰

1.1.2. Subsidiary Protection

As the reasons for granting asylum are exhaustive, if not fulfilled, the asylum cannot be granted. But there are situations when the applicants do not meet the criteria for granting the international protection in the form of asylum, but there still exists a well-founded concern in their case that if the applicant is returned to the country of origin or of his/her last permanent residence if stateless, he/she would face a genuine risk of serious harm.⁷¹¹

The subsidiary protection serves as the expression of the non-refoulement principle, perceived as the international custom of the expulsion or extradition prohibition in particular situations.⁷¹²

Serious harm according to the Section 14a Subsection 2 of the Asylum Act means imposition or execution of capital punishment, torture or inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment of the applicant for international protection, serious threat to life or human dignity by reason of arbitrary violence in situations of an international or internal armed conflict, or if the foreign national's departure from the country would contradict the international obligations of the Czech Republic.

Subsidiary protection can be also granted for the purposes of family reunification.⁷¹³

1.1.2.1. Exclusion, Withdrawal and Termination of the Subsidiary Protection

The reasons excluding the granting of subsidiary protection are the same as the reasons for excluding the granting of asylum (except the protection or assistance from organs or agencies of the UN). Furthermore, subsidiary protection cannot be granted to a foreign national who has left the country of which the foreign national is a citizen, or if the foreign national is a stateless person, the country of his/her last permanent residence, with the sole intention of avoiding criminal prosecution for crimes that, if committed, exclude the granting of asylum, provided that such crimes are crimes punishable by imprisonment in the Czech Republic.⁷¹⁴

1.1.3. Temporary Protection

Moreover it can be mentioned the existence of the temporary protection. It does not deal with the legal status (and the possible refugee status) of the foreigners in any way and as such is not regulated by Asylum Act, but it still serves as the protection for the people outside their country of origin. It is based on the Directive 2001/55/EC on Minimum Standards for Giving

The temporary protection has to be declared by the Government of the Czech Republic or by the Council of the EU and applies on mass fleeing the country for the reasons of armed conflict, civil war or endemic violence, natural disaster, systematic or generalised violations of human rights or systematic or generalised persecution on the grounds of nationality or religion.⁷¹⁵

1.2. Procedure for Granting Asylum

1.2.1. Proceedings Before an Administrative Authority

1.2.1.1. Application Procedure

The competent authority to proceed and decide applications for granting the international protection is the Ministry of the Interior of the Czech Republic (the “Ministry”)⁷¹⁶, in particular its Department for Asylum and Migration Policy. Prior to the fulfilling of the official Application for the international protection the aspiring applicant has to make the Statement of the foreigner on the intention to apply for the international protection, in written form or verbally to the protocol. Subsequently the official Application is written down with the foreigner.⁷¹⁷

The Asylum Act in its Appendix 1 contains the application form which serves for finding out the necessary information for next steps, especially if no other country is competent to consider the application according to the Dublin system⁷¹⁸, if the application is not obviously groundless, if there are not fulfilled conditions for accelerated procedure etc.. The application shall also contain the information on the reasons the applicant has left the country of origin.⁷¹⁹

The fingerprints and the photo are taken, and the body and luggage search may be done if necessary.⁷²⁰

1.2.1.2. The Decision-making Process

For detail information about the reasons of the fleeing the country of origin the applicant is interviewed by the Ministry officers. The applicant is entitled to present there any information important for the decision-making and to provide all documents and other evidence proving his statements.⁷²¹ Those information and evidence are the grounds for the decision of the administrative authority, together with the Ministry's own findings about the country of origin and the situation there. These information are collected by the Section for Information about the Countries of Origin subordinated to the Department for Asylum and Migration Policy and shall be used for verification of the information provided by the applicant.⁷²²

In case of lack of evidence the principle of in dubio pro reo shall be applied.⁷²³ If the applicant enters or tries to enter the territory of another state, the proceedings shall be discontinued.⁷²⁴

The period to make the decision is 180 days. The administrative authority may prolong the period up to additional 9 months (exceptionally up to 12 months) in materially or legally complex cases, if a large number of applications for international protection is made at one time, or if an applicant for international protection fails to perform his/her obligations according to this Act, and therefore a decision cannot be made within the limited period⁷²⁵

Without deciding in meritum the administrative authority may terminate the proceeding for the reasons according to the Section 25 of Asylum Act (e.g. withdrawal of the application by the applicant, lack of cooperation by the applicant, unauthorized entrance to another state...) or to suspend the proceeding by ruling due to an error in a submission, for the health or other serious reasons, or if with respect to a temporarily unstable situation in the country of origin of the applicant there are no reasons to believe that a decision of the Ministry shall be issued within the deadline.⁷²⁶

By deciding in meritum the administrative authority grants or not the applicant the international protection or the subsidiary protection. In the decision shall be expressly mentioned all forms of granted or not granted international protection and stated the reasons.⁷²⁷

The application may be also rejected as manifestly unfounded in the accelerated procedure in the time period of 30 days.⁷²⁸

1.2.2. Proceedings Before Court

The applicant is entitled to bring a legal action against the decision of the Ministry in the time period of 15 days since its delivery. The proceeding is held before the administrative court (the Regional court) according to the residence of the applicant. The court either rejects the claim or cancels the decision of the administrative authority, but is not entitled to grant the international protection itself.⁷²⁹ If the case substantially exceeds personal interests of the plaintiff, the applicant is entitled to potentially bring an appeal in cassation to the Supreme Administrative Court.⁷³⁰

1.2.3. The leaving of the territory

After the termination of providing the international protection, or when the decision of the court confirming the non-granting of international protection is in effect or if suspensive effect was not given, the Ministry issues an departure order for the period of maximum of 1 month in which the foreign national is obligated to leave the territory of the Czech Republic.⁷³¹ The foreign national may apply for a leave to remain in the territory visa or residence permit if he/she waits for the decision of the Ministry in regard to the application for long-term residence permit or the decision of the court or if he/she cannot leave the territory in the ordered period (see Section 33 of Law n. 326 Act on the Residence of Foreign Nationals in the Territory of the Czech Republic).⁷³²

Not leaving the territory within the ordered period and so residing in the territory illegally may be grounds for administrative expulsion upon which the foreigner may not be permitted to enter the territory of the Czech Republic of up to 3 years according the Section 119 Subsection 1(c) point 2 of Law n. 326 Act on the Residence of Foreign Nationals in the Territory of the Czech Republic).⁷³³

If the international protection was granted and its holder wishes to leave the territory he/she is obliged to inform the Ministry about the residence outside the territory exceeding 365 days.⁷³⁴ Voluntary return to the country the asylum holder had left because of reasons on which asylum was granted is one of grounds for withdrawal of asylum.⁷³⁵

2. How does your national law regulate immigration from EU member states and non-EU states?

Fundamental legal regulation of immigration to Czech Republic can be found in the Law n. 326 (Act on the Residence of Foreign Nationals in the Territory of the Czech Republic) 1999 [Zákon o pobytu cizinců na území České republiky] (the 'Residence of Aliens Act'), and regulation of particular issues in specific acts. As we have only limited space in this report, this chapter provides only brief description of the fundamental legal aspects of the residence of foreigner nationals in the Czech Republic, which have three basic forms: short-term, long-term, permanent. The Residence of Aliens Act differs two categories of foreigner nationals: EU member states citizens and their family members, and non-EU states citizens. Czech legislation regarding the immigration recognizes lot of exceptions for specific situations which we do not have a space to deal with, and is in continuous process of change influenced by political pressure, but the basic framework we focus on remains mostly the same.⁷³⁶

⁷³³ There are other reasons for administrative expulsion with prohibition of entry of up to 10 years due to their seriousness, see Sections 118-121 of of Law n. 326 Act on the Residence of Foreign Nationals in the Territory of the Czech Republic).

⁷³⁴ Section 52 para (g) of Law n. 325 (Asylum Act) 1999 [Zákon o azylu].

2.1. Non-EU States Citizens

The third country nationals are allowed to stay on the territory of the Czech Republic in the regime of temporary or the permanent residence. Within these two categories the Czech law recognizes few subcategories and special regimes applying on particular situations, consisting usually of slightly different conditions for granting the residence permit.

2.1.1. Temporary Residence

According to the Section 17 of the Residence of Aliens Act the third country national can stay on the territory of the Czech Republic temporary in four regimes. Without any visa if the common EU visa policy does not require so. On the short-term visa up to a maximum of 90 days, mostly known as the touristic visa, granted according to the directly effective EU regulation regarding the visa policy. In the third regime, on the long-term visa exceeding 90 days, the long-term residence permit for the purpose of studies, scientific research, employment, business, family reunification, protection on the territory or for the purpose of the tolerated stay (if the foreigner plans to stay on the territory more than one year), or the temporary residence permit for the family members of the EU member states citizens. The last regime is the temporary residence on the grounds of the departure order that entitles its holder to temporary residence in the Czech Republic for a period necessary for addressing pressing matters and leaving the territory.⁷³⁷

The visa or the residence permit is fixed on its purpose which has to be followed for the whole duration of the residence on the territory. The purpose can be changed during the stay.⁷³⁸

2.1.2. Permanent Residence

If the third country national lives on the territory of the Czech Republic unceasingly for 5 years (short interruptions like vacation are respected) he/she can apply for the permanent residence permit. If he/she fulfils the conditions the permit shall be granted.⁷³⁹ There are specific permanent residence permits granted for particular reasons and with different condition, for example granting permanent residence permit for humanitarian reasons or reasons worth special consideration does not require any previous residence on the territory.⁷⁴⁰ The permanent residence permit is granted for indefinite period of time and the foreigner is also entitled to apply for Czech citizenship. With regard to the possibility of leaving the country the residence permit shall be cancelled if the foreign national had resided continuously outside the Czech Republic for a period exceeding six years or outside the territory of Member States of the European Union continuously for a period exceeding 12 months, unless such residence was justified by serious reasons, or for a period exceeding 24 months.⁷⁴¹ The residence permit may be cancelled also for other reasons specified in the Section 77 of Residence of Aliens Act.

2.2. EU Member States Citizens

The EU member states citizens and their family members fall within the scope of more advantageous migration regime, with simplified procedures and sometimes even the same position as Czech citizens.⁷⁴² In compliance with EU Schengen system freedom of movement⁷⁴³ EU citizens can travel within the Schengen area only with personal identification card and are entitled to ask for the confirmation of the temporary residence if they plan to stay on the territory of the Czech Republic for the period longer than 3 months.⁷⁴⁴ They can also apply for the permanent residence permit after 5 years of ceaseless residence.⁷⁴⁵

Very similar regime applies also on the third country citizens family members of the EU member states citizens, specified in the Section 15a of the Residence of Aliens Act as spouse or permanent partner, parent of EU citizen under 21 years of age, descendant under 21 years of age, and also some foreigners if special situations according to this Section apply. They have simplified entry regime and the visa or residence permit granting procedure.⁷⁴⁶

Interesting thing to be mentioned is that Czech regulation grants the same rights as to the other EU member states citizens family members also to the family members of Czech citizens, establishing the equality of all EU citizens family members in addition to the transposed EU legislation.⁷⁴⁷

3. Is there a ministry, government agency or other public authority specifically dealing with migrants? If so, please provide a description of the framework this authority works under.

3.1. Ministry of the Interior of the Czech Republic

The Ministry of the Interior of the Czech Republic is the main public institution dealing with migrants in the Czech Republic, acting in the framework of Law n. 325 (Asylum Act) 1999 [Zákon o azylu], Law n. 326 (Act on the Residence of Foreign Nationals in the Territory of the Czech Republic) 1999, and Law n. 221 (Act on Temporary Protection for Aliens) 2003. The Ministry of the Interior is administrator of the agenda of international migration and international protection in the Czech Republic on the legislative, analytical and realization level, and has its own chapter in the state budget.

3.1.1. Department for Asylum and Migration Policy

In structures of the ministry, Department for Asylum and Migration Policy is responsible for international protection and migration agenda. Priority of the state, represented by the ministry, is to support organized legal migration while minimalizing illegal migration. Among its responsibilities is also the protection of the state borders within the Schengen area and the granting asylum and refugee status and residence permits to aliens,⁷⁴⁸ securing execution of the state administration in this regard and coordination with other departments, governmental and non-governmental organizations including international organizations.⁷⁴⁹ For the purpose of appeals, there is a special body Commission for Decision-making in Matters of Residence of Foreigners.⁷⁵⁰

3.1.2. Alien Police Service

Part of this competence is entrusted to the Alien Police Service of the Police of the Czech Republic, with Ministry of the Interior as its superior body providing supervision over it during police's exercise of the state administration.⁷⁵¹ The Alien Police Service is highly specialized body of the Police conducting tasks relating to uncovering illegal migration, applying repressive measures against foreigners staying on the territory of the Czech Republic in contradiction with the law, carrying out tasks arising from international legal obligations, dealing with criminal activities associated with state border crossing and cross-border criminal activities.⁷⁵²

3.1.3. The Refugees Facilities Administration

Under the authority of the Ministry of the Interior is also The Refugees Facilities Administration. As an organizational unit of the Government, it is under the authority of the deputy minister of the Interior for Internal Safety. These three units of the ministry: The Refugees Facilities Administration, the Asylum and Migration Policy Department and the Foreign Police Service (Alien Police Service) are in charge of the whole agenda of asylum and migration. The Refugees Facilities Administration cooperates with a range of governmental and international institutions, local authorities and non-governmental organisations. It took over the facilities for the detention of foreigners and set up a network of counselling centres in county towns to support foreigners' integration. Through the Refugee Facilities Administration the Czech Republic provides accommodation and other services to a broad focus group of international protection seekers, international protection holders and detained foreigners as required by the law⁷⁵³ in its Centres for the support of integration of foreigners, Detention facility for foreigners, Reception centres, Residential centres, Residential and Integration centre and International asylum centre.⁷⁵⁴

3.2. Protection of migrants' rights

The supervision of these facilities is under the jurisdiction of the Public Defender of Rights, because facilities for the detention of foreigners and asylum reception centres are facilities where foreigners are restricted in their freedom and protection of their rights needs to be guaranteed. The Defender carries out preventive systematic visits in these facilities and deals with individual complaints of persons placed in there.⁷⁵⁵

Under the authority of the Government of the Czech Republic also operates The Council of the Government of the Czech Republic for Human Rights with the Committee for Foreigners' Rights as one of its expert committees.⁷⁵⁶ It is a permanent advisory body to the Government in the field of the protection of human rights and fundamental freedoms in the territory of the Czech Republic. It was established under Government Resolution n. 809 of 9 December 1998. The Council monitors compliance with the Constitution of the Czech Republic, the Charter of Fundamental Rights and Freedoms and other legislation governing the protection and respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms. The Council further monitors the

3.2.1. Protection against decisions and operation of public authorities

Against the wrongful decisions, bad operations or maltreatment of above mentioned institutions and bodies the aliens are entitled to use the means of protection according to the Law n. 500 (Administrative Procedure Code) 2004. As a first step protection serves an appeal which shall be lodged to the first instance body that shall pass it to its superior body/institution. The superior body to Department for Asylum and Migration Policy is Commission for Decision-making in Matters of Residence of Foreigners, the superior body to Alien Police Service is Alien Police Service Directorate. Depending on the character of problem the aliens can use also other means of protection according to the Administrative Procedure Code (e.g. the complaint) or they can use administrative justice system according to the Law n. 150 (Code of Administrative Justice) 2002.⁷⁵⁸ Everyone has also the right to compensation for damages caused by unlawful decision of the court, another state authority or public administration or by an incorrect official procedure,⁷⁵⁹ including satisfaction for non-pecuniary damage. With regard to above mentioned authorities and bodies dealing with migrants the relevant administrative authority where to claim this right is the Ministry of Interior.⁷⁶⁰

4. What are the recent statistics regarding migrants (i.e. asylum-seekers, immigrants, transitmigrants, trends in migratory flows) in your country?

When looking for statistics regarding migration in and through the territory of the Czech Republic we can choose from wide range of sources. Brief summaries can be found in databases or statistics of worldwide operating organizations like United Nations High Commissionaire for Refugees or International Organisation for Migration, or in statistics of regional organisations or institutions like Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development or Eurostat, the statistical office of the European Union creating complex database and summary report of inter alia migration in the territory of the EU.⁷⁶¹

The most detailed statistics focused only on the Czech Republic are made by the main public institution dealing with migrants in the Czech Republic – its Ministry of the Interior. This authority proceeds and decides upon applications for granting the international protection and applications for residence permits and is the administrator of the agenda of international migration and international protection in the Czech Republic in general, including the analytical level. The Ministry of the Interior is also in charge of collecting data regarding migrations and of publishing reports and recent statistics.

4.1. The Report on the Situation Regarding Migration

On a regular basis the Ministry create the Report on the Situation Regarding Migration⁷⁶², made in cooperation with nine other ministries of the Czech Republic and based on their common shared data, and in cooperation with Czech Security Information Service. This complex report contains information regarding both legal and illegal migration, international protection statistics, visa policy, Schengen cooperation and on integration of migrants and projects focused on work with them. The report is presented to the government of the Czech Republic and then to the Chamber of Deputies of the Parliament of the Czech Republic and to the National Security Council, and subsequently published on the website of the Ministry.⁷⁶³

The most recent published report is the report published in 2017, containing collection of data from previous year of 2016. As the report contains very detailed data regarding all possible aspects of migration in the territory we present here only the very brief extract.

4.1.1. Immigrants in the Czech Republic

The citizens of Slovakia top the list of EU member states citizens in the territory of the Czech Republic with total amount of 107 251⁷⁶⁴ people at the end of 2016, followed by Germany (21 216⁷⁶⁵ people) due to strong business connection and the fact that the Czech Republic and Germany are contiguous states, and by Poland (20 305⁷⁶⁶ people) as another contiguous state.

The list of non-EU member states citizens in the territory of the Czech Republic tops Ukraine with total amount of 110 245⁷⁶⁷ people at the end of 2016. This is a long term historical trend as Ukrainian citizens are significant workforce and the most employed foreign nationals by far.⁷⁶⁸ The notional second place takes Vietnam (58 080⁷⁶⁹). The Russian federation takes the notional

In total there lived 496 413⁷⁷¹ foreigners with some form of residence permit in the Czech Republic, not very surprisingly settled mostly in the capital city of Prague (37,4 % of foreigners in the territory of the Czech Republic) and in the Central-Bohemian region (13,1 %) which forms Prague's agglomeration⁷⁷².

4.1.2. International protection seekers and holders

Despite the current refugee crisis the number of applications for international protection (asylum or subsidiary protection) stays relatively low. In 2016 there were submitted 1 478 applications for international protection, 928 by men and 550 by women, 269 of applicants were children⁷⁷⁸.

4.1.3. Illegal migration

Regarding the illegal migration in the territory of the Czech Republic the trend caused by refugee crisis, when lot of migrants tried to use the Czech Republic only as a transit country, culminated in 2015 with 8563⁷⁸⁵ people detected during illegal residence or illegal entry.⁷⁸⁶ In 2016 numbers fell down to 5261 people, comparable with pre-crisis numbers of 4822 people in 2014 and 4153 people in 2013 respectively.⁷⁸⁷ This supports the fact that in 2015 Syrians topped the list of illegally staying or residing foreigners in the territory with number of 2 016 detected people⁷⁸⁸, while in all other recent years, including 2016, was on the top of the list Ukraine.⁷⁸⁹

5. How have the decisions by the European Court of Human Rights concerning migrants been implemented at national level?

5.1. General Remarks

Although national law does not expressly recognize binding character of European Court of Human Rights' (ECHR) jurisprudence, it is by now well established and overall well respected principle, following from the application precedence of international agreements over national laws⁷⁹¹ and ECHR's role of interpreting the European Convention of Human Rights (hereinafter 'the European Convention'). Moreover, the Constitutional Court ruled in a much debated decision that the European Convention takes precedence not only over laws, but constitutional laws as well, which effectively makes it a part of Czech constitutional order.⁷⁹²

Therefore, the ECHR directly shapes judicial decisions and courts increasingly rely on its jurisprudence, by which ECHR's rulings are implemented into judicial practice. The Constitutional Court takes a leading role in incorporation of references to the ECHR jurisprudence. As some scholars suggested, the Constitutional Court's references are more likely incorporated while establishing new, progressive case law that might be regarded with disapproval.⁷⁹³ Numerous references to ECHR rulings, not limited to those against the Czech Republic, could be found in jurisprudence of the lower courts too,⁷⁹⁴ this phenomenon being especially remarkable for administrative courts' decisions concerning asylum matters.⁷⁹⁵

On the other hand, the direct impact of ECHR's decisions concerning migrants on legislation is to some extent limited, given the fact that as an EU member state, the Czech Republic is bound by the EU common asylum and migration legislation. Major amendments of laws, initiated by the ECHR case law development, thus usually affect EU secondary legislation and are implemented in the national context indirectly.⁷⁹⁶ On the other hand, concerning issues that are left open to national regulation of the EU member states, the ECHR case law occasionally leads to amendments of national legislation.⁷⁹⁷ The Constitutional Court procedural rules enable a successful applicant or the government to file an application to repeal the provision that the ECHR regarded as violating the European Convention.⁷⁹⁸

Besides previously mentioned, the ECHR decisions impact the individual cases before domestic courts from which applications to the ECHR originated. However, there is no provision providing for automatic reopening of the case when the ECHR ruled for violation.

⁷⁹⁸ Section 118 of Law n. 182/1993 (Act on Constitutional Court) 1993 [zákon o Ústavním soudu].

The only procedure that might lead to reopening of the case is limited to cases with lasting violation of applicant's human rights and insufficient just satisfaction awarded by the ECHR. If the applicant establishes that both is fulfilled, the Constitutional Court reopens the case and issues a new ruling, remanding the case to lower courts while relying on the ECHR ruling in merits.⁷⁹⁹ Interestingly, this procedure was until the end of 2012 available for criminal cases only.⁸⁰⁰

In spite of limited means of reopening applicants' cases, Czech legal order now provides sufficient means for awarding just satisfaction for violation of rights guaranteed under the Charter or the European Convention, in compliance with the ECHR repeated demands. The law provides an express basis for claims of damages based on unlawful detentions,⁸⁰¹ including detentions of migrants in the course of asylum, extradition, expulsion or removal proceedings.⁸⁰²

5.2. Implementation of the ECHR's Rulings against the Czech Republic

The Czech Republic so far stood as a respondent state in five ECHR's cases concerning migration issues. In the case of *Singh v the Czech Republic*⁸⁰³, the ECHR found the length of expulsion custody of 2.5 years excessive, disproportionate and giving rise to violation of Art. 5 § 1 of the European Convention. Singh case had no impact other than enforcement of the ECHR just satisfaction award.⁸⁰⁴

Decision in case *Rashed v Czech Republic*⁸⁰⁵ declared violation of Art. 5 § 1, 4 of the European Convention due to insufficient legal grounds for detention of the applicant, an asylum seeker of Egyptian nationality. The ECHR's ruling highlighted undesirable practice of detentions of asylum seekers in transit areas of international airports for longer period of time in inappropriate living conditions, but also criticised prolonged detention of the applicant in legally undefined category of detention facility, 'extended transit areas'.⁸⁰⁶ Together with other national cases challenging legality of detention in the 'extended' transit areas, Rashed case led to amendment of section 73 of the Act on the Residence of Foreign Nationals.⁸⁰⁷ Therefore, any further violation ⁸⁰⁴ The case concerned Indian nationals who were found guilty of a crime and sentenced to expulsion for unlimited time period. They were kept in expulsion custody for more than 2.5 years, while the appropriate authorities were supposed to make practical arrangements for their removal, but remained mostly inactive.

⁸⁰⁵ Application n. 298/07 [2008] ECHR <hudoc.echr.coe.int> accessed September 02 2017.

⁸⁰⁶ The applicant applied for asylum in a transit area of an international airport. The law prescribed that he had to be moved from the transit area to a regular asylum facility 5 days after filing. The deadline was missed by the Ministry of Interior. He was then unlawfully moved to a detention facility that was purportedly 'extended' transit area of the international airport that was in fact a detention centre with significantly more restrictive rules than asylum centre. The ECHR adopted the Public Defender of Right's view that detention in transit space of the international airport causes significant restrictions on individual's human rights and should be used restrictively. Moreover, it found there was no effective means of remedy for the applicant to object the applicant's unlawful detention and to secure immediate release. The ECHR awarded the applicant pecuniary damages.

based on the same circumstances as in Rashed case has been prevented by merely technical amendment of the law.⁸⁰⁸

The case *Budrevich v Czech Republic*⁸⁰⁹ brought a minor amendment as well, that was materialised in a new section 23c of the Asylum Act.⁸¹⁰ In its ruling, the ECHR noted that courts and the Ministry of Interior in multiple proceedings ignored well-established information suggesting that if his expulsion had been carried out, the applicant would have been exposed to treatment contrary to Art. 3 of the European Convention.

In Buishvili v Czech Republic,⁸¹¹ the applicant was also trapped in the transit area, while his appeals against orders barring his entry were unsuccessful. The ECHR found his situation amounted to detention; however, he did not have any effective remedy against unlawful detention securing immediate release. Moreover, due to lack of effective remedy with automatic suspensive effect, this time against a decision on manifestly unjustified asylum request, the ECHR found violation in Diallo v Czech Republic,⁸¹² too. In both cases, just satisfaction was enforced,⁸¹³ in Diallo case in the form of friendly settlement declaration.

5.3. Implementation of Selected ECHR's Leading Cases on Migrants into Czech Legal Order and Practice

Finally, we focus on some of the most painstaking legal issues faced by Czech courts in the context of human ECHR migration case-law and human rights' protection. Gradual development of judgements leading to ban of Dublin transfers⁸¹⁴ to Hungary emerged over the critical year 2015. After some contradictory judgments from regional courts, the Supreme Administrative settled on the opinion that these transfers are prevented by the existence of systemic flaws in Hungarian asylum system, directly applying M. S. S. v Belgium and Greece.⁸¹⁵ The current discussion among (and inside) the courts also focuses on the question of when the competent authorities should evaluate existence of systemic flaws that would not only make the Dublin transfer unlawful, but also render unlawful the asylum seeker's detention prior to the transfer.⁸¹⁶

Last but not least, the issue of detention of minors was repeatedly under scrutiny by courts and the Public Defender of Rights.⁸¹⁷ Recently, the Constitutional Court relied on the ECHR's A. B. and others v France [2016], to rule that detention minors in a facility for detention of foreigners,

6. How have the recommendations of the European Commission against Racism and Intolerance and of national human rights bodies concerning the integration of migrants been implemented?

6.1. Recommendations of ECRI

The European Commission against Racism and Intolerance issued its latest report on the Czech Republic in 2015, during the fifth monitoring cycle. Although the monitoring report mostly deals with the Roma minority and related issues, it also repeatedly mentions the third-country nationals.

The conclusion of the ECRI report concerning the third-country nationals’ integration reads as follows: „ECRI is not aware of any major problems hindering immigrants’ integration in the Czech Republic, apart from the occasional xenophobic expression from certain political figures (...) (...) it welcomes the setting up of regional Integration Support Centres, which appear to function well and provide useful assistance for foreigners.“⁸¹⁹

Furthermore, the report appreciates the quality of the four existing Asylum Integration Centres, nevertheless, the ECRI criticizes the fact that those are situated in the remote, rural locations, where finding a job or an accommodation is particularly challenging to the migrants. The report specifically points out that one of the Asylum Integration Centres is located in the Roma neighbourhood, suffering from high unemployment rate of the surrounding area.⁸²⁰

On basis of the previous finding, the ECRI proposes a recommendation to move the Asylum Integration Centres to the greater cities, where the migrants could have better prospects of successful integration. Although the Czech executive has not relocated any of the Asylum Integration Centres yet – and nothing indicates that it has an interest to do so – there have been a political pressure from the municipal and regional level, aimed at closing the Asylum Integration Centre in Přebuz, the Roma neighbourhood in the suburb of the Czech city Ústí nad Labem.⁸²¹ The remaining three Asylum Integration Centres – located in the municipalities of Brno, Havířov and Jaroměř – are likely to remain in operation.

6.2. National human rights bodies

There have been a plenty of various non-governmental human rights organisations that entirely or partially cover the agenda of migration and asylum-seeking in the Czech Republic. The Consortium of Migrants Assisting Organizations in the Czech Republic serves as a platform for their coordination. In 2015, multiple organisations under the umbrella of the Consortium issued a common so-called Migration Manifesto⁸²², a document in which they offered several specific policy recommendations that dealt inter alia with the issue of migrants' integration.

Manifesto, in tune with the ECRI report, welcomes the existence of the Asylum Integration Centres. In general, the common voice of the Czech migrants assisting organizations, expressed by the Manifesto, appreciates the evolution of integration policies in the past two decades.

Nevertheless, that is not free of any pitfalls. Manifesto criticizes the lack of attention given to the integration issue on the local (municipal) level.⁸²³

This goes hand in hand with a fact that municipalities often do not have necessary funds for proper integration policies in their municipal budgets. In consequence, the integration policies are overwhelmingly created on the state level and thus represent a „one-size-fits-all“ solution, putting insufficient emphasis on the local differences.

Thus, one of the first policy recommendations made by Manifesto is to enhance the involvement of the Municipal Offices and Regional Offices to the integration policy.⁸²⁴ Additionally, in terms of institutional responsibilities for carrying out the integration agenda, Manifesto suggests to move the integration issue from the Ministry of Interior's agenda to the Ministry of Labour and Social Affairs, arguing that this institutional shift might help changing the dominant perception of the immigrants' integration from the security-related to the employment-centered.⁸²⁵

Manifesto also believes that the Government's Integration Policy should be more inclusive and count on the migrants within the other EU Member States and Third-Country Nationals without the residence permit as well. Furthermore, Manifesto proposes that state officials should, as a part of their professional education programmes, take courses on intercultural communication and intercultural competences.⁸²⁶

The latter subpart of the Manifesto's Integration chapter is called „Gradual Acquiring of Rights“ and mentions that immigrants should be given better prospects of gaining permanent residence permit, state citizenship and so forth. Manifesto also regrets efforts aimed at increasing the threshold needed to be granted residence permits, which can be exemplified by the motion to take obligatory knowledge tests as part of the procedure. Manifesto emphasizes its recommendation to legally enable a regularization of the irregular migrants' residence, on an individual basis.⁸²⁷

The Government of the Czech Republic in its 2016 resolution devoted a special chapter to the regional and local integration efforts. It highlighted the fact that the Ministry of Interior had developed and financially supported the municipal integration activities programmes which aim at improving the relationship between migrants and the host communities.⁸²⁸ The Ministry even published a special Guideline that should help municipalities in the process of applying for support from the state integration assistance funds.⁸²⁹ Although the programme deemed successful by the Czech government, the persisting problem is a reluctance of greater number of municipalities to take part in it.⁸³⁰ Despite the continuing involvement of the Ministry of Labour and Social Affairs in the fulfilment of the integration programmes, the main coordinating body responsible for integration remains the Ministry of Interior. Concerning the recommendation to include other migrant categories (EU nationals and irregular migrants) into the scope of the integration programmes, Government identifies the citizens of other EU Members States as a „complementary target group“⁸³¹, while the category of undocumented migrants was not mentioned in the document, indicating that the Czech authorities intend to strictly insist on the lawful, registered residence as a necessary pre-condition of eligibility for any further rights and entitlements. The document also mentions a support of intercultural education of the officials in charge of processing the migration agenda.⁸³²

7. How is migrants' right to access to healthcare regulated within the national legislation?

7.1. Separation of the Health Insurance

According to the national legal regulation, health insurance could be divided into 4 groups: public health insurance, commercial health insurance for foreigners, reimbursement of the health care based on international documents and reimbursement of the health care by the state outside the extent of public health insurance.⁸³³

7.2. Public Health Insurance

7.2.1. Participation in the Public Health Insurance System

According to Act of Public Health Insurance⁸³⁴, the right to participate in the system of public health insurance have:

- persons with permanent residence in the territory of the Czech Republic
- foreigners without permanent residence, who are employees of an employer, who has seat or permanent residence in the territory of the Czech Republic.

According to Asylum Act⁸³⁵ the right to participate in the system of public health insurance have:

- applicants of granting the international protection and their children, if their place of birth is the territory of the Czech Republic (§88 Asylum Act), to this category are included foreigners, who are placed into an asylum establishment (§87a Asylum Act)

7.2.2. Rights and Duties of Insureds

Rights and Duties of Insureds are inherent in part four of the Act of Public Health Insurance. Concretely §11 is focused on rights of Insureds. Here is included the right to Health Insurance Company of insured's choice and also the right to health service provider of his choice. An Insured has right to health care, health preparations and special food without direct reimbursement, which are paid by his health insurance company in extent of the Act of Public Health Insurance. If an Insured has doubts, that the health care was not provided in appropriate way, he could file a complaint according to Health Services Act⁸³⁶, part eight – complaints.

Duties are specified in §12 of the Act of Public Health Insurance. The main duty is to pay for the health insurance. Every Insured is obligated to pay for the health insurance. According to the Act of Public Health Insurance §4, payers could be divided into 3 groups:

- Insureds specified in §5 – especially (foreign) self-employed persons
- Employers
- State – in case of foreigners with the legality of residence in the territory of the Czech Republic for the purpose of provision temporary protection
- in case of applicants of granting the international protection, their children born in the territory, foreigners with visa over 90 days for the purpose of the residence toleration and their children

Another Insureds' duty is notification duty (especially the exchange of the insurance company, starting new employment, birth of a baby etc.), avoid behaviour of conscious health damage, undergo preventive health examination etc.

7.3. Commercial Health Insurance for Foreigners

Commercial Health Insurance relates to those, who are not able to participate in public health insurance – self-employed persons, persons without authorization to residence in the territory of the Czech Republic or students without permanent residence.

Commercial Health Insurance includes two types of insurance: insurance of urgent and unsuspensive health care (180j/1) and complex health insurance (180j/7) according to Act on the Residence of Foreign Nationals in the Czech Republic⁸³⁷.

Insurance of urgent and emergency health care is compatible with the certificate of travelling health insurance. Insured is covered for expenses related only with urgent and emergency health care, included with expenses for transport of an insured or his corpse to country of origin (or to state of his permanent residence). The amount of arranged limit for one insurance event is at least 60 000 € (the amount depends on the insurance company, which is the insurance arranged with).

Complex health insurance means provided health care to insured only by contractual health provider of insurer's company without direct reimbursement of expenses for treatment with purpose of observing the same state of health before and after agreement of health insurance. It includes emergency care, preventive health examinations twice a year and also care related with pregnancy of a mother and a childbirth.

According to Antidiscrimination Act⁹ in §1/1 h) everyone has right to equal services without discrimination in access to health care and its providing.

If someone's right to equal treatment is broken, he has right to demand that discriminatory behaviour will not be applied on him anymore and also to get adequate satisfaction. He can file a lawsuit to Constitutional Court of the Czech Republic for broken human rights or event to the European Court of Human Rights.

The Czech health insurance system does not have special programme for migrants in general and everything arises from the Regulation No 883/2004 and 987/2009 of the European Parliament and of the Council.

7.4. Reimbursement of the Health Care Based on International Documents

Health care can be also provided to foreigners based on bilateral international agreements on cooperation in the healthcare sector. These persons are not a part of public health insurance, only the care is covered according to regulation of concrete agreement. These concrete states are Bosnia and Herzegovina (based on international agreement between the government of the Czech Republic and Socialistic Federative Republic of Yugoslavia) and Cuba (based on international agreement between the government of the Czech Republic and the government of the Cuban Republic). The foreigner has to prove the nationality.

Based on international agreements on social security with states: Montenegro, Macedonia, Serbia, Turkey and Croatia can foreigner draw health care for free, but at first he has to submit the appropriate form made out by his insurance institution, or 'The Confirmation of Registration', with which can the insured seeking health care identify himself.⁸³⁸

7.5. Reimbursement of the Health Care by the State Outside the Extent of Public Health Insurance

In some cases is health care covered for foreigners by Czech state. These cases are outside the extent of public health insurance and also outside of international agreements. This special situation is specified in Act on the Residence of Foreign Nationals in the Czech Republic, section Health Services during Foreigner's securing in the territory.⁸³⁹

In § 176/1 are specified services, which have to be provided in case of unsuspensive care, if the foreigner's life is immediately in jeopardy, if not providing health services will cause permanent pathological changes, suffering and pain or will lead to death or will lead to changes of foreigner's behaviour, which could put in danger himself or his surroundings. The health services have to be provided in cases related with pregnancy or childbirth, except of abortion of foreigner's request.

Refusal or failure to provide healthcare to human, whose life is in jeopardy, is a criminal act according to Criminal Code §150⁸⁴⁰.

8. How do migrant children benefit from the right to education under your national legislation (Article 2 of the first Protocol to the ECHR)?

The right to education belongs into obligations arising out of the 1st Protocol to the European Court of Human Rights, concretely based on the 2nd Article, which says: 'No one can be denied the right to education.' Czech national legal regulation modifies the principles of education in Article 33, Charter of Fundamental Rights and Freedoms⁸⁴¹. The stress is put on the equality of the educational opportunities and the access to education for free.

The modification concerns the right to education for migrants proceeds from the Asylum Act [Zákon o azylu]⁸⁴² 80 (4), which says: 'Applicants for the international protection have an access to the education according to conditions specified in the Education Act⁸⁴³.'

8.1. Primary Education

The Educational Act separates foreigners into two groups – 1. Citizens of the European Union and their dependents and 2. Citizens of the countries out of the European Union.

However, the Act guarantees equal access to the basic education to all children regardless of the country of origin from and also in case when there is no proof of the legality to residence in the territory of the Czech Republic. The Primary Schools are not allowed to consider the authorization to residence, every compulsory education aged child is allowed to attend the primary school.

8.1.1. Compulsory Education

According to the Education Act 36 (2), the compulsory education is applied to the citizens of the Czech Republic, to citizens of another member state of the EU, who stay in the territory of the Czech Republic longer than 90 days and also to other foreigners, who are allowed to stay in the territory of the Czech Republic permanently or temporarily longer than 90 and to applicants of a grant of the international protection.

8.1.2. Preparation for integration to school

The preparation for integration to primary education includes the education of the Czech language and is without any fee for children of the citizens of the EU and for children of those who has the permit to stay in the territory of the Czech Republic, as it arises from the Education Act 20 (5). The preparation is provided by the competent Regional Authority of the child's place of the residence.

8.2. High School Education

The access to high school education is not guaranteed by international documents. According to the Education Act of the Czech Republic is the foreigner's admission to a high school conditioned by the approval of legality to reside on the territory of the Czech Republic. The applicant has to prove that he completed compulsory education and he has to produce the certificate of the equality of his previous school. Moreover, a student has to prove the knowledge of the Czech language to study for free by interview.

If the foreign student applies to the first year of high school studies, the principal follows the Education Act in admission of new students except of the exam in Czech language. If the student applies to higher year, the principal has to take account of applicant's achieved studies and his ability in Czech language.

8.3. University Education

The access to university education arises from the Act of Universities⁸⁴⁴ (Zákon o vysokých školách). The condition for admission is to successfully complete the high school studies. Foreign students can attend the university regardless of the kind of legal residence. Foreign students have the same conditions to study as Czech students if they are able to study in Czech language. Otherwise they have to meet the costs from their own financial resources. However, according to the Act of Universities, there are possibilities to get a scholarship from public grants, university scholarship fund, governmental scholarship within the scope of international development help or the scholarship, which is consistent with international acts that the Czech Republic is engaged by.

9. How are foreign school and university diplomas recognised in your country (e.g. through national law under the CoE/UNESCO Convention on the Recognition of Qualifications concerning Higher Education in the European Region of 1997) and what are the practical procedures?

Although the legal framework of recognition of qualification is to large extent determined by the EU legislative⁸⁴⁵ and international agreements covering the issue, this analysis focuses solely on specific national law procedures and works with international instruments only when appropriate.

9.1. Recognition of Academic Qualification

Recognition of foreign university diplomas, meant any university education obtained outside of the Czech Republic, could be processed in several, to some extent different regimes. The appropriate regime is determined by existence of any international, multi- or bilateral agreement. These agreements establish more favourable treatment than the default procedure provided for in domestic legislation.⁸⁴⁶ In case of doubts whether such agreement exists between the Czech Republic and the foreign country where the diploma was obtained, applicants can refer to the Czech Ministry of Education⁸⁴⁷ or apply directly to it.⁸⁴⁸

9.1.1. Recognition under International Agreements

The Czech Republic is a signatory state to the Convention on the Recognition of Qualifications concerning Higher Education in the European Region of 1997 (hereinafter 'Lisbon Convention'). The Lisbon Convention is directly applicable to the recognition procedures in the Czech Republic in case the education is obtained in another signatory state. The recognition is to be granted unless substantial differences are found between foreign qualification and corresponding qualification in the Czech Republic. The competent authority to handle applications is the Ministry of Education. Otherwise, the process is governed by a procedure of the Higher Education Act,⁸⁴⁹ in connection with the Administrative Procedure Code,⁸⁵⁰ as further described in section 9.1.2.

The most privileged recognition regime is provided under a limited number of bilateral agreements.⁸⁵¹ They provide for mutual equivalence of academic diplomas obtained in the two ⁸⁴⁵ Limited to the issue of recognition of professional qualification.

⁸⁴⁶ Generally, international agreements take precedence over domestic legislative acts. See art. 10 Constitution 1993 [Ústava České republiky]. The precedence is further confirmed in section 106 law n. 111/1998 (Higher Education Act) 1998 [zákon o vysokých školách].

⁸⁴⁷ The Ministry of Education also provides comprehensive information on recognition of academic qualification on their website in English, which served as a main source of information for this piece. See Ministry of Education, 'Academic Recognition' (Ministry of Education, February 9 2016) <<http://www.msmt.cz/eu-and-international-affairs/academic-recognition>> accessed July15 2017 [English]. Additionally, an information booklet in English was released in July 2017, available at <<http://www.msmt.cz/file/42615/>> accessed August 25 2017.

signatory states, or establish more favourable procedures for recognition of academic qualification between the Czech Republic and the other concerned state.⁸⁵²

9.1.2. National Recognition Procedure Legislation

9.1.2.1. Generally about the Recognition Procedure

The last regime represents 'default procedure' in case none of the above mentioned is applicable. It would arguably be the most frequent one in cases of applicants from non-European countries, including international protection beneficiaries. Rules are set in section 89 and following of the Higher Education Act.

In order to obtain recognition of a university diploma or other qualification (e.g. a part of university studies), a formal application in writing is needed. There is no binding form to be used, but the Ministry of Education provides recommended form⁸⁵³ for applicant's convenience. Generally, the application should include, besides the request for recognition: basic information about the applicant (name, address, date of birth); original or legally attested copy of diploma, diploma supplement or other certificate issued by a foreign university (certified translation into Czech could be required); copy of a list of completed courses, if requested (to prove content of the studies); and date and signature of the applicant.⁸⁵⁴

Besides certified translation, it could be requested to verify the diploma by legalization or apostila⁸⁵⁵ (whichever is applicable), unless the Czech Republic waived the requirement for verification.⁸⁵⁶

9.1.2.2. Special Rules Applicable to International Protection Beneficiaries

Concerning applicants who were granted international protection status, either in the Czech Republic or any other EU member state, additional rules apply as to the documents required. It is understood that providing documentary evidence of qualification could be impossible for international protection beneficiaries. In their case, even personal statement or any other means of proving qualification is sufficient.⁸⁵⁷ They are also entitled to treatment similar to the Czech nationals.

⁸⁵² In case of Slovenia, Hungary and Poland, diplomas and other certificates of qualifications covered under the agreement could be used without any formal process of recognition. Academic qualification obtained in Slovakia is recognized as equal to qualification obtained in the Czech Republic without any formalities, with some specific rules. In case of agreement with Germany, a formal application is necessary for recognition of qualification.

⁸⁵⁶ Section 90 of Higher Education Act.

⁸⁵⁷ This provision reflects the requirement under Art. VII of the Lisbon Convention.

9.1.2.3. Procedural Rules

The application should be filed with competent authority. That could be either any public university that provides study program similar to the one the applicant graduated from,⁸⁵⁸ the Ministry of Interior or the Ministry of Defence (in case of security forces oriented qualification). The Ministry of Education decides on competence of other bodies, serves as appellate body and issues decision on recognition when delegated the competence by an international agreement. The procedure as such is governed by procedural rules of the Administrative Procedure Code. Official language of the proceedings is Czech; costs for interpreting/translating are born by the applicant.⁸⁵⁹

Once the application is delivered to the competent authority, administrative fee of 3,000 CZK⁸⁶⁰ is payable in order to process the application. The authority then examines the application's formalities and determines whether the foreign qualification matches qualification requirements in the Czech Republic without differences in substantial features. Only when substantial differences are found, the application is to be dismissed by the public body.⁸⁶¹ Otherwise, a decision on recognition is issued to the applicant in time limit of 30 days since the application was filed (60 days in difficult circumstances of the case).⁸⁶²

As to remedies available, the applicant has a right to appeal within 15 days; there is no filing fee. Appeal in writing should contain specific reasons why the decision should be overruled.⁸⁶³ The competent appellate body is the Ministry of Education.⁸⁶⁴ Further remedy could be sought through an administrative court, based on an action against the administrative decisions⁸⁶⁵ filed within two months from the appellate decision's announcement.

9.2. Recognition of Other Education

The process of recognition of primary or secondary education is regulated by the Education Act⁸⁶⁶ and is to some extent similar to the process described above. Generally, in order to obtain recognition, an applicant needs to prove qualification that has no substantial differences from qualification obtained in the Czech Republic. The competent body is Regional Authority. It either confirms that the education obtained abroad equals to the Czech one (based on

See case n. 6 As 153/2014 [2015] Supreme Administrative Court <<http://www.nssoud.cz>> accessed August 28 2017.

10. How is participation of migrants in political decisions regulated in your national legislation? Are they legally allowed to participate in their country of residence the same way as in their country of origin?

In the Czech Republic, political rights are protected inter alia under the Charter of Fundamental Rights and Freedoms (hereinafter 'the Charter'). The Charter distinguishes between beneficiaries of respected rights – as it refers to 'all' natural, respectively legal persons, or 'citizens'. Full scope of political rights is granted only to Czech nationals.⁸⁶⁸ Non-nationals' political rights are restricted, depending on immigration status of a specific person (a short or long term stay or a permanent residency permit), country of origin and foreign citizenship respectively.⁸⁶⁹

In late 2015, the Czech Republic ratified (after 15 years from signature) the Council of Europe's Convention on the Participation of Foreigners in Public Life at Local Level (hereinafter 'the Convention').⁸⁷⁰ The ratification the Convention did not significantly upgrade non-nationals' political rights, since a declaration reserving right not to apply parts of the Convention relating to consultative bodies and right to vote was filed; other binding commitments of the Convention had already been met in the national legislation.⁸⁷¹ The government's stances towards non-nationals' political participation in their country of origin is neutral and there are neither facilitating nor inhibiting measures in place.

10.1. Political Rights

According to the Charter, freedom of expression, right to information, right to petition and freedom of peaceful assembly⁸⁷² are fully granted to 'all' regardless of their citizenship.⁸⁷³

Concerning the right of association,⁸⁷⁴ non-nationals' right of political association in political parties is effectively excluded. Even though not expressly stated in the Charter, non-nationals

⁸⁶⁷ Section 108 and following Education Act.

⁸⁶⁸ Therefore, this chapter works with term 'non-national', covering all foreign citizens residing in the Czech Republic, regardless of legal basis of their stay, instead of 'migrant'.

⁸⁶⁹ Refugees and other international protection beneficiaries do not enjoy any more favourable treatment. They are granted permanent residency permit. See section 76 of Asylum Act.

⁸⁷² Art. 17 and following of the Charter.

⁸⁷³ In case of freedom of assembly, the Charter in its Art. 19 does not specify who benefits from it. The Assembly Act uses term 'citizens', however, there is consensus that all natural persons enjoy freedom of assembly regardless of their nationality. See law n. 84/1990 (Assembly Act)1990 [zákon o právu shromažďovací]; Eliška Wagnerová et al., *Ústava základních práv a svobod. Komentář*² (1st ed. Wolters Kluwer 2012) 462 [Czech].

could not become members of any political party, based on provisions of the law.⁸⁷⁵ Public Defender of Rights' office criticised this provision as discriminatory against other EU member states' nationals.⁸⁷⁶ Additionally, some authors pointed out possible violation of Art. 11 of the European Convention.⁸⁷⁷ So far, this problematic issue has not undergone scrutiny of the Constitutional Court. In its other aspects, e.g. economic or social rights, freedom of association is not restricted and could be enjoyed by all, regardless of nationality of residency status.

10.1.1. Right to Vote

Generally, right to vote in parliamentary, presidential and regional elections remains strictly limited to Czech citizens. However, there are significant differences in the national law's treatment of different groups of migrants, based on foreign nationality of the individual.

Regulation of elections for the European Parliament and municipal elections allows exceptions based on international agreement.⁸⁷⁸ Such international agreement is currently only EU primary law,⁸⁷⁹ providing that right to vote (both in active and passive form) for these elections is also granted to all EU member states' nationals. In case of municipal elections, the national law additionally requires permanent residency status as a condition. Later, judicial interpretation relaxed the relatively strict condition, deciding also temporary residence in the municipality gives rise to the right to vote.⁸⁸⁰ As a result, both temporary a permanent residence enables all EU member states nationals to participate in the European and municipal elections.

For regional and parliamentary elections, however, EU member states nationals' position does not differ from other non-nationals and their right to vote is excluded. As a result, both chambers of the Parliament and all regional assemblies consist only of Czech nationals.

It follows that third country nationals have considerably different legal position when compared to EU member states' nationals, who enjoy more favourable treatment. This fact was also criticised by the Public Defender's office as unjustifiably different treatment of third country nationals, proposing granting right to vote on municipal level to third country nationals too.⁸⁸¹

⁸⁸⁰ In a precedent case, Regional court in Brno decided that a Slovak citizen had a right to vote in municipal election even though he did not obtain permanent residency permit. He lived in the specific city on the basis of called temporary residence. From the court's perspective, the above cited provision breached the EU law, so the court the EU law directly, against the national law's language. See case n. 64 A 6/2014 [2014] Regional Court in Brno <http://nssoud.cz/files/EVIDENCNI_LIST/2014/64A_6_2014_20140919133208_prevedeno.pdf> accessed July 21 2017 [Czech].

The government's 2016 integration strategy paper identified lack of right to vote as one of the key obstacles to deeper political integration of migrants, both on national and local level.⁸⁸² Despite highlighting intensive political debate on broadening the scope of beneficiaries in 2016, the 2017 paper does not anticipate any development and focuses on local participative projects not involving the right to vote.⁸⁸³

10.1.2. Civil Service in State Agencies

Right to hold (not elected) office in public administration was considerably broadened with new Civil Service Act.⁸⁸⁴ The act is applicable to most positions in state administrative bodies. Under the new act, only certain positions requiring Czech citizenship as compulsory could be identified by the government in accordance with public interest. Identified positions usually involve high ranking officials in top levels of government, especially in diplomacy and other strategic areas.⁸⁸⁵ Except for them, all other positions in public administration are open to other EU or European Economic Area member states' nationals as well.⁸⁸⁶ On the contrary, other third country nationals are excluded from positions regulated under the Civil Service Act.

10.2. Other forms of Political Participation

Besides the traditional catalogue of political rights, legal instruments and institutional infrastructure addressing the issue of political participation and representation of non-nationals in political decision-making process remains scarce. The reason is that national legislation distinguishes between ethnical minorities and national minorities. The Charter grants minority rights (art. 24, 25) solely to national minorities that were acknowledged by the state. National minority rights include, among language and other cultural rights, also provisions guaranteeing political representation outside elected representative bodies.⁸⁸⁷ In order to be considered a member of a national minority, one has to identify as a member and hold Czech citizenship cumulatively. That means non-nationals could under no circumstances benefit from minority rights.

On the governmental level, this deficit was reflected in establishment of the Human Rights Council's Committee for Rights of Foreigners, which task is counselling the government on new policies and legislation.⁸⁸⁸ Currently, its members consist partly of public administrative officials and partly of members of public, mostly representing non-governmental organisations focusing on integration of migrants. Consultative bodies on local level, as foresaw in Chapter B of the Convention, do not exist.

Overall, many local NGOs, among them the League of Human Rights and Organization for Aid to Refugees, raised criticism of legal framework regulating political rights of non-nationals, arguing that due to lack of political rights enabling political participation on all levels of government, level of political integration of migrants in the Czech Republic remains low.⁸⁸⁹

11. How can migrants acquire citizenship in the country? Is there a possibility of double nationality?

Czech Republic is bounded with the Convention and Protocol relating to the Status of Refugees from 1951, which says in the Art.34: 'The Contracting States shall as far as possible facilitate the assimilation and naturalization of refugees. They shall in particular make every effort to expedite naturalization proceedings and to reduce as far as possible the charges and costs of such proceedings.'⁸⁹⁰

Other conventions are Convention Relating to the Status of Stateless Persons, Convention on the Reduction of Statelessness and finally the European Convention on Nationality from 1997, valid in the Czech Republic from 1st July 2004.

The fundamental national regulation related to acquiring and losing the nationality is inherent in Art.12 of the Constitution of the Czech Republic which says: 'Acquiring and losing the nationality of the Czech Republic requests the Act about the Nationality'⁸⁹¹ and no one cannot be denaturalized against his will.'

11.1. Acquiring of the Nationality

11.1.1. Acquiring of the nationality by birth

The Czech Republic legislative respects principle ius sanguinis – if at least one of the child's parents is the citizen of the Czech Republic, the child acquires automatically the Czech nationality. Exception of this principle is in using ius soli in the case the child is born to stateless parents. Using this principle reduces statelessness.

⁸⁹¹ Law n.186 (Act about the Nationality of the Czech Republic) 2013 [Zákon o státním občanství České republiky].

11.1.2. Adoption

A child acquires the Czech nationality after the adoption, if at least one adoptive parent is the citizen of the Czech Republic.

11.1.3. Establishing the Paternity

According to the Act about the Nationality a child born out of marriage to mother with other nationality or stateless and father with Czech citizenship, acquires the Czech nationality:

- §6 by the date when the judgement about establishing the paternity becomes effective
- §7 by the date of concurrent statement of both parents about establishing the paternity

11.1.4. Finding on the territory of the Czech Republic

A child younger than 3 years old found in the territory of the Czech Republic acquires the Czech nationality, if it is not possible to find out his identity by the day of finding.⁸⁹²

11.1.5. Naturalization

The conditions of naturalization are regulated in the Act about the Nationality 11-15. The applicant has to observe all of the conditions at the same time. About the naturalization decides the Ministry of the Interior, however even when the applicant observes all of the conditions, he has no legal claim to the naturalization.

11.1.5.1. Conditions

Act about the Nationality, §13

The Nationality of the Czech Republic is able to observe, if the applicant is integrated to the Czech society, especially if the integration is in family, work or social point and the applicant observes the conditions specified in §14. It is not able to observe the citizenship to an applicant, who endangers the safety of the Republic or its sovereignty or its democratic principles.

Act about the Nationality, §14

According to the Act about the Nationality, §14, the conditions are divided into 8 subsections:

- The naturalization could be accorded, if the applicant has the permission to permanent residence:
 - for at least 5 years
 - in case of the EU citizen for at least 3 years

11.2. The Nationality Dualism

The amendment to the Act about the Nationality brought the possibility of double and more nationality.

⁸⁹²Law n.186 (Act about the Nationality of the Czech Republic) 2013 [Zákon o státním občanství České republiky]

Every foreigner, who has the permission for permanent residence in the territory of the Czech Republic, can receive the citizenship of the Czech Republic, based on an exception of the Ministry of Interior and the condition about losing previous nationality is not valid anymore.

The decision of the Ministry of Interior about not losing the original citizenship is possible in case of acquiring special benefit by naturalization of the foreigner or if the intern regulations of the original state do not permit losing of the nationality.

In other cases is the decision of the Ministry of Interior possible only if the applicant has the permission for permanent residence in the territory of the Czech Republic for at least 5 years, lives in the territory legally for at least 20 years, has not been convicted to a criminal act and he has real and deep relation to the Czech Republic.

12. How is your country assisted by EU programmes and funding with regard to the integration of migrants?

Until 2013, the Czech Republic together with the other Member States received support from the General programme Solidarity and Management of Migration Flows (SOLID), which included the following four composing parts: (i) European Fund for Integration of Third-Country Nationals (EIF), (ii) External Borders Fund (EBF), (iii) Return Fund (RF) and (iv) European Refugee Fund (ERF).

For the period 2014-2020, the above mentioned structure was transformed. The new SOLID programme entails only the two financial mechanisms: Asylum, Migration and Integration Fund (AMIF) and the Internal Security Fund (ISF). The past practice of submitting national programmes on annual basis was substituted by the multiannual national programmes that lays down the priorities for the entire time period covered by the SOLID general programme. The national programmes are subject to approval by the European Commission and the Czech Republic ranked among the first countries whose national programmes were approved.⁸⁹³

AMIF, which took over majority of the former EIF, RF and ERF agenda, strives to achieve four main objectives: asylum policy, integration, return policy and solidarity. The Czech Republic was given 27 685 177 Euro from the AMIF for the period 2014-2020.

Second component of the current SOLID programme – the Internal Security Fund – encompasses the following two subparts.⁸⁹⁴

Firstly, the Internal Security Fund Borders (ISF-B) that covers nearly the same portfolio as the former EBF, putting emphasis on external borders protection and visa policy. The Czech Republic received the total amount of 15 155 484 Euro for the purposes of the ISF-B.⁸⁹⁵

The second building block of the ISF is called the Internal Security Fund-Police (ISF-P). It has been a completely new area that was not represented in the precursor of the current SOLID. The ISF-P focuses on the area of police cooperation in internal matters, with particular attention given to fight against organized crime and protection of critical infrastructure. The Czech Republic has been entitled to the financial assistance amounting to 17 029 012 Euro under the ISF-P.⁸⁹⁶

The Czech national AMIF programme⁸⁹⁷ mentions the following priorities with regard to integration policy: language, economic self-sufficiency, orientation in the society and relations with its members. The Czech Republic already established twelve so-called Integration Support Centres that are in charge of facilitating the migration programmes on local and regional level. In the 2014-2020 funding period, the Czech Republic considers increasing support for the work of the Integration Support Centres as one of the main priorities.

The national AMIF programme further divides the key objectives in the area of integration into three groups⁸⁹⁸:

- Maintaining and developing regional Integration Support Centres;
- Assistance to Vulnerable Persons;
- Assistance in educational system; provision of legal counselling; support of self-sufficiency.

The national AMIF programme lists several specific, tangible examples how can be the funds from the programme used for the purposes of integration policies⁸⁹⁹:

- Maintaining and developing regional Centres;
- Social and legal counselling, i.e. advice and assistance in areas such as accommodation, means of subsistence, administrative and legal guidance, health, psychological and social care and employment;
- Provision of assistance to vulnerable persons (language courses, counselling, practical support, help in life difficult situations, assistance in dealing with bureaucracy);
- Measures supporting the introductory phase of the integration process, including measures raising the awareness of rights and obligations among the subjects of integration;
- Measures supporting participation in public activities, and their understanding of the core values enshrined in the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union;
- Measures focusing on education, esp. language training;

Conclusions

There has been a multitude of takeaways arising out of this legal research study. The Czech Republic translated the crucial international and European legal documents, such as the international Convention relating to the Status of Refugees or the European Qualification Directive. Apart from several relevant constitutional provisions, the bedrock of the Czech asylum-related legislation is the Asylum Act.

Department for Asylum and Migration Policy of the Ministry of Interior is the competent national authority responsible for asylum and migration-related proceedings. If an application is successful, either a temporary residence or a permanent residence permits can be awarded pursuant to the Residence of Aliens Act. The most important administrative agents and bodies, apart from already mentioned Department, are the Refugees Facilities Administration and the Alien Police Service. Migrants can also utilize multiple channels to protect their rights, either by means of the Public Defender of Rights or via the Committee for Foreigners' Rights.

So far, there have been five cases before the European Court of Human Rights that dealt with - among others - issues like excessive length of custody, legality of grounds for detention or deprivation of effective remedy. Nonetheless, ECRI in its latest publicized report has not found any major problems hindering immigrants' integration in the Czech Republic and resorted only to several minor objections related to the way asylum centres are being situated, in tune with the human rights organisations pointing on the need to move more attention to local and municipal level when it comes to integration agenda.

According to the Report on the Situation Regarding Migration, there have been almost 500,000 foreigners legally residing on the Czech territory at the moment. All of them are entitled to participate in the system of public health insurance and education. When it comes to academic qualifications obtained abroad, mutual recognition is guaranteed by Ministry of Education unless substantial differences are found.

All foreigners, regardless their residence or asylum application status, can also freely enjoy all the basic political rights such as freedom of expression, right to information, petition or peaceful assembly. One of the few exceptions is the voting right which is generally limited to the Czech citizens. However, the European and municipal elections enable participation of the other EU Member States' citizens.

The Act about the Nationality lists several options of acquiring the Czech citizenship, although the general rule is gaining citizenship by birth, the Act provides for subsequent acquisitions by means of adoption or naturalization. Czech Republic also utilizes the EU funds to strengthen its efforts related to migration agenda, with the General programme Solidarity and Management of Migration Flows (SOLID) being the cornerstone of the European financial support.

Introduction

The Danish legal system is largely based on civil law with statutory laws as the main legal source. However, case-law, constitutional norms, administrative practice and international obligations are also recognized as legitimate legal sources.

In order to prevent confusion while reading this report, it is important to highlight that the concept of a 'migrant' is not legally defined under Danish law. The Aliens Act, which is the only current Danish legislation in this particular area, uses instead the concept of an alien. The legal definition of an alien is negatively defined as any person without Danish citizenship.

The traditional Danish idea of a migrant is a person who has left his/her own country voluntarily, most often to find work, to marry or to study. There are of course also people who have been forced to leave their home, for example in relation to natural disasters, but they are still not recognized as refugees because they fall outside of the categories defined in the convention.⁹⁰⁰

1. How is the right to asylum regulated in national law? Give a description of the national regulations governing asylum; What is the procedure for granting asylum and who is responsible?

1.1. Introduction to asylum regulation in Denmark

Any foreign citizen has the right to request asylum in Denmark. The rules on asylum are provided in section 7 in the Aliens Act. As a consequence of the Danish opt-out arrangement, Denmark has preserved sovereignty concerning Justice and Home Affairs. Therefore, Denmark is not bound by the rules in the third part, title V in the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union (hereafter TFEU) or any other legislation based on this part of the Treaty. Even though Denmark has a parallel agreement with EU concerning the Dublin Regulation, Denmark is bound at an intergovernmental level.

Section 8 of the Aliens Act regarding the resettlement of refugees following an agreement with the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (Quota Refugees) will not be examined below because the agreement is not usually considered to be a central part of the Danish asylum legislation.⁹⁰¹

1.1.1. Convention Status

Denmark became a party to the Geneva Convention on 17th November 1952. Consequently, Denmark guarantees minimum of protection in compliance with the Convention. Convention status as a foundation for asylum is governed by section 7(1) of the Aliens Act and concerns individuals covered by the basic protections in Art. 1 of the Geneva Convention. The Convention defines a refugee as an individual with a "... well-founded fear of being persecuted for reasons of race, religion, nationality, membership of a particular social group or political opinion, [who] is outside the country of his nationality and is unable or, owing to such fear, is unwilling to avail himself of the protection of that country; or who, not having a nationality and being outside the country of his former habitual residence as a result of such events, is unable or, owing to such fear, is unwilling to return to it."⁹⁰² Section 7(1) incorporates this definition into Danish law. Accordingly, any individual falling within this definition has a right to be protected and be granted asylum in Denmark.

In addition to the incorporation of the Geneva Convention, section 7(1) also covers the non-refoulement principle set out in Art. 33 of the Convention. This principle is the foundation of the negative obligation for member states not to reject or otherwise enforce expulsion upon refugees protected by Art. 1 of the Convention. A residence permit for an individual granted asylum under section 7(1) of the Aliens Act is issued for a maximum of two years at a time.

1.1.2. Protected Status

Protected status is governed by section 7(2) of the Aliens Act. It is an addition to section 7(1) and expands the protection. Individuals covered by the provision are not considered refugees within the meaning of the Geneva Convention but still need protection. Previously, individuals covered by section 7(2) were regarded as refugees with de facto status. Up until 2002, protected status was granted to asylum seekers who were not covered by the Geneva Convention, but where similar circumstances would call for similar treatment of asylum seekers in fear of prosecution or abuse those asylum seekers should receive protection and not be forced to return to a potentially dangerous situation.

An amendment was adopted in 2002 that redefined when the protected status is to be applied. The preparatory works of this amendment explain that Denmark's international obligations should be used as a guideline for when to use protected status as a means to granting asylum. Multiple international conventions are the source for section 7(2) of the Aliens Act according to the preparatory works. Especially compliance with ECHR and the UN Convention against Torture as well as Art. 7 of the CCPR and Art. 37(a) of the CRC, were taken into consideration.

Individuals are granted protected status in situations where returning to their country of origin would mean facing capital punishment, torture or inhumane treatment or punishment.⁹⁰³ This section has a wording very similar to Art. 3 of the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights (hereafter ECHR):

"No one shall be subjected to torture or to inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment," and it is evident that this section is an expansion of the human rights non-refoulement regulation

in section 7(1).⁹⁰⁴ The Danish immigration authorities are obliged to take into account any case law from the European Court of Human Rights and apply the law accordingly.

This became evident in 2011 where the outcome of the case *Sufi and Elmi v. the United Kingdom*⁹⁰⁵ led to a wider interpretation of section 7(2) of the Aliens Act. Prior to this judgment, the protection was only applicable in case the asylum seekers due to an individual situation were subjected to personal threat or persecution. Sufi and Elmi v. the United Kingdom, in which it would have been a violation of Art. 3 if the applicants Mr. Sufi and Mr. Elmi were removed to Somalia due to the random and generalised violence they could be subjected to just by being present in certain regions of Somalia, obliged member states to take into account the current situation in the country and whether the mere presence in some regions would be a violation of Art. 3 of the ECHR. This development has resulted first and foremost in the wider interpretation of section 7(2) and subsequently of the new section 7(3) of the Aliens Act, which specifically applies to individuals who are not personally subjected to persecution or other mistreatment, but instead could be subjected to random and generalized violence. See description in Section 1.1.3 below.

When an asylum seeker is granted asylum based on their protected status, the residence permit is issued for a maximum of one year and after one year for a maximum of two years at a time.

1.1.3. Temporary Protected Status

Temporary Protected Status is a relatively recent addition to the Aliens Act and is governed by section 7(3). The explanatory notes to the Act explain that section 7(3) is partially the legislative outcome of the judgment in Sufi & Elmi v. UK and partially an attempt to adapt to the increasing number of refugees due to the war in Syria.⁹⁰⁶ It is worth noticing that this addition to the Act has resulted in a remarkably tightening of the rules concerning residence permits and family reunification and the wider interpretation of section 7(2) as described above would most likely have been sufficient to comply with the outcome of the judgment in Sufi & Elmi v. UK. The new provision was enacted on 18 February 2015 and granted some groups of refugees who were previously granted protected status under section 7(2) a so-called temporary protected status.

Temporary protected status is granted in situations where the asylum seeker faces capital punishment, torture or inhumane or degrading treatment or punishment due to severe instability and indiscriminate violence against civilians in their home country.⁹⁰⁷

When determining whether the individual asylum seeker is to be granted protected status or temporary protected status, the authorities will base their decision on an assessment of whether the asylum seeker's individual situation will require protection under section 7(2) or whether the situation in the asylum seeker's country will require protection under section 7(3). The temporary protected status allows a refugee to be granted asylum due to the disruption in their country of origin, whilst permitting the Danish immigration authorities to remove an individual to his or her country as soon as the situation in that particular country allow it. Therefore, the rules on residence permits are stricter than those on protected status. Residence permits are issued for a maximum of one year at a time. After three years the residence permit may be issued for a maximum of two years at a time.

The fifth ECRI report on Denmark criticizes the further tightening of the rules, especially concerning the access to family reunification for individuals with temporary protection status: “With regard to integration policies, ECRI notes that no wide-ranging reform of the rules for family reunification has taken place, as recommended as a matter of priority in its fourth report. On the contrary, the rules have been further tightened, including an extension of the waiting period for beneficiaries of temporary subsidiary protection before they can normally obtain family reunification to three years, in spite of criticism from international bodies, such as the UN Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination (CERD).”⁹⁰⁸

1.1.4. Exception

1.1.4.1. Dublin Regulations

Section 29a of the Aliens act says that an asylum seeker can be refused entry or transferred to another EU-member state under the Dublin Regulations or under an agreement or equivalent arrangement entered into between Denmark and one or more countries in connection with the Dublin Regulation. The Dublin Regulations gives the Danish authorities the opportunity to reject the application and transfer the alien to the responsible member state.

1.1.4.2. First Country of Asylum

The concept of first country of asylum is governed by section 7(4) of the Aliens Act, and allows rejection of asylum seekers in case the alien has already obtained sufficient protection in another country, or if the alien has close ties with another country where the alien must be deemed able to obtain sufficient protection. What lies in sufficient protection has not been defined and is based on an assessment by the Danish Immigration Service. As a minimum the asylum seeker is protected from refoulement, meaning forceful removal to a country, where his life or freedom would be threatened on account of his or hers race, religion, nationality, membership of a particular social group or political opinion. This is an exception to the asylum rules described above and can be applied even if the asylum seeker may otherwise be eligible for residence permit in Denmark.

1.2. Procedure for Granting Asylum

1.2.1. First Stage – Arrival and Registration

Any foreign citizen situated in Denmark has the right to apply for asylum, whether or not that individual is in Denmark legally. In order to obtain asylum an application must be submitted at a police station or at the reception Sandholm Accommodation Centre⁹⁰⁹. There the asylum seeker will be registered and questioned. The asylum seeker will then be assigned accommodation at an asylum centre. The application will then be sent to the Danish Immigration Service. The process can be divided into three stages.

Under section 48a(1) of the Aliens Act the Danish Immigration Service ought to make a decision on refusal of entry, transfer or retransfer, expulsion and, if occasion should arise, on the return of the alien as soon as possible.

The Danish Immigration Service is a directorate within the Danish Ministry of Immigration and Integration and is the first public authority to review the application for asylum. The Danish Immigration Service is authorized by law to make decisions on application for asylum⁹¹⁰.

The Danish Immigration Service will initially determine whether the Danish authorities are responsible for handling the case, whether the application should instead be handled by another country in accordance with the Dublin Regulation, or whether the asylum seeker's application for asylum can be handled by a safe country outside Europe⁹¹¹. If the asylum seeker's application is not rejected at this stage, the Danish authorities will proceed with the application process.

In case the asylum seeker's application is rejected, appeal against the decision can be brought before The Danish Refugee Appeals Board under section 53a(1)(i) of the Aliens Act.

The Refugee Appeals Board is an independent quasi-judicial administrative body composed of a Chairman, a Deputy Chairman and other members. The Danish Bar and Law Society or the Minister of Justice appoints the members of the Refugee Appeals Board on nomination⁹¹².

Simple majority makes the Refugee Appeals Boards' decisions. The Danish Refugee Appeals Board's decisions are final and cannot be appealed further. Any judicial review is, therefore, limited to legal and not evidential issues⁹¹³

1.2.2. Second Stage – Reviewing the Case

In the case that the asylum seeker's application appears to be manifestly unfounded, the Danish Immigration Service, shall submit the application to the Danish Refugee Council. Section 53b of the Aliens Act provides that the Danish Immigration Service can, after submission to the Danish Refugee Council, decide that an application cannot be appealed to the Refugee Appeals Board. An application can be manifestly unfounded if the asylum seeker claims an identity that is undoubtedly incorrect, if the reasoning for the asylum seeker's application clearly is not covered by section 7 of the Aliens Act, or if the asylum seeker is being evidently untrue about the reasons for seeking asylum.⁹¹⁴ The requirements for rejecting an application on the grounds that it is manifestly unfounded are all based on the premise that the motive for applying for asylum is obviously weak. This screening process provides a fast track process used for applications that are manifestly unfounded by making the decision to deny the application final.

If the application for asylum is not manifestly unfounded, it will most likely go through the standard procedure. The asylum seeker will hereafter be subjected to further questioning by the Danish Immigration Service. The questions seek to clarify the asylum seeker's motive for applying for asylum.

The second round of questioning forms the basis of the Danish Immigration Service's decision on whether to grant asylum or to reject the asylum application. It is usually a brief written decision. If the asylum application is rejected, the Refugee Appeals Board will automatically review it⁹¹⁵. The Refugee Appeals Board will make the decision to either uphold the decision of the Danish Immigration Services or to grant the applicant asylum. If the decision is upheld, it will ultimately lead to expulsion due to fact that the decisions of the Refugee Appeals Board are final.⁹¹⁶ If the asylum seeker is granted asylum, the Danish Immigration Service assigns the applicant to the municipal authorities.

1.2.3. Third Stage – Expulsion

If the application for asylum is rejected, it will ultimately lead to the compulsory return of the applicant to the country of origin if the applicant does not leave voluntarily. This situation is governed by section 32a, cf. section 31, of the Aliens Act. Section 31 of the Alien Act sets out that an Alien must not be returned to a country where he will be at risk of the death penalty or of being subjected to torture or inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment, or where the alien will not be protected against being sent on to such country it also sets out that an alien falling within section 7(1) of the Aliens Acts may not be returned to a country where he will risk persecution on the grounds set out in Art. 1(A) of the Convention Relating to the Status of Refugees (28 July 1951), or where the alien will not be protected against being sent on to such country. Section 31(1) reflects Art. 3 of ECHR which regulates the prohibition of torture, whilst section 31(2) reflects the above-mentioned non-refoulement principle.

If the Alien is protected by the above-mentioned regulations, they cannot be forced to return the country of origin and as result will have a de facto residence permit for as long as the above-mentioned regulation applies. The protection above does not apply if the alien is deemed a danger to national security or if, after a final judgment for a particularly dangerous crime, the alien must be deemed a danger to society.

Moreover, a deadline will be set for the expulsion as provided by section 33(1-2) of the Aliens Act. If Alien does not leave Denmark within the deadline he or she will be deemed an illegal Alien, and the Danish police can assist with the compulsory return.

2.1. Basis for Residence Permit

Traditionally, the Danish authorities have distinguished between applications for short-term stay and applications for permanent residence in Denmark. This temporal distinction is still of importance to legislation and administrative practice, as it delimits the scope of the two types of permission that constitutes the formal basis of residence. A stay of a maximum of 90 days generally requires a visa, according to sections 4-4(d) of the Aliens Act, if the alien comes from a country with a visa requirement. If the alien comes from a country exempt from the visa requirement, he or she only has the right to stay in Denmark for a maximum period of 90 days, according section 3 of the Aliens Act together with section 2(b) concerning the right for aliens granted a residence permit to stay in another Schengen country.⁹¹⁷

Residence for a period longer than 90 days generally requires a residence permit under section 5 of the Aliens Act. Both visa and residence permit grants the right to enter into the territory of Denmark provided that an alien without a residence permit or EU residence card or registration certificate is not refused entry in the cases specified in section 28(1)(i)-(vii) of the Aliens Act and according to sections 28(2) and 28(3) of the Act.⁹¹⁸ Substantial relaxations of the requirement regarding formal basis of entry and residence has been enforced. The judicial construction of the relaxations varies according to which group of citizens the alien originates from.⁹¹⁹

2.1.1. Residence Permit – Validity and Substance

Residence permits under sections 7-9f, 9i-9n and 9p of the Aliens Act may be granted with the possibility of permanent residence or with the purpose of temporary residence according to section 11(1) of the Aliens Act. The above-mentioned provisions regarding the substance and validity of residence permits do not apply to residence documents pursuant to EU Regulations, which contain special provisions relating to EU residence card and registration certificate, according to section 6 of the Aliens Act and part 6 of Executive Order no. 474 of 05 December 2011 on EU residence.⁹²⁰

According to section 15(1) of Executive Order no. 1197 of 26 September 2016, a residence permit under sections 7(1) and (2) and also sections 8, 9 and 9d of the Aliens Act is generally granted with the possibility of permanent residence in Denmark. In contrast, a residence permit under sections 7(3), 9a, 9c(3) and (5) and also sections 9i-9n and 9p of the Alien Act is granted with the purpose of temporary residence, according to section 15(6) of Executive Order no. 1197 of 26 September 2016. The granting of a residence permit under sections 9b, 9c(1), (2) and (4) and also 9e and 9f of the Aliens Act depends on a specific assessment whether the permit is granted with the purpose of permanent or temporary residence, as the specific purpose of the residence must be considered in particular when deciding on granting the permit, according to section 15(2) of Executive Order no. 1197 of 26 September 2016.⁹²¹

A permanent residence permit generally requires that the alien meets a number of conditions such as no criminal record, passed Danish language test and other integration-related matters and also that the person in question has no overdue debts to public authorities.

Special provisions apply to EU-citizens as the right of residence is provided directly in the EU Regulations and, in these cases; the issuing of residence documents is only for confirmatory reasons in accordance with section 41 of the Executive Order on EU Residence. An alien who has no right to stay in Denmark due to the lack of or an expired visa or residence permit must accordingly depart the country, according to section 30(1) of the Aliens Act. If this does not happen voluntarily, the police ensure the departure pursuant to section 30(2), which contains authority to enforce deportation if need be.⁹²²

2.2. Entering into Danish Territory

2.2.1. Nordic Citizens

Citizens of Finland, Iceland, Norway and Sweden are in general entitled to entry into and residence in the Kingdom of Denmark solely due to their citizenship, according to section 1 of the Alien Act. The right is not subject to a prior application or a granted permit.

However, the right of entry and residence is not absolute and conclusive. Section 32 of the Aliens Act provides that a Nordic citizen may be deported and be banned from entry regardless of the wording of the provisions of section 1. The right of residence may also be revoked as a result of a decision on repatriation because of the lack of sufficient financial resources needed for living expenses.⁹²³

2.2.2. Citizens and EU Regulations

Aliens who are citizens of an EU member state or are subject to the Agreement on the European Economic Area (hereinafter referred to as EU citizens) have rights in relation to entering Danish territory and taking short-term residence merely because of the nationality under section 2(1) and (2) of the Aliens Act. To some extent similar rules apply to members of the family.

However, this group of citizens is also subject to some requirements regarding the purpose of the stay and their activities in Denmark (employee, student, self-supporting etc.) if long-term residence in Denmark is applied for.⁹²⁴

It must be noted that also Nordic citizens may be entitled to entry and residence pursuant to EU Regulations, which for one thing can be of importance in relation to deportation.

In addition to the conditions for EU-citizens and their families, there are a number of possibilities for third-country nationals to enter Denmark according to EU law – for example due to the visa waiver under section 2(xvi) of the Visa Executive Order.^{925 926}

2.2.3. Other Aliens

Aliens who have no right of entry and residence in the capacity of their citizenship or under EU law must in general meet a number of requirements to be permitted entry into and residence in Denmark. Basically, there are three principal types of legal entry into Denmark for this group of aliens. A person can have the right of entry because of a residence permit, such as a residence permit issued by another Schengen country, according to section 2(5) of the Visa Executive Order section 2(5), a visa (or in certain cases a laissez-passer), or as a visa-exempted alien. In all cases a number of formal requirements are linked to possibility of entry, including travel documentation requirements, but in some cases the purpose of the entry also affects the possibility of actual entry even though the person concerned meets the formal requirements.⁹²⁷ Nevertheless, Denmark must, in some cases, permit an alien to enter the country due to international obligations even if the person in question does not meet the general requirements for entry, for example, if the alien claims to be protected by the UN Refugee Convention or to have rights pursuant to the European Human Rights Convention and that those convention rights will be violated if entry is refused.⁹²⁸

2.3. Visa

2.3.1. The Schengen Cooperation

For one thing the purpose of the Schengen cooperation is to create an area without internal borders and, therefore, passport and border controls have been abolished. This is complemented by general rules regarding entry into the Schengen Area at the external borders, including uniform rules regarding the issuing of visa to third-country nationals. The common rules are published in the Schengen Borders Code⁹²⁹ and a distinct framework is established on which standards must be applied to the external border control, including that the standards must prevent entry by third-country nationals if specified conditions are not met.

The proposed Regulation regarding the Schengen Borders Code falls within by the Danish Justice and Home Affairs opt-out from EU cooperation. In light of this, the Schengen Borders Code has been implemented in the law of the Kingdom of Denmark by Act no. 301 of 19 April 2006.⁹³⁰

The framework of the Schengen cooperation further specifies which third-country nationals must be in possession of a visa if crossing the external borders of the Schengen Area and which nationals who are exempted. Regulation no. 539/2001⁹³¹ specifies the third countries whose nationals must be in possession of a visa when crossing the external borders (the negative list) and the third countries whose nationals are exempted from this requirement (the positive list).⁹³² When deciding whether a third-country national must be in possession of a visa or not, the authorities look at the merits of each individual case for each individual country based on a number of criteria.

Exemption from the visa requirement is a politically desired commodity for several third countries. The list of countries is dynamic and for that reason the Regulation has been amended several times, because the assessment of the criteria changes continuously, for instance because of the general development in the individual countries.⁹³³

2.3.2. National Regulation

The above-mentioned regulations on the Schengen cooperation, including the Visa Code in particular, set the framework for the administration of issuing visas in the Kingdom of Denmark. However, the general regulations do allow each individual Schengen country some latitude and this is provided for by national legislation. Therefore, the aim is to achieve close local consular cooperation between the Schengen member states' consulates in the individual third countries, thereby taking the requirement of individual assessment on the risk of illegal immigration for each third country into account.⁹³⁴ The increasing demand regarding the possibility of subsequent identification of persons who are entering into the Schengen Area on a visa, in combination with the rules of the Dublin Regulation⁹³⁵ on the transfer of responsibility for examining applications from asylum seekers, cause individual member states to meet the requirement of observing an overall immigration-risk due to the belief that there is no immigration-risk for the member state itself.⁹³⁶

2.3.3. General Formal Conditions

To gain access to applying for a visa, a number of basic requirements must be fulfilled. An application must be submitted to the concerned member state under Art. 5 of the Visa Code. As a consequence of this, it is not possible to submit an application to a consulate of any member state. One reason for this is the wish to prevent "visa shopping" and in general to achieve a shorter processing time. Therefore, the application must be submitted to the member state whose territory constitutes the sole destination of the visit and if the visit includes more than one destination, the member state whose territory constitutes the main destination of the visit in terms of the length or purpose of stay, or if no main destination can be determined, the member state whose external border the applicant intends to cross in order to enter into the territory of the member states.⁹³⁷

If the application is submitted to the member state concerned, the relevant consulate must ascertain whether the application meets the conditions of admissibility⁹³⁸ pursuant to Art. 19(1) of the Visa Code and section 7 of the Visa Executive Order. The conditions are listed in Annex 1.

If the application does not meet the requirements to admissibility, the application is returned to the applicant without further examination pursuant to Art. 19(3) of the Visa Code. In exceptional cases, the consulate can decide to accept the application on humanitarian grounds or for reasons of national interest even though the application does not meet the formal requirements pursuant to Art. 19(4) of the Visa Code and section 7(9) of the Visa Executive Order. The decision is final and cannot be appealed.⁹³⁹

2.3.4. Examination of an Accepted Application

The consulate must assess whether a number of general entry conditions are met before issuing an Schengen visa pursuant to Art. 21 of the Visa Code. The conditions are listed in Annex 2.

If the requirements set out in Annex 2 are fulfilled, a discretionary examination is conducted. It is assessed whether the applicant presents a risk of illegal immigration or a risk to the security of the member state, and whether the applicant intends to leave the territory of the member state before the expiry of the visa applied for. In addition to the application, the knowledge of the local conditions and the specific country's immigration trends are to be considered.⁹⁴⁰

The Danish rules regarding the issuing of visas are mainly specified in the Visa Executive Order mentioned above.⁹⁴¹

In summary, Danish law provides that an alien must visa his passport or other travel documentation before entry into Danish territory unless he is exempted from the visa requirement according to section 3, cf. section 39(2), of the Aliens Act and section 1 of the Visa Executive Order. The groups of aliens who are exempted from the visa requirement are listed in section 2 of the Visa Executive Order, and the list primarily includes aliens from the other Nordic countries and EU member states. Aliens from non-EU states must apply for a visa and the application is examined in accordance with above-mentioned conditions and the current Danish practice.⁹⁴²

Traditionally, the Danish practice has been based on the purpose of the stay and which third country the alien came from. A distinction has generally been made between business stays, cultural stays, private visit stays, and tourist stays and whether the person concerned came from a country with a high risk of unauthorised use of the visa.⁹⁴³ Under the new rules, the Danish authorities divide countries into 5 categories: Main Groups I-V. The main groups are listed in Annex 2 of the Visa Executive Order, and the division is based on a general assessment of the risk that aliens from the countries or regions in question do not intend to leave the Schengen Area before the expiry of the visa applied for. Main Group I include countries and regions whose citizens are generally considered to pose a very limited risk of illegal immigration, whereas citizens of Main Group V are considered to pose a particularly high risk.⁹⁴⁴

Section 16(1) of the Visa Executive Order provides that when the examination of an application for a visa involves the assessment of the risk that the alien does not intend to leave the Schengen Area before the expiry of the visa, the authorities must take the concerned person's conditions in the country of origin or residence into account. Among other things, the authorities must also take information about the general conditions in the in the country of origin or residence and known migratory trends into account. Section 16(2) provides that a visa can be issued if the authorities find that there is no doubt as to the alien's intentions to depart the Schengen countries in accordance with an issued visa after an evaluation of the facts mentioned in section 16(1). When assessing the general conditions in the country of origin or residence pursuant to section 16(1) it must be taken into account which main group the country belongs to as provided in section 16(4).

In summary, the main groups are used in those cases where the application has not already been rejected on another basis – typically the general conditions – and where a specific assessment of the risk of unauthorised use of the visa, regardless of the purpose of the application, must be made.⁹⁴⁵

2.4. The Immigration Process

The Danish asylum process varies a lot from case to case. In general, there are four different procedures, divided into three stages. The procedures are listed in Annex 3.

A residence permit on humanitarian grounds can be granted to an alien who is registered as an asylum seeker in Denmark, if significant humanitarian considerations warrant it, cf. the Aliens Act section 9(b).

2.5. Right to Admission, Remain and Leave

During the processing of the case, the asylum seekers are moved to an accommodation. The Immigration Service covers living expenses and Healthcare. Furthermore, internship and language education (Danish or English) is offered.

A temporary residence permit holder, who is permitted to seek permanent residence at some point, can apply to have the residence permit extended, unless there are grounds for revoking the permit. For refugees with convention status, the residence permit can only be revoked if there have been fundamental improvements in conditions in the home country⁹⁴⁶.

If the alien leaves Denmark for an extended period of time, or if the concerned person no longer maintains a residence in Denmark, the residence permit can lapse. The general rule is that the permit lapses when the alien has stayed outside Denmark for more than 6 consecutive months, and where the alien has been issued with a residence permit with a possibility of permanent residence and has lived lawfully for more than 2 years in Denmark, the residence permit lapses only when the alien has stayed outside Denmark for more than 12 consecutive months, cf. the Aliens Act section 17(1). If the alien does not return to Denmark within the time limit, the residence permit will automatically lapse.

If the immigrant leaves Denmark to participate in armed conflicts or similar, the residence permit or right to reside in Denmark will be forced to lapse. This special regulation applies to all aliens in Denmark, no matter what the ground for residence is. The regulation means that the permit or right to reside in Denmark will be forced to lapse if the alien participates in activities that threaten, or have the potential to threaten, national security, the public order or the security of other states. A residence permit or a right to reside will be forced to lapse unless this would be in conflict with Denmark's international obligations. If the alien is covered by EU rules, forcing your right to reside in Denmark to lapse can only occur in compliance with the principals that apply for limitation of the right of free movement under EU rules. Under the special regulation one risks being permanently barred from returning to Denmark, and the alien will usually be unable to obtain a new residence permit. However, the alien can apply to be permitted to retain the residence permit/right to reside in Denmark. Dispensation can only be given if proven that there was a valid reason for the travel abroad.⁹⁴⁷

A residence permit for a child under 18 will lapse after three months, if the child has resided outside Denmark for more than three consecutive months in a way that is detrimental to the child's schooling and integration, cf. the Aliens Act section 17(2).

If an alien has refugee status (that is, if you have a residence permit on the grounds of asylum) in Denmark, the residence permit can only lapse if one have chosen to return to the country of origin, or if has been offered protection in a third-country, cf. the Aliens Act section 17(4).

Despite the provision of section 17, a residence permit does not lapse until an alien having for the purpose of permanent residence returned to his country of origin or the country of his former habitual residence has stayed outside Denmark for more than 12 consecutive months, cf. the Aliens Act section 17(a)(1).

If the residence permit lapse, one loses the right to reside in Denmark. This means that if the immigrant wishes to return to Denmark, the concerned person may be denied re-entry.⁹⁴⁸

2.6. Expulsion and Deportation

According to the Aliens act, “expulsion” means a decision on the lapse of the alien’s residence permit and right to reside in Denmark, and that the person in question cannot re-enter and reside without a new permit (refusal of entry). Expulsion is regulated in part 4 of the Aliens Act. Expulsion is distinguishable from other situations in which an alien is deported - for instance as a result of an expired visa, a rejection of an application for residence permit or because of a revocation of an already granted residence permit - due to the fact that a refusal of entry. A refusal of entry can be issued for a certain amount of years or for life.

An alien can be expelled if the alien concerned must be deemed a danger to national security, a serious threat to the public order, safety or health or because of illegal residence or work. Furthermore, an alien can be expelled if a criminal act is committed.

If a criminal act is committed, and the alien faces criminal prosecution, the Danish Prosecution Service can claim expulsion. If the alien is convicted, the court decides whether the person in question must be expelled after the sentence is served. Being so, decisions on expulsion due to criminal activity is within the jurisdiction of the court. Depending on the nature of the crime and the severity of the sentence, a refusal of entry is issued for 3 years, 5 years, and 10 years or for life. The relevant time period of the refusal of entry runs from the time of the deportation.

During the criminal proceedings the alien will get assigned counsel. The regulation of expulsion due to criminal activity has been intensified substantially over the past ten years. If the alien has ties to Denmark, the expulsion can be perceived as a much more extensive sanction than the actual sentence, and therefore all relevant matters of paramount importance to the assessment of expulsion must be disclosed during the case.

If the expelled alien does not come from a Schengen-country or EU member state, and if the person in question is expelled with a refusal of entry for at least 5 years, the expulsion will be reported to the Schengen Information System (SIS). As a consequence of this, the alien will be registered as a third-country national without entitlement to enter into or stay in the Schengen Area.⁹⁴⁹

An alien, who has been expelled by court order, but where deportation has not been initiated, can get the question reopened if there has been a substantial change in circumstances. If the personal situation indicates that revoking a residence permit would be particularly traumatic, the Danish Agency for International Recruitment and Integration can chose not to do so. The following factors will be taken into consideration: the alien’s ties with the Danish society, the alien’s age, health, and other personal circumstances, the alien’s ties with persons living in Denmark, the consequences of the expulsion for the alien’s close relatives living in Denmark, including in relation to regard for family unity, the alien’s slight or non-existent ties with his country of origin or any other country in which he may be expected to take up residence and the risk that the alien will be ill-treated in his country of origin or any other country in which he may be expected to take up residence.⁹⁵⁰

Aliens covered by EU regulations can only be expelled pursuant to the Aliens Act provided that it is compatible with the EU regulations. Pursuant to Directive 2004/38/EC of The European Parliament and of The Council of 29 April 2004 on the right of citizens of the Unions and their family members to move and reside freely within the territories of the member states, measures taken on grounds of public policy or public security must be in accordance with the principle of proportionality and shall be based exclusively on the personal conduct of the individual concerned. Previous criminal convictions shall not in themselves constitute grounds for taking such measures.

In 2006, an amendment law to the Aliens Act imposed new regulations regarding the access to decide on suspended expulsion. Suspended expulsion is a possibility when there are not sufficient grounds for expelling the individual concerned under present law, or because expulsion must be assumed to be particularly burdensome, in particular because of the alien's ties with the Danish society, the alien's age, health, and other personal circumstances, the alien's ties with persons living in Denmark, the consequences of the expulsion for the alien's close relatives living in Denmark, including in relation to regard for family unity, the alien's slight or non-existent ties with his country of origin or any other country in which he may be expected to take up residence and the risk that the alien will be ill-treated in his country of origin or any other country in which he may be expected to take up residence, cf. the Aliens Act section 26(1).

In case of suspended expulsion, a probation period must be fixed. The probation period is reckoned from the date of the final judgment in the case or, if the alien was not present when judgment was passed, from service of the judgment and expires 2 years after the date of release or discharge from hospital or safe custody or from termination of a stay in a security unit at a residential institution for children and young people. If suspended expulsion was decided in connection with a suspended sentence of imprisonment or a sentence of outpatient treatment allowing deprivation of liberty, the probation period expires 2 years after the date of the final judgment in the case or, if the alien was not present when judgment was passed, 2 years after service of the judgment, cf. the Aliens Act section 24(b). An alien sentenced to suspended expulsion can be expelled if, during the probation period of the suspended expulsion, he commits another offence that may give rise to expulsion and court proceedings are initiated before expiry of the probation period unless a decision of expulsion must be assumed to be particularly burdensome. If an alien is sentenced to suspended expulsion, the court shall guide the alien on the importance thereof when passing the judgment.

An alien, who is not entitled to stay in Denmark, must leave, cf. the Aliens Act section 30(1). If the alien does not leave Denmark voluntarily, the police must make arrangements for his

2.7. Annex 1: General Formal Conditions

If the application is submitted to the member state concerned, the relevant consulate must ascertain whether the application meets the conditions of admissibility⁹⁵² pursuant to Art. 19(1) the Visa Code and section 7 of the Visa Executive Order. The conditions are:

- The application must be lodged no more than three months before the start of the intended visit, cf. Art. 9(1) of the Visa Code.
- The application must contain the relevant application form, cf. Art. 11 of the Visa Code, documentation of valid travel documentation, cf. Art. 12 of the Visa Code, and photo.
- The applicant's biometric data must be collected, cf. Art. 13 of the Visa Code.
- The visa fee must be collected, cf. Art. 16 of the Visa Code.⁹⁵³

2.8. Annex 2: General conditions in Relation to the Examination of a Visa Application

The consulate must assess whether a number of general entry conditions are met before issuing a Schengen visa, cf. Art. 21 of the Visa Code. The conditions are:

- It must be verified that the travel documentation presented is not false, counterfeit or forged, cf. Art. 21(3)(a).
- The applicant must justify the purpose and conditions of the intended stay and that he has sufficient means of subsistence, both for the duration of the intended stay and for the return trip or is in a position to acquire such means lawfully, cf. Art 21(3)(b). What will be considered as necessary funds will be determined by the Danish diplomatic mission and depends on the length of the stay, and whether the stay is at a hotel or with friends or family.
- The applicant must not be registered as an undesirable in the Schengen Information System (SIS II), cf. Art. 21(3)(c) of the Visa Code .
- The applicant must not be considered a threat to public policy, internal security or public health as defined in Art. 2(19) of the Schengen Borders Code⁹⁵⁴ or to the international relations of any of the member states and not be listed on any UN or EU sanction lists, cf. - The applicant must hold a travel insurance policy to cover possible expenses in connection with a return for health reasons or death, indispensable medical treatment

3. Is there a ministry, government agency or other public authority specifically dealing with migrants? If so, please provide a description of the framework this authority works under.

The following review of the Danish governmental structure in regard to migration will be structured as an individual review of each of the relevant offices, their individual competences and their internal relations. The legal framework of the offices' work regarding migrants is the Aliens Act of 9 May 2016⁹⁵⁶.

3.1. The Danish Ministry of Immigration and Integration

The Danish Ministry of Immigration and Integration is the highest Danish authority dealing with migrants. According to section 46a(1) of the Aliens Act, decisions by the Danish Immigration Service and the Danish Agency for International Recruitment and Integration may be appealed to the Ministry with a number of exceptions listed in section 46a(1). As the superior authority the Ministry has a number of operational control functions in relation to the subordinate government agencies, i.e. the Danish Immigration Service and the Danish Agency for International Recruitment and Integration, cf. section 46a(5) of the Aliens Act. Due to the powers granted in section 46a(5) and the nature of the superior relation between the Ministry and the agencies, the Ministry may issue binding guidelines regarding procedures within the scope of the Aliens Act and other relevant legislation. The power to issue general guidelines applies to all areas within the fields of work of the agencies.⁹⁵⁷

Danish legal scholars discuss whether the right of appeal to the Ministry, provided by section 46a(1) of the Aliens Act, prevents the Ministry from making individual decisions in specific cases being dealt with by one of the agencies. This reasoning only applies to the types of cases where appeal lies to the Ministry. In cases where appeal lies to either the Immigration Appeals Board or the Refugees Appeals Board there is no right for the Ministry to intervene in decisions made by the agencies, because the boards are independent from the Ministry. The legal theory is unclear about whether this prohibition against intervening in the last mentioned types of cases also applies to intervening in the casework before the agencies make their final decision.⁹⁵⁸

Certain cases regarding residence permit on the grounds of fundamental humanitarian reasons as described in section 9b(1) of the Aliens Act and cases regarding renewal or revocation of these permits are dealt with directly by the Ministry under section 46(3) of the Aliens Act. There is no right of appeal in case of a refused application.⁹⁵⁹

Amendment Act no. 188 of 27 February 2017 has limited the Ministry's powers under the Aliens Act.⁹⁶⁰ The purpose of the Amendment Act is to limit the number of specific cases in which the Ministry has to make decisions. The Immigration Appeals Board and the Refugees Appeals Board now deal with a majority of cases in which the Ministry acted as board of appeal under the former provisions of the Aliens Act.

3.2. The Danish Immigration Service

Section 46(1) of the Aliens Act provides that the Danish Immigration Service is responsible for decisions with legal basis under the Act and subject to a number of exceptions listed in section 46(1). The first exception is the one set out in section 46 (3), cf. section 46(1), of the Aliens Act assigning cases regarding humanitarian residence permits to the Ministry. Cases regarding work permits, education etc. are assigned to the Danish Agency for International Recruitment and Integration under section 46(2), cf. section 46(1), of the Aliens Act and will be further reviewed in Section 3.3. of this report. Authority to make decisions about accreditation and revocation thereof and to issue visa is granted to the relevant diplomatic or consular representatives under section 4d(3)-(4), cf. section 46(1). Other case types and powers have been assigned and granted to the municipal authorities, the police and the National Aliens Centre.⁹⁶¹

The Danish Immigration Service deals with cases regarding asylum, family reunification, visa, residence permits and a number of administrative assignments including accommodation, information on legislation etc.⁹⁶² As mentioned in section 3.1. above, the Service is subordinate to the Ministry and is therefore subject to the general guidelines issued by the Ministry in addition to the Act. Appeal against decisions made by the Service lies to the Ministry subject to a number of exceptions where appeal lies to the Immigration Appeals Board and the Refugees Appeals Board under section 46a(1), and sections 52b and 53a of the Aliens Act.

3.3. The Danish Agency for International Recruitment and Integration

The Danish Agency for International Recruitment and Integration is subordinate to the Danish Ministry of Immigration and Integration. The Agency deals with cases regarding work permits and residence permits issued for the purpose of work, including work as an au pair, education, internship, or doing a Ph.D. in Denmark, according to section 46(2) of the Aliens Act.⁹⁶³

As mentioned in Section 3.1, legal scholars discuss whether the Ministry may intervene in on-going casework conducted by the Danish Agency for International Recruitment and Integration on the ground that the Ministry acts as board of appeal in these types of cases. This does not, however, prevent the Ministry from issuing general guidelines binding on the Agency⁹⁶⁴.

Amendment Act no. 188 of 27 February 2017⁹⁶⁵ relocated a lot of the Ministry's power as board of appeal to either the Immigration Appeals Board or the Refugees Appeals Board limiting the number of cases in which the afore-mentioned distinction is relevant. Section 52b(2) of the Aliens Act provides that appeal against a number of decisions made by the Danish Agency for International Recruitment and Integration lies to the Immigration Appeals Board and not to the Ministry. Appeal lies to the Immigration Appeals Board in cases regarding residence permit with legal basis within the scope of the Agency's field of work.

3.4. The Immigration Appeals Board

The Immigration Appeals Board is an independent, quasi-judicial administrative body sitting in panels. The Board hears cases regarding family reunification, permanent residence permits, and appeals against decisions regarding deportation and dismissal made by the Danish Immigration Service pursuant to section 52b(1) of the Aliens Act, together with appeals against decisions regarding residence permits made by the Danish Agency for International Recruitment and Integration, according to section 52b(2) of the Aliens Act⁹⁶⁶.

Being an independent administrative body, the Immigration Appeals Board is not subject to instructions from the Danish Ministry of Immigration and Integration. As a result of this independence from the Ministry, the Board is only subject to the Aliens Act. Decisions made by the Immigration Appeals Board may be brought before the Ombudsman or the courts for review⁹⁶⁷.

3.5. The Refugee Appeals Board

The Refugee Appeals Board is an independent, quasi-judicial administrative body, so that the Danish Ministry of Immigration and Integration has no authority over the board and, therefore, the Board is only subject to the Aliens Act. The Board hears appeals against decisions related to asylum made by the Danish Immigration Service, according to section 53a(1) of the Aliens Act⁹⁶⁸.

Section 56(8) of the Aliens Act provides that decisions made by the Immigration Appeals Board are final. The courts have chosen to understand this finality to mean that they are precluded from adjudicating on the Board's assessment of evidence. Only legal questions such as shortcomings in the legal grounds, errors in case administration and illegal exertion of discretion can be reviewed by the courts.⁹⁶⁹

3.6. The Municipal Councils Obligations Regarding Integration

According to the Integrations Act section 4 (1) the Municipal Councils are responsible for accommodation placement of refugees that have been allocated in the concerned municipality. The Municipal Councils are also responsible for implementing integration plans and integration programs as well they are responsible for arranging introduction courses for refugees.⁹⁷⁰

4. What are the recent statistics regarding migrants (i.e. asylum-seekers, immigrants, transitmigrants, trends in migratory flows) in your country?

This Section is an examination of relevant Danish statistics regarding migrants. The Danish Ministry of Immigration and Integration compiles the selected statistics. To put the numbers into perspective the population of Denmark is 5.7 million people as at 1 January 2017, according to Statistics Denmark.⁹⁷¹

The selected statistics regarding asylum seekers focus on the number of applications and the number of issued residence permits in regard to asylum over the last few years. The numbers are aggregates of all application types in regard to asylum.

In 2012 and 2013, the numbers of applications for asylum were, respectively, 6,148 and 7,557 applications per year. After 2013 there is a large increase in the number of applications for asylum resulting in 14,792 applications in 2014 and 21,316 applications in 2015. After 2015 there is a large decrease in the number of applications, causing the number of applications to drop from 21,316 in 2015 to only 6,266 in 2016. The numbers for 2017 only include the months from 1 January to 31 May 2017. The number of applications for this period is 1,268 and if this rate continues throughout the year, the aggregate number for 2017 will be the lowest number of applicants since 2008, when 2,409 applications were received.⁹⁷²

In order to fully understand the number of issued residence permits in regard to asylum, it is important to note that some application types have a processing time of maximum 10 months, so many permits may be applied for in one year and issued in the following year.⁹⁷³ In 2012, 2,583 permits were issued while 3,889 were issued in 2013 and 6,104 were issued in 2014. 2015 saw a large increase in issued permits due to the large increase in received applications in 2014 and 2015. The number of issued permits in 2015 was 10,849 dropping to 7,493 in 2016, and in the first five months of 2017 the number of issued permits was only 1,558.⁹⁷⁴

4.2. Immigrants

Immigration being a permanent move to another country, this Sub-Section of the report will focus on the recent numbers of permanent residence permits. The numbers are divided in to three classes, i.e. permits issued in regard to asylum, permits issued in regard to family reunification, and permits issued in regard to occupation or education. The numbers from 2017 include the period from 1 January 2017 to 31 May 2017.

4.2.1. Asylum

During the first five months of 2017, 67 of the above-mentioned permits were issued in regard to asylum. The country with most issued permits is Iraq with 13 permits in the first four months of 2017. In 2016, the total number of issued permits was 385. With 68 issued permits in 2016, Iraq was the country with the largest number of permits, 15 permits more than Burma/Myanmar and Afghanistan in second place.⁹⁷⁵

4.2.2. Family Reunification

In regard to permanent residence permits, the majority of issued permits concern family reunification with 463 issued permits during the first five months of 2017. Of these 84 permits were issued to aliens from Turkey, making Turkey the country with the largest number of issued permanent residence permits in regard to family reunification. In 2016, the country with largest number of issued permits in this area was also Turkey with 264 permits out of 1,939 permits issued in total in 2016.⁹⁷⁶

4.2.3. Occupation and Education

During the first five months of 2017, 158 permanent residence permits were issued in regard to occupation and education in Denmark. If the trend continues throughout the year, the total number will be significantly lower than the number in 2016, which is 763. The country with the largest number of issued permits in 2017 so far is Ukraine with 26 permits. In 2016, the country with the largest number of issued permits was also Ukraine with 150 permits.⁹⁷⁷

4.2.4. Summary

In all, 757 indefinite residence permits were issued during the first four months of 2017. In 2016 the total number of issued permits was 3,087, indicating that the total number for 2017 may be significantly lower than that of 2016.

4.3. Transit Migrants

In this Sub-Section the recent numbers transit migration is examined. The numbers from 2017 include the period from 1 January 2017 to 30 April 2017. The applied definition of transit migrants is the one used in the report from the Danish Ministry of Immigration and Integration, so that transit migrants are defined as aliens applying for a tourist or transit visa. During the first five months of 2017, the Danish Immigration Service and the Ministry's representatives outside Denmark issued 28,278 tourist or transit visas. The main part of these visas was issued to citizens of China with 9,194 tourist and transit visas.⁹⁷⁸

4.4. Trends in Migratory Flows

This Sub-Section focuses on the trends in migratory flows based on the alien's country of origin. The examination is based on numbers of asylum seekers and, therefore, applications for work permits and residence permits based on occupation and education and applications for family reunification will not be taken into consideration.

Since 2013, the largest group of asylum seekers is from Syria. In 2013, the number of Syrian applicant totalled 1,710 out of a total of 7,557 applicants. In 2014, almost half of the applicants seeking asylum in Denmark were Syrians, with 7,087 Syrian applicants out of a total of 14,792 applicants. 2015 saw the largest number of Syrian applicants with 8,608 applicants out of a total of 21,316 applicants.⁹⁷⁹ This number decreased drastically in 2016 to only 1,253 Syrian applicants, which is consistent with the total number of applicants decreasing to 6,266 in 2016. During the period from 1 January 2017 to 30 April 2017, the number of Syrian applicants was 308 and the total number of applicants was 1,268.⁹⁸⁰

With 2,787 applicants in 2015, Iran had the second largest number of asylum seekers in Denmark.⁹⁸¹ In 2016, that number was only 300 and during the first five months of 2017, only 47 Iranians applied for asylum in Denmark.⁹⁸²

From 2011 to 2012, the number of asylum seekers from Somalia went from 113 in 2011 to 919 in 2012, making Somalis the largest group of asylum seekers in 2012. In 2013, the number increased to 965, making Somalis the second largest group of asylum seekers that year.⁹⁸³ After 2013, the number of Somali asylum seekers dropped steadily, and during the first five months of 2017, only 22 Somalis applied for asylum in Denmark.⁹⁸⁴

During the last 6-7 years, there has been a relatively high number of asylum seekers from Morocco, Afghanistan, Iraq and Russia compared to the numbers of asylum seekers from other countries as well as the total number of asylum-seekers.^{985 986}

5. How have the decisions by the European Court of Human Rights concerning migrants been implemented at national level?

5.1. ECHR and its incorporation in Danish Law

Danish control policy considerations and overall legal principles that determine the control of immigrants' status and residence in Denmark are reflected in the sources of law relevant to Danish immigration law. Even though the Danish Aliens Act governs all legal matters in relation to immigrants' entry and residence, the Act must be interpreted and applied in compliance with international conventions. Conventions on human rights that are relevant to the legal governing foreigners and emanating from intergovernmental cooperation outside the EU are largely ratified by Denmark.

The European Convention on Human Rights (ECHR) was ratified by Denmark in 1953 and, as a further action, incorporated in its entirety into Danish law by Act No. 285 of 29 April 1992 Inkorporeringsloven (Incorporation Act). Upon accession to the ECHR, Denmark undertakes to respect and ensure fundamental human rights of any person within its jurisdiction. The ECHR can be invoked against Danish courts and administrative authorities that have an obligation to apply the Convention in line with other Danish legislation. In addition, the Convention allows anyone to appeal to the European Court of Human Rights (ECtHR) in Strasbourg claiming that a member state has violated the rights protected by the Convention. The ECHR is the only human rights convention that has been incorporated into Danish law in its entirety. Other conventions are part of Danish law by partial references, i.e. that the relevant Danish legislation refers to relevant convention articles, either explicitly or implicitly. It is therefore apparent that Danish authorities respect the ECHR more than other conventions.

5.2. ECtHR Decisions' Implementation and Enforcement in Denmark

5.2.1. Denmark as an Intervening Respondent Member State

Because the ECHR is implemented into Danish law, it is applicable as any other national statute. This means that the decisions are enforced fully when Denmark is intervening as a respondent state in a case.

In May 2016, Denmark intervened in the case Biao vs. Denmark, in which Denmark lost. The case concerned whether Danish legislation on reunification was too strict in relation to Article 8 of the ECHR on the right to family life. The case also concerned the 28-year rule that excluded Danish nationals who had been Danish citizens for more than 28 years to meet four family reunification requirements. This 28-year rule was contrary to Article 8 in conjunction to Article 14 on prohibiting discrimination. The ECtHR Grand Chamber therefore held that there had been a violation of Article 14 read in conjunction with Article 8 of the Convention. Therefore, Denmark was to pay the applicant, Ousmane Biao, EUR 6,000 within three months.

Because of Denmark's obligation to the ECHR, which is not only an international obligation but also national obligation due to its status as incorporated into national law, Denmark was bound to pay the compensation awarded to victims of the human rights violations. Furthermore, the 28-year (which was amended to a 26-year rule right before the case) was repealed right after Denmark lost the Biao vs. Denmark case. This makes it clear that Denmark implements the case law directly in the domestic law when Denmark is the respondent state.

5.2.2. Danish Courts' Implementation of the Decisions by the ECtHR

According to the Danish Aliens Act § 7(2), a residence permit is issued upon application to an alien if, upon return to his country of residence, he or she risks the death penalty or being subjected to torture or inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment. The section is designed and inserted in Danish law in accordance with the relevant articles in the ECHR, in particular Art. 3 of the ECHR. According to the preparatory works of Danish Aliens Act on section 7(2), granting asylum to aliens or expelling them complies with Denmark's obligations under the ECHR as interpreted by the ECtHR. This means that Denmark implements ECtHR case law when interpreting the ECHR and the Aliens Act. Another example is Denmark's Aliens (Amendment) Act of 24 July 2011. The amendments enacted in order to incorporate the practices and case law of the ECtHR regarding treatment of migrants.

The parliamentary report on the incorporation of the human rights conventions provides a detailed review of the courts' application of the ECHR. It concludes that the courts often refer to ECtHR case law on the interpretation and application of the ECHR. There are therefore no doubts that Danish Courts take the decisions of the ECtHR into consideration even when Denmark has not been intervening as a respondent member state, especially in cases concerning migration.

5.3. Supremacy of the Cases of ECtHR over Danish Law

The rule of purpose and rule of presumption have for many years been taken recognized in Danish legal theory and jurisprudence. The rules are used when the courts have doubts about the relation between international law and domestic law. Under these legal principles, provided domestic law does not explicitly conflict with international law, domestic law will be interpreted in line with international law as far as possible. In the Danish case U.1998.800 H (The Maastricht case), the premises deduce that The Courts of Denmark shall consider legislative acts from ECC (former EU) as inapplicable in Denmark, if an extraordinary situation, as a completely opposition with the Danish Constitution should occur.⁹⁸⁷

Through Danish dogmatic legal analysis, it can be concluded that ECtHR case law finds its application through traditional principles of interpretation and is not to be considered a binding and directly applicable source of law in Denmark. It must be considered as a normal obligation under international law and must be handled within the traditional perception of the relationship between Danish law and international law.

The result in concrete cases will often not differ while the ECHR and case law from ECtHR have a great significance. But there can be situations where it is a vital importance, for example, if, at some point in the future, the ECtHR finds that abortion constitutes a violation of the ⁹⁸⁷ Jens Elo Rytter, "Individets grundlæggende rettigheder", (2013), Karnov Group, p. 54, Danish.

ECHR, while abortion does not contravene in Danish Constitution, this will cause serious constitutional conflict. This concludes that although the courts are obliged to include ECtHR case law in its interpretation of Danish law, it is not an unconditional binding source of law. If the dynamic practice of the ECtHR has to be incorporated equal to the ECHR, it will require a transfer of sovereignty, which has yet never taken. The theoretical problem is that since the ECHR legislate in the same area as the Danish Constitution, it can create a significant issue, which can change the content of the constitutional legislation. Therefore, such sovereignty seems to be problematic. Nevertheless, such conflicts have never occurred yet and are still only theoretical assumptions and discussions.

6. How have the recommendations of the European Commission against Racism and Intolerance and of national human rights bodies concerning the integration of migrants been implemented?

The Council of Europe founded the European Commission against Racism and Intolerance (ECRI) in 1994 as an independent body for monitoring human rights violations, especially in relation to racism and intolerance. ECRI members are independent and objective and they are designated on the basis of their moral insight and recognized expertise in the areas of racism, xenophobia, anti-Semitism and intolerance. Denmark has reported on the implementation of ECRI since 1997, which has resulted in the preparation of five 5-year cycles reports.

6.1. The Five Reports on Denmark – Recommendations and Implementation

The first report of 1997 emphasized that Denmark had ratified most of the relevant international legal means on combating racism and intolerance. Nevertheless, ECRI recommended that Denmark ratify The European Charter of Regional or Minority Languages. Furthermore, ECRI recommended that Denmark implement the International Convention on Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination in the same way as the implementation of the ECHR in its entirety in 1992. Politically, ECRI recommended Denmark adopt a more offensive policy against racial discrimination, which would result in more certain and precise criminal, civil and administrative law provisions against derogatory racist expressions and provisions that protect minorities against discrimination in the administrative areas of social service, housing, education and healthcare.⁹⁸⁸ As a result of the recommendations in the first report, Denmark ratified The European Charter of Regional or Minority Languages in 2000.⁹⁸⁹ Furthermore, the Danish Ministry of Justice set up a commission to find a sensible solution to the recommendation of Denmark's implementation of the International Convention on Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination.⁹⁹⁰ As recommended, Denmark also adopted new criminal law provisions against racial discrimination.⁹⁹¹ Despite the implementation of the recommendations, ECRI declared in the second report of 2000 that the frequent reports of racism and xenophobic statements in the media and other forums indicate a problem with the implementation of the criminal provisions. Therefore, despite the adopted provisions, ECRI reiterated its recommendation that the Danish authorities adopt a more offensive policy on the matter in the second report.⁹⁹²

The second report of 2000 focuses on the amendments of the Danish Aliens Act and Danish integration policy. The 1999 legislation contained a comprehensive set of rules and initiatives that apply to all foreigners with residence permit in Denmark, including refugees and their family members who are eligible for family reunification. ECRI was positive about the efforts of the Danish authorities to create a comprehensive integration plan but it was concerned that the enacted statute, contrary to its purpose, would create conditions where migrants and refugees would find it difficult to participate in the society's political, economic, social, religious and cultural life on a par with other citizens. Finally, ECRI found that it was still necessary to take action to solve discrimination in different areas, especially in the areas of employment, housing, and access to public services. On the other hand, ECRI also recommended that Denmark ratify the European Convention on Nationality, the European Social Charter and the European Convention on the Legal Status of Migrant Workers. As a result of these recommendations, Denmark ratified the European Convention on Nationality.⁹⁹³ Even though Denmark had implemented some of ECRI's recommendations from the previous report, ECRI found that Denmark had not adopted a more offensive and comprehensive policy on criminalizing derogatory racist expressions. The legislative authorities adopted a new provision in the penal code but the police had brought few cases before the courts.⁹⁹⁴

The third report of 2005 repeatedly recommended the ratification of the European Social Charter and the European Convention on the Legal Status of Migrant Workers. In addition to this, ECRI still recommended that Denmark incorporate the International Convention on Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination. There had been progression in certain areas and Denmark adopted an Act on ethnic equality; however, a number of recommendations from the previous report had not been implemented or only partially implemented. ECRI noted in 2005 that the situation in Denmark had generally worsened, and some politicians and parts of the media continually promoted a negative image of minority groups in general.⁹⁹⁵ ECRI therefore recommended that the Danish authorities take action and further measures in a number of areas. Thus, it was recommended that Denmark ratify Protocol No. 12 to the ECHR. Moreover, legislative changes were recommended, including changes in the Danish Aliens Act and Integration Act, with the aim that these Acts do not in fact have a discriminatory effect on minority groups. Since the publication of the third report, a number of initiatives were launched to ensure that judges receive education and instructions on national and international legal instruments on racism and racial discrimination.⁹⁹⁶ This was recommended by ECRI in 2000 and had finally been implemented.

The fourth report focuses on ECRI's recommendations concerning Denmark's ratification of Protocol No. 12 to the ECHR and that the Danish legislative authorities should amend the Danish Aliens Act and the Integration Act, so that these Acts will not lead to discrimination of minority groups. It was also recommended that the Danish authorities ensure that the Equal Treatment Board is empowered to hear oral submissions and to examine on its own initiative. Since the Equal Treatment Board only has the power to settle cases on a written basis and cannot hear oral submissions, the lack of jurisdiction is evident. ECRI also recommended that the Danish authorities should extend the powers of the Board, so that it can deal with discrimination outside the employment field on the grounds of colour, religion or belief, national origin and language. Finally, ECRI urged the Danish authorities to implement a wide-ranging reform of the rules on spousal reunification with a view to removing any elements that constitute direct or indirect discrimination.⁹⁹⁷ Denmark implemented a few of ECRI's recommendations from the fourth report. However, these implementations had not been adequate and ECRI reiterated its recommendations from the fourth report in its fifth report.

The fifth report of 2017 is the latest report. ECRI reiterated its recommendation to carry out a wide-ranging reform of the spousal reunification rules. Moreover, ECRI repeated its recommendation to sign and ratify Protocol No. 12 to the ECHR and the recommendation to the authorities to amend the criminal, civil and administrative law, which is still not entirely in line with ECRI's General Policy Recommendation No. 7 on national legislation to combat racism and racial discrimination. Danish authorities have not taken any remarkable steps towards reforming the spousal reunification rules in conformity with the recommendations. Why this has not happened yet is discussable but is likely a matter of political priorities by the Danish government, and because of the short period of time from when the report was produced and today.

6.2. Conclusion

In conclusion, Denmark has implemented many initiatives recommended by ECRI. However, it is clear that Denmark does not change its policy in certain areas, which has caused ECRI to reiterate the same objectives for many years. Since 1997, Denmark has implemented several recommendations, among others, the ratification of the European Convention on Nationality and the European Charter of Regional or Minority Languages. A number of initiatives have also been launched to ensure that judges receive education and instructions on national and international legal instruments on racism and racial discrimination, as recommended by ECRI. Nevertheless, in the recent years it has become clear that Denmark has implemented fewer recommendations from ECRI. For example, Denmark has still not implemented Protocol No. 12 to the ECHR, which ECRI has recommended since its third report from 2005. Moreover, since its first report, ECRI has recommended that Denmark amend the criminal, civil and administrative law, which is still not entirely in line with ECRI's General Policy Recommendation No. 7 on national legislation to combat racism and racial discrimination. Finally, even though Denmark has implemented some of the recommendations of ECRI, it is clear that Denmark does not follow all ECRI recommendations. It seems that the recent Danish political development has reduced the influence of the ECRI.

7. How is migrants' right to access to healthcare regulated within the national legislation?

7.1. Introduction to the Danish Healthcare System

The Danish healthcare system is a fundamental part of the Danish welfare system. Similar to the educational system, it is free for Danish residents to access the majority of healthcare services in Denmark. In 2015, it was estimated that approximately 84 percent of healthcare expenditure is publicly financed.⁹⁹⁸ The healthcare services include primary healthcare, which is accessible to general practitioners, various vaccinations, and some medical specialists.⁹⁹⁹ National legislation also ensures Danish residents free of charge access to public hospital treatments.¹⁰⁰⁰ However, the above-mentioned services are, with some exceptions, only available to Danish residents, cf. section 7 of the Health Act.

The legal framework regarding migrants' rights to access to the healthcare system is predominantly the Aliens Act of 9 May 2016 and the Health Act of 24 September 2016. This report does not go into detail about or discuss the regulation regarding private hospitals. It is nevertheless relevant to point out that private hospitals are not allowed to discriminate patients unless the reason for differential treatment is based on objective criteria, cf. section 2a of the Health Act.

7.2. Medical Emergency Services

In accordance with section 80(1) of the Health Act and section 5(1) of the Executive Order on the right to hospital treatment etc., any human being, regardless of nationality or residency, has the right to be provided with free hospital treatment in case of medical emergency in Denmark. As examples of emergency situations, section 5 (1) of the Executive Order on the right to hospital treatment etc. mentions the following situations: accidents, sudden illness, childbirth or exacerbation of chronic diseases. The last-mentioned Act further provides that hospitals are not allowed to discriminate non-Danish residents when it comes to medical treatments.

In addition to free emergency treatment, any human being, regardless of nationality or residency, may be treated in Danish hospitals even if the emergency situation is over, according to section 80(2) of the Health Act and section 5(2) of the Executive Order on the right to hospital treatment etc. However, this should only take place if it is estimated that it would be unreasonable to transfer the patient to his/her country of origin for further treatment. In continuation of the extended access to hospital treatment, the treatment may be free of charge and in such cases, free treatment must be considered reasonable, cf. section 5(4) of the Executive Order on the right to hospital treatment etc.

7.3. Healthcare Services to Asylum Seekers and Foreign Nationals without Legal Residence in Denmark

Under section 42a(1) of the Aliens Act section, the Danish Immigration Service pay the healthcare expenses of asylum seekers. For this reason, asylum seekers are not covered by the national healthcare system, which provides Danish residents free of charge access to the majority of healthcare services, including visits to a general practitioner and hospital treatment. It is essential to point out that the Danish Immigration Service only pays for the necessary health services for asylum seekers. Nevertheless, the Danish Immigration Service is responsible for healthcare services until the asylum seeker is issued with a residence permit. If the applicant's request for asylum is refused, the Danish Immigration Service continues to pay potential expenses until the asylum seeker has left the country. Yet the rejected asylum seeker must leave the country by the set departure deadline. As a notable exception, children of asylum seekers are on an equal footing with children who are Danish residents. This means that children of asylum seekers are entitled to the same healthcare services as children with Danish residence.¹⁰⁰¹

Section 42a(2) of the Aliens Act governs the rights of foreign nationals without legal residence in Denmark. In order to distinguish between asylum seekers and foreign nationals without legal residence, the preparatory works of section 42a(2) of the Aliens Act gives the following example:

Foreign nationals who have had residence on another basis than asylum are subject to this section if the residency has been revoked, expired or not been extended.¹⁰⁰² Similarly, for asylum seekers, the Danish Immigration Service pays the expenses that this category of individuals may have in relation to healthcare services. In such cases, the Danish Immigration Service is only obliged to pay the expenses if the healthcare service is necessary for the person's maintenance. The children of other foreign nationals without legal residence in Denmark are also entitled to the same healthcare services as children with Danish residence.

7.3.1. Exemptions

The Danish Immigration Service does not support asylum seekers or foreign nationals who are married to a Danish resident, cf. section 42a(3)(ii) of the Aliens Act. Furthermore, section 42a(4) of the Aliens Act provides that the support of the Danish Immigration Service is excluded if it must be presumed that asylum seekers or foreign nationals have ample funds to cover their expenses regarding healthcare services. Finally, asylum seekers or foreign nationals may be excluded from the above-mentioned help if their healthcare expenses are paid under the provisions of another Danish Act, cf. section 42a(3)(iv).

7.4. Irregular Migrants

The Danish Immigration service only pays the healthcare expenses of migrants who are registered as migrants. For this reason, asylum seekers and foreign nationals without legal residence must inform the authorities about their address or place of living in Denmark. Migrants who are not registered in the immigration database (irregular migrants), therefore, do not have access to the Danish healthcare system. However, an irregular migrant can always get hospital treatment in case of medical emergency. Even though irregular migrants do not have access to regular healthcare services, there are private clinics with voluntary doctors who offer healthcare services. Information about such clinics is spread via different social institutions that convey the message of free healthcare services to irregular migrants.¹⁰⁰³

8. How do migrant children benefit from the right to education under your national legislation (Article 2 of the first Protocol to the ECHR)?

Under section 42g of the Aliens Act it is compulsory for migrant children in the ages of 6-16 to attend school when residing in Denmark and when they fall within section 42a(1) or (2), cf. subsection (3) or section 42k. This applies to situations where the migrant has not yet been issued with a residence permit. Migrant children covered by this provision may participate in separately organized tuition, or other tuition measuring up to the standard required of separately organized tuition.

The Ministry of Immigration and Integration has the authority to lay down rules about which educational programmes and activities to be offered and may, in cooperation with the Minister of Education, decide to which extent migrant children may attend the folkeskole, i.e. Danish primary and lower secondary school. These rules may be limited so that they only apply to specific accommodation centres.

When they live at asylum centres migrant children will typically attend school in a so-called modtagerklasse, which is a separate, educational offer to migrant children. Thus only migrant children will take part herein. This kind of educational offer is usually organized by the Red Cross and usually takes place at a location separate from the asylum centre. The aim is that migrant children will be able to attend a Danish primary school on a par with native Danes.¹⁰⁰⁴

In general, Danish municipalities decide which specific educational activities are to be offered the individual child, ranging from tuition at a separate school attended solely by migrant children to additional tutoring for children studying at a regular Danish primary school or lower secondary school.¹⁰⁰⁵

The fact that the municipalities have a considerable amount of influence on how to approach extra educational offers to migrant children and bilingual children, makes it difficult to assess how Denmark as a country approaches the challenge of ensuring migrant children an education equal to that offered to ethnic Danish children.

9. How are foreign school and university diplomas recognised in your country (e.g. through national law under the CoE/UNESCO Convention on the Recognition of Qualifications concerning Higher Education in the European Region of 1997) and what are the practical procedures?

9.1. General Admission to Universities

The acceptance of diplomas for acceptance onto courses of higher education is regulated in The Consolidated Act of Admission to Bachelor Degrees at Universities¹⁰⁰⁶. Admission to Universities is regulated in The Consolidated Act of Admission to Bachelor Degrees at Universities whether the applicant is a citizen of Denmark, a citizen of another member of the European Union or a citizen of a country from outside of the European Union. According to Section 2, admission to a University requires a high school diploma, specific demands such as a certain proficiency in different areas of high school course material, as well as a certain GPA based on the line of study. It derives directly from Section 3 (8) that foreign school diplomas are determined to grant/deny admission to universities by the Ministry of Higher Education and Science. Evaluation of such foreign school diplomata must be in compliance with The Consolidated Act on assessing foreign Educational Qualifications¹⁰⁰⁷ cf. Section 4 of The Consolidated Act of Admission to Bachelor Degrees at Universities. The individual evaluation of foreign diplomata is based on the diploma's country of origin, but every foreign applicant has the right to have his or her foreign diploma evaluated as stated in The Consolidated Act on assessing foreign Educational Qualifications Section 2 (1). Universities may require a translated version of a foreign diploma cf. The Consolidated Act of Admission to Bachelor Degrees at Universities Section 14 (4).

9.2. Evaluation of Foreign Diplomata

The Consolidated Act on Assessing Foreign Educational Qualifications, through evaluation, has as its purpose the easing and securing of the use and transition of foreign Educational Qualifications in and into the Danish job market, as well as into the Danish educational system cf. Section 1 of the The Consolidated Act on Assessing Foreign Educational Qualifications. The act ensures that anyone who wants an evaluation of their diplomata (including refugees and immigrants), and consequently their foreign skillset, has the possibility to do so. This is achieved through a uniform and transparent procedure and, as mentioned before, it is based on the diploma's country of origin. In general, the procedures for evaluating foreign diplomata can be separated into four categories based on their origin:

- Member countries of the European Union
- Nordic countries (in particular)
- Other countries
- Refugees

9.2.1. Member Countries of the European Union

As it is stated in the Convention on the Recognition of Qualifications concerning Higher Education in the European Region of 1997¹⁰⁰⁸, the purpose of the treaty is to promote recognition of foreign qualifications within the member countries of the European Union. It was ratified in Denmark in 2003, and the Danish Ministry of Higher Education and Science is evaluating foreign diplomas, originating in member countries of the European Union, largely on the Revised Recommendation on Criteria and Procedures for the Assessment of Foreign Qualifications, which was adopted by the Lisbon Recognition Convention Committee at its fifth meeting in Sevres in 2010¹⁰⁰⁹ (the first recommendation was introduced in 2001)¹⁰¹⁰. The recommendation is aimed at all institutions providing higher education, and national authorities in charge of evaluating and recognizing foreign diplomas (as mentioned above, the Ministry of Higher Education and Science has the authority to so in Denmark).¹⁰¹¹

The recommendation furthermore aims at giving applicants valuable information with regards to simplifying procedures and demands, concerning translation, documentation and fees, without burying the applicant in paperwork. The recommendation elaborates on the principle of the Lisbon Convention¹⁰¹² that a foreign education qualification¹⁰¹³ must be recognised in line with a qualification from the host country, unless significant differences can be found. It clarifies what should be perceived as "significant differences" and stresses that, as far as possible, learning outcome and access to additional activities gained from admission to applied education should be valued higher than length and structure of the education.¹⁰¹³ A dedicated manual, the EAR Manual¹⁰¹⁴ outlines the practical procedures to ensure a fair, streamlined recognition of qualifications. Institutions providing higher education follow a customised edition of the EAR Manual, called The European Recognition Manual for Higher Education Institutions¹⁰¹⁵.

In compliance with the Convention on the Recognition of Qualifications concerning Higher Education in the European Region¹⁰¹⁶, the Ministry of Higher Education and Science is evaluating the applicants with diplomata from a member country of the European Union according to the above-mentioned European Recognition Manual for Higher Education Institutions.

9.2.2. Nordic Countries (in particular)

The Nordic countries share a collective agreement¹⁰¹⁷ based on the above-mentioned Convention on the Recognition of Qualifications concerning Higher Education in the European Region. It is stated in the collective agreements Section 1 that applicants from within the Nordic region (Denmark, Norway, Finland, Iceland, Sweden), who are entitled to apply to higher education in their country of origin, have the equal or equivalent right to apply to higher education in any of the Nordic countries, as a native citizen in any of the other Nordic countries. Section 5 regulates the transfer of merit gained at an institution for higher education in one of the Nordic countries to an institution for higher education in any of the other Nordic countries. Furthermore, the Reykjavik Declaration from 2004¹⁰¹⁸ ensures a close cooperation regarding the continued effort to cooperate within the Nordic region to advance cross border education.

9.2.3. Other Countries

The evaluation of diplomata originating from countries other than Nordic countries or member states of the European Union causes difficulties caused by a variety of unknown factors, linked to the aforementioned diplomata. The Ministry of Higher Education and Science evaluates diplomata from other countries based on certain criteria. Those criteria aim to determine if and to what degree a diploma has the sufficient equivalency to a Danish diploma¹⁰¹⁹. The criteria are as follows¹⁰²⁰:

- Whether the education or training process is recognised in Denmark.
- At which point the education or training process has been completed.
- The basis for admission to the higher education or training course - specifically, whether the basis for admission to education in the applicant's country of origin

- corresponds to the admission requirements for equivalent Danish education, and whether the access granting education is comparable in length and level.
- The length of the higher education or the education process, - more specifically, if the duration of the education is comparable to the duration of a corresponding Danish education.
 - The objective or objectives of the education or the education process.
 - The structure and professional composition of the education or the education process, including: composition compared to a corresponding Danish education, subjects that are irrelevant to the profession, independent project or special work, extent and amount of time spent on this part of the programme, and lastly basis of research (research-based or not).
 - The relation between theoretical and practical subjects in the education or the education process.
 - Any previous reviews made by the Board (formerly the Board of Higher Education, the Board of Universities and Internationalisation, the Board of International Education / CIRIUS or CVUU) or others.

Based on the above-mentioned criteria, a general impression of the applicant's real proficiency should be available and taken into consideration, according to section 1(1)-(2)¹⁰²¹. If it is concluded (based on the general impression) that an applicant's diploma from foreign country is based on a significantly different foundation in regard to the above-mentioned criteria, the applicant has options to gain an sufficient equivalency as described in Section 9.3.

9.2.4. Refugees

The basis for every evaluation of a foreign diploma is that the foreign diploma is present and available to both the applicant and the authorities. It is common that refugees have lost their diplomas or they have encountered situations that have made it impossible to bring an intact diploma to Denmark. In this event, the Ministry of Higher Education and Science has the authority to issue an instructive declaration of the educational background of an applicant¹⁰²². This can then be used when applying for higher education in Denmark. The instructive declaration is based on information about the country of origin (of the applicant) and every document the applicant can provide regarding his or her education. The applicant may also be asked to undertake examinations in order to prove the authenticity of the provided documents.¹⁰²³ The standard practice of the Ministry of Higher Education and Science is based on the Lisbon Convention as well as the Guide for Credential Evaluators¹⁰²⁴

9.3. Insufficient Proficiency / Non-Acceptance of Foreign Diplomas

There are four different categories (1-4) that determine the acceptance of foreign diplomata. They range from full acceptance to non-acceptance. Category 1 is usually accepted in full and grants as extensive admission to higher education as an equivalent Danish diploma¹⁰²⁵. In rare cases, supplementary courses are needed. Category 2 is usually accepted with the exception of diplomata that lack English and mathematical courses – which in that case must be supplemented for that diploma to achieve recognition. Category 3 diplomata are usually not accepted and Category 4 diplomata grant only admission to a certain area of work or education¹⁰²⁶. In the event of a non-acceptance of a foreign diploma because of insufficient proficiency, the applicant in most cases has the option to supplement with a 1- or 2-year supplementary course at certain institutions. A list of courses that are needed to acquire full acceptance of the foreign diploma can be found on the website of the Ministry of Higher Education and Science. The list accredits the courses in hours and can therefore easily be compared to foreign course-proficiency.

9.4. Other Types of Schools

A few examples of different school types which are uncommon and therefore incompatible with the comparison criteria are so called ‘Waldorfschulen’/’ Rudolf Steinerskole’. Though the ‘Waldorfschulen’ / ‘Rudolf Steinerskole’ don’t follow the conventional education process, their diploma is recognised in Denmark if the final exams were held under the same state-authorised conditions as conventional high schools in the country.¹⁰²⁷

The German Schools within the Danish Minority in Germany provide diplomas that are also recognised as equal to Danish diplomata for admission to higher education as stated in section 3(6) in The Consolidated Act of Admission to Bachelor Degrees at Universities.¹⁰²⁸

9.5. Process of assessments

The process of assessment diplomata differs from the country of origin of the diploma. The process does not only differ in method to assess for each country of origin of the diploma but does also differ in requirements of the diploma depending on the country of origin. The requirements and methods for assessments are stated in the Handbook of Assessment of the Ministry of Higher Education and Science, and it does currently support the assessment of diplomata of 35 countries. The handbook provides a clear overview of the process of evaluation for the different types of diplomata from the 35 stated countries.¹⁰²⁹

There is also a database containing previous judgments of cases of recognition of foreign diplomata. It contains judgments made following the methods of assessments stated in the Handbook of Assessments of the Ministry of Higher Education and Science. Both the handbook and the database can be found on the website of the Ministry of Higher Education and Science. The database is largely used when applicants provide a diploma, which originates in a country that is not listed in the handbook of assessment of the Ministry of Higher Education and Science¹⁰³⁰

The entity responsible for the assessment of foreign diplomata is the Ministry of Higher Education and Science.¹⁰³¹

10. How is participation of migrants in political decisions regulated in your national legislation? Are they legally allowed to participate in their country of residence the same way as in their country of origin?

10.1. Introduction

Denmark is a constitutional monarchy and has a representative democracy. This means that politicians are elected to the Danish Parliament (Folketinget) for a limited period of time to govern Denmark. Furthermore, the Danish democracy consists of regional and local councils who are also elected for a limited period of time.

The Danish Parliament is responsible for general tasks in order to run the country, while the regions are primarily responsible for public healthcare services. Moreover, the municipalities (local councils) are responsible for a number of services that are offered to the citizens of local areas. Finally, Denmark is a member of the EU, wherefore the Danish representatives in the European Parliament must be elected as well.

Regarding the Danish monarchy and its influence on the political decisions, it is widely acknowledged that the monarch has no political power. Nevertheless, the monarch is formally involved in some aspects of the political system, such as signing statutes that have been passed by parliament.¹⁰³²

10.2. Parliamentary Elections

Section 32(1) of the Danish Constitutional Act provides that a parliamentary election must be held every four years. The Danish Prime Minister is responsible for the election procedure. Within four years from the last election, the prime minister must call a new election, cf. section 32(3) of the Constitutional Act.

10.2.1. Who can vote?

Section 29(1) of the Constitutional Act provides that a person is only entitled to vote if she or he is a Danish citizen who has reached the voting age (18 years old) and who has a permanent residence in Denmark. A person fulfilling the mentioned requirements is entitled to vote unless he or she is legally incapacitated.

10.2.2. Who can run for the Parliamentary Elections?

Any person who is entitled to vote is automatically eligible to run for parliamentary elections, cf. section 30(1) of the Constitutional Act. However, a candidate for the Danish parliament must be considered worthy to be a member of the parliament. For this reason, section 30(1) of the Constitutional Act specifically provides that no person is eligible to run for the Danish parliament if she or he has been convicted of an offense that makes this person unworthy to be a member of the Danish parliament in the eyes of the public.

10.3. Regional and Municipal elections

Similar to the parliamentary elections the Danish legislation requires regional and municipal elections to be held each four years, cf. section 6(1) of the Local Government Act. Unlike parliamentary elections, the elections to regional and municipal councils must be held on the third Tuesday in November each four years, cf. section 6(2) of the Local Government Act.

10.3.1. Who can vote?

Unlike parliamentary elections, not only Danish citizens are eligible to vote at regional and municipal elections. However, section 1(1) of the Local Government Act provides that any person who is least 18 years old and has permanent residence in the region or municipal is eligible to vote. Additionally, the person must either be a Danish citizen, a citizen of another EU member state, a citizen of either Iceland or Norway, or someone who has been resident in Denmark for three years prior to the last election date, cf. section 1(1) of the Local Government Act.

10.3.2. Who can run for the Regional and Municipal elections?

Any person who is eligible to vote in the regional and municipal elections is eligible to run for the elections, cf. section 3 of the Local Government Act. However, the candidate must as in parliamentary elections, be worthy to be a member, cf. Local Government Act section 4 (1).

10.4. European Elections - European Parliament

Elections to the European Parliament must be held every five years, cf. section 8 of the Members of the European Parliament Elections Act.

10.4.1. Who can vote?

The right to vote at elections to the European Parliament is held by every person who is at least 18 years old and who is either a Danish citizen, an European citizen with a permanent residence in another EU member state or a citizen of another EU member state, who has permanent residence in Denmark, cf. section 3(1) of the Members of the European Parliament Elections Act. A person fulfilling the mentioned requirements is entitled to vote unless he or she is legally incapacitated.

10.4.2. Who can run for the European Elections?

Any person who is entitled to vote at a European Parliament election is eligible to run for membership of the European Parliament, cf. section 6(1) of the Members of the European Parliament Elections Act. However, the person must be worthy to be a member, cf. section 6(2) of the Members of the European Parliament Elections Act.

10.5. Summary

To influence the Danish political system, Danish legislation has provided migrants with legal residence in Denmark the right to vote and run for regional and municipal elections. However, this is only possible if migrants have resided in Denmark for a period of at least three years prior to the day of the election. In regard to parliamentary elections, it is not possible for anyone without a Danish citizenship to vote or run for parliamentary. Furthermore, Danish legislation excludes non-Europeans from taking part in the European elections. Finally, Danish legislation states that only Danish citizens who are over 18 years old and who have permanent residence in Denmark are entitled to vote at referendums.¹⁰³³

Besides, the abovementioned criteria the Danish legislation doesn't describe any grounds that may determine the exclusion of migrants from participating in political decisions in Denmark. Similarly, there is no regulations or restrictions on migrants' access to participate in political decisions in their country of origin.

11. How can migrants acquire citizenship in the country? Is there a possibility of double nationality?

11.1. How can Migrants Acquire Citizenship in Denmark?

Section 44(1) of the Constitutional Act of Denmark provides that no alien may acquire Danish citizenship by naturalization except by statute. The Government or any other authority may not simply grant Danish citizenship to an alien on its own initiative, nor can they lay down rules for when a person may become a Danish citizen. Nevertheless, the current Nationality Act¹⁰³⁴ provides that, in certain situations, a person automatically becomes a Danish citizen. The Nationality Act also provides that a person may acquire Danish citizenship by making a declaration. However, there are a number of conditions that must be met first. Otherwise a person may only become a Danish citizen by statute. The practical procedure is that the Minister of Immigration and Integration submits a bill proposing that a number of people will receive Danish citizenship. Prior to this, it will have been established whether the people in question actually fulfil the conditions for becoming Danish citizens. The bill is subsequently passed by a vote in Parliament.¹⁰³⁵

11.1.1. Situations where a Migrant can become a Danish Citizen by Declaration

In accordance with the Nationality Act, different groups of migrants may acquire Danish citizenship without the Danish Parliament passing a bill. As this is a question of migrants' possibilities of acquiring Danish citizenship, this Section of the report does not examine the afore-mentioned possibilities of automatically acquiring citizenship because these rules concern children of Danish citizens, cf. sections 1(1) and 2(1) of the Nationality Act, and children adopted by Danish citizens, cf. section 2a(1) of the Nationality Act. Therefore, this Section only examines the rules that provide specific aliens with the possibility of acquiring Danish citizenship by declaration.

Section 3(1) of the Nationality Act provides that a citizen of Finland, Iceland, Norway and Sweden may acquire Danish citizenship by submitting a written declaration to the State Administration or to the Chief Administrative Officer of the Faroe Islands or Greenland, provided that the conditions listed in sections 3(2) and 3(3) are met. The alien must be more than 18 years old, but must not yet have turned 23, cf. section 3(2)(i), just as the alien, at the time of submitting the declaration, must reside in Denmark, cf. section 3(2)(ii), and must have resided in Denmark for an aggregate period of ten years, of which an aggregate period of at least five years must be within the last 6 years prior to submitting the declaration, cf. section 3(2)(iii). Furthermore, the alien must have no criminal record and must not be charged with a criminal offence, cf. section 3(2)(iv-v).

Pursuant to section 3(3), an alien may acquire Danish citizenship if he has acquired nationality in the above-mentioned countries in another way than by nationalization. He must be over 18 years old, have resided in Denmark for the last 7 years and during his residence in Denmark not have been sentenced to imprisonment.

If an alien acquires citizenship under section 3 of the Nationality Act the children of the alien concerned will acquire Danish citizenship as well, cf. section 5.

11.1.2. The Conditions for Acquiring Danish Citizenship

Before the Minister of Immigration and Integration submits a bill proposing that a number of applicants acquire citizenship by nationalization in accordance with the Constitutional Act, it must be determined whether the aliens in question meet the conditions for Danish citizenship by nationalization.¹⁰³⁶ Whether nationalization is to be granted is up to Parliament whose members will vote on this using individual discretion in the specific cases. However, some general guidelines have been laid down by Government Circular no. 10873¹⁰³⁷ as per agreement between four parties represented in Parliament.

In accordance with section 2 of Government Circular no. 10873, an alien applying for citizenship must sign a letter declaring allegiance and loyalty to Denmark. Additionally, the alien must declare that he will comply with Danish law including the Constitutional Act and declare that he will observe fundamental Danish values and principles.¹⁰³⁸

In addition to, the alien must already have been issued with a permanent residence permit and have acquired residence in Denmark, cf. section 5(1) of Government Circular no. 10873. However, this condition does not apply to a number of migrants including Nordic citizens, former Danish citizens, and people of Danish descent, amongst others.¹⁰³⁹

Citizenship by nationalization is also conditional on the migrant having 9 years of uninterrupted residence in Denmark. However, special rules for the length of residence apply to a number of different groups of applicants. These special rules are listed in sections 5-13 of the Government Circular.¹⁰⁴⁰

Pursuant to sections 19-21 of the Government Circular Letter, applicants may not be included in a bill on citizenship if they have been sentenced to an unconditional custodial sentence for 1.5 years or more or have been involved in, or have been found guilty of various kinds of criminal offences specified in section 19. Other applicants who have been found guilty of a criminal offence have to complete a specified waiting period before they qualify to be included in a bill.¹⁰⁴¹

An applicant may not owe a debt to public authorities under section 22 of the Government Circular. In addition to not owning any debt to public authorities, the applicant must also be financially self-supporting in accordance with section 23, i.e. the applicant must not have received any public benefits within the last year, and in within last 5 years he may not have received public benefits for more than 6 months.¹⁰⁴²

Finally, the applicant must pass a Danish language test, cf. section 24 of the Government Circular. In addition to this test, the applicant must also pass the Danish Citizenship Test, cf. section 24(3).¹⁰⁴³

11.2. The Possibility of Double Nationality

On 18 December 2014, the Danish Parliament passed a bill amending the Danish Nationality Act.¹⁰⁴⁴ Below, this act is referred to as the Act on Double Citizenship. The amendment act provides that Danish Citizens who wish to acquire another citizenship will be able to do this without forfeiting their Danish citizenship. There is still the possibility of forfeiting Danish citizenship if the law in the country of which a Danish national wishes to acquire citizenship requires forfeiture of the Danish citizenship.¹⁰⁴⁵

Furthermore, the Act on Double Citizenship provides that aliens who wish to acquire Danish Citizenship will no longer be met with a Danish requirement to renounce their other citizenship. The possibility of double citizenship now depends on whether the legislation in the country of which the applicant already is a citizen allows double citizenship.¹⁰⁴⁶

12. How is your country assisted by EU programmes and funding with regard to the integration of migrants?

Denmark is the only EU member state that does not participate in the implementation of the Asylum, Migration and Integration Fund, which is a specific EU programme funding integration of migrants.¹⁰⁴⁷ However, during the period 2014-2020 Denmark is scheduled to receive approximately DKK 290 million from the European Social Fund in order to support projects that will contribute to and promote social inclusion via education and employment.¹⁰⁴⁸

The purpose of social inclusion is to increase employment among people with difficulties. Specifically, the goal is to ensure young, vulnerable, people to get an education and that people with disadvantages are helped to archive ordinary employment. This means that the social inclusion is narrowed to focus on people with no or limited connection to the job market and who are reliant on supportive efforts to gain access to the job market (people on the edge of the job market). Among this target group comes social security recipients including immigrants and newly arrived, vulnerable, refugees with special challenges such as traumas etc.¹⁰⁴⁹

Therefore, the European Social Fund is not earmarked to the integration of migrants. Nevertheless, it is specifically stated that the social inclusion includes some immigrants and newly arrived refugees. So far circa DKK 14, 5 million has been granted to 15 projects within the scope of the abovementioned fund.¹⁰⁵⁰ For instance, project “Business Training – Social inclusion of vulnerable refugees” was in 2016 granted money to help vulnerable refugees into the job market.¹⁰⁵¹ Another programme is “Onwards the Workplace”-programme, which is one of the major programmes to benefit the inclusion of migrants. The programme aims at putting migrants to work through courses and practice within companies as well as raising the overall ability of work qualifications.¹⁰⁵² Out of 226 participants of projects within social inclusion, it is reported that, up to and including August 2016, 17 of them are immigrants.¹⁰⁵³ Based on our research there are no other EU programmes, which directly or indirectly contribute to or assist Denmark with regard to integration of migrants.

Conclusions

This analysis demonstrates that the Danish legislation concerning aliens is incredibly extensive. One of the reasons for that is the extremely detailed content of the Danish Aliens Act that regulates the entry and residency. Also, Denmark’s international obligations play a not inconsiderable role in this legal field. Moreover, The Danish Aliens Act has been amended several times in recent years, which makes it further difficult to navigate in the Danish immigration system.

It can be concluded that the rules regulating immigration from EU member states and non-EU states are very different. Citizens of EU-member states have rights of entry and residence merely because of nationality. Aliens who have no rights of entry and residence in the capacity of their citizenship or under EU law must, in general, meet a great number of requirements to be permitted entry into and residence in Denmark. Apart from entry and residency, aliens are able to become Danish citizen. However, it is - with few exceptions - only possible to acquire Danish citizenship by statute. Danish Nationality Law does also allow dual nationality.

The responsible bodies dealing with immigration matters are two government agencies subordinate to the Ministry of Immigration and Integration. Additionally, Denmark has the Immigration Appeals Board and the Refugees Appeals Board dealing specifically with cases regarding migrants. These quasi-judicial bodies are independent and can't seek or accept directions and instructions from the Ministry of Immigration and Integration.

This report also has covered Denmark's incorporation of the ECHR and whether ECtHR case law is a binding source in Danish jurisprudence. Furthermore, Denmark's implementation of the decisions by ECtHR, whether or not the state intervenes as a respondent state, has been discussed. In conclusion, Denmark has amended the Aliens Act in accordance with the decisions of the ECtHR, which form the interpretation of the ECHR. Moreover, many Danish cases are decided by reference to the ECHR, which is interpreted by case-law of the ECtHR. Finally, it is concluded that The Courts of Denmark are obliged to include ECtHR case law in its interpretation of Danish law but this is not an unconditionally binding source of law.

Regarding the implementation of the recommendations of the ECRI, it can be concluded that Denmark has implemented many initiatives during the last couple of years but it is also clear that Denmark does not change its policy in certain areas. This has resulted that ECRI has reiterated the same recommendations several times.

The first and second sentences hereof do not comprise assistance in the form of small amounts of isolated benefits not directly related to maintenance, or benefits that are comparable with wages or salaries or pension payments or replace such income.

(11) No residence permit will be issued under subsection (1)(i) if the application for such permit is submitted simultaneously with an application from the applicant's child for a residence permit under subsection (1)(ii) which is refused under subsection (19). Ved denne vurdering skal barnets opvækst og familiemæssige og sociale netværk her i landet tillægges særlig vægt. (16) In cases where the child lives with one of its parents in their country of origin or another country, and the child is over the age of 8, a residence permit under subsection (1)(ii) may only be issued if the child has or is able to obtain such ties with Denmark that there is a basis for successful integration in Denmark. The assessment under the first sentence hereof must emphasise the circumstances of the child and both parents. The first and second sentences hereof do not apply if exceptional reasons make it inappropriate, including regard for family unity. (17) In cases where the applicant has previously been issued with a residence permit under subsection (1)(ii) which has lapsed under section 17, a residence permit under subsection (1)(ii) may only be issued if regard for the applicant's best interests makes it appropriate. This assessment must particularly emphasise the child's childhood and adolescence and family and social networks in Denmark. If the residence permit under subsection (1)(ii) has lapsed because the child has unwillingly stayed abroad for re-education purposes or on another stay abroad negatively affecting its schooling and integration, the assessment of the regard for the best interests of the child must also particularly emphasise such situation.

Hvis udlændingen ikke har lovligt ophold, har fået fastsat en udrejsefrist eller har en anden ansøgning om opholdstilladelse under behandling, kan ansøgning om opholdstilladelse efter stk. 1 kun indgives her i landet, hvis Danmarks internationale forpligtelser kan tilsige det. En ansøgning om forlængelse af en opholdstilladelse, der er meddelt efter stk. 1, skal indgives før tilladelsens udløb, for at udlændingen kan anses for at have lovligt ophold, jf. 1. pkt.

Stk. 22. Stk. 23. Er en opholdstilladelse betinget af, at den herboende person har skullet stille økonomisk sikkerhed, jf. stk. 4, og ydes der senere ansøgeren hjælp efter lov om aktiv socialpolitik eller integrationsloven, skal kommunalbestyrelsen tvangsinddrive det beløb, der er stillet til sikkerhed, som betaling for hjælpen. Kommunalbestyrelsens videregivelse af oplysninger efter 1. pkt. kan ske uden samtykke. 1. og 2. pkt. finder kun anvendelse, hvis opholdstilladelsen er betinget af, at udlændingen og den herboende person ikke modtager hjælp efter lov om aktiv socialpolitik eller integrationsloven, jf. stk. 5, 1. og 2. pkt., og stk. 15, 1. pkt.

Introduction

This research aims at providing a comprehensive overview of Finland's legislation governing migration. Both substantive and procedural aspects are considered as we present, chapter by chapter, the right to asylum; immigration from EU Member States as compared to immigration from non-Member States; statistics regarding migrants in Finland; the national implementation of decisions of the European Court of Human Rights; the national implementation of the recommendations of the European Commission Against Racism and Intolerance; migrants' access to healthcare in Finland; migrant children's right to education under national legislation; recognition of foreign school and university diplomas in Finland; political participation of migrants in the Finnish society; acquisition of citizenship; and European Union assistance and funding with regard to the integration of migrants in Finland.

As these topics cover a wide range of issues including integration of migrants in Finland and their rights linked to various aspects of their lives - inter alia, healthcare, education and political participation - this research goes beyond merely providing a structural guide to Finland's migration laws and instead considers immigration and the life as a migrant in Finland in a wider context. However, as a descriptive study, we offer no causal or other hypothesis. The conclusion of this research summarizes the main points presented in each section but refrains from making any normative statements or suggestions.

1. How is the right to asylum regulated in national law? Give a description of the national regulations governing asylum; What is the procedure for granting asylum and who is responsible?

The right to asylum in Finland is regulated in the Aliens Act (Ulkomaalaislaki) 2004, where asylum is categorized under international protection. Under the Act, international protection means refugee status or subsidiary protection.¹⁰⁵⁴ Refugee status is granted to those who are given asylum or accepted by Finland under the refugee quota, as well as to those family members who have been issued with a residence permit on the basis of family ties and who are considered refugees.¹⁰⁵⁵ Aliens Act defines a refugee as an alien who meets the criteria laid down in Article 1 of the Refugee Convention.¹⁰⁵⁶ Subsidiary protection is considered if the requirements for granting asylum are not met.¹⁰⁵⁷ Before May 16 2016, Finland could grant asylum seekers humanitarian protection if the requirements for asylum or subsidiary protection were not met.

¹⁰⁵⁶ Aliens Act 2004, s 3(1)(11).

Since May 16 2016, humanitarian protection has no longer existed due to an amendment to the Aliens Act.¹⁰⁵⁸

1.1. A Description of the National Regulations Governing Asylum

According to the Aliens Act, aliens residing in Finland are granted asylum if they reside outside their home country or the country of permanent residence because they have a well-founded fear of being persecuted there. The reason for persecution must be ethnic origin¹⁰⁵⁹, religion¹⁰⁶⁰, nationality¹⁰⁶¹, membership in a certain social group¹⁰⁶², or political opinion¹⁰⁶³. According to the Aliens Act, actors of persecution or serious harm include the State; parties or organisations controlling the State or substantial part of the territory of the State; or non-State actors, if it can be demonstrated that the actors of protection¹⁰⁶⁴ are unable or unwilling to provide protection against persecution or serious harm.¹⁰⁶⁵ It is assumed that because of this fear, aliens are unwilling to turn to the country concerned for protection.¹⁰⁶⁶

Aliens Act opens the content of the definition of persecution, but it does not define the persecution exhaustively since aspects of each individual case must also be taken into account when defining persecution.¹⁰⁶⁷ According to the Aliens Act, acts are considered as persecution if they are sufficiently serious by their nature or repetition as to constitute a severe violation of fundamental human rights. Similarly, an accumulation of various measures of the same level of seriousness, including violations of human rights, is considered persecution. The Aliens Act gives a list of examples of forms the acts of persecution may take. For example, acts of persecution may take the form of acts of physical or mental violence, including acts of sexual violence.¹⁰⁶⁸

¹⁰⁵⁹ Origin means colour, descent or membership of a particular ethnic group. Aliens Act 2004, s 87(b)(2)(1).

¹⁰⁶⁰ Religion includes, in particular the holding of theistic, non-theistic and atheistic beliefs, the participation in, or abstention from, formal worship in private or in public, either alone or in community with others, other religious acts or expressions of view, or forms of personal or communal conduct based on or mandated by any religious belief. Aliens Act 2004, s 87(b)(2)(2).

¹⁰⁶¹ Nationality includes citizenship of a State, or lack thereof and membership of a group determined by its cultural, ethnic or linguistic identity, common geographical or political origins or its relationship with the population of another State. Aliens Act 2004, s 87(b)(2)(3).

¹⁰⁶² When assessing the reasons for persecution, a group can be considered to form a particular social group if: 1) the members of the group share a common background or an innate characteristic or belief that is so fundamental to identity or conscience that they cannot be forced to renounce it; and 2) the group is perceived as being different by the surrounding society. A common characteristic of a social group may also be sexual orientation, which, when assessing reasons for persecution, cannot include acts considered to be criminal. Gender-related aspects do not themselves alone create a presumption of persecution. Aliens Act 2004, s 87(b)(3–4).

¹⁰⁶⁴ Protection can be provided by the State or an international organization controlling the State or a substantial part of the territory of the State, which is willing and able to provide protection. The protection must be effective and of a lasting nature. Aliens Act 2004, s 88(d).

Notwithstanding the criteria mentioned above, an asylum seeker does not have an absolute right to asylum. A person will not be granted asylum if they have committed or if there are reasonable grounds to suspect that they have committed a crime against peace, a war crime or a crime against humanity; a serious nonpolitical crime before arrival in Finland; or an act that violates the aims and principles of the United Nations.¹⁰⁶⁹ Additionally, if there is a possibility for the asylum seeker to receive internal protection, asylum is not granted.¹⁰⁷⁰

International protection may be cancelled. Refugee status or subsidiary protection status is cancelled if, when applying for asylum, the applicant has knowingly given false information or has concealed facts and this has affected the outcome of the decision. When considering a cancellation of refugee status or subsidiary protection status, an individual investigation is conducted.¹⁰⁷¹

1.2. Procedure for Granting Asylum and Responsible Parties

The asylum procedure is administrative and regulated by the Aliens Act. With a reference to the Administrative Judicial Procedure Act (Hallintolainkäyttölaki) 1996, Aliens Act also regulates appellate procedure.

The main bodies throughout the asylum granting process are the Finnish Immigration Service and the police or border control authorities. The Finnish Immigration Service, police and the Border Guard supervise compliance with the provisions of the Aliens Act and any provisions issued under it. Border control authorities supervise compliance with the provisions on aliens' entry into and departure from the country.¹⁰⁷² The competent Administrative Court and the Supreme Administrative Court handles the appellate procedure.

1.2.1. Asylum Procedure

First, an asylum seeker must file an application for international protection with the police or border control authorities upon entering Finland or as soon after entering as possible.¹⁰⁷³ After that, the competent authority is the Finnish Immigration Service that handles the asylum investigation and renders a decision.

Asylum investigation has two main procedural steps: asylum interrogation and asylum interview.¹⁰⁷⁴ The objective of asylum interrogation is to establish the identity, travel route, and entry into the country of an alien applying for a residence permit on the basis of international protection. The objective of an asylum interview is to establish the grounds given by the applicant for the persecution he or she has faced in his or her home country or country of permanent residence, or for other violations of his or her rights or related threats.¹⁰⁷⁵ Both proceedings are oral proceedings and the Finnish Immigration Service must provide interpretation or translation if the alien does not understand the Finnish or Swedish language used by the authorities under the Language Act (Kielilaki) 2003.¹⁰⁷⁶

Applications for international protection are processed under normal or accelerated procedure. The requirements for issuing a residence permit are assessed individually for each applicant by taking account of the applicant's statements on his or her circumstances in the state in question and of real time information on the circumstances in that state obtained from various sources. In this individual assessment the Finnish Immigration Service takes into account vulnerability of the applicant, for example in the cases of unaccompanied children or Syrian applicants, but even vulnerable individuals' applications are processed in accordance with the Aliens Act.

After obtaining the available statement, authorities shall decide on the matter in favour of the applicant on the basis of his or her statement if the applicant has contributed to the investigation of the matter as far as possible and if the authorities are convinced of the veracity of the application with regard to the applicant's need for international protection. If the application is rejected, a decision on refusal of entry¹⁰⁷⁷ or deportation¹⁰⁷⁸ is issued at the same time, unless special reasons have arisen for not making a decision on removing the applicant from the country.¹⁰⁷⁹ The applicant will be given 7–30 days to leave Finland voluntarily: usually this “period of grace” is 30 days. It is noteworthy that the refusal of entry or deportation cannot be enforced until the decision of the Finnish Immigration Service becomes final. The decision becomes final when the applicant doesn't appeal within the time limit or the Administrative Court makes a negative decision.¹⁰⁸⁰ The general rule is that the Finnish Immigration Service has to make a decision within 6 months after application has been filed, but depending on the circumstances of the case it could take 15, 18 or 21 months.¹⁰⁸¹

Asylum seeker has the right to use a counsel when initiating and processing the application for international protection.¹⁰⁸² Asylum seeker also has the right to legal aid if he or she fulfils the qualifications regulated in the Legal Aid Act (Oikensapulaki) 2002. Legal aid covers both the asylum and appellate procedure, but legal aid does not include the attendance of an assistant in

¹⁰⁷⁷ According to the Aliens Act section 142, refusal of entry means, inter alia, removing from the country an alien who did not hold a residence permit upon entry into the country, has not been issued with a residence permit or residence card after his or her entry into the country or if his or her right of residence has not been registered after his or her entry into the country as provided in this Act. In this text, refusal of entry does not refer to Article 13 of the Schengen Borders Code.

¹⁰⁷⁸ According to the Aliens Act section 143, deportation means, inter alia, removing from the country an alien who continues to reside in the country after his or her residence permit, registered residence or residence card has expired.

the asylum interview unless the counsel is necessary for particularly serious reasons or the asylum seeker is under 18 years of age without a guardian.¹⁰⁸³

1.2.2. Appellate Procedure

If an applicant is not satisfied with the decision of the Finnish Immigration Service, the decision may be appealed to the Administrative Court. There are four Administrative Courts in Finland that handle appeals on international protection: the Administrative Court of Helsinki, the Administrative Court of Eastern Finland, the Administrative Court of Northern Finland and the Administrative Court of Turku.¹⁰⁸⁴ An appeal must be submitted to the Finnish Immigration Service or the competent Administrative Court within 21 days from receipt of service.¹⁰⁸⁵ The Administrative Court of Helsinki's average length of hearing on asylum matters is 7,5 months.¹⁰⁸⁶ If the Administrative Court makes a negative decision the decision on refusal of entry or deportation is enforceable.¹⁰⁸⁷

A decision of an Administrative Court may be appealed to the Supreme Administrative Court if the Supreme Administrative Court grants leave to appeal, and it is possible to simultaneously apply for a prohibition of enforcement of the decision. An application for leave to appeal to the Supreme Administrative Court will not prevent the enforcement of the decision unless expressly ordered otherwise by the Supreme Administrative Court. A leave to appeal may be granted if it is important for the application of the Act to other similar cases, or for the sake of consistency in legal practice, to submit the case to the Supreme Administrative Court for a decision or if there is some other weighty reason for granting the leave. An appeal must be delivered to the Supreme Administrative Court within 14 days from receipt of service.¹⁰⁸⁸ The Finnish Immigration Service has the right to appeal against a decision of an administrative court quashing or amending a decision of the Finnish Immigration Service.¹⁰⁸⁹

The appellate procedure consists mainly of written proceedings, but when necessary, an oral hearing shall be conducted for purposes of establishing the facts of the case. An Administrative Court shall conduct an oral hearing if a private party so requests. The same applies to the Supreme Administrative Court when it is considering an appeal against the decision of an administrative authority. The oral hearing requested by a party need not be conducted if the claim is dismissed without considering its merits, or immediately rejected, or if an oral hearing is manifestly unnecessary in view of the nature of the matter or for another reason.¹⁰⁹⁰

An asylum seeker who has gotten a negative decision must leave Finland. Returning means that an asylum seeker that has gotten a refusal of entry or deportation decision will either leave Finland voluntarily or will be removed from Finland.¹⁰⁹¹ The Aliens Act stipulates many grounds for refusal of entry, but the most important ground considering asylum seekers is that an alien who has entered the country without a residence permit and who is required to hold a visa or residence permit to stay in Finland but who has not applied for one or has not been issued with one may also be refused entry.¹⁰⁹² The police and the border control authorities are responsible for enforcing the refusal of entry or deportation.¹⁰⁹³

In a decision on refusal of entry or deportation, the alien may be prohibited from entering the country. A prohibition of entry is ordered if no time for voluntary return is issued or if the person has not left the country within the time period set in the voluntary return decision. A prohibition of entry is ordered for a fixed term of a maximum of five years or until further notice. An alien who has been sentenced for an offence of aggravated or professional nature may be prohibited entry until further notice.¹⁰⁹⁴

2. How does your national law regulate immigration from EU member states and non-EU states?

2.1. Immigration to Finland

In Finland, the main regulative acts concerning generally all types of immigration and also living as an immigrant are the Aliens Act 2004 (Ulkomaalaislaki 301/2004), the Act on the Promotion of Immigrant Integration 2010 (Laki kotoutumisen edistämisestä 1386/2010), the Act on the Application of Residence-Based Social Security Legislation 1993 (Laki asumiseen perustuvan sosiaaliturvalainsäädännön soveltamisesta 1573/1993), the Nationality Act 2003 (Kansalaisuuslaki 359/2003), the Non-Discrimination Act 2014 (Yhdenvertaisuuslaki 1325/2014) and the Act on the Integration of immigrants and Reception of Asylum Seekers 2006 (Laki maahanmuuttajien kotoutumisesta ja turvapaikanhakijoiden vastaanottamisesta 1269/2006).

The Aliens Act is the main regulation governing immigration: it is a comprehensive law that sets out the conditions for entering into Finland, residing in Finland, determines the requirements for visas and residence permits and regulates international protection in general. This section of study aims at providing a general view of the key points of immigration from EU member states and non-EU states to Finland. The Aliens Act will be the centre of focus.

¹⁰⁹⁴ Aliens Act 2004, s 150.

The general eligibility requirements for admission into Finland are regulated in Chapter Two of the Aliens Act also in Article Six of the Schengen Borders Code. Entry to Finland is granted to persons holding a valid travel document and a visa or a residence permit, documents that prove the intent of the stay and sufficient funds to stay, and on the condition that the person has not been prohibited entry to Finland and is not considered a danger to public order, security or health or Finland's international relations.¹⁰⁹⁵

2.2. Immigration from EU Member States

The regulatory framework of the European Union has an immense influence and impact on national law of member states in general. Migration law makes no exception to this. However, EU laws on migration law are mostly directives and due to their non-self-executing nature, they also leave room for national consideration since they need to be transposed into national legislation. Immigration from one EU Member State to another is regulated by The Treaty on European Union (art 3 s 2), The Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union (art 21) and The Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union (art 45). All three are primary sources of European Union law and thus vertically and directly applicable in all the Member States. EU also has competency when it comes to legal and illegal immigration. Council regulations and directives complete the harmonization in this field of law.¹⁰⁹⁶

The most important EU-derived contribution to the immigration legislation is that EU citizens are not required to apply for a residence permit whenever residing in Finland. However, there are certain limitations to freedom of movement and residence as will be further explained. Legislation in Finland distinguishes between three main categories of immigrants: citizens of another EU Member State and comparable persons, third country nationals with long-term EU resident status and third country nationals. In addition to these categories there are refugees seeking asylum and permit for residence on the grounds of international protection. Regulation of asylum seekers is covered in the previous Section 1 in this study.

2.2.1. Short-term Residence of EU Citizens

The Aliens Act regulates the requirements for entering Finland and residing in Finland as well as determines the requirements for visas and residence permits, international protection and various other affairs. Chapter 10 of the Aliens Act regulates the residence of EU citizens and comparable persons in Finland. A 'comparable person' in this context is a citizen of one of the following Schengen countries: Liechtenstein, Norway, Iceland or Switzerland.¹⁰⁹⁷

To reside in Finland, an EU citizen must have a valid identity card or a passport.¹⁰⁹⁸ This "paper-requirement" is the sole requirement for the free movement within the Union. Residence of less than three months needs not to be registered. Neither is registration required in a case where a resident has stayed for more than three months but is continuously seeking employment and, in addition, is likely to be employed within in a reasonable time.¹⁰⁹⁹ In fact, this makes the only exception to the registration rule that will be further explained below. Denial of entry or removal of an EU citizen is allowed if public order and security or public health so require.

2.2.2. Residence Exceeding the Limit of Three Months

EU citizens may reside in Finland for more than three months under the following conditions: they 1) are either self-employed or paid employees or practice trade; or 2) have sufficient funds to stay; or 3) are enrolled at an accredited educational institution with a principal purpose to follow the course(s) and they have sufficient means to support themselves and their family members over the time of residence.¹¹⁰⁰ The Finnish Immigration Service website provides a guide of the sums required for secured income.¹¹⁰¹

2.2.3. Citizens of Other Nordic Countries

Special regulations apply to the citizens of other Nordic countries and their family members as agreed between these countries. The secure means of support requirement does not apply if the alien is a citizen of another Nordic country. In addition, citizens of Nordic countries are allowed to reside in Finland without registration if the stay altogether lasts less than six months.¹¹⁰²

2.2.4. Family Members of EU Citizens

Family members of EU citizens, who are not EU citizens themselves, are issued a residence card if their intent is to stay in the country for over three months. According to the Aliens Act, section 154, a family member is considered to be: 1) his or her spouse, 2) his or her descendant who is under age of 21, 3) his or her direct relatives in the ascending line and who are dependent on him or her, 4) EU citizens guardian, if she or he is a minor and the guardian is considered a family member, 5) persons living continuously in a marriage-like relationship in the same household regardless of their sex are comparable to a married couple if they have lived in the same household for at least two years.¹¹⁰³ The first residence card is issued for five years, after which extension cards are issued for continuous residence.¹¹⁰⁴

2.3. Registration, Residence and Legal Effects

Application of registration is to be submitted to the Finnish Immigration Service within three months from the date of entry to the country.¹¹⁰⁵ The processing fee for registration application is 54 euros (2017).¹¹⁰⁶ Registration does not constitute or establish legalities ipso facto - it simply verifies a right and a state of affairs that already exists under the European Union Treaties and directives.¹¹⁰⁷ Therefore, the procedure is significantly different compared to immigrants coming from third countries. By neglecting registration one will be subject to a sanction for a violation of law, the sanction being sentence to fine.¹¹⁰⁸ Registration provides access to important benefits pursuant to the Municipality of Residence Act (Kotikuntalaki 201/1994).¹¹⁰⁹

Finland is being divided regionally into municipalities. After the registration procedure has been completed and confirmed, the immigrant is granted a status of municipality inhabitant. The same applies with third country citizens who have been granted a residence permit by either a fixed-term or a continuous permit.

Municipality of residence provides, inter alia, access to social security, which consists of health care and other social services. However, only permanent residence leads to access to residence-based social security such as family, housing allowance and pension allowances. Principally, students are not entitled to residence-based social security due to the nature of their stay that is temporary on the grounds of studying. A person is not considered to move to Finland to reside in the country permanently if he or she moves to the country exclusively for the purpose of studies. Under the Act on the Application of Residence-Based Social Security Legislation, a person applying for an asylum in Finland is not considered to be a permanent resident either during the period of time under which he or she stays in the country without a legally valid decision on asylum application or waiting for deportation. Neither is a person who has obtained a residence permit on the basis of temporary need for protection considered to be in Finland on a permanent basis.¹¹¹⁰ Act on the Application of Residence-Based Social Security Legislation applies from the date of arrival to those whose residence in Finland is considered to be on a permanent basis. The legality requirement of Section 3(c) provides that the permanent basis requirement is met if a person has been granted a residence permit with one year's right to reside in the country.¹¹¹¹

2.4. Immigrants from Non-EU States

2.4.1. General Provisions

The requirements for entering into Finland are notably different for third country nationals. Third country nationals are required to hold a valid Schengen visa or a residence permit when entering and residing in Finland unless they come from a country for which no visa is required and the duration of stay is less than 90 days.¹¹¹² In addition, they must meet the general criteria.¹¹¹³

2.4.2. Finnish Immigration Service

The Finnish Immigration Service is an independent organ that has the competence to handle residence permit applications and to render decisions by applying the law. The Immigration Service has drawn up their own code of conduct regarding the application of the law in order to reach the purpose and intent of the law. Decisions must be based strictly on the law, but since the law leaves room for discretion and interpretation, the instructions exist to secure coherence and equality in the decision-making.

2.4.3. Residence Permits

A residence permit entitles a person to stay in the country with the intent to immigrate permanently or temporarily. Residence permits are either fixed-term (B-permit) or continuous (A-permit). Third country nationals with a status of long-term EU residence are entitled to an EU residence permit (P-EU or P-EY). Since their introduction in 2012, all residence permit cards now include biometric identifications that consist of fingerprints and a headshot.¹¹¹⁴ Processing fees vary from 168 to 520 euros, depending on the permit type. In order to obtain a residence permit the applicant must meet the general criteria which is similar to the criteria for entering the country. Residence permit may be refused if, inter alia, the applicant is considered a danger to public order, security or health or a danger to Finland's international relations.¹¹¹⁵ A residence permit can also be revoked by the authorities on several grounds, for instance, if the applicant has deliberately given false information.¹¹¹⁶

The grounds for issuing a residence permit play a significant role in practise. If a residence permit is issued for an employed person and the permit has a restriction allowing work only for a certain employer, the holder of the residence permit is not allowed to change employer unless the field of works remains the same. For instance, if a person has been issued a permit on the grounds of employment that is, say, cleaning, changing jobs is prohibited until a new residence permit has been issued. However, issuance of a new employment permit is not possible until the employment has been assured by a contract, i.e. employer's cooperation in the application is inevitable and the whole process has multiple stages. Secured means of support is the underlying precondition for this regulation. In comparison, unrestricted employment is allowed for immigrants who have been issued a residence permit on the basis of family ties.¹¹¹⁷

2.4.4. Permit Types

2.4.4.1. B-Permit

The first residence permit is always fixed-term and may usually be extended for one year.¹¹¹⁸ Exceptions apply if the residence permit has been issued on the grounds of diplomatic or consular mission, victim of trafficking human beings, refugee status or subsidiary protection or studies. Extended permit must be applied for before the previous permit expires and extended permit must be applied for in Finland, otherwise the application will be processed as a new fixed-term permit. Extended permits are granted for up to four years maximum.¹¹¹⁹

2.4.4.2. A-Permit

Continuous permits are valid until further notice. In order to obtain an A-permit, the applicant must have been a resident in Finland for four years without interruption. Regular holidays and travels are allowed in between. In addition, the temporary residence permit has to be valid when applying for a continuous permit. A-permits are marked in the residence permit with a letter A on the residence permit.¹¹²⁰

2.4.4.3. P-Permit

Letter P on the residence permit stands for a right to permanent residence. After continuous, non-interrupted legal residence for over 4 years with an A-permit, one is granted with a P-permit.¹¹²¹

2.4.4.4. P-EU / P-EY Permit

Third country nationals who have been granted a status of a long-term EU residence are entitled to EU residence permit (P-EU or P-EY).¹¹²²

2.5. Leaving the Country

2.5.1. Voluntary Leaving

In case an applicant receives a negative decision to a residence permit application while staying in the country, he or she is required to leave Finland during a brief 'period of grace' which is normally 30 days from the notice. The same applies if the applicant has withdrawn his or her residence permit or asylum application.¹¹²³ If the applicant does not leave within the grace period, he or she will receive a sanction that is refusal of entry to the Schengen area.¹¹²⁴

There are no legal barriers for a voluntary return to one's home country from Finland. In practise, voluntary leaving may be hindered by financial barriers. If certain criteria are met, the Finnish Immigrant Service may provide assistance for returning home on request.¹¹²⁵ Assistance may consist of for instance return tickets, help with acquiring a travel document and reintegration assistance.

2.5.2. Deportation of a Migrant

Deportation takes place either when an extension permit application has been declined after period of legal stay or due to criminal activity committed by the immigrant. Deportation or removal will be enforced by the police or the Border Guard.¹¹²⁶

Grounds for deportation are regulated in Section 149 of the Aliens Act. An immigrant may be deported if she or he resides in the country without a valid residence permit, has committed an offence that, according to the Criminal Code, may follow with imprisonment for a year or more, or if he or she can be shown to endanger other people's safety, Finland's national security or relations with a foreign state.¹¹²⁷ However, a long term resident with an EU blue card may be deported only if he or she poses an immediate and sufficiently serious threat to public order or security. Grounds for deporting an EU citizen and their family members are regulated in Section 167, which provides that deportation is allowed only if the immigrant fails to meet the requirements for the right of residence or if he or she poses a danger to public order or safety.¹¹²⁸

3. Is there a ministry, government agency or other public authority specifically dealing with migrants? If so, please provide a description of the framework this authority works under.

3.1. The Finnish Immigration Service: Organisational Structure

In Finland, the government agency taking care of issues related to migration is Finnish Immigration Service (in Finnish: earlier Ulkomaalaisvirasto, nowadays Maahanmuuttovirasto). Its activities are legally defined by the Finnish Immigration Service Act¹¹²⁹ and by a correspondent government regulation¹¹³⁰. In its operations the government agency applies to great extent the Finnish Aliens Act¹¹³¹ as well as the so-called Dublin III Regulation¹¹³².

The agency is led by a Director General appointed by the government. The rest of the personnel is formed by public officers and employees appointed by the Director General, if this hasn't been delegated to another public officer by an inner order.¹¹³³ The agency is divided into profit units according to its functions: the substantive units are those named Citizenship, Asylum,

Immigration and Reception, while the administrative units cover fields such as Customer Relations, Country Information and e-Services.¹¹³⁴

3.2. The Finnish Immigration Service: Tasks

The agency, which is supervised by the Ministry of the Interior, operates with all matters related to immigration, asylum, refugee status and citizenship. It also maintains the reception system for refugees arriving to Finland. According to the agency's website, its aim is to promote "controlled immigration, good administration and human and basic rights" while implementing the Finnish immigration policy. Its tasks also include taking a general specialist role in regard to political decision-making, national and international cooperation and public discussion.¹¹³⁵

3.3. The Finnish Immigration Service: Reprobation and Media Attention

During the year 2015, Finland faced an extraordinarily massive influx of migrants. In the beginning of the year 2016, roughly 35,000 applications for asylum had been placed at Finnish Immigration Service, the ordinary number being somewhere around 5,000 per year. Consequently, the agency was struggling to maintain an effective working rhythm that would correspond to the amount of applications. This caused criticism of delays and the quality of the decisions in the Finnish media.

In January 2017, the Director General of the Immigration Service was reproved by the Government's Attorney General for an erroneous interpretation of the national law. The Aliens Act had been modified in the previous spring, when the possibility to seek asylum on the grounds of humanitarian protection had been removed from the law.

Consequently, the Director General had advised not to process any applications based on the need of humanitarian protection during spring 2016, even though the modification was to enter into force only in May 2016. Following to the reprobation by the Government's Attorney General in the beginning of 2017, the Director General appeared in the media admitting to having evaluated the situation erroneously.¹¹³⁶

4. What are the recent statistics regarding migrants (i.e. asylum-seekers, immigrants, transitmigrants, trends in migratory flows) in your country?

4.1. Statistics in Finland

4.1.1. Statistics Finland

The authority collecting statistic data related to the country's population is Statistics Finland (Tilastokeskus in Finnish). On their website, several statistics can be found regarding migration flows and the establishment of migrants in Finland. The most descriptive statistics regarding migrants are probably the ones that present the number of people of a migrant or foreign origin, dividing the group into different categories. Foreign citizens, persons born outside of Finland, persons whose first language is other than Finnish and persons with a "foreign background" are all taken into account as separate groups.

According to the definition of Statistics Finland, all persons who have at least one parent born in Finland are considered to be of Finnish origin. These persons are, for obvious reasons, not present in the statistics considering migrants. On the contrary, all the persons whose both parents, or the only parent if only one of the parents is known, are born outside of Finland, are considered to have a foreign background.¹¹³⁷ In the statistics of Statistics Finland, these persons are then divided into subcategories as stated above.

4.1.2. Finnish Immigration Service

Another authority that collects statistical data on migrants in Finland is the Finnish Immigration Service. They register the number of applications for residence permits and asylum, as well as the decisions taken in response to the applications.¹¹³⁸

While the Centre of Statistics gives a more general view on the subject, the Finnish Immigration Service focuses on providing statistics related to migration. Besides the division between residence permit and asylum seekers, neither of the two institutions goes into detail regarding the reasons of migration. There is no specific data available regarding the purposes of migration, and it is therefore hard to specify how big of an amount of all migrants is formed by those who come to Finland for example for working or educational purposes.

4.2. Changes in Migration

4.2.1. General Statistics

In 2012, the number of foreign citizens in Finland was 195,511. In 2013 the equivalent number was 207,511 and in 2014 it went up to 219,675. In 2015 there were 229,765 foreign citizens, while in 2016 they amount was 243,639. Between 2015 and 2016 the number of foreign citizens has increased by 13,874 persons. The growth was slightly bigger compared to the previous year, when the number had increased by 10,090 persons. Between 2012 and 2014 the number of foreign citizens had increased by about 12,000 persons per year; by 12,000 persons between 2012 and 2013; and by 12,164 persons between 2013 and 2014.¹¹³⁹ In the past five years, the number of foreign citizens has therefore increased consistently. However, an acceleration of the movement can be found between the years 2015 and 2016 – i.e. in 2015, the number of foreign citizens had grown faster compared to the other years.

4.2.2. Asylum Applications and Residence Permits

In 2015, a total of 32,477 asylum applications were brought to the attention of Finnish Immigration Service. In 2016, the number was significantly smaller: only 5,657 asylum applications were placed. In 2016, 2,538 applications had been made by June 2017. As for applications for a residence permit, in 2015 the immigration service received 68,203 of such applications. In 2016, the amount was 71,960 applications. By June 2017, 33,974 applications for a residence permit had been placed.¹¹⁴⁰

In the light of the statistics provided by the Finnish Immigration Service, it can be concluded that the year 2015 was exceptional in regard to the number of asylum seekers. Comparing to the previous statistics by Statistics Finland, we recall a faster growth of the number of foreign citizens between the years 2015 and 2016. However, the statistics regarding the number of asylum applications is more representative of the exceptional situation caused by a sudden migratory flow in 2015. Considering, furthermore, the amount of applications for a residence permit, a slight growth can be seen between the years 2015 and 2016. However, the two types of applications are not to be mixed: as receiving an asylum also means receiving a permit of residence, there is no straight correlation between the number of asylum and residence permit applications.

5. How have the decisions by the European Court of Human Rights concerning migrants been implemented at national level?

In general, Finland has a history as a country with a few immigrants within its borders, but this has changed in the recent years¹¹⁴¹ and the number of migrants will likely keep increasing in the future. It is clear that the Finnish migrant law needs to be modified. Since the migrant law in general has a dynamic nature,¹¹⁴² it leads to many challenges in ensuring a fair, just and rapid legal process. A residence permit can be granted on grounds of studying, working, family ties, as well as on some other grounds. The most relevant domestic laws in cases concerning migration are the Constitution of Finland (Act no. 731/1999) and the Aliens Act (Act no. 301/2004), which apply to aliens' entry into and departure from Finland as well as to their residence and employment in Finland. Constitution of Finland, Article 9 paragraph 4 states that the right of foreigners to enter and to remain in Finland is regulated by an Act. It also states that a foreigner shall not be deported, extradited or returned to another country if 'in consequence the person in question is in danger of a death sentence, torture or other treatment violating human dignity'. The Administrative Procedure Act (434/2003) guarantees fair procedure. The fact that Finland has had a low number of immigrants is reflected in the case law: Finland has received many judgments from the European Court of Human Rights, but almost none of them have concerned migration law. In general, Finland has violated the ECHR mostly in procedural rights and in matters concerning freedom of expression.¹¹⁴³

5.1. Implementation of the Decisions of the ECtHR in which Finland Has Been the Respondent State

Finland has been the respondent State only in two judgements of the ECtHR that concern migrants. In Senchishak v Finland (no. 5049/12) the applicant alleged that the Finnish authorities would violate Article 3 (prohibition of torture) and Article 8 (right to respect for private and family life) of the Convention if she was expelled to Russia, where she was originally from. The applicant had appealed the denial of a residence permit based on family ties, because her adult daughter lived in Finland. The applicant's state of mental and physical health was weakened, so there was also a question about the applicant being dependant on her daughter. The ECtHR held that the Article 3 would not be violated if the applicant was expelled to Russia (para 48). The Court also argued that the relationships between parents and adult children do not fall within the protective scope of Article 8 unless 'additional factors of dependence, other than normal emotional ties, are shown to exist' (para 55). Because the Court declared that there was no family life between the applicant and her daughter within the meaning of Article 8, the complaint was declared inadmissible in relation to the Article 8 (paras 57-58). By this judgement the ECtHR clarified the grounds of family ties, which is important, since many Finnish residence permits are granted on grounds of family ties.¹¹⁴⁴ However, this decision did not require any action or implementation in Finland because no violation of the ECHR was discovered.

In N. v. Finland (38885/02) the ECtHR confirmed, by six votes to one, that the applicant's expulsion to the Democratic Republic of Congo would amount to a violation of Article 3 of the Convention (para 167). The Court heard a new witness who had not witnessed in the national court proceedings. Therefore, the Court stated that 'it cannot be said ... that the position of the Court contradicts in any respect the findings of the Finnish courts. Neither is there any indication that the initial asylum interview was in any way rushed or otherwise conducted in a superficial manner?'. However, the Court declared that the applicant may face revenge from the relatives of dissidents for his past activities in the service of President Mobutu. The Court also noted that the publicity of the asylum case in Finland, not intended by the applicant, might further engender feelings of revenge. Additionally, the applicant appealed to family ties as a ground but the Court found that no separate issue arose under Article 8. The court did not order any damage to be paid and held that the finding of the violation of the ECHR would be sufficient for any non-pecuniary damage.

The ECtHR judgements in which Finland has been the respondent State may be enforced through compensation awarded to the victim of the human rights' violation and through law amendments.¹¹⁴⁵ Additionally, the Supreme Court of Finland has confirmed that a judgement of the ECtHR may also be a reason to reverse the earlier decision of a Finnish court.¹¹⁴⁶

5.2. Implementation of the Decisions of the ECtHR in General

In general, all the judgements of the ECtHR are also implemented through “human rights’ friendly interpretation” in courts in which also the judgements of the ECtHR must be considered.¹¹⁴⁷ Nowadays, judgements of the ECtHR have a considerable role in the Finnish case law concerning migrants. The Supreme Administrative Court frequently refers to the ECtHR decisions. The Supreme Administrative Court has referred to the ECtHR case law approximately in a quarter of its cases concerning any migrant related issues during the past year (August 2016 - August 2017). The role of the ECtHR has become more and more significant especially in cases that concern asylum and the Article 13 of the ECHR: in the asylum cases in the Supreme Administrative Court the reference to the case law of ECtHR was more common than not referring to it. However, because the ECtHR deals with very specific questions, there is not always suitable case law available to help in the interpretation of legal issues.¹¹⁴⁸

It is difficult to research how frequently the Immigration Service is considering the ECtHR case law in its decisions because the decisions of the Immigration Service are confidential. The same problem arises with the decisions of the Administrative Courts because most of the decisions of the Administrative Courts are not found from public sources.

Presumably, the Finnish case law will change in the future for several reasons, including the increasing number of migrants. Additionally, nowadays also the Finnish Immigration Service (also known as Migr) has the right to appeal to the Supreme Administrative Court for the decisions of administrative courts, which increases the number of appellate cases.¹¹⁴⁹ This right was previously reserved for those individuals who had received a negative decision from the court. This affects not only the amount of the cases but it also requires that the Supreme Administrative Court will create new guidelines for decision-making.¹¹⁵⁰ A breach of the ECHR may in some cases lead to modifications in the legislation. Changing legislation, however, can be seen as a slower way to achieve results than changing practice.¹¹⁵¹ As previously mentioned, immigration law is dynamic and this can lead to various challenges.

5.3. Recent Amendments to the Finnish Aliens Act Discussed in the Light of the ECtHR Case Law

The dynamics of immigration law, as discussed above, are also seen in the recent amendments to the Finnish Aliens Act. The amendments affect mainly asylum seekers but also other migrants. The amendments have raised discussion on the issue of the human rights of migrants as these amendments have mostly weakened of the rights of migrants. However, because the amendments are relatively new, it remains to be seen whether they have led or will lead to the violations of the ECHR. Nonetheless, the amendments may be discussed in the light of the case law of the ECtHR. Some of these amendments are discussed in the following paragraphs.

Firstly, residence permit on humanitarian protection grounds was abolished from the law in 2016¹¹⁵²: Previously according to the Finnish Aliens Act an alien residing in Finland was issued with a residence permit on the basis of humanitarian protection if there were no grounds for granting asylum or providing subsidiary protection, but he or she could not return to his or her country of origin or country of former habitual residence as a result of an environmental catastrophe or a bad security situation due to an international or internal armed conflict or a poor human rights situation. The humanitarian protection clause was a national protection category and was not based on the international human rights law¹¹⁵³. For example, the absolute prohibition of refoulement, based on the case law of ECtHR¹¹⁵⁴, is still covered by the subsidiary protection category in the Section 88 of the Finnish Aliens Act and the Section 147 prohibiting refoulement.

Secondly, the legal aid for asylum seekers was restricted.¹¹⁵⁵ According to the new Section 9 of the Finnish Aliens Act, asylum seekers have a right to legal aid in the asylum interview only if it is necessary for particularly substantial reasons or if the asylum seeker is an unaccompanied minor. Additionally, the appeal process to the administrative courts and to the Supreme Administrative Court has been accelerated in asylum cases. Previously the deadline for an appeal was 30 days, which was decreased to 21 days to administrative courts and 14 days to the Supreme Administrative Court. Only appeals to administrative courts have an automatic suspensive effect on the enforcement of the negative decision of the Finnish Immigration Service. After the appeal to the Supreme Administrative Court, the applicant can be removed from the country unless the Supreme Administrative Court has granted their application for a prohibition of enforcement. In some cases, even the appeal to an administrative court does not have automatic suspensive effect on the enforcement of a negative decision. The asylum applicant can apply for a prohibition of enforcement from the administrative court but he or she may nevertheless be speedily removed from the country.¹¹⁵⁶ All the legislative changes have raised concerns of the erosion of legal safeguards for asylum seekers and an increased risk of refoulement.¹¹⁵⁷

Previously, according to the Section 51 of the Finnish Aliens Act, aliens residing in Finland were issued a temporary residence permit if they could not be returned to their home country or to the country of permanent residence for temporary reasons of health or if they could not actually be removed from the country. This section has been altered in a way that if it is possible for the alien to return voluntarily to their home country, it is not possible to obtain resident permit under this section. This amendment has raised concerns that it could create groups of people who live outside the civil society as undocumented immigrants. Finland has traditionally had very few undocumented migrants and, consequently, there is no established system to protect the legal rights of undocumented migrants¹¹⁵⁸.

The ECHR and its supplementary protocols have, naturally, a significant role, but human rights have received specific meaning especially by the decisions of the ECtHR.¹¹⁵⁹ The Constitution of Finland guarantees the strong position of human rights: it states that 'the public authorities shall guarantee the observance of basic rights and liberties and human rights' (s 22). This also supports a human rights-friendly interpretation of law. The Finnish practice and case law related to the amendments are still evolving, as is the law itself. Only time will tell whether Finland can continue to uphold high human rights standards as it has done in the past.

6. How have the recommendations of the European Commission against Racism and Intolerance and of national human rights bodies concerning the integration of migrants been implemented?

6.1. Recommendations of the European Commission Against Racism and Intolerance request for information on the measures taken to implement ECRI's recommendations. According to a publication on migration by Statistics Finland, immigration rate hit its peak in the year 2016.¹¹⁶¹ That was surely something unexpected during at the times of drafting the recommendation and the conclusions. The overall conclusion was that the ECRI's recommendations on the actions to be taken to improve integration of immigrants and against alien hatred have mostly been implemented.

6.2. Non-Discrimination Ombudsman

The Finnish Non-discrimination Ombudsman was founded in 2015. It replaced the former Ombudsman for Minorities. The Non-discrimination Ombudsman is currently not empowered to bring matters before the courts by her own initiative, as ECRI had recommended, but her mandate now covers a wider range of prohibited grounds of discrimination than the previous Ombudsman's mandate. It covers nearly all types of discrimination except for discrimination on the grounds of gender, which in turn is falling under the Equality Ombudsman.¹¹⁶² Non-discrimination Act enumerates the powers under which the Ombudsman can receive and process complaints. In 2016, the amount of complaints received by the Ombudsman had nearly doubled, mostly due to the law reform but most likely also due to the refugee crisis.¹¹⁶³ Furthermore, at the end of the year 2016 the Finnish Police publication announced that the numbers of hate crime reported to the police had increased more than 50 per cent in year 2015 compared to the previous year.¹¹⁶⁴ Compiler of the report, Tero Tihveräinen, noted that this should not be attributed solely to the increased number of immigrants and refugees alone don't explain the numbers, as other factors may have contributed this outcome as well.¹¹⁶⁵

Despite ECRI's recommendation, thus far no local or regional branch offices for the Non-Discrimination Ombudsman have been established. In addition, the ECRI has recommended the National Discrimination Tribunal's mandate to be extended and enabled to award damages to victims of discrimination. At the time being, damages can be awarded under the Non-Discrimination Act.¹¹⁶⁶ Unlike the Non-Discrimination Ombudsman, the National Discrimination Tribunal is empowered to bring matters before either a district court or an administrative court. Decisions of the Tribunal are legally binding. Despite the attempts to reach the Non-Discrimination Ombudsman for any further commentary on the unimplemented recommendations, so far we have been unable to get any response.

6.3. Hate Crimes in Finland

ECRI's recommendations on improving measures to ensure monitoring of racist acts were considered having been implemented properly.¹¹⁶⁷ In its report, Finland had provided information on the several steps taken to improve authorities' ability to recognise hate crime incidents. In addition, police officers and prosecutors have participated in certain training events on racist criminal offences and the monitoring of hate crime. Yet ECRI notes that it is too early to assess the impact of these actions.¹¹⁶⁸ The Criminal Code of Finland does not recognise the term 'hate crime'.¹¹⁶⁹ Nevertheless, hate as a motive of committing a crime may aggravate the sanctions. Ethnic agitation is also forbidden by the law and punished by a fine or imprisonment.¹¹⁷⁰ The Police University College conducts an annual study on alleged hate crimes. The most recent official study covers the year of 2015. One of its many findings was that the most common criminal offence having racist features was an assault.¹¹⁷¹

Although the ECRI's recommendations apply to specific instances, it does not provide a full view of the development in the fight against racism and intolerance in Finland. An example of intolerance worth mentioning is a patriotic picketing movement called "Finland First" (Suomi Ensín) that has been in the headlines rather a lot during the year 2017. The organisation behind it has an official political agenda to strive for an independent currency, border controls for controlling illegal immigration and political independence.¹¹⁷² In practise, the picketing has turned out to be more than a harmless demonstration. Picketers had a tent set up in the Central Railway Station, an important public square in Helsinki for approximately five months since February 2017, until the Finnish Police ordered the dispersal of their camp on Monday 26 June 2017.¹¹⁷³ Picketers had failed to comply with the orders of the Police to pay attention to the general order and security. Picketers had also assaulted multiply bystanders, and this finally led to coercive measures taken by the authorities. The "Finland First" movement is seen to represent pure racism stemming from alien hatred as one of the consequences of the refugee crisis.

6.3.1. UN's Concerns on Hate Crime in Finland

The UN Member States have reviewed the situation of human rights in Finland rather recently, in May 2017.¹¹⁷⁴ In the UN's Periodic Review of Human Rights other Member States expressed

7. How is migrants' right to access to healthcare regulated within the national legislation?

The right to health is a fundamental human right guaranteed by many international and European human rights instruments. Everyone's, including migrants' access to healthcare without discrimination is a key element of this right. However, in Finland, the requirements to access public healthcare as well as the range of services provided vary amongst different groups of migrants. As the basis for access to healthcare in Finland is legal residency, migrants who are not registered as residents have fairly restricted access to public healthcare services.

7.1. Overview of the National Health System

A short description of the Finnish health system is needed to understand how access to healthcare is defined in the national legislation. According to the Constitution of Finland, the state and public authorities are responsible for promoting the health of the population and ensuring adequate social, health and medical services to all.¹¹⁷⁶ The national Ministry of Social Affairs and Health is responsible for the overall functioning and general policies of social and health services. In the Finnish healthcare system, which is divided into public and private healthcare, most of the healthcare services are organized by the municipal health system as municipalities are required by law to arrange and provide adequate social and healthcare services to their residents. Private healthcare services are meant to supplement the mainly tax-funded public healthcare system. Municipalities are responsible for providing both primary and specialized healthcare services to inhabitants within their borders.¹¹⁷⁷

7.2. Constitutional Basis of Migrants' Right to Healthcare

As there is no specific legislation in Finland concerning migrants' right to access healthcare, the Constitution of Finland provides a basis for the evaluation of the national legal framework on access to healthcare. According to Section 1 of the Constitution of Finland, the Constitution guarantees the inviolability of human dignity and the freedom and rights of the individual and promotes justice in society. The Constitution protects the fundamental rights of all individuals in its territory regardless of, inter alia, their gender, race, nationality, or the nature of their stay.

¹¹⁷⁷ Ministry of Social Affairs and Health, 'Health Services' <<http://stm.fi/en/health-services>> accessed June 30 2017.

Section 19(1) of the Constitution of Finland defines the fundamental right to health and healthcare services. It states that ‘those who cannot obtain the means necessary for a life of dignity have the right to receive indispensable subsistence and care’. The article gives everyone a subjective right to the level of income and access to services that secure the minimum level of decent living conditions. This includes, for example, the right to emergency care.¹¹⁷⁸

According to the Constitution, public authorities are responsible for providing adequate healthcare services to all as is further specified by law.¹¹⁷⁹ However, as stated by the Constitutional Law Committee, equal right to health services is not an absolute right in the sense that it cannot under any circumstances be restricted or that different groups of people could not be treated differently.¹¹⁸⁰ Thus, restricting certain individuals’, such as migrants’, access to healthcare is not against the Constitution as long as the right to receive indispensable subsistence and care is secured in all situations.

7.3. Access to Healthcare for Different Migrant Groups

The right to access to healthcare is further defined in the Act on the Status and Rights of Patients 1992. As stated in Section 3 of the Act, ‘every person who is permanently resident in Finland is without discrimination and regardless of his nationality entitled to healthcare required by his state of health within the resources available to healthcare at the time in question’. Specific provisions apply to persons who are staying in Finland temporarily.¹¹⁸¹ In addition, urgent medical care in public healthcare is always provided to every individual staying in Finland regardless of the nature of their stay or their legal status.¹¹⁸² Any further right to receive public healthcare services depends on the person’s right of residence and the nature of their stay as stated in the Municipality of Residence Act 1994.

7.3.1. Third-country Nationals

Third-country nationals are defined as individuals who are not citizens of EU- and EEA-countries or citizens of Switzerland. Third-country nationals’ right to healthcare services depends on the legal nature of their stay. If a third-country national resides in Finland legally and permanently as stated in the Municipality of Residence Act 1994, they will get a municipality of residence. A person’s stay in Finland is considered to be permanent if they have a continuous fixed-term residence permit or a permanent residence permit as stated in the Aliens Act 2004. A person with a municipality of residence is entitled to the same healthcare services as Finnish citizens. Therefore third-country nationals with a continuous or a temporary residence permit or a permanent residence permit have the right to receive full healthcare services offered by the municipality.

A person with a temporary fixed-term residence permit can get a municipality of residence and thus full access to public healthcare services if their residence permit is valid for at least one year and when taking into consideration the circumstances, i.e. their purpose is to reside in Finland permanently.¹¹⁸³

Asylum seekers are in a special position in regard to access to healthcare services. Based on the Act on the Reception of Persons Applying for International Protection and on the Identification of and the Aid to Victims of Trafficking in Human Beings 2011, asylum seekers have a right to receive other healthcare services deemed necessary by a medical professional in addition to the urgent medical care that is offered to all in accordance with Section 50 of the Health Care Act. These healthcare services are a part of reception services given to all asylum seekers in Finland.¹¹⁸⁴ Asylum seekers' healthcare services are organized by reception centres. In addition to costs incurred by the treatment, reception centres will also cover the costs of medicines prescribed by a doctor. The state will compensate for the costs of healthcare for reception centers as part of the reception costs.¹¹⁸⁵ In some cases, however, asylum seekers can be charged a fee for the health services pursuant to the Act on Client Fees in Social Welfare and Healthcare.¹¹⁸⁶

All asylum seekers undergo a basic health examination on arrival. A healthcare professional will make an assessment of the need for health services based on each asylum seeker's individual situation, their state of health, and the length and continuation of their stay in Finland. Even though asylum seekers' stay in Finland isn't seen as continuous or permanent in legal terms, in reality their stay may continue for several years. Consequently, providing asylum seekers only emergency care cannot be considered adequate. The Ministry of Social Affairs and Health has emphasized that asylum seekers should also be provided with other necessary health services, including maternity care and necessary treatment of chronic illnesses.¹¹⁸⁷ Underage asylum seekers have an even wider access to healthcare in Finland as they are entitled to the same healthcare services as persons with a domicile in Finland.¹¹⁸⁸

7.3.3. Undocumented Migrants

At present, undocumented migrants' access to healthcare services is very limited in Finland. Like in many other European countries, undocumented migrants are only entitled to emergency care at their own cost. Under current legislation municipalities are obliged to provide public healthcare services and specialized medical care only to those individuals whose home municipality it is. Other groups of people such as undocumented migrants are not entitled to any other healthcare services besides medical care in urgent cases.

There is no specific legislation regarding undocumented migrants' access to healthcare and thus their right to access to health services has to be deduced from the applicable general legal framework. Undocumented migrants may access emergency care in accordance with the Health Care Act. According to Section 50 of the Health Care Act 2010: urgent medical care, also including urgent oral healthcare, mental healthcare, substance abuse care and psychosocial support are provided for patients regardless of their place of residence. In the Health Care Act, urgent medical care is defined as the immediate intervention and treatment of urgent cases that cannot be postponed without risking the worsening of the condition or further injury. However, as the Health Care Act or its supplementary regulation does not further define the meaning or scope of urgent medical care, it is unclear what kind of health issues are covered by urgent medical care.¹¹⁸⁹

Some Finnish municipalities, i.e. Helsinki, Espoo and Vantaa, have decided to provide undocumented migrants other health services in addition to the urgent medical care. These services usually include healthcare for particularly vulnerable migrants such as pregnant women and children.¹¹⁹⁰ In addition, special volunteer-run clinics such as the Global Clinic provide free healthcare services for undocumented migrants.¹¹⁹¹

As undocumented migrants do not have a municipality of residence in Finland, municipalities can collect a fee of the emergency care they have received. According to the Act on Client Fees in Social Welfare and Healthcare 1992, the fee collected can't be higher than the amount that the production cost of the services. However, municipalities are not obliged to collect a fee for the healthcare services provided and they may use lower rates or provide the health services free of charge. In any case, undocumented migrants can't be denied access to urgent medical care even if they do not have sufficient funds to pay for the treatment.

In 2014, the government of Finland made a proposal that would have obliged municipalities to offer undocumented migrants wider access to necessary healthcare services in addition to the emergency care. In addition, the proposal would have granted undocumented migrants under the age of 18 access to the same healthcare services as Finnish citizens. However, the Parliament did not reach an agreement on the government's proposal and to date, there has been little progress in the legislation process to ensure wider access to healthcare for undocumented migrants.¹¹⁹²

7.4. Challenges in Migrants' Access to Healthcare

Accessibility of healthcare services is a key component of the right to health. This means that healthcare services must be physically and economically available for all persons without discrimination. In addition, everyone must receive and have access to information concerning health related issues and available health services.¹¹⁹³ Migrants in general and especially vulnerable migrant groups may face difficulties in accessing the healthcare services they are entitled to due to cultural and religious differences, language barriers and lack of information.¹¹⁹⁴

The Finnish healthcare system has faced new challenges as the number of migrants has increased. According to studies and reports on migrants' health and access to healthcare services in Finland, migrants often lack awareness of the Finnish healthcare system and their entitlement to health services.¹¹⁹⁵ Migrants do not utilize health examinations and screenings, rehabilitation or mental health services as much as the general population which may indicate that health services do not reach the most vulnerable migrant groups who need those services the most. Migrant groups such as asylum-seekers, migrant women, elderly migrants and migrants with mental health issues are at particular risk of having very limited access to the health services they need.¹¹⁹⁶ Apart from the lack of information, language difficulties and cultural differences may create barriers to migrants' access to health services. Healthcare personnel need more education in caring for migrants from different cultures and backgrounds.¹¹⁹⁷

Vulnerable migrant groups such as asylum seekers and migrant women often have special health needs that require specialized care. In Finland there are some special programmes and services that provide specific assistance to certain migrant groups. Centres for Torture Survivors in Helsinki and Oulu are run by the Helsinki and Oulu Deaconess Institutes and offer rehabilitation services to tortured refugees and asylum seekers.¹¹⁹⁸ The Finnish Association for Mental Health has established a SOS Crisis Centre that provides various crisis services, for example counselling and rehabilitation courses, for migrants free of charge.¹¹⁹⁹

8. How do migrant children benefit from the right to education under your national legislation (Article 2 of the first Protocol to the ECHR)?

The authorities must treat all children primarily as children and consider their best interest regardless of the residence status of their parents. In decisions concerning a child, the child's best interest must always be assessed on a case-by-case basis. The fundamental rights to which children are entitled include the right to health care and the right to basic education.

According to the Convention on the Rights of the Child, in all actions concerning children undertaken by public or private social welfare institutions, courts of law, administrative authorities, or legislative bodies, the best interests of the child must be taken as a primary consideration.¹²⁰⁰ This obligation is directed at all authorities and applies to all children living in Finland regardless of their status. The Finnish Aliens Act also stipulates that in any decisions issued under the Act, special attention shall be paid to the best interest of the child and to circumstances related to the child's development and health.¹²⁰¹

In Finland every child has the right to basic education, but some problems have arisen regarding access to school. Especially undocumented children have an extremely vulnerable position in the society, mainly because of the lack of permanent residence. They are not registered in the Population Information System and if the parents of undocumented children are not residents of a municipality, this means that the children are also at risk of being excluded from child welfare services. Because of this, it is even more vital that the undocumented children are not denied access to school.

8.1. The Right to Basic Education Under ECHR

Under the ECHR, the right to education is guaranteed by Article 2 Protocol No. 1 ECHR. It states that '[n]o person shall be denied the right to education. In the exercise of any functions which it assumes in relation to education and to teaching, the State shall respect the right of parents to ensure such education and teaching in conformity with their own religious and philosophical convictions'¹²⁰². This right should also be implemented in accordance with the principle of non-discrimination. The ECtHR has raised the right to education to one of the 'most fundamental values of the democratic societies making up the Council of Europe'¹²⁰³, and, as such, it constitutes a right to which every person is entitled. The Court has stated, on the fact that such a fundamental right cannot be interpreted restrictively, and affirmed the universality of the right to education by holding that the exclusion of children, because their parents were not regularly registered migrants, violated the ECHR and the right to education.¹²⁰⁴

8.2. The Right to Basic Education in Finland

The According to the Finnish Constitution, every child has the right to free basic education.¹²⁰⁵

The Finnish Constitution states:

Everyone has the right to basic education free of charge. Provisions on the duty to receive education are laid down by an Act. The public authorities shall guarantee for everyone equal opportunity to receive other educational services in accordance with their ability and special needs, as well as the opportunity to develop themselves without being prevented by economic hardship. The freedom of science, the arts and higher education is guaranteed.

Accordingly, every child has the right to free basic education and must be able to reach school regardless of his or her parents' legal status. The Constitution of Finland and the international human rights treaties impose an obligation to guarantee these rights to all people in areas within the state's jurisdictions. This applies also to persons who are staying in the state illegally¹²⁰⁶.

Basic education in Finland is provided as compulsory education¹²⁰⁷. In practice, this includes classes of primary school grades 1-9. In addition to teaching, a child has the right to receive the books, other learning materials and tools needed free of charge at school. In Finland, many other services such as student care services are also offered alongside the unpaid basic education free of charge. During the school day, pupils also receive a free meal.

8.3. Compulsory Education and Access to School

All children residing in Finland permanently are subject to compulsory education; consequently, they must receive basic education. In Finland, compulsory education usually begins in August of the year when the child reaches 7 years and ends when the basic education has been completed or 10 years have elapsed since the beginning of compulsory schooling. As previously mentioned, all the migrant children do have the right to basic education but not necessarily right to compulsory education without a permanent resident status¹²⁰⁸.

In this case, the question of this link between the right to education and compulsory education is the migrant child's genuine opportunity to be able to have access to school. Every child with the right to compulsory education is entitled to enter school. However, as stated in the Constitution of Finland, the municipality must provide basic education for all children in its territory¹²⁰⁹, including migrant children without the right to compulsory education. Thus, the constitutional obligation for municipalities to provide basic education is extensive. The Basic Education Act¹²¹⁰ does not require that the child's residence in the municipality needs to be permanent or that the municipality should be the home of the child. Compulsory education is limited to permanent residents only.

In spite of the quite precise wording of the Constitution, there have been differing interpretations of the legislation before the Parliamentary Deputy Ombudsman's position in December 2013. The Parliamentary Deputy Ombudsman has reaffirmed that under Finnish law, all children, including undocumented, have the right to free basic education¹²¹¹. The interpretation of the Constitution had in the past led to a situation where not all school-age children had access to school because of the missing status of a permanent resident in a municipality. After the Ombudsman's statement, also the Ministry of Education and Culture of Finland informed, that they will step up the guidance directed at municipalities and regional government agencies so that in the future they would interpret the law correctly, providing basic education to all children in Finland's territory¹²¹².

9. How are foreign school and university diplomas recognised in your country (e.g. through national law under the CoE/UNESCO Convention on the Recognition of Qualifications concerning Higher Education in the European Region of 1997) and what are the practical procedures?

In Finland the recognition of higher education diplomas is divided into two types of administrative decisions: the "general" recognition from the Finnish National Agency for Education (later, the FNAE) which recognizes the level and comparability of the education, and the recognition of professional qualification which gives the right to practice a profession in Finland. All degrees do not need to be recognized.

9.1. Legislation

Finland has ratified the Convention on the Recognition of Qualifications concerning Higher Education in the European Region of 1997 with a declaration to Article II.2.¹²¹³ It states that the Republic of Finland retains the competence to make recognition decisions to higher education institutions.

Finland has implemented rules of recognition and comparability of qualifications from international agreements and treaties of the European Union to The Act on Eligibility for Public Posts Provided by Higher Education Studies Completed Abroad (1385/2015) [Laki ulkomailla suoritettujen korkeakouluopintojen tuottamasta virkakelpoisuudesta] and to the Act on Recognition of Professional Qualifications (1384/2015) [Laki ammattipätevyyden tunnustamisesta]. The latter does not regulate requirements for posts in the fields of police, border guards and army or posts that have legal education as an eligibility requirement, and it applies only to residents from ETA-area or people who have a solid connection to it.

The Government Decree on Studies Supplementing Higher Education Studies Completed Abroad (1460/2015) [Valtioneuvoston asetus ulkomailla suoritetuista korkeakoulupintoista täydentävistä opinnoista] amended the rules for the recognition of supplementary studies. The higher educational institution can require complementary studies if the recognition requires not more than one third of the total extent of the higher education studies leading to the degree and if the degree completed is recognized as comparable to a Finnish higher education degree. In the recognition of a study module, the higher educational institution can require complementary studies not more than one half of the total extent of a module completed in Finland, when the study module completed abroad is recognized as comparable to a study module completed in Finland.

9.2. Authorities

The educational requirements for certain professions or the right to practice a profession are provided by the law. Requirements are set for 81 different public professions mainly in the health care and education sectors. The educational requirement laid down by law means that specific legislation determines what kind of specific education you need to work in that position in Finland.

There are four different ways to recognize a degree depending on why the recognition is needed. It can be done by The Finnish National Agency for Education, field-specific authorities, employers, and higher education institutions or other educational institutions. Refugees or any other vulnerable groups do not have any special procedures. All applications will be processed in compliance with current legislation.

The Finnish National Agency for Education decides the equivalence of foreign and Finnish higher education studies. It decides eligibility of the qualifications or degrees for posts with eligibility requirements and also gives expert opinions on foreign degrees. Decisions either equate foreign higher education studies to certain Finnish studies or recognize the professional qualifications. Foreign higher education qualifications can be equated to a Finnish degree if Finland has a statutory qualification requirement for a certain post. The regulated professions which have a statutory eligibility requirement in Finland are listed on the FNAE's website¹²¹⁴.

Field-specific authorities decide on professional qualifications on the basis of a foreign degree in accordance with their competence: for instance, acting as a special veterinarian requires the approval of The Finnish Food Safety Authority, and acting as an attorney requires the approval of the bar association.

Employers themselves evaluate the qualifications given by a foreign education institution when choosing their employees if the position in question does not require a certain or specific level of education or professional qualification.

¹²¹⁴ The National Agency for Education, 'Qualification for a profession based on a degree passed abroad' <http://www.oph.fi/english/services/recognition/professional_rights_on_the_basis_of_a_foreign_qualification> accessed July 2 2017 [Finnish].

Higher education institutions and other educational institutions can decide on the recognition of a postgraduate study diploma or a degree by a foreign institution when applying to postgraduate studies. Therefore, there is no need for a decision by the FNAE or any other competent authority while applying to higher studies. However, educational institutions can still ask for advice from The Finnish National Agency for Education on academic recognition issues.¹²¹⁵

Only the FNAE makes administrative decisions on the eligibility of a degree for a regulated profession. The applicant may also need a decision on one's right to act in a certain profession in Finland in addition to the general recognition of one's eligibility. The right could be acquired by the same body granting the right to practice that profession on the basis of a degree or education in Finland.

For example, if a person applies for a position of a state official with an eligibility requirement of a doctor's degree one will only need a recognition by the FNAE. If the same person applies for the position of a doctor instead, the applicant will need the right to practice in that profession. In this case the professional qualification can be acquired from the authority managing the profession in Finland (here, the National Supervisory Authority for Welfare and Health). If both recognition of foreign education and the right to practice a profession are needed, they can be obtained simultaneously. In the evaluation of the right to practice a certain profession in Finland, weight can be given to education, work experience, and supplementing studies or internship, while the recognition process takes into account only the equivalency of the degree in Finland.

9.3. Procedure

When recognition is required, the procedure starts with finding the right authority overseeing the profession in question. Recognition can be applied for if an education is completed in a foreign country and the applicant is a graduate, has a diploma and the degree is similar to the Finnish degree. For filing an application, officially certified copies of the diploma, translations and identification of the applicant are needed.

A foreign university degree can be recognized as equivalent to a Finnish bachelor's or master's degree, lower or higher postgraduate licentiate degree or a doctoral degree. The degree must be equivalent to the complexity and orientation of degrees to Universities in Finland to which it is admitted.¹²¹⁶

The recognized degree must be completed and it has to be a part of the official education system in that country. A decision on the recognition can only be made by individual application and every application will be addressed individually. The recognition of a foreign qualification does not transform it to its Finnish equivalent: a Finnish degree title can only be obtained by completing a Finnish degree.

A decision by the FNAE is requested by submitting a signed application form with annexes to the FNAE.¹²¹⁷ Within one month of receiving an application, the FNAE sends a receipt by email to the applicant. The average processing time of the application is three to four months after the applicant has provided all the necessary documents to the FNAE. An application fee is charged. The applicant has the right to appeal the decision to the Administrative Court and an appeal request form is attached to the FNAE's decision. The decision is given in Finnish or Swedish.

Most common causes that prevent the recognition of a foreign education are that the education is not a part of that country's official education system, the degree is in a different level in the Finnish education system, or Finland has no eligibility requirement laid by law for that post. If the degree is a part of that country's official system but cannot be recognized, the FNAE also provides expert opinions. An opinion can be given on a completed degree that is a part of the official education system of the country where it was obtained. It does not give eligibility for a post requiring specific qualification or level of studies. However, an expert opinion by the FNAE can be helpful for finding a job or applying to applying for further education. The opinion is given in Finnish or Swedish and describes the level and content of the degree. It can be sought by submitting a completed application with attachments to the FNAE. The form and instructions are on the FNAE website in Finnish, Swedish and English. The document will be sent by mail to the applicant or his contact person in Finland.¹²¹⁸

The processing time of an application for expert opinion is about three months, depending on the FNAE's need to consult outside experts. A decision for the recognition of professional qualifications must be rendered within four months from the date the application was submitted. There is no established time period for addressing the eligibility of higher education. The FNAE does not offer in-person customer service; therefore, all needed assistance is given by phone or e-mail.

Fees for applications are listed on the FNAE's website. Fees charged for the applications are between 234€ and 353€. Cancelled application is 62€ and the final decision of the recognition of professional qualifications 55€.¹²¹⁹ The fee includes a decision on the recognition of the level of a higher education degree, where applicable.

Between 1997 and 2016, the Finnish National Agency for Education made over 10,500 administrative decisions on the eligibility of a foreign university degree for a regulated post. Of the abovementioned decisions 67 appeals were made (0.64 % of all the decisions).

10. How is participation of migrants in political decisions regulated in your national legislation? Are they legally allowed to participate in their country of residence the same way as in their country of origin?

The participation of migrants in political decisions is enabled through voting rights within the Finnish society at both municipal and state level. The right to vote and participate in political decision-making is dependent on the timeframe of residence or citizenship in Finland. The ability of migrants to participate in the action of political parties will also be referred to in this section, since political parties are traditional actors when dealing with political decision-making and societal activity. This section will begin with the examination of the right to vote and continues to present the options for standing for elections and participating directly in political decision-making, and concludes with an introduction to the possibilities granted by freedom of assembly and freedom of association that are traditional features of the Finnish society. In summary, the various regulations that guarantee migrants the right to participate in political action within the Finnish society are dissected in this chapter of the research report.

10.1. Voting as Participation in Political Decisions

Success in enabling the proper integration of migrants in the society is one characteristic of a well-functioning democracy. In 2014, Finland ranked third in political participation in the Migrant Integration Policy Index and the good ranking is linked especially to the participatory rights and education of migrants.¹²²⁰ Despite the legal guarantees for migrants to participate in political action, their voting activity in elections is to some extent a concern and needs to be improved for democracy to function in a well-balanced manner.¹²²¹

10.1.1. Voting in National Elections and Referendums

According to Chapter 2, Section 14, Subsection 1 of the Constitution concerning Electoral and Participatory Rights, every Finnish citizen above the age of 18 has the right to vote in national elections (parliamentary and presidential elections) and referendums. As stated in the Constitution, voting in national elections requires citizenship status. The requirements for gaining citizenship are covered in a later section of this research report. The Finnish Constitution regulates the holding of municipal and national elections and referendums and the Ministry of Justice is the highest electoral authority in Finland, promoting and monitoring electoral and participatory rights.¹²²² The appellate authority, in the case of elections, is the Administrative Court and also migrants are entitled to file for a complaint if their rights are violated. If migrants are not included in the register of eligible voters, even if eligible, they may issue a written demand for rectification to the Local Register Office as stated in Chapter 3, Section 24 of the Election

Act. The appellate authority for the decisions made by the Local Register Office is the Administrative Court.

Since 2012, 50,000 Finnish citizens have been able to initiate a citizens' initiative pursuant to Chapter 4, Section 53, Subsection 3 of the Constitution and this has been seen as an improvement to the functioning of direct democracy. Section 3 of the Citizens' Initiative Act states that a Finnish citizen who is entitled to vote can set up a citizens' initiative and under Section 6 it is stated that any Finnish citizen entitled to vote can support the initiative. This gives also migrants who have gained citizenship the possibility to participate in initiatives that attempt to affect Finnish legislation directly. So far, the citizens' initiative concerning equal marriage rights is the only initiative that has been accepted by the Parliament of Finland, taking effect in March 1 2017.¹²²³

Information concerning elections and electoral rights is offered in the official languages of Finland, but due to the diversification of languages used by Finnish citizens and people residing in the country, information is being offered also in other languages. Improving the coverage concerning elections is a perpetual priority for the Ministry of Justice as the highest electoral authority. Municipal elections held in 2008 were the first occasion when information was distributed in 11 languages besides the official languages of Finnish, Swedish and Sami.¹²²⁴ In the elections of 2017, information was given in 18 different languages besides the Finnish, Swedish and Sami languages.¹²²⁵ This improves the possibilities for migrants to participate in their local political decisions.

10.1.2. Voting in Municipal Elections

Besides national elections, there are municipal elections that are held every four years. Municipal councils are the highest authority in the municipalities and they have the power to make decisions concerning, inter alia, municipal tax and health care services. The Municipality of Residence Act regulates the basis on which the residence of a certain municipality is determined. According to Chapter 2, Section 4, the Municipality of Residence Act is applicable when the person moving to Finland is a Finnish citizen or a citizen of a European Union Member State or a citizen of Liechtenstein, Norway, or Switzerland, and has registered their residence in Finland if required to do so, or is a family member of a person who has residence of municipality. The Municipality of Residence Act is also applicable when the person has a valid permanent residence determined by the Aliens Act or holds a temporary residence permit valid for at least one year and has an intention to settle in Finland. If a migrant fulfils one of these qualifications stated in the Municipality of Residence Act and becomes a resident of a certain municipality, they may gain additional rights, including voting rights, in the municipality of their residence.

According to Chapter 5, Section 20, Subsection 1 of the Local Government Act, the right to vote in municipal elections is granted to people who are citizens of Finland, Iceland, Norway, or of any European Union Member State, have turned 18 by the end of the election day and have their residence of municipality according to the Municipality of Residence Act, by latest on the 51st day before the election day. The voting right in municipal elections is also granted to other foreigners who have had residence of municipality for two years and who are registered to a municipality by latest on the 51st day before the election day. According to Subsection 2, expatriates working for the European Union or for an international organisation operating in Finland, as well as their family members, are entitled to vote if they fulfil the qualifications of age and residence of municipality and have registered to the Population Information System and have informed the Local Register Office of their will to vote in municipal elections by latest on the 52nd day before the election day. Migrants have therefore various possibilities to participate in local political decisions. Regardless, the voting activity of foreign citizens in municipal elections has varied between 15–20%, but the statistics show no data concerning the voting activity of migrants who have gained Finnish citizenship and are no longer classified under the status of a foreigner.¹²²⁶

10.2. Standing for Elections as Participation in Political Decisions

When discussing sustainable democracy policies, the attendance of less active groups is essential. In order to improve the voting activity rates within less active groups, such as migrants and the youth, it is crucial to attract people representing these groups as candidates in elections.¹²²⁷ Political parties are considered as the main actors in political decision-making and becoming a member of a political organisation is one way of participating in political decisions. Political parties have regulations concerning their memberships, and the Political Party Act regulates the functioning of political parties. The Political Party Act was modified in 2012 to allow foreign citizens who are eligible to vote in municipal elections or European Parliament elections to become supporters of a political party in the process of registering a new party.¹²²⁸ The most common way to become nominated as a candidate in elections is to become nominated by a registered party. The party has the right to decide which candidates are accepted and according to Chapter 13, Section 183 of the Election Act there is no right to appeal to a decision regarding the nomination of candidates.

The Election Act regulates the organising of elections and is applicable to all elections held in Finland. The Act regulates the eligibility of candidates, and these regulations vary depending on the election being held. According to Chapter 9, Section 108 and 119 concerning parliamentary elections, parties that are registered to the party register and constituency associations established by at least 100 persons, who are entitled to vote in that election district, are entitled to nominate candidates. Every Finnish citizen, who is entitled to vote and is not declared as incompetent, is eligible to be nominated as candidate in parliamentary elections as stated in Chapter 3, Section 27 of the Constitution. According to Chapter 11, Section 146 and 150 concerning municipal elections, registered parties and constituency associations established by at least 10 persons, who are entitled to vote in that particular municipality, are entitled to nominate candidates. According to Chapter 10, Section 71 of the Municipality Act, eligible candidates are people 1) whose residence is in the municipal in question, 2) have the right to vote in municipal elections in some municipality, and 3) are not incompetent. Section 70 also states that a written consent is required when running as candidate. Hence the right to stand for elections is also accessible to migrants if they have gained citizenship or have lived in Finland for two years and have become entitled to vote in municipal elections. Eligibility to run for President of the Republic is restricted under Chapter 5, Section 54 of the Constitution to native-born Finnish citizens, so migrants are not eligible to become President of the Republic.

10.3. Freedom of Assembly and Freedom of Association

Participation in political decision-making becomes accessible to migrants through freedom of assembly and freedom of association that are granted under Chapter 2, Section 13 of the Constitution. Freedom of assembly guarantees all people the right to organise an assembly or demonstration or take part in these without being required to obtain a permit. The Assembly Act regulates the gathering of assemblies and demonstrations and guarantees that everyone's rights are respected. The Constitution also regulates the freedom of association. Associations and organisations are important actors when influencing political decisions, so belonging to these organisations can be seen essential when discussing taking part in political decisions. Belonging to an association is not dependent on the origin of the person, so according to the Constitution this is valid also when it comes to migrants being members of an association. According to Chapter 3, Section 10, Subsection 1 of the Associations Act, members of an association can be individual people, communities or foundations. Subsection 2 regulates that if the primary intention of the association is to influence state affairs, members of the association are to be Finnish citizens or foreigners who have residence in Finland. The right and ability to join associations is important for all members of the society, since associations have the power to affect political decisions and law-making by giving statements while the government is enacting acts.¹²²⁹

10.4. Participatory Rights of European Union Citizens

European Union citizens have some additional participatory rights compared to migrants coming from non-EU states. EU-nationals are eligible to stand for elections and vote in municipal and European Parliament elections in the country of their residence. As stated in the previous paragraphs, voting in the country of residence, instead of the country of origin, requires a separate notice to the Local Register Office of the will to vote in Finland in municipal elections or in the European Parliament elections. In the case of the European Parliament elections, after this notice has been made, the person is registered to the voting register in Finland and is excluded from voting registers in other EU Member States as stated in Chapter 3, Section 18, Subsection 5 and Chapter 12, Section 161 of the Election Act. Pursuant to Chapter 12, Subsections 167 and 177, a citizen of the European Union can be nominated as a candidate in one Member State only and the Population Register Centre of Finland verifies that the EU-national is eligible to stand for elections in Finland.

10.5. Migrants' Participation in Political Decision-Making

Various reports state that the rate of political participation of migrants correlates with the form of participation they have been accustomed to in their country of origin. Living and integrating to an open democracy can be a slow process for migrants who have migrated to Finland from an authoritarian country. Institutional factors in the country of origin, for example the level of democracy, and in the country of residence, for example legislation concerning citizenship, electoral rights and integration procedures, affect the participation of migrants in political decisions.¹²³⁰ Finland also recognises dual nationality, so electoral rights gained through citizenship apply also to dual citizens. Whether these people are still eligible to vote in their country of origin is dependent on the legislation of that particular country since not all states accept dual nationality.

As stated in the previous chapters, the ability of migrants to participate in political decisions is to some extent dependent on their status and time of stay in Finland. Citizenship is required when voting in parliamentary and presidential elections, but voting in municipal elections is open to non-citizens when they fulfil the other requirements presented in the previous chapters. Migrants whose stay has been determined as temporary fall outside the participatory rights in municipal and other elections.¹²³¹ Even if the requirements to vote are not fulfilled, there are other forums to participate in political decisions. The Finnish democracy guarantees all people the right of assembly and the right of association and political decisions can be affected also through organised lobbying.

11. How can migrants acquire citizenship in the country? Is there a possibility of double nationality?

11.1. Acquisition of Citizenship

The legal provisions regarding Finnish citizenship – applying for citizenship, requirements for acquiring citizenship as well as dual nationality – are stipulated in kansalaisuuslaki (Nationality

¹²³⁰ Wass H and Weide M, Äänestäminen osana poliittista kansalaisuutta – Maahanmuuttotaustaisten äänioikeutettujen osallistuminen vuoden 2012 kunnallisvaaleissa (Ministry of Justice 2012) 18 [Finnish].

Act). It took effect in September 2011. There are five different grounds for acquisition of Finnish citizenship, as it may be based on one of the following:

- the nationality of one of the applicant's biological or adoptive parents (parentage principle)
- applicant's place of birth being Finland (birthplace principle)
- applicant's parents' marriage to each other (legitimation)
- application (naturalisation) or
- declaration.¹²³²

The parentage principle is the primary way for acquiring citizenship in Finland. The parentage principle means that a person's citizenship is determined by the citizenship of the mother, father or both.

The birthplace principle means that a person's citizenship is determined by his or her place of birth. When the mother is a citizen of Finland, the child will automatically become a citizen of Finland regardless of the country of birth. The only requirement is that the mother has not lost her Finnish citizenship before the child is born. If the child's father is a citizen of Finland when the child is born and he is married to the child's mother, the child will automatically become a citizen of Finland. Likewise, if the child's father has died before the birth of the child but he was a citizen of Finland and married to the child's mother, the child will also become a citizen of Finland. If only the child's father is a citizen of Finland when the child is born and the child is born in Finland, the child may obtain Finnish citizenship.

If a person wishes to acquire Finnish citizenship by application, there are general requirements for naturalisation according to the Nationality Act. Exceptions to the following general requirements may be made only as laid down in the Act. One may obtain Finnish citizenship if the applicant

- has reached the age of 18 or marries before turning 18;
- meets the residential period requirement, i.e. the applicant has been a permanent resident and domiciled in Finland for the past five years without interruption (continuous period of residence) or a total of seven years since he or she turned 15, with two of these years without interruption (accumulated period of residence);
- meets the integrity requirement: has not committed any punishable act other than one subject to a petty fine or been placed under a restraining order;
- has not materially failed to pay maintenance or any debt under public law (such as taxes and fines);
- can provide a reliable account of one's livelihood¹²³³ and
- has satisfactory oral and written skills in the Finnish or Swedish language or knows Finnish or Swedish sign language.

However, these requirements will not be considered until the applicant's identity is reliably established, as this is a common requirement for acquiring Finnish citizenship. The applicant can prove his or her identity with documents (for example, a passport) or by providing otherwise reliable information on his or her identity and family. Furthermore, the applicant cannot be naturalised even if he or she would meet the requirements, if there is reasonable doubt that the naturalising may endanger the safety of the country or law and order, if the main purpose of acquiring citizenship is to exploit an advantage of Finnish citizenship without purpose to settle in Finland, or if naturalising is because of some other cogent reason against the state's advantage when considering an application in a comprehensive way.

However, the Nationality Act includes some exceptions when it comes to the requirements of naturalisation by application. According to the law, exceptions to the language skills requirement can be granted if the lack of Finnish citizenship would otherwise make it unreasonably difficult for an applicant to keep his or her full-time, permanent job in Finland, or if an applicant is at least 65 years old and he or she is in Finland as a refugee or he or she is under humanitarian protection; an applicant's health prevents him or her from acquiring the required language skills¹²³⁴; an applicant has arrived in Finland as an adult and is illiterate (unable to read and write); or an applicant gives an otherwise special and weighty reason for granting an exception.

Acquisition of Finnish citizenship by declaration is only available to specific groups of individuals: those whose one parent is a Finnish citizen, former Finnish citizens and citizens of other Nordic countries who have lived in Finland for at least five years without interruption. Contrary to naturalisation by application, discretion cannot be exercised in matters of declaration. If the person submitting the declaration meets the requirements, the authorities must grant citizenship to him or her. On the other hand, if any single requirement remains unfulfilled, Finnish citizenship cannot be acquired by declaration.

A child obtains citizenship from his or her Finnish father if the child is born outside of Finland and the establishment of paternity abroad can be accepted in Finland, or if the child is born in Finland but paternity is established only after the child is 18 years of age or marries before the age of 18. Furthermore, an adopted child aged 12-17 years whose adoptive parent is a Finnish citizen can be naturalised by declaration. No other requirements need to be met.

A young person who is 18-22 years old and has lived in Finland for a long time may acquire citizenship if he or she has lived in Finland for a total of a minimum of ten years, the last two without interruption, and has not been sentenced to imprisonment.¹²³⁵ If the applicant was born in Finland the minimum period of residence is six years. Living in another Nordic country up to the age of 16 is equivalent to the same period lived in Finland, but in this case, only a maximum of five years prior to making the declaration will count.

If the applicant's identity has been established reliably and the other requirements for naturalisation are met, he or she may acquire Finnish citizenship by application. Application form may be submitted online or on paper to the Finnish Immigration Service. All the required documents, such as a certificate of one's language skills, must be attached to the application. Citizenship is granted by the Finnish Immigration Service. If citizenship is acquired by declaration, the declaration form with its attachments should be submitted in person to one of the service points of the Finnish Immigration Service. If the applicant is abroad, the declaration form with its attachments should be submitted in person to a Finnish mission, embassy or consulate.¹²³⁶

11.2. Multiple nationality (dual nationality)

Finland accepts multiple nationality. If a Finnish citizen also holds a citizenship of another state, Finnish authorities will consider that person to be a Finnish citizen both in Finland and abroad. However, the Finnish Nationality Act does not contain a specific clause allowing multiple nationality. On the other hand, it contains no provisions restricting multiple nationality.¹²³⁷

12. How is your country assisted by EU programmes and funding with regard to the integration of migrants?

In Finland, the Ministry of Economic Affairs and Employment is responsible for the integration of migrants and coordinates the various programmes that are established in order to improve integration. Multi-sectoral cooperation between ministries working with migration issues is regulated under the Act on the Promotion of Immigrant Integration, which entered into force in 2011. Under the Ministry of Economic Affairs and Employment, a specialised Centre of Expertise in Integration of Immigrants, that supports the integration of migrants into the Finnish society, has been established.¹²³⁸ On the regional level, Centres for Economic Development, Transport and the Environment (ELY Centres) are responsible for implementing measures related to integration. Besides ELY Centres, Economic Development (TE) Offices and municipalities, non-governmental organisations and other communities are important actors in integration and they are granted financial assistance for integration programmes.¹²³⁹

12.1.1. Financing Through Structural Funds

Applying financing from the European Regional Development Fund (ERDF) and the European Social Fund (ESF) is coordinated through a special website Structuralfunds.fi and both authorities and non-state actors are able to apply for financing through this channel.¹²⁴⁰ Searching for programmes including the word 'integration' gives 54 results, of which eight programmes have already come to an end. The authorities coordinating these programmes are the regional ELY Centres but the actual actors vary from universities, organisations and cities. Programmes that have been funded are promoting integration, inter alia, through art, language and entrepreneurship.¹²⁴¹ The Ministry of Economic Affairs and Employment has launched a national Agenda on Growth Through International Expertise [Kasvua kansainvälisistä osaajista -agenda] in 2016. The agenda is partly funded by ERDF and ESF and the financing is allocated to projects that channel international expertise in order to promote the growth and internationalisation of businesses. ESF-funded projects are to be related to employment and the mobility of labour.¹²⁴²

12.1.2. Financing Through AMIF

The Asylum, Migration and Integration Fund (AMIF) finances national and regional programmes concerning migration related initiatives. AMIF and the Internal Security Fund (ISF) were established within the framework of EU Home Affairs Funds for the programming period of 2014–2020. In Finland, the Ministry of the Interior is responsible for the management of the EU Home Affairs Funds and coordinates the national programmes and their implementation. Public and private legal persons are eligible to apply for financing from these funds but private individuals are not eligible.¹²⁴³ Financing from these funds is granted to various actors in the field of integration: for example, the Finnish Immigration Service, reception centres, cities, municipalities, Refugee Advice Centre, Finnish Red Cross and other organisations.¹²⁴⁴ There are over 60 projects that have been funded by AMIF and the range of projects varies from improving the databases and resources of immigration officials to improving the detection and prevention of mental health problems and providing care. For example, projects that have been funded by AMIF include the Finn Church Aid project that aims to produce language guides that facilitate learning Finnish in reception centres. Three “Sylvia” projects focus on the integration of migrants to municipalities and offer financial and knowledge-based support for municipalities.¹²⁴⁵

12.2. Future Development of Integration Programmes

In addition to actively applying for EU funding and implementing programmes regarding integration, Finland also seeks new ways of improving integration. Finland is the first country in Europe to launch a Social Impact Bond (SIB) Scheme under the European Investment Fund (EIF). In this programme, the focus is on the integration of migrants and refugees into the Member States have agreed on various themes that are implemented in Member States and Finland has committed to themes concerning employment, youth employment, learning and skills and social inclusion. Projects funded by the ESR will cooperate with similar projects in other Member States and good practices concerning integration are shared.¹²⁴⁷

This research has provided a comprehensive overview of Finland's legislation governing migration, with special focus on the integration of migrants and migrants' rights linked with various aspects of their lives in Finland, such as, inter alia, healthcare, education and political participation.

Chapter 1 described, both from substantive and procedural points of view, the right to asylum as governed by the Aliens Act 2004: as international protection, asylum is granted either under refugee status or under subsidiary protection. It bears special note that since May 16 2016, pursuant to an amendment to the Aliens Act, humanitarian protection as grounds for asylum no longer exists in Finland. Chapter 2 compared the applicable regulative acts governing immigration from EU Member States and non-EU states: as legislation in Finland distinguishes between citizens of another EU Member State and comparable persons, third country nationals with long-term EU resident status and third country nationals, the differences between treatment of these categories as well as procedural aspects of the residence application were explained. Chapter 3 presented the Finnish Immigration Service as the main government agency taking care of issues related to migration and Chapter 4 presented Statistics Finland, the authority collecting statistic data related to the country's population, as well as relevant recent statistics. Chapter 5 covered the impact and implementation of the European Court of Human Rights' decisions, focusing on the cases Senchishbak v Finland and N. v. Finland in which Finland was the respondent State. Chapter 6 took note of two important authorities, the European Commission against Racism and Intolerance and the Finnish Non-discrimination Ombudsman. Additionally, it covered hate crimes in Finland and also mentioned how UN Member States had expressed their concern regarding Finland's tightened asylum policy. Chapter 7 described migrant's access to Finnish healthcare, the right to which is governed by national legislation as there is no specific legislation in Finland concerning migrants' right to access healthcare; specific challenges, such as undocumented immigrants' and vulnerable groups' access to healthcare as well as the migrants' lack of information, language difficulties and cultural difficulties were pointed out. Chapter 8 examined the link between the right to education and the access to school and the difficult situation of especially undocumented migrant children. Chapter 9 explained how foreign school and university diplomas are recognized in Finland, as this is an important aspect of the integration of migrants to the Finnish society as students or employees. Chapter 10 presented the different ways migrants can participate in the political decision-making in Finland; Chapter 11 explained how migrants may, pursuant to the Nationality Act, acquire Finnish citizenship; and finally, Chapter 12 explained how the assistance and funding of migration-related issues works as cooperation between different domestic bodies and European Union funding.

As a descriptive study, we refrain from drawing any conclusions regarding the Finnish migration laws and the issues presented in this research. As each chapter covers a specific topic that relates to migration, the big picture that may be drawn out of the individual chapters would perhaps be the dynamic nature of migration and the interconnection but also at times conflicts between national legislation, EU legislation and international law. Many chapters have highlighted the unprecedented challenges caused by the sudden influx of migrants in 2015 as well as the importance of the recent amendments to the Aliens Act. As Chapter 5 concluded, the Finnish practice and case law related to the amendments are still evolving, as is the law itself. It remains to be seen whether Finland can continue to uphold high human rights standards despite the concerns regarding, inter alia, the tightened asylum policy.

Introduction

Although it is not possible to accurately determine how many persons were « migrants » at any particular point in history, evidence of co-existing sedentary and migratory lifestyles can be found in all periods of world history. In 1965, it is estimated that there were some 75 million migrants worldwide.

By 2000, that number had grown up to 175 million and reached 232 million in 2013, and it will not stop increasing with climate change in the future.

In a globalised and unstable world, governments are facing migration management challenges they were never confronted with before.

Europe was for a long time mostly a land of emigration. In the past decades, for various historical, economical and geopolitical reasons, it became a land of massive immigration.

In the past few years, European Members States have been acknowledging both a willingness to deal with migration-related issues together, and have simultaneously been undeniably inward looking, showing isolationism on this matter.

France, as a member of the European Union and the Council of Europe, is not an exception to this trend.

Far from political passions and speeches, the following legal analysis is an opportunity to objectively appreciate the positioning of France on migrant-related issues.

1. How is the right to asylum regulated in national law? Give a description of the national regulations governing asylum; What is the procedure for granting asylum and who is responsible?

1.1. The Legal Framework of the Right to Asylum in France

The term “asylum” refers generally to ‘the protection that a State grants on its territory or in some other place under the control of certain of its organs to a person who comes to seek it’.¹²⁴⁸ The right to asylum is primarily regulated in France by its constitutional value affirmed by the French Constitutional Council on its decision of August 13th 1993. Therefore, the Preamble of the current French Constitution of 1958 states that “any man persecuted in virtue of his actions in favour of liberty may claim the right of asylum upon the territories of the Republic”¹²⁴⁹. The legal framework about the right of asylum is heavily based on the Geneva Convention on refugees of July 28th 1951 which defines the term ‘refugee’¹²⁵⁰ and the European Union

Regulation of February 18th 2003 establishing the criteria and mechanisms that determine the Member State responsible for examining an asylum application lodged in one of the Member States by a national of one third countries (hereinafter “the Dublin Regulation” or “Dublin II”). Those international sources are integrated and codified in Book VII of the Code of Entry and Residence of Aliens and the Right of Asylum (from the French acronym CESEDA)¹²⁵¹.

1.2. Issues Related to the Right of Asylum

According to a public official report of the Accounting Court, France's asylum procedures take two years which is too long for the assessments of asylum seekers' situations¹²⁵². Furthermore the report pointed that the majority of asylum seekers have their applications rejected and 96% (in 2015) of those rejected remain in France and aren't deported.

But these statistics were registered before the European and national reforms resulting from the migratory crisis of summer 2015.¹²⁵³ Following this, French authorities decided to strongly regulate the right of asylum by introducing the law of the 29th of July 2015.

1.3. Status of Asylum Seekers in France

1.3.1. Forms of Protection under the Right of Asylum

A person seeking asylum may be granted refugee status or subsidiary protection.¹²⁵⁴ The refugee status can be obtained under the regular procedure given by the French Office for the Protection of Refugees and Stateless Persons (OFRPA)¹²⁵⁵, or by the Dublin regulation implemented by Prefectures¹²⁵⁶, or by the border procedure giving competence to the Judge of Freedoms and Detention¹²⁵⁷ or the accelerated procedure managed by Prefectures then OFPRA¹²⁵⁸. In France, OFPRA recognizes refugee status on the basis of a definition of the Geneva Convention¹²⁵⁹. A refugee is any person who : “As a result of events occurring before 1 January 1951 and owing to well-founded fear of being persecuted for reasons of race, religion, nationality, membership of a particular social group or political opinion, is outside the country of his nationality and is unable or, owing to such fear, is unwilling to avail himself of the protection of that country; or who, not having a nationality and being outside the country of his former habitual residence as a result of such events, is unable or, owing to such fear, is unwilling to return to it"¹²⁶⁰ This is commonly referred to as conventional asylum. Refugee status can also be granted under the constitutional asylum for "foreigners persecuted in their country because of their action in favour of freedom"¹²⁶¹.

To be considered for asylum, the asylum seeker must meet the requirements of one of the two definitions above (for example, being outside the country of his nationality) and has to fulfil other requirements:

- Not to be already benefiting from an asylum protection in another Member State of the European Union.
- Not to benefit from refugee status and protection in another State or to requalifying for them there¹²⁶².

1.3.2. The Rights of Asylum-Seekers and Persons whose Protection Has Been Accepted

Under international humanitarian law, France should protect the human rights of asylum seekers. Those rights are primarily the non-refoulement right, the freedom of movement, the right to liberty and security and the right to family life¹²⁶³. Yet it seems normal that asylum seekers and those whose application is accepted enjoy different rights in France. Asylum seekers have access to education, care and a financial allowance while refugees, beneficiaries of subsidiary protection or stateless status enjoy more extensive rights (right of residence in France for them and their families, access to social rights, the organization of their integration, the possibility of naturalization, etc.)¹²⁶⁴.

1.4. The Bodies in Charge of Granting Asylum

Several bodies are involved throughout the asylum granting process¹²⁶⁵. In the first place, the Office français de protection des réfugiés et apatrides (the French Office for the Protection of Refugees and Stateless Persons – OFPRA), a public administrative body, is responsible for examining asylum applications on the basis of the Geneva Convention and subsidiary protection¹²⁶⁶. The OFPRA also insures the legal and administrative protection of those who have been granted asylum or beneficiaries of subsidiary protection. Any of its decisions may be challenged before

In addition, the mission of the Haut Commissariat des Nations Unies pour les Réfugiés (Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees - UNHCR) is to protect refugees by finding durable solutions and to ensure that the Geneva Convention is applied. The composition of the CNDA that considers appeals even includes a qualified person appointed by the UNHCR¹²⁶⁷.

1.5. The Asylum Application Submission with the Prefecture

As regards the procedure for granting asylum, submitting an application with the prefecture is the first stage. The 2015 new legislation¹²⁶⁸ has established “the single counter” which gathers the prefecture services and the Office français de l'immigration et de l'intégration (the French Immigration and Integration Office – OFII). On the one hand, the prefecture services register asylum applications and issue certificates of asylum applications. On the other hand, the OFII is responsible for welcoming and accommodating asylum seekers. A prefecture officer notes information dealing with personal records, entry and residence conditions, ... in order to determine whether or not France is responsible for examining the asylum application. Under the “Dublin III¹²⁶⁹ procedure”, if the French state has not authority, the application is transferred to the other state. Conversely, the prefect hands the certificate of asylum application over and the OFPRA is referred. Concerning asylum applications filed abroad, the Office is solely responsible for examining asylum applications filed on the French territory. Nonetheless, a foreign national can request an asylum visa to French consular authorities in his home country. Once having obtained the aforesaid visa, he is allowed to come to France and carry on with the procedure for granting asylum. Moreover, since 1982¹²⁷⁰, an asylum application can be submitted at the border – only in national major airports. The Minister of the Interior has authority on whether to admit an undocumented migrant in consultation with the OFPRA. The Office hands down a decision within 48 hours after having auditioned the asylum seeker. If his admission to the territory is denied, he can claim for the quashing of the decision before the president of an administrative court within 48 hours. On the contrary, the admission to the territory leads to the examination of the asylum application by the OFPRA according to the regular procedure.

1.6. The Processing of the Asylum Application by the OFPRA

¹²⁶⁹ Regulation (EU) No 604/2013 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 26 June 2013 establishing the criteria and mechanisms for determining the Member State responsible for examining an application for international protection lodged in one of the Member States by a third-country national or a stateless person

¹²⁷⁰ Decree No 82-442 of 27 May 1982 related to the enforcement of the order No 45-2658 of 2 November 1945 on the entry into the French territory) [Décret pris pour l'application de l'ordonnance No 45-2658 du 2 novembre 1945 modifiée relative aux conditions d'entrée et de séjour des étrangers en France, en ce qui concerne leur admission sur le territoire français] [French]

The processing of the asylum application by the OFPRA constitutes the second stage of the procedure for granting asylum. Once the certificate is issued, the asylum seeker has to submit a claim to the Office within 21 days. He gives details of his personal records, his studies, his national service, his places of residence, his itinerary to France ... The Office and asylum seekers owe a duty of mutual cooperation¹²⁷¹. After the introduction of the request, a protection officer considers the case within 6 months. Under the fast-track procedure, it is within 15 days when the foreigner comes from a state said to be a safe country of origin, when the asylum seeker has presented forged documents, he has misrepresented or represents a serious threat to public order. One of the most important steps of the procedure for granting asylum is the one-on-one interview. The asylum-seeker can be assisted by an interpreter, his counsel or a human rights organization representative. The protection officer relies on written and oral statements, the file documents, information on the situation of the country of origin collected by the Office resource centre in order to appreciate the asylum application. Afterwards, the Chief Executive Officer eventually decides whether or not to grant asylum or subsidiary protection. Indeed, the procedure to grant humanitarian protection is similar to the one to grant asylum. Beneficiaries from the subsidiary protection are under the legal and administrative protection of the OFPRA. The prefecture delivers them a temporary residence permit with the mention “privacy and family life” for a period of one year which may be renewed.

1.6. The Procedure for Unaccompanied Children

Unaccompanied children have to submit an application to the prefecture firstly too. As a legal representative is required, the public prosecutor appoints an administrator responsible for taking administrative steps. He represents and assists the unaccompanied child during all the procedure for granting protection, including the appeal process. If the child benefits from State wardship decided by the judge, Child Care Agency services will be in charge.

1.7. The Appeal Process

Three types of OFPRA’s decisions may be challenged before the CNDA within one month: a refusal of asylum, a decision which grants humanitarian protection even though the asylum seeker considers he has to be recognised as a refugee and a decision of exclusion or revocation of the protection. The Court rules in 5 months at the most. Under the fast-track procedure, this is no more than five weeks. The CNDA can reverse the decision of the OFPRA. According to the Conseil d’Etat’s case law¹²⁷², the CNDA judge is able to grant international protection himself by replacing his decision to the OFPRA denial one. In the event of a dismissal of the appeal, the Conseil d’Etat can overrule a CNDA ruling. The Council checks the legality of the procedure and punishes legal errors.

1.8. The Exclusion of the International Protection

The application is rejected when one may consider that the asylum seeker represents a serious threat to national security or this latter has been convicted in France for a terrorist crime or offence or liable to imprisonment for a term of 10 years and represents a serious threat to society. In case of denial of his asylum application, the asylum seeker is not allowed to remain on the French territory. Either he leaves deliberately France within 30 days¹²⁷³ or he is subjected to a compulsory deportation measure¹²⁷⁴ - in other words, an obligation to leave the country.

1.9. The Revocation of the Protection

The CESEDA (articles L.711-3 and seq.) sets the legal framework of the revocation of the protection.¹²⁷⁵

1.9.1. The Revocation of the Asylum

According to the article 1F of the Convention of Geneva, any person who has committed a crime against peace, a war crime or a crime against humanity may be deprived of the asylum protection. By the same token, any refugee who has committed a crime aside from his host country or guilty of acts contrary to the purposes and principles of the United Nations can also be removed of his status.

1.9.2. The Revocation of the Humanitarian Protection

Under the article L.712-2 of the CESEDA, the beneficiary from the subsidiary protection can be deprived of this latter if he has committed a crime targeted by the article 1F of the Convention of Geneva, including crimes committed in France. If the asylum seeker has committed, before arriving in France, a crime which is not targeted by the article 1F but indictable in France and has left his country solely to avoid proceedings in his country, he can also lose his protection. Eventually, if he is said to represent a serious threat for public order, public safety and national security, he can be stripped of his humanitarian protection too.

1.10. The Re-Entry into the State and Reconsideration of the Application

Following a final decision of refusal, in the event of developments which could modify the first assessment of his situation, an asylum-seeker can request a re-examination of his application, after having applied once again to the prefecture for asylum based residency¹²⁷⁶. These developments have to be subsequent to the denial decision and unknown prior to that one. The provisional residence permit, delivered by the prefecture, is valid for a term of 15 days. The asylum seeker has 8 days to submit a new application to the OFPRA. Considering those developments and earlier facts, if the Office concludes that he does not meet the necessary requirements for being granted protection, the claim is inadmissible.

2. How does your national law regulate immigration from EU member states and non-EU states?

The principal element concerning the way the French national law regulates immigration, is the distinction between the immigrants coming from EU Member States and those coming from non-EU Member States. This distinction is clearly mentioned in the national Code regulating the entry and the residence of non-French nationals in the country as well as their right to asylum. The aforementioned Code includes a first part for EU nationals and a second part for non-EU nationals. More specifically, the second title of the first book of the national Code, regulates the entry and the residence of EU nationals and their families¹²⁷⁷. On the contrary, the third title of the first book of the Code concerns the citizens of some other countries not specifying which these countries are as it is mainly referring to bilateral and multilateral conventions in which France is taking part¹²⁷⁸. Finally, the second book of the national Code regulates very extensively the immigration procedure for non-EU Member states' citizens¹²⁷⁹.

Looking at the national Code, we can find out that the second book that is regulating immigration from non-EU Member states, is much longer than the first one concerning immigration from EU Member states. However, this is explained by the principle of the European citizenship¹²⁸⁰. The European citizenship is one of the main principles governing European Union which justifies the reason why national law includes a differentiation between EU Member States and non-EU Member States¹²⁸¹. This differentiation results to a different treatment between the two categories of immigrants, a treatment that is more favourable to the immigrants coming from an EU Member States as facilitating the entry and the residence of EU Member States' citizens in the territory of other EU Member States has always been one of the main objectives of the European Union¹²⁸².

Based on the principle of the European citizenship, that constitutes a source of confidence making the entry and residence of EU nationals in France easier, we will present, on one hand, the regulation of immigration from EU Member States, on the other hand, the regulation of immigration from non-EU Member States and finally, the common points that exist between the two regulations.

¹²⁷⁷ Code of the entry and the residence of foreigners and the right to asylum of 2017, Second Title, Law No 2006-911 of the 24th of July 2006, article 23-I [Code de l'entrée et du séjour des étrangers et du droit d'asile].

¹²⁷⁸ ibid, Third Title.

¹²⁷⁹ ibid, Second Book.

¹²⁸⁰ Consolidated version of Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union [2012] OJ C326/49, article 20§1: « Citizenship of the Union is hereby established. Every person holding the nationality of a Member State shall be a citizen of the Union »; article 20§2a: « the right to move and reside freely within the territory of the Member States ».

However, before we elaborate the whole immigration procedure in France, it is important to note that the French national code on migration, does not define “migrants”. It uses the a contrario definition of non-French nationals to explain that the present code is applicable to all those who enter the country or want to stay in France for a short or a long time and who do not have the French nationality¹²⁸³. This is the reason why in order to define migrants, it prefers to keep a more neutral approach by underlying that these articles are applicable to non-French nationals.

2.1. Regulation of Immigration from EU Member States

The second title of the French national Code is applicable to citizens of EU Member States, citizens of the Member States of the European Economic Area (EEA – Island, Norway and Liechtenstein) and citizens of the Swiss confederation. These regulations are also applicable to their family members.

The article L.121-1 of the national Code states that an EU national has the right to reside in France for more than three months if he is not considered as a threat to the public order and if he satisfies one of the conditions that the Code mentions¹²⁸⁴. As a result, the EU citizen who wants to stay in France should exercise a professional activity in France (para 1°) or, should have sufficient resources in order not to become an unreasonable charge for the country (para 2°) or, should be registered to an institution or a university in France (para 3°) or, should be a descendant or ascendant of the partner accompanying an EU citizen that satisfied the first or second condition of the article (para 4°) or, should be a partner or a child accompanying the citizen who satisfies the third condition of the article.

Furthermore, the EU citizens that have obtained a diploma in a French institution and want to exercise a profession in the country, are exempted from the detention of a residence title according to the article L.121-2 of the national Code.

The national Code also regulates immigration of EU Member States' citizens concerning their families as their family members can stay in France even if they are not citizens of an EU Member State. These members are qualified as “members of the family of an EU citizen” and have a different treatment from the other non-EU citizens.

More specifically, the article L.121-3 of the Code states that the family member that satisfies the conditions mentioned in the paragraphs 3 and 4 of the article L.121-1 (mentioned above) have the right to reside in the French territory for more than three months. Nevertheless, there are certain conditions that should be taken into consideration. First, the first paragraph of the article underlines that the family member who wants to stay in France for more than three months should not be a threat to the public order. If the family member is more than 18 years old and not less than 16 years old exercising a profession in France, they must acquire a residence title limited to 5 years.

¹²⁸⁴ Law n° 2006-911 of the 24th of July 2006, article 23-II.

However, the EU citizens do not benefit from a total liberty. The most important condition that they should fulfil is not to constitute a threat to the public order, otherwise the EU citizen will be denied the residence title and will be held off the country¹²⁸⁵.

In all cases, immigrants from EU Member States that do not have the French nationality, have the right to stay in the French territory for three months without any justification. It is possible for them to extend their residence in France, if they satisfy one of the conditions of the article L.121-1 of the code.

Finally, a permanent residence permit is also possible if the EU citizen stays in France in a legal way and constantly for more than five years¹²⁸⁶.

As we can see, the citizens of the UE have the statute of “super-privileged” in comparison to the others according to national law, European law and European jurisprudence¹²⁸⁷.

2.2. Regulation of Immigration from Non-EU Member States

Immigrants coming from non-EU Member states must satisfy many conditions in order to justify in a more effective way the reason why they want to reside in the French territory. As the regulation for non-EU citizens is very extensive, we will present the most important elements that describe the way these immigrants can enter and reside in France.

2.2.1. The Right to Admission/ The Documents Required

Not all non-EU citizens are obliged to have a visa. The distinction between those who need a visa and those who do not is based on objective elements like the duration and the regularity of their residence in France as well as their effective relation with a citizen of the EU¹²⁸⁸.

2.2.1.1. The Visa Requirement

The article L.211-1 of the national Code states that to enter the French territory, every non-EU national should have a visa and documents required from international conventions, European regulations and a proof of housing or any other documents that French authorities may demand. All these documents are controlled by the French Minister in charge of immigration in conformity with the article R.211-1 of the code. Furthermore, if the non-EU national wants to exercise a profession in France, they should prove it to enter the country.

It is important to consider that EU Member States have adopted a common policy concerning the countries whose nationals need a visa to enter the country¹²⁸⁹. There are many criteria used to establish the list with these countries, like the international relations with the non-EU countries, the threats related to security and the existence of readmission conventions¹²⁹⁰.

¹²⁹⁰ Emanuel Aubin, Droit des étrangers (Gualino Eds 2014), 85 [French].

2.2.1.2 The Exemptions

There are also many hypotheses in which non-EU citizens do not need a visa for entering the country.

First, France has signed several conventions exempting nationals of non-EU countries from taking a visa if they want to stay in France for a short period of time. Furthermore, the family members of an EU citizen who have acquired a residence title for a long time do not need a visa. The EU has also exempted nationals of countries close to the European borders by giving the possibility to citizens of Montenegro, Serbia and Bosnia-Herzegovina to reside in EU countries without a visa¹²⁹¹. There is also a list with exemptions regarding the profession of the non-EU citizens who want to stay in France as it is the case for diplomatic agents¹²⁹².

2.2.2. The Entry Refusal

France can refuse the entry of a non-EU national to the country if it can constitute a threat to the public order or, if the object of a prohibition to circulate in the country¹²⁹³. Every refusal should be motivated from the French authorities¹²⁹⁴. However, we should take into consideration the fact that only the non-EU nationals can be prevented from entering France in conformity with the article 5 of the CE regulation establishing a Community Code called « Schengen borders »¹²⁹⁵.

Moreover, it is crucial to note that these articles are not applied to the immigrants that ask for asylum as for them, there is a special procedure regarding the evaluation of the immigrant's situation and to the respect of the right to ask for asylum (article R.213-1 of the national Code).

2.2.3 The Acquisition of the Residence Title

The non-EU citizens, who want to stay in France for more than three months, need to have a residence title in conformity with the article L.311-1 of the national Code. The procedure to acquire the title is very extensive and can take a long time as we can see in the first part of the third book of the Code. The aforementioned article underlines that a non-EU citizen should have a visa of a long stay having a duration of at least one year (para 1°) or, a temporary card of residence (para 3°) or, a card of residence of 10 years or more (para 5°) etc.

However, the French authorities can refuse to furnish an immigrant with a residence card as there is no obligation for the country to accept all non-EU citizens¹²⁹⁶. The denial should be motivated and notified to the applicant.

2.3. The Common Points of Both Regulations

Even if there is a clear distinction between EU and non-EU citizens in the Code, there are also some common points that we could take into consideration to understand more profoundly the immigration procedure in conformity with the national law.

2.3.1. The Rights That Immigrants Are Entitled To

The national Code does not state precisely which are the rights that the immigrants are entitled to. As far as EU Member States' citizens are concerned, they have the same rights with the French citizens apart from their participation in the elections and in vacancies of the public sector that require the French citizenship. As the French law states in the Code, they can stay in France in order to work, to study and to participate in the economy of the country. For the non-EU Member States' citizens, the French law is more precise as it states that they have the right to circulate in the country and to work like all French citizens¹²⁹⁷.

2.3.2. The Right to Leave France

The French Code clearly mentions the possibility for all immigrants to leave the country when they want. There are no obligations or any legal barriers that the immigrants must respect concerning their return to their country. The French law has even created a public assistance that is given to every immigrant that wants to go back to their motherland if they are unemployed in France¹²⁹⁸.

However, there is only the article L.331-1 of the French Code that underlines that the only barrier that exists, concerns the loss of their right to stay and to work in France. If they accept to acquire the public assistance for the return to their country of origin, they lose all the other rights and they have a permanent title of two months until they leave the country.

2.3.3. The obligation to leave France

The First Chapter of the First Title of the Book V of the French Code underlines the possibility for the French authorities to demand that an immigrant leaves the country or that they do not return to the country or that they do not circulate in the country.

Firstly, the article L.511-1 of the French Code enumerates several cases that permit the administrative authorities of France to ask a foreigner to leave the French territory if he is not an EU citizen.

However, that does not mean that French authorities cannot oblige an EU citizen to also leave the country. The article L.511-3 of the same Code enumerates many cases in which an EU citizen will have to leave the country with the most important being from one hand, the non-satisfaction of the legal conditions (para^o1) and on the other hand, the possibility that the resident becomes a threat for the public order (para^o3) or that he abuses his right to stay in the country (para^o2).

As a result, it is crucial to understand that the obligation to leave the country if France asks for it, exists for both cases, EU citizens and non-EU citizens even if the conditions are stricter for those who take part in the second group.

Moreover, even if an immigrant can be asked to leave the country, there is a chance for them to stay in France if they renew their resident card. However, if the obligation to leave is based on grounds of public order, the immigrant cannot change their status and they are obliged to leave in conformity with the administrative decision that has been taken¹²⁹⁹.

2.4. The Expulsion

As far as the expulsion measures are concerned, the article L.521-1 of the Code does not create a distinction between EU citizens and non-EU citizens. Both can be expelled for the same reasons even if for the EU citizens, the criteria that could justify their expulsion are more precise as the threat to the society should be real, actual and sufficiently serious. These criteria do not exist for the non-EU citizens.

First, non-EU citizens can be expelled if this measure is necessary for the public order and for the national security. Another reason why non-EU citizens can be expelled, concerns terrorism or actions of provocation, discrimination, hate and violence against a specific person or a group of people. Even if there is a great number of exemptions that prevent the expulsion measures from being implemented, public order, terrorism, discrimination and violence are the main reasons why the French authorities can take these measures against foreigners.

The article L.521-5 of the Code states that expulsion is possible even for EU citizens if their attitude constitutes a real, actual and sufficiently serious threat for the fundamental interests of the society. The article also underlines that the same expulsion measures that can be implemented against non-EU citizens, they can also be implemented against EU citizens.

However, the whole regulation concerning the expulsion measures is very serious as the foreigner should be notified before being expelled and has the right to respond to the French authorities. The only exception to this rule that can justify the absence of notification is urgency¹³⁰⁰.

3. Is there a ministry, government agency or other public authority specifically dealing with migrants? If so, please provide a description of the framework this authority works under.

3.1. All Migrants Related Questions Fall Within the Purview of the Ministry of Internal Affairs

Nowadays, there is no Ministry specifically in charge of dealing with migrants.¹³⁰¹ All questions regarding immigration, integration and asylum fall within the purview of the ministry of Internal Affairs. This ministry is divided into seven entities called Directions Générales (General Directorates, hereby referred to as DG), subdivided into central directorates and, if relevant, into sub-directorates. Migrants related questions fall within the purview of the DG des étrangers en France (DG of aliens in France, hereby referred to as DGEF)¹³⁰², that aims to conceive and pilot the immigration and integration policies¹³⁰³.

3.2. The DGEF Relies on Two National Public Law Bodies that Are Specifically Dealing with Migrants

The first one is l'Office Français de l'Immigration et de l'Insertion (French Office of Immigration and insertion, hereby referred to as OFII). The second one is l'Office Français de protection des réfugiés et apatrides (French Office for the Protection of Refugees and Stateless persons, hereby referred to as OFPRA). Both are under the guardianship of the ministry of Internal Affairs.

Both are national public law bodies, but the OFII is a state operator – therefore the control of the parent ministry is tight- while the OFPRA has a financial and administrative autonomy, with functional independence, according to article L721-1 of the Code de l'entrée et du séjour des étrangers et du droit d'asile (Code on the entry and residence of aliens and on the right of asylum, hereby referred to as CESEDA).

A circular of the Prime Minister of March 26th 2010 aims to generalize the conclusion of “contrats d'objectifs et de performance (‘‘objectives and performance contract » hereby referred to as COP) between national public law body and their parent ministry, in order to fix and assure the execution and implementation of specific strategic orientations. Both OFII and OFPRA

¹³⁰¹ Migrants related questions are inherently transversal and therefore fall under the competence of several ministries. Therefore, some ad hoc interministerial entities were created to encourage collective action such as the interministerial commission for the housing of immigrated population or the inter-ministerial mission for the protection of women victims of violence.

¹³⁰² According to a decree dated 12 August 2013, the DGEF is composed of 3 directorates, each in charge of a specific immigration related question, and into sub-directorates if relevant: directorate of immigration (with the sub directorate of visa, sub directorate of stay, and sub directorate of fight against irregular fraud), the directorate of asylum, and directorate of welcoming, accompanying aliens and nationality.

¹³⁰³ Fighting against illegal immigration fall within the purview of the DG de la Police Nationale. As this DG or its operator – l'office central pour la repression de l'immigration et de l'Emploi d'étrangers sans titre (the Office in charge of repression of illegal immigration and employment of untitled foreigners)- do not provide any kind of assistance to migrants their actions will not be discussed.

have concluded such contracts that are in both cases renegotiated every three years – see below.

People working in those two entities are public servants; if someone is mistreated by an agent and the agent behaviour is in violation of statutory obligations, a disciplinary sanction can be taken according to article 29 and following of the law n° 83-634 du 13 July 1983. If it is the result of the breach of a criminal rule, it should be brought before the criminal courts, with regard to the criminal procedure court.

3.2.1. The OFII

Created by the law n°2009-323 of March 25th 2009 and a decree of the same day, it is the only state operator in charge of the integration of migrants during the first five years of their stay in France according to article L. 5223-1 of the Code du Travail (Labour Code). Its missions are related to immigration, integration, welcoming asylum seekers, and support of voluntary return and reinsertion.

3.2.1.1. Organization, Governance and Sources of Funding

It is administered by a board of directors composed of representatives of the state, of the staff and of qualified personalities designed by the parent minister. This board approves most of the strategic decisions of the OFII, especially regarding the COP.

The OFII is composed of a central direction, under the authority of a general director, named by decree¹³⁰⁵. This general director is assisted by a general secretary and a deputy director. To fulfil its missions, some plateformes d'accueil regionales (regional welcoming platforms) have been set up in all French regions, including overseas territorial collectivities. OFII also has some branches abroad in eight countries¹³⁰⁶, in the context of voluntary return and reinsertion.

3.2.1.2. Resources

Most of the OFII's resources come from allocated taxes according to articles L.311-13 and D311-18-2 CESEDA¹³⁰⁷. Taxes represented 83% of the OFII resources in 2011¹³⁰⁸. OFII also receives public service grants (subvention pour charge de service public); the amount is determined every year in the finance act. It also benefits from European subventions.

3.2.1.3. Missions and Forms of Assistance Provided

Regarding immigration, the OFII is in charge of registering and validating long-term visas (more than three months). It is also in charge of organizing and financing the mandatory medical appointments that every migrant has to do when they arrive in France.

Regarding integration, OFII mostly provides language training and a civic training, according to article L 311-9 CESEDA. Those trainings, entirely financed by OFII, mostly take place in the context of a contract concluded between the new comer and the state and called “contrat d’intégration républicaine”. Created in 2003 and formerly called “contrat d’accueil et d’intégration”, it has been refunded by the immigration law of 7 March 2016. The following of those training is notably supposed to be taken into consideration for the renewal of a stay title¹³⁰⁹.

Regarding asylum seekers, OFII is in charge of the first welcoming of those persons and is therefore in charge of managing, coordinating and financing the plateformes territoriales d’accueil pour demandeurs d’asile (welcoming platforms for asylum seekers), in accordance to article L 744-1 and following CESEDA. It also manages and allocates the spots in the centre d’accueils pour demandeurs d’asile (asylum seekers welcoming centers. It also grants the financial aid that all asylum seekers are allowed to receive (allocation pour demandeur d’asile), according to article L744-P and following CESEDA.

Regarding help to return and reinsertion, the OFII oversees voluntary returns. It can grant some material and financial support to develop some reinsertion project, mostly economic development project¹³¹⁰.

3.2.2. The OFPRA

3.2.2.1. Missions and forms of assistance provided

The OFPRA has been created by a law dated July 25th 1952. It is in charge of investigating and ruling on asylum and statelessness claims accordingly to the Geneva Convention of July 28th 1951 and the New York convention of September 28th 1954 – which are now codified in the CESEDA. The OFPRA also provides legal advice in the context of asylum claims in waiting areas. Its decisions regarding asylum claims can be appealed before the national court of asylum (Cour Nationale du Droit d’asile), according to article L731-1 CESEDA.

Secondly, OFPRA deals with all events of civilian life of people that benefit from international protection (change of name, reconstitution of civil documents...).

¹³⁰⁹ In a recent report dated, the French Senate underlined that this integration mechanism was quite a failure despite the reform of March 2016. It notably points out that the language training level is below the European standards, that the civic training is too thick and academic and therefore quite unsuitable. Roger Karrouchi, ‘L’office français de l’immigration et de l’intégration : pour une politique d’intégration réaliste et ambitieuse’, (Rapport d’information n°660, 19 July 2017), <<http://www.senat.fr/rap/r16-660/r16-660.html>>, accessed 25 September 2017 [French]

3.2.2.2. Organization, Governance and Sources of Funding

According to article L722-1 CESEDA, this entity is administered by a board of directors composed of two deputies, two senators, and representatives of the ministry of internal affairs, of the ministry of foreign affairs and other ministries and a representative of the office's staff.

All the decisions regarding asylum claims are dispensed in the name of the general director of the office, name by decree of the President of the Republic.

Most of the OFPRA resources come from public service grant subventions (99% of its resources), grant by the Ministry of Internal Affairs¹³¹¹. The rest comes from European funds.

3.2.2.3. Monitoring and Evaluation System

Its main interlocutor is the Direction de l'Asile (Central division of asylum) of the DGEF. A COP has been concluded between OFPRA, the Ministry of Internal affairs and the ministry of Budget in 2016-2018.

According to article L 721-4 CESEDA, every year the OFPRA should release a report about its activity. This report is transmitted to the Parliament and made public afterwards.

4. What are the recent statistics regarding migrants (i.e. asylum-seekers, immigrants, transitmigrants, trends in migratory flows) in your country?

The term 'migrants' here will be used to cover 'economic' migrants: both those originating from the European Union and from third countries. It will also include those who have come to France seeking asylum, those who have been granted refugee status by the state, and transit migrants (those for whom France is not the final destination).

4.1. General Migration Situation

When we discount those who re-entered France and French citizens born abroad, net migration in 2016 comes to 252,643.^{1312, 1313} This calculation can be seen to be a reliable indication of migration flows as it does not inflate figures by counting those who have been in France for less than 12 months.¹³¹⁴

From 2006 onwards, net immigration as measured by the National Institute of Statistics and Economic Studies (INSEE) has increased steadily, by 67,000 each year from 2014-2016 inclusive.¹³¹⁵ This report shows a stable but increasing upwards trend in migration figures; however, one must factor in that INSEE's statistics have included Mayotte since 2014 and so there is a difference in data collection before this year.¹³¹⁶ Therefore the increase in immigration after 2013 may not necessarily reflect as large a change in the number of migrants arriving in France.

France continues to attract foreign students, currently 298,902, which represents an increase of almost 50,000 10 years ago.¹³¹⁷ The highest proportion of entrants (42.5%) originates from Africa, a quarter from Europe and 17% from Asia.

4.1.1. Demographic Divisions by Geographical Origin

Looking at the geographical origins of immigrants who came to France in 2015, data from the 2016 national census shows that 39.5% originate from Europe, the greatest proportion from Italy, Portugal and Spain¹³¹⁸. Almost the same proportion arrives from African countries (35.6%), mostly Algeria, Morocco and Tunisia¹³¹⁹. This is not surprising as there has traditionally been high migration from the francophone countries forming the Maghreb. However, in Mediterranean Arab countries “the period immediately preceding the revolts [Arab Spring of 2011] was one of intense emigration...particularly to France”¹³²⁰.

4.2. Categories of Migrants

4.2.1. Migration Within the European Union

As mentioned, 39.5% of migrants in 2015 came from Europe. This is to some extent due to geographical proximity, but also to the free movement rights conferred within the European Union. Eurostat gave a provisional number of 1.5 million for 2016.¹³²¹ This is an exponential increase of 20,000 between 2014 and 2015, and of 40,000 between 2015 and 2016. Yet, since data is only available from 2014 and only a provisional number for 2015 and 2016, it is premature to attempt any analysis of long-term trends from it.¹³²²

4.2.2. Non-European Asylum Seekers and Refugees

In 2016 there were 84,270 asylum seekers in France counted by Eurostat, a number which has not stopped increasing since 2010. In that year 28,755 asylum seekers were granted asylum, a success rate of a third of the seekers. Whilst the largest proportion of non-EU asylum seekers are between the ages of 18-34, almost a fifth of them are children.¹³²³

4.2.3. Transit Migrants

Transit migrants, whose destination country is not France, may stay in informal camps and abandoned buildings. Various NGOs have estimated the population of the informal encampments. After the dismantling of the 'Calais Jungle' camp in October 2016, where migrants were supposed to have been redirected to reception centres, reports have surfaced of more than 400 migrants returning and living rough around the former 'jungle'¹³²⁴. Although there is no legal duty to claim asylum in the first EU state they reach, member states may return asylum seekers to their country of entry for processing of their claim, which contributes to the clandestine nature of this section of migrants¹³²⁵. This makes the true number of transit migrants, who often go undocumented, very difficult to evaluate. In 2016, 91 985 non-EU irregular migrants were apprehended in France¹³²⁶.

4.2. 'Economic' Migrants

By subtracting the number of asylum claims from the figure of annual immigration, we arrive at an estimate of 168,730 purely economic migrants in 2016. Yet many migrants included in this figure may have migrated for reasons of family reunification, after retirement or even for long-term study whilst working and it must be made clear that this is a very rough estimation which cannot cover the various reasons for migration to France.

5. How have the decisions by the European Court of Human Rights concerning migrants been implemented at national level?

5.1. Implementation Mechanisms of ECtHR Decisions in France

5.1.1. Authority and Influence of ECtHR Decisions

As a Member of the European Convention on Human Rights (hereby referred to as the ECHR or the Convention), France is bound by the Convention and has a positive duty to execute any decisions rendered by the European Court of Human Rights (hereby referred to as the ECtHR) against itself. As a result, the French Parliament may vote new laws to comply with a decision of the ECtHR and the French Government may be bound to award damages to claimants.

Furthermore, ECtHR decisions against other Member States influence French legislation and uses. NGOs such as France Terre d'Asile often write reports pointing at the lack of conformity of administrative measures with the standards set by the ECtHR. The Independent Constitutional Authority called Défenseur des Droits (Rights Defender) also issues report regularly underlining inconsistencies between French law and ECtHR decisions. Those reports aim to create incentives to make change in practice and in the law.

5.1.2. Administrative Courts

According to the ECtHR¹³²⁷, States are free to control the entry of non-nationals on their territory due to the principle of State sovereignty. Once the non-national has entered a country, which is a State party to the Convention, this country is bound by its ECHR obligations in regard to that non-national. Administrative courts will mostly deal with the conditions of stay and expulsion of non-nationals. As public matters, cases are dealt with by the administrative court circuit, with the Conseil d'Etat (the French Supreme Administrative Court) at its top.

5.1.3. The French Constitutional Court

According to the Conseil Constitutionnel (French Constitutional Court), “foreigners hold all constitutional human rights that are recognised to people residing on the French territory”¹³²⁸. Under the ECHR, States are also bound by both positive and negative obligations to respect Convention rights when regulating immigration. It is necessary to assess whether those constitutional human rights equate human rights protected by the Convention, as well as their interpretation by the Court.

The Conseil Constitutionnel is solely concerned with constitutional review: its role is solely to determine whether a statutory provision — a Loi (a text of law) or an Article de Code (a Code article) — is compliant with the French Constitution of 4th of October 1958. If the Conseil Constitutionnel deems a law to be unconstitutional, the said text of law will be automatically censored. Before the enactment of a law, a request may be addressed to the Conseil Constitutionnel to assess the constitutionality of the bill by the President of the Republic, the Prime Minister, the President of the Assemblée Nationale (National Assembly, 1st House of Parliament), the President of the Sénat (Senate, 2nd House of Parliament), 60 deputies (Assemblée Nationale's members) or 60 senators¹³²⁹. Since 2008, after the enactment of a law, a request may be addressed during proceedings before a court to the Supreme Court of that circuit to have a request lodged to the Conseil Constitutionnel in order to assess the constitutionality of a law¹³³⁰.

5.1.4. Types and Implementation of ECtHR Decisions

We will here examine the correlation between ECtHR decisions and subsequent law amendments as well as Constitutional and Administrative case law at the French national level. The Convention protects two different types of rights: intangible and derogable rights. We will

5.2. Implementation of ECtHR Decisions Concerning Intangible Rights

5.2.1. ECtHR Decisions on Article 3 of the Convention

5.2.1.1. Direct Violation of Article 3: Administrative Detention of Children

France has a history of using administrative detention for both migrants and their children. In 2012, the ECtHR condemned France for this practice, ruling that children are not fit for detention and cannot be subjected to it if no decision has been taken against them¹³³¹. In July 2012, the Home Office issued a decree, asking Préfets (representatives of the State at the local and regional level¹³³²) to use house arrest over detention when dealing with migrants' children. However, according to human rights NGOs, the number of child detention increased dramatically again in 2015¹³³³. In 2016, France's practice was condemned again by the Court in 5 combined decisions¹³³⁴ which focused on three factors: the children's young age, the time of detention, and the unsuitability of the premises. Parliament's reform in 2016¹³³⁵ states that house arrests should always be preferred when dealing with children. However, the law allows for a 48-hour detention before departure to facilitate expulsion. The law mentions that the interests of the child should be taken into account in the evaluation¹³³⁶. However, the French Défenseur des Droits, an independent constitutional authority in charge of protecting citizens' rights against administrative abuse, claimed in a report that the new law does not comply with ECHR regulations, as the mention of the child's interest appears paradoxical¹³³⁷.

5.2.1.2. Virtual Violation of Article 3: Expulsion to the Migrant's Home Country

5.2.1.2.1. General Application of Virtual Violation

Since the ECtHR's decision in *Soering v UK*¹³³⁸, it is understood that the right not to be subjected to torture or degrading treatment is "one of the fundamental values in a democratic society"¹³³⁹. A double obligation has consequently been imposed upon Member States: a negative obligation not to impose any degrading treatment and a positive obligation to protect any person under their jurisdiction¹³⁴⁰. The ECtHR refers to the notion of virtual violation, according to which a Contracting State would violate Article 3 if it were to “knowingly (...) surrender a fugitive to another State where there were substantial grounds for believing that he would be in danger of being subjected to torture”¹³⁴¹.

France was condemned by the ECHR in 2015 for expelling Sudanese asylum seekers¹³⁴², on the ground of a virtual violation of Article 3. The Court outlined the alarming context in Sudan and Darfur to characterise the substantial grounds for believing that the asylum seekers would be in danger of torture. The court restated that it is not possible to balance the obligation with the reasons that justify the expulsion (here, minor incoherencies in the asylum seekers' story).

However, despite the rulings, France continues to expulse asylum-seekers to Sudan. On September 24th 2015, two Sudanese asylum-seekers were expelled despite a judgment of the Administrative Tribunal of Lille cancelling the expulsion. The practice of the Administrative Court of Lille consists in cancelling the expulsions that are issued without a destination or with Sudan as a destination, based on article 3 of the ECHR. However, other administrative courts have not been following the same practice and have allowed expulsions, such as the Administrative Court of Rouen. Recently, the Appeal Court of Douai validated an expulsion to Sudan¹³⁴³. The Court held that the lack of detail in the asylum-seeker's story, as well as his lack of identity documents, and the fact that he had not filed a request for asylum justified that there were “no sufficient substantial grounds that he would be exposed to torture as stipulated by article 3 of the Convention”. It is questionable whether this case law is compatible with AA and AF v France.

5.2.1.2.2. Specific Application of Virtual Violation

5.2.1.2.2.1. Seriously Ill Migrants

The standard set by the ECtHR for preventing a Member State to expulse a migrant due to a health condition was originally a low threshold, as it only operated in “exceptional circumstances”¹³⁴⁴. It was therefore possible to expel someone who contracted HIV, for instance. For a long period of time, France offered a much more extensive protection with the ‘Debré’ Law, which protected seriously ill migrants from expulsion through a registry¹³⁴⁵, and the ‘Chevènement’ Law, which offered a right of residence to seriously ill migrants if default of treatment would be likely to result in extremely grave consequences, provided that the said person could not benefit from an effective treatment in the destination country¹³⁴⁶. However, the law related to immigration, integration and nationality enacted on the June 16th 2011 modified the conditions for obtaining a right to residence, and replaced “access to an effective treatment” by “access to any treatment”. This new wording was deemed fit with the French Constitution by the *Conseil Constitutionnel*¹³⁴⁷, although it could expose certain migrants to death or degradation of their health in case of an expulsion.

Since *Paposhivi v Belgium*¹³⁴⁸, the ECtHR held that a seriously ill migrant who was not at risk of death was protected by article 3 of the Convention. It is uncertain whether the new redaction of article L.313-11-11 of the Code de l'entrée et du séjour des étrangers et du droit d'asile (Code on the entry and residence of aliens and on the right of asylum, hereby referred to as CESEDA) is compatible with the ECtHR's new higher threshold.

More recently, the French Parliament enacted a new law on the March 7th 2016, reforming the asylum procedure. The decrees of application of this law have modified the procedure for diagnosis of serious illness in the case of asylum seekers. The appreciation of the seriousness of the illness will no longer be supervised by the Ministry of Health, but instead by the Office for Immigration and Integration. NGOs specialised in migrants' rights have raised concerns over the impartiality of the Office to assess the seriousness of health conditions, calling the process “dangerous”¹³⁴⁹.

5.2.1.2.2.2. Female Genital Mutilation

According to the case law of the ECtHR, religious practices must go above a certain threshold of gravity to consist in torture as understood in article 3 of the Convention¹³⁵⁰. Furthermore, the ECtHR has reaffirmed that female genital mutilation (hereby referred to as FGM) is a degrading treatment contrary to article 3¹³⁵¹. However, there is no violation of article 3 if the family could protect the girl against FGM, and it is up to the plaintiff to demonstrate sufficiently detailed elements justifying one's fear to be subjected to FGM¹³⁵².

The Conseil d'Etat held that a young girl who was born in France, but who is a national of a State in which FGM is common practice, could obtain refugee status if she could justify of a personal fear to be subjected to FGM in case she returns to her home country. However, the Conseil d'Etat stated three limitations to that protection transposing the ECtHR's case law at national level. First, she must show sufficiently detailed elements such as geographic, sociologic, and family elements, demonstrating the personal risk of FGM. Second, it is possible to deny refugee status if the young girl can have protection of part of her home country's territory, which she can access and live a normal family life in. Third, it is impossible for the girl's parents to be given any form of international protection in France if the fears of FGM are not serious, personal and direct¹³⁵³. The French case law on FGM appears to be in line with the ECtHR's case law.

5.2.1.2.2.3. A Case Against the Death Penalty?

The combination of the two obligations identified by the ECtHR on the basis of article 3 led the ECtHR to rule that extraditing a foreigner to a country where he might be executed, even if the execution was the result of judicial proceedings, would be in breach of article 3¹³⁵⁴. In accordance with the evolutionary interpretation provided for in the preamble of the ECHR¹³⁵⁵, it was ruled that the adoption process of Protocol 13 demonstrated the willingness of the majority of Member States to abolish the death penalty. Following the 2009 Daoudi v France ruling¹³⁵⁶, the Conseil d'Etat made an application for a Question prioritaire de Constitutionnalité to the Conseil constitutionnel in order to constitutionally recognise the extraterritorial effect of article 66-1 of the French Constitution, which currently provides for the abolition of the death penalty in France¹³⁵⁷. However, the Conseil Constitutionnel issued a stay of proceedings, hence it opted not to adjudicate on the matter¹³⁵⁸. French courts, therefore, operate at two different speeds: while the Conseil d'Etat wishes to further the reasoning of the ECtHR, the Conseil constitutionnel appears to remain in withdrawal.

5.2.2. Indirect Violation of Article 3 Combined with a Violation of Article 13

5.2.2.1. General Provisions

Whenever there are serious reasons to think that the consequences of expulsion will be irreversible in regard to article 3 and article 13 of the Convention, the ECtHR ruled that the right to an effective remedy implies that appeals are suspensive. Since 1990, appeals against an order to escort have been made suspensive¹³⁵⁹, as well as appeals against orders to leave the territory, if filed in the 30-day period¹³⁶⁰. In 2007, the ECtHR condemned France on the grounds of an indirect violation of article 3 and a violation of article 13 because the appeal against a refusal of admission on French territory had not been made suspensive. The French Parliament subsequently modified the legislation to comply with said decision of the ECtHR¹³⁶¹.

5.2.2.2. Derogatory Regimes

5.2.2.2.1. Dublin Regulations

The ECtHR ruled in MSS v Belgium and Greece that a suspensive appeal was required in the case of procedures under the Dublin II regulation, if the asylum seeker were to be readmitted in a country, which was unable to respect the right to asylum. However, the Conseil d'Etat has systematically refused to recognise a combined violation of articles 3 and 13 of the Convention, both in the case of priority procedures¹³⁶² and readmissions¹³⁶³. The Conseil Constitutionnel also eluded the question¹³⁶⁴. The Law Reforming Asylum, enacted on July 29th 2015, provides for a suspensive appeal against the placement under a Dublin procedure¹³⁶⁵.

The Court also ruled in MSS v Belgium and Greece that given the deficiencies in the Greek asylum procedure, the transfer of the asylum seeker to Greece was in violation of article 3 and article 13 of the Convention. France's administrative courts have not complied consistently with the decision. In September 2016, the Bordeaux Administrative Appeal Court held that the European Commission's findings¹³⁶⁶ as well as the Human Rights Commissioner of the Council of Europe observations¹³⁶⁷ were sufficient to establish a systemic deficiency in Hungary's asylum procedure. However, in December 2016, the Lyon Administrative Appeal Court held that transferring an asylum seeker to Hungary was not in violation of the Convention because the deficiencies in the Hungarian asylum procedure were not sufficiently established¹³⁶⁸. Such a decision seems to clash with the Court's findings in MSS v Belgium and Greece, in light of the obvious deficiencies in the Hungarian asylum procedure as highlighted by European institutions. Therefore, the case law of those French lower administrative courts is in conflict. It is now up to the Conseil d'Etat to confirm the findings of the Bordeaux Administrative Court, if the French administrative case law is to comply with the ECtHR case law.

5.2.2.2.2. "Priority Procedure" of Asylum Applications

France traditionally applied a 'priority procedure' to asylum seekers who were in administrative detention. The priority procedure involves quicker timelines for handling the asylum application; however, this procedure also entails that the appeal against a refusal of asylum is not suspensive. In *IM v France*¹³⁶⁹, the Court ruled that the absence of a suspensive appeal in the priority procedure was in violation of article 3 and article 13 combined. In 2015, the Law Reforming Asylum¹³⁷⁰ generalised suspensive appeals against a refusal of asylum, and replaced the 'priority' procedure by an 'accelerated' procedure. France has, therefore, complied effectively with the Court's ruling.

5.3. Implementation of ECtHR Decisions Concerning Derogable Rights

5.3.1. ECtHR Decisions on Article 8 of the Convention

5.3.1.1. Negative Obligations

Before the Conseil Constitutionnel became a judicial authority and the guardian of individual constitutional rights, the French Conseil d'Etat played the role of guardian of one's civil liberties. As such, the Conseil d'Etat ruled, as early as 1974¹³⁷¹, that the right to a family life was a Principe Général de Droit (General Principle of Law, hereby referred to as PGD) based on paragraphs 10 and 11 of the Preamble of the 1946 French Constitution. The Conseil d'Etat was a pioneer in recognising as a positive obligation on Member States to effectively protect one's family life by the ECtHR in 1988¹³⁷².

The right to family life being no absolute right in regard to the paragraph 2 of article 8 of the ECHR, the ECtHR soon precised the proportionality test to be applied¹³⁷³ and the Conseil d'Etat ruled, a month later, that an administrative authority shall not amount to a disproportionate violation of the said right¹³⁷⁴, what was later enshrined in the *CESEDA*¹³⁷⁵. Benefitting from the status of a judicial entity, the Conseil Constitutionnel further hallowed the right to family life as a Principe de valeur constitutionnelle (Principle of Constitutional Value, hereby referred to as PVC)¹³⁷⁶. That right to family life, now of constitutional significance in the French legal system, is to be balanced with the similarly constitutionally relevant State's duty to ensure public order¹³⁷⁷, resulting from the principle of international law that one State is sovereign and may control the entry of non-nationals into its territory¹³⁷⁸.

There is thus a balance to strike, but it remains unclear what the criteria for the proportionality test are. The ECtHR sitting in its Grand Chamber formation refused to provide for a strict definition of family life; it rather promoted factual analysis to be conducted case by case¹³⁷⁹. This rather broad and variable assessment has led to a recent hardening of the standard to be applied, without, however, making it clearer. As such, the ECtHR ruled that adults would not necessarily benefit from article 8 if nothing more than normal affective bonds were relied upon to prove a situation of dependency¹³⁸⁰. In the same vein, the conditions for family reunion have constantly been imprecisely hardened in the last thirty years within the French legal system. As an example, two laws enacted on July 24th 2006 and on November 20th 2007 added the need to comply with the "core principles, which govern family life in France in accordance with the laws of the French Republic", as well as the obligation in some cases to pass a test aimed at evaluating one's knowledge of the French language and of the values of the French Republic in the country of origin¹³⁸¹. However, the ECtHR ruled that these conditions were too strict, and that family reunification procedures must be carried out with flexibility and effectiveness after having condemned France in 2014¹³⁸². As a result, the law enacted on March 7th 2016 put an end to the obligation to pass a test aimed at evaluating one's knowledge of the values of the French Republic¹³⁸³.

However, the definition of family life, the criteria of the proportionality test, and the boundaries of the balance to be struck remain unclear, variable, and subject to the European and French policies on migration, and family life.

5.3.1.2. Positive Obligations

The Court ruled in 1996 that a positive obligation for the State to offer a protection to the family of a non-national could arise under article 8 of the Convention¹³⁸⁴. In Bousarra v France,¹³⁸⁵ France had expelled a Moroccan national -who had lived in France since he was 4 months old - because he had committed a drug offence. The ECtHR examined the proportionality between the gravity of the infraction and the expulsion, as well as the social, cultural and family links the plaintiff had with France. However, it is interesting to note that the judgment, which reverses the validity of the order to escort, only awarded damages to the plaintiff who was already outside of the French territory. The effectiveness of the ruling was, therefore, limited.

5.3.2. Violation of Article 8 Combined with a Violation of Article 13

In De Souza Ribeiro v France, a Brazilian national was expelled despite a pending appeal and a demand of interim review against the order to escort. The order was issued only one day after the arrest, in application of a derogatory legal regime in force in the former French Colonies, such as Guiana and Mayotte. The Court ruled that when combined with article 8, the “extremely rapid, even perfunctory” conditions in which an order to escort was issued do not allow the plaintiff to obtain a sufficiently thorough examination of his application. Therefore, when combined with article 8, article 13 shall constrain the Member State to offer a suspensive appeal to the plaintiff. Commentators claimed that the Court's ruling was “shy” and could create difficulties of application, as the ruling does not directly condemn the former French colonies derogatory regimes. In 2015¹³⁸⁶, the Conseil d'Etat ruled that the absence of a suspensive appeal was balanced by the possibility to contest the decision via an interim review. However, the Conseil d'Etat specified that the interim review must itself be suspensive, in order to comply with the requirements developed in its case law by the ECtHR. In 2017, the French Parliament enacted a

Therefore, although the appeal against an order to escort or an order to leave the territory is not suspensive, the plaintiff may require a suspensive interim review of the decision.

6. How have the recommendations of the European Commission against Racism and Intolerance and of national human rights bodies concerning the integration of migrants been implemented?

The European Commission against Racism and Intolerance (hereafter “ECRI”) describes itself as “a human rights monitoring body which specializes in questions relating to the fight against racism, discrimination on grounds of “race”, ethnic/national origin, colour, citizenship, religion or language, xenophobia, antisemitism and intolerance”¹³⁸⁸.

The creation of this body of the Council of Europe was decided during the first Summit of Heads of State and Government of the Council of Europe and its statute was adopted on June 13, 2002. Composed of 47 members, the ECRI’s activities consist on monitoring countries and issuing statements and recommendations. Although its work is non-binding, the European Commission against Racism and Intolerance has a growing influence and its recommendations are considered as soft law.

The ECRI published five reports on France, each of them focusing on a different angle. In each report, the ECRI issues recommendations to lower racism and intolerance in the studied country, and to improve the treatment of vulnerable people.

Following the ECRI’s reports, French governments changed and improved their legislation and created new institutions.

Consequently, the Joint Ministerial Delegation for Combating Racism and Antisemitism and Hatred against LGBT (hereafter “DILCRAH”) was set up in 2012. This delegation was placed under the direct supervision of the Prime Minister in 2014. It established a 2015-2017 plan to combat racism and antisemitism which showed, according to the ECRI, the French determination “to combat racism and intolerance”¹³⁸⁹. Moreover, the institution of the Defender of Rights was created in 2012, and was assigned the missions to defend people whose rights were not respected and to allow everyone’s equality in the access to rights¹³⁹⁰.

Over the years, French governments mainly axed the implementation of the ECRI’s recommendation on the social integration of migrants as well as the protection of their rights.

6.1. The Social Integration of Migrants

To improve the social integration of migrants, French governments tackled the issue of school and work integration as well as the improvement of the public opinion.

6.1.1. The Integration at School

On April 9, 2015, the French Minister for the Public Service published a circular which aimed at establishing priorities in State employees' training; thus, emphasising on transmitting the “values of the Republic” in pedagogical content dispensed by public schools, especially the principles of laicity and neutrality of the State¹³⁹¹. Moreover, an action plan 2015-2017: “Mobilizing France against racism and antisemitism” was set up in 2015 by the DILCRAH. Measures 24 to 27 of this plan were aimed at “giving schools the means to preserve and pass on the values of the Republic”¹³⁹². Those measures were mentioned by the ECRI on its 5th report on France which noted that they “will contribute to implementing its recommendations”¹³⁹³.

6.1.2. The Work Integration

The ECRI noted in the 2010 report that different measures had been set up by France to tackle employment discrimination. The report highlighted the anonymization of CVs in job application as well as the diversity award set up in 2008 rewarding businesses that made the effort to hire more diversified people. This measure – intended to fight employment discrimination and to promote equal opportunities – was spotlighted by the French Ministry of Foreign Affairs as an implementation of the ECRI's recommendations¹³⁹⁴. The report recommended that “French authorities pursue their efforts to combat racial discrimination in all aspects of employment”. The “reception and integration contract” is aimed at facilitating the integration of non-European foreigners in France and is mandatory since January 1st 2007 for every newcomer wishing to settle in France. Even though the ECRI recommended France to review this system; the Commission deemed that it had been enhanced by other initiatives such as the establishment of a vocational skills system which enabled migrants to work in their areas of expertise¹³⁹⁵.

6.1.3. The Improvement of Public Opinion on Migrants

The first aim of the DILCRAH 2015-2017 action plan was to mobilize France against racism and antisemitism. To achieve it, the action plan made this goal a “Major National Cause for 2015”. Consequently, the first two measures of the action plan were the “launch of a proactive government communication campaign in mid-2015” as well as a “participative viral campaign in the second half of 2015”. Those measures were also mentioned by the ECRI on the fifth report on France as contributing to the implementation of its recommendations.

6.1.4. The Setup of Criminal Law on Racism and Discrimination

In its first report on France, the ECRI recommended French authorities to strengthen their legislation on racist acts and to improve their implementation¹³⁹⁶. The Commission also noted that most public discriminations were already penalized in France but were rarely applied¹³⁹⁷. The Commission welcomed in its 2010 report the effects of the new rules and tools set up a few years ago aimed at giving a judicial response to racist acts¹³⁹⁸. Moreover, measures 11 to 14 of the DILCRAH 2015-2017 action plan were aimed at “making sanctions more effective and educational” and were, thus, mentioned by the Commission as an implementation of its recommendations.

6.2. The Migrant’s Integration Guaranteed by Their Protection

The integration of migrants also involves their protection. In order to guarantee the latter, French governments created the institution of the Defender of Rights and tried to eradicate discrimination of migrants during identity checks.

6.2.1. The Institutional Protection by the Defender of Rights

The Defender of Rights resulted from the merge of the High Authority against Discrimination and for Equality (HALDE) with three other authorities. This institution was entrenched in the French Constitution in 2008 at the article 71-1. This constitutional status gave the Defender of Rights more stability, independence, and power. This institution can receive complaints and its investigational powers allow it to “cover various problems from the point of view of discrimination, and therefore give the complainants more comprehensive protection”¹³⁹⁹.

6.2.2. The Protection Against Discriminatory Identity Checks

A new Code of Ethics for the Police and Gendarmerie came into effect on January 1, 2014. It subordinates the exercise of the police’s missions to the respect of the Declaration of Human Rights and of the Citizen as well as the French constitution, international conventions and laws. This new Code – aimed at strengthening relationships with the population – established the wearing of identification numbers on uniforms for policemen in order to tackle the ethnic profiling issue. However, this badge number was deemed too long and too small by the ECRI that highlighted its removability. In this way, the Defender of Rights suggested that policemen give a receipt containing their identification number after every identity check¹⁴⁰⁰. Unfortunately, this idea has not been implemented yet.

7. How is migrants' right to access to healthcare regulated within the national legislation?

The concept of accessibility has four components: non-discrimination, physical accessibility, economic accessibility and information accessibility¹⁴⁰¹. According to the French Constitution and constitutional case law¹⁴⁰², three principles are fundamental regarding healthcare: individual freedom, protection of human dignity against enslavement and damaging¹⁴⁰³ as well as the right to health protection. In 2002, the *Kouchner Act*¹⁴⁰⁴ has introduced a preliminary chapter in the Public Health Code (CSP) called “Individual rights” (article L.1110-1 and seq). Ever since, respect of the human body, the right to personal dignity, the right to consent to healthcare and, above all, the right to a standard of care constitute essential patients’ rights. Furthermore, those rights are enshrined in international and European human rights instruments. Consequently, as a patient, a migrant is entitled to access to healthcare.

7.1. The Non-Discrimination Tenet: The Right to Access to Healthcare

7.1.1. Under the Constitution and the Public Health Code

The first article of the Declaration of the Rights of Man and of the Citizen of August 26th 1789, part of the block of constitutionality, provides that “men are born and remain free and equal in rights”. This is the constitutional ground of non-discrimination. The 11th paragraph of the Preamble to the Constitution of October 27th 1946 guarantees the health protection of citizens. The right to be treated has constitutional value.

In this regard, the CSP bans any discrimination concerning access to healthcare, including preventive, according to article L.1110-3. A health professional cannot refuse to treat on any discriminatory basis, like benefitting from state healthcare cover. Any victim of an unfounded denial of care can bring before local healthcare care insurance offices or the president of the professional board with material and regional jurisdiction (ibid, paragraph 3). By the same token, it is possible to call upon the Défenseur des droits in charge of the fight against discrimination and promotion of equality. He carries out a mediation, a transaction or legal proceedings. Consequently, the practitioner can also be punished before civil or penal courts. There is one exception that justifies a denial: the latter must be based on a personal or occupational requirement and determines the quality, security and effectiveness of treatment.

7.1.2. Under International and European Instruments

¹⁴⁰¹ International Organization for Migrants, Migration and the Right to Health in Europe [2009]

¹⁴⁰⁴ Law No 2002-303 on patients’ rights and the quality of health care system (2002) [Loi relative aux droits des malades et à la qualité du système de santé dite Loi Kouchner] [French]

The right to access to healthcare is enshrined in several international human rights instruments whose France is a State Party. The International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights of December 16th 1966 recognises “the right of everyone to the enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health” (article 12). Concerning the European ones, the European Social Charter of 1991 requires that nationals of one State Party lawfully present on the territory of another be afforded medical assistance on terms equal to those nationals of the second State Party. As interpreted by the European Court of Human Rights, provisions of the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms on the right to life, the right to be free from torture and degrading and inhuman treatment, the right to respect for private and family life and the principle of non-discrimination (articles 2, 3, 8 and 14) have been legal grounds for lawsuits related to the access to healthcare. Thus, any victim of an unfounded denial of care is entitled to go to ECHR, for instance, to assert its right to access to healthcare.

Nonetheless, the latter is often limited because of patients’ financial difficulties. Therefore, medical aids have been multiplied in the last few decades.

7.2. Economic Accessibility: the Different Types of Financial Medical Aids

The social security system has evolved as a result of major reforms. Since 1972¹⁴⁰⁵, a person who is not covered by social security as well as his assignees benefit from personal health insurance. The Couverture Maladie Universelle (the State health cover for people on low incomes – CMU), implemented in 2000¹⁴⁰⁶, has enabled all legal residents on the French territory to get all their health costs back.

In this sense, repayment of health costs is divided into two parts¹⁴⁰⁷. On the one hand, the mandatory share is the one covered by social protection. On the other hand, the additional share is refunded by an additional healthcare cover or dependent on the patient (article L.160-13 and seq. of the Code of the Social Security Code). Concerning foreigners, the type of financial aid depends on migrant status in France.

7.2.1. Financial Aids for Documented Migrants

7.2.1.1. State Healthcare Cover for Mandatory Share

Implemented in 2016¹⁴⁰⁸, the Protection Universelle Maladie (PUMA) has replaced the CMU. Under the PUMA, only the mandatory share is covered by social security. There are two required conditions to benefit from this aid. Firstly, staying in France on a legal basis is necessary. In other words, you must have the French nationality, a residence permit or having started following a procedure to obtain documents. It only concerns EU foreign nationals. Secondly, living in France on a continuous basis – i.e. for more than three months – is requested. Some people may be exempt from this requirement such as international students, social benefit claimants or refugees and asylum seekers. Besides, a few migrants can be covered thanks to bilateral agreements between France and their country of origin – around forty states¹⁴⁰⁹.

7.2.1.2. State Healthcare Cover for Additional Share

7.2.1.2.1. Free Additional Healthcare Cover under the State Health Cover for People on Low Incomes

The Couverture Médicale Universelle Complémentaire (CMU-C), a type of public additional healthcare cover, spares advance on health costs. In fact, the CMU-C enables to support for free patients' additional shares. One may meet three requirements in order to benefit from this social cover : living in France on a legal and continuous basis as well as receiving less than 726,92 per month. The CMU-C is granted for one year and must be extended every year¹⁴¹⁰.

7.2.1.2.2. Financial Aid for Additional Healthcare Cover

The Aide au Paiement d'une Complémentaire Santé (ACS) is granted to those with means upper than CMU-C limit. It provides a financial aid for one year to pay a complementary health insurance contract under three conditions : living in France on a legal and continuous basis as well as receiving more than 726,92 euros and less than 981,33 euros per month¹⁴¹¹.

7.2.2. Financial Aid for Irregular Migrants

Not only does the French social security system covers migrants with legal documents but also the undocumented ones. Indeed, the Aide Médicale d'Etat (State Medical Aid – AME) supports health costs in full on three conditions (article L.251-1 of the Social Action and Family Code). Firstly, the migrant must stay in France on an illegal basis; that is, with no residence permit, application receipt or any document demonstrating that the migrant has started following a procedure to obtain a residence permit. Secondly, it is requested that the AME recipient resides in France for more than three months. Thirdly, he has to earn less than 726,92 euros a month. The AME is granted for one year and must be extended every year¹⁴¹².

Moreover, a foreigner who does not live in France can ask for the AME on humanitarian grounds in case of accident or illness passing through France and if he cannot be treated in his country of origin. It totally or partially covers his health costs depending on each situation¹⁴¹³. Eventually, in case of emergency, a migrant who lives in France on an illegal basis, for less than three months or, more but without being an AME claimant, can be solely covered for hospital treatment¹⁴¹⁴. In practice, access to healthcare is often limited because of physical and/or information accessibility.

7.3. Physical and Information Accessibility

Physical accessibility deals with health facilities, goods and services which must be within safe physical reach for all sections of the population, especially vulnerable or marginalized groups. The CSP recognises the right to a standard of care throughout the national territory under the article L.1110-5. In other words, given its health status, any person is entitled to be treated and to receive the most appropriate care all over France. Information accessibility means that everyone has the right to seek, receive and impart information concerning health issues. The article L.1111-2 of the CSP states that any person is entitled to be informed on its health status. Additionally, according to the article L.262-1 of the Code of Social Security, health care insurance funds are assigned with the mission of prevention, education and health information as a priority for vulnerable groups. In this respect, public policies in the field of precariousness, poverty and health prevention are carried out by the Ministry of Social Affairs and Health to make access to healthcare easier for migrants.

On this subject, NGOs point out difficulties for migrants to access to healthcare in France. According to a study of Médecins du Monde France (MDM), 88% of migrants do not benefit from state healthcare cover. Consequently, in 2016, MDM launched into the program “Migrants Law Health”, funded by the majority of the European Union, to promote access to healthcare of vulnerable groups¹⁴¹⁵.

In this way, within the French legislation, migrants’ right to access to healthcare is a fundamental right guaranteed and protected by the Constitution, international and European instruments and national law.

Depending on each situation, the social security system offers different types of financial medical aid to enable an equal access to healthcare.

Notwithstanding, this right may be limited considering physical and information accessibility.

8. How do migrant children benefit from the right to education under your national legislation (Article 2 of the first Protocol to the ECHR)?

This article looks at how France guarantees the right to education through the prism of its legal framework and policies, the accessibility of these guarantees for migrant children and points out areas which can be improved.

8.1. The Legal Framework of the Right to Education in France

8.1.1. French Constitution and National Law

The right to education has constitutional value in France: the Preamble to the Constitution declares that “the Nation guarantees equal access for children and adults to instruction, vocational training and culture. The provision of free, public and secular education at all levels is a duty of the State.” Article L. 131-1 of the Code of Education ensures this access by prohibiting any discrimination according to the nationality of the child: "Education is compulsory for children of both sexes, French and foreign, between 6 and 16 years".

8.1.2. Law Derived from the European Union

As a member of the European Union, France has been bound from the 1st of December 2009 by the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union (the Charter), which includes under Article 14 the right to education. In addition, the Charter includes a comprehensive non-discrimination clause under Article 21. To ensure its respect, France must undertake policy decisions which are compatible with the Charter not only towards its own nationals, but to migrant children arriving from other member states.

8.2. Barriers to an Effective Access to Education

8.2.1 The Accessibility of the Educational System

Since the promulgation of the Circular of 3 March 2002 on the procedures for enrolling and schooling pupils of foreign nationality in the first and second grade, the national education system is intended to be accessible for migrants¹⁴¹⁶.

Firstly, the Ministry of Education makes available numerous written and audio documents in order to inform parents or any other authority responsible for newly arrived children in France. For example, a bilingual greeting booklet is available in 9 languages and is dedicated to explaining the organization of schooling, as well as the specific support for learning French¹⁴¹⁷. This type of specific support for migrant children is the main difference between their curriculum and the national children's school curriculum. Indeed, after passing a level test, the newly arrived children join a 'UPE2A': a Pedagogical Unit for newly Arrived Allophone Pupils¹⁴¹⁸. At primary school, this is designed to allow the child to access the mainstream curriculum; the time accorded to this unit varies for each child according to their needs¹⁴¹⁹. While in the second cycle, UPE2A are organized as a class and the pupils only take part in a few subjects in the classroom before being able to join them in full and on a permanent basis¹⁴²⁰.

8.2.2. Socio-economic Status

According to the National Institute of Demographic Studies, the grades of pupils in college largely depend on their social class¹⁴²¹. Many French immigrants “come from countries with very low living standards”, and there is significant overlap between migrant educational attainment and low social status.¹⁴²² It seems to be this factor which strongly affects their children’s subsequent schooling rather than migrant status. Indeed, “when the impact of social background is kept constant...students’ immigrant origins are often associated with high aspirations”¹⁴²³. From this we can extrapolate that by redressing the wider socio-economic balance, access to education for migrant children would necessarily increase.

The French notion of equality means aid to schools cannot be allocated based on race or national origin¹⁴²⁴. Yet there exists the Priority Education Network which aims to allocate more resources for schooling in economically deprived areas, which count a disproportionate number of migrant children in their population. It remains unclear just how much of this aid goes to migrant children¹⁴²⁵.

8.2.3. Discrimination in Education and Avenues of Redress

French criminal law provides that discrimination according to (inter alia) ethnicity, nationality or race, such as a school’s refusal to register a migrant child, may be punished by up to five years of imprisonment and a fine of 75,000 Euros¹⁴²⁶. However, there persists a strong lack of confidence in judicial systems among young people¹⁴²⁷. The ‘Defender of Rights’ is an independent constitutional authority which may investigate a claim and fine the perpetrator. 5,206 (7.4%) of cases in 2016 concerned discrimination, a number which has risen by over 2000 since 2010, yet ‘indicators of tolerance’ have risen¹⁴²⁸. This suggests that greater visibility of this institution is leading to more referrals. However, research has criticised the low budget of the Defender of Rights which requires political and legislative action on the part of the State to remedy¹⁴²⁹.

A cause for concern is France’s law of 2004 which forbids “signs and dress that conspicuously show the religious affiliation of students”. This has been seen by many commentators to discriminate unduly against Sikh, Muslim, and Jewish children, a sizable proportion of whom are migrants. It is recommended that France carry out an evaluation of the effects of this law, which it has previously refused to do¹⁴³⁰.

8.2.4. Roma Children

The Committee on the Rights of the Child has expressed concern over difficulties in registering for and attending school for Roma children, and indeed they are refused access on occasion by local government¹⁴³¹. The Collective for the Right of Roma Children to Education has collected data showing that 53 percent of children aged 12-18 were not attending school between November 2015 and July 2016¹⁴³². To combat this, France has adopted three ministerial circulars on the education of Roma and Travellers, and put in place a national working group on Roma and Travellers' education and network of CASNAV1 (Academic Centre for the Education of Newcomers and Traveller Children).

8.2.5. Child Asylum Seekers, Refugees and Unaccompanied Child Migrants

Some asylum seekers aged between 16 and 18 have difficulties accessing education because public schools do not have any obligation to accept them. For those who have never been to school before their entry in France, it is extremely difficult to integrate them into the education system¹⁴³³.

Insofar as concerns unaccompanied migrant children who are not EU citizens, Article 14(1) of the Reception Conditions Directive states that asylum seekers must be able to access education before an expulsion decision is made¹⁴³⁴. France has been found to broadly respect these requirements and migrant children can access France's school system even if they are irregularly residing in France¹⁴³⁵.

9. How are foreign school and university diplomas recognised in your country (e.g. through national law under the CoE/UNESCO Convention on the Recognition of Qualifications concerning Higher Education in the European Region of 1997) and what are the practical procedures?

9.1. The Framework of the Recognition Process in France

9.1.1. Qualification Frameworks

Recognition in France of foreign school and university diplomas is operated in accordance with the Nomenclature des niveaux de formation (National Qualification Framework - NQF), which evolves under the umbrella of the European Qualification Framework (EQF) levels¹⁴³⁶ promoting workers' and learners' mobility and enhancing free movement of people in Europe. Although the EQF refers to the 2011 International Standard Classification of Education (ISCED) set up by the UNESCO, French authorities rely solely on the French NQF to grant attestations (comparability certificates).

9.1.2. The Level Structure

The French NQF was referenced to the EQF in October 2010¹⁴³⁷ on the basis of the original five-level structure introduced in 1969. It has been fully operational ever since¹⁴³⁸. Under the French NQF, the higher the level, the less advanced the qualification¹⁴³⁹. Therefore, Level I corresponds to Doctorate and Master's degrees, while Level V corresponds to certificates of vocational studies or abilities. On the contrary, under the EQF, the higher the level, the more advanced the qualification. It is observed that the French NQF focuses solely on vocational and professional oriented qualifications. This means that it does not include general education qualifications such as primary, lower secondary, and general upper secondary education qualifications, under which notably falls the General Baccalaureate. Therefore, under the French five-level structure, EQF Levels 1 and 2 do not apply as the said five levels solely correspond to EQF Levels 3 to 8. The focus adopted by the French NQF thus stems from the fitting of qualifications within the European labour market. This five-level structure has been criticised on several occasions over the past decade. In 2012, a call was made for reform and hope was set that the change of Presidency from President Sarkozy to President Hollande would bring focus on the need for such a reform¹⁴⁴⁰. However, such a call has not been heard yet.

9.2. The Distinction Between Regulated and Non-regulated Professions

9.2.1. Drawing the Distinction

The recognition process of foreign school and university diplomas is carried out in the context of a job search in France. Two mechanisms are operated in parallel depending on the profession that one wishes to exercise: non-regulated professions and professions regulated by EU Directives as set in the Council of Europe's Directive of September 7, 2005¹⁴⁴¹. Establishing a list of regulated professions in France based on the definition provided in article (3)(1)(a) of the 2005 Directive has shown to be a rather prickly task. The Centre international d'études pédagogiques (CIEP) (International Centre for Educational Studies) has listed the "main" regulated professions in France¹⁴⁴², hence providing a non-exhaustive list of them. In the same vein, the European Commission has created an online regulated professions database¹⁴⁴³, evidencing the door that was left ajar to quite a few loopholes by the rather broad definition provided for in the 2005 Directive. Indeed, although the European Commission has provided a list of 258 professions that are to be considered regulated in France¹⁴⁴⁴, precision is made that the "Commission cannot be held responsible for the accuracy of the information" and that, in the case of France, the Centre ENIC-NARIC France and the CIEP are the only authorities able to determine whether a profession is regulated under article (3)(1)(a) of the 2005 Directive, the latter having only been able to provide for a non-exhaustive list of them so far. A fair amount of uncertainty, therefore, may affect the classification of some professions, depending on the interpretation given to the terms used in the Directive definition by the French national authorities.

9.2.2. The Recognition Procedure for Regulated Professions

Apart from those professions that are not or that are not yet or may be considered regulated, professions that are listed as regulated professions — such as nurses, dental surgeons, dieticians, bailiffs, legal experts, Avocats à la Cour et Avocats aux Conseils (barristers specialised in pleas made to the French Civil and Administrative Supreme Courts), etc. — require registration to be made within the appropriate State administrative authority, depending on the profession that is wished to be practised. To know what the appropriate authority is, the CIEP provides on its website for a directory listing of the main regulated professions and indicates for each of them the authority that is to be contacted and the administrative steps that are to be followed for registration¹⁴⁴⁵.

9.2.3. The Recognition Procedure for Non-Regulated Professions

As to non-regulated professions, French authorities deliver attestations de comparabilité (comparability statements) and attestations de reconnaissance de niveau d'études/ de formation (recognition of academic level certificates) based on the French five-level NFQ. The Centre ENIC-NARIC France — which is part of the European Network of Information Centres (ENIC) on Academic Mobility and Recognition created under the UNESCO/Council of Europe Lisbon.

9.2.3.1. Bodies and Entities Involved

The Recognition Convention¹⁴⁴⁶, which expanded the National Academic Recognition Information Centre (NARIC) network established by the European Union in 1984¹⁴⁴⁷, is the only authority in the country able to deliver the said attestations. When equivalence can be established between the foreign diploma and a French diploma level, the ENIC-NARIC Centre will deliver an attestation de comparabilité. However, in the case the said equivalence cannot be established, the ENIC-NARIC Centre will deliver an attestation de reconnaissance de niveau d'études/ de formation. The work of the ENIC-NARIC Centre is overseen by the CIEP, which has been an antenna of the French Ministry of Education since 1945¹⁴⁴⁸.

9.2.3.2. The Assessment Criteria

According to the 1997 Lisbon Recognition Convention¹⁴⁴⁹, ENIC-NARIC experts conduct the assessment pertaining to the deliverance of either of the two attestations on the basis of 2 eligibility criteria and 8 appreciation criteria¹⁴⁵⁰. The 2 eligibility criteria provide for that (i) the qualification must be recognised by the competent authority of the country of origin where the diploma was issued, and that (ii.i) the diploma must not exclusively certify a linguistic proficiency and (ii.ii) it must have been delivered by an institution offering academic or professional training of not less than 6 months or of not less than one academic semester's training/study, i.e. 600 hours of training. The 8 appreciation criteria are as follows: (i) the existence of bilateral or multilateral agreements binding France and the country where the diploma was issued relating to the recognition of qualifications, (ii) the ranking of the course followed at the national and international law, (iii) the official duration of the studies, (iv) ECTS/credits collected, (v) prerequisites to being taken on the course, (vi) the learning outcomes of the formation, (vii) academic and professional outlets offered by the said formation, and (viii) the existence of an independent and external evaluation of the training and/or of the institution that delivered the diploma.

9.2.3.3. The Relevance and the Deliverance Process of Attestations

These attestations are official documents; however, they are not legally binding, nor is working in France contingent on being granted such an attestation. Indeed, in the absence of a French legal principle of equivalence, employers are the sole ones in charge of determining whether the qualification(s) obtained by the job seeker is/are adequate to the position on offer. Attestations are, thus, mere skills indicators. Such a mechanism arguably fits within the very focus of the French NFQ on the labour market. Although not mandatory, employers will often seek to be provided with such an attestation in order to be able to assess the adequacy of qualifications for the job. In such a case, an application for recognition shall be made to the CIEP via post¹⁴⁵¹. It shall consist in the submission of several documents, as listed on the CIEP website¹⁴⁵². The recognition process generally takes three to four months to be completed, when the application has been successful, i.e. when the two eligibility criteria have been met. It should also be noted that attestations are only to be delivered upon the payment of a lump sum to be determined by the CIEP's financial department once the application for the deliverance of an attestation has been said to be successful by the ENIC-NARIC Centre¹⁴⁵³.

9.2.3.4. The Special Procedure for Refugees

In accordance with article VII of the 1997 Lisbon Recognition Convention¹⁴⁵⁴, the ENIC-NARIC Centre has developed a specific procedure for the recognition of refugees' qualifications¹⁴⁵⁵. Applications made by refugees are dealt with in priority and free of charge; the procedure specific to 'refugees' is said to be "flexible and suitable", since solely a "minimum of documents" supporting the application is required and any other necessary information will directly be asked to the said refugee or relevant NGOs¹⁴⁵⁶. Although the introduction of this specific and somehow simplified procedure testifies of a first step taken by the French government, some doubt may be expressed as to the suitability of the said procedure with article VII of the Lisbon Convention. Although the Convention provides for recognition "even in cases in which the qualifications obtained [...] cannot be proven through documentary evidence", the ENIC-NARIC Centre requires a "minimum of documents" to be provided. It should also be noted that it has not been specified what this "minimum" is or may be. Finally, it is unclear whether this specific procedure is only open to refugees or also to "persons in a refugee-like position"¹⁴⁵⁷. The CIEP and the ENIC-NARIC France Centre indeed seem to restrict the procedure to refugees only when describing the specificities of the said procedure¹⁴⁵⁸. However, when detailing the steps to be followed for an application, the CIEP makes clear that if the

10. How is participation of migrants in political decisions regulated in your national legislation? Are they legally allowed to participate in their country of residence the same way as in their country of origin?

Thinking the participation of migrants in political decisions proceeds of an a contrario reasoning. Indeed, migrants are totally absent from this field of law as far as the right to participate in the political decision is reserved to French citizens. Two types of political participation shall be distinguished: elections and referendums.

10.1. The Elections

The article 3 of the Constitution of the fifth French Republic (hereafter “The Constitution”) states that “National sovereignty belongs to the people”. However, the same article also clarifies that “The right to vote, in conditions laid down by law, is enjoyed by all French nationals of either sex who are of age and in full possession of their civil and political rights.”¹⁴⁶⁰ There is an obvious distortion between the field recovering the term “people” and the permeability of the category “French nationals”.

The different types of elections taking place in France let no space for migrants to express their vote for the right to vote is conditioned either by the French citizenship or by the European citizenship.

The universal indirect suffrage is not interesting in that case as far as the universal direct suffrage is a premise for the universal indirect suffrage.

10.1.1. The Presidential and Legislative elections

The presidential election aims to elect the president of the Republic. The article 6 of the Constitution states that “The president of the Republic is elected for five years by direct universal suffrage”.

The legislative election aims to elect the deputies, representing the nation at the Assemblée nationale (Lower chamber of the Parliament). The article 24 of the Constitution states that “The deputies at the Assemblée nationale, which number cannot exceed five hundred seventy-seven, are elected by direct universal suffrage”. This provision is backed by the article 6 of the Declaration of human and civil Rights of August 26th 1789 (which is a part of the bloc de constitutionnalité) explaining that “law is the expression of the general will” and that “all citizens have the right to take part personally or through their representatives, in its making”.

¹⁴⁵⁹ ‘Mode d’emploi pour les demandes en ligne’ (CIEP) <<http://www.ciep.fr/sites/default/files/atoms/files/enic-naric-mode-emploi-demande-de-reconnaissance-en-ligne.pdf>> accessed 15 August 2017 [French]

¹⁴⁶⁰ « National sovereignty belongs to the people, who exercise it through their representatives and by way of referendum. No section of the people and no individual may claim to exercise it. The suffrage may be direct or indirect in conditions provided for by the Constitution. It is in all cases universal, equal and secret. The right to vote, in conditions laid down by law, is enjoyed by all French nationals of either sex who are of age and in full possession of their civil and political rights. » French Constitution of 4 October 1958, Article 3

In both cases the right to vote is conditioned by the voting right entitled through the above-mentioned article 3 of the Constitution. Only French citizens with a full use their civil and political rights can legally vote. Thus, any other category of individual is excluded from this vote, including migrants, whatever their statutes might be.

10.1.2. The Municipal and the European Elections

The municipal election aims to elect the municipal counsellors, which will lead the policy of the city. The right to vote for the municipal elections is regulated as the above-mentioned cases for the presidential and legislative elections. However, a special provision of the electoral Code allows European citizens to vote for these elections. Indeed, article LO227-1 of the electoral Code states that “The citizens of the European Union having their residence in France, other than the French citizens, can participate to the election of the municipal counsellors” within the same conditions as French citizens and under special administrative provisions within that Code. These provisions are an application of the article 22 paragraph 1 of the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union (TFEU)¹⁴⁶¹.

The European elections aims to elect the European parliament. As a nonexclusive French procedure ruled by the article 22 paragraph 2 of the TFEU, every citizen of the European Union having its residence in another country than the one of its origin is entitled to vote for the election of the European parliament in the same conditions as a national of that State¹⁴⁶².

Once again, migrants are totally absent of these processes. The right to vote for both these elections is conditioned by the European citizenship.

10.2. The Referendum

Under the authority of the Constitution, two types of referendum are possible. Are to be divided national and local referendums.

National referendums are constituted by article 11 and 89 of the Constitution. They both concern the approbation by the people of a projet de loi (draft bill) on some specific topics. The only voters allowed to participate are the French citizens, and any other category of individuals, including migrants are not entitled to vote.

¹⁴⁶¹ « Every citizen of the Union residing in a Member State of which he is not a national shall have the right to vote and to stand as a candidate at municipal elections in the Member State in which he resides, under the same conditions as nationals of that State. This right shall be exercised subject to detailed arrangements adopted by the Council, acting unanimously in accordance with a special legislative procedure and after consulting the European Parliament; these arrangements may provide for derogations where warranted by problems specific to a Member State. » Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union, article 22, para. 1

Regarding local referendums, proceeding of article 72-1 of the Constitution, the loi organique (organic law) designated the voters as the corps electoral (electoral body). Neither there are legally allowed to vote any other category than French citizens.

The last possibility is the article 88-5 of the Constitution regarding a referendum for the adhesion of a new party to the European Union. Nevertheless, as in all the aforementioned hypotheses, the silent of positive provisions backs the electoral body as the French citizens only.

These observations lead to one simple conclusion. The French Law totally ignores that status of the migrant. A draft pyramidal hierarchy of the individuals able to take part into the political decision would be as such:

- French citizen
- European Union citizen
- Others

More than this is to be noticed that migrants are not only legally forbidden to take part in the political decisions in France: they are constitutionally moved aside from the political process.

Several attempts for draft bill according the right to vote to foreigners were aborted. On May 3rd 2000, a draft bill was positively accepted by the Assemblée nationale to grant foreigners a right to vote for municipal elections, but was not set to the agenda of the high chamber of the parliament, the Senate¹⁴⁶³. In any case, such right would concern owner of a titre de séjour (residence permit) and not illegal migrants who are not recognised any right to participate in the political decision in France so far.

11. How can migrants acquire citizenship in the country? Is there a possibility of double nationality?

The acquisition of the French citizenship can be obtained through several procedures. Only a few of them directly concern migrants. But to fully understand those procedures, all of them are to be reviewed consecutively.

11.1.1. By Declaration

The acquisition of citizenship by declaration is the least concerning migrants as it logically supposes a long and stable establishment in the country. Indeed, marriage and a family link granting French citizenship are marginal cases when it comes to migrants.

¹⁴⁶³ “Small law” n. 505 (Proposition of constitutional reform) (3 May 2000) [Proposition de loi constitutionnelle, “petite loi”] [French]

11.1.1.1. Marriage

First is to be noticed that marriage produces no rightful effects¹⁴⁶⁴. However, a foreigner or a stateless person can, after four years of marriage with a French citizen acquire the French citizenship if the communauté de toit (community of roof i.e. home) and the communauté de lit (community of bed i.e. marital duties) did not cease during this period¹⁴⁶⁵. Moreover, the spouse or husband must justify a sufficient knowledge of the French language, relatively to its own conditions¹⁴⁶⁶.

This hypothesis might cover the case of migrants. Nevertheless, the reality and the sincerity of the marriage has to be; otherwise the nationality would be retroceded¹⁴⁶⁷.

11.1.1.2 For Cause of a French Sibling

Is also possible the acquisition of the French citizenship by transduction of the nationality of a member of the family. Here, one shall justify a residence in France since they are aged six, and whether they followed a full scholarship in the French territory, in case their sibling is a French citizen¹⁴⁶⁸.

Nonetheless, this case is purely marginal when it comes to migrants.

11.1.2. By Naturalisation

The acquisition of the French citizenship by naturalisation implies several criterions and is a slow system. The naturalisation is proceeded through a decree of naturalisation.

11.1.2.1. Conditions

The essential condition for the grant of the French citizenship is the residence in France. The enquirer must have his residence in France at the moment of the declaration¹⁴⁶⁹. Except the following exceptions, the enquirer must have without interruption resided in France for the past five years¹⁴⁷⁰.

This period might be reduced to two years of effective residence in case of two successful years of studies to obtain a college degree by a French university, or because of a special service provided to the country, or even because of a foreigner having an exceptional integration process by civic, scientific, economic, cultural or sportive activities¹⁴⁷¹.

The acquisition of the French citizenship does not need any justification of residence in case of a foreigner having accomplished military duty within the French army or one having executed exceptional services for the country¹⁴⁷².

¹⁴⁶⁵ Civil Code article 21-2 [Code Civil]

¹⁴⁶⁹ Civil Code article 21-16 [Code Civil]

¹⁴⁷⁰ Civil Code article 21-17 [Code Civil]

¹⁴⁷¹ Civil Code article 21-18 [Code Civil]

¹⁴⁷² Civil Code article 21-19 [Code Civil].

The same article also excludes the condition of residence for a foreigner under the status of refugee and stateless person according to the law n.52-893 (Law creating a French office for the protection of refugees and stateless persons) of July 25 1952 [loi portant sur la création d'un Office français de protection des réfugiés et apatrides]. If such refugees are legally staying in France for more than fifteen years and aged more than seventy, no language level shall be required¹⁴⁷³.

That one last case is especially interesting relatively to the question of migrants. However, the status of refugee and stateless person is limited to legal migrants, i.e. persons who were recognised as such. Thus, this hypothesis is not fully satisfying.

Other major conditions are the age, which cannot be under eighteen (except cases of 1.3), a decent life and decent virtue¹⁴⁷⁴.

The French citizenship cannot be granted to anyone either convicted for crimes and offences constituting an attempt to the fundamental interests of the nation or for acts of terrorism, or sentenced to six years of jail with suspended sentence. The same regulation is applied to those subjects to an interdiction of territory or any expulsion decree, or even those staying irregularly in France regarding the conventions related to the stay of foreigners in France¹⁴⁷⁵.

To these conditions is added a special interview with an agent of the prefecture or an agent of the consulate¹⁴⁷⁶. This interview called contrôle d'assimilation (test of assimilation) aims to control the adhesion of the enquirer to the values of the Republic and to the French community. At the end of this test, the enquirer has to sign the charte des droits et des devoirs du citoyen français (chart of the rights and duties of the French citizen)¹⁴⁷⁷.

The French citizenship can also be acquired after a period of ten years of possession d'état (acquisition by the consenting behaviour) of the French citizenship for a period of ten years, according to article 21-13 of the Code civil, but this hypothesis is ontologically to exclude when it comes to migrants which are subjects to shortest deadlines.

11.1.2.2. Deadline for Response and Deadline for Appeal

The French administration must give an answer within eighteen months¹⁴⁷⁸. This deadline can be reduced to twelve months if the enquirer resides in France for at least ten years. This deadline can also be prorogued for three months when justified.

11.1.3. The Case of Children

The conditions of the acquisition of the French citizenship are almost the same for minors as for majors. According to rules of jus soli, a foreign minor born in France from non-French parents is a French citizen when he turns eighteen, i.e. when he becomes a major if he can justify a period of residence on the French territory of five years since the age of eleven¹⁴⁷⁹. The minor fulfilling these conditions can also claim a certificate of French citizenship when he is sixteen, or his parents when the minor is thirteen with his consent¹⁴⁸⁰.

For children adopted by a French citizen, they can claim a certificate of French citizenship until their majority, if they live in France at the moment of the declaration¹⁴⁸¹. More interesting is the absence of the obligation of residence for a child adopted by a French citizen having its residence somewhere else than in France. That case may be applied for migrant children adopted by French citizens outside of the French territory and is a real protection whether the criterion of the residence can be backed.

The same article applies to children protected by the social service for at least three years and consecutively to a judicial decision or to a child educated in such conditions he received a French formation in a public or private institution.

11.2. Double Nationality

There are no specific provisions in French law recognising the double nationality. However, this process is a result of a custom.

France has reneged on the first chapter of the Convention of the Council of Europe of May 6th 1963. Thus, there is no automatic loss of nationality when a foreigner acquires the French citizenship.

The only real legal provisions come from the article 21-27-1 of the Civil code¹⁴⁸². During the procedure for the acquisition of the French citizenship by decision of the public authority or by declaration, the enquirer indicates to the relevant authority the other nationalities he might already have¹⁴⁸³. In any case, French authorities make no difference between a citizen and a double national.

The double nationality can be acquired at any point of the life. Because of the articles 18 to 21-27-1 of the Civil code, a child can acquire the French citizenship because of the jus soli if he's born in France, but also having the nationality of his non-French parent. As soon as a foreigner acquires the French citizenship, he can have a double nationality. Such dispositions proceed of international law and principle of international legal sovereignty more than national law.

12. How is your country assisted by EU programmes and funding with regard to the integration of migrants?

Migration, affecting most of the European countries, demands a financial assistance that should be granted to the countries that host many migrants and refugees. This is the reason why the European Union has implemented several programmes adopted by Member States to encourage the integration of migrants in their societies as well as funding, to help the countries that do not have the financial means to support a great number of migrants¹⁴⁸⁴.

As a result, we will present, on one hand, the funding granted to France by the European Union and, on the other hand, the national programmes implemented by France, which are based on European funding.

12.1. The European Funding

There is a big number of EU programs that are financially assisting EU Member States and that are promoting the implementation of national programmes for the integration of migrants. More precisely, the EU assists financially many European countries that are supposed to use this financial support for the establishment of specific local programmes that have the same objective.

For example, the European Union will have allocated 3,1 billion euros by 2020 to the Asylum, Migration and Integration Fund (AMIF)¹⁴⁸⁵. The 88% of this Fund will be granted to Member States. The same approach is pursued for the Internal Security Fund (ISF). Furthermore, the European Union grants 86,4 billion euros to the European Social Fund from which at least the 20% will be allocated for the social integration of vulnerable groups and for the assistance of those who ask for asylum.

Moreover, the European programme “Horizon 2012”, the Fund for European Aid to the Most Deprived (FEAD), the European Regional Development Fund (ERDF) and the programme “Rights, Equality and Citizenship” play an important role to the integration of migrants and refugees by assisting the EU Member States¹⁴⁸⁶.

12.1.1. The European Integration Fund (2007-2013)

The countries mainly assisted from the European funding are those that receive the largest number of migrants. The European Union is trying to help the countries that are more in need, like it is the case for Greece and for Italy. However, that does not mean that the rest of the European countries do not receive a financial assistance.

First, the European Union created in 2007 the European Integration Fund¹⁴⁸⁷ to assist to the integration of the third world countries' citizens in the European Union. The Fund was composed of 825 million euros from which the 67 million belonged to France for the period of 2007 to 2013¹⁴⁸⁸. The European funding for France was used for the implementation of national programmes whose aim was to ameliorate the integration of third-world countries' citizens in the European Union, to evaluate the situation regarding to integration and, to enhance the exchange of the “good practises” between the EU Member States.

12.1.2. The Asylum, Migration and Integration Fund (2014-2020)

Secondly, the European Union decided to provide a financial assistance to all European countries and to France as well for a long duration, from 2014 to 2020¹⁴⁸⁹. During these six years, France will acquire 265.565.577 euros that will be allocated from the Asylum, Migration and Integration Fund (AMIF allocation) in order to implement a number of local programmes for the integration of migrants. Furthermore, 84.999.342 euros will be granted by the Internal Security Fund related to the Borders' sector (ISF-Borders allocation) and 70.114.640 euros from the Internal Security Fund of the Police sector (IFS-Police allocation)¹⁴⁹⁰.

Consequently, the total amount of the allocations that will be granted to France by the end of 2020 will reach 420.679.559 euros.

12.1.3. The European Social Fund (2014-2020)

Thirdly, the European Social Fund (ESF) has allocated to France 6,027 billion euros for the period 2014-2020 aiming to the promotion of employment and job quality as well as to the improvement of the access to labour market and to social inclusion¹⁴⁹¹.

12.1.4. The European Regional Development Fund

Furthermore, the European Regional Development Fund (ERDF) has also helped France by allocating 8,4 billion to the country to support the reduction of economic, social and territorial disparities¹⁴⁹².

12.1.5. Fund for European Aid to the Most Deprived

France acquired 443 million euros from the Fund for European Aid to the Most Deprived (FEAD) to contribute to the provision of food aid and of material for the promotion of social inclusion¹⁴⁹³.

12.1.6. Allocations in 2015

In addition, we could take into consideration the amount of allocations given to France in 2015 to have an idea of the way and from which Fund the amounts of the European financial assistance are granted.

For example, the European Union allocated to France 20.061.340,39 euros from the AMIF and 12.401.478,74 euros from the FSI in 2015. Furthermore, an emergency aid was granted to the country from the AMIF for a total of 8.980.000 euros¹⁴⁹⁴.

12.2. The National Programmes

Every Member State should use the financial assistance allocated from the European Union to implement many national programmes for the integration of migrants. France is one of the countries that take many measures for their better integration¹⁴⁹⁵.

12.2.1. Examples of National Programmes Based on European Funding

For example, the Asylum, Migration and Integration Fund supports financially Terre d'asile which objective is the integration of migrants. As a result, Terre d'asile carries on two European projects for the professional integration of refugees in France in many different sectors. Terre d'asile also carries on programmes for their social integration as well as for the assistance of migrants and refugees looking for accommodation. Furthermore, it contributes to the geographical division of migrants and refugees in the whole country and it plays an important role to their jurisdictional assistance concerning the documents they need to stay in France¹⁴⁹⁶.

In addition, La Vie Active, another French organisation, received 5.100.000 euros as an emergency aid for the provision of essential sanitary and humanitarian material and the amelioration of the reception conditions of irregular immigrants in Calais.

To conclude, the OFII, the French office for Immigration and Integration, which constitutes the French authority in charge of legal immigration, uses the European funding for the implementation of a great number of national programmes.

12.2.2. The national Programmes Implemented Thanks to the European Integration Fund's Financial Assistance

To be more precise, we could take into consideration the funding of the European Integration Fund, which granted to France 67 million euros, and the programmes that took place for the integration of migrants from that time on and thanks to the EIF assistance.

Firstly, there were many actions for the access of migrants to work. The actions were implemented from the Agency for the development of the information and of the coordination to which 100.000 euros were given for the project and from the Association to facilitate the professional integration of migrants to which 102.000 euros were granted.

Many more projects were released for the promotion of the values of the French society. The Emmaus Solidarity, the ALIE, the Association to react against exclusion and many others contributed to the promotion of French customs by taking 100.000 euros each.

In addition, many projects were also implemented to achieve the cultural, social and professional integration of young immigrants. The National Library of France, AURORE, the solidarity productions, the association "Second chance" were some of the actors that played a very important role to the integration of young immigrants by using the European funding for the best reason.

However, these were some examples only from the 2007-2013 funding. The examples do not stop here as there are numerous projects that are in action aiming to the professional, cultural and social integration of immigrants.

To conclude, all these elements prove that the European Union helps France to ameliorate the function of its borders, to enhance their security and to contribute to the integration of immigrants by financing its proper national programmes.

Conclusions

Based on the answers provided herein above it clearly appears that the existence of migrants in French law is inherently ambivalent. The most evident trace of it is proved by the right to asylum constitutionally guaranteed, and at the same time the absolute absence of any related status at the same level of the hierarchy of norms.

Regarding the right to asylum, resulting simultaneously from constitutional, international and legal sources, the first sight seems relatively satisfying. However, the different bodies entitled to grant the asylum as well as the several administrative layers seriously balance the effectiveness of such a protection. The complexity of the procedure is, in fact, the main obstacle for the asylum seeker. Indeed, the number of successful applications for asylum represents less than five percent. But paradoxically, at the same time, the rights protecting refugees once they are under the French protection system is particularly wide.

In any case, the main distinction that must be made to understand the immigration procedure is between EU citizens and non-EU citizens. The French legal provisions are substantially more favourable regarding migrants who are EU citizens, as well as other European agreement zones (EFTA, Switzerland). The EU citizens benefits from the general European framework like the freedom of movement and the freedom of establishment. The case of non-EU citizens consists in an a contrario definition, although its regime is extensive in order to cover most of the possible occurrences. The normal procedure to enter the territory is similar for both EU citizens and non-EU citizens; the entire legal regime for the asylum seeker is derogatory to the usual procedures.

In addition, all the questions regarding migrants are under the authority of the Ministry of Internal Affairs. Within this ministry, two administrative bodies are in charged of completely different missions. While the OFPRA investigates and rules when it comes to asylum and statelessness as well as advising asylum seekers, the OFII rather takes care of the integration of migrants (during the first five years of their stay on the French territory).

In terms of figures, around a quarter of a million migrants entered the French territory in 2016. The trend tends to increase significantly and constantly through the years. Mostly coming from Europe (39,5%), yet a large part of migrants is coming from Northern Africa. This number counts both asylum seekers and economic migrants; however, the real figure is difficult to estimate due to the important mass of irregular transit migrants.

As of present, the influence of the ECHR is relatively uneven. First, French authorities are more likely to base their decisions on constitutional provisions rather than on the ECHR case law. Second, a change within the national regulation seems easier for some obligations than intangible rights. As an example, the ECHR case law relating to the right to family life was enshrined by both judicial and administrative bodies, whilst the latest conviction of France by the ECHR for a violation of the article 3 of the ECtHR remains without practical consequences. The only changes of the regulation proceed of a constitutional basis rather than an explicit resort to the ECHR case law, especially regarding the extraterritorial consequences of the prohibition of the death penalty.

The role of the ECRI created by the Council of Europe is also to be put into perspective. The actions taken after the recommendations of the Commission to the French authorities were followed by administrative measures such as circulars and administrative recommendations. Nonetheless, some criminal legal provisions incriminating racism and discrimination were set up, but rarely applied before 2010. The creation of the position of Defender of Rights in 2008 is yet the most important institution to investigate for all kinds of discrimination.

Furthermore, the content itself of the protection allowed to migrants is composed of different fields.

The access to healthcare is governed by the tenet of non-discrimination through constitutional provisions. Thus, a health professional cannot refuse to treat a patient based on the cover or not by the state health system. This notion is also completed by international agreements such as the ECtHR. The reimbursement of medical costs proceeds of a complex system which concerns the poorest, but only in a regular situation. For irregular migrants, another purse is possible under three conditions, but also possible on a humanitarian ground.

The access to education for migrant children is guaranteed by the constitution which prohibits discrimination regarding nationality. Furthermore, as the education is compulsory from 6 to 16 years, the French authorities also provide with information system and integration systems aiming to permit most migrants children to have an effective access to school.

Nonetheless, the recognition of foreign education is a real issue. Despite the European nomenclature, the French system of recognition of diplomas has its own architecture. Whereas the recognition of non-regulated professions is easily acquired by the comparability statement, the recognition of diplomas for regulated professions is at the charge of the administrative body in charge of that special profession. Most of the legal system is, however, under the umbrella of the Lisbon Recognition Convention.

It is also worth mentioning that migrants do not exist when it comes to political participation. The constitution reserves the right to participate politically to French citizens, and for EU citizens to European elections. Thus, all non-citizens are totally absent from such legal fields.

Under the French law, the acquisition of the citizenship can result of several procedures. It can be a long and continuous residence in the country, as well as marriage after four years. The most credible hypothesis for migrants is naturalisation, granting citizenship after five years of continuous residence in France. Children may acquire the French nationality easier, whether they were born on the French territory. The possibility of double nationality also exists, and implies no difference of treatment for the authorities between a French citizen and a French citizen having the double nationality with another State.

France also benefits from the help of the European Union when it comes to the integration of migrants. The European Integration Fund, the Asylum, Migration and Integration Fund, the European Social Fund, the European Regional Development Fund and the Fund for European Aid to the Most Deprived are all granted to France. This aid is consequent and is often added an extraordinary amount in case of emergency like in 2015, when almost 9 million euros were given to address the preoccupying situation of migration in the Mediterranean Sea.

These sums are displayed through national programmes both for legal procedures and integration of migrants.

Finally, we conclude that the French legal framework enables migrants to be recognised a special status, despite a complex system. However, once the protection is obtained, the extent of the rights granted to migrants is wide and extensive, in many ways similar as a French citizen, with the substantial aid of EU programmes and funding.

Introduction

The Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) established that in 2014 Germany was the world's second most popular country for immigration after the USA. Around 11 million of the people currently living in Germany were actually born elsewhere. In other words, over one eighth of the German population is made up of immigrants. All in all, one in five people in Germany, 16.3 million, has a migrant background. Nearly half of those people do not have the German citizenship.

Europe accounts for the biggest proportion of Germany's immigrant population. More than two thirds of Germany's immigrant population are nationals of another European countries and 36.6 % of Germany's immigrant population are from within the EU. However, due to on-going conflicts in the Middle East, many people from Syria, Iraq, Afghanistan and Africa are fleeing war and poverty, hoping to seek asylum in the European Union, more particularly in Germany. In 2015 and 2016 alone, Germany took in more than a million migrants. Most of them filled applications for political asylum with the Federal Office for Migration and Refugees (BAMF).

This massive and rapid influx of immigrants led to short-term problems regarding the accommodation, placement and handling the applications for asylum. Additionally, regarding the political aspect, Chancellor Merkel's decision to 'open the borders' initially affected her popularity and boosted the anti-immigrant Alternative for Germany (AfD) party. During the last national parliamentary election in September 2017 the AfD managed to gain 11,5 % and is now represented with 94 seats in the German Bundestag. For the long term it is to be expected that Germany will face many challenges, especially regarding the general integration of immigrants, their right to remain in Germany, their integration into society and the job market. A further key task of future migration and integration policy will also be the protection of refugees.

Within this report we will primarily focus on the different aspects of German asylum and migration law, immigration from within Europe as well as from third countries. We will begin by explaining the German legal basis' for the right to asylum and the different possibilities for immigration to Germany. During our report, we will also discuss migrants' right to access healthcare, the participation of migrants in political decisions, e.g. protection of political participation and their right to vote, as well as citizenship in general and the possibility of dual nationality. We will also draw focus on the recognition of foreign professional qualifications as an important factor for integration. Additionally, we will take European Law and European jurisprudence into account and its significance for Germany. With regard to the German Federal Supreme Court, the jurisdiction of the ECtHR is taken into account as an aid for the definitions of content and scope of the fundamental rights and the rule-of-law principles of the German Basic Law. In accordance with the established jurisprudence of the ECtHR since the Soering Case, the German Federal Administrative Court treats equally a deportation to a non-member state as illegal, not only if there is a risk of torture or inhuman treatment, but also if a fundamental human rights guarantee, as recognised by all member states of the ECHR, is endangered.

1.1. German National Regulations Governing Asylum

Asylum is a right that is protected and thus granted by the German Constitution for politically persecuted persons, acc. to article 16a Grundgesetz (German Constitution, GG), hereafter referred to as political asylum seekers. Furthermore, people who are displaced from other parts of the world, fleeing from violence, war and terror, are to find protection in Germany, acc. to § 3 Asylgesetz (the law governing asylum, AsylG) which is based on the Geneva Convention on Refugees (GCR) from the 28th of July 1951 (hereafter referred to as refugees). One can find the definition of “refugees” in § 3 AsylG, which is worded identically to the EU Qualification Directive.¹⁴⁹⁷ In contrast, civil-war refugees, who are fleeing from fear of the death penalty, inhumane treatment, indiscriminate violence or threat of life, are not protected by the refugee protection system. They are only entitled to subsidiary protection, which can be granted under § 4 of the AsylG¹⁴⁹⁸. Furthermore, subsidiary protection is provided for by articles 15 et seq. of the Qualifikationsrichtlinie¹⁴⁹⁹ (EU Regulation for the qualification of third-country nationals, QualRL), which reflects Germany's obligation as a EU member state to help those in need of protection entrenched in the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union (TFEU)¹⁵⁰⁰ in Article 4.4 in combination with Articles 77 to 80 TFEU. This means that political asylum seekers and refugees have an equivalent legal status¹⁵⁰¹, whereas the rights of civil-war refugees are secondary to those of political asylum seekers and refugees.¹⁵⁰² The biggest difference is that political asylum seekers and refugees can apply for a permanent residence after three years, ¹⁴⁹⁷ Council Directive 2004/83/EC on minimum standards for the qualification and status of third country nationals or stateless persons as refugees or as persons who otherwise need international protection and the content of the protection granted, dated April 29 2005, Abl. 2004 L 304, 12, which was superseded by the Directive 2011/95/EU of the European Parliament and the Council on standards for the qualification and status of third country nationals or stateless persons as beneficiaries of international protection, for a uniform status for refugees or for persons eligible for subsidiary protection, and for the content of the protection granted, dated December 13 2011, Abl. 2011 L 337, 9.

¹⁴⁹⁸ This subsidiary protection was also introduced by the Council Directive 2004/83/EC of April 29 2004, which was later superseded by the Directive 2011/95/EU.

¹⁵⁰⁰ Consolidated Version of the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union (2012/C, 326/01), Official Journal of the European Communities, October 26 2012, C 326/47.

¹⁵⁰¹ German Federal Administrative Court [September 16 2015] 1 B 36/15 para 5.

¹⁵⁰² The biggest difference is that political asylum seekers and refugees can apply for a permanent residence after three years, whereas the civil-war refugee can only apply after five years, § 26 IV AufenthG (new version).

whereas the civil-war refugee can only apply after five years, § 26 IV Aufenthaltsgesetz, new version (the law on residence, AufenthG).

Additionally, any foreigner has the right to remain in Germany acc. to § 60 IV, VII AufenthG in case of a non-refoulement. The general principle of non-refoulement based on human rights is enshrined in Article 33 GCR and prohibits the expulsion or return of a refugee “where his life or freedom would be threatened on account of his race, religion, nationality, membership of a particular social group or political opinion”. The European Convention of Human Rights (ECHR) on the other hand, does not explicitly provide for the principle of non-refoulement. But as an EU member state, Germany’s obligation to help those in need of protection is entrenched in the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union¹⁵⁰³. In addition, the European Court of Human Rights (ECtHR) has recognised the principle through its jurisprudence, by deriving from Article 1 ECHR an implicit obligation of states parties to protect migrants against refoulement. This obligation is to “secure to everyone within their jurisdiction the rights and freedoms”.¹⁵⁰⁴ Thus, § 60 IV, VII AufenthG is a legal prohibition for deportation. The specific reasons for non-refoulement regarding refugees are listed in § 60 VII AufenthG. According to § 60 VII AufenthG „a foreigner should not be deported to another state in which this foreigner faces a substantial concrete danger to his or her life and limb or liberty. A substantial concrete danger on health reasons shall only exist in the case of life-threatening or serious illness which would significantly worsen upon the deportation being carried out. It is not necessary for medical care in the destination state to be comparable to medical care in the Federal Republic of Germany. Sufficient medical care shall generally also exist where this is guaranteed only in parts of the state of destination.“

1.2. The Stages of the German Asylum Procedure

In Germany, the Federal Office for Migration and Refugees (BAMF) is responsible for the whole asylum procedure. As the authority responsible for implementing the law on asylum, the Federal Office distinguishes between the following groups of individuals: (1) Asylum-seekers: individuals who intend to file an asylum application but have not yet been registered by the Federal Office as asylum applicants. (2) Asylum applicants: individuals whose asylum proceedings are pending and whose case has not yet been decided upon and (3) Persons entitled to protection and persons entitled to remain: individuals who receive an entitlement to asylum, refugee protection or subsidiary protection, or who may remain in Germany on the basis of a ban on deportation.¹⁵⁰⁵

1.2.1. From Arrival to the Asylum Procedure

People entering Germany should contact the Federal Office as soon as possible after their arrival in Germany for their registration. As soon as they have registered at the primary registration office they will receive a notice providing them with asylum seeker status (Bescheinigung über die Meldung als Asylsuchender, BÜMA).¹⁵⁰⁶ They will then go on to file their application for asylum and become an asylum applicant. According to § 55 AsylG they will then be given a temporary residence permit (Aufenthaltsgestattung). According to Art. 47 I AsylG the maximum residence time for applicants in an initial reception centre ought to be six months.¹⁵⁰⁷

1.2.2. Processing of the Application by the Federal Office

The most important part of the asylum application is the hearing of the application, § 25 AsylG. Asylum applicants will be asked roughly 24 questions regarding themselves, their family, their travel route and their country of origin. Afterwards the applicant will be asked to recall their individual reasons for fleeing their country, and explain the dangers of returning to their home country. With regard to this interview the BAMF will as a general rule consider whether the applicant was able to give a chronological, coherent and complete presentation of the events of his flight and does not contradict himself in order to determine the credibility of the presented submissions. The Federal Office will then reach a decision, § 31 AsylG, whether the applicant will receive recognition for their application or whether it will be rejected.

1.2.2.1. Recognition of Application for Asylum

If the asylum seeker is successful in their application of asylum they will be granted a residence permit. However, the „refugee status” is at all times dependent on the situation in their country of origin and thus the potential persecution of them as an individual. While the Geneva Convention on Refugees stipulates that the „refugee status” automatically expires, acc. to Art. 1 C 5 GFC, the Union law in Art. 14 QualRL and Art. 45 *Asylverfahrensrichtlinie*¹⁵⁰⁸ (regulation regarding international protection, AsylVerfRL) and as well as the German law acc. to § 73 AsylG require an official and formal withdrawal decision in order to change the “refugee status”. However, three years after been granted the first residence permit, a settlement permit can be requested, i.e. a permanent residence permit.¹⁵⁰⁹ If this is approved, they are not dependent on their individual possibility of persecution in their country of origin anymore, acc. to § 26 III AufenthG.

1.2.2.2. Rejection of Application for Asylum

The application for asylum will be rejected if it is unfounded or if it is inadmissible for one of the following reasons: (1) The Dublin procedure, acc. to § 29 I no. 1 AsylG;¹⁵¹⁰ (2) Safe country

¹⁵⁰⁶ Kathleen Neundorff, Neuerungen im Aufenthalts- und Asylrecht durch das Asylverfahrensbeschleunigungsgesetz, 8.

¹⁵⁰⁷ However, the six months time restriction has only programmatic character. Therefore, in practice this time limit is not always respected. Jan Bergmann and Klaus Dienelt, Ausländerrecht, § 47 para 3.

¹⁵⁰⁹ Harald Dörig and Christine Langenfeld: Vollharmonisierung des Flüchtlingsrechts in Europa, 2.

¹⁵¹⁰ The Dublin procedure is based on the so called “Dublin Regulation” (hereafter referred to as Dublin III-Reg): Regulation (EU) No 604/2013 of the European Parliament and of the Council establishing the criteria and mechanisms for determining the Member State responsible for examining an application for international protection lodged in one of the Member States by a third-country national or stateless person, dated June 26 2013, Abl. 2013, L 180, 31.

of origin, acc. to § 29 I no. 3 and § 26a AsylG; (3) Another EU member state has granted the foreigner international protection, acc. to § 29 I no. 2 AsylG and (4) Follow-up or confirmatory application, acc. to § 29 I no. 5 AsylG.¹⁵¹¹

The Dublin procedure, namely the first above mentioned reason for rejection due to inadmissibility, is based on the so-called “Dublin III Regulation” (hereafter referred to as Dublin III-Reg),¹⁵¹² which establishes the criteria and mechanisms for determining the Member State responsible for examining an application for international protection lodged in one of the Member States by a third-country national or stateless person. This is the so-called principle of “the Member State responsible” acc. to Articles 1 and 3 of the Dublin III-Reg. Thus, it is supposed to be ensured that each application is only examined once throughout all of the countries participating in the Dublin procedure.¹⁵¹³

The criteria for determining the Member State responsible for an application are laid out in Art. 7 et seq. Dublin III-Reg. In Art. 7 no. 1 of the Dublin III-Reg. itself only the hierarchy of the criteria is stipulated. Special regulations, such as those for unaccompanied minors in Art. 8 Dublin III-Reg., must be given priority. In practice, however, the criteria acc. to Art. 13 Dublin III-Reg. are mostly used to determine the Member State responsible for the application. Art. 13 Dublin III-Reg. stipulates that if it is established that an applicant has irregularly crossed the border into a Member State by land, sea or air having come from a third country, the entered Member State shall be responsible for examining the application for international protection. Taking this into account, Germany would not be responsible for the majority of the individuals originating from Syria, Iraq or the African region given that they have entered Europe via Greece or Italy. Therefore, Germany could have rejected most applications based on the Dublin procedure. However, this system collapsed in the Summer 2015, because the Mediterranean countries were overburdened so they could not and/or did not register the refugees who then made their way to northern Europe. As a result, in August 2015 Germany “opened its borders”. This meant that there were no border controls and Germany decided to not send asylum seekers back to the Member State that would have been responsible acc. to Art. 13 Dublin III-Reg. It is heavily disputed whether this was a „suspension” of the Dublin Procedure until November 2015 or whether Germany took charge of the applications in accordance with Art. 17(2) Dublin III-Reg and allow refugees to register in Germany.¹⁵¹⁴ Thus, the application of individuals registered during the time that Germany had “suspended” the Dublin Regulation cannot be rejected on the basis of Art. 13 Dublin III-Reg.

¹⁵¹¹ The first two reasons for the rejection of an application for asylum due to inadmissibility are currently the most relevant ones in practice. Thus, in the following only for those two reasons more detailed information will be given.

¹⁵¹³ The participating countries are: all EU-members, Norway, Switzerland, Iceland and Lichtenstein.

¹⁵¹⁴ Dörig and Langenfeld, Vollharmonisierung des Flüchtlingsrechts in Europa, 3. The first view is advocated by Alexander Peukert et al, Nochmals: Die Politik offener Grenzen ist nicht rechtskonform. The last view is favoured by Constantin Hruschka, Klarheit im Gemischtwarenladen “Flüchtlingskrise”.

The second reason for a rejection of an application of asylum is if the country of origin of the applicant is considered to be a “safe country of origin” acc. to Art. 16a III GG. Whether a country is to be considered a “safe country of origin” can be determined by law and should be determined on the basis of the current legal situation and application of law as well as the general political situation, also acc. to Art. 16a III 1 GG.¹⁵¹⁵ The countries selected will be placed on a list as addendum No. II to § 29a AsylG.¹⁵¹⁶

1.2.3. Regulations of Removal and Re-entry in Germany

If an asylum seeker is rejected, he or she will be requested to leave Germany voluntarily and will be told about the possibility of compulsory repatriation. However, there is the possibility for an appeal, by means of filing a suit in combination with a motion for interim measures to gain a suspensory effect regarding the rejection notice. The suit must be filed within two weeks after receipt of the rejection notice, acc. to Art. 74 I AsylG.¹⁵¹⁷ In the case that all available legal remedies are exhausted, rejected asylum seekers will be deported. In general, there is the possibility of a re-entry, which is normally after five years and under special circumstances, e.g. rejection due to criminal charges, after ten years.¹⁵¹⁸

1.3. Special Programmes that Grant Asylum or Humanitarian Protection to Vulnerable Persons

Under EU law there are special programmes for vulnerable persons regarding the asylum procedure. Vulnerable persons are listed in Art. 21 of the Reception Conditions Directive¹⁵¹⁹ and Art. 3 IX of the Return Directive¹⁵²⁰. Both provisions include “minors, unaccompanied minors, persons with disabilities, elderly people, pregnant women, single parents with minor children and persons who have been subjected to torture, rape or other serious forms of psychological, physical or sexual violence”, but the list in the Reception Conditions Directive is longer and non-exhaustive.

The term ‘unaccompanied minors’ is used to describe individuals under the age of 18 who enter European territory without an adult responsible for them in the receiving state, acc. to Art. 2 I QualRL. Specific provisions for unaccompanied minors are contained in the EU asylum instruments as well as in the Return Directive. Before considering the treatment of unaccompanied minors during the application process, the state responsible for processing their asylum application must be determined: According to the Art. 8 Dublin III-Reg. applications by

¹⁵¹⁶ E.g. the following countries are on the list: Bosnia and Herzegovina, Ghana, Kosovo, Senegal, Macedonia, Serbia and Montenegro as well as Albania.

¹⁵¹⁷ Only under special circumstances acc. to Art. 74 I HS 2 in combination with § 34a II 1, 3 and § 36 III 1, 10 AsylG suit and motion for interim measures have to be filed within one week.

unaccompanied minors are to be examined by the Member State in which family members, siblings or relatives are legally present. In the absence of a family member, a sibling or a relative, the Member State responsible is the state where the child has lodged his or her application for asylum provided that it is in the best interests of the child. Unaccompanied minors seeking asylum have to be provided with a representative as soon as they have applied for asylum, acc. to Art. 6 Dublin III-Reg., Art. 24 of the Reception Conditions Directive and Art. 25 AsylVerfRL. Additionally, unaccompanied minors must be accommodated with either adult relatives, a foster family, in reception centres with special provisions for minors or in other suitable accommodation, acc. to Art. 24 of the Reception Conditions Directive and Art. 31 QualRL and. Article 24 of the Reception Conditions Directive further specifies that as far as possible, siblings must be kept together, taking into account the best interests of the minor concerned and, in particular, his or her age and degree of maturity. Residence changes of unaccompanied minors must be kept to a minimum. Furthermore, the directive stipulates that Member States must try to trace the family members of unaccompanied minors as soon as possible with due regard for their safety. Finally, it ensures that individuals working with unaccompanied minors must receive appropriate training.

2. How does your national law regulate immigration from EU member states and non-EU states?

Germany has 81.4 Million inhabitants, from which 17 Million have a migratory background, meaning either they themselves or one of their parents have an immigration history. In Germany, as well as in the whole of Europe, immigrants are split into two main categories: EU-nationals and foreigners from all other countries in the world, i.e. third-country nationals.

2.1. Immigration from EU Member States

It is very easy for EU-nationals to travel to or to emigrate to Germany, given the free movement and freedom of residence of persons within the European Union. It is considered to be the cornerstone of the Union citizenship, established by the Treaty of Maastricht in 1992. The legal basis for this right is now Art. 3 II of the Treaty on European Union, Article 21 as well as Titles IV and V TFEU and Art. 45 of the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union.

However, the key milestone in establishing an internal market with free movement of persons was the conclusion of the two Schengen agreements.¹⁵²¹ Initially, the Schengen implementing Convention, which was signed only by Belgium, France, Germany, Luxembourg and the Netherlands, was based on intergovernmental cooperation in the field of justice and home affairs. Later on, Schengen was integrated into the legal framework of the European Union by finding entry into force of the Treaty of Amsterdam on May 1 1999. There are currently 26 full ¹⁵²¹ The Schengen Agreement signed on June 14 1985 and the Convention implementing the Schengen Agreement, which was signed on June 19 1990 and entered into force on March 26 1995.

Schengen members: 22 EU Member States plus Norway, Iceland, Switzerland and Liechtenstein, which have associate status.¹⁵²² The scope of the Schengen Agreement includes: (1) the abolition of internal border controls for all persons; (2) measures to strengthen and harmonise external border controls: all EU citizens need only show an identity card or passport to enter the Schengen area; (3) a common visa policy for short stays: nationals of third countries included in the common list of non-member countries whose nationals need an entry visa (see Annex II to Council Regulation (EC) No 539/2001) may obtain a single visa, valid for the entire Schengen area; (4) police and judicial cooperation: police forces assist each other in detecting and preventing crime and have the right to pursue fugitive criminals into the territory of a neighbouring Schengen state; there is also a faster extradition system and mutual recognition of criminal judgments and (5) the establishment and development of the Schengen Information System.

The gradual phasing-out of internal border control under the Schengen agreement was followed by the adoption of the Directive on the right of EU citizens and their family members to move and reside freely within the territory of the Member States.¹⁵²³ Only if EU-nationals are planning to stay in Germany for more than three months they have to prove that they are either employed or are in the process of looking for an employment but have enough financial means for their own welfare, acc. to Art. 7(1) of the Directive on the right of EU citizens and their family members to move and reside freely within the territory of the Member States and § 2(2), (5) of the Act on the General Freedom of Movement for EU Citizens.

2.2. Immigration from Non-EU States

In general, third-country nationals will need a visa in order to enter Germany, except for nationals from the very few countries¹⁵²⁴ Germany has an agreement on visa-free travel, acc. to §§ 4 ff AufenthG and § 41 I Aufenthaltsverordnung (Ordinance on Residence, AufenthVO). If one wishes to work in Germany, it is mandatory to apply for a visa as a matter of principle, acc. to § 4 III AufenthG. Only citizens from Iceland, Liechtenstein, Norway and Switzerland are exempt.

¹⁵²² Ireland and the United Kingdom are not parties to the Convention but can 'opt in' to selected parts of the Schengen body of law. Denmark, while part of Schengen, enjoys an opt-out for any new justice and home affairs measures, including on Schengen, although it is bound by certain measures under the common visa policy. Bulgaria, Romania and Cyprus are due to join, though there are delays for differing reasons. Croatia began the application process to accede to the Schengen area on July 1 2015.

¹⁵²³ Directive 2004/38/EC of the European Parliament and on the Council of April 29 2004 on the right of EU citizens and their family members to move and reside freely within the territory of the Member States amending Regulation (EEC) No 1612/68 and repealing Directives 64/221/EEC, 68/360/EEC, 72/194/EEC, 73/148/EEC, 75/34/EEC, 75/35/EEC, 90/364/EEC, 90/365/EEC and 93/96/EEC. This Directive was implemented into German national law by the Act on the General Freedom of Movement for EU Citizens (Gesetz über die allgemeine Freizügigkeit von Unionsbürgern - Freizügigkeitsgesetz/EU) from January 1 2005, the most recent changes were adopted on July 29 2017 and the law implementing the EU Directives on asylum (Gesetz zur Umsetzung aufenthalts- und asylrechtlicher Richtlinien der Europäischen Union - AsylREURLUMsG) from August 19 2007, which has changed the German law on residence (Aufenthaltsgesetz).

¹⁵²⁴ Australia, Israel, Japan, Canada, New Zealand, Republic of Korea and the USA.

2.2.1. Application Procedure

The visa has to be applied for at the respective German diplomatic mission abroad before entering Germany, and usually the reason for the stay in Germany has to be proven. The fee for a visa is usually 60 Euro per person. The representations abroad need an average of between two and ten working days to decide on a visa application for a short stay of up to three months. This may sometimes take longer during the holiday period. If one wants to apply for a visa for a longer stay, one should expect the processing to take several months.

2.2.2. Right to Leave

Immigrants can always choose to voluntarily leave Germany again. They will only need valid entry papers for the country they are returning to. If an asylum seeker is rejected, they can voluntarily leave for up to thirty days after the notice of rejection. Only voluntary departures to countries Germany has no visa-agreement with are supported. Two programmes provide the support: the Reintegration and Emigration Program for Asylum Seekers in Germany (REAG) and the Government Assisted Repatriation Program (GARP), which give financial support regarding the travel costs and a start-up support.¹⁵²⁵

2.2.3. Regulation Regarding Deportation and or Expulsion

Under EU law, the Return Directive¹⁵²⁶ regulates forced returns in general. Additionally, the revised Frontex Regulation¹⁵²⁷ regulates Frontex-coordinated joint return operations. In addition to these legislative provisions, there are also soft law instruments: The Council of Europe Twenty Guidelines on Forced Return¹⁵²⁸ and the CPT¹⁵²⁹ standards regarding returns by air. Returns are often regulated through readmission agreements concluded at the political level. Within the EU, readmission agreements can be concluded by individual Member States or by the Union.

Under the Return Directive forced returns must be carried out with due respect for the dignity and the physical integrity of the person concerned and an effective monitoring system of forced returns has to be established, acc. to Art. 8 IV, VI. Additionally, the individual's state of health must be taken into account in the removal process and thus a person's physical or mental health condition can be the reason for a possible postponement of the removal, acc. to Art. 5, 9.

3. Is there a ministry, government agency or other public authority specifically dealing with migrants? If so, please provide a description of the framework this authority works under.

In Germany, there are two kinds of authorities dealing with migrants. On national level, there is a federal office, which specifically deals with migrants called Bundesamt für Migration und Flüchtlinge (Federal Office for Migration and Refugees, BAMF).¹⁵³⁰ At federal level, each of the 16 Federal States has *Ausländerbehörden*¹⁵³¹ (local legal authorities for foreign citizens, immigration offices) dealing with issues connected to the right of residence.

The two authorities were appointed different legal tasks related to migration and are therefore independent from each other.

3.1. BAMF

The BAMF is a federal authority of the Federal Ministry of the Interior and is located in Nuremberg.¹⁵³² The BAMF follows a decentralised structure.¹⁵³³ The following different branches were established as part of the institution BAMF: arrival centres, branch offices or regional offices and decision-making centres.¹⁵³⁴ Each of Germany's 16 States has an office representing the BAMF.¹⁵³⁵

A president, two vice-presidents and a Head of Operations, controlling and statistics, lead the federal office. The basic structure consists of directorates-general, directorates and divisions.¹⁵³⁶

3.1.1. Directorates-General

Each of the eight Directorate-Generals deals with a different topic such as international tasks (directorates-general 2) or integration and social cohesion (directorates-general 3). A Head of Directorate-General leads each one. Three Directorates-General are responsible for the different regions of Germany. The regions are divided into the Northern Region (Directorate-General 8, located in Berlin), the Central Region (5, located in Nuremberg) and the Southern Region (6, also located in Nuremberg). They have many divisions in their Region of Germany, which are appointed different tasks: arrival offices, branch offices and regional asylum units.¹⁵³⁷ There is one directorate responsible for the Dublin process. It consists of six divisions. Most importantly, there are three processing centres in Dortmund, Berlin and Bayreuth¹⁵³⁸ in which decisions on Dublin cases are taken. The Federal Office had to establish this directorate following the Dublin

3.1.2. Arrival Centres and Branch Offices

The entire asylum process takes place in the arrival centres. At these arrival centres, asylum-seekers receive their proof of arrival as a first official document.¹⁵⁴¹ All data is forwarded to the Ausländerzentralregister (Central Register of Foreigners, AZR), a database by the Federal Office of Administration, which can be accessed by the immigration authorities throughout Germany.¹⁵⁴² There are branch offices or regional offices in all Federal States marking the decentralised structure. Their task is to process the asylum procedure meaning that there the application is filed and decided on.¹⁵⁴³ The BAMF employs decision makers as well as 'specially-commissioned case-officers'¹⁵⁴⁴ for special cases for the asylum procedure.¹⁵⁴⁵ The BAMF works under functional supervision of the Federal Ministry of the Interior.¹⁵⁴⁶ To issue a lawful decision, the decision makers apply the procedure as described in the AsylG.¹⁵⁴⁷

3.1.3. Others

Moreover, the BAMF has established a Qualification Centre, which is an internal office where they regularly train decision-makers.¹⁵⁴⁸ There is also an information centre called IZAM, which, supported by a group of experts, analyses the situation in countries of origin, documents information regarding the asylum procedure and serves as an agency for internal and external inquiries.¹⁵⁴⁹

3.2. Tasks

As time has progressed, the BAMF has been appointed more and more tasks. First, it was only responsible for the asylum procedure. Today, it has to deal with a variety of tasks related to migration and has competencies in the fields of immigration, integration and return.¹⁵⁵⁰ However, its main task remains the asylum procedure with its monopoly to decide on asylum applications according to § 5 (I) 1 AsylG and the granting of refugee status.¹⁵⁵¹ The BAMF reviews every asylum application based on the AsylG.¹⁵⁵² It checks on four forms of protection.¹⁵⁵³ It is important that the BAMF can decide on an asylum application as inadmissible according to the Dublin procedure.¹⁵⁵⁴ According to § 5 I 2 AsylG the BAMF is also responsible for some migration related measures.

There is a distinction between the issuing authority (BAMF) and the executing migration offices.¹⁵⁵⁵ § 75 AufenthG includes the twelve minimum of tasks of the Federal Office. The different tasks can be roughly subsumed under the following categories: furthering integration, implementation of European law and others.¹⁵⁵⁶

3.2.1. Asylum Application

The BAMF is responsible for the division of migrants among the Federal States after they have been granted status in Germany.¹⁵⁵⁷ This division is made by the BAMF with the so-called EASY quota system¹⁵⁵⁸ based on the findings of a commission of the Federation and the Federal States.¹⁵⁵⁹ The so-called Königsteiner Schlüssel serves as the basis of the EASY quota system. Every year the commission calculates the share of asylum seekers every Federal Land will be receiving depending on their tax income and their population.¹⁵⁶⁰

The Federal Office coordinates the exchange of information between federal agencies/authorities, especially between the Bundeskriminalamt (Federal Criminal Police Office) and the Verfassungsschutz (Federal Office for the Protection of the Constitution) to filter migrants which might endanger public security, § 75 no. 11 AufenthG.

According to §§ 11 II, VII, 34, 34a, 35 AufenthG, the BAMF has the authority to terminate entry bans and exclusion orders in instances of threat of deportation orders or deportation orders and orders or imposition of a time limit on bans of entry and residence if the asylum application has been rejected. However, it is the immigration offices who implement those bans.¹⁵⁶¹

3.2.2. Integration

The BAMF coordinates a variety of integration related measures.¹⁵⁶² It is responsible for integration courses¹⁵⁶³ and for migration counselling for adults.¹⁵⁶⁴ It also offers advice with regard to migration. However, those tasks can be delegated to other public or private agencies, § 75 no. 9 AufenthG.

3.2.3. EU-Related Tasks

The BAMF is not only responsible for the implementation of national law. It works with the administrative authorities of other member states of the European Union. It serves as the national contact point and competent authority for the cooperation with other European Union member states to carry out several directives according to § 75 no. 5 AufenthG.¹⁵⁶⁵ The BAMF is also responsible for the Dublin III Regulation.¹⁵⁶⁶

3.2.4. Other

The BAMF coordinates programs and projects to further voluntary return, acc. § 75 no. 7 AufenthG. According to § 75 no. 4, 4a AufenthG, it is another basic task to research on migration and integration, which is taken care of in the information centre.¹⁵⁶⁷

3.3. Ausländerbehörden (Foreigners' Registration Office)

In opposition to this, the Ausländerbehörden (Foreigners' Registration Office) in the Federal States take care of all other tasks related to migration law. According to § 71 AufenthG they decide on measures related to passports and right of residence as well as on all other measures related to migration law appointed to them by law.¹⁵⁶⁸ They base their decisions on the AufenthG and other related statutes. The Federal states appoint local immigration offices.¹⁵⁶⁹ The national law decides on the subject matter jurisdiction whereas the Federal States decide on the local and functional jurisdiction.¹⁵⁷⁰

The final decision on the right of residence or right to stay or on the obligation to leave marks the end of the asylum procedure as carried out by the BAMF.¹⁵⁷¹ Afterwards, the local immigration office takes over responsibility. Based on the decision of the BAMF they issue a residence permit depending on the status awarded. Following this, the Ausländerbehörden are responsible for the applicant. They can issue different permits depending on the status according to the AufenthG.¹⁵⁷²

3.4. Statutory Framework

The AsylG and the AufenthG as well as European directives¹⁵⁷³ and regulations¹⁵⁷⁴ regulate the procedure for the decision on asylum applications.¹⁵⁷⁵

3.5. Conclusion

German migration law has there is a two-way structure: the migration law is divided into law for asylum seekers and other migrants. As a result, there are different responsible authorities, who apply different law. The AufenthG appoints the immigration offices as the responsible authorities. However, the BAMF is responsible for every case connected to asylum as far as the requirements of the recognition of international protection are affected.

4. What are the recent statistics regarding migrants (i.e. asylum-seekers, immigrants, transitmigrants, trends in migratory flows) in your country?

This part of the report deals with the question what the recent statistics regarding migrants in our country are. To give a broad understanding of the statistics, it is important to differ the terms, like asylum-seekers, immigrants, transit-migrants, so that every text phase starts with an explanation of the terms in a correct approved official way, or rather with a juristically definition.

4.1. Asylum-Seekers

4.1.1. Term

Regarding the term of an “asylum-seeker” we refer to the explanation above.

4.1.2. Recent Trends and Statistics (2015-2017)

The chart below shows the development of first-request¹⁵⁷⁶ asylum-seekers during the years 2010 to 2017. From the year of 2010, the number of asylum-requests increased exponentially. In 2010 there were 41.332 asylum requests and in 2011 45.751. This highlights a relatively small increase in requests. In the following year of 2012 the number of requests increased by roughly 41,1 % to 64.539. In 2013, Germany received 109.580 requests, almost a 70 % increase. In 2014 Germany had received 173.072 asylum requests – roughly 57 % more than in 2013 – and in 2015 441.899, a significant increase of 155 %. 2016 was marked by a conspicuous increase. During this year, the number of requests increased by 63,5% to 722.370. Asylum requests in Germany rose by an average of 61% per annum (CAGR) during the past seven years.

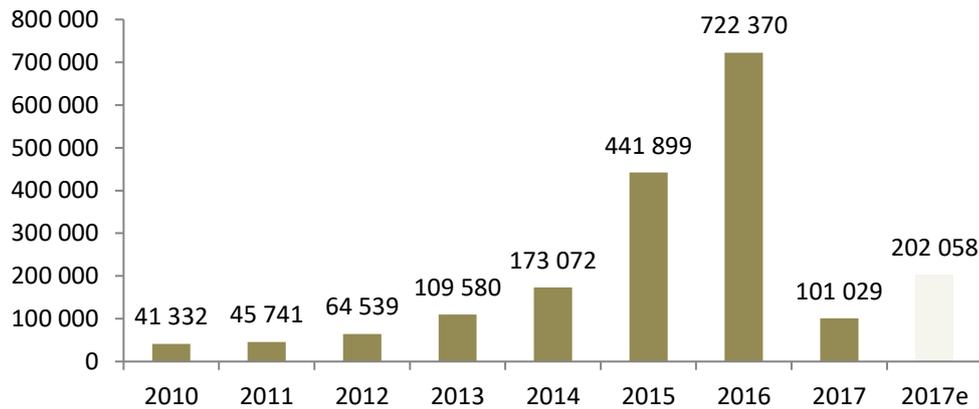

The significant increase of requests in 2014 could be as a result of the civil war, that erupted in Syria, giving many Syrians reason to leave their country. Additionally, Germany suspended the Dublin procedure for Syrians.¹⁵⁷⁷ During this period, the entire Dublin structure became ineffective at handling the unexpected range of asylum-seekers. This meant that a lot of procedures could not be fulfilled.

The considerable decrease in requests in 2017 can be explained by the measures Germany took as a reaction to the events of 2016. Political discussions and international agreements with Greece and Turkey (EU-Turkey Statement, 18th March 2016) and the closing of the so-called “Balkan-route” from south-eastern Europe to western and northern EU member states most probably had an influence on the development of the statistics in 2016 and 2017.

¹⁵⁷⁶ Only prime because continuing requests represent only a marginal percentage of > 10 %.

Asylum-Seekers' Prime Requests

Source: BAMF 2016

The following chart below shows the three main countries of origin of asylum-seekers in the years of 2013 to 2017. In the year 2013 there were 23.599 asylum-requests from the top 3 countries; Syria, Iraq and Afghanistan. Together, they represent 21% of the total number of requests of 2013. 11.851 requests were from Syria, 3.958 from Iraq and 7.735 from Afghanistan. In 2014 Germany received 39.332 requests from Syria, 5.345 from Iraq and 9.115 from Afghanistan. Collectively, they represent 31 % of the total number of requests in 2014. In 2015, the number of requests from these countries rose further. Thus, there were 158.657 from Syria, 29.784 from Iraq and 31.382 from Afghanistan. The total number of requests from the top 3 countries was 219.823. In 2016, there were 489.378 asylum-seeker requests in Germany from Afghanistan, Iraq and Syria. These requests represented 68 % of total asylum-seekers requests in Germany. 266.250 of these asylum-seekers were from Syria, 96.116 from Iraq and 127.012 from Afghanistan. In 2017, there were 23.599 requests of asylum-seekers from the countries of Syria, 10.440 from Iraq and 9.626 from Afghanistan, and represent 43 % of the total asylum-seekers in Germany.

This chart below is supporting the statement in the first chart, that simultaneously with the war in Syria the asylum-seeker requests from this country increased immensely and exponentially, as in the first chart.

4.2. Immigrants

4.2.1. Term

In 2006, the BAMF described the term migration as the situation in which a person relocates its territorial centre of life. Furthermore, international migration is given if this relocation of territorial centre of life takes place across national borders.¹⁵⁷⁸

During the last few years, this term was modified to mean the collective term people with migration background. This definition comprises the heterogeneous group of all immigrants and their descendants. Subsequently, the 'new' term was established so that the BAMF as well as the Federal Statistical Office now use the following new definition for immigrant:

Immigrants are people with a migration background. A person has a migration background, if the person or at least one parent is not of German nationality by birth. For example:

- Non-native and not non-native foreigners
- Non-native and not non-native naturalised person;
- late repatriates;

descendants of one of these groups with a German nationality by birth.¹⁵⁷⁹

Therefore, following the definition of the Federal Statistical Office, an immigrant is a person, leaving his country because of proper incentives in search of better life prospects.¹⁵⁸⁰ If there is a relevant persecution of the refugee, it must be proven in the procedure for granting the right of asylum.¹⁵⁸¹ This definition is used as basis in the following statistics. It is not easy to capture the immigrants in the statistics so easily because this definition is not used consistently. While some German Federal Offices use the definition including descendants of "original migrants", others do not. The new definition of immigrants – including descendants – forms the basis of the following statistics.

The recent statistics also include asylum-seekers, no matter whether they have just a short stay in Germany or not. Short-term stays of seasonal workers up to four months are included, provided that the people register with an accommodation in Germany.¹⁵⁸²

Furthermore, it has to be mentioned, that the use of the words "migrant" and "immigrant" are perspective-dependent. This means that from the view of the country of origin, the person is called migrant and from the view of country of immigration the person is called immigrant.

4.2.2. Recent Statistics and Trends (Status 2016)

In 2016 there were 18,5 million immigrants living in Germany, making up roughly 20 % of the total population.

The majority – 2,8 million – comes from Turkey. This could be affected inter alia by the so-called “golden 50’s” in which the reconstruction of Germany which gave reason for Germany to actively employ people from Turkey. Poland has the second-largest immigrants with 1,9 million. People from Russia making up 1,2 million. The top 4 to 10 are Kazakhstan (969.000), Italy (861.000), Romania (788.000), Greece (443.000), Croatia (441.000), Kosovo (356.000), Austria (280.000).

Most of the immigrants – 12,6 million, or 67 % – come from Europe. The following main-regions of origin are Asia (3,42 million), Others (1,4 million), Afrika (0,74 million), South America (0,24 million), North America (0,18 million)

4.3. Transit Migrants

Although there is no authoritative definition of transit-migrants, this term can be described (and is commonly used) as migrants, who are temporarily staying in one or more countries, with the objective of reaching a further and final destination.¹⁵⁸³

5. How have the decisions by the European Court of Human Rights concerning migrants been implemented at national level?

5.1. The Relevance of the Guarantees in the European Convention on Human Rights in Germany

5.1.1. The Correlation Between the European Convention on Human Rights and German National Law

Through ratification, the Federal Republic of Germany became a party to the European Convention on Human Rights (ECHR) in 1952. Formally, the ECHR has the status of an ordinary national law.¹⁵⁸⁴ Therefore the German Constitutional Rights are a higher authority. Additionally, the German Federal Supreme Court (Bundesverfassungsgericht, BVerfG) attached importance to the final say of the Constitution against the ECHR.¹⁵⁸⁵ However, Article 25 of the German Basic Law emphasises the commitment of national law to international law. Hence it is assumed that national law is to be interpreted in conformity with the international legal obligations of the Federal Republic of Germany.¹⁵⁸⁶ Since the ECHR has the status of an ordinary national law, constitutional complaints cannot be directly based on a violation of the ECHR.¹⁵⁸⁷ Nevertheless, the ECHR plays an important role when it comes to interpreting and substantiating constitutional issues. The German Federal Supreme Court ruled with respect to this regard:

For the interpretation of the Basic Law, the content and level of development of the European Convention on Human Rights are also to be considered provided that this does not lead to a restriction or reduction of the fundamental rights protection guaranteed by the Basic Law, an effect, which the Convention itself strives to preclude (Art. 60 ECHR).¹⁵⁸⁸

5.1.2. Do Decisions of the European Court of Human Rights Have a Binding Effect for German National Courts?

According to Art. 46 ECHR, the member states are bound by the decisions of the European Court of Human Rights (ECtHR). If the ECtHR finds that Human Rights are violated by a German court decision, Germany is obligated to terminate this violation and ensure an appropriate compensation to the victim.¹⁵⁸⁹ Art. 46 ECHR together with the Ratifying Law and the constitutionally ensured rule of law (Art. 19 IV and 20 III of the Basic Law) form the legal foundation for the binding character of the ECtHR decisions under German law.¹⁵⁹⁰ In general, all authorities are bound by a decision, not only the executive power when acting externally.¹⁵⁹¹

With regard to the German Federal Supreme Court, the jurisdiction of the ECtHR is taken into account as an aid to the definition of the content and scope of the fundamental rights and the rule-of-law principles of the German Basic Law.¹⁵⁹²

Particularly questionable was the binding effect of a decision made by the ECtHR on national subsequent judicial proceedings concerning the same facts of a case. The German Federal Supreme Court denied a direct binding of German courts to the jurisprudence of the ECtHR even with regard to the same facts of a case.¹⁵⁹³ Notwithstanding this approach, the German Federal Supreme Court ruled that German courts are obligated to include the fundamental aspects of the decision rendered by the ECtHR.¹⁵⁹⁴ If the German court decides not to follow the opinion of the ECtHR it has to justify this differing judgement.¹⁵⁹⁵ However, if the ECtHR found that a decision of a German court violates the ECHR, pursuant to Art. 46 ECHR the subsequently deciding national court is only granted the above mentioned margin of consideration, if there are new facts relevant to the case.¹⁵⁹⁶

Recently, the German Federal Supreme Court has emphasised the significance of ECtHR judgements by equating the decision of the ECtHR determining a violation of the convention to a legally relevant modification.¹⁵⁹⁷ This gives such a decision the power to render a judgement of the German Federal Supreme Court invalid and give the Supreme Court the opportunity to rule a second time on the same case.

Furthermore, German national courts do not only have a duty to consider every decision of the ECtHR– not only the cases against Germany.¹⁵⁹⁸

5.2. Protection of Migrants and Asylum Seekers under the European Convention on Human Rights

According to general Public International Law, territorial sovereignty is a part of state sovereignty and therefore states have the right to regulate the entry and right of residence of foreign nationals. However international conventions and public international customary law constitute exceptions of this sovereignty – especially with regard to asylum and refugee law.¹⁵⁹⁹ The principle of non-refoulement and its extraterritorial range constitutes a relevant example.¹⁶⁰⁰ The ECtHR defines the principle extensively and finds member states obligated to provide protection for refugees located outside their coastal waters against inhumane treatment in their country of origin.¹⁶⁰¹ In this context it is controversial if a duty to give access to an asylum procedure can be derived from Art. 3 ECHR.¹⁶⁰²

In general, the ECHR contains no provisions with regard to the entry and residence of foreigners. Irrespective of this, indirect influences on national law are the result of Art. 3 and Art. 8 ECHR, particularly regarding the termination of residence.¹⁶⁰³

The ECtHR applies a fair balance of interest test to the lawfulness of an expulsion taking the private interests of staying in the country of residence, on the one hand, as well as the public interest in expulsion, on the other hand, into account.¹⁶⁰⁴ In respect thereof, the ECtHR considers among other things the duration of the stay, the degree of integration, personal ties with the country of residence as well as the country of origin.¹⁶⁰⁵

Moreover, the influence of Art.8 ECHR can even lead to an entitlement to residence in certain cases of subsequent immigration of family members.

5.2.1. Prevention of Termination of Residence with regard to the ECHR

5.2.1.1. Prohibitions of Deportation according to the ECHR in § 60 V German Residence Law (Aufenthaltsgesetz)

§ 60 para 5 German Residence Law (Aufenthaltsgesetz) refers to prohibitions of deportation pursuant to the ECHR. This provision mainly concerns cases of impending deportations to non-member countries of the Convention or when a threatening inhumane treatment cannot be attributed directly to the country of origin. The risk of torture or inhumane treatment posed directly by the country of origin, that is to say, constitutes as per Art. 3 ECHR an obstacle for deportation which is adopted in § 4 Asylgesetz (German Asylum Law, AsylG).

¹⁶⁰⁵ Regarding an expulsion due to criminal offences: Kaya v Germany [2007], ECtHR Appeal No. 31 753/02, para 62 to 71.

In accordance with the established jurisprudence of the ECtHR since the Soering Case, the German Federal Administrative Court (Bundesverwaltungsgericht) treats equally a deportation to a non-member state as illegal, not only if there is a risk of torture or inhuman treatment, but also if a fundamental human rights guarantee recognised by all member states of the ECHR is endangered.¹⁶⁰⁶

5.2.1.2. Subsidiary Protection as per § 4 Asylgesetz (German Asylum Law)

Unlike § 60 para 5 AufenthG, § 4 AsylG provides subsidiary international protection for any foreigner, who can put forward substantial grounds that he or she is threatened of suffering serious harm in case of return to the country of origin. Serious harm is defined by the provision as follows:

- death penalty or execution;
- torture or inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment; or
- serious and individual threat to a civilian's life or person by reason of indiscriminate violence in situations of international or internal armed conflict.

The formulation of No. 2 'torture or inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment' is closely linked to Art. 3 ECHR.¹⁶⁰⁷ Consistent with the H.L.R. v France decision of the ECtHR and as opposed to the former case law of the German Federal Administrative Court, this provision includes protection against threats by non-state actors.¹⁶⁰⁸

According to the ECtHR, the deportation, surrender or expulsion despite the abovementioned risk constitutes a violation of Art. 3 ECHR itself.¹⁶⁰⁹ Pursuant to Art. 3 ECHR, it is the responsibility of every member state of the Convention to refrain from such a deportation.¹⁶¹⁰

Contrary to this ruling of the ECtHR, the German Federal Administrative Court considers these principles only for limitedly applicable to deportations to a member state of the Convention because of the duty of the other member state to comply with the ECHR (Art. 1 ECHR).¹⁶¹¹

With regard to the definitions of the terms "torture" or "inhuman", § 4 AsylG is completely consistent with the conditions elaborated by the ECtHR.¹⁶¹²

5.1.2.3. Unenforceability of Departure in Fact and Law as per § 25 V AufenthG – de facto National with regard to Art. 8. ECHR

§ 25 para 5 AufenthG enables the issuing of a residence permit if an obstacle to the departure exists in fact or in law. The law applies, if an obligation for a foreigner to leave the country exists.

In addition, both the voluntary departure as well as the forced deportation must be impossible.¹⁶¹³

A legal obstacle to departure can derive from the Right to Respect for family and private life provided by Art. 8 ECHR.¹⁶¹⁴ The German government states pregnancy or a serious illness as examples in its justification to § 25 AufenthG.¹⁶¹⁵

It is controversial, if residence permission for long-time residing foreigners can derive from the right to private life acc. Art. 8 ECHR.

A German Court decided this matter of a so-called de facto national as follows: if a foreigner is integrated to everyday life in Germany and is alienated from his country of origin to such an extent that reintegration is impossible and that he in fact can only have a private life according to Art. 8 ECHR in Germany, then departure or deportation to his country of origin is legally impossible.¹⁶¹⁶

However, there are concerns given the statutory system of the German Residence Law. Sections 27 et seq. of the German Residence Law regulate the conditions for a residence permission for family reasons in a final way. Therefore, § 25 para 5 AufenthG can only apply, if the special regulations concerning family related residence permissions do not affect the facts of the case.¹⁶¹⁷

Relevant criteria to decide upon the status of a de facto national are knowledge of the German language, participation in social life, employment, enrolling education, social contacts outside the family and no significant criminal offences.¹⁶¹⁸ Conversely, criteria for a cultural uprooting from the state of origin can be a lack of knowledge of the language, no familiarity with the circumstances of living in the country of origin or no family members living in the country.¹⁶¹⁹ Even the illegality of the residence of a de facto national has no influence on the legal impossibility of departure or deportation.¹⁶²⁰

5.2.2. Influence of the ECHR on Residence for Family Reasons as per §§ 27 et seq. German Residence Law (Aufenthaltsgesetz)

§ 27 para 1 AufenthG regulates the subsequent immigration of family members. It explicitly refers to Art. 6 para 1 of the German Basic Law which grants protection to marriage and family. In this context, Art. 8 ECHR is to be taken into account. Its guarantee of family and private life is more comprehensive than that of Art. 6 GG.¹⁶²¹ The ECtHR considers Member States not only obliged to protect their subjects from infringements of the private and family life, but also to positively guarantee a family reunion under certain circumstances.¹⁶²²

Nevertheless, the ECtHR does not assume that a general right to subsequent immigration of family members can be derived from Art. 8 ECHR, because every Member State has the competency to regulate the entry of foreigners into its territory.¹⁶²³ The Member State is obliged to fully balance all interests and make fair adjustments.¹⁶²⁴ It is even possible to consider if a return to the state of origin or the migration to a third state would be reasonable for a family reunion (so called “elsewhere approach”).¹⁶²⁵ Concerning the subsequent immigration of a spouse acc. § 30 AufenthG, Member States are only bound by Art. 8 ECHR to examine the proportionality of the interests at stake.¹⁶²⁶ If the marriage was conducted after one partner already was legally permitted to reside in another country, it will be considered acceptable to deny subsequent immigration.¹⁶²⁷

6. How have the recommendations of the European Commission against Racism and Intolerance and of national human rights bodies concerning the integration of migrants been implemented?

6.1. What is the European Commission against Racism and Intolerance?

6.1.1. A Brief History

The European Commission against Racism and Intolerance (ECRI as it will be named henceforth) was established on the October 9 1993 by the first Summit of Heads of State and Government of the Council of Europe member states in the Vienna Declaration. The role of ECRI finally became autonomous on June 13 2002, when the Committee of Ministers adopted an autonomous Statute for ECRI. In doing so, the specialised body became completely independent in enquiring into the racism and intolerance of the European Council nations as one entity, as well as specialising in the specific needs of the individual countries, as based on their political, historical and social circumstances.

6.1.2. Aims and Objectives of ECRI

The body includes 3 main aspects in its approach to meet the objectives set out in Article 1 of the Resolution Res(2002)8 on the statute of the European Commission against Racism and Intolerance¹⁶²⁸. The three approaches are a country-by-country approach to the work of ECRI, to work on general themes, and to do so in relation to civil society¹⁶²⁹. In addition, where there are beneficial grounds to do so, ECRI will incorporate a gender perspective into its work, thus highlighting its flexibility to societal changes.

As given above, the body takes a country-by-country approach to combatting the intolerances set out in its objectives. However, ECRI also makes proposals for action to be taken at a local, national and European level, with regular papers in which policy recommendations for each level are published. The final objective of ECRI is to study international legal instruments in relation to racism and intolerance, and in doing so, progressively fulfil the aims of the body.

The members of ECRI uphold the independence of the body through their impartial and autonomous decision-making¹⁶³⁰. This highlights the separation of powers that the role holds, allowing the appointed members to fulfil their mandate.

6.2. What are the Recommendations of ECRI?

6.2.1. Annual Report on ECRI's Activities 2016

The 2016 paper addressed numerous issues such as the increase of racism, terrorism and intolerance to minority groups and migrants. The report raises several causal factors for these increases, stemming from an array of backgrounds. Factors to consider include, but are not restricted to; the lax nature of the political discourse emanating from politicians to the masses, an increased interest in far-right political movements, and the desire of many to look to others to blame for the results of austerity measures taken by their countries' governments.

While ECRI acknowledges the freedom of speech,¹⁶³¹ it is careful to state that this must be restricted where it is of necessity to uphold and safeguard a tolerant and democratic society. The European Court of Human Rights has found in favour of such restrictions in the right to freedom of speech¹⁶³². Given the increased "anonymity of the keyboard", authorities have begun to monitor hate-speech more stringently. In conjunction with numerous social media companies, authorities have begun to promote a more professional and ethical platform online, such as deleting the most extreme forms of racist and homo-/transphobic hate speech. The report found that many authorities are in the process of developing a code of conduct online, in conjunction with regulatory bodies in an attempt to combat hate speech and intolerance in the 21st Century. In doing so, the stigma associated with migrants may become easier to contest.

¹⁶²⁸ The objectives of ECRI are to combat racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia, antisemitism and intolerance in greater Europe from the perspective of the protection of human rights, in the light of the European Convention on Human Rights, its additional protocols and related case-law. In practical terms, ECRI reviews the legislation, policies and other measures of each member state to ensure that the objectives given above are upheld.

6.2.2. ECRI's Country-by-Country Approach

6.2.2.1. The Logistics

The activities of each member state are closely examined by ECRI, amounting to a tailor-made report in which the issues discovered are systematically addressed. As given in the report, the aims of such recommendations are to “formulate helpful and well-founded recommendations, which may assist governments in taking concrete and practical steps to counter racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia, antisemitism and intolerance”¹⁶³³.

The body composes a first draft, partially based upon a contact visit to the respective country. The first draft is then considered in confidential dialogue with the member state, at which point it is published following review from the national authorities. It is worth noting, that the recent publications have amounted to glaring media coverage given the current climate as mentioned above.

6.2.2.2. ECRI's Report for Germany

Germany is in its fifth round of ECRI reports. The report's recommendations include both criminal and civil law, highlighting the need for development in numerous areas of the German legal system, in order to aid in accomplishing the aims of ECRI.

The resistance to ratification of Protocol 12 of the ECHR is of particular note in the report. The Protocol provides legislative protection to prohibit discriminatory activity, thus promoting equality. The German authorities wish to observe how the Protocol is met in other member states, and whether it is of substantial benefit to them. They also raise the argument that it would do nothing to their legal framework, and may even adversely affect certain social benefits which may not comply with the Protocol. ECRI raises the argument that General Policy Recommendation No.7 accommodates some flexibility based upon nationality¹⁶³⁴. These arguments are still dismissed by the German authorities, and have been met again with a call to ratify the Protocol to “set an example at international level”. Despite the call for Germany to ratify Protocol 12, one can assume that Germany's autonomous decision takes precedence over the recommendation, when the Organisation for Security and Co-operation in Europe's (OSCE) guidelines are taken into account¹⁶³⁵.

ECRI encourages the German authorities to “continue developing strategies and to include measures in favour of ethnic, religious and linguistic minorities historically present in Germany”¹⁶³⁶. While the media has focused on migrants seeking asylum in recent times, it is also worth noting that certain other minority groups, such as Roma and Sinti persons, also require integration into German society.¹⁶³⁷

The ECRI recommendations for the integration of migrants has a bi-lateral focus, namely on both the prospective migrants and German citizens. The so-called “welcoming culture” (Willkommenskultur) in Germany has been highlighted by various institutions¹⁶³⁸ as lying at the heart of successful integration. The term was used for the increased commitment of the civil society in Germany in 2015. It is yet unknown whether this effort has had a material effect on the successful integration of migrants. For migrants to feel positively towards their new home, it is important that the country in question affords a welcoming and engaging response to them. One integration technique of interest is the engagement of religious organisations in municipalities and districts, as well as sports clubs to forge ties within the local communities, rather than a bureaucratic attempt that in reality would not reach the individual migrant¹⁶³⁹. The above-mentioned strategies, accompanied by language courses, allow for a more harmonious integration benefitting all parties involved. The language courses have seen 92.8% of the participants having passed the orientation test between 2009 and 2012 (therefore gaining at least an IELTS level A2)¹⁶⁴⁰. It is therefore unsurprising that such recommendations have been implemented by the German authorities.¹⁶⁴¹

6.3. What are the Recommendations from National Human Rights Bodies?

6.3.1. Who are the National Human Rights Bodies in Germany?

6.3.1.1. A Brief History and Aims

The appointed human rights body in Germany is the German Institute for Human Rights (Deutsches Institut für Menschenrechte, DIMR), and was founded in March 2001 as a result of recommendations from the German Federal Government. According to § 1 DIMRG (Deutsches Institut für Menschenrechte Gesetz, Law on DIMR), the DIMR works independently in order to promote and respect human rights domestically, as well as in international relations.

The DIMR carries out two main functions: to research and advise. More specifically, it researches on an interdisciplinary and application-oriented basis, in order to monitor and assess the state of human rights in Germany. In its advisory role, it provides support to political decision-makers at the federal and states (Länder) levels, as well as courts, the legal profession, the business sector, and civil society. This structure therefore complies with the recommendations of ECRI at a national and local level.

¹⁶⁴¹ This stance has not been held by all. Critics suggest that this effort has not been as successful as is suggested above.

6.3.1.2. How are DIMR Recommendations Implemented?

6.3.1.2.1. The Logistics

The DIMR collates and presents its findings to the German Federal Parliament, as well as domestic and international courts, and international human rights bodies. As given in its mandate, the institute sees itself as “a forum for exchange between government and civil society, research and practice, national and international actors”¹⁶⁴², again echoing the aims of ECRI at a local and national level.

6.3.1.2.2. The 2015-2016 DIMR Report for the Bundestag

The most recent report published by the DIMR considers the development of the human rights situation in Germany in accordance with § 2 V DIMRG, covering an array of topics surrounding human rights of migrants.¹⁶⁴³

As given above, integration is a bilateral system in which German citizens must be made aware of migrants and their human rights. DIMR found that the topic was tackled poorly in schools, with merely four of the sixteen federal states teaching students before their 7th school year.¹⁶⁴⁴ Where schools did provide insight into the lives of migrants, this was usually done in order to address the associated, negative connotations of a migrant, creating an “us versus them” mentality. Topics of this nature included “cultural differences”, “problems” and “conflict”. Despite the overall lack of effective teaching resources, the report did find in favour of the curricula taught in Berlin and Brandenburg. However, they too were criticised for their use of stereotypes in textbooks. In addition to the education of German children on the human rights of migrants, the report found that education of migrants lay at the heart of successful integration into the country, and more importantly, its communities, reiterating the arguments made by ECRI above.

Integration cannot merely be conducted by tackling the mentality of Germans and migrants alike, it also requires the physical integration of migrants and German-nationals. Sports clubs and voluntary aid for religious groups in the community are a good basis for forging a stronger community, however the report also addresses the largest physical barrier to integration: housing. Since the beginning of the so-called “refugee crisis” in Europe, there has been an increased influx of migrants to Germany. The sheer numbers of migrants arriving in Germany meant that the masses had to be accommodated for in temporary housing on the outskirts of cities. As time progressed, these areas became more permanent, forming a physical division between the cities and the migrants. Not only was there an issue of integration, but also human rights infringements. As the DIMR report states, migrants were packed in together leaving little privacy – an issue for most, but more so for vulnerable groups such as women travelling alone, children and those who had been left traumatised by things they had suffered. To combat this, the DIMR recommends each federal state to conceptualise and adhere to a minimum housing standard.

Several states such as Berlin, Brandenburg, Hamburg, Hessen and North-Rhein Westphalia have already done so, with many others in the stages of formulating their own standards. Regular inspections are also highly recommended by DIMR, in order to not only uphold migrant human rights on paper, but also in practical terms.¹⁶⁴⁵

The new Integration statute law effected July 31 2016 (see below) was also included in the report, highlighting the importance of integration holds for the German political, judicial and social systems given the range of areas covered.

7. How is migrants' right to access to healthcare regulated within the national legislation?

The German Constitution secures human rights as fundamental rights.¹⁶⁴⁶ Nowadays this can be considered as a certain standard, as human rights are commonly understood as undisputable fundamental rights and regularly protected as legal rights in national and international law.¹⁶⁴⁷ Also considered as part of human right are the right of life, physical integrity and health, which are secured in the German legislation by the protection of human dignity acc. Art. 1 GG and the right of physical integrity acc. Art. 2 GG. The rights set out in the above, are rights enacted for everyone and therefore also migrants. The right to access to healthcare is therefore also a right of migrants. In addition, one of the fundamental rights in the German Constitution is the right to asylum acc. Art. 16a GG, which secures the right of political asylum for victims of political persecution in order to protect people from persecution, arbitrary violence and torture. This idea is also conveyed by concluding the Geneva Convention on Refugees¹⁶⁴⁸ as well as torture's prohibition regulations such as Art. 3 ECHR. This objective is regarded as underpinning German policy on asylum,¹⁶⁴⁹ which then determines further details, for example who in particular is considered as refugee, §§ 3, 4 AsylG.

7.1. Asylbewerberleistungsgesetz (Asylum Seekers Benefit Act)

The Asylbewerberleistungsgesetz (Asylum Seekers Benefit Act, AsylbLG) determines if an immigrant can access health care in form of receiving material benefits and if so, in what range,¹⁶⁵⁰ and is therefore also part of German policy on asylum. It follows the aim to secure migrants' living requirements, while drawing up different regulations than those of the general public welfare law.¹⁶⁵¹ Therefore, the underlying idea of the AsylbLG is the protection and recognition of Art.

¹⁶⁵¹ Warendorf, AsylbLG, 22.

16a GG.¹⁶⁵² Being one of the fundamental rights in the Constitution, it secures the right of political asylum for victims of political persecution.¹⁶⁵³

The AsylbLG is closely linked with different regulations regarding asylum and migrants, such as the Asylgesetz, Ausländerrecht (Law on Foreigners), Staatsangehörigkeitsgesetz (Nationality Act) and the Aufenthaltsgesetz. It is therefore dependent on other regulations, and changes to these regulations will have effects on the AsylbLG. Therefore, it comes up like an annex with benefit entitlement rules, more than an independent law.¹⁶⁵⁴

7.1.1. Persons entitled to receive benefits

The group of persons entitled to receive a benefit is laid down by § 1 I AsylbLG, which states different prerequisites. First, one has to be an immigrant, who dwells in German territory, meaning that physical presence is required. A brief or visiting stay, for example due to a journey through, or a stay of up to three months is insufficient.¹⁶⁵⁵ Whether one is considered as an immigrant or not, is determined in conjunction with § 2 I AufenthG: a foreigner is anyone who is not German within the meaning of Art. 116 I GG. Therefore, immigrants who do not have the right to stay are also included, although the Act's name might suggest that only asylums seekers are included as benefitting persons.¹⁶⁵⁶

Second, immigrants have to be able to be categorised under the different groups of residence status named in the legal norm. The fact that § 1 I no. 1-7 AsylbLG refer to different groups of residence status follows the aim not to include every single immigrant. Therefore, the residence titles named by other regulations regarding asylum seekers and other migrants, especially the Aufenthaltsgesetz, become a constituent element.¹⁶⁵⁷

The main demographic determined by § 1 I no. 1 AsylbLG are those having a temporary permission to stay in accordance with the asylum law. According to § 55 I AufenthG, this is given to all asylum seekers to make the asylum proceedings possible.¹⁶⁵⁸

Other groups acc. § 1 I no. 2-7 AsylbLG are those having a residence permit, a temporary suspension of deportation acc. § 60a II AufenthG, those obligated to depart acc. § 50 AufenthG as well as relatives and repeating applicants acc. §§ 71, 71a AsylG.

§ 1 I no. 5 AsylbLG includes migrants compelled to depart acc. § 50 AufenthG. Therefore, migrants whose request for political asylum has been rejected or whose temporary permission to stay has expired but who have not left the country or have not been deported yet can benefit from the AsylbLG in the same way as asylum seekers. The underlying idea is that the AsylbLG should not be used as a device to enforce a voluntary departure through the reduction of benefit. Regulations regarding deportation are rather stated by the AufenthG, on which the AsylbLG may tie to but whose infringements are not sanctioned by the AsylbLG. Consequently, the AsylbLG entitles even migrants held on remand pending deportation to receive benefits.¹⁶⁵⁹

The demographic entitled by the AsylbLG is not strictly limited, which is the reason why § 1a AsylbLG reduces the claim in certain circumstances. In general, a reduced claim is more preferable than an exclusion of benefit.¹⁶⁶⁰ The first case acc. § 1a I AsylbLG for example excludes immigrants with a temporary suspension of deportation acc. § 1 I no. 4 AsylbLG, § 60a II AufenthG and immigrants compelled to depart acc. § 1 I no. 5 AsylbLG, § 50 AufenthG from benefits if they entered Germany with the intention to claim benefits. In such cases, the immigrant will only be granted benefits insofar as is necessary based on his individual circumstances. Another case acc. § 1a V AsylbLG prevents migrants from benefitting if they breach their duties to cooperate, such as non-attendance of official appointments.¹⁶⁶¹ Already in this construct of regulations regarding persons entitled to receive a benefit, one can recognise the strict connection to other regulations regarding the residence status as described above.

7.1.2. Range of health care benefits

The AsylbLG determines the range of benefits migrants will get. Besides standard benefits acc. § 3 AsylbLG such as a pocket money, payments in kind, housing and heating costs as well as household contents, migrants also have the right to claim for further health benefits.

Acc. § 2 I AsylbLG the law distinguishes between the first 15 months following entry into Germany and subsequent time. Its idea is to create a stronger adaption to German living conditions, which becomes necessary while staying in the country for a longer period.¹⁶⁶² Generally, during the first 15 months of their stay migrants only gain benefits regulated in accordance with the AsylbLG and therefore are excluded from the German legal health care. In this period, the scope of benefits is regulated in accordance to the AsylbLG.

§ 4 I AsylbLG settles the scope of benefits in terms of an acute illness or a painful condition. The wording of the law is ambiguous in terms of acute illness given the lack of definition. Case law describes an acute illness as being an unexpectedly appearing, fast and violent going, irregular body or mental condition, which requires medical attention for curative reasons.¹⁶⁶³ Knowing that, it requires an allocation of benefits' causing acute and non-acute, but chronic illnesses, which must be given in accordance with medical criteria and expertise.¹⁶⁶⁴ In contrast, a chronic illness is an irregular, slowly developing body or mental condition, persistent over a minimum of eight to ten weeks, which itself can follow from an acute illness.¹⁶⁶⁵ The difference between acute and chronic illnesses is conditionally variable, which makes the delineation very difficult. For example, acute disease states, which can occur as a side effect of chronic illnesses, are also considered as acute illnesses, but not the chronic illness itself.¹⁶⁶⁶

A painful condition is defined as an unpleasant state of sense or emotion connected with a current or potential tissue damage, which requires medical attention for curative reasons.¹⁶⁶⁷ In this case, the differentiation between acute and chronic painful state is not necessary.¹⁶⁶⁸ Acc. § 4 I 1 AsylbLG the scope of benefits includes the medical treatment as well as the provision of medication, dressing materials and other necessary performances. This corresponds to the general legal health care's general regulations. Therefore, acc. § 28 I 1 Sozialgesetzbuch (Social Code, SGB) V the treatment has to be sufficient and done according to the rules of the medical art and purpose. According to § 12 I SGB V it must also be economical and should not exceed the limits of necessity. Further benefits are acc. § 4 I 2 AsylbLG officially recommended vaccinations and necessary health screens. According to § 4 I 3 AsylbLG a provision with dentures is only included, insofar as it is urgent for medical reasons in the individual case.

A full and effective aid during pregnancy and birth, including all legal health care benefits, is assured by § 4 II AsylbLG.

§ 6 AsylbLG states that other benefits can be granted, especially if they are essential to health protection in the individual instance. This regulation appears as a discretionary decision ('can') and is not obligatory. The undefined term 'health' has to be understood in a biological-physiological way and includes the mental well-being.¹⁶⁶⁹

After the first 15 months and if the length of stay was not influenced by unlawful acts, acc. § 2 AsylbLG the benefits are regulated according to the SGB XII and migrants will get a fully adequate health insurance card acc. § 264 II SGB V.

7.1.3. Procedure

The AsylbLG also provides regulations regarding the procedure as well. § 6b AsylbLG states that benefits acc. §§ 3, 4 and 6 AsylbLG are to be exerted in accordance with § 18 SGB XII. This again rules that the performance of benefits is linked to the responsible body's notice.¹⁶⁷⁰ Therefore, the duty to perform is independent of a proper application, and an application is not required.¹⁶⁷¹ The responsible body has to acknowledge that the material preconditions are fulfilled. This means that the performance's necessity has to be explained or perceptible as such.¹⁶⁷² Otherwise a legal relationship based on the AsylbLG between the entitled person acc. § 1 I AsylbLG and the responsible body is not founded and the body will not have to raise the benefits.¹⁶⁷³

Acc. § 7 I 1 AsylbLG income and assets must be used up before gaining benefits, as the idea is the priority of self-help and the subordination of public assistance.¹⁶⁷⁴ Correspondingly, the AsylbLG contains compulsory registration acc. § 8a AsylbLG and in case of a breach of duty a fine regulation acc. § 13 AsylbLG.

7.2. Further Measures

The German government is aware of the necessity to integrate migrants in the health care system. As a result, it continues to create new regulations to secure and simplify migrants' access to health care.¹⁶⁷⁵ For example a legal framework for an electronic health insurance card for migrants was created at federal level, which serves as an example at country level, as federal states have the relevant competences.¹⁶⁷⁶ In addition, there have been made efforts to integrate migrants with medical expertise by giving them the opportunity to work in initial reception camps, so that they are assisted especially with their language skills.¹⁶⁷⁷

8.1.2. Rights of Migrants Children

Special integration programs have been set up throughout all 16 federal states in order to help improve migrant children reach their full educational potential. BAMF, as mentioned above, acknowledges the social problems that arise when migrant juveniles are not able to successfully integrate into the German school system, highlighting both personal and community troubles. Such difficulties include, but are not limited to a lack of self-esteem and despondency, and a pathway to violence and crime.

The programs aim to ‘enhance self-esteem and the potential for self-help; increase civil commitment; enhance equal opportunities in school and at work in Germany; and prevent crime and violence’.¹⁶⁹⁵ And are implemented to promote self-worth and awareness for their community, as well as their role within it. The BAMF states that the projects are to be supplemented ‘by involving local institutions and programmes; through skills training and conflict management; and in programmes for using free time profitably’.¹⁶⁹⁶ In addition to the recommendations from BAMF, other organisations have raised the importance of integration. In 2007, the Standing Conference of Ministers of Education and Cultural Affairs and organisations for people with a migration background issued ‘Integration as a chance – together for more equality'. This document stressed in particular the importance of linguistic diversity and of including the languages of origin of immigrant children in everyday school life. Work such as this has been backed up by evidence from other European countries, as provided in the European Commission's report "Integrating Immigrant Children into Schools in Europe".¹⁶⁹⁷

8.1.3. The Rights of Unaccompanied Minors

All 16 federal states grant unaccompanied minors the right to attend school as a matter of principle, however, as given above, there is no national procedure for education.

Underage asylum-seekers and underage children of asylum-seekers have exemption from compulsory education in three of Germany's sixteen Länder (Hesse, Baden-Wuerttemberg and Saarland),¹⁶⁹⁸ as there is no 'customary place of residence' the Schulgesetze of those three Länder.¹⁶⁹⁹ Such a lack of a general obligation for unaccompanied minors to attend school, it follows that this can result in negative consequences for them, not only in terms of educational development, but also in terms of health and welfare.¹⁷⁰⁰ Costs such as transportation and educational materials are only subsidised by the public in cases in which there is such an obligation to attend school, thus further excluding underage asylum seekers and children of asylum seekers in the abovementioned three Länder. There is still a stark difference between the educational needs of young children and those of near adulthood. The Working Paper highlights that 'it is common for no education to take place in any of the 16 federal states' for 16- and 17-year-old unaccompanied minors. It also found that beyond the requirement of compulsory school attendance, there was 'no furtherance of language skills'¹⁷⁰¹ in the education-system of states. In many cases, this has meant that unaccompanied minors-specific residential and charitable programs have had to bridge the language barrier in order to integrate these minors into German society.

8.1.4. Rights of Irregular Immigrants

In 2014, a paper was published by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (hereafter referred to as the OHCHR) in which the rights of Irregular Migrants were provided.¹⁷⁰² Educational rights were included in its report.

In several UN member-states a school's administration holds the obligation to report irregular migrants to the State. This obligation, as well as disclosure of pupil's data to the police, as highlighted in the paper, may deter parents from sending their children as the risk of deportation is thusly increased.¹⁷⁰³ However, in 2011, the German Federal Parliament abolished schools' obligations to report on schools, nurseries and educational facilities. Interestingly, this has not been followed in other public services, and so they still have an obligation to report.¹⁷⁰⁴

The International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families states in Art. 30 that 'each child of a migrant worker shall have the basic right of access to education on the basis of equality of treatment with nationals of the State concerned'. This right is extended to irregular migrant children in providing that:

Access to public preschool educational institutions or schools shall not be refused or limited by reason of the irregular situation with respect to stay or employment of either parent or by reason of the irregularity of the child's stay in the State of employment.

As given in the OHCHR paper, this right is for both primary and secondary education, and therefore provides protection to irregular child migrants of all ages in Germany.

8.2. Conclusion

Overall, there are a lot of sources with varying opinions on the rights of migrant children at a federal, national and international level. Internationally, there is a call for the educational rights of migrant children, be it legal or irregular, to be more unified and similar to the rights of national children. However, this is not implemented successfully in Germany, and may be the result of the federal states control over their individual states' education laws. In particular it is important to highlight that the integration and rights of children of an asylum or irregular migrant status is severely lacking in Germany. Despite efforts to entice these children into schools at a younger level, the requirement for improvement across all school-age children is grave.

9. How are foreign school and university diplomas recognised in your country (e.g. through national law under the CoE/UNESCO Convention on the Recognition of Qualifications concerning Higher Education in the European Region of 1997) and what are the practical procedures?

As a member state of the Council of Europe, Germany signed the Convention on the Recognition of Qualifications concerning Higher Education in the European Region (Lisbon Convention) on April 11 1997. In Germany, it entered into force October 1 2007.¹⁷⁰⁵

9.1. Legislation

At national level there is a statute dealing with the recognition of qualifications called Anerkennungsgesetz (Federal Government's Recognition Act). It consists of several articles ¹⁷⁰⁴ European Union Agency for Fundamental Rights (FRA), Fundamental Rights of Migrants in an Irregular Situation, 91.

¹⁷⁰⁵ Christian Coelln and Josef F. Lindner, Beck Online Commentary on Hochschulrecht Bayern BayHSchG, Art. 63, 32 - 34; for the situation in all other Federal States cf ibid para 4.

concerned with the recognition of foreign qualifications.¹⁷⁰⁶ It deals with the recognition of jobs regulated through national law but does not encompass the recognition of jobs regulated at state level, of university diploma which do not lead to regulated jobs or school diploma. It consists of the Berufsaufqualifikationsfeststellungsgesetz (BQFG) and of changes to special laws concerned with certain jobs with regard to European directives¹⁷⁰⁷.

9.1.1. University Diploma

University diplomas from EU and non-EU countries are recognized under the Hochschulgesetz (university law) by every federal state. As stated above, the Anerkennungsgesetz does not regulate the recognition of higher education certificates that lead to non-regulated jobs. The holder of a higher education certificate can apply directly to the German labour market. It is always possible to hold a foreign university title in Germany. There is no possibility of converting the foreign diploma into a German one.¹⁷⁰⁸ However, the diploma can be assessed by the Zentralstelle für ausländisches Bildungswesen – ZAB (Central Office for Foreign Education). The basis of the assessment is the Lisbon Convention. The German federal states enabled the ZAB to carry out the assessment. The ZAB only deals with completed higher education degrees. It issues a statement of comparability for a fee.¹⁷⁰⁹ The authorities assess the foreign diploma by using a database called anabin.¹⁷¹⁰ The applicant can also research the possibilities of recognition online before requesting the assessment. Following this procedure, the authorities issue a statement, which is merely a comparative assessment with no formal recognition.¹⁷¹¹ Nevertheless, the recognition improves the applicant's possibilities on the labour market by giving potential employers a detailed description of the qualification.¹⁷¹²

9.1.2. School Diploma

In general, every university is responsible for the recognition of school diplomas.¹⁷¹³ The Lisbon Convention applies to diplomas from states that have ratified it. There are other treaties for diplomas from states that have not ratified the Convention: the Protocol to the European Convention on the Equivalence of Diplomas leading to Admission to Universities,¹⁷¹⁴ the European Convention on the Academic Recognition of University Qualifications,¹⁷¹⁵ the European Convention on the Equivalence of Diplomas leading to Admission to Universities¹⁷¹⁶ and the European Convention on the General Equivalence of Periods of University Study.¹⁷¹⁷ The Federal State governments can issue regulation on the recognition of foreign school diplomas. It deals with the recognition of qualifications from other German states and from foreign countries. The criteria of the ZAB are binding for North Rhine Westphalia.

9.1.3. Other Qualifications

Moreover, the Gesetz über die Feststellung der Gleichwertigkeit von Berufsqualifikationen – Berufsqualifikationsgleichstellungsgesetz (Law concerning the assessment of equalisation of professional qualifications, BQFG) which, acc. § 1 BQFG, aims is to improve the use of foreign qualifications for the German labour market and thus enable employment closely linked to the qualification. The law applies to everyone who acquired a professional qualification outside of Germany acc. § 2 BQFG.

The residence permit always refers to a concrete reason for residence.¹⁷¹⁸ One reason is employment, §§ 18-21 AufenthG. The permit states whether and how migrants from non-EU countries are allowed to work in Germany.¹⁷¹⁹ However, §§ 18-21 AufenthG request completed studies. They do not deal with the recognition of foreign qualifications but with immigration for the purpose of working in Germany after having fully qualified in a foreign country.

§ 17a AufenthG opens up the possibility of giving a permit of residence to an applicant who has a foreign qualification if it is necessary for him or her so that his qualification would be recognized after certain measures or further qualifications. However, this rule is not supposed to enable initial training, only further qualifications needed to reach the national standards for a specific employment. Therefore, § 17a AufenthG aims to simplify the immigration of qualified workers.¹⁷²⁰ The ascertainment of a lack of equality between the qualification and its German equivalent, e.g. according to the BQFG, is mandatory for issuing a permit following Art. 17a AufenthG.¹⁷²¹

The responsible authority depends on the kind of qualification, e.g. the chambers of commerce are responsible for the recognition of craftsman, § 8 I no. 1 BQFG. If there is no responsible chamber, the states can decide on the responsible authority acc. § 8 II BQFG. The law differentiates between two types of profession: regulated and non-regulated.¹⁷²² To start a career in a regulated profession one must fulfil requirements by law, which set standards of qualification, § 3 V BQFG. First, one has to submit a request for recognition, § 4 I BQFG. The requirements for recognition are the proof of similar qualification and no main differences between the qualifications, § 4 I no. 1, 2. Recognition is not granted if there are major differences such as the lack of special skills, § 4 II BQFG. § 9 BQFG sets certain criteria to decide on the equivalence of a qualification (§ 9 I BQFG) as well criteria which prove a major difference (§ 9 II BQFG).

The administration will decide on the request within three months, § 6 III BQFG. The decision will be sent out in written form attached with an explanatory statement including the main differences, § 7 BQFG. Most important, is the information about possible measures to even out the differences. According to § 11 III BQFG, the applicant can choose between courses of instruction or an aptitude test. After successful recognition, the permit can be prolonged for up to a year to allow sufficient time for job hunting according to §. 17a IV AufenthG.¹⁷²³ After this period, the permit expires.

9.3. Conclusion

There are several ways for the recognition of foreign job qualifications in Germany depending on the type of qualification and especially its comparability to regulated German qualifications. The law differs between EU and non-EU migrants.

10. How is participation of migrants in political decisions regulated in your national legislation? Are they legally allowed to participate in their country of residence the same way as in their country of origin?

One of the most important conditions for migrants' integration into society is their participation in political, social, professional and cultural debates. Political Participation includes every activity and action served to achieve, change or preserve power and influence on designing state or social facilities and existence.¹⁷²⁴ A German national can influence political decisions through elections, referenda, party and election campaign related activities as well as through exertion of pressure through demonstrations.¹⁷²⁵ Any strong restrictions are not possible as all these actions are protected by fundamental rights, such as freedom of assembly, association and movement acc. Art. 8, 9 I, 11 GG. As Germany is a country which attracts a large number of immigrants, the German legislation might partly open these possibilities for political participation also for migrants. It is in question if and if so, on which scale migrants' political participation is guaranteed or limited in the German legislation.

10.1. Constitutional and Legal Protection of Political Participation

A right to political activities is generally granted by the constitution. Most of the fundamental rights which protect the political participation are, however, not applicable for migrants, as they only entitle German nationals. The freedom of speech acc. Art. 5 I GG, which does entitle everybody including migrants, does in turn not guarantee an absolute right for political participation.¹⁷²⁶

¹⁷²³ Kluth and Heusch, Ausländerrecht, § 17a para 22.

¹⁷²⁵ Uwe Andersen and Wichard Wolke, Handwörterbuch des politischen Systems der Bundesrepublik Deutschland, 550.

¹⁷²⁶ Bergmann and Dienelt, Ausländerrecht, § 47 AufenthG para 4.

§ 47 I 1 AufenthG states declaratory for all immigrants despite their legal status,¹⁷²⁷ that ‘foreigners may pursue political activities within the bounds of the prevailing general statutory provisions.’ This stands alongside protection of international treaties, such as Art. 10, 11 ECHR and Art. 19, 21, 22 International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights (ICCPR), securing freedom of expression, assembly and association on a European and international level.

Nevertheless, § 47 I, II AufenthG also limits the right for political activities as far as certain prerequisites apply. For example, political participation must not impair or endanger the development of informed political opinion, peaceful co-existence, public safety, law and order, or any other substantial interests of the Federal Republic of Germany, § 47 I 2 no 1 AufenthG, or support organisations, political movements or groups which have initiated, advocated or threatened attacks, § 47 II no 3 AufenthG. If this is the case, political participation cannot be absolutely restricted or prohibited, but only physical activities can be refused, always considering the principle of proportionality.¹⁷²⁸

10.2. Right to Vote Regulated in the German Legislation

The right to vote is guaranteed for every citizen in Art. 38 GG. As it is recorded in the Constitution, it is one of the main fundamental rights in Germany to secure the democratic structure. More than to secure the democracy, the right to vote is essential to recognise democratic values, which are established throughout the Constitution. Art. 20 II GG for example says: ‘All state authority is derived from the people. It shall be exercised by the people through elections and other votes and through specific legislative, executive and judicial bodies.’ Consequently, being the only possible act of direct legitimation, elections are of central importance for the democracy.¹⁷²⁹

Art. 38 I GG clearly defines the right to vote by setting up different principals concerning the elections: ‘The representatives of the Bundestag (German Parliament) shall be elected in general, direct, free, equal and confidential elections. They shall be representatives of the people as a whole, not bound by orders and instructions, only by their conscience.’ Although Art. 38 GG does not prescribe a specific election system, it determines strict conditions for elections. But the stated principals must be defined. Relevant for participation is the obligation that the suffrage must be universal. According to the German Federal Supreme Court this means, that all citizens have a right to vote, which is independent of confession, education, sex, language, profession, income or political beliefs.¹⁷³⁰

However, according to the German Federal Supreme Court the right to vote is reserved for Germans: Art. 20 II GG does not only contain the principle of the sovereignty of the people, but it also defines who the people are, which exercises the state’s authority through elections, votes and special organs of legislative, executive and judiciary. Being a democratic state, Germany cannot exist without a totality of persons which forms the nation from whom all state's authority derives, the people of the Federal Republic of Germany.¹⁷³¹

The determination of who is belonging to the German nation is stated in Art. 116 GG, saying 'Unless otherwise provided by a law, a German national within the meaning of this Constitution is a person who possesses German citizenship or who has been admitted to the territory of the German Reich within the boundaries of December 31, 1937 as a refugee or expellee of German ethnic origin or as the spouse or descendant of such person.' As a result, the German citizenship is condition and connecting factor for the affiliation to the nation and its task to exercise the state's authority.¹⁷³² Hence, resulting from the sovereignty of the people acc. Art. 20 II GG, it is constitutive for the right to vote, that the voter belongs to a national population and is part of a demographic considered as a people.¹⁷³³ The underlying idea is that all people of a nation are suspected to act as a unity. The German national for example is united through the people's German origin or any other connection one may have to the German nation. Hence, the requirement to be a German does not result directly from the wording of Art. 38 II GG, but from the systematic connection with the sovereignty of the people acc. Art. 20 II GG and the nationality acc. Art. 116 I GG.

Another idea to classify the group of persons entitled to vote would be the differentiation according to whether one is directly affected or not, instead of the distinction according to one's origin. This would include migrants not being holder of the German citizenship but nevertheless being affected by the election. The problem, however, is that the process of realisation might become difficult, as those affected persons have to be filtered out for every single subject, which would lead to an inability to act.¹⁷³⁴ Therefore, the Constitution decided to legitimate an abstract, identic group as a nation depending on their citizenship.¹⁷³⁵

Concerning the migrants' right to vote, it is important to define whether migrants can be considered as citizens acc. Art. 116 I GG or not. Further regulations can be found in the Staatsangehörigkeitsgesetz (Nationality Act, StAG). According to § 3 StAG it is possible to acquire the German citizenship through different procedures as for example through birth (§ 4 StAG), explanation (§ 5 StAG) or naturalisation (§ 8 ff. StAG). Most interesting for migrants is the citizenship's acquirement through naturalisation.¹⁷³⁶ Other than naturalisation, which is only possible within strict conditions, there is no other possibility to acquire the German citizenship. Not being a holder of the German citizenship, one is not part of the electorate and therefore excluded from the central democratic form of participation.

10.3. EU-citizens' suffrage on municipal level

Nevertheless, there is one exception to this regulation: the EU-citizens' suffrage on municipal level. Due to the Maastricht Treaty of 1992 persons with a European Union member country's citizenship automatically have an EU-citizenship as well. Since 1995 acc. Art. 28 I 3 GG every holder of this EU-citizenship is in the same way as German citizens, allowed to participate in elections on local government level, such as the elections for district and municipal councils, district assemblies and mayors.¹⁷³⁷ Hence an opening up to participation of migrants in elections is discernible, but limited to EU-citizens, who make up only a small part of all migrants. Corresponding modifications of Art. 28 GG have been proposed, but have not been put into practice.¹⁷³⁸

10.4. Ausländerbeiräte (Advisory Council on Non-nationals)

Even if there is a limitation for migrants regarding the political participation through elections, there is the possibility to influence politics on local government level through elections in a democratic legitimated way: advisory Councils on immigrants summarise all different kinds of committees and organs which represent migrants' interests.¹⁷³⁹ As they are regulated on a federal state level, their composition and tasks differ within Germany. In principle, Advisory Councils on Non-nationals pursue the goal to be involved in the decision-making process while not having any decision-making powers. This happens through debating on subjects regarding the migrants' living, such as multilingualism, discrimination and migrant laws.¹⁷⁴⁰

11. How can migrants acquire citizenship in the country? Is there a possibility of double nationality?

A German is generally a person who possesses German citizenship, acc. Art. 116 GG. If migrants want to become a German national, so that they can benefit from all rights reserved for Germans, they have to receive German citizenship.

11.1. Naturalisation

11.1.1. Brief Historical Outline

As the preconditions and basic principles changed a lot in the last few hundred years, a brief historical summarise must be outlined.

Since 1870 the principle of qualification for citizenship through descent and heredity, the ius sanguinis, is anchored in the Gesetz über die Erwerbung und den Verlust der Bundes- und Staatsangehörigkeit (German Federation's Federation and Nationality Act) as well as in the following laws on citizenship.¹⁷⁴² It was in everybody's opinion that one can be German, but one cannot become German.¹⁷⁴³ In 1999 the law on citizenship was reformed and from January 1 2000 on the Staatsangehörigkeitsgesetz came into force, as it still is until today. In addition to the descending principle, also the territorial principle (ius soli) was now determined in the legislation. Henceforth it was possible, that the citizenship was conferred also to children born in Germany to foreign parents.¹⁷⁴⁴

11.1.2. The Staatsangehörigkeitsgesetz (Nationality Act)

The possibilities of acquisition of the German citizenship are described in § 3 StAG. This includes the acquisition through birth in Germany, meaning that children to foreign parents get the German citizenship automatically, if one of the parents is resident in Germany for at least eight years and has a permanent residence permit. In addition to an automatic acquisition, the StAG provides the opportunity of naturalisation, which is mainly relevant for immigrants. Two different options of naturalisation are provided: the naturalisation at discretion acc. § 8 StAG and at demand acc. § 10 StAG.

11.1.2.1. Naturalisation at discretion acc. § 8 StAG

Acc. § 8 I StAG an immigrant lawfully and habitually resident in the country can be naturalised at his request, if the preconditions are fulfilled. First condition is that the non-national has to be capable of acting acc. § 80 I AufenthG, meaning that he has to be of age and must not be legally incompetent, or otherwise legally represented. In addition, no reason for deportation acc. §§ 53, 54, 55 II no 1-4 AufenthG must not be fulfilled. These could be the endangering of the peace, the basic free and democratic order or other considerable interests of the Federal Republic of Germany or the conviction for criminal acts. Furthermore, one has to have found one's own apartment or accommodation and the immigrant has to be capable of providing for himself and his relatives.

Legal consequence of the preconditions' fulfilment is not a claim to become a German citizenship, it rather just opens the possibility to confer the citizenship. In the responsible body's discretion, the naturalisation can take place if in the individual case a public interest in the applicant's naturalisation can be identified.¹⁷⁴⁵

Within these conditions an immigrant who is not resistant in the country can still apply for the German citizenship, if there are ties with Germany that justify a naturalisation, § 14 StAG.

11.1.2.2. Naturalisation at demand acc. § 10 StAG

The second and as it does not depend on one's discretion the more certain possibility for naturalisation is the naturalisation at demand acc. § 10 StAG. The norm's structure is similar to the one regulating the naturalisation at discretion, but in addition the immigrant has to be lawfully and habitually resident in the country for at least eight years and not only in the moment of application. This period can be reduced to seven years after a successful participation in an integration course or even down to six years in case of specific contributions towards integration, § 10 III StAG. Besides the length of stay within Germany, § 10 StAG states other preconditions than § 8 StAG: the immigrant has to actively confess himself to the basic free and democratic order of the Federal Republic of Germany and he also has to explain his loyalty to the German state and its roots. He also must be able to guarantee his own subsistence as well as the subsistence of relatives entitled to his maintenance without resource to public assistance or unemployment aids. Besides his duty to have a residence permit, he has to waive his former citizenship to avoid multiple citizenship. He also must not have been convicted for a criminal act. At last preconditions, the applicant must have satisfactory German language skills and legal and social order knowledge as well as knowledge on German living conditions have to be proven in an Einbürgerungstest (nationality test).

Provided that acc. § 11 StAG nothing affects the eligibility, the applicant will get the German citizenship. Reasons to be excluded from the entitlement acc. § 10 StAG are specific indications of a missing loyalty to the German state and its principles or the appeal for hate and the inciting arbitrary measures against parts of the population.

11.1.2.3. Procedure

After putting in an application for the citizenship, the responsible body proves the preconditions and, eventually, exercises its discretion. If a positive decision is reached, the responsible body will issue a certificate of naturalisation acc. § 16 S. 1 StAG. Before its surrendering the applicant has to commit solemnly as stated in § 16 S. 2 StAG: 'I solemnly declare that I will adhere to the constitution and laws of the Federal Republic of Germany, and will refrain from undertaking anything that may harm the Federal Republic of Germany.'

Acc. § 38 StAG costs will be charged. The naturalisation fee amounts to 255 Euro and is reduced for children included in the naturalisation to 51 Euro.

11.2. Dual Nationality

Germany pursues the principle of avoiding multiple citizenship, which means the holding of more than one nationality. In general, International Law does not forbid dual or plural citizenship.¹⁷⁴⁶ As the International Law however sets only very wide limits to the National Act's arrangements, the regulations regarding acquisition and loss of a citizenship can differ a lot and as a result, the coincidence of different reasons for acquiring a citizenship can lead to plural nationality.¹⁷⁴⁷ Also naturalisation can lead to plural citizenship: for example, citizens of another EU-country are excepted from the obligation to waive their former nationality. If it's not possible to give up the former citizenship or just possible in harsh conditions, an exception of this principle is also accepted, § 12 StAG.

Besides, while reforming the StAG in 1999 there has been discussion to accept dual citizenship in general and to give up the principle of avoiding plural citizenship. Relevant plans though failed because of resistance from the Opposition.¹⁷⁴⁸ Politics compromised on the Optionsmodell (option model) which applies to children whose parents are not both German citizens acc. §§ 4 III, 40b StAG.¹⁷⁴⁹ As mentioned before, children born in Germany to foreign parents will automatically get the German nationality by ius soli, if one parent has been living in Germany for at least eight years and has a permanent residence permit, § 4 III StAG.¹⁷⁵⁰ § 40b StAG is the corresponding transitional arrangement. In addition, acc. § 29 I no. 2 StAG the Optionspflicht (obligation to option) occurs only if the person concerned did not grow up in the country acc. § 29 Ia StAG. In there it is determined that multiple citizenship holders are considered to be grown up in the country, if he either is habitually resident in the country in the last eight years or attended school for six years in the country, or has a school-leaving qualification or a professional education acquired or completed in the country. Otherwise, if the person in his individual case has a comparable close relation with Germany and the Optionspflicht would mean a particular hardship after the case's circumstances, the comprehensive clause acc. § 29 Ia 2 StAG can find application and the person is considered to be grown up in Germany. Next to the condition that one must not be grown up in the country, one must not either be holder of the foreign citizenship of a EU-country or Switzerland (which is a similar exception as the one for EU-citizens regarding the waiver of the foreign citizenship). As soon as the person receives an advice regarding his obligation to plead acc. § 29 V 5 StAG after the end of his 21st birthday, all conditions are fulfilled and one is obliged to option. In this moment, the corresponding procedure is introduced and can be continued in three different possibilities: the obliged person can decide for the foreign nationality and will consequently lose his German citizenship, § 29 II StAG, or he can decide for the German nationality and provably waives the foreign citizenship, § 29 III StAG. Otherwise, he can apply for upholding the German citizenship next to the foreign one if the foreign citizenship's waiver is not possible or unreasonable, § 29 III 3 StAG. This is the case if the foreign state's institutions are not capable of acting while its continued existence or a communication with the foreign state is practically impossible.¹⁷⁵¹ If the obliged person will not do any action, he will lose the German nationality.¹⁷⁵²

12. How is your country assisted by EU programmes and funding with regard to the integration of migrants?

In this part of the report the various EU-level migrant integration programmes will be highlighted in which Germany participates.

Apart from the numerous national programmes, such as foundations, integration courses and migration consultancy offices for adult migrants, Germany is assisted by a lot EU-programs.¹⁷⁵³

12.1. Asylum, Migration and Integration Fund (AMIF)

The Asylum, Migration and Integration Fund (AMIF) ran between 2010 and 2014, covering the following the main themes:¹⁷⁵⁴

- Stabilisation and development of the common European asylum-system, including the extern dimensions,
- Integration of third-country citizens (non-EU) and legal migration – return to origin country

The statutory source for this fund are the „Regulation laying down general provisions on the Asylum, Migration and Integration Fund”¹⁷⁵⁵ and the “Regulation establishing the Asylum, Migration and Integration Fund”.¹⁷⁵⁶ With regard to contents, the program is split into three categories: asylum, integration and the return or reintegration in the origin country. To make sure that the subsidies are supplied in due form, there are a lot of liabilities that the participating countries must recognise. For example, the countries are obliged to prove and justify the expenses in written form.

Another way to control the correct distribution of subsidies are controls of the local executive organisations through a responsible department of the EU, and obligatory reports.¹⁷⁵⁷

The AMIF works in a way so that corporate bodies covered by private or public law or international organisations that want to start a project can apply for getting EU-subsidies from the AMIF. The AMIF budget comprises 2752 million EUR.

Germany was assigned 208 million EUR. The country plans to invest approximately 60 million EUR in order to establish the Common European Asylum System (CEAS), which will help to improve the asylum procedures in Germany, making them faster and more effective. 92 million EUR of the amount shall be invested in the scope of integration of third-country citizens and legal immigration with the target to ensure the immigrants equal opportunities and access to education, personal fulfilment and participation at the workplace and in society. Furthermore, Germany plans to invest 45 million EUR to the area of returnees especially for consultation, assistance in returning and reintegration.¹⁷⁵⁸

12.2. Rights, Equality and Citizenship Program (REC)

The Rights, Equality and Citizenship program is based on the “EU-regulation establishing a rights, equality and citizenship program”¹⁷⁵⁹ during the period 2014 to 2020. It supports arrangements for the creation of a European Community, in which the equalisation and the treaty on European Union a Treaty on the Function of the European Union, of the Charter of Fundamental Rights and of the ECHR should be saved and supported.¹⁷⁶⁰ Since 2014, the following three programs are united for simplification under the REC: The program “Basic Rights and EU Citizenship”, “Daphne III” and “Employment and Social Solidarity”.

The program contains nine specific objectives:¹⁷⁶¹

- Promote non-discrimination
- Combat racism, xenophobia, homophobia and other forms of intolerance
- Promote equality between women and men and gender mainstreaming
- Prevent violence against children, young people, women and other groups at risk (Daphne)
- Promote the rights of child
- Ensure the highest level of data protection
- Promote the rights deriving from Union citizenship
- Enforce consumer rights

The budget of this program contains 439 million EUR¹⁷⁶² and the type of actions financed by the program to transact the purposes are:¹⁷⁶³

- training activities (staff exchanges, workshops, development of training modules)
- mutual learning, cooperation activities, exchange of good practices, peer reviews, development of ICT tools
- awareness-raising activities, dissemination, conferences
- support for main actors (key European NGOs and networks, Member States’ authorities implementing Union law)
- analytical activities (studies, data collection, development of common methodologies, indicators, surveys, preparation of guides)

Pursuant to Regulation EU No. 1381/2013 Preamble (35):

In the implementation of the Programme, the Commission should take into account the objective of fair geographic distribution of funds, and should provide assistance in those Member States where the number of funded actions is relatively low. When implementing the Programme, the Commission should also take into account whether, according to internationally recognised indices/monitoring bodies, action needs to be taken in some Member States in order to ensure the effective achievement of the objectives of the Programme, and should support action from the Member States or civil society in those areas.

Unfortunately, it was not possible to discover the accurate details to the amounts regarding this fund. The questions how much Germany received, or how Germany benefits from this fund, could not be investigated because of a lack of providing these information on the part of the EU.

12.3. Fund for European Aid to the Most Deprived (FEAD)

The European Aid Fund, based on Regulation EU No.223/2014, will run between 2014 and 2020 and has a budget of 3,8 billion EUR.¹⁷⁶⁴

¹⁷⁶³ Regulation EU No. 1381/2013 Art. 5.

¹⁷⁶⁴ Regulation EU No. 223/2014 Art. 6 I.

The target group of the fund are the most deprived non-natives, their children and homeless people or people being at risk of homelessness.¹⁷⁶⁵

The Fund supports the EU-states through the provision of material aid for the most deprived people. (food, clothes, other provisions for personal use). The fund also supports these people with arrangements relating to rehabilitation, to help the people overcoming poverty. National agencies are also contributing to the Fund with material assistance, helping to integrate the people.¹⁷⁶⁶

The FEAD is assisting in the creation of additional jobs in the area of advisers in local helpdesks. These helpdesks help the concerned people to participate in the existing arrangements, such as language courses and medical advice. In particular, children of the immigrating people should get the possibility to get education and social care. To transfer these targets, the Fund is cooperating with the Federal Ministry of Families, the Elderly, Women and the Youth and the Federal Ministry of Labour and Social Affairs.¹⁷⁶⁷

The fund is not providing mere material effort. An essential requirement for getting support is a cooperation agreement between councils and facilities of public welfare or other charitable facilities.¹⁷⁶⁸

Germany has three key activities and national agencies or associations that are addressed to implement these activities. The Key Activity 1 – addressing, consultancy and information for the most deprived immigrated EU-citizens which supports the access to the regular consulting services – has established 57 national agencies in Germany.

The Key Activity 2 contains addressing, consultancy and information for the most deprived migrated EU-citizens and their children which shall provide the access to early education offers and social support. It is implemented by 31 national agencies across Germany. 35 national agencies are responsible for Key Activity 3 which deals with addressing, consultancy and information for homeless person and person at the risk of homelessness providing regular offers of assistance.¹⁷⁶⁹

12.4. Europe for Citizens¹⁷⁷⁰

The Europe for Citizens program is based on the Regulation EU No.390/2014 and has a budget of 185.468.000 EUR¹⁷⁷¹. This is another program in which Germany participates.

One of the main purposes is to contribute to citizens' understanding of the Union, its history and diversity.

Another purpose is to foster European citizenship and to improve conditions for civic and democratic participation at Union level.¹⁷⁷²

The program finances mutual learning and cooperation activities, structural support for organisations, union level analytical activities and awareness raising and dissemination activities.¹⁷⁷³

12.5. European Social Fund

The European Social Fund (ESF) has a total sum of 120.461.019.673 EUR. It is based on the Regulation EU No. 1304/2013 and is one of the most important EU programmes.

The ESF promotes employment and supports people in gaining access to the labour market and fair career prospects. The four main aims are:¹⁷⁷⁴

- promoting sustainable and quality employment and supporting labour mobility
- promoting social inclusion, combating poverty and any discrimination
- investing in education, training and vocational training for skills and life-long learning
- enhancing institutional capacity of public authorities and stakeholders and efficient public administration

Recently, there have been tens of thousands of ESF-projects in Germany investing in the aims of the ESF.¹⁷⁷⁵ The ESF capital expenditures is provided by 17 operational programmes, one for each state and another on the federal level. At national level, the budget is split into three main priorities: employment, social inclusion and education.

Within Germany, there are different levels of priority between East and West Germany and also between the different regions to accommodate the varying circumstances and necessities.¹⁷⁷⁶

Migrants can be affected by the problems of integration in the labour market because of barrier of language, so they are one of the target groups of this EU programme.¹⁷⁷⁷ For implementing the targets Germany submitted a federal operational programme to the ES, which was approved by the European-Commission on the 21. October. Under the direction of the Federal Ministry of Labour and Social Affairs the ESF- Federal Operational Programme is implemented together with four other Federal Ministries: The Federal Ministry for Economics and Technology, for Education and Science, for Family, Senior Citizens and the Youth and the Federal Ministry for Environment, Nature Conservation, Nuclear Safety.¹⁷⁷⁸

During the ESF period from 2014 to 2020 an amount of 12.570.485.076 EUR has been allocated to Germany.¹⁷⁷⁹

Conclusions

The report elaborates to which extent the German government supports migrants to ensure fundamental human rights and that it acknowledges the necessity integration.

Even often considered as obvious it is important to state that receiving asylum is a right granted by the German Constitution and that its guaranteeing therefore is one of the German government's most important tasks.

Most of German laws and regulations regarding migrants are set up in accordance to European law. This results from the German Constitution's openness regarding commitment of national law to international law and the subsequent obligation, to interpret national law in conformity with international legal obligations. In addition, Art. 46 ECHR binds member states and all its authorities to decisions and jurisdiction of the ECtHR. On this basis, the report underlines the importance of distinguishing between EU-migrants and non-EU-migrants, as European law often grants special rights for EU residents. Free movement and freedom of residence within the European Union for example are granted to every EU-citizen, while other foreigners need visa as a matter of principle.

The right of asylum is closely linked with other fundamental rights secured by the German Constitution, such as the right of life, physical integrity and health, right for education and, undeniably, the provision of human dignity. Therefore, the report also elaborates different regulations regarding access to health care and education. While examining these regulations, it was repeatedly found that fundamental rights are only granted to legal migrants. Illegal migrants often have to fear deportation so that they prefer to waive on their fundamental human rights, though it is important to clarify, that this waiving is more of forced nature than based on free will.

The report also aims to describe asylum proceedings as well as its administration. There are different sections within the administration, however the most important remains to be the BAMF, which is described in detail within the report.

Furthermore, the report refers to some statistical data and tries to explain considerable changings in migration to Germany. The significant increase of asylum request in 2014, the following reactionary measures in 2016 and the resulting decrease in asylum requests in 2017 are important developments have to be highlighted.

An issue which comes along integration is the question, how much political participation is granted to migrants. Even though fundamental rights securing the possibility to have a say in political matters are granted for everybody and therefore also to migrants, they do not guarantee an absolute right for political participation. Full participation can only be guaranteed through the right of vote. The report elaborates the reasons for why the right to vote is limited to Germans and not also granted to migrants. As it is a requirement for the right of vote, the report also discusses the possibility for migrants to become a German national through acquiring the German citizenship (naturalisation).

The report finishes in giving a brief description on different national and European programmes aiming to integrate migrants more deeply, so as to reach Germany's objective of full integration.
