

one in five un sur cinq

LEGAL RESEARCH GROUP
ELSA for CHILDREN
FINAL REPORT

FOREWORD

Dear Reader,

With this Final Report, we are proud to present the outcome of the International Legal Research Project ELSA for Children. This outcome contains 23 Reports regarding the national implementation of European and International Standards on the protection of children against violence and sexual abuse in some States members of the Council of Europe.

Statistics show that about one in five children in Europe are victims of sexual violence. It is also an unfortunate fact that these statistics are compiled from only the data available. There are many cases that do not see the daylight. As an association committed to Human Rights, we see the need to raise awareness about this issue as there is a lack of information within the international community regarding Children Rights and the protection of children against sexual violence.

The aims of this Legal Research Project shaped with the idea to support the ONE in FIVE Campaign of the Council of Europe which puts the abovementioned issue under spotlight. The aim was not easy, as we wanted to tackle a very serious and tabooed issue within the legal area of Human Rights. 'ELSA for Children' reflects the 'One in Five' Campaign's aim; to reach out to the widest possible audience throughout a large partnership including community-based civil society associations. Bringing together 38,000 students of law and young lawyers in 41 countries, ELSA is in a good position to carry out comparative research.

While shaping our research areas, we chose the ratification of Lanzarote Convention (Council of Europe Convention on the Protection of Children against Sexual Exploitation and Sexual Abuse) as our starting point. Determining the main points of the national legislation regarding protecting children and implementing Lanzarote Convention (if ratified) was the main idea. However, we realised the cultural background of the respective states, family structures, current issues on media and national policies are also very relevant. We wanted to get qualified, realistic, applicable legal information and accordingly structured our academic framework.

Even though the academic research was the main focus, there also have been side-events organised by our national research groups in order to promote children rights values.

Before letting you read the rest of the report, we would like to thank our National Researchers, National Coordinators and National Academic who put a lot of efforts in the outcome and in its promotion, making this result unique. Without your commitment this research would not be possible.

Our warmest gratitude goes especially to the Council of Europe, in particular to the Children's Department, the Lanzarote Committee and the Directorate for Communication. First of all because of the decision to fund the publication of this research, but, more important, for their constant support and appreciation, that was essential in all phases of this project.

The International Coordination Committee

ELSA for Children Legal Research Group

Asja Borić, Cassandra Matilde Fernandes, Elif Yildirim, Federica Toscano, Khrystyna Brodych, Sara Sanz and Vasco Silva

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Foreword .....	3
Table of Contents.....	5
Academic Framework.....	7
National Reports .....	17
ELSA Bosnia and Herzegovina .....	19
ELSA Croatia .....	129
ELSA Estonia.....	221
ELSA Finland.....	281
ELSA Germany.....	399
ELSA Greece.....	477
ELSA Ireland.....	555
ELSA Italy .....	641
ELSA Latvia .....	713
ELSA Malta .....	793
ELSA Norway .....	863
ELSA Poland.....	943
ELSA Portugal .....	1033
ELSA Republic of Macedonia .....	1119
ELSA Romania .....	1183
ELSA Russia.....	1255
ELSA Slovak Republic.....	1315
ELSA Slovenia .....	1401
ELSA Spain .....	1473
ELSA Sweden.....	1557
ELSA The Netherlands .....	1643
ELSA Ukraine .....	1697
ELSA United Kingdom .....	1781

ACADEMIC FRAMEWORK

ELSA for Children

“How does legislation protect child victims from sexual violence in the national legal framework in Europe?”

ACADEMIC FRAMEWORK – QUESTIONNAIRE

I INTRODUCTION

1 GENERAL

Aim: This introductory section will be a general overview on the status of the internal protection of the subjects of our research. It is very important that you give official credits of your statements, to grant the objectivity of this general part. When you will describe the implementation of international and European instruments, it's important that you cite name and number of the main legislative acts; in this way, readers will have precise references of the legal basis that sustain also the following answers.

Equal Rights

- i. Are there discrimination problems regarding sex, race, colour, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, association with a national minority, property, birth, sexual orientation, state of health, disability or other status of men and women? Please quote official reports from National or International Institutions, reports from the main NGOs that are active in the country and/or Journalistic inquiries.

Family Protection

- ii. What is the definition given to the term “family” in your national legislation or Constitution? What is the status of marriage? What is the average marital age of the population? Please quote official reports/statistics from National or International Institutions or official statistics from Private Institutions or NGOs.

Child Protection

- iii. What is the general status of children within the respective States' cultural and historical background? What is the general approach to children rights issues in the respective state? Is there a general concern regarding children/children rights? Were there/are there any violations that has been caught the eye of the media or the legislators?
- iv. International obligations: What is the relevant legislation regarding the implementation of international treaties? What is the relationship between State law and international treaties (dualistic or monalistic approach)? What is the date of ratification of United Nations Convention on Rights of the Child? Did the State make any reservations to the Convention? What is the general status of implementation?
- v. European Obligations: If the State is an EU Member, what is the general implementation process of the Directive 2011/92/EU of the European Parliament and the European Council of 13 December 2011? Please cite the internal legal instruments of the implementation.

2 THE LANZAROTE CONVENTION

Aim: To give general overview on the implementation of this legal instrument in the internal protection of this subjects. Answers should be precise and detailed, as required before, to grants objectivity.

- vi. When did the State ratify the European Convention on Human Rights?
- vii. Is the state a party to the Lanzarote Convention? Date of signature and ratification? Did the country make any reservations to the Convention/opt out of any parts?

If not ratified:

- viii. Does the State plan to ratify the convention? If so, what is the plan for the ratification and when can this ratification is being expected? If not, what are the obstacles hindering a ratification?

- ix. What would be the rank of the Lanzarote Convention under the State's national legal order when ratified?

If yes:

- x. What is the rank of the Lanzarote Convention under your national legal order? Is there a legislation regarding its implementation? If so, indicate the source and if available, an English translation.
- xi. Does this legislation address all the issues within the Lanzarote Convention?
- xii. If there is no legislation regarding implementation yet, is there a draft legislation? If so, indicate the source and if available, an English translation. What is the composition of the body working on the draft legislation? Can the State apply the Lanzarote Convention directly?
- xiii. If the State has made reservations to the treaty what are the underlying reasons? How does the State deal with the paragraphs that have been reserved? What is the complementary legislation?

II NATIONAL LEGISLATION

1 GENERAL PRINCIPLES OF THE JURISDICTION

Aim: This section is important to frame the juridical system of the Country that is the object of the research. It's important to understand how the legislation is implemented and how victims of violations can be protected.

- i. Please give us a brief history of the respective State and the governmental regime (Federal State/Central government?)
- ii. About the general approach of the National legislation to Human Rights, how does the State legislate Human Rights? Is there a "Bill of Rights" within the respective country or are human rights mentioned in the Constitution as fundamental principles? When was this Constitution/Bill of Rights created? Are there any specific provisions regarding Children Rights?
- iii. Are there specific judicial bodies which monitor the implementation of international and national human rights instruments (for example Constitutional Courts etc.)? Can individuals claim their constitutional rights directly (e.g. direct effect)? Is there a Constitutional Court? Is it possible to apply individually? If not, how can the individuals claim their constitutional rights in case of violation? Is there a system of hierarchy or other jurisdictions to ask before being able to go before Constitutional/Supreme Court? Please, briefly describe the application process.

- iv. Is there a Criminal Supreme Court? Please, briefly describe the criminal procedure.
- v. What is the age of criminal liability? Are there any statistics available regarding children prisoners?

2 SUBSTANTIVE CRIMINAL LAW

Aim: In this section the research starts to explore national peculiarities. Researchers are asked to analyze the protection provided by criminal law about sexual abuse, child prostitution, child pornography, corruption of children, solicitation of children for sexual purposes.

2.1 Sexual Abuse

- i. How does the national legislation define the term “sexual activities”? Is it to be applied broadly or narrowly?
- ii. Does the law define and interpret the word “intentionally”? What is the criminal liability of an internationally committed crime of sexual abuse?
- iii. What is the legal age for engaging in sexual activities? How are consensual sexual activities between minors regulated?
- iv. How is the use of force, taking advantage of disability or threat regulated in regards to sexual offences against children?
- v. How is the crime of “incest” regulated?
- vi. Are there any specific provisions regulating offenders who take advantage of school and educational settings, care and justice institutions, the work-place and the community?

2.2 Child Prostitution

- vii. Is the State a party to the Council of Europe Convention on Action against Human Trafficking? If yes, what is the date of ratification and signature? If not, is the State planning to ratify the Convention?
- viii. How does national legislation define “child prostitution”? Is it compatible with the definition in Article 19(2) of the Lanzarote Convention? Please comment.

- ix. Does national legislation criminalize both the recruiter (the person that coordinates the business of child prostitution) and the user (the person that pays to conduct sexual activities with children)?

2.3 Child Pornography

Child Pornography in General:

- x. Is the State party to the Council of Europe Convention on Cybercrime? If yes, what is the date of ratification and signature? If not, is the State planning to ratify?
- xi. How does the national legislation define “child pornography”? Is it compatible with the definition in Article 20(2) of the Lanzarote Convention? Please comment.
- xii. To whom does the State attribute the criminal liability to? Is it compatible with the Article 20(1.a) to (1.f)?
- xiii. What is the control mechanism for pornographic materials? If the state is a party to the Lanzarote Convention, did the state use the reservation right that has been given to them in the Lanzarote Convention Article 20(3) and 20(4)?

Participation of a Child in Pornographic Performances:

- xiv. Does the State criminalize intentional conduct of making a child participate in pornographic performances? Does the State highlight and differentiate between recruitment and coercion? What is the State’s approach to the attendance of pornographic performances involving the participation of children? If the State is a party to the Lanzarote Convention, did the state use the reservation right stated in Article 21(2)?

2.4 Corruption of Children

- xv. Does the State criminalize the intentional causing of a child to witness sexual abuse or sexual activities, without necessarily having to participate? How does the state define “causing”? Does it involve forcing, inducement, and promise?

2.5 Solicitation of Children for Sexual Purposes

- xvi. How does the State criminalize intentional sexual gratification through information and communication technologies by an adult? Does it specify that the perpetrator should also propose a meeting with the potential child victim and come to the meeting place in order to be accused of committing this kind of crime (a.k.a. grooming)?

- xvii. Does the State criminalize aiding or abetting and attempting to the activities that have been mentioned in the subsection a, b, c, d and e?

2.6 Corporate Liability

- xviii. Does the State hold legal/moral persons (entities) such as commercial companies and associations liable when an action has been performed on their behalf by a person in a position at their entity? Is there a difference between leading persons (persons in position of authority) and regular employees being held liable? If yes, please describe the differences.
- xix. What kind of liability does national legislation impose? Criminal, civil or administrative? Please explain.
- xx. Does national legislation exclude individual liability when there is a corporate liability?

2.7 Aggravating Circumstances

- xxi. Does the state accept any aggravating circumstances for the crimes that have been described above? (e.g. when the offence damaged physical health of the child) Please, write down these circumstances and explain.

2.8 Sanctions and Measures

- xxii. How does the state sanction the above mentioned crimes? Is there a penalty including deprivation of liberty? How does the state legislate extradition?
- xxiii. Do you consider the sanctions effective, proportionate and dissuasive? Please comment.
- xxiv. How does the state sanction the legal persons/moral entities? What kind of measures does it include?
- xxv. Does the state legislate seizure and confiscation of materials, instruments... etc. used for committing the crime? Does the state protect bona fide third parties? Is there allocation of a special fund for financing prevention or intervention programmes in which these properties confiscated allocated?

- xxvi. When the crime has been committed within the family or within the close environment of the child, how does the state react?

3 CRIMINAL PROCEDURE

Aim: After the analysis of the protection framed by criminal law, in this section researchers are asked to explain if national rules of criminal procedure take into consideration the particular needs and situation of the child.

3.1 Investigation

- i. How is the principle of the “best interests of the child” applied during investigation of a crime as mentioned above? Is there a protective approach to the victims? What kind of measures has been taken? Is the victim offered protection during the court proceedings? (such as appointing special representatives) If so, please indicate what kind of protective measures have been taken.
- ii. Are there any special units for investigating the crimes mentioned above within the legal force? Are they authorised to carry out covert operations? Do they investigate and analyse child pornography materials?
- iii. Is it required that the crime is reported in order to be investigated? Do the proceedings go on even in case of withdrawal from the statements?
- iv. How long is the statute of limitation? When does it start? Can it be suspended?
- v. How does the national legislation proceed when the age of the victim is not certain?
- vi. Who is responsible for recording and storing data for convicted offenders? Who do they relate to? Can and do these authorities transmit their data to other competent authorities in other states? Do the authorities respect protection of personal data rules?

3.2 Complaint Procedure

- vii. How does the complaint procedure work in case of violations of Substantive Criminal Law? Are children allowed to present their individual complaint? What are the criteria for Communication to be accepted for examinations (e.g. written/oral)?

- viii. What are the rules about legal representation of children, especially in the case of complaints against their parents? What are the rules of participation of minors in trials? (Protection of their names, prohibition of media etc.)

4 COMPLEMENTARY MEASURES

Aim: In every system complementary measures have an important role in terms of prevention, education and recovery. This is the area where National Institution has more freedom of movement, because they are free to choose the more suitable means to obtain the result, meaning the protection of children. This section is of great importance, because it will allow the exchange of experiences and “good offices” between systems.

Preventive Measures

- i. What kind of educational guarantees are given in relation to professionals working with children in the area of sexual exploitation and sexual abuse? What does the State do in order to assure these people are aware of these situations?
- ii. Does the State educate children regarding these issues? Does the State involve parents into this educative process?
- iii. Has the State created preventive intervention programmes for people who fear that they may commit the crime?

Protective Measures and Assistance to Victims

- iv. Are there any social programmes to provide support for victims? How exactly do these programmes work?
- v. Are there any help lines in service of the victims? Are these help lines aware of the confidentiality principles?
- vi. How does the State assist victims when it comes to recovery? Are the intervention programmes (if there are any) aware of the possibility that these child victims could have sexual behaviour problems in the future? Does the State make sure to get the consent of the persons or inform them thoroughly about the intervention programmes?

III NATIONAL POLICY REGARDING CHILDREN

Aim: In this section researchers will describe the commitment of active citizenship and NGOs in the protection of children.

- i. Is there a serious political discussion regarding the children in the respective country?
- ii. How has the awareness within the society regarding children's sexual abuse and exploitation been raised by committed NGOs and/or the State (use of official sources, documents, statistics...)?
- iii. If the statistics are available, how many reporting have been done regarding children's sexual exploitation in last the 5 years (e.g. police records, court records etc.)?
- iv. Are there any promotional campaigns in the State so far regarding these issues?
- v. How has the children's perspective represented in the law making process?
- vi. Who are the main national Non-Governmental Organisations working on the topic of children's rights? Does the State regulate (or not) their involvement in law making process?

IV OTHER

Are there any other legal or political issues that might be relevant in the respective country? Please keep in mind that ELSA is a non-political organisation, hence only political issues which might affect the data you have provided should have been mentioned here.

V CONCLUSION

Please briefly summarise the main points in your report.

NATIONAL REPORTS

ELSA BOSNIA AND HERZEGOVINA

I Introduction.....	21
1 General .....	21
2 The Lanzarote Convention.....	58
II National Legislation .....	61
1 General Principles Of The Jurisdiction .....	61
2 Substantive Criminal Law .....	79
2.1 Sexual Abuse.....	79
2.2 Child Postitution.....	86
2.3 Child Pornography .....	88
2.4 Corruption of Children.....	92
2.5 Solicitation of Children for Sexual Purposes.....	92
2.6 Corporate Liability.....	93
2.7 Aggravating Circumstances .....	96
2.8 Sanctions and Measures .....	97
3 Criminal Procedure .....	100
3.1 Investigation .....	100
3.2 Complaint Procedure .....	106
4 Complementary Measures.....	107
III National Policy Regarding Children.....	111
IV Other.....	117
V Conclusion.....	117

National Researchers:

Enida Šaćirovic- ELSA Sarajevo, Faculty of Law, University of Sarajevo
Adrejana Romic- ELSA Banja Luka, Faculty of Law, University of Banja Luka
Janja Marušić- ELSA Mostar, Faculty of Law, University of Mostar
Aldijana Alic- ELSA Sarajevo, Faculty of Law, University of Sarajevo
Sanja Slavnic- ELSA Banja Luka, Faculty of Law, University of Banja Luka
Tijana Ristic- ELSA Banja Luka, Faculty of Law, University of Banja Luka
Martina Zeljko- ELSA Mostar, Faculty of Law, University of Mostar
Merima Omerašević- ELSA Sarajevo, Faculty of Law, University of Sarajevo
Sandra Filipovic- ELSA Banja Luka, Faculty of Law, University of Banja Luka
Darko Dizdarevic- ELSA Sarajevo, Faculty of Law, University of Sarajevo

Academic Adviser

Džamna Duman- Faculty of Law, University of Sarajevo

National Coordinator

Asja Borić – ELSA Bosnia and Herzegovina, Faculty of Law, University of Sarajevo

I INTRODUCTION

1 GENERAL

i. Legislative framework: “All international instruments for the protection of human rights and fundamental liberties are embedded into the constitutional system of Bosnia and Herzegovina”<sup>1</sup> Therefore,

“except the explicit regulation that the rights and liberties specified by the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms together with the Protocols will be directly applied in Bosnia and Herzegovina and have the priority over other laws, the Constitution of Bosnia and Herzegovina contains Annex I with the additional 15 agreements on human rights.”<sup>2</sup>

Freedom from discrimination for all persons in Bosnia and Herzegovina is guaranteed by the Article II of the Constitution of Bosnia and Herzegovina and the international agreements specified in the Annex I of the Constitution:

“Non- Discrimination: The enjoyment of the rights and freedoms provided for in this Article or in the international agreements listed in Annex I to this Constitution shall be secured to all persons in Bosnia and Herzegovina without discrimination on any ground such as sex, race, color, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, association with a national minority property, birth or other status.”<sup>3</sup>

The constitutions of the two entities in Bosnia and Herzegovina also regulate the freedom from discrimination. The Constitution of Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina in its Chapter II: “Human rights” (A. General) in Article 2, paragraph d) determines the following:

“The Federation will ensure the application of the highest level of internationally recognized rights and freedoms provided in the documents listed in the Annex to the Constitution. In particular:

(1) All persons within the territory of the Federation shall enjoy the rights:

(...)

---

<sup>1</sup> Publication: “How to protect from discrimination? The application of the Law on the prohibition of discrimination in Bosnia and Herzegovina (BiH)”, Implemented by the Initiative and civil action (ICVA) in cooperation with “Rights for all BiH” and organizations of civil society in Bosnia and Herzegovina (“Kako se zaštititi od diskriminacije? Primjena Zakona o zabrani diskriminacije u Bosni i Hercegovini”; page 4 (Accessed from: www.rightforall.ba; 27th September 2012);

<sup>2</sup> “Analysis of the harmonization of the legislation of BiH with the Convention on the Rights of the Child”, Institution of Ombudsman for human rights of Bosnia & Herzegovina in cooperation with Save the Children Norway, Sarajevo, November 2009; page 166

<sup>3</sup> Article 2, Paragraph 4, Constitution of Bosnia and Herzegovina, (Accessed from: website of the Constitutional court of Bosnia and Herzegovina: www.ccbh.ba; 27th September 2012)

(d) To freedom from discrimination based on race, color, sex, language, religion or creed, political or other opinions, and national or social origin; (...)”<sup>4</sup>

The Constitution of Republika Srpska in its Chapter II: “Human rights and freedoms.” Article 10 determines the following:

“Citizens of the Republic shall be equal in their freedoms, rights and duties; they shall be equal before the law and they shall enjoy equal legal protection irrespective of their race, sex, language, national origin, religion, social origin, birth, education, property status, political and other beliefs, social status and other personal attributes.”<sup>5</sup>

Statute of the Brčko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina in its Chapter II: “Brčko district residents”, Article 13: “Rights and Obligations”, also envisages freedom from discrimination:

“Everyone is entitled to the enjoyment of all rights and freedoms guaranteed under the Constitution and laws of Bosnia and Herzegovina and laws of the District without discrimination of any kind. In particular, everyone has the right to access all public institutions and facilities in the District; to move and determine freely his/her place of residence, business or work in the entire territory of the District; and purchase and sell movables and real estates in accordance with the law (...)”<sup>6</sup>

Bosnia and Herzegovina is a signatory of the Stabilisation and Association Process Agreement to the EU, therefore making it mandatory for Bosnia and Herzegovina to harmonize its state legislature with the EU legislature, especially with the EU directives.

“Fundamentals for the protection from discrimination on the level of all EU member states as well as potential member states are established by EU directives while the practical application is left for the state legislature of each member state.”<sup>7</sup>

---

<sup>4</sup> Article 2, Constitution of Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina (FBiH), (“Official Gazette of FBiH”, No: 1/94, 21st July 1994.)

<sup>5</sup> Chapter 2, Article 10, Constitution of the Republika Srpska with amendments, (“Official Gazette of RS”, No. 21/92, 28/94, 8/96, 13/96, 15/96, 16/96, 21/96, 21/02, 31/02, 31/03, 98/03 i 115/05)

<sup>6</sup> Chapter 2, Article 13, Statute of the Brčko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina, (“Official gazette of BDBiH”, No: 1/00 i 24/05)

<sup>7</sup> Publication: “How to protect from discrimination? The application of the Law on the prohibition of discrimination in Bosnia and Herzegovina”, Implemented by the Initiative and civil action (ICVA) in cooperation with “Rights for all BiH” and organizations of civil society in Bosnia and Herzegovina (“Kako se zaštititi od diskriminacije? Primjena Zakona o zabrani diskriminacije u Bosni i Hercegovini”; page 2 (Accessed from: www.rightforall.ba; 27th September 2012);

Although freedom from discrimination on all accounts is not precisely named in the Constitution of Bosnia and Herzegovina and the constitutions of its entities and the Brcko District (e.g. freedom from discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation, health condition, disability etc.), these anti-discriminatory regulations have been subsequently introduced with the Law for the prohibition of discrimination in Bosnia and Herzegovina<sup>8</sup>, which came into effect in August 2009 after the initiative of the civil society in Bosnia and Herzegovina. Except the fact that the law specifies all the anti-discriminatory orders in one place more clearly and groups them together, as well as envisions harsh sanctions for disregardment of the anti-discriminatory orders, the real significance of this law is that it “created the framework for the realization of equal rights and opportunities for all persons in Bosnia and Herzegovina and organized a system of protection from discrimination”<sup>9</sup> through the institutions of the Ombudsman for human rights of Bosnia and Herzegovina and the Ministry for human rights and refugees of Bosnia and Herzegovina. Also, the Law for the equality of genders in Bosnia and Herzegovina<sup>10</sup> is also significant and it developed the anti-discriminatory orders regarding genders in a more detailed manner as well as the laws that protect the rights of national minorities in Bosnia and Herzegovina and its entities: Law for the protection of the rights of national minorities of Bosnia and Herzegovina<sup>11</sup>, Law for the protection of the rights of national minorities of Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina<sup>12</sup> and Law for the protection of the rights of national minorities of Republika Srpska<sup>13</sup>.

Therefore, “Prohibition of discrimination is contained in international treaties that are directly applicable in domestic judicial system, contained in European instruments that are directly applicable or acquire legal force in process of accession of Bosnia and Herzegovina to EU, contained in the Law on Prohibition of

<sup>8</sup> Law for the prohibition of discrimination in Bosnia and Herzegovina, (“Official Gazette of BiH”, No. 59/09)

<sup>9</sup> Publication: “How to protect from discrimination? The application of the Law on the prohibition of discrimination in Bosnia and Herzegovina”, Implemented by the Initiative and civil action (ICVA) in cooperation with “Rights for all BiH” and organizations of civil society in Bosnia and Herzegovina (“Kako se zaštititi od diskriminacije? Primjena Zakona o zabrani diskriminacije u Bosni i Hercegovini”; page 2 (Accessed from: www.rightforall.ba; 27th September 2012);

<sup>10</sup> Law for the equality of genders in Bosnia and Herzegovina – revised version, (“Official Gazette of BiH“, No. 32/10)

<sup>11</sup> Law for the protection of the rights of national minorities of Bosnia and Herzegovina, (“Official Gazette of BiH“, No. 12/03, 93/08)

<sup>12</sup> Law for the protection of the rights of national minorities of Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, (“Official Gazette of FBiH“, No. 56/08)

<sup>13</sup> Law for the protection of the rights of national minorities of Republika Srpska, (“Official Gazette of RS“, No. 2/05)

Discrimination in BiH, in the Constitution of BiH and other domestic regulations that are in conformity with above mentioned Law. “<sup>14</sup>

Regardless of the highly developed system of legislative and institutional protection, as well as the system of application of international documents and treaties, the reports of national and international institutions and NGOs have registered the presence of problems of discrimination within the population of Bosnia and Herzegovina.

Situation in practice: “Open Society Fund Bosnia and Herzegovina” has conducted a public opinion poll regarding the perceptions of discrimination as well as experiences from those who were affected by discrimination. During the poll, the legal definitions of discriminations were read out to the surveyed persons and they were asked to take them into account when responding to the questionnaire. The result of this survey showed that

“the highest percentage of examinees (86.3%) believes that discrimination is a problem that is currently present in Bosnia & Herzegovina. Most of the examinees (59.8%) believe that discrimination is a significant problem that is particularly present in this country.”<sup>15</sup>

The research of the Ombudsman for human rights of Bosnia and Herzegovina shows that the population of Bosnia and Herzegovina is very poorly informed about the possibilities of addressing the Ombudsman for help as well as the possibility of finding protection for their rights within the judicial system, evident in the fact that

“although more than two years have passed from the adoption of the Law, only one judicial ruling in effect has been given for the case of discrimination, that one being from the Cantonal court in Mostar (Number: P 58 0 P 056658 09 P), as well as one ruling that is still not in effect given by the Municipal court in Livno (Number: 68 0 P 017561 11 P).”<sup>16</sup>

With the aim of improvement of the civil awareness of the different aspects of discrimination and the different ways of fighting against it,

---

<sup>14</sup> “Annual report on occurrences of discrimination in Bosnia and Herzegovina for 2011”, Institution of ombudsman for human rights of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Banja Luka, February 2012 ; accessed from: www.ombudsmen.gov.ba on 2nd October 2012

<sup>15</sup> “Report on the results on the public poll of the perception and experiences of discrimination” (“Izvještaj o rezultatima ispitivanja javnog mnijenja o percepciji i iskustvu diskriminacije”), Open Society Fund Bosnia and Herzegovina, page 16; accessed from: www.diskriminacija.ba on 2nd October 2012.

<sup>16</sup> “Annual report on occurrences of discrimination in Bosnia and Herzegovina for 2011”, Institution of ombudsman for human rights of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Banja Luka, February 2012 ; accessed from: www.ombudsmen.gov.ba on 2nd October 2012

“(...) web portal for public information on various aspects of discrimination and protective mechanisms in BiH is constructed and running, with support of organization Civil Rights Defenders a team of 13 BiH young journalists is created, educated to report discrimination, and a guide for journalist on how to report about this problem is in preparation.”<sup>17</sup>

The Institution of Ombudsman for human rights in Bosnia and Herzegovina has registered a number of cases of complaints in the past few years, with most of them concerning discrimination on a national basis and mobbing, while there wasn't a single case of complaints regarding racism or xenophobia what is

“a result of specific historic heritage and the fact that discrimination is directed primarily to BiH constituent peoples members in areas where they are minority”<sup>18</sup>.

The Institution has not registered complaints of unequal treatment based on different sexual orientation

“which could be attributed to their fear from being exposed to judgmental environment and to traditional intolerance toward this category of citizens in addition to the influence of religious organizations.”<sup>19</sup>

Regarding the frequent complaints on the national basis and the basis of mobbing, the reports of the Institution of Ombudsman for human rights of Bosnia and Herzegovina are showing the following information:

“Institution of Human Rights Ombudsman in 2011 received 191 complaints about discrimination. Apart complaints from 2011 the Department transferred 81 cases from 2010 and 1 case from 2009 so total of complaints dealt with by the Department in 2011 was 273 cases. In reporting period the Department resolved 88 cases from 2011 and 40 from 2010, deciding to close (102) or issuing recommendation (26), or through restitution of the right during the time of investigation. It is necessary to mention that a certain number of cases resolved during investigation was resolved through mediation, encouraging friendly outcome or mediation between dispute parties and there were ways that responsible organ correct its action following first addressing by the Ombudsman.(...) In 2009 main number of complaints was related to discrimination based on ethnic ground (53), and in 2010 significant decrease of such complaints occurred (14), and at the same time number of complaints regarding mobbing increased (32). In 2011 trend of increasing of mobbing

---

<sup>17</sup> Ibid, page 10

<sup>18</sup> Ibid, page 27

<sup>19</sup> Ibid, page 27

complaints continued (41), and out of total of (43) in only a minor number of cases violation of the right was determined (4).“<sup>20</sup>

Looking at the rights of children and the cases of child discrimination, the Institution of Ombudsman for human rights in Bosnia and Herzegovina has found that:

“especially endangered and vulnerable in BIH are children of refugees and displaced persons, returnees, national minorities (particularly Roma children), children with special needs/impairments in their psycho-physical development and children living in rural areas.“<sup>21</sup>

In their Annual report on occurrences of discrimination in Bosnia and Herzegovina for 2011, the Institution of Ombudsman for human rights in Bosnia and Herzegovina also touched the topic of the Ministry of human rights and refugees of Bosnia and Herzegovina regarding the application of the Law for the prohibition of discrimination in Bosnia and Herzegovina:

“Ombudspersons state that this Ministry has not established a central database to comprise cases of discrimination, nor it issued a rulebook on methods of collection of cases involving discrimination within the legal deadline of 90 days“<sup>22</sup>,

The Ministry was obligated to do that on the basis of Article 8 of the Law for the prohibition of discrimination in Bosnia and Herzegovina.

Regarding the state of discrimination in Bosnia and Herzegovina, arguments can be taken from the Report on the status of human rights in Bosnia and Herzegovina for 2011 of the Helsinki Committee for Human Rights of Bosnia and Herzegovina. The Report shows cases of discrimination in Bosnia and Herzegovina as well as discriminatory legal provisions including cases of negligence of relevant institutions tasked with anti-discriminatory actions.

“Principles of equality and non-discrimination are an integral part of all declarations on human rights. Non-discrimination itself is a human right and also the most important element of all other human rights

---

<sup>20</sup> “Annual report on occurrences of discrimination in Bosnia and Herzegovina for 2011“, Institution of ombudsman for human rights of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Banja Luka, February 2012, page 11-12 ; accessed from: www.ombudsmen.gov.ba on 2nd October 2012

<sup>21</sup> “Alternative report on the implementation of UN Convention on the Rights of the Child for period 01.06.2009 - end of 2011.“; Institution of ombudsman for human rights of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Banja Luka, page 6, accessed from: www.ombudsmen.gov.ba on 2nd October 2012

<sup>22</sup> “Annual report on occurrences of discrimination in Bosnia and Herzegovina for 2011“, Institution of ombudsman for human rights of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Banja Luka, February 2012, page 25; accessed from: www.ombudsmen.gov.ba on 2nd October 2012

enshrined in the international documents which have been ratified by BiH. By the passage of the Law on Discrimination Prohibition in BiH (came into effect in 2009) yet another step forward has been made in legal protection of citizens who are exposed to the discrimination (the Law stipulates sanctions against those who practise discrimination).

Unfortunately, we have to note that all mentioned protection instruments are still nothing but a dead letter, thus even this year can be considered lost in terms of protection of citizens from discrimination and its suppression.

For example, discriminatory provisions haven't been deleted from the BiH Constitution, even the amendments to the BiH Constitution have not been harmonized which would refer to implementation of the Judgment of the Court in Strasbourg mentioned in the Introduction of this report. The discriminatory provisions against some categories of the population such as the disabled, unemployed, returnees, minorities, etc., have not been deleted from the entity laws. On the contrary, in some cases (in the Federation of BiH) some amendments to the law, aimed at gaining political points, deepened the existing differences between military war invalids and civil war victims, on one hand, and disabled persons whose disability was caused by illness, the so-called non-war invalids, on the other. Additional difference between them was made by including the disability allowances of the latter under Article 5 of the Law on Mode for Implementation of Savings in the Federation, which decreased their already low disability allowances by 10 %.

The Law on Prohibition of Discrimination in BiH stipulated that all laws and general provisions must be harmonized with it within one year from its passage. This has not been done. The laws have not been harmonized even between entities in some sectors, in particular in the sector of social and health protection.

Also other provisions of the Law are not implemented. The Ministry for Human Rights and Refugees in BiH, authorized to collect information about incidents and extent of the discrimination and to submit annual report thereon to the Council of Ministers, and as required, special reports proposing measures for prevention and suppression of the discrimination incidents, has not even produced a rule book on data collection. The deadline for its passage was - 90 days from the day when the Law entered into force. The rule book is a precondition for any further activity. Truly, the Ministry has drafted the text and non-governmental organizations and representatives of the bodies required to supply the information were invited to debate. The rule book has not been adopted for the objections made to the text.

The Law on Prohibition of Discrimination defined the Ombudsperson for Human Rights in BiH as a central institution for protection from discrimination, mandating it, within its powers, among other things, to collect and analyze statistics about discrimination cases, to submit annual report thereon, as well as extraordinary reports as required about incidents of discrimination, to make them public, to increase awareness of issues related to racism and racial discrimination, and to use them within its powers and on its own accord, unlike to date, exclusively upon individual complaints.

Based on the 2009 and 2010 annual reports, the work of this institution by far does not indicate that it has coped adequately with this extremely important mission. It has processed a small number of cases (as average around 120 complaints per year). It has completed a half of that number, but there is no information as to how those complaints were resolved, that is, whether or not the discrimination was established in those cases, and if recommendations were given as to how to stop it. Also, by far a single extraordinary report has not been submitted to legislative authorities about discrimination incidents, and the public has not been informed about them. The experiences of the Helsinki Committee for Human Rights in BiH, which 2011 worked, among other things, also on promotion of the Law on Prohibition of Discrimination have showed that most of the citizens do not even know that the Law exists, and they do not have any knowledge about authorities given to the Ombudspersons, which is the reason why so few complaints were addressed to this institution.

All this leads to the conclusion that a central institution for protection from discrimination is still not competent to perform that function. Perhaps it is a result of their being understaffed in general, in particular the staff with required experience and expertise. It is surely a result of non-compliance with provisions of the mentioned Law in the part which stipulates that the Ombudspersons in BiH should have been allocated special budget funds for the work in protection from discrimination.

The citizens complaining about discrimination (about unlawful differentiation and forbidden unequal treatment) and seek protection either from the Helsinki Committee in BiH, from other non-governmental organizations or before relevant courts (which is still an exception in the Law application), mainly suggests that discrimination most frequently appears in the following forms:

sexual and other physical or non-physical harassment-the mobbing;

giving precedence in the process of employment to the ethnic majority against the minority group;

in the employment process against women, young and ethnic minorities, especially Roma people;

while exercising various rights – specially property rights for political affiliation, in the education system by imposing limitations to children who belong to communities who are ethnic and religious minority or with parents of different political affiliation. They are not provided with education in their own religion or any other alternative subject, instead of religious education of the majority community.

through segregation in the education system where rights on one group of children are being violated deliberately, - always minority groups, by isolation them from the children who belong to ethnic “majority” groups by conducting teaching in mono-ethnic schools or in the so called “two-schools under one roof", which is common occurrence in the Federation of BiH, but is being spread in Republika Srpska. The separation has reached the level of absurd in the cases where children travel also by separate buses to such schools (Bosniaks in their buses and Croats in theirs- the Jajce case).

preventing the disabled in wheelchairs to access most of the public places even those where their rights are decided, such as the legislative authorities as well as most of executive authorities which have not removed architectural barriers and adapted entrances to their needs, by exclusion of gender and ethnic minorities to use some restaurants, limitation in all rights to the same extent in the health and social care sector of all those who are entitled to the rights, (childbed women who receive different allowances in different cantons in the Federation of BiH, particularly in relation to childbed women from RS who receive full allowances, and others only periodic ones or one-off payments), the discrimination occurs also against the disabled persons whose disability allowances are not equal with respect to the cause of disability and rates for the same needs.

The mentioned and other types of discrimination have not been adequately responded to, and the discriminated persons most frequently remain with no protection. The number of reported cases of discrimination does not reflect the real state of play. There are multiple reasons for that as follows:

- Majority of citizens are not aware of the existence of the Law against Discrimination, thus they cannot recognize it or seek the protection from it.
- All official bodies are not familiarized with the Law, particularly those in local communities, who are supposed to provide protection to the citizens.
- The persons discriminated against hardly choose to use various protection instruments for fear of losing their jobs, isolation and other bad consequences in the proceedings or after they are reinstated in the form of victimization.
- A small number of pending court proceedings suggest that citizens do not trust courts either for the length of proceedings conducted before them or for the fact that it is impossible to execute judgments ruled in their favor.
- Lawyers or some non-governmental organizations who prepare complaints about discrimination are not sufficiently professionally competent in filing discrimination claims, which significantly limits judges to act upon such claims, particularly when it is noted that they themselves are not sufficiently educated and sensibilized to recognize and protect the persons who have been exposed to discrimination.

It can be concluded from the aforementioned that the Law against Discrimination in BiH although it was passed back in 2009 is not sufficiently applied, particularly in small local communities. It requires that individuals and vulnerable groups be encouraged to recognize and report discrimination and strengthening the institutions responsible for application of the Law in particular the non-governmental organizations in order for them to be competent and independent enough to deal with the incidents of collective and individual types of discrimination. All this aimed at efficient protection of citizens in BiH from discrimination as the main instigator of various types of human rights violations.’<sup>23</sup>

The Helsinki Committee for Human Rights of Bosnia and Herzegovina's report was made on the basis of complaints of the citizens of the Bosnia and Herzegovina by their Legal Aid Office. The Helsinki Committee for Human Rights of Bosnia and Herzegovina paid attention to the rights of children emphasizing the importance of the Convention of the rights of children in the transition society of Bosnia and Herzegovina. One case of discrimination of the rights of children was registered by the Legal Aid Office of The Helsinki Committee for Human Rights of Bosnia and Herzegovina in 2011 regarding the religious education in schools.

‘The problems in application of the Law on Primary and Secondary Education have existed in the territory of the entire Federation of BiH since it was passed. It was in 2011 when the problems were seriously addressed when the Minister of Education of Sarajevo Canton raised the issue of discrimination which occurred in the religious education at schools. Namely, in a number of schools only the children who belonged to the majority people had the subject of religious education and got marks for it which was calculated in the average mark. Other children who belong to other religions or the children whose parents stated that they did not wish their children to be trained in this course, were not provided for an alternative subject in this field to get marks for it, whereby they were brought into unequal position.

The Decision of the Minister, supported by the HCBiH, provoked sharp reactions of the religious officials who interpreted the decision to remove discrimination in application of the Law as an attempt to remove the religious education as a subject from the curricula.

The amendments to the Law in the Sarajevo Canton has provided for an alternative subject for the children who do not attend the religious education. Unfortunately the problem of discrimination of children in other cantons of the Federation BiH remained which is illustrated through the following example: a child of a Serb returnee and of the Orthodox religion attends school in N. The religious education classes are organized only for the children who wish to learn about the Catholic religion. In spite of the request of parents the school has not provided the religious education to the minority student justifying that with “absence of real possibilities to do so”<sup>24</sup>

---

<sup>23</sup> “Report on the status of human rights in Bosnia and Herzegovina for 2011”, Helsinki Committee for Human Rights of Bosnia and Herzegovina, pages 4-7, accessed from: www.bh-hchr.org on 10th October 2012

The problem of child discrimination regarding the religious education in schools was also registered by the Open Society Fund Bosnia and Herzegovina in one of their publications:

“The reason for criticism of religious education is the claim that it is discriminatory towards minorities. That problem is evident in schools where religious education is not offered to students of all religions. The reasons for that kind of behaviour are different but the most often is the number of students from one religious group that it is too small or the lack of adequate staff in that area. That surely has far-fetching consequences and potentially harms the rights of minorities, both in the eyes of the national laws as well in the eyes of international law. Groups that are affected the most are the children of returnees and atheists and those who reject to be part of religious education for some other reason. A very small number of schools has all the conditions to organize alternative classes. The absence of alternative classes is an additional pressure on students and parents to pick the religious education offered to them.”<sup>25</sup>

An additional disadvantage is the fact that there is not Ministry of Education at the State level in Bosnia and Herzegovina, which will regulate the education system. The education is legally regulated primarily at the level of the entity at the moment. However, a significant shift is evident when it comes to the fact that it was launched an initiative called “The Culture of Religion” in 2000, which involves the creation of a school subject that teaches students about the four major religions practiced in Bosnia and Herzegovina. Specifically, representatives of ministries have agreed on the implementation of this initiative as a form of reforms in the education system, which aims to eliminate segregation in schools and which is supported by the OSCE, Goethe Institute and the NGO "Sarajevo Open Centre."

“The Culture of Religions initiative in Bosnia and Herzegovina has designed a school subject that teaches students about the four major religions practiced in Bosnia and Herzegovina. Different than the traditional,

---

<sup>24</sup> “Report for 2011 of the Legal Aid Office”, Helsinki Committee for Human Rights of Bosnia and Herzegovina, pages 16-17, accessed from: www.bh-hchr.org on 10th October 2012

<sup>25</sup> A. Alibašić, “Religious education in public schools in Bosnia and Herzegovina: Towards a model that supports coexistence and mutual understanding”, publication “Religion and education in an open society” (“Vjersko obrazovanje u javnim školama u Bosni i Hercegovini: Ka modelu koji podržava suživot i uzajamno razumijevanje”, publication: “Religija i školovanje u otvorenom društvu”), Open Fund Society of Bosnia and Herzegovina, September 2009, Sarajevo, page 18

confessional religious classes which provide a doctrinal point of view, the Culture of Religions course teaches all students to explore the four religions, with an emphasis on their history, culture and society.<sup>26</sup>

The Ombudsman for Human Rights in Bosnia and Herzegovina and Save the Children Norway say the following:

“The competent authorities of Bosnia and Herzegovina have to take urgent measures to harmonize legislation using the principle of non-discrimination with the criterium that the lower levels of government cannot prescribe a smaller scope of rights than those guaranteed by the laws of the higher instances. With the aim of building legal security it is necessary to harmonize legislation within the legal deadlines (e.g. education) and in a terminological sense it should be necessary to create revised versions of the laws that are changing together with implementing acts.”<sup>27</sup>

Also, the newest recommendations from Child Rights Committee are declaring that Bosnia and Herzegovina should immediately stop with the segregative practice in the schools:

“Immediately end the segregation of children in schools on the basis of ethnicity by discontinuing the policy of so-called “two-schools-under-one-roof” and mono-ethnic schools, and in doing so ensure adequate support measures and properly trained education personnel to facilitate ethnic diversity and integration in schools.”<sup>28</sup>

According to the European Court of Human Rights Verdict<sup>29</sup> “Sejdic and Finci v. Bosnia and Herzegovina”<sup>30</sup> from 2009, some of the regulations of the Bosnian Constitution and the constitutions of its entities are discriminatory to minorities in Bosnia and Herzegovina. The Bosnian Constitution, in its Preamble, makes a distinction between two categories of citizens: the so-called “constituent peoples” (Bosniacs, Croats and Serbs) and “others” (Jews, Roma and other national minorities together with those who do not declare affiliation with any ethnic group). The House of Peoples of the Parliamentary Assembly (the second chamber) and the Presidency are composed only of persons belonging to the three constituent peoples, so the persons belonging to “others” are not able to stand for election

---

<sup>26</sup> Sabina Ćudić, “Different Religions under One Roof: Towards Inclusive Religious Education in Bosnia and Herzegovina, publication “Religion and education in an open society”, Open Fund Society of Bosnia & Herzegovina, September 2009, Sarajevo, page 111

<sup>27</sup> “Analysis of the harmonization of the legislation of BiH with the Convention on the Rights of the Child“, Institution of Ombudsman for human rights of Bosnia & Herzegovina in cooperation with Save the Children Norway, Sarajevo, November 2009; page 32

<sup>28</sup> Committee on the Rights of the Child, Sixty - first session, 17 September – 5 October 2012, Consideration of reports submitted by States parties under article 44 of the Convention, Concluding observations: Bosnia and Herzegovina, CRC/C/BIH/CO/2-4, 5th October 2012

<sup>29</sup> For more information about this Verdict: http://www.coe.org.rs/eng/news\_sr\_eng/?conid=1545

<sup>30</sup> Application nos. 27996/06 and 34836/06

to the Presidency and the House of Peoples of the Parliamentary Assembly. The Court's final verdict declares that those regulations represent violation of Article 14 (prohibition of discrimination) of the European Convention on Human Rights taken together with Article 3 of Protocol No. 1 (right to free elections), and Violation of Article 1 of Protocol No. 12 (general prohibition of discrimination) to the Convention.

So Bosnia and Herzegovina needs to make constitutional changes in order of implementing this Verdict and ensuring the equal human right to all citizens of Bosnia and Herzegovina, which is one of the main state's duties in the process of EU integration.

ii. According to the Family law of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina a family represents:

“Article 1

A family is a living union of parents and children as well as other cognates, relatives through marriage, adopters, adoptees and persons from from a domestic partnership if they are living in a common household.”<sup>61</sup>

Law on protection from domestic violence of Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina gives a different definition of a family:

“Article 5 – Legal definition of a family

A family, within the means of this law, is made up from:

marital and extramarital partners;

relatives living together: cognates and relatives from a complete adoption in a straight line without limitations, laterally together with fourth level of kinship; adopter and adoptee from incomplete adoption; relatives through marriage together with second level;

guarding and protégé, foster parent and foster child;

ex-marital and ex-extramarital partners.

Relationships between the members of a family are based on humane principles which imply mutual respect, support, and commitment to maintenance of harmonious relations with the development and demonstration of best traits taking into special account the protection of children, respect for gender equality and voluntary entry into marriage and extramarital union. In their mutual relations, members of a family will respect the rights,

---

<sup>61</sup> Article 1, Family law of Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, (“Official Gazette of FBiH“, No. 35/05 i 41/05)

liberties and safety of other members of the family in that way so they are not limiting them, making it impossible for them or stopping them in the exercise of their rights and liberties that the members of that family have within the current regulations. A member of a family will abstain from harming the physical or psychological integrity of another member of the family, injury and discrimination on the basis of gender and age and from putting that person into a state of subordination in any way.<sup>62</sup>

According to the Family law of Republika Srpska, the definition of a family is as following:

"Article 2

A family, within the scope of this law, is a living union of parents, children and other relatives"<sup>63</sup>

Law on protection from domestic violence of Republika Srpska in its Chapter II ("Definition of a family and violence in family") offers a different definition of that term:

"Article 5

A family, within the scope of this law, is a living union of parents, children and its other members.

Within the scope of this law a family is consisted of:

spouses in a marital or extramarital union their children (common or from previous unions)

ex-marital and ex-extramarital spouses and their children

adopter and adoptee

guardian parent and ward, as well as other persons that are living or used to live in a family union parents of current and ex-spouses;

step-father and step-mother.<sup>64</sup>

The Child Protection Law of Republika Srpska regulates another definition of family:

"Article 6

---

<sup>32</sup> Article 5, Law for the protection from domestic violence of Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, ("Official Gazette of BiH", No. 22/05);

<sup>33</sup> Article 2, Family law of the Republika Srpska, ("Official Gazette of RS", No. 54702, 41/ 08)

<sup>34</sup> Article 5, Law for the protection from domestic violence of Republika Srpska, , („Official Gazette of RS“, No. 118/05, 17/08)

- (1) The family, in terms of this law, consists of: the spouse or common-law spouse, children (legitimate, illegitimate, adopted and foster children and children placed under guardianship and foster child), and relatives in the direct line, and lateral to the second degree of consanguinity, if they live in the same household.*
- (2) Notwithstanding paragraph 1 this Article, in determining the order of birth and number of children in the family, the children who do not live in it are included as well.*
- (3) In the total number of children in the family, by birth order, only live births are included.*
- (4) For children placed under guardianship and foster child, birth order is determined by the number of children, guardian and nurturer who live with them in the same household.*
- (5) Birth order and number of children of divorced or common law marriage is determined by the fact to whom of the parents children are entrusted by the judgment on divorce or regarding cohabitation; in which family children live in.* <sup>35</sup>

According to the Family Law of Brčko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina, a family is defined as following:

“Article 2 - Family

A family, within the scope of this law, is a living union of parents and children and other relatives.

Family relationships are based on:

- a) the protection of family life;*
  - b) equality, mutual support and respect of family members;*
  - c) obligation of parents to provide protection of interests and welfare of a child and their responsibility in raising, upbringing and education of a child;*
  - d) obligations of Brčko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina to secure the protection of a family, mother and child in accordance with the international conventions from these areas;*
  - e) providing foster care to children without parental care and the protection of adults that are not capable of caring for themselves, their rights, interests and property.*
- (3) Department of health and other services – Sub-department for social protection as a guardianship authority (hereinafter: Guardianship authority) is responsible for expert help and protection of rights and* interests of a child and other members of the family, for dispute resolution between the members of a family as well in all cases of damaged relationships."<sup>36</sup>

---

<sup>35</sup> Article 6, Child Protection Law of the Republic of Srpska, („Official Gazette of RS“, No. 4/02, 17/08, 1/09)

Child Protection Law of the Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina regulates another definition of family:

"Article 3

Family in term of this law is a living community of parents and children and other relatives. Family consists of blood, adoptive-laws and relatives, regardless of their degree of kinship."<sup>37</sup>

When looking at legal formulations of marriage and its status in the family legislation in Bosnia and Herzegovina, Family law of Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina states the following:

"Article 7

(1) Marriage is contracted by a woman and a man with their consent in front of a registrar.

(2) A registrar is a civil servant.

(3) Marriage partners can marry in front of a religious official after contracting a marriage in front of a registrar.

Article 8

(1) For the marriage to be valid it is necessary: a) that future marriage partners are of different sexes b) that future marriage partners have declared consent for their marriage c) that the consent is given in front of a registrar.

Article 10

(1) Marriage can not be contracted by a person that is already married.

Article 15

(1) Marriage can not be contracted by a person that has not reached the age of 18.

(2) Extraordinarily, a court can allow the contracting of a marriage in a contentious procedure to a person that has reached the age of 16 if it finds that there are valid reasons that the person in question is physically

---

<sup>36</sup> Article 2, Family Law of Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina, („Official Gazette of RS“, No. broj 3/07)

<sup>37</sup> Article 3, Child Protection Law of Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina, („Official Gazette of BDBIH“, No. 01/03, 4/04, 21/05, 19/07, 2/08)

and mentally able to perform the rights and duties arising from marriage and that the marriage is in its best interest.<sup>38</sup>

Therefore, based on the Family law of Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, citizens can contract a marriage in front of a religious official after contracting a marriage in front of a registrar.

“Marriage partners that want to contract a marriage in front of a religious official after entering into marriage in front of a registrar are obliged to submit their extract from the register of marriages. The possibility for married partners to contract a religious marriage is a new addition to the Family law (Article 29). The earlier version of the law prescribed the civil marriage as the mandatory form while the religious version was not allowed. However, despite the ban, religious communities and religious officials had contracted such marriages. In order to avoid this de facto illegitimate practice, the new law has introduced the possibility of contracting a religious marriage but after a civil procedure.”<sup>39</sup>

The status of marriage in the Family law of Republika Srpska is regulated as following:

“Article 4

(1) Marriage is a legally regulated unity of life of a woman and man.

(2) Marriage is based on a free will decision of a woman and a man to contract a marriage based on the equality of marriage partners, mutual respect and mutual help.<sup>40</sup>

Therefore, according to the Family law of Republika Srpska, the status of a civil marriage is legally definite but the status of a religious marriage is not directly defined by the law itself but rather through the interpretation of the principles of family law:

“The principles of family law are: principle of institutionality, principle of laity, principle of the freedom of acceptance, principle of monogamy, principle of the equality of married partners, principle of completeness and durability of marriage, principle of severability of marriage. With these principles, basic rules for marriage and married union are defined. The principle of laity in marriage – as a legal entity marriage can be under the obligatory regime of the church or civil law. In our society, marriage is, as a family itself, defined by legal norms of the civil law. That is why this principle is expressing the idea of the separation of the church from

---

<sup>38</sup> Articles 7, 8, 10, 15, Family law of Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Part 2, („Official Gazette of FBiH“, No. 35/05 i 41/05)

<sup>39</sup> Nerimana Traljić, Suzana Bubić, „Marital law“, Faculty of Law, University of Sarajevo, Sarajevo, 2007, page 44

<sup>40</sup> Article 4, Family law of Republika Srpska, („Official Gazette of RS“, No. 54702, 41/08)

the state and the exclusive right of the state to independently regulate the relationships in a marriage since the state has taken over the rights from church the right to introduce regulations and it transferred the right to contract a marriage into the hands of civil institutions as well as the ability to solve all relations and disputes arising from the marriage itself. The most important consequence of the civility of the marriage is the introduction of the obligatory form of a civil marriage so some of our authors are referring to it as the principle of the mandatory form of a civil marriage (Ajžner, Mitić). However, this principle is much wider. Any form of influence and interference of religious organizations in the matter of family law is removed. Marriage bans based on religious bans are also removed. With this principle the freedom of conscience and religious thought is not harmed. Those persons, that want to enter into a marriage according to religious regulations, can do so in front of the religious official of their church (but only after contracting their marriage in front of a competent civil authority). The legal basis of the laity was contained since the first Constitution of the Federal Peoples' Republic of Yugoslavia from 1946 (Article 26, paragraph 2 as well as the ex-Law of the basic marriage in articles 2.3 and 15).<sup>41</sup>

Marriage status, according to the Family law of Brčko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina, is defined as following:

“Article 4

Definition of marriage

(1) Marriage is a legally regulated unity of life of a woman and man.

(2) Marriage is based on a free will decision of a woman and a man to contract a marriage based on the equality of marriage partners, mutual respect and mutual help. “<sup>42</sup>

The average age of a bride and a groom at the time of their first marriage is increasing steadily in recent years. That is confirmed by the data provided by the Agency for statistics of Bosnia and Herzegovina which is showing considerable increase of age in marriage contracting from 2002 onwards. Namely, “girls entering into marriage were 24.3 years old on average while their partners were 27.8 years old on average”<sup>43</sup>, while in 2010 the same data shows that “girls entering into marriage were 25.7 years old on average while their partners were 28.9 years old on average.”<sup>44</sup> It can be concluded that from 2002 until today

<sup>41</sup> Marko Mladenović, Stanka Stjepanović, Milorad Živanović “Family Law”, Pale 2003, page 63

<sup>42</sup> Family law of Brčko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina, („Official Gazette of RS“, No.3/07“)

<sup>43</sup> Data taken from: www.mojevijesti.ba; accessed on 4th October 2012

<sup>44</sup> “Men and women in Bosnia and Herzegovina”, (“Žene i muškarci u Bosni i Hercegovini“), Agency for the average age of young people entering into marriage in Bosnia and Herzegovina has risen for more than a full year. Experts are claiming that this kind of statistical trend is a result of an increasingly tough economic situation in the country, unemployment of young people as well as an aspiration of young people to economically organize themselves meaning that that they become permanently employed and to find a place to live (apartment, house etc.).

Deputy Director of the Agency for Statistics of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Mr F. Fatic, has provided statistical information to the media about the number of contracted and divorced marriages in 2010:

“In 2010 19.541 couples married which is a 5.3% decrease to 2009. During 2010 1676 persons divorced which is a 19.5% increase. During the first three months of 2011 3350 marriages were contracted and 365 were divorced which is a 42.02% increase compared to the same period of 2010“<sup>45</sup>

In the statement of the Agency for Statistics of Bosnia and Herzegovina named “The natural migration of population in Bosnia and Herzegovina in 2011” it is evident that there is an increase in the number of contracted and divorced marriages:

“During the year of 2011, 20.084 marriages were contracted which is a 1.79% increase compared to 2010. During the year of 2011, 1609 marriages were divorced which is a 40.77% increase compared to 2010.“<sup>46</sup>

The poll of the same agency named „Poll regarding household expenditures in 2007“ is showing the following data regarding the structure of the population aged 15 and older and their relation towards marriage status and gender in 2007:

“There is a percentage of 16.2% widowed women and 4.1% of widowed men. There is a percentage of 2.6% of divorced women and 1.5% of divorced men. There is a percentage of 59.8% of married women or women living in an informal marriage and 63.8% of married men or men living in an informal marriage. There is a percentage of 21.5% of unmarried women and 30.7% of unmarried men.“<sup>47</sup>

---

Statistics- Agencija za statistiku, BiH, Sarajevo, December 2011, TB 03, Tematski Bilten, ISSN 1840- 104X; accessed from www.bhas.ba on 4th October 2012

<sup>45</sup> Data taken from www.slobodnaevropa.org; on 7th October 2012

<sup>46</sup> The release of the Agency for Statistics of BiH "Natural population in Bosnia and Herzegovina in 2011" March 2012, (Saopštenje Agencije za statistiku u BiH „Prirodno kretanje stanovništva u Bosni i Hercegovini u 2011 godini“, godina VI, broj 1, dana 28.3.2012. godini)

<sup>47</sup> Datas are taken from: “Survey on household consumption in BiH in 2007”, "Themed Bulletin:" Women and Men in BiH“, ISSN 1840- 104X, Agencija for Statistics BiH, page 13 („Anketa o potrošnji domaćinstva u BiH u 2007. god.“; Tematski bilten: „Žene i muškarci u BiH“, ISSN 1840- 104X, Agencija za statistiku BiH, str.13.)

More detailed information about the current average age of the married population is not available since the last general census was held in 1991 and the next one is scheduled for 2013.

The increasingly harder economic situation has influenced the birthrate in Bosnia and Herzegovina. Young couples are increasingly more likely to avoid having children while it was completely normal for every family to have 4 children on average just 50 years ago. The data<sup>48</sup> of the Statistics agency of Bosnia and Herzegovina for 2010 is indicating a negative ratio of natality and mortality where the number of those born in 2010 was 33.528 while the number of those died in 2010 was 35.118.

However, the research of the Ombudsman for Children of Republika Srpska has registered a problem of underage pregnancies:

„In 2010 436 childbirths were registered with mothers who were 15 to 19 years old while there were 938 of them in 2001. There is still no data for 2011 and 2012. In 2010, too. It is interesting to note that 25 underage girls younger than 15 gave birth in the last 10 years. The office of Ombudsman claimed that the main problem of underage pregnancies is the insufficient level of information on the consequences of sexual relations and the question of criminal responsibility of adults that have age sexual relations with underage girls. They are claiming that the appropriate legislature in this aspect would significantly decrease this negative occurrence.“<sup>49</sup>

iii. When talking about the general status of children and the problem of sexual harassment from the perspective of the cultural and historical background of Bosnia & Herzegovina, as well as the development of the system for the protection of the children's rights and the public awareness of the problem of sexual harassment, it is necessary to look back at the situation 50 years ago:

“Incomplete research of sexual abuse in Macedonia, Serbia, Montenegro, Croatia, Kosovo, Vojvodina and Bosnia and Herzegovina, while they were federal units of the former Yugoslavia, confirm that this issue was mainly absent from courts. These phenomena were, as a rule, considered a taboo, and both victims and witnesses avoided reporting them to the police and courts. Although these crimes were considered the worst

---

<sup>48</sup> Annual indicators Agency for Statistics, dates are taken from: www.bhas.ba; October 2012

<sup>49</sup> Dates are taken from: www.banjaluka.com; October 2012

violations of individual and collective dignity, publicizing them would permanently stigmatize the victim and his/ her family.<sup>50</sup>

Therefore, collective silence about this problem had been present until the start of this century when the debate about this problem became important all around the world.

During the war aggression towards Bosnia and Herzegovina from 1992 to 1996, there were many cases of sexual abuse of underage girls during the systematic raping of Bosniak women, confirmed by the verdicts from the International Criminal Tribunal for former Yugoslavia (ICTY)<sup>51</sup>. United Nations report about the state of human rights on the territory of the former Yugoslavia has numerous informations on children's rights abuse as well as sexual abuse of underage children and legislative difficulties in adopting procedures of those children that were conceived during war rapes:

"E. The particular suffering of children

90. The Special Rapporteur is gravely concerned at the violations of the human rights of children in Bosnia and Herzegovina. He supports the work of the Committee on the Rights of the Child to implement the Convention on the Rights of the Child and, in particular, to raise international awareness of the effects of armed conflicts on children. The Convention, inter alia, prohibits the torture, abuse or neglect of children and provides for their protection in all circumstances.

91. The indiscriminate targeting of civilian population centres has particularly profound consequences for the children involved. They have themselves been killed and wounded in these attacks; witnessed the death and injury of others including close family members and neighbours and have seen their homes destroyed. They have been arbitrarily imprisoned in appalling conditions and there are reports of rape of children in and out of detention camps. This war has created countless orphans and a generation of refugees.

92. A particular problem arises with regard to the children who have been born, or are expected to be born in the near future, as a result of rape. Suggestions have been made that adoption of these children should be facilitated. At present, there would appear to be difficulties under national adoption legislation in Bosnia and Herzegovina, Croatia, as well as in the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia. In order for a married woman to place her child for adoption, her husband's consent is required by law. While this provision may be regarded as serving the best interests of the child in peace-time, circumstances are fundamentally different in times of armed conflict and in the context of rape. Wives may not wish to inform their husbands that they have been raped. Husbands fighting at the front may be impossible to contact, in detention or disappeared. The national parliaments concerned may wish to consider this matter in view of the circumstances currently prevailing.

---

<sup>50</sup> Džamna Duman, „Women, gender and child sexual abuse inside and outside family: The Balkans”, Family, Law and Politics - Sexual Abuse: Children, The Balkans”, Encyclopaedia of Women and Islamic Cultures, page 1st

<sup>51</sup> International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia verdicts, the cases: (IT-96-23/2), (IT-96-23 i 23/1); www.icty.org/case

93. In any event, inter-country adoption may be considered, although only "as an alternative means of child's care, if the child cannot be placed in a foster or an adoptive family or cannot in any suitable manner be cared for in the child's country of origin" (art. 21 (b) of the Convention on the Rights of the Child). The Special Rapporteur has been informed by religious leaders of Muslim communities and by concerned individuals and organizations in Croatia and in Bosnia and Herzegovina that there is a strong will to raise these children within the local communities. However that may be, in considering international assistance, the Special Rapporteur emphasizes that the wishes of the mother and the efforts of local communities should be identified, respected and supported by the international community. It goes without saying that the guiding principle in any such discussion must be the best interests of the child, as provided for in article 3 of the Convention on the Rights of the Child.

94. The Special Rapporteur supports the work of UNICEF as the lead agency in this field and shares its concern to avoid, at all costs, the stigmatization of, or trafficking in, babies who are born as a result of rape.<sup>52</sup>

After the war in Bosnia and Herzegovina, a great number of NGOs was created dealing with human rights, gender rights, problems concerning abuse of women and children. The public is demanding more and more the creation of mechanisms for the protection of victims of domestic violence, especially when sexual abuse of children is present:

"According to statistical data of the interior ministries in Bosnia and Herzegovina, 208 criminal reports on sexual abuse of children were filed between 1997 and 2001. Perpetrators were 15 to 85 years of age. Victims of violence were, as a rule, girls aged 3 to 18. According to the data of the Helsinki Committee for Human Rights in Bosnia and Herzegovina, 16% of all abuse is sexual abuse. These data include all ethnic communities in Bosnia and Herzegovina.

---

<sup>52</sup> United Nations, Report on the situation of human rights in the territory of the former Yugoslavia, submitted by Mr. Tadeusz Mazowiecki, Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights, pursuant to Commission resolution 1992/S- 1/1 of 14 August 1992., str. 20.- 21., The Archives of the ICTY; www.unhchr.ch

There are public requests all over the region to improve the existing documents by precisely defining sexual abuse of children. There are also more and more requests to develop legislative, executive and judicial powers in order for all these crimes to be efficiently registered, prosecuted and sanctioned. These issues are present in public debates and in the media, particularly in women's and feminist organizations, but so far no general position on these issues has been reached. There are no unified and developed procedures for registering sexual abuse of children in any of these countries, which is why the existing statistics are inconsistent.”<sup>53</sup>

Therefore, under the influence of NGO activity, public debates and media support, sexual abuse of children is slowly becoming less of a taboo-topic for the citizens of Bosnia & Herzegovina. The strengthening of the public awareness about that issue, next to the NGO activity, has been greatly influenced by the current normative framework, both on a national and international level that secures an adequate of the interests of child.

“The Constitution of Bosnia and Herzegovina, in its catalogue of rights, lists basic human rights of all persons.

The Constitution of Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina standardizes the right a right for the protection of children and this right is directly affecting a child while rights of privacy, education and ban of all kinds of discrimination are not only affecting children but other members of a family as well. These rights are prescribed by the Constitution of Bosnia and Herzegovina as well. Children and their standing is also affected by the provisions of international agreements which have the power of the constitutional orders by the Annex to the Constitution of Federation of Bosnia & Herzegovina and they will be applied in Bosnia & Herzegovina.

Provisions that guarantee the rights of children or their protection are contained in the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights as well as International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, European Social Charter, Convention on the Rights of the Child and European Convention on Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms. It is particularly important to emphasize the Article 16 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights where it is stated that all persons have a right for a legal personality that includes legal capability as well as legal capacity.

---

<sup>53</sup> Džamna Duman, „Women, gender and child sexual abuse inside and outside family: The Balkans”, Family, Law and Politics - Sexual Abuse: Children, The Balkans”, Encyclopaedia of Women and Islamic Cultures, Volume II, Brill, 2005, page 2nd

Several principles regarding the relationship of parents and children can be produced from the named sources: protection of children, equality of parents and right for the respect of a family and personal life.

Protection of children in their interests is particularly assured by the Convention on the Rights of the Child which is totally dedicated to children and their rights. This convention treats a child as an autonomous person with special rights and it is especially important that it standardizes the mechanism for the protection of these rights. To be honest, this mechanism is not complete compared to the one determined by the European Convention on Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms since there is not a possibility to sue a country on an international level that harms these rights.

The guiding principle of the Convention is the application of the standard for the best interest of a child and the achievement of welfare in activities that concern a child. The interest of a child is something that is taken into account both by parents as well as state authorities in dispute resolution. On the side of parents there is a primary obligation of raising and development of a child and the state has the obligation to help parents and family in fulfilment of obligations and responsibilities towards a child. Besides this indirect help a state is obliged to directly help and protect the rights and interests of a child.

As it has been already said, the protection is provided by parents. The implementation of all obligations and responsibilities is something that guarantees the proper development of a child's personality. When parents stop using their parental rights in the interest of a child, when they neglect, endanger or harm the interest of a child, a competent authority is obliged to intervene by using the appropriate measures. The allowed basis for this kind of intervention is that fact that the relationships of parents and children are modelled on the basis of principles for the protection of children and the obligation of a state to take appropriate measures. By taking preventive and repressive actions a state is performing its obligation prescribed by international agreements and the one arising from the right of a child for protection in the Constitution of Federation of Bosnia & Herzegovina. Therefore, parents can not invoke their right for the respect of a family life and ask for its protection in the case of intervention and limitation of their independence in their exercise of parental care. In that same way, the Family law of Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina bases the organization of the relationship of parents and children.

Since one of the reasons that can be a basis for intervention can be the protection of a child, our legal system has provision that allow a court to take actions limiting the right of parent for the protection of family life and to live with a child, being guided by the interest of a child. Except the protection to children provided by parents and state, some bodies commit to give special protection to a child through an alternative care for children who are temporarily or permanently deprived of their family environment or when it is not in their best interest to remain in that circle, placement in another family, appropriate institution or adoption.

The protection of the principle of protection of a family life stems from both of our constitutions and the European Convention on Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms. When standardizing relationships between parents and children and the exercise of parental care and their organization in practice, the competent authorities must take into account this right of parents and children and abstain from any kind of intervention that might hurt it. The possibility to limit this right is allowed only in those cases when the protection of health or morals of children is provided, respecting the legal terms regarding these relationships, otherwise it would be a cause to start a procedure against Bosnia and Herzegovina in front of the European Court for Human Rights in Strasbourg.”<sup>54</sup>

The current criminal legislation of Bosnia and Herzegovina<sup>55</sup> regulates the protection of children from sexual abuse, human trafficking and all forms of exploitation through the provisions of the Criminal code of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Criminal code of Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Criminal code of Republika Srpska and Criminal code of Brčko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina.

“The Criminal Code of Bosnia and Herzegovina sanctions the following criminal offences: establishment of slavery and transportation of persons in that status, human trafficking, international recruitment for prostitution, smuggling of persons, taking hostages.”<sup>56</sup>

“One of the basic characteristics of the aforementioned offences is that the easiest victims can be children and young persons. The Criminal code of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Criminal code of Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Criminal code of Republika Srpska and Criminal code of Brčko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina sanction the criminal offences against gender liberty and morals and amongst them sexual relationship with a child, sexual misconduct, incitement to prostitution, abuse of a child or minor for pornography, introducing a child with pornography, incest. The criminal legislature of Bosnia and Herzegovina defines the following acts as criminal offences as well: kidnapping, abduction of a child and a minor as well as an act of a person that changes the family status of a child with planting and replacement or in any other way.”<sup>57</sup>

---

<sup>54</sup> Presentation by Džamna Duman (Senior Assistant Law Faculty in Sarajevo), the seminar "Regular and subsequent registration in the register of births" („Redovni i naknadni upis u matičnu knjigu rođenih“), organized by the organization "Your Rights BiH" (Legal Aid Network) and the UNHCR, 19th - 21st December 2010, Vlačić, Bosnia and Herzegovina

<sup>55</sup> Detailed provisions of the criminal legislation of BiH in Chapter II "national legislation" of this report, section 2 "Substantive Criminal Law"

<sup>56</sup> Articles: 185, 186, 187, 189, 191, Criminal Code of Bosnia and Herzegovina ("Official Gazette of BiH", No. 37/03, 54/04, 61/04, 30/05, 55/06, 32/07)

<sup>57</sup> "Analysis of the harmonization of legislation of Bosnia and Herzegovina with the Convention on the Rights

The Family Law of Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina regulates “the protection of a child in a family from all kinds of violence, abuse, maltreatment and neglect”.<sup>58</sup> Also, in its Chapter C “The rights and obligations of parents and children” regulates the obligation of parents to take care of the life and health of a child:

“Article 134

(1) Parents are obliged to take care of the life and health of a child.

(2) Parents are obliged to take care of a child, satisfy its normal needs and protect it from all forms of vices: drugs, alcohol, tramping, robberies, stealing, prostitution, begging as well as all forms of juvenile delinquency, violence, injuries, economic exploitation, sexual abuse and all other asocial occurrences.

(3) For the protection of the interests of a child, parents are obliged to control its behaviour, in accordance with its age and maturity.”<sup>59</sup>

Protection of personal rights and interests of a child in the family legislation of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina is defined by the following orders:

“(1) Guardianship authority has an obligation to act on official duty and take appropriate measures for the protection of rights and the best interest of a child based on direct knowledge or information.

(2) Information about the injury of a child’s rights, especially in cases of violence, maltreatment, sexual abuse and child neglect, is something that has to be promptly delivered, without delay by all bodies, organizations and physical persons to the guardianship authority.

(3) A court in front of which a misdemeanour or criminal procedure is started which is related to the harm of the rights of child, is obliged to inform the guardianship authority and a court with jurisdiction for measures for the protection of rights and interests of children and is obliged to deliver them an official judgment from that procedure.

(4) Guardianship authority will receive help on official duty from local police authorities for the measures from the Paragraph 1 of this Article.

---

of the Child” („Analiza usklađenosti zakonodavstva Bosne i Hercegovine sa Konvencijom o pravima djeteta“), The Institution of Human Rights Ombudsman of Bosnia and Herzegovina in cooperation with Save the Children Norway, Sarajevo, November 2009, pages: 148-149

<sup>58</sup> Article 127, Family law of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, („Official Gazette of FBiH“, No. 35/05 i 41/05)

<sup>59</sup> Article 134, Family law of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, („Official Gazette of FBiH“, 35/05 i 41/05)

(5) Before taking any measures from Paragraph 1 of this Article, a guardianship authority will listen to a minor child about the facts that are related to its decision if the child is capable to understand the situation properly. An opinion of a minor child will especially be taken into account if measures of separation from parents are going to be taken.”<sup>60</sup>

Also, Family law of Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina regulates the possibility to deprive parental care by a court order in a non-contentious procedure:

“Article 154

d) Deprivation of parental care

(1) Court will take away parental care in a non-contentious procedure from a parent that abuses his or her rights or grossly neglects his or her obligations or abandons a child or does not take care of a child with which he or she is not living together and clearly endangers a child's security, health or morals or does not protect a child from that kind of behaviour from another parent or person.

(2) Abuse of rights is especially present in cases of physical and mental violence towards a child, sexual abuse of a child, guidance of a child towards socially unacceptable behaviour and other cases of gross violations of child's rights.”<sup>61</sup>

The Family law of Republika Srpska also regulates rights and obligations of parents and children in Chapter III „Relationships of parents and children“ where „parents have an obligation and right to protect their underage children and to take care of their lives and health“ also regulates the rights and duties of parents and children in Chapter III "Relations between parents and children"<sup>62</sup> and to „take care of the education of their underage children.“<sup>63</sup>

With the provisions of this law any form of physical and sexual abuse is forbidden as well as exploitation, neglect and other ways of child's rights abuse. In cases of violations of child's rights, guardianship authority has the power to take away the guardianship from parents:

“Article 97

---

<sup>60</sup> Article 62, Family law of Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, („Official Gazette of FBiH“, No. 35/05 i 41/05)

<sup>61</sup> Article 154, Family law of Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, („Official Gazette of FBiH“, No. 35/05 i 41/05)

<sup>62</sup> Article 81, Family law of the Republika Srpska, („Official Gazette of RS“, No. 54702, 41/08)

<sup>63</sup> Article 83, Family law of the Republika Srpska, („Official Gazette of RS“, No. 54702, 41/08)

3. Oversight of a guardianship authority

(1) Parents and other members of a family must not subject a child to degrading acts, mental and physical punishments or abuse. If parents, or a parent with which a child is living with, have in any way abused their child or neglected to take care of it, neglected its upbringing or if a child has been faced with disorders in upbringing, a guardianship authority can take away their child and entrust it to another parent, some other person or appropriate institution if there is not a judicial order for entrusting a child.

(2) During the period of constant oversight of the parental rights, a guardianship authority will help parents with advices and other appropriate methods of social work in their excercision of parental rights, call up parents for consultations about parental rights, visit parents and children, call up parents and children for regular periodic meetings at the premises of the guardianship authorities and similiar.<sup>64</sup>

„Article 106

5. Deprivation of parental rights and duties

(1) Court will take away parental rights in a non-contentious procedure from a parent which molests his child, abuses parental rights or leaves its child, disregards caring about a child and neglects its parental duties.

(2) A parent abuses its parental rights and duties if he or she:

- 1. conducts physical or mental violence towards a child;*
- 2. sexually abuses a child;*
- 3. exploits a child making it work too much or works at something that is not appropriate towards its age;*
- 4. allows a child to use alcoholic drinks, drugs or other intoxicating substances or makes it do so;*
- 5. leads a child towards any form of socially unaccepted behaviour;*
- 6. in any other way grossly violates the rights of a child.*

(3) A parent is grossly neglects its parental obligations and rights:

- 1. if he or she leaves his or her child;*
- 2. if he or she does not take care about a child living with him or her for longer than a month;*
- 3. if he or she does not create necessary conditions for living together within a year without a valid reason if a child has been placed in another family or institution;*

---

<sup>64</sup> Article 97, Family law of the Republika Srpska, (“Official Gazette of RS“, No. 54702, 41/08)

4. if he or she neglected to take care about the basic living needs of a child living with him or her or does not follow the measures taken by the competent authority for the protection of rights and welfare of a child.

(4) Court can return parental rights to a parent if the reasons for which it was taken away from him or her cease to exist.<sup>65</sup>

Family law of Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina regulates rights of children to be protected from all forms of violence as well as the obligations of parents to protect their children from all forms of violence and in the case of omissions parental right will be taken away from parents.

„Article 110

(Right from the protection from all forms of violence)

A child in a family has a right for the protection from all forms of violence, abuse, neglect and negligence.<sup>66</sup>

„Article 117

(Obligations of parents)

(1) Parents are obligated to take care of the life and health of a child.

(2) Parents are obligated to take care of a child, fulfill its needs and protect it from all forms of vices and wrongdoings: drugs, alcohol, tramping, robbing, stealing, prostitution, begging and all forms of juvenile delinquency as well as violence, injury, economic exploitation, sexual abuse and all other asocial occurrences.

(3) For the protection of the interests of a child parents are obligated to control its behaviour in accordance with its age and maturity.<sup>67</sup>

„Article 114

(Limitation and revocation of parental care)

(1) Limitation and revocation of parental care is possible by a decision from an official body in ways prescribed by this law.

(2) A parent cannot renounce its parental care.<sup>68</sup>

---

<sup>65</sup> Article 106, Family law of the Republika Srpska, (“Official Gazette of RS“, No. 54702, 41/08)

<sup>66</sup> Article 110, Family law of Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina, („Official Gazzete of BDBIH“, No. 3/07)

<sup>67</sup> Article 117, Family law of Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina, („Official Gazzete of BDBIH“, No.3/07“)

When talking about the injuries of the rights of a child, a topic that sparked the interest of media and legislature in Bosnia and Herzegovina is the ethnic discrimination in everyday life, animosity and violence towards children of ethnic minorities, especially Roma children. One of the burning issues that Roma children are faced with is the sexual and economic exploitation (begging).

‘Regarding economic exploitation and street children the Committee on the Rights of the Child is concerned at the information that a significant number of children, especially Roma, are living or working on the streets, that the majority of these children are under 14 that most of them do not attend schools and nearly half of them appear to be ill. Furthermore, the Committee notes with concern that the work performed by these children is often harmful and exploitative and that many of them are compelled or forced to work (...) Although the Law strictly defined the conditions under which a child up to 15 years of age can work, there were found registered cases of violation of this Law. Practical examples given were the cases of children who worked in restaurants, bakeries and other facilities in which children worked at night. The usual practice is that such categories of employees are not registered by the retirement, disability, and health funds, which automatically represents a form of exploitation and enhances the existence of black market. Inspection takes certain measures, but there is an insufficient number of inspectors and the sole structure of inspection services, especially in FBiH, makes a more efficient supervision in this area impossible.

It is especially important to note the issue of begging in the streets as a form of exploitation. Department for children’s rights of the Ombudsmen Institution of BiH made a comprehensive research of this phenomena in BiH and send its recommendations to BiH authorities on how to deal with this problem. This research shows that begging is often a form of exploitation as a part of children trafficking and that the competent authorities do not have a systematic approach to eliminate this phenomenon.’<sup>69</sup>

Apart from discrimination, violence, economic and sexual exploitation which are challenges for Roma children, one of the burning issues with those children is the lack of registration in official documents for newborns making those children officially “non-existent” and as such are not protected by the law and are suitable victims for human trafficking and all means of exploitation. This problem was registered by the Institution of Ombudsman for human rights of Bosnia and Herzegovina in one of their reports.

---

<sup>68</sup> Article 114, Family law of Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina, („Official Gazzete of BDBIH“, No. 3/07)

<sup>69</sup> "Analysis of the harmonization of legislation of Bosnia and Herzegovina with the Convention on the Rights of the Child" („Analiza usklađenosti zakonodavstva Bosne i Hercegovine sa Konvencijom o pravima djeteta“), The Institution of Human Rights Ombudsman of Bosnia and Herzegovina in cooperation with Save the Children Norway, Sarajevo, November 2009, pages: 151- 152

„Children from Roma families are in much worse situation than other kids, and it is important to underline that they are the largest and most vulnerable national minority. Most of Roma children are not registered in birth registration books, so they do not have personal documents, which hinder their access to the rights, primarily the right to education and health and social care. Such Roma children status puts them in vulnerable position and makes them exposed to exploitation by the adults (begging, prostitution, pornography, trafficking in body parts and like).“<sup>70</sup>

In order to solve this problem it is essential to adequately implement the Article 7 of the Convention on the rights of child in Bosnia and Herzegovina.

“The requirement in Article 7 that every child should be registered right after birth with the right to a name after birth, has a direct influence on the possibility that a child gets access to means of survival and development. Registering a child after its birth gives a child its legal identity in its country or place of birth. That identity is a basis that is used for a child to get access to the healthcare system and education. Without a birth certificate as an evidence of identity, a child is excluded from every possible tool which is necessary for survival and development. Therefore, the implementation of the Article 7 is a special precondition for the implementation of Article 24 (health rights) and Article 28 (right to elementary and secondary education) which is a specific set of rules for the survival and development from Article 6 (right to life).”<sup>71</sup>

iv. “It is an integral part of the General Framework Agreement for peace in Bosnia and Herzegovina known as Dayton Peace Agreement, which was initialed on November 11, 1995 in Dayton, USA and signed on December 14, 1995 in Paris. Text of the Constitution is in fact the Annex IV to the adopted Peace Agreement.

Apart from explicit provision which states that the rights and freedoms set forth by the European Convention on Human Rights and its protocols shall be directly applied in BiH and shall have precedence over national legislation, the Constitution also contains the Annex I – Additional agreements on human rights (15 instruments) that shall apply to BiH. The 1990 Convention on the Rights of the Child is among those instruments.<sup>72</sup>

---

<sup>70</sup> "Alternative Report of the Ombudsman for Human Rights on the implementation of the Convention on the Rights of the Child for the period from 1st June of 2009 until the end of 2011" ("Alternativni izvještaj institucije Ombudsmene za ljudska prava BIH o primjeni Konvencije o pravima djeteta za period od 1.6.2009. do kraja 2011.god."); The Institution of Ombudsman for Human Rights, Banja Luka 2011, taken from: www.omudsmen.gov.ba October 2012, page 6

<sup>71</sup> Presentation by Džamna Duman (Senior Assistant Law Faculty in Sarajevo), the seminar "Regular and subsequent registration in the register of births" („Redovni i naknadni upis u matičnu knjigu rođenih“), organized by the organization "Your Rights Bi H" (Legal Aid Network) and the UNHCR, 19th - 21st December 2010, Vlašić, Bosnia and Herzegovina

It is necessary to point out that family law legislation of Bosnia and Herzegovina (Family law of Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Family law of Republika Srpska, Family law of Brčko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina) is in accordance with the provisions of the Convention on rights of child.

Judge of the Constitutional Court of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Mr Faris Vehabović, who has been recently named as a judge in the European Court for Human Rights as a candidate from Bosnia and Herzegovina, determines several things in his scientific work “Relationship between the Constitution of Bosnia and Herzegovina and the the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms”:

“(...) and the Constitution of Bosnia and Herzegovina is a typical example of such a radical monistic approach in the application of international law regardless of how much it contradicts with considerations learned so far about state, sovereignty and the relationship between domestic and international law. That is also one of the arguments that make the Constitution of Bosnia & Herzegovina absolutely different from the constitutions of other countries, but this time in a positive way.”<sup>73</sup>

Bosnia and Herzegovina has taken over the UN's Convention on human rights by notification of succession on the 23rd of November 1993 by which Bosnia and Herzegovina obligated itself that it must implement the Convention and harmonize its legislature with the provisions of this Convention.

“Monitoring over the progress the State Parties achieved in implementation of assumed obligations is carried out by the Committee on the Rights of the Child (hereinafter referred to as: Committee), which periodically examines reports of the State Parties on measures undertaken to ensure the exercise of the rights recognized in the Convention. After examination of reports, the Committee adopts concluding observations - a document that refers to the specific State Party (...) The Committee examined the Initial Report of BiH

---

<sup>72</sup> "Analysis of the harmonization of legislation of Bosnia and Herzegovina with the Convention on the Rights of the Child" („Analiza usklađenosti zakonodavstva Bosne i Hercegovine sa Konvencijom o pravima djeteta“), The Institution of Human Rights Ombudsman of Bosnia and Herzegovina in cooperation with Save the Children Norway, Sarajevo, November 2009, pages 174

<sup>73</sup> Faris Vehabović, “The relation between BiH Constitution and the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental freedoms,” Alumni Association of the Center for Interdisciplinary Studies, („Odnos Ustava BiH i Europske konvencije za zaštitu ljudskih prava i osnovnih sloboda“, Asocijacija Alumni Centra za interdisciplinarne postdiplomske studije- ACIPS), Sarajevo, 2006, page 45

(CRC/C/11/Add.28) in the session (see: CRC/C/SR.1030 and 1031) held on May 19, 2005, but it adopted its Concluding observations in the 1052nd session held on June 3, 2005. These Concluding observations were used as a basis for this analysis. It is particularly important to point out the positive measures that Bosnia and Herzegovina undertook in order to ensure implementation of the Convention, which were also recognized by the Committee.

The Committee identified the following positive measures:

- Adopting of a Law on protection of national minorities;
- Adopting of a Rulebook on protection of human trafficking victims;
- Adopting of a Framework law on primary and secondary education;
- Adopting of a 2002-2010 Children Action plan and establishing of a BiH Council for Children;
- Adopting of a Law on protection of mentally handicapped persons and BiH Council of Ministers decisions dated December 30, 2003 on adopting Standard rules on equalization of opportunities for persons with disabilities, which were adopted by UN General Assembly on December 20, 1993 (GA Resolution 48/96);
- Direct application of the rights and freedoms listed in the European Convention on Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms and its protocols, which are guaranteed by the Constitution of Bosnia and Herzegovina.

(...)

The Committee noted that since 2000 the Government had adopted a number of programmes and plans of action relevant to the promotion of children's rights. It is concerned, however, that «the divergence of policies and practices resulting from the political and administrative fragmentation may hamper their correct implementation. The Committee is further concerned by the fact that despite of having over 100 ministries in the State, none of them has exclusive competence over children issues. Having aforementioned in mind, the Committee recommended that the State Party further strengthen and support the Council for Children with adequate human and financial resources, in order to empower it to develop and coordinate a comprehensive and uniform implementation of all policies throughout the country.(...) In its Concluding observations, the Committee welcomed the information that the existing State Ombudsmen will continue their activities and that the Office of Ombudsmen in its structure has a Department for the Rights of the Child. However, the Committee is concerned about the fact that this department is inefficient due to poor public awareness about its existence and function, in particular about its individual complaints mechanism. The Committee recommended that the State Party should provide support to the Office of Ombudsmen in launching public-awareness campaigns targeting in particular parents and children in order to inform them about the existence and functions of the Ombudsmen's Office Department for the Rights of the Child, in particular its power to receive and investigate complaints related to violation of children's rights. The State party is further encouraged to seek technical cooperation in this regard from the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) and the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) and other organizations. Considering the BiH report, the Committee acknowledged the efforts of the State Party aimed at allocating adequate resources for social protection services, however it also expressed its concern that the children's rights are still neglected and that insufficient resources are allocated for child related programmes and policies.

The Committee is further concerned that there is a significant difference in public expenditure between the two Entities in the areas of social security, education and health care and that the complex structure of the State Party is not conducive to an optimal realization of the limited resources available. Due to all this, the Committee recommended that the State Party should pay particular attention to the full implementation of Article 4 of the Convention by prioritizing budgetary allocations to ensure implementation of economic, social and cultural rights of children, in particular those belonging to economically disadvantaged families, «to the maximum extent of ... resources available and, where needed, within the framework of international cooperation.» The Committee further recommends that the State party should harmonize the expenses for children's rights protection between the Entities so that a minimum level of social and health protection for all children throughout the country is guaranteed. The Committee expressed its concern about the fact that the last census was carried out in 1991 and that there is no clear division of responsibilities for collection, consolidation and analysis of data among the different government bodies. This results in limited availability of statistics on situation of children, especially those belonging to different ethnic groups and the most vulnerable groups (e.g. children of internally displaced and refugee families, victims of sexual and economic exploitation, victims of human trafficking) and makes it difficult to calculate basic human development indicators such as infant mortality rate, adult literacy, employment and poverty rate..<sup>74</sup> ”

Through the key considerations in the “Analysis of the harmonization of the legislation of Bosnia and Herzegovina with the Convention on the Rights of the Child”, the Institution of

---

<sup>74</sup> "Analysis of the harmonization of legislation of Bosnia and Herzegovina with the Convention on the Rights of the Child" („Analiza usklađenosti zakonodavstva Bosne i Hercegovine sa Konvencijom o pravima djeteta“), The Institution of Human Rights Ombudsman of Bosnia and Herzegovina in cooperation with Save the Children Norway, Sarajevo, November 2009, pages 8- 12

Ombudsman for human rights in Bosnia and Herzegovina in cooperation with NGO Save the Children Norway brings the following conclusion:

“Revised Plan of Actions for Children for the period 2002-2010 has not yet been adopted. It is still in the form of a draft, although the adoption thereof was defined and recommended by the UN Committee on the Rights of the Child. Since after the expiration of the tenure of previous members of the Council for Children no new members were elected, one can conclude that this Council no longer exists.”<sup>75</sup>

Since this “Analysis of the harmonization of the legislation of Bosnia and Herzegovina with the Convention on the Rights of the Child” was created in 2009, significant improvements were noticed regarding state activities for the application of the Convention on the Rights of the Child. Previous recommendations were the basis for the creation of Second, Third and Fourth periodic report about the application of Convention on the Rights of the Child. The last report was presented on 19th September 2012 on the 61st session of the UN Committee of the rights of child in Geneva. In the introductory remarks in front of the UN Committee, Mrs Saliha Đuderija, deputy minister for human rights and refugees of Bosnia and Herzegovina who led the Bosnian delegation, emphasized the advancements Bosnia and Herzegovina achieved regarding the application of the Convention on the rights of child:

“One of the most important strategic documents, which promotes and proposes measures to protect the rights of children in Bosnia and Herzegovina, is the Action Plan for the Children of Bosnia and Herzegovina 2010 – 2014 (preceded by the Action Plan 2002-2010). These plans identified the activities on creating favorable living conditions for children and their families, their healthy physical and psychological development and inclusion in the society, and participation in decision-making, as the most important factors for acting in the best interest of the children.

In the context of the right of every child to grow up in a family, the Action Plan for the Children of Bosnia and Herzegovina includes the development of and support to alternative forms of care for children without parental care, presenting it as a more humane and cost-efficient form of care relative to institutional care.

The authorities of Bosnia and Herzegovina are aware of the fact that the institutional care of children infringes the principle of equality of each child, namely equal right of each child to live in a family environment, since a child placed in an institution is not able to live and participate in the society in the same way as the one living in a family environment and since children growing up in institutions become stigmatized and discriminated against.

---

<sup>75</sup> Ibid, page 13

Given that research, surveys and analyses conducted in European countries show that institutional placement of children in North and West European countries is decreasing and that the process of deinstitutionalization is in the final phase, while in the countries of the Central and Eastern Europe it is still underway, the authorities of Bosnia and Herzegovina have taken further steps toward achieving the fuller enjoyment of the children's rights.

In addition to the issue of institutional care for children, other issues related to the protection of the rights of the child in Bosnia and Herzegovina are also important for us to act upon. Therefore, the Ministry of Human Rights and Refugees of Bosnia and Herzegovina identified in the Action Plan for the Children of Bosnia and Herzegovina the issues of social inclusion of children and activities related to the most important needs for children in the fields of social and health protection, education, special forms of protection, as well as non-discrimination and ensuring fundamental human rights of children.

A particularly important among these issues is non-discrimination, notably the prohibition of corporal punishment at home and in institutions, where a stronger public sensitization is required. Also, specific activities are foreseen in terms of reporting and monitoring in order to ensure adequate response to violence against children and their abuse, including domestic violence.

Aiming to implement the recommendations of this Committee, and in particular the recommendations given by the Council of Europe Commissioner for Human Rights, the authorities of Bosnia and Herzegovina took action to fulfill this obligation in due time.

Namely, at its 14th session held on 20 June 2007 the Council of Ministers adopted the National Strategy to Combat Violence against Children 2007 -2010, while the activities to draft and adopt a new Strategy for period until 2015 are in progress.

Given that the Ministry of Human Rights and Refugees is in charge of implementing the activities on drafting the Strategy, the Ministry also set up a special team tasked with presenting the Strategy to all levels of government in Bosnia and Herzegovina identified in the Strategy as those responsible for implementing activities and reporting regularly to the Council of Ministers, as well as other levels of government in Bosnia and Herzegovina.

The new Strategy identifies specific problems and recent trends in violence against children in Bosnia and Herzegovina, the deficiencies of existing legislation in this area and proposals for their harmonization and improvement, as well as specific goals and measures required for preventive action and general reduction of occurrence of violence against children in BiH society.

The implementation of the National Strategy to Combat Violence against Children in Bosnia and Herzegovina was important in many ways: presenting the obligations of those responsible for various activities, educating and sensitizing the wider public, which also resulted in establishing partnership with NGOs.

Aimed at establishing a common methodology to monitor the problem of violence against children in Bosnia and Herzegovina, the formation of coalitions of NGOs was an activity that was carried out in the course of 2011 and 2012. It is important to mention the coalition of NGOs which, in collaboration with the Ministry, NGO Vesta from Tuzla and UNICEF, continued designing the methodology for monitoring the problem of violence against children by NGOs in Bosnia and Herzegovina.”<sup>76</sup>

Other than the State strategy for the combat against violence over children on the basis of which a team was created within the Ministry for the presentation of the aforementioned strategy on all levels of organization in Bosnia and Herzegovina, the government introduced the Strategy for combatting underage delinquency and a whole series of strategies to improve pre-school upbringing and child education. In March 2012, Council of Ministers introduced a Decision for the adoption of the policy framework of early upbringing and development of children in Bosnia and Herzegovina, including an Action plan about the educational needs of the Roma people.

Bosnia and Herzegovina submitted reports and two optional protocols to the appropriate UN Committee at its 61st session in September:

1. Optional protocol about child trafficking, child prostitution and pornography
2. Optional protocol about children in armed conflicts

v. Bosnia and Herzegovina is not an EU member state but it had signed an accession agreement with the EU on the 16th June 2008. That was preceded by the initialling of 4th December 2007 in Sarajevo and negotiations from November 2005 to December 2006. That document allowed a close and permanent relationship with the EU and likely membership within it.

---

<sup>76</sup> Opening address and introduction of the delegation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Geneva 18-20 September, Presentation of the combined second, third and fourth periodic reports of Bosnia and Herzegovina on the implementation of UN Convention on the Rights of the Child; taken from : <http://www2.ohchr.org/english/bodies/crc/crcs61.htm>; September 2012

“The text of the Agreement has 135 articles in 10 chapters : General principles; Political dialogue; Regional cooperation; Free movement of goods; Free movement of workers, work settlement, provision of services, movement of capital; Harmonization of laws, enforcement of laws and rules of competition; Justice, liberty and safety; Policies of cooperation; Financial cooperation; Institutional, general and final orders. Except the aforementioned chapters, the Agreement has 7 annexes and 7 protocols which specify obligations relating to trade of certain kinds of products (time schedule of suspension or gradual reduction of customs for industrial, agricultural and processed agricultural products, fish and fish products, and wine and alcoholic drinks – Annex I, Annex II, Annex III, Annex IV, Annex V, Protocol 1, Protocol 2, Protocol 7). Besides that, the obligations of Bosnia & Herzegovina regarding state aid are regulated in more detail (Protocol 4), land transport (Protocol 3), business settlement and financial services (Annex VI), protection of intellectual property (Annex VII), mutual administrative help regarding questions of customs (Protocol 5) and dispute resolution (Protocol 6). The Agreement is in the process of ratification with its member states. Bosnia & Herzegovina ratified the agreement in both houses of the Parliamentary Assembly of Bosnia & Herzegovina (House of Representative – 22nd October 2008 and House of Peoples – 27th October 2008) and Presidency 6th November 2008. The European Parliament supported the Agreement and asked for member states to ratify it on the plenary meeting in Strasbourg held from 20th until 23rd October 2009. Until the completion of the ratification of the Agreement of stabilization and accession, a Temporary agreement is in place from 1st July 2008.”<sup>77</sup>

2 THE LANZAROTE CONVENTION

i. “Parliamentary Assembly of Bosnia and Herzegovina has, in its resolution 234 (2002) about the application of Bosnia and Herzegovina for the membership in the European Council, elaborated the progress since the signing of the Dayton peace agreement on all fields. Parliamentary Assembly has recommended to the Council of Ministers to invite Bosnia and Herzegovina to the membership in the Council of Europe. On 12th July 2002, after it had become one of the members of the Council of Europe, Bosnia and Herzegovina ratified the European Convention on Human rights. With that act, Bosnia and Herzegovina signed an international agreement and took over the obligation to harmonize its legislature with the international obligations that re arising from that agreement.”<sup>78</sup>

---

<sup>77</sup> Taken from the web site of The Directorate for European Integration
<http://www.dei.gov.ba/dokumenti/?id=4871>, October 2012

<sup>78</sup> Faris Vehabović, “The relation between BiH Constitution and the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental freedoms”, Alumni Association of the Center for Interdisciplinary Studies, („Odnos Ustava BIH i Europske konvencije za zaštitu ljudskih prava i osnovnih sloboda“,

What is so specific about the European Convention on Human Rights and Bosnia and Herzegovina is that:

“in the case of Bosnia and Herzegovina, the European Convention of Human Rights is not one of the international agreements with certain obligations for the signing state but one of the most important constitutional principlesu.”<sup>79</sup>

Judge Vehabovic has proven in his scientific work that the European Convention on Human Rights is above the Constitution of Bosnia and Herzegovina which means that:

“the rights from the European Convention on Human Rights have the supremacy over other constitutional orders. He claims two reasons for this kind of situation: 1) Constitution of Bosnia and Herzegovina gives the European Convention, by the formulation of Article II/2, such position in the constitutional system of Bosnia and Herzegovina claiming that it is „directly applicable“ and „above every other right“ which means self-enforceability of that regulation as well as the completeness of the legal system of Bosnia and Herzegovina including the constitutional system; 2) since Bosnia and Herzegovina is a typical example of the presence of a monistic legal system, by the ratification of the European Convention from 12th July 2002 and the European Convention as an international agreement, it is necessary to change legal obstacles for the full respect of obligations taken by the international agreement. As an example of inconsistency are the provisions of the Constitution regarding the way members are elected to the Presidency of Bosnia and Herzegovina and the House of Peoples of the Parliamentary Assembly of Bosnia and Herzegovina.”<sup>80</sup>

ii. The ambassador of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Mr Zdenko Martinović signed<sup>81</sup> Lanzarote Convention in the office of the Secretary General of the Council of Europe, on the 12th October 2011. And Bosnia and Herzegovina has just ratified the Lanzarote Convention on 14th of November 2012<sup>82</sup>, which will enter into force on 1st of March on 2013.

iii. Ministry for Human Rights and Refugees of Bosnia and Herzegovina has started the process of accession in 2009 for the following three conventions which deal with the protection of the childrens' rights, Lanzarote Convention being one of them:

---

Asocijacija Alumni Centra za interdisciplinarne postdiplomske studije- ACIPS), Sarajevo, 2006, page 61.

<sup>79</sup> Ibid, page 9

<sup>80</sup> Ibid; page 11

<sup>81</sup> For more information about signing of Lanzarote Convention:

http://www.coe.int/t/dg3/children/1in5/News/BosniaAndHerzegovinaSignature\_en.asp

<sup>82</sup> While we were working on research from June until the end of October, Bosnia and Herzegovina didn't ratified Lanzarote Convention. It was ratified two weeks after we finalized our report, so the following questions will be answered under If not ratified section

- Convention on the International Recovery of Child Support and other Forms of Family Maintenance;
- Council of Europe Convention on contact Concerning Children;
- Council of Europe Convention on the Protection of Children against Sexual Exploitation and Sexual Abuse – Lanzarote Convention.

The first report for the opinion of relevant institutions had been sent out on 11th September 2009 and it was renewed with urgencies which were sent out on 20th September 2009.

The reasons for the accession to these conventions, Lanzarote Convention among them, were sent to the General Secretariat of the Council of Ministers of Bosnia and Herzegovina on 20th October 2010 and were approved on 18th November 2010. On the 5th session of the Presidency of Bosnia and Herzegovina held on 11th February 2011, the Presidency reached an agreement of accession of Bosnia and Herzegovina to all three conventions. Therefore, the Head of Mission of Bosnia and Herzegovina to Council of Europe signed the aforementioned conventions on 12th October 2011.

On 14th November 2011, the Request for the start of the process of ratification was submitted to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Bosnia and Herzegovina. The Council of Ministers of Bosnia and Herzegovina determined the Suggestion<sup>83</sup> for the ratification of the Lanzarote Convention in February 2012. After that, the Parliamentary Assembly of Bosnia and Herzegovina gave its approval<sup>84</sup> for the ratification of the aforementioned conventions on its 25th session of House of Representatives from 28th March 2012 and 14th session of House of People from 19th April 2012. It is expected that the Presidency of Bosnia and Herzegovina will soon publish a decision about the ratification of these international agreements so the procedure could be continued with the deposition of ratification documents with the authorized depositories of the convention, all in accordance with the norms of international law and the Article 16 of the Law for the process of conclusion and implementation of international international agreements.<sup>85</sup>

Members of the „ELSA BIH for Children“ research team have attended a meeting with the Head of the Office of the Council of Europe in Sarajevo, Ms Mary Ann Hennessey and with

---

<sup>83</sup> Suggestion for ratification of Lanzarote Convention:

https://www.parlament.ba/sadrzaj/ostali\_akti/ratificirani/default.aspx?id=34958&langTag=bs-BA&pril=b

<sup>84</sup> “Official Gazette of BiH“, No. 6/12

<sup>85</sup> Law for the process of conclusion and implementation of international international agreements, („Official Gazzete of BiH“, No. 29/00)

the Minister for Human Rights and Refugees of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Mr Damir Ljubić on 20th September 2012. One of the main results of the meeting was that the Ministry will send a memo to the institutions of Bosnia and Herzegovina to speed up the process of the ratification of the Lanzarote Convention.

And on 14th November of 2012, Bosnia and Herzegovina has ratified Lanzarote Convention, which will enter into force as regards Bosnia and Herzegovina on 1st of March 2013.<sup>86</sup>

iv. Taking into account that Bosnia and Herzegovina represents a monistic approach to the application of international law that means that the position of the Lanzarote Convention towards a national legislature will be determined with that monistic approach which means the following:

“When looking from the perspective of monistic understanding, international and national law are part of a unique legal order which gives principles on how to solve conflicts between the orders of a national law system of one state and international law. The regulations of the international law affect the regulations of the national law and vice versa. Therefore, it can be concluded that judges in one state, when applying internal regulations, should constantly have in mind that their decisions are not in conflict with the international obligations of their country, especially not the ones from the agreements themselves.”<sup>87</sup>

II NATIONAL LEGISLATION

1 GENERAL PRINCIPLES OF THE JURISDICTION

i. The establishment of modern, democratic state<sup>88</sup> of Bosnia and Herzegovina is a result of the disintegration of the Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, voting for independence

<sup>86</sup> http://www.coe.int/t/dg3/children/1in5/News/BiHRatification\_en.asp

<sup>87</sup> Degan, V.Đ, "International law", Law Faculty, University of Rijeka., 2000 („Međunarodno pravo“, Pravni fakultet Sveučilišta u Rijeci, 2000)

<sup>88</sup> The Declaration of the State Anti-Fascist Council of National Liberation of Bosnia and Herzegovina (ZAVNOBiH), issued on November 25 of 1943 by the partisan government, is widely considered to be the constitutional basis of the modern Bosnia and Herzegovina. Furthermore, this Resolution states: "Today, the nations of Bosnia and Herzegovina, through their only political representative - the ZAVNOBiH, desire that their country, which is neither Serb, nor Croat nor Muslim, but Serb as well as Croat and Muslim, should be the free and united Bosnia and Herzegovina in which the full equality, legal and otherwise, of Serbs, Muslims and Croats will be guaranteed". Those principles were declared in the constitutions of Democratic Federative Yugoslavia (1943- 1945), Federal People's Republic of Yugoslavia (1945- 1963) and later renamed in Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia (1963- 1992), in which Bosnia and Herzegovina was constituted as one of the six State's equal republics. Before The Second World War, Bosnia and Herzegovina was part of The Kingdom of Yugoslavia (1941-1929), by referendum<sup>89</sup>, which was held in Bosnia and Herzegovina on 29 February 1992, and recognition by the international community, on 6 April 1992 when the Republic of Bosnia and Herzegovina is recognized by the European Community and the United States, and on 22 May 1992 when Bosnia and Herzegovina was admitted as a member of the United Nations General Assembly by the resolution A/RES/46/237<sup>90</sup> of the United Nations. As a successor of the Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, Bosnia and Herzegovina became a contracting party of all conventions and agreements ratified by the Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia. Shortly after gaining independence, following war conditions in Bosnia and Herzegovina ended by the General Framework Agreement for Peace (Dayton Agreement), in Dayton (Ohio, USA), 21 November 1995., which was signed on 14 December 1995 in Paris (France), by the Republic of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Croatian Republic and the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia. The Dayton Peace Agreement was mutually upgraded with 11 annexes, in which Annex 4 represents the Constitution of Bosnia and Herzegovina, as the highest legal and political act of the state. Constitution of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Article I, defines the continuity of Bosnia and Herzegovina in international law as a state, democratic principles, unified state with two entities: the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina and the Republic of Srpska (and later Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina<sup>91</sup>) and the movement of goods, services, capital and persons, capital city, symbols and citizenship.

---

called before The Kingdom of Serbs, Croats and Slovenians (1929- 1918), then under Austro- Hungarian Empire rule (1918- 1878), under Ottoman Empire rule (1878- 1463), The Kingdom of medieval Bosnia (1463- 1377), Banate of Bosnia (1377- 1154) and it is first written mentioned in “De administrando imperio” of Constantine VII Porphyrogenitus (945- 959).

The oldest Bosnian medieval state document is the “Charter of Ban Kulin” from 29th August of 1189, written in old Bosnian Cyrillic alphabet called “Bosančica”, in which Ban Kulin declares trade agreement between Bosnia and the Republic of Dubrovnik. Two original samples are today held in Dubrovnik and third one is in the Russian Science Academy Library in St. Petersburg.

<sup>89</sup> In the referendum voted 63.4% of the total electorate, of which 92.68% voted for independence of the Republic of Bosnia and Herzegovina

<sup>90</sup> See resolution on: <http://www.un.org/documents/ga/res/46/a46r237.htm>

<sup>91</sup> In order to contribute to a steady and righteous peace in Bosnia and Herzegovina, while respecting national, religious and cultural identity of all peoples and the right of citizens to participate in the conduct of public affairs, and on the basis of the Dayton Peace Agreement, the final decision of the Arbitral Tribunal for Dispute over Inter-Entity Boundary Line in Brcko area and the Constitution of Bosnia and Herzegovina adopted by the Annex 18.08.1999.god., the Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina was founded. District was officially declared 08.03.2000. Highest act of Brcko District of BiH is the statute. Currently in effect is Revised Statute of the Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina from 06.05.2008. The statute provides that everyone has the right to enjoy the rights and freedoms guaranteed by the Constitution of BiH and the Law, in particular the European Convention on Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, without discrimination on any grounds. (Taken from: "Analysis of harmonization of legislation of Bosnia

*"Article I*Bosnia and Herzegovina1. Continuation

The Republic of Bosnia and Herzegovina, the official name of which shall henceforth be "Bosnia and Herzegovina," shall continue its legal existence under international law as a state, with its internal structure modified as provided herein and with its present internationally recognized borders. It shall remain a Member State of the United Nations and may as Bosnia and Herzegovina maintain or apply for membership in organizations within the United Nations system and other international organizations.

2. Democratic Principles

Bosnia and Herzegovina shall be a democratic state, which shall operate under the rule of law and with free and democratic elections.

3. Composition

Bosnia and Herzegovina shall consist of the two Entities, the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina and the Republic of Srpska (hereinafter "the Entities").

Constitution of Bosnia and Herzegovina regulates jurisdiction and relations between the institutions of Bosnia and Herzegovina and the Entities, organisation, jurisdiction and functioning of institutions; the Parliamentary Assembly as a legislative body, the Presidency as a collective head of state with the Council of Ministers, the Constitutional Court and the Central Bank.

Article IV

Parliamentary Assembly

The Parliamentary Assembly shall have two chambers: the House of Peoples and the House of Representatives.

1. House of Peoples

The House of Peoples shall comprise 15 Delegates, two-thirds from the Federation (including five Croats and five Bosniacs) and one-third from the Republic of Srpska (five Serbs). (...)

2. House of Representatives

The House of Representatives shall comprise 42 Members, two-thirds elected from the territory of the Federation, one-third from the territory of the Republic of Srpska. (...)

Article V

Presidency

The Presidency of Bosnia and Herzegovina shall consist of three Members: one Bosniac and one Croat, each directly elected from the territory of the Federation, and one Serb directly elected from the territory of the Republic of Srpska. (...)

4. Council of Ministers

The Presidency shall nominate the Chair of the Council of Ministers, who shall take office upon the approval of the House of Representatives. The Chair shall nominate a Foreign Minister, a Minister for Foreign Trade, and other Ministers as may be appropriate, who shall take office upon the approval of the House of Representatives.

Article VI

Constitutional Court

Composition

The Constitutional Court of Bosnia and Herzegovina shall have nine members.

a) Four members shall be selected by the House of Representatives of the Federation, and two members by the Assembly of the Republika Srpska. The remaining three members shall be selected by the President of the European Court of Human Rights after consultation with the Presidency. (...)

Article VII

Central Bank

There shall be a Central Bank of Bosnia and Herzegovina, which shall be the sole authority for issuing currency and for monetary policy throughout Bosnia and Herzegovina (...)<sup>92</sup>

---

<sup>92</sup> Constitution of Bosnia and Herzegovina (from: the website of the Constitutional Court of BiH www.ccbh.ba, viewed on September 2012); When it comes to the constitutional regulations regarding House of Peoples and Presidency it is important to emphasize that those articles (according to European Court of Human Rights Verdict Sejdic- Finci v. Bosnia and Herzegovina) are discriminatory to Roma and Jews peoples in Bosnia and Herzegovina who are declared as „the others“ and prohibited from standing for election to the House of People of the Parliamentary Assembly and for the State Presidency.

Structure of the federal government in the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina was established through: the Federational legislature, the Federational executive, the judicial authority, cantonal, municipal and city authorities

The legislative authority in the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina is exercised by the House of Representatives and the House of Peoples<sup>93</sup>. The House of Representatives is composed of ninety-eight delegates, provided that at least four members of one constituent people must be represented in the House of Representatives. The House of Peoples consists of fifty-eight delegates and by seventeen delegates from each of the constituent peoples and seven delegates from the "others". The term for both members of House of Representatives and House of Peoples is four years. The executive authorities in the Federation are exercised by: the President and Vice president of the Federation, the Government of the Federation, with a term of four years. The Government levels are: municipalities, ten cantons and the Federation. A judicial power is exercised by the Constitutional Court, Supreme Court, cantonal courts and municipal courts.

The National Assembly of the Republika Srpska exercises constitutional and legislative powers, and is comprised of eighty-three members, who are elected in elections held every four years. The Government of the Republika Srpska performs the executive power and the head of the Government is the Prime Minister. The President of Republika of Srpska is elected by direct election every four years. Levels of government are: the municipality or city (Banja Luka and East Sarajevo) and Republic. A judicial power is exercised by the Constitutional Court of the Republika Srpska, Supreme Court of Republika Srpska, district courts and municipal courts.

Organisation of government of the Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina by the Statute of the Brcko District is based on the division of authorities<sup>94</sup>; legislative authority is exercised by the District Assembly, executive authority is exercised by the District Government and the judicial authority is exercised by the District Courts.

The Office of the High Representative (OHR) is an ad hoc international institution responsible for overseeing implementation of civilian aspects of the Peace Agreement ending the war in Bosnia and Herzegovina. The position of High Representative was created under the General Framework Agreement for Peace in Bosnia and Herzegovina, usually referred to as the Dayton Peace Agreement. The High*

---

<sup>93</sup> IV Structure of the Federal government, a) Legislation (Article 1, Article 2, Article 6, Article 7), b) the Executive (Article 1., Article 2), The Constitution of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, ("Official Gazette of BiH", No. 1/94 of 21 July 1994), and the Preamble of the Constitution has been amended and supplemented by Amendment II Amendment XXVII

<sup>94</sup> Chapter III, the Organisation of the functions of the Brcko District, Article 19: Separation of the powers, the Statute of the Brcko District, ("Official Gazette of BDBiH", No. 1/00 and 24/05)

Representative is working with the people and institutions of Bosnia and Herzegovina and the international community to ensure that Bosnia and Herzegovina evolves into a peaceful and viable democracy on course for integration in Euro-Atlantic institutions. The OHR is working towards the point where Bosnia and Herzegovina is able to take full responsibility for its own affairs. The Steering Board of the Peace Implementation Council, the international body guiding the peace process, concluded at its July 2011 meeting, that it

“look[ed] forward to close cooperation and coordination between the enhanced EU presence, the High Representative in BiH, and other international community actors in line with their respective existing roles.”<sup>95</sup>

In order to support Bosnia and Herzegovina, the European Union has increased its commitment to the country.

ii. The Constitution of Bosnia and Herzegovina in fact represents Annex IV of the Dayton Agreement from 1995. Particular annex to this agreement is devoted to human rights and freedoms, and it is considered as a part of the Constitution of Bosnia and Herzegovina. The UN Convention on the Rights of the Child is contained in Annex I of the Dayton Peace Agreement, and has a priority over national legislation. BiH also become a signatory to two optional protocols one of which is the Optional Protocol on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography in 2000, and signed the Millennium Declaration. Article II of Constitution of Bosnia and Herzegovina entitled "Human rights and fundamental freedoms" page 2 "International Standards" provides that the rights and freedoms guaranteed by the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms apply directly in Bosnia and Herzegovina; page 3 is applicable to children.

"Finally, on the basis of the previous law practices can be said that Annex 4 of Peace Agreement is a constitutional charter of Bosnia and Herzegovina, and that 15 international human rights treaties listed in Annex I of the Constitution of Bosnia and Herzegovina, which are directly applicable in Bosnia and Herzegovina without a need for legal transformations, such as the Peace Agreement and the other annexes constitute formal constitutional law of a state."<sup>96</sup>

---

<sup>95</sup> Datas are taken from: www.ohr.int ; The current High Representative is Dr Valentin Inzko, an Austrian diplomat.

"Highlighted value deserves European Convention and its protocols. It is legal, as agreements from the annex to the BiH Constitution, under Article II / 2 Constitution, not only directly applicable, but has priority over any other law."<sup>97</sup>

The Constitution of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Article II "provides the highest level of application of internationally recognized rights and freedoms set forth in the documents in the Appendix to this constitution. Especially: j) the protection of family and children",

"Article II

The Federation will ensure the application of the highest level of internationally recognized rights and freedoms provided in the documents listed in the Annex to the Constitution.<sup>7</sup> In particular:

(1) All persons within the territory of the Federation shall enjoy the rights:

(a) To life;

(b) To liberty, with arrest and detention authorized only by law;

(c) To equality before the law;

(d) To freedom from discrimination based on race, color, sex, language, religion or creed, political or other opinions, and national or social origin;

(e) To fair criminal proceedings;

(f) To freedom from torture and cruel or inhuman treatment or punishment;

(g) To privacy;

(h) To freedom of movement;

(i) To asylum;

(j) To protection of the family and of children;

---

<sup>96</sup> Mark Joseph: Five years of constitutional courts in Bosnia and Herzegovina: First Balance

<sup>97</sup> Vehabović Faris, "Relation between the BiH Constitution and the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms," Alumni Center Association for Interdisciplinary Postgraduate Studies (ACIPS), Sarajevo, 2006, page 25

(k) To property;

(l) To fundamental freedoms: free speech and press; freedom of thought, conscience, and belief; freedom of religion, including private and public worship; freedom of assembly; freedom of association, including to form and belong to and labor unions and the freedom not to associate; and freedom to work;

(m) To education;

(n) To social protection;

(o) To health;

(p) To nutrition;

(q) To shelter; and

(r) To protection of minorities and vulnerable groups.

(2) All citizens shall enjoy the rights:

(a) To form and belong to political parties; and

(b) To political rights: to participate in public affairs; to have equal access to public service; to vote and stand for election. “<sup>98</sup>

The Constitution of Republika Srpska comprehensively regulates the rights and freedoms of citizens, organizations and institutions. The entire Chapter II of the Constitution, Article 10 to 65 which is more than a third of the entire text of the Constitution, is dedicated to the rights and freedoms. This fact alone indicates that the framers of the Constitution understood that the rights and freedoms of man and citizen's basic starting point of everything else, the economy, government, judiciary and overall health and well being of people. The citizens of the republic are equal in their freedoms, rights, and duties; they are equal before the law and shall enjoy equal protection of the law regardless of race, sex, language, ethnicity, religion, social origin, birth, education, economic status, political or other opinion, social status or any other characteristic. The Constitution of the Republika Srpska, among other things, regulates the rights and duties of parents and children.

“Article 36

---

<sup>98</sup> Article 2, Constitution of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, ("Official Gazette of FBiH", No. 1/94 of 21 July 1994)

The family, mother and child shall enjoy special protection.

Marriage and legal relations in marriage and family shall be regulated by law.

Everyone shall have the right to decide freely to have children.

Parents shall have the right and duty to take care of the upbringing and education of their children.

Children shall be bound to take care of their parents needing help.

Children born out of wedlock shall have the same rights and duties as those born in wedlock.

Minors who are parentally neglected and persons unable to look after themselves and the protection of their rights and interests shall enjoy special protection. <sup>99</sup>

The Statute of the Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina in its provisions calls for respect for the rights and freedoms from the European Convention on Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms.

“Article 13

Rights and obligation

4) All persons in the District shall enjoy the rights and freedoms that are given to them by the European Convention on Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms. These rights and freedoms will have greater legal force with respect to any law that is inconsistent with the Convention. All institutions of the District will respect these rights and freedoms. District courts will enforce those rights and freedoms in accordance with the procedures provided for in the laws of the District. When dealing with matters relating to allegations of violations of these rights and freedoms, District courts shall take into account the case law of the European Court of Human Rights.”<sup>100</sup>

iii. The Ministry of Human Rights and Refugees of Bosnia and Herzegovina and the Institution of Human Rights Ombudsmen of Bosnia and Herzegovina have the function of conducting checks of implementation of signed international documents and control of the respect of human rights and freedoms and therefore the rights of children, and there are certain institutions that monitor the progress of Bosnia and Herzegovina in the field of human rights such as the Council of Europe, the UN Committee for monitoring.

---

<sup>99</sup> Constitution of the Republika Srpska, revised text ("Official Gazette of RS", No. 3/92, 6/92, 8/92, 15/92 and 19/92)

<sup>100</sup> Article 13, Paragraph 4, (Fundamental Rights and Obligations), Statute of the Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina, ("Official Gazette of BDBiH", No. 1/00 and 24/05)

The Constitutional Court of Bosnia and Herzegovina is responsible for the adjudication of the rights specified by the Constitution of Bosnia and Herzegovina and anyone can file a lawsuit in the event of a breach of certain rights specified by the Constitution. The Constitutional Court also oversees the implementation of international and national human rights instruments. There is also the possibility of individual appeal with the Constitutional Court. But there is a hierarchy system, before you can go on with the appeal to the Constitutional Court. Appellate process in brief is as follows: since the Constitutional Court has appellate jurisdiction over issues arising out of a verdict of any lower court in Bosnia and Herzegovina, to court any legal or physical person may address, not necessarily a citizen of Bosnia and Herzegovina, within 60 days of the decision or final verdict, only when all other remedies have been exhausted. When the Constitutional Court finds that your appeal is acceptable, it can act in two ways: the first way is to be decided on the meritum of the case and notify its decision to the competent authorities of the entity, which are then obliged to follow the Constitutional Court. A second way is that the Constitutional Court declares verdict as null and returns the case to the same court for retrial. Then the lower court shall make a verdict in accordance with the decision of the Constitutional Court on the violation of human rights and fundamental freedoms of the appellant. If the lower court does not comply with the decision of the Constitutional Court, the applicant is entitled to a new appeal to the Constitutional Court which then decides on the meritum.

Besides the Constitutional Court of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Bosnia and Herzegovina have the constitutional courts of the entities: the Constitutional Court of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina and the Constitutional Court of the Republika Srpska.

Proceedings before the Constitutional Court of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina are regulated by the Law on the proceedings before Constitutional Court Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina.<sup>101</sup> The Law provides that proceedings may be instituted only by entities that are expressly authorized by of the Constitution of Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina.

---

<sup>101</sup> Law of Procedure before the Constitutional Court of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, ("Official Gazette of FBiH", No. 6/95)

These proceedings are:

- 1) When it comes to disputes between different levels of government, or of federal agencies- the process can run only those entities that have their acts authorized to represent and advocate the level of government or institution - town, city, canton, Federation or single federal institution (active card). The same subjects can be passive cards which mean they can be the other party in the dispute. They are representing by their duly authorized entity. He can authorize the other person on his behalf to represent the party in the dispute.
- 2) An application for challenging the constitutionality of the federal law, whether adopted or is in the proposal may be submitted by the President or Vice President of the Federation, the prime minister or deputy prime ministers, one third of either chamber of the Parliament Assembly of Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina.
- 3) Request for review of the constitutionality of the cantonal constitution or cantonal law (adopted or proposed) may be submitted: - Prime Minister of the Federation, an agency which represents Canton, third representatives in the legislature of the canton.
- 4) Request for review of the constitutionality of the federal government authority regulations (proposed or adopted) may be made by: - President of the Federation, Vice-President and Deputy Prime Minister of Federation.
- 5) Request for review of the constitutionality of a regulation that was passed by an authority cantonal, city or municipal governments (proposed or adopted) may be submitted by: Prime Minister of the Federation or the Cantonal authority which is authorized to represent the respective canton.
- 6) An application for for deciding a constitutional question arising in the proceedings before the Supreme Court of the Federation or the cantonal court is submit by these courts.
- 7) Request for deciding the vital national interests of the Federation shall be submitted in the event that the process fails to harmonize House of Peoples and the House of Representatives. Parliament shall add the amendments to the proceedings before the Constitutional Court of the Federation to determine who will be authorized to directly submit such a request to the Court.
- 9) Request about the decision for dismissing the president or vice-president of the Federation of BiH is submitted by the Federation Parliament after the submission of such a request is decided by both of Houses by two-thirds majority vote.

10) Appeal on the decision of the competent court which decides on the immunity is submitted by each party in the proceedings before the court.

11) The request for an opinion on a particular issue to the Constitutional Court can only be submitted by Deputy Prime Minister of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina.

Decisions of the Constitutional Court of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina are final and binding. All authorities are required to carry out and to help in the execution of the decision of the Constitutional Court of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina as well as all other courts.

There is also the Constitutional Court of the Republika Srpska, which: makes decisions on conformity of laws and other regulations and general acts with the Constitution; conformity of regulations and general acts with the law; resolves jurisdictional disputes between the legislative, executive and judicial power, conflict of jurisdiction between the authorities of the republic, cities and municipalities; conformity of programs, statutes and other legal acts of political organizations with the Constitution and the law; conformity of laws, other regulations and general acts of the National Assembly with the provisions of the Constitution on the protection of vital interests of the constituent peoples; decide on issues of immunity, which arise from legislation regulating immunity in the Republika Srpska. The Constitutional Court shall monitor events of interest for the realization of constitutionality and legality, informs highest constitutional authorities on the state and problems in this area and gives them the opinions and proposals for legislation and take other measures to ensure constitutionality and legality and protection of the rights and freedoms of citizens, organizations and communities. Proceedings before the Constitutional Court, the legal effect of its decisions and other issues regarding its organization and operation are regulated by the Law on the Constitutional Court of the Republika Srpska.<sup>102</sup>

"Article 4

1) Anyone can submit the initiative to institute proceedings to review the constitutionality and legality. Proceedings before the Constitutional Court may, without limitation, be submitted by the President, the National Assembly and the Government and other agencies, organizations, and communities under conditions specified by law.

---

<sup>102</sup> Law on the Constitutional Court of the Republic of Srpska, ("Official Gazette of RS", No. 109/2007, 99/2011)

(2) Proceedings before the Court may be initiated by:

1. The President of the Republic of Srpska
2. The National Assembly;
3. Peoples Council on matters within the constitutionally established jurisdiction;
4. The Government of the Republic of Srpska;
5. Court, if the question of the constitutionality and legality is raised in court proceedings;
6. Republican prosecutor, if the question of the constitutionality and legality is raised in the work of the public prosecution;
7. The municipality, city, company, political organization or association of citizens and other organizations, if their rights are violated which are determined by the Constitution or the law,
8. The authority which is by the Constitution and the law empowered to suspend regulations and other general acts for discrepancy with the Constitution and law. Court may initiate the procedure for assessing the constitutionality and legality. <sup>103</sup>

“Article 120

If the Constitutional Court finds that the law is not in conformity with the Constitution or any other regulation or general act is inconsistent with the Constitution or the law, the law, regulation or general act shall cease to have effect from the date of publication of the decision <sup>104</sup>

“Article 25

Participants in the process are:

1. Authorities and organizations authorized to initiate proceedings under Article 4 Paragraph 2 Law on the Constitutional Court,
2. Everyone to whose initiative proceedings are held
3. Bringer of law, regulation and general act whose constitutionality or legality is reviewed;
4. Political organization or association of citizens whose general act is being reviewed;

---

<sup>103</sup> Article 4, Law on the Constitutional Court of the Republic of Srpska, ("Official Gazette of RS", No. 109/2007, 99/2011)

<sup>104</sup> Article 120, Constitution of the Republic of Srpska, Revised text - ("Official Gazette of RS", No 3/92, 6/92, 8/92, 15/92 and 19/92)

5. Government agencies between which there is a conflict of jurisdiction which the Court decides, as well as anyone which because of the acceptance or rejection of jurisdiction could not exercise its right."<sup>105</sup>

“Article 30

In the proceedings before the Court other persons can participate which are invited by the Court. Participants in the proceedings before the Court, as well as other interested persons, may, in accordance with the Rules of Procedure of the Constitutional Court, seek access to files that are the reason for excluding the public in the work of the Court. Participant in proceeding before the Court has the right and duty, in the course of proceedings and discuss to give the initiatives, provide the necessary information and data, present and explain their position and reasons, provide answers to the allegations and the reasons of the other participants in the proceedings, and to provide evidence and take other actions relevant to decision of the Court. Participants in the proceedings before the Court bear their own costs. “<sup>106</sup>

Before submitting a proposal-initiative, the party appeals to the District Court, which is the first instance of trial jurisdiction in all legal disputes, by the place of the first instance administrative authority, as well as the requirements for the protection of freedom and the rights established by the Constitution, if such rights and freedoms are violated by a final decision or action of an official in the administrative bodies, or the responsible person in the company, institution or other legal entity, when the protection of these rights is not secured by other court protection.

In the Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina, beside the Municipal Court, there is also a Court of Appeals of the Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina, which was constructed 2001 in accordance with the Statute of the Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina and the Law on the Courts of the Brcko District.<sup>107</sup>

“Article 22

(Court of Appeals)

(1) The Court of Appeals has jurisdiction to decide on:

---

<sup>105</sup> Article 25, Law on the Constitutional Court of the Republic of Srpska, ("Official Gazette of RS", No. 109/2007, 99/2011)

<sup>106</sup> Article 30, Law on the Constitutional Court of the Republic of Srpska, ("Official Gazette of RS", No. 109/2007, 99/2011)

<sup>107</sup> Law on the Courts of Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina, ("Official Gazette of BDBiH", No. 19/07)

- Regular appeals from the Municipal Court;

- Exceptional appeals from a final verdict.

(2) In the process of decision making on the exceptional appeals the judge will not participate again.<sup>108</sup>

iv. Competence, organization and structure of the Court of Bosnia and Herzegovina<sup>109</sup> are regulated by the Law on the Court of Bosnia and Herzegovina.<sup>110</sup> The Court of Bosnia and Herzegovina has three divisions: criminal, administrative and appellate.

The Criminal Division consists of at least ten judges and has three divisions:

- Section I for War Crimes has four Trial Chambers. Two councils are composed of four judges, three domestic and one international judge. As a rule, national judge is the presiding judge.
- Section II for Organized Crime, Economic Crime and Corruption and has four chambers, composed of three judges.
- Section III for all other crimes within the jurisdiction of the Court and has four Chambers that are constituted by three national judges

“Article 7

Criminal jurisdiction

(1) As part of its criminal jurisdiction, the Court of Bosnia and Herzegovina has jurisdiction over offenses defined in the Criminal Code of Bosnia and Herzegovina and other laws of Bosnia and Herzegovina.

(2) The Court further jurisdiction over crimes defined in the laws of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Republic of Srpska and the Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina when such crimes:

<sup>108</sup> Article 22, Law on the Courts of Brcko District of BiH, ("Official Gazette of BDBiH", No. 19/07)

<sup>109</sup> The Court of Bosnia and Herzegovina was formed on the basis of a decision of the High Representative, Wolfgang Petritsch, and 20th November 2000. Later, powers and structure are essentially extended; first phase of defense reform is conducted during the previous period, and in defense reform processes are still ongoing, but it is already clear that the powers in respect of the defense to be transferred from the entities to the state level. The process of consolidation of police structures is still in progress, but it has previously formed the Ministry of Security which includes the operation of OSA and SIPA. Indirect taxation is formed and operational.

<sup>110</sup> The official revised version of Law on the Court (Službena prečišćena verzija Zakona o Sudu BiH), ("Official Gazette of BiH", No. 49/09.)

a) endanger the sovereignty, territorial integrity, political independence, national security and international subjectivity of Bosnia and Herzegovina;

b) may have serious repercussions or adverse consequences to the economy of Bosnia and Herzegovina or may have other adverse consequences for Bosnia and Herzegovina or may cause serious economic damage or other adverse consequences beyond the territory of the entities and Brcko District;

(3) The jurisdiction of the Court is also:

a) take a final and legally binding position on the implementation of the law of Bosnia and Herzegovina and the international agreements at the request of any court or entity and any court of Brcko District entrusted to implement the laws of Bosnia and Herzegovina;

b) provides practical guidance on the application of the substantive law of Bosnia and Herzegovina under the jurisdiction of the Court in connection with the crimes of genocide, crimes against humanity, war crimes and violations of the laws or customs of war, and individual responsibilities in relation to these offenses, ex officio or at the request of any entity court or the court of Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina;

c) decide on matters relating to international and inter-entity criminal law enforcement, including relations with Interpol and other international law enforcement agencies, such as the transfer of the convicted person, extradition and surrender of persons who are required by any authority in the territory of Bosnia and Herzegovina by another states or international court or tribunal;

d) Conflict of jurisdiction between the courts of the Entities and Brcko District Court of Bosnia and Herzegovina, and between the Court of Bosnia and Herzegovina and any other court;

e) Reopening of criminal proceedings for criminal offenses prescribed in the laws of the state of Bosnia and Herzegovina”<sup>111</sup>

Criminal proceedings before the Court involves the rules contained in the Law on the Court of Bosnia and Herzegovina<sup>112</sup> from Article 32 to 43, which relate to: the presumption of innocence, the rights of the suspect and the accused, the principle of ne bis in idem, the right to counsel, the right to appeal, the decision on appeal, the exemption, costs, benefits and rehabilitation-repeat request procedure. In criminal proceedings, there is the equitable use of the official languages of Bosnia and Herzegovina: Bosnian, Croatian and Serbian language, and both scripts - Cyrillic and Latin. Criminal proceedings may be initiated and conducted at the request of the Prosecutor.

---

<sup>111</sup> Article 7, Law on the Court of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Revised text ("Official Gazette of BiH", No. 49/09.), Retrieved from: www.sudbih.gov.ba

<sup>112</sup> It is a vast version of the Law on the Court, ("Official Gazette of BiH", No. 16/02)

The rules laid down in the Criminal Code of Bosnia and Herzegovina must ensure that no innocent person shall be convicted and that the perpetrator of the crime imposes criminal sanctions under the conditions prescribed by the Criminal Code of Bosnia and Herzegovina and other laws of Bosnia and Herzegovina, which prescribes criminal offenses, and the statutory procedure. The person in custody must be in its native language or in the language that he/she understands immediately informed of the reasons of deprivation of liberty and at the same time told that is not obliged to give testimony, and has the right on counsel of his own choice.

v. Although the Convention on the Rights of the Child, in Article I defines "child as a person under the age of 18 years," through an analysis of legislation in Bosnia and Herzegovina, we can conclude that the definition of a child in the legislation of Bosnia and Herzegovina is not in the way it is defined by the Convention. Specifically, in the criminal legislation of Bosnia and Herzegovina (Criminal Code of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Criminal Code of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina and the Criminal Code of Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina)<sup>113</sup> lower bound criminally responsible person is 14 years old, therefore the child is a person under 14 years, and minor is a person under 18 years, when he/she gains the ability for tortious act.

“Article 84

Juvenile criminal sanctions

(1) a juvenile perpetrator of a criminal offense may be imposed with corrective measures and certain security measures, and older juvenile may be sentenced to juvenile prison.

(2) A minor who is at the time of the commitment of the offense was between fourteen and sixteen years of age (a junior juvenile) may be imposed only corrective measures.

---

<sup>113</sup> Article 1 paragraphs 8 and 9 of the Criminal Code of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Article 2, paragraphs 9 and 10 of the Criminal Code of FBiH, Article 9 and 10, paragraph 2 of the Criminal Code BDBiH

(3) A minor who is at the time of the commitment of the criminal offense was sixteen, but had not reached eighteen years of age (a senior juvenile) educational measures may be imposed under the conditions prescribed by the law and exceptionally a punishment of juvenile imprisonment.

(4) A minor may be imposed with safety measures under the conditions prescribed by the law.

(5) A minor can not be sentenced with judicial admonition or a suspended sentence.<sup>114</sup>

The Criminal Code of the Republika Srpska does not contain a definition of children and minors, but requires "Exclusion of criminal sanctions for children":

"Against a minor which at the time of the felony was less than 14 years of age (child) cannot be applied criminal sanctions."<sup>115</sup>

The Criminal Procedure Code of Bosnia and Herzegovina<sup>116</sup>, the Law on Criminal procedure of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina<sup>117</sup> and the Law on Criminal Procedure of the Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina<sup>118</sup>, signs that it will suspend the criminal proceedings and notify the guardian authority, if in the course of the proceeding is founded that the juvenile at time of the felony was under 14 years of age. The Code of Criminal Procedure of the Republika Srpska<sup>119</sup> stipulates that the procedure can not be run against a minor who has not attained the age of 14 years.

When it comes to statistics about the children-inmates, unfortunately there is no adequate system of registration of all cases of juvenile delinquency, it remains difficult to get to the actual state of the problem, pointed out by the UN Committee on the Rights of Children:

<sup>114</sup> Article 84, Criminal Code of Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, ("Official Gazette of FBiH", No. 36/03)

<sup>115</sup> Article 64, Criminal Code of the Republika Srpska, ("Official Gazette of RS", No. 49/03, 108/04, 37/06, 70/06)

<sup>116</sup> Article 341, Code of Criminal Procedure of Bosnia and Herzegovina, ("Official Gazette of BiH", No. 03/03, 32/03, 36/03, 26/04, 63/04, 13/05, 48/05, 46/06, 76 / 06, 29/07, 32/07, 53/07, 76/07, 15/08, 12/09 and 16/09)

<sup>117</sup> Article 362, Code of Criminal Procedure of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, ("Official Gazette of FBiH", No. 35/03, corr. 56/03, corr. 37/03, 28/05, 55/06, 27/07, 53/07 and 9/09)

<sup>118</sup> Article 341, Code of Criminal Procedure Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina, ("Official Gazette of BDBiH", No. 10/03, 48/04, 6/05, 14/07, 19/07, 21/07 and 2/08)

<sup>119</sup> Article 347, Criminal Procedure Code of the Republika Srpska, ("Official Gazette of RS", No. 50/03, 111/04, 115/04, 29/07)

"The position of the UN Committee for the control is that there are no data on minors in conflict with the law, which is one of the many negative items that this committee attributed BiH regarding the application of the Convention on the Rights of the Child."<sup>120</sup>

"According to the statistics, which were published in one of the daily newspapers in Bosnia-Herzegovina, about 33,000 minors since 1999 by 2008 committed one or more offenses. At about 30,000 cases led to the appropriate criminal proceedings, and about 22,000 juveniles were sentenced to one of the sanctions provided by the law. However, official statistics do not reflect the real situation, because there is a significant number of an undiscovered juvenile crime. These official data show more how much efficient is society's response to this phenomenon, how police reacts, the prosecution and the court, official data does not provide a realistic picture.

<sup>121</sup>

2 SUBSTANTIVE CRIMINAL LAW

2.1 Sexual Abuse

i. The term "sexual activity" is not explicitly defined in the law. In the nineteenth chapter of the Criminal Code of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina<sup>122</sup> and the Criminal Code of the Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina<sup>123</sup>, are defined crimes against sexual freedom and morality and there are implied: rape, sexual intercourse with a helpless person, sexual intercourse with abuse of position, sexual coercion intercourse, sexual intercourse with a child, indecent acts, satisfying lust in front of a child or a minor, promoting prostitution, exploitation of children and minors for pornography, introducing a child to pornography and incest.

In the Criminal Code of the Republika Srpska sexual violence against children is regulated in Art. 195. It's a brand new incrimination in the criminal legislation of the Republic of Serpska introduced by reforms in 2000 and that in several forms protects the integrity of the child , where the first paragraph provides the basic form of this felony is

---

<sup>120</sup> Analysis of compatibility of BiH legislation with the Convention on the Rights of the Child, ombudsman institutions in BiH, November 2009, Sarajevo
<http://www.ombudsmen.gov.ba/materijali/analizauskkladjenostibih.pdf>

<sup>121</sup> The daily "Blic"

<sup>122</sup> Articles: 203 to 213, Criminal Code of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, ("Official Gazette of FBiH ", No. 36/03)

<sup>123</sup> Articles: 200 to 210, Criminal Law of the Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina", ("Official Gazette of BDBiH", No. 10/03, 45/04, 6/05)

"one who commits sexual intercourse or any other sexual act with a child."<sup>124</sup> The essence of this characterization is an absolute ban on any sexual acts with a child, regardless of that they may be voluntary or initiated by the child.

ii. The Criminal Code of Bosnia and Herzegovina (Article 35)<sup>125</sup>, the Criminal Code of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina (Article 37), the Criminal Code of Republika Srpska (Article 15), the Criminal Code of Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina (Article 37), refers to the "intent" and includes direct or indirect intent, which differ by whether the offender was aware of his actions and wanted its perpetration or was aware that the result of his action or inaction may have prohibited consequence, but agreed to its occurrence. The perpetrator is guilty of a crime if done with the intent of article 33 (2) of the Criminal Code of Bosnia and Herzegovina and Article 35 (2) of the Criminal Code of Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina and the Criminal Law of Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina.

The Criminal Code of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina defines criminal responsibility and provides the following penalties for intentionally committed a crime of sexual abuse

"Article 207

Sexual Intercourse with a Juvenile

(1) Whoever performs sexual intercourse or an equivalent sexual act with a child shall be punished by imprisonment of one to eight years.

(2) Whoever commits violent sexual intercourse or an equivalent sexual act with a child (Rape Article 203, paragraph 1) or a disabled child (Article 204 Sexual intercourse with a helpless person, paragraph 1), shall be punished by imprisonment at least three years.

(3) Whoever performs sexual intercourse or an equivalent sexual act with a child by abuse of position (Article 205 Sexual intercourse by abuse of position, paragraph 2), shall be punished by imprisonment of one to ten years.

---

<sup>124</sup> Article 159, paragraph 1, Criminal Code of the Republika Srpska , ("Official Gazette of RS", No. 49/03, 108/04, 37/06, 70/06)

<sup>125</sup> Criminal Code of Bosnia and Herzegovina ("Official Gazette of BiH, No. 37/03, 54/04, 61/04, 30/05, 55/06, 32/07)

(4) Whoever perpetrates the criminal offense referred to in paragraph 1 to 3 of this Article in a particularly cruel or degrading particular way, or in the same occasion towards the same victim committed several sexual intercourses or equivalent sexual acts by several perpetrators shall be punished by imprisonment for at least five years.

(5) If the criminal offense referred to in paragraphs 1 to 3 this Article, the death of a child, or a child serious bodily injury, or its health is severely impaired, or the female child is left pregnant, the perpetrator shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than five years or a long term sentence.

Article 208

Indecent acts

(1) Whoever in the cases of Art. 203rd (Rape), 204 (Sexual intercourse with a helpless person), 205 (Sexual intercourse by abuse of position) and 206 (Forced sexual intercourse) of this law, when there is no attempt of that crime, only an indecent act, shall be punished by imprisonment of three months to three years.

(2) Who in the case under Article 207 (Sexual intercourse with a child) of this law, when there is no attempt of that crime, so only a indecent act, or with the criminal offense referred to in paragraph 1 this Article against a child or a minor, shall be punished by imprisonment of six months to five years.

Article 209

Satisfying Lust in front of a child or minor

Whoever in front of a child or minor takes actions aimed at satisfying one's own or someone else's lust, or who indicated that the child in front of him or another person performs such acts, shall be punished by imprisonment of three months to three years.<sup>126</sup>

In the Criminal Code of the Republika Srpska subjective side of felony makes intent which must include the awareness of the perpetrator in terms of age of a passive subject. If the perpetrators of the act were not aware of the fact that the passive subject is a person below 14 years, there will be a real mistake. Determining the real mistake of the offender shall be based on all the circumstances of the case. For the basic form of the felony is provided a prison sentence of 1-8 years.

---

<sup>126</sup>Articles: 207, 208 and 209, Criminal Code of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, ("Official Gazette of FBiH", No. 36/03 corr. 21/04, 69/04, 18/05)

iii. Bosnian law does not contain an express provision that stipulates the age of entry into sexual activity. However, the appropriate interpretation of positive solutions of family and criminal law can be stated as follows:

According to family law legal ability is acquired at legal age, which means with 18 years old or marriage before the legal age.<sup>127</sup> Legal ability may acquire the person who turned 16 years, provided that there has been dispensations Court in contentious proceedings, that is to eliminate all matrimonial obstacles. Legal ability can acquire minor over the age of 16 year, which has become a parent. The issue of acquiring limited legal capacity or the consequences that implies limited legal capacity are, in our opinion, of crucial importance to this question.<sup>128</sup>

Minor at the age of 14 years with limited exercise rights capacity, in civil legal aspect means that it can enter into legal issues that are of benefit to that person. Family legislation gives the possibility of a person who has a limited capacity to acknowledge paternity and maternity, provided that such persons are capable to understand the meaning of recognition statement.

Taking into account of these legal solutions, it could be concluded that our law does not allow minors less than 14 years entry into sexual activity. As a mainstay of this, there is a solution of criminal legislation, the age of 14 years is associated with the exclusion of criminal responsibility of minors under 14 years of age.

"A minor who was at the time of the commitment of the offense between fourteen and sixteen years of age (a junior juvenile) may be imposed only corrective measures."<sup>129</sup>

"To a minor, who was at the time of the offense under 14 years of age (child) criminal sanctions can not be applied to."<sup>130</sup>

---

<sup>127</sup> Article 157, Family Code of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, ("Official gazette of FBiH", No. 35/05 i 41/05)

<sup>128</sup> Article 57, Family Law of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, ("Official gazette of FBiH", No. 35/05 i 41/05)

<sup>129</sup> Article 84, paragraph 2 of the Criminal Code of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina ("Official Gazette of FBiH", No. 36/03 corr. 21/04, 69/04, 18/05)

<sup>130</sup> Articles: 200 to 210, Criminal Law of the Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina", No. 10/03, 45/04, 6/05)
("Official Gazette of BD BiH"), Article 64, Criminal Code of RS ("Official Gazette of RS", No. 49/03, 108/04, 37/06, 70/06)

"The criminal legislation of the Brcko District shall not apply to a child, who at the time of the commitment of the offense is younger than fourteen years of age. "131

Till the age of 14 the person is kept in a stage of development where their personality is not able to fully grasp the meaning and importance of sexual intercourse. Therefore, person cannot decide on matters of sexual sphere of life. Such criminally solution is based on the legal concept of a disability of a person of certain age to generally possesses free will in terms of adherence to commit rape or other sexual acts, or if such will expresses consent absolutely is not legally relevant.

iv. The Criminal Code of Bosnia and Herzegovina in Article 172 regulates the use of violence and threats in terms of sexual offenses as a crime against humanity;

"Coercing another by force or by threat of immediate attack upon his life or limb, or the life or limb of a person close to him, to sexual intercourse or an equivalent sexual act (rape), sexual slavery, enforced prostitution, forced pregnancy, enforced sterilisation or any other form of sexual violence of comparable gravity shall be punished by imprisonment for a term not less than ten years or long-term imprisonment. "132

The Criminal Code of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina regulates this issue with Article 206:

"Whoever has forced another person into sexual intercourse by use of serious threat to reveal something that would seriously harm that person's honor or reputation or that of a person close to him/her, or by seriously threatening that person with some other harm, shall be punished by imprisonment for a term between six months and five years"133

In Article 207 of the same law that applies to the criminal offense of sexual intercourse with a child, is governed:

"Whoever commits violent sexual intercourse or an equivalent sexual act with a child or a disabled child shall be punished by imprisonment of at least three years. If it is sexual acts

---

<sup>131</sup> Article 9, Criminal Code of the Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina ("Official Gazette of BD BiH", No. 10/03, 45/04, 6/05)

<sup>132</sup> Article 172, Criminal Code of Bosnia and Herzegovina ("Official Gazette of BiH, No. 37/03, 54/04, 61/04, 30/05, 55/06, 32/07)

<sup>133</sup> Article 206, Criminal Code of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina , ("Official Gazette of FBiH, No. 36/03 corr. 21/04, 69/04, 18/05)

with a child by abuse of position person shall be punished by imprisonment for one to ten years.”<sup>134</sup>

The Criminal Code of the Republika Srpska predicts in Article 195, paragraph 2:

„In the event when violent sexual intercourse or any other sexual act is committed with a child or a disabled person, there is a qualified form of the crime of sexual violence against children.”<sup>135</sup>

The Criminal Code of Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina also regulates the use of force and threats in connection with the commission of sexual offenses

“Whoever forces another person or threat of immediate attack upon her life or limb, or the life or limb of a person close to him, to sexual intercourse or an equivalent sexual act shall be punished by imprisonment of one to ten years.”<sup>136</sup>

When it comes to sexual misconduct by using force and taking advantage of disability, in Article 204 of the Criminal Code of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina and in Article 201 of the Criminal Code of Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina, this offense is defined as "sexual intercourse with a helpless person," and specifies the details of the same:

„(1) Whoever has had a sexual intercourse with another person taking advantage of that person's mental disease, temporary mental disorder, infirmity or any other state of that person which makes him/her incapable of resisting, shall be punished by imprisonment for a term between one and eight years.

(2) Whoever perpetrates the criminal offense referred to in paragraph 1 of this Article to the person whose state of incapacity for resistance is caused or participated by the perpetrator, shall be punished according to Article 203 (Rape) paragraph 1 of this law.

(3) Whoever perpetrates the criminal offense referred to in paragraph 1 of this Article in a particularly cruel or degrading particular way, or in the same occasion to the same victim committed sexual intercourse or equivalent sexual acts from multiple perpetrators shall be punished by imprisonment of one to ten years.

---

<sup>134</sup> Article 207 (2), (3), Criminal Code of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, ("Official Gazette of FBiH", No. 36/03, 21/04, 69/04, 18/05)

<sup>135</sup> Article 195, (2), Criminal Code of the Republika Srpska, ("Official Gazette of RS", No. 49/03, 108/04, 37/06, 70/06)

<sup>136</sup> Article 200, Paragraph 1, Criminal Code the Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina, ("Official Gazette of BDBiH", No. 10/03, 45/04, 6/05)

(4) Whoever perpetrates the criminal offense referred to in paragraph 2 of this Article in a particularly cruel or degrading particular way or in the same occasion to the same victim committed sexual intercourse or equivalent sexual acts by several perpetrators shall be punished according to Article 203 Paragraph 2 of this law.

(5) If the criminal offense referred to in paragraph 1 this Article, caused the death of the person with whom was performed sexual intercourse or an equivalent sexual act, or made severely bodily injuries or his health is severely impaired, or if the female child is pregnant, the perpetrator shall be punished by imprisonment for 1 to 10 years.

(6) If the criminal offense referred to in paragraph 3 and 4 of this Article, the consequence referred to in paragraph 5 this Article, the perpetrator shall be punished by imprisonment for three years.<sup>137</sup>

The Criminal Code of the Republika Srpska defines this offense as "sexual intercourse with a helpless person in Article 194:

"(1) Whoever over another person commits incest or other sexual act taking advantage of mental illness, lack of mental development, another mental disorder, disability or any other condition of that person due to which it is unable to resist, shall be punished by imprisonment of six months to five years.

2) If the criminal offense referred to in paragraph 1 this Article was committed against a minor in a particularly cruel or degrading particular way, or the in same occasion committed several acts by several persons, or made severe bodily injuries, serious impairment of health or pregnancy of helpless female child, the offender shall be punished with imprisonment of three to fifteen years.

(3) If the offense referred to in paragraph 1 and 2 this Article, caused the death of the person against whom the offense was committed, the offender shall be punished by imprisonment of at least five years.<sup>138</sup>

v. The crime of Incest is regulated by Article 213 of the Criminal Code of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, which states that:

"Whoever performs sexual intercourse or an equivalent sexual act with a blood relative in a straight line or a brother or sister, shall be punished by a fine or by imprisonment of six months to two years, if the same act is done with a minor penalty for the offender's sentence shall be 1 to 5 years, and if it is a case of a child is offender shall be punished by imprisonment for two to ten years"<sup>139</sup>

<sup>137</sup>Article 204, Criminal Code of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, ("Official Gazette of FBiH, No. 36/03 21/04, 69/04, 18/05) and Article 201, Criminal Code of the Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina, ("Official Gazette of BD BiH", No. 10/03, 45/04, 6/05)

<sup>138</sup> Criminal Code of the Republika Srpska, ("Official Gazette of RS", No. 49/03, 108/04, 37/06, 70/06)

Offense of incest, or incest in the Criminal Code of the Republika Srpska is stipulated in Article 201 'The basic form of this offense is designed in paragraph 1 and represents "the conduct of rape between relatives in a straight line, brother or a sister."<sup>140</sup>

The Criminal Code of Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina provides the same definition of incest as the Criminal Code of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, but requires a different level of the penalties. (Article 210)

vi. Punishment by the Criminal Code of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina and the Criminal Code of Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina for:

„teachers, educators, parents, adoptive parent, guardian, stepfather, stepmother, or other person who abused their position or relationship with a minor who has been entrusted to them for learning, education, child care or care, commits sexual intercourse with a child shall be sentenced from six months to five years."<sup>141</sup>

Under the Criminal Code of the Republika Srpska it is regulated:

"If the offense of sexual violence committed against children by teacher, educator, guardian, adoptive parent, a doctor, a religious official or other person who abuse their position for the child entrusted to him for learning, education, child care, it is a qualified form of this offense which carries a sentence of 5 to 15 years."<sup>142</sup>

2.2 Child Prostitution

vii. Bosnia and Herzegovina signed Council of Europe Convention on Action Against Human Trafficking on January 19th 2006, after that Convention has been ratified on January 11th 2008.

viii. Analysis conducted by the Ombudsman for Human Rights in Bosnia and Herzegovina shows:

<sup>139</sup> Criminal Code of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina ("Official Gazette of FBiH", No. 36/03)

<sup>140</sup> Article 201, paragraph 1, The Criminal Code of the Republika Srpska ("Official Gazette of RS", No. 49/03, 108/04, 37/06, 70/06)

<sup>141</sup> Article 205, Criminal Code of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina ("Official Gazette of FBiH", No. 36/03 corr. 21/04, 69/04, 18/05) and Article 202, Criminal Code of Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina, ("Official Gazette of Brcko District BIH ", No. 10/03, 45/04, 6/05)

<sup>142</sup> Criminal Code of the Republika Srpska, ("Official Gazette of RS", No. 49/03, 108/04, 37/06, 70/06)

"A high degree of non-compliance of national legislation with the Convention on the Rights of the Child and the implementation of the Optional Protocol of the Convention relating to trafficking of children, child prostitution and child pornography. Part of this discrepancy is reflected in the definitions of certain legal terms and offenses, among them are child prostitution and child pornography."<sup>143</sup>

In the Criminal Code of Bosnia and Herzegovina there is not defined crime of "child prostitution", but the Criminal Code of Bosnia and Herzegovina sanctions criminal offenses: "slavery and transportation of persons in this respect, human trafficking, international recruitment for prostitution, trafficking in persons, taking hostages"<sup>144</sup> In the Criminal Code of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina and the Criminal Code of Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina for the crime of "solicitation for prostitution"<sup>145</sup> predicts special punishment in the event when the offense was committed against a child or a minor. Also, in the Criminal Code of the Republika Srpska for the crime of "trafficking of persons for the purpose of prostitution"<sup>146</sup> predicts special punishment in the event that the offense was committed against a child or a minor.

The basic form of these offenses ("solicitation for prostitution" and "trafficking for prostitution") is committed by one:

"(1) Whoever, for profit solicitates, encourages or entices another person to provide sexual services or in some other way allows a person to be handed to another to provide sexual services, or in any way involved in organizing or managing prostitution.

(4) If the offenses referred to in the preceding paragraphs were made towards a child or a minor, the offender shall be punished by imprisonment of one to twelve years."<sup>147</sup>

---

<sup>143</sup> Report of the Ombudsmen for Human Rights in Bosnia and Herzegovina on the implementation of the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography, downloaded http://www.ombudsmen.gov.ba/materijali/Seksualna\_eksploatacija\_djece.pdf

<sup>144</sup> Article: 185, 186, 187, 189, 191, Criminal Code of Bosnia and Herzegovina, ("Official Gazette of BiH, No. 37/03, 54/04, 61/04, 30/05, 55/06, 32/07)

<sup>145</sup> Article 210, The Criminal Code of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, ("Official Gazette of FBiH", No. 36/03), Article 207, Criminal Code of the Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina, ("Official Gazette of BD BiH", No. 10/03, 45/04, 6/05)

<sup>146</sup> Article 198, Criminal Code of the Republika Srpska, ("Official Gazette of RS", No. 49/03, 108/04, 37/06, 70/06)

<sup>147</sup> Article 210, paragraph 1, paragraph 4, of the Criminal Code of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina ("Official Gazette of FBiH", No. 36/03), Article 207, paragraph 1, paragraph 4, Criminal Code of the Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina, ("Official Gazette of BDBiH", No. 10/03, 45/04, 6/05) and

We come to the conclusion that the definition of "child prostitution" does not exist in the criminal legislation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, thus not in compliance with the Lanzarote Convention, which Bosnia and Herzegovina still did not ratify. But "child prostitution" is derived from criminal acts "Solicitation for prostitution" and "Human trafficking for prostitution," which regulates certain penalty for the perpetrators of these crimes against children or minors.

ix. In the Criminal Code of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina and the Criminal Code of Brcko District<sup>148</sup>, is determined that only the person who solicitates, encourages or entices another person to offer sexual services, or in any other way involved in organizing or managing prostitution may be punished by imprisonment for one up to five years, but not the user. The Criminal Code of the Republika Srpska<sup>149</sup> provides that the crime of trafficking for prostitution is made by whoever participates in any way in organizing or managing prostitution. Of course, if it's done against the child in proceedings shall be qualified form of this act.

2.3 Child Pornography

x. Bosnia and Herzegovina signed Council of Europe Convention on Cybercrime on February 9th 2005 and it had been ratified on May 19th 2006.

xi. As in the case of child prostitution, Bosnia and Herzegovina, in its legislation does not have exactly defined crime as "child pornography." Nearest contents of one offense in the legislation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, the content of Article 20 ("Child pornography") Lanzarote Convention, is provided in the Criminal Code of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Article 211, which relates to the criminal offense of "abuse of a child or a minor for pornography," and Article 212 relating to the criminal offense of "Introduction a child to pornography."

"Article 211"

---

Article 198, paragraph 1, paragraph 4 of the criminal Code of Republika Srpska, ("Official Gazette of RS", No. 49/03, 108/04, 37/06, 70/06)

<sup>148</sup> Article 210, Criminal Code of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, ("Official Gazette of FBiH", No. 36/03), Article 207, Criminal Code of the Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina, ("Official Gazette of BD BiH", No. 10/03, 45/04, 6/05)

<sup>149</sup> Article 198, Criminal Code of Republika Srpska, ("Official Gazette of RS", No. 49/03, 108/04, 37/06, 70/06)

The exploitation of a child or a minor for pornography

(1) Whoever uses child or a minor for taking photographs, audiovisual materials, or other pornographic content, or possesses, or imports or sells or distributes or shows such material, or such persons make to participate in pornographic performance, shall be punished by imprisonment of one up to five years.

(2) Items that are intended or used for the perpetration of criminal offense referred to in paragraph 1 shall be forfeited and the items that resulted from the perpetration of criminal offense referred to in paragraph 1 this Article shall be confiscated and destroyed.

Article 212

Introducing a child to pornography

(1) Whoever sells, shows or public display or otherwise makes available documents, photographs, audio-visual and other items of pornographic content or pornographic show, shall be punished by a fine or imprisonment up to one year.

(2) Items referred to in paragraph 1 this Article shall be forfeited. <sup>150</sup>

Same offenses are codified in the Criminal Code of Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina in the articles 208 and 209.<sup>151</sup>

The Criminal Code of the Republika Srpska contains two charges relating to the abuse of children and minors in the area of pornography. The first is "The exploitation of children and minors for pornography"<sup>152</sup> and the other "Production and display of child pornography".<sup>153</sup> The first provision is punishable by 6 months to 5 years for those who abuse a child or a minor to produce images, audio-visual materials and other or other objects of pornographic content, or a child or a minor use for pornographic show. A second provision is a novelty in the criminal legislation of the Republic of Srpska. The basic form of this act is done by a person who provides, distributes, publicly exhibits or displays, or otherwise makes available documents, photographs, audio-visual or other objects containing

<sup>150</sup> Article 211 and 212, Criminal Code of of the Federation Bosnia and Herzegovina, ("Official Gazette of FBiH", No. 36/03)

<sup>151</sup> Article 208 and 209, Criminal Code the Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina, ("Official Gazette of BDBiH", No. 10/03, 45/04, 6/05)

<sup>152</sup>Article 199, Criminal Code of Republika Srpska,S ("Official Gazette of RS", No. 49/03, 108/04, 37/06, 70/06)

<sup>153</sup> Article 200, Criminal Code of Republika Srpska, ("Official Gazette of RS", No. 49/03, 108/04, 37/06, 70/06)

child pornography or whoever produces such materials, acquires or holds or presents child pornographic show. This offense is punishable by fines or imprisonment up to 1 year.

Since Bosnia and Herzegovina ratified the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child, on the Trafficking of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography, the goal of Bosnia and Herzegovina is the protection of children from trafficking, child prostitution and child pornography, in order to prevent the trafficking of children and in line with the fulfillment of this goal Bosnia and Herzegovina has developed an Action plan for Children 2011-2014 and the implementation of it will take a step forward in protecting of children and their rights in Bosnia and Herzegovina.<sup>154</sup>

xii. Article 211 of the Criminal Code of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina and Article 208 of the Criminal Code of Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina, which are related to the criminal offense of "exploitation of children or minors for pornography" punishment is determined by imprisonment of one to five years for one who uses a child or a minor for making pictures, audiovisual materials, or other pornographic content or possesses, or imports or sells or distributes or shows such material or makes such persons to participate in pornographic performance, and Article 212 of the Criminal Code of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina and Article 209 of the Criminal Code of Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina, which is related to the crime of "Introducing a child to pornography" punishment is determined by fine or imprisonment up to one year for those who sells, shows or public display or otherwise makes available documents, photographs, audio-visual and other items of pornographic content or pornographic show. The Criminal Code of the Republika Srpska in provision "Exploitation of children and minors for pornography" (Article 199)<sup>155</sup> provides a penalty of imprisonment of six months to five years for anyone who abuses a child or a minor to produce images, audio-visual materials and other items of pornographic or other content, or uses a child or a minor for pornographic show. A second provision "Production and display of child pornography" (Article 200)<sup>156</sup> provides a fine or imprisonment up to one year for the one who offers, distributes, publicly exhibits or displays, or otherwise makes available documents, photographs, audio-visual and

---

<sup>154</sup> The Action Plan for Children 2011-2014, the Ministry for Human Rights and Refugees, July 2011, Sarajevo

<sup>155</sup> Article 199, Criminal Code of Republika Srpska, ("Official Gazette of RS", No. 49/03, 108/04, 37/06, 70/06)

<sup>156</sup> Article 200, Criminal Code of Republika Srpska, ("Official Gazette of RS", No. 49/03, 108/04, 37/06, 70/06)

other objects containing child pornography or who such materials produces, acquires or holds or presents child pornographic show.

xiii. Article 211, paragraph 2 of the Criminal Code of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina<sup>157</sup> and Article 208, paragraph 2 of the Criminal Code of Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina<sup>158</sup>, provision "exploitation of children or minors for pornography," it was determined that the objects intended or used for the perpetration of criminal offense referred to in paragraph 1 of this Article shall be forfeited and the items that were created by the perpetration of the crime paragraph 1 this Article shall be confiscated and destroyed. As far as criminal offenses under Article 212 of the Criminal Code of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina and Article 209 of the Criminal Code of Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina "Introducing a child to pornography", in paragraph 2 of this Article holds that the objects from the first paragraph will be confiscated.

Article 199, paragraph 2 of the Criminal Code of the Republika Srpska<sup>159</sup>, the provision of "Exploitation of children and minors for pornography," determined that items and funds under paragraph 1 this provision shall be seized. Article 200, paragraph 5, the provisions of the "Production and display of child pornography," determined that items and funds under paragraph 1 and 2 this provision shall be seized.

Bosnia and Herzegovina has signed and ratified the Lanzarote Convention not long time ago. In recent times, there is more evidence of the dangers of the spread of child pornography over the Internet and the measures to be taken. Connection to this, large number of international laws were adopted and a special significance for our criminal law has a Council of Europe Convention on Cyber Crime and the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child, on the trafficking of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography. They define specific measures aimed at fighting and preventing child pornography.

xiv. In the above-mentioned provisions of criminal legislation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, which are related to "child pornography," we realize that there is punishment for any form

---

<sup>157</sup> Article 211 and 212, Criminal Code of the Federation Bosnia and Herzegovina, ("Official Gazette of FBiH", No. 36/03)

<sup>158</sup> Article 208 and 209, Criminal Code of of the Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina, ("Official Gazette of BD BiH ", No. 10/03, 45/04, 6/05)

<sup>159</sup> Article 199 and 200, Criminal Code of Republika Srpska, ("Official Gazette of RS", No. 49/03, 108/04, 37/06, 70/06)

of involvement, abuse, exploitation, or guidance of children and minors in pornography, therewith in the criminal laws of Bosnia and Herzegovina is provided the same penalty regardless of whether the control or involvement of children and minors in pornography. The penalty is not included for those who attend in pornographic performance, which includes the participation of children in the same.

2.4 Corruption of Children

xv. There is an article 209 of the Criminal Code of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina and Article 206 of the Criminal Code of Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina, which is related to the criminal offense of "Satisfying Lust in front of a child or a minor," and includes a penalty for that:

"Whoever in front of a child or minor takes actions aimed at satisfying one's own or someone else's lust, or who forces the child in front of him or another person to perform such acts, shall be punished by imprisonment of three months to three years."<sup>160</sup>

Within this article and the offense it is not listed in any way to imply how the child or minor is forced on attending this act. In Article 197 of the Criminal Code of the Republika Srpska criminal offense "satisfaction of the sexual passion in front of others."<sup>161</sup> This offense was introduced into the criminal legislation of the Republic of Serbian by the reform in 2000, which criminalises sexual acts performed in front of others and in public. A severe form of this act exists when in the presence of a child or a minor act is done in intention of satisfying his own or others' sexual passion or when a child is forced in front of perpetrator or some other person do such actions. The perpetrator must be aware of the fact that the passive subject is a child or a minor. Even attempting this offense is punishable.

2.5 Solicitation of Children for Sexual Purposes

xvi. The criminal legislation of Bosnia and Herzegovina does not define or determine in great detail the "child pornography" in terms of deliberate satisfying of an adult with child pornography through information and communication technology, and also does not specify that an adult has to propose a meeting with the child in order to be convicted of this offense.

---

<sup>160</sup> Article 209 Criminal Code of Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, ("Official Gazette of FBiH", No. 36/03) and Article 206, Criminal Code of the Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina, ("Official Gazette of BD BiH", No. 10/03, 45/04, 6/05)

<sup>161</sup> Article 197, Criminal Code of Republika Srpska, ("Official Gazette of RS", No. 49/03, 108/04, 37/06, 70/06)

xvii. Yes, the criminal legislation of Bosnia and Herzegovina incriminate:

- Attempt (Article 26 of the Criminal Code of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Article 28 of the Criminal Code of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Article 20 of the Criminal Code of the Republic of Srpska, Article 28 of the Criminal Code of Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina);

- Complicity (Article 29 of the Criminal Code of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Article 31 of the Criminal Code of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Article 23 of the Criminal Code of the Republic of Srpska, Article 31 of the Criminal Code of Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina);

- the Incitement (Article 30 of the Criminal Code of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Article 32 of the Criminal Code of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Article 24 of the Criminal Code of the Republic of Srpska, Article 32 of the Criminal Code of Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina);

- Helping /assistance (Article 31 of the Criminal Code of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Article 33 of the Criminal Code of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Article 25 of the Criminal Code of the Republic of Srpska, Article 33 of the Criminal Code of Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina)

2.6 Corporate Liability

xviii. Reforms in the criminal legislation of Bosnia and Herzegovina during 2003. "Stipulates the responsibility of a legal person for the offense, which was done by the executant in the name, for the account or for benefit of a legal person."<sup>162</sup>

The Criminal Code of Bosnia and Herzegovina regulates the issue of the liability of legal persons for criminal offences, and it regulates the criminal procedure against legal persons shall be conducted to the Criminal Procedure Code of Bosnia and Herzegovina.<sup>163</sup>

---

<sup>162</sup> H. Sijerčić-Čolić, "Criminal Procedure Law" (Book I, "The criminal process operators and criminal acts"), Sarajevo, 2008. page 201

<sup>163</sup> Chapter XIV, Liability of legal persons for criminal offenses, Article 122, paragraph 4 of the Criminal Code of Bosnia and Herzegovina, ("Official Gazette of BiH, No. 37/03, 54/04, 61/04, 30/05, 55 / 06, 32/07)

Basis of Liability of a Legal Person

Article 124

For a criminal offence perpetrated in the name of, for account of or for the benefit of the legal person, the legal person shall be liable: a) When the purpose of the criminal offence is arising from the conclusion, order or permission of its managerial or supervisory bodies; or b) When its managerial or supervisory bodies have influenced the perpetrator or enabled him to perpetrate the criminal offence; or c) When a legal person disposes of illegally obtained property gain or uses objects acquired in the criminal offence; or d) When its managerial or supervisory bodies failed to carry out due supervision over the legality of work of the employees.

Limits of Liability of a Legal Person

Article 125

(1) Within the conditions referred to in Article 124 (Basis of Liability of a Legal Person) of this Code, a legal person shall also be liable for a criminal offence when the perpetrator is not criminally liable for the perpetrated criminal offence.

(2) Liability of the legal person shall not exclude criminal liability of physical or responsible persons for the perpetrated criminal offence.

(3) For criminal offences perpetrated out of negligence, a legal person may be liable under the conditions referred to in Article 124, item d) of this Code, and in that case the legal person may be punished less severely.

(4) When in the legal person except from the perpetrator there is no other person or body that could direct or supervise the perpetrator, the legal person shall be liable for the criminal offence within the limits of the perpetrator's liability.

If a Legal Person perpetrates criminal offence prescribed by some of the criminal codes in Bosnia and Herzegovina, than the Criminal Code of Bosnia and Herzegovina prescribes these sanctions to that Legal Person:

Dissolution of the Legal Person

Article 134

(1) Dissolution of a legal person may be imposed in the case that its activities were entirely or partly being used for the purposes of perpetrating criminal offences.

(2) Besides the dissolution of a legal person, the property seizure punishment may be imposed.

(3) In addition to the dissolution of a legal person, the court shall propose the opening of a liquidation procedure.

(4) Creditors may be paid out from the property of the legal person upon which the punishment of dissolution has been imposed.

Laws Prescribing the Criminal Offences of Legal Persons

Article 143

Legal persons may be held accountable for criminal offences defined in this Code and other criminal offences defined by a law of Bosnia and Herzegovina.

Criminal liability of legal persons, is also provided in the entity criminal laws, the Criminal Code of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina Chapter XIV incriminate "Corporate liability for criminal acts"<sup>164</sup>, in the Criminal Code of the Republika Srpska Chapter XIV also criminalize "The responsibility of legal persons for criminal acts"<sup>165</sup>, as in the Criminal Code of Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina, where there is also article XIV "liability of legal persons for criminal offenses"<sup>166</sup>, and we recommend the following provision:

"Abuse in performing services

An official person who, in conducting of services abuses other, inflicts serious bodily or mental suffering, intimidates and offends another person shall be punished by imprisonment of three months to five years."<sup>167</sup>

xix. From the previous answer, it is clear that national legislation determines criminal liability of legal persons.

Also, the legislation of Bosnia and Herzegovina stipulates Law on Obligations<sup>168</sup> and liability of legal persons based on civil rights.

---

<sup>164</sup> Articles: 126 to 148, Criminal Code of Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, ("Official Gazette of FBiH", No. 36/03)

<sup>165</sup> Articles: 125 to 146, Criminal Code of Republika Srpska, ("Official Gazette of RS", No. 49/03, 108/04, 37/06, 70/06)

<sup>166</sup> Articles: 126 to 148, Criminal Law of the Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina, ("Official Gazette of BD BiH", No. 10/03, 45/04, 6/05)

<sup>167</sup> Article 182, Criminal Code of Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, ("Official Gazette of FBiH", No. 36/03)

<sup>168</sup> Law on Obligation relation of Bosnia and Herzegovina ("Official Gazette of BiH, No. 2/92, 13/93, 13/94 Law on the takeover of Code on Obligations of Yugoslavia, changes), the Law on Obligation relations of Republika Srpska (" Official Gazette of RS", No. 17 / 93, 3/96, 39/03, 74/04 and 19/05) and Law on

"Legal person is responsible for the damage to third parties caused by his authorized body that acts on behalf of a legal entity and it is its integral part. Legal person is responsible for the actions of that individual and collective authority action. The only condition that is required is that an authority of the legal person caused the damage to a third person in the execution of or in connection with the exercise of their functions. Legal person is responsible for the damage, regardless of his guilt, that is a legal entity can not be linked to the fact that the damage occurred without his fault or that his authority acted as they should have been. Responsibility of the legal person is based on the irrefutable assumption of guilt (praesumptio Juris et de jure). A legal entity can be released from responsibility under the same conditions as the release of persons who are responsible to the rules of objective responsibility, which is regulated by the law of obligations. Compensation for victims may require only from a legal entity, and not from the person who caused the damage, as is the case for employer liability for the acts of its employees when the employee intentionally inflict harm. But when the injured party compensation is payed, legal person has the right of recourse against the person who intentionally harms or acted with carelessness to cause the damage, if for the particular the case something else is defined by law. This rule shall expire within six months from the date of remuneration."<sup>169</sup>

xx. No, national legislation doesn't exclude individual liability when there is corporate liability.

2.7 Aggravating Circumstances

xxi. In the Criminal Code of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina and the Criminal Code of Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina there are aggravating circumstances to the offenses: rape, sexual intercourse with a child and sexual intercourse with a helpless person. In these crimes the aggravating circumstances are reflected in the increase of prison sentence if the offense caused a death of a child or a child was seriously bodily injured, or his health is severely impaired, or if the woman became pregnant. In the case of criminal offenses: solicitation of prostitution, incest and sexual misconduct there is an aggravating circumstance if the offense is committed against a child or a minor in that case there is much more severe sentence. In the case of a criminal offense "Sexual intercourse with a helpless person" aggravating circumstance is if the offense was committed in a particularly cruel way or particularly humiliating way, or on the same occasion against the same victim committed sexual intercourse or equivalent sexual acts by several perpetrators in this case leads to heavier sentences.<sup>170</sup>

---

Obligation relations of Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina (taken from SFRY)

<sup>169</sup> Abedin Bikic, "Obligational Law, General Part", Sarajevo, 2007, page 225th to 226th

In The Criminal Code of the Republika Srpska criminal offense "sexual violence against children," the aggravating circumstances: if the act forcefully committed, if the perpetrator was an educator, adoptive parents, doctor or other person misusing their position on which he was entrusted with a child to care, education, etc., if done in a particularly cruel or humiliating manner, by many persons, if there is a big mismatch in the maturity of the offender and the victim, if there was a serious bodily injury, serious damage to the health, pregnancy, and death of the child victim. In the offense "producing and displaying child pornography," the aggravating circumstances are: age of a passive subject, a special method of perpetration, if made through the media or on the internet. All these circumstances affect the imposition of heavier penalties.<sup>171</sup>

2.8 Sanctions and Measures

xxii. The Criminal Code of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina and the Criminal Code of Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina provide fines and prison sentences of up to three months imprisonment for the above listed offenses.<sup>172</sup>

The Criminal Code of the Republika Srpska felony "sexual violence against children," the basic form provides a sentence of 1-8 years. For qualified forms of this act provided sentences, while the most severe form, ie, when the death of the child occurs imprisonment for a minimum period of 10 years or a long term sentence. For "child prostitution" provided is a prison sentence of 1-12 years. For "producing and displaying child pornography," a fine or imprisonment up to 1 year, while the most severe form of punishment is imprisonment of 6 months to 5 years. For "Satisfying sexual passion in front of others," namely the severe

---

<sup>170</sup> Article 203, 204, 207, 208, 210, 213 of the Criminal Code of Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, ("Official Gazette", No. 36/03) and Articles: 200, 201, 204, 205, 207 and 210, Criminal Code of the Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina, ("Official Gazette of BD BiH ", No. 10/03, 45/04, 6/05)

<sup>171</sup> Some datas are taken from: Special Report-Prevention of child exploitation in South East Europe, the sexual exploitation of children in RS

<sup>172</sup> Chapter XIX, Criminal offenses against sexual freedom and morality, Criminal Code of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, ("Official Gazette No. 36/03) and Criminal Code of Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina, ("Official Gazette of BDBiH", No. 10/03, 45/04, 6/05) form in which there is participation of a child or a minor ,a fine or imprisonment up to three years.

xxiii. We believe that the penalties for above mentioned offenses are too lenient, when making laws and determining penalties for the same sufficient attention was not paid to the seriousness of these offenses, the potential victims, the consequences suffered by victims, their families and the whole society and the environment, and that all relevant facts had not been taken into account related to these acts, and especially the fact that in this case children and minors are involved. I also think that just because the fines are too lenient for such terrible crimes convicted offenders do not become aware of the seriousness of the criminal offense, and that the desired effect of rehabilitation is not achieved, and we release criminals back among potential victims with a high possibility of re-commission of the same crime, also we give space and wrong message to all potential perpetrators and we do not achieve the effect of suppressing future same or similar offenses.

I think punishments are too lenient, and devastating for the victims and their families, because after these incidents, the only fact that may give them comfort is the fact that the perpetrator will be justly punished for a criminal offense, so too lenient punishments become a seed of discontent of victims and therefore of entire society that wants a safe environment.

xxiv. The Criminal Code of Bosnia and Herzegovina provides following penalties for legal persons when they commit crimes:

“Dissolution of the Legal Person

Article 134

Dissolution of a legal person may be imposed in the case that its activities were entirely or partly being used for the purposes of perpetrating criminal offences.

Besides the dissolution of a legal person, the property seizure punishment may be imposed.

In addition to the dissolution of a legal person, the court shall propose the opening of a liquidation procedure.

Creditors may be paid out from the property of the legal person upon which the punishment of dissolution has been imposed.<sup>173</sup>

xxv. The previous analysis of all of these crimes, we have concluded that the state of Bosnia and Herzegovina from time to time seizes objects and property for the purpose of „obtaining evidence and objects, which are used in the determination of the facts in a criminal proceeding, or preventing the commission of criminal offenses, and prevent the use or disposal of certain assets.”<sup>174</sup>

The state of Bosnia and Herzegovina protects the interests of bona fide third party, and there is a special fund for the financing of preventive interventions or programs for the confiscation of property or goods.

"This procedural action (seizure of objects and property) is specific to the investigation, but it is possible to take action before the start of the investigation, as an emergency investigation. Temporary seizure of assets is the independent act but this action is also taken in the search of premises, movable property and people. As in the case of the search of premises and persons, and seizure of objects and property constitutes a restriction of the basic human rights, provided by constitutional or international law on human rights. It is the right to privacy and free correspondence, and the right to peaceful enjoyment of his possessions (Article 17 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, Article 8. European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms and Art. 1 of Protocol No. 1 of the European Convention for the protection of Human rights and Fundamental freedoms). Therefore, the measures under temporary seizure of objects and property may be taken only under the statutory conditions and statutory procedures, which provide assurance that the rights of citizens shall be limited only that much it is necessary for the successful conduct of criminal proceedings."<sup>175</sup>

xxvi. „The obligation of the state is to ensure family protection is standardized, as a principle upon which is based the regulation of relations in the family”<sup>176</sup>, the Family Code of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina (Article 2, Paragraph 2).

---

<sup>173</sup> Chapter XIV, Liability of legal persons for criminal offenses, Dissolution of legal persons, Article 134, Criminal Code of Bosnia and Herzegovina ("Official Gazette of BiH, No. 37/03, 54/04, 61/04, 30/05, 55 / 06, 32/07)

<sup>174</sup> Sijerčić-Čolić, H. Hadžiomerađić, M. Jurčević Kaurinović M., D. Simović, "Comments on Criminal Law / Criminal Procedure Code of Bosnia and Herzegovina", Sarajevo, 2005, page 208th to 210th

<sup>175</sup> H. Sijerčić-Čolić, "Criminal Procedure Law" (Book I, "The criminal process operators and criminal acts"), Sarajevo, 2008. whatever., page 363rd

<sup>176</sup> Nerimana Traljić, Suzana Bubić, "Marital Law" Sarajevo University Faculty of Law in Sarajevo, Sarajevo,

"Article 380

Procedure for protection from domestic violence

In the event that a criminal offense has been committed within the family or close to the child environment, the country is taking action to protect the rights and best interests of the child. This implies that they are obliged to provide police protection, guardianship authority and the court for the violations."<sup>177</sup>

"Article 147

(1) The authority of guardianship is required ex officio to take special measures to protect the rights and best interests of the child, at the request of one or both parents or ex officio guardianship authority may decide to place the child and his entrusting's custody to another person or entity, if this is necessary to protect the best interests of the child."<sup>178</sup>

The Family Code of the Republika Srpska standardizes the basic provisions:

"Republika of Srpska provides special protection for family (mother and child) in accordance with internationally recognized human rights and fundamental freedoms."<sup>179</sup>

3 CRIMINAL PROCEDURE

3.1 Investigation

i. The Code of Criminal Procedure of Bosnia and Herzegovina<sup>180</sup> (The Criminal Procedure Code of Bosnia and Herzegovina<sup>181</sup>, the Law on Criminal Procedure of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina<sup>182</sup>, the Law on Criminal Procedure of the Republic of Serbian<sup>183</sup> and the Criminal Procedure Code of the Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina<sup>184</sup>) provides

---

2007, page 20th

<sup>177</sup> Procedure for protection from domestic violence, Article 380, Family Code of Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina

<sup>178</sup> Article 147 (1), Family Code of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, ("Official Gazette of FBiH", No. 35/05 and 41/05)

<sup>179</sup> Article 3, Family Code of the Republic of Srpska, ("Official Gazette of RS", No. 54 702, 41/08)

<sup>180</sup> Criminal Procedure Code of Bosnia and Herzegovina, („Official Gazzete of BiH, No. 36/03, 13/05, 48/05, 76/06, 32/07, 76/07, 21/07, 2/08, 12/09, 16/09)

<sup>181</sup> Criminal Procedure Code of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, ("Official Gazzete of FBiH", No. 35/03, ispr. 56/03, ispr. 37/03, 78/04, 28/05, 55/06, 27/07, 53/07, 9/09)

<sup>182</sup> Criminal Procedure Code of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, ("Official Gazzete of FBiH", No. 35/03, ispr. 56/03, ispr. 37/03, 78/04, 28/05, 55/06, 27/07, 53/07, 9/09)

<sup>183</sup> Criminal Procedure Code of the Republika Srpska, ("Official Gazzate of RS", No. 50/03, 111/04, 115/04, 29/07)

<sup>184</sup> Criminal Procedure Code of the Brcko Distrcit of Bosnia and Herzegovina, („Official Gaazzate of

"careful handling" of a minor when they take actions that the minor is present. This particularly refers to examination, when everyone involved in the process must be circumspect, taking into account the mental development, sensitivity and personal characteristics of the minor so as not to adversely affect the child's development. Juvenile judge, who said the measure juvenile shall ex officio (or on a prosecutor, warden or a guardian to supervise minor) to make a decision on changing the decision and change execution. Since the beginning of the preparatory proceedings the juvenile must have a lawyer.<sup>185</sup>

"The measures that the court determines to protect witnesses: insurance psychological, social and professional assistance, changing the hearings, control methods of interrogating witnesses of the judge or the presiding judge asking questions directly on behalf of the parties and counsel, testimony through technical means for transferring image and sound, removal of the accused, exceptions to direct evidence, it limits the right of inspection of documents and records, and stretched his attorney, additional measures to ensure the anonymity of witnesses, temporary or permanent anonymity during all stages of talks with the child to ensure the best interests of the child. Do not drop out of sight to the Law on Criminal Procedure conversation with the child victim is always recorded."<sup>186</sup>

The hearing is recommended in the presence and with the assistance of appropriate professionals (psychologists, psychiatrists, social pedagogues). The child should try not to listen repeatedly to accelerate procedures, avoid contact with perpetrator not to read expert opinion and stop disparaging remarks of defense at the expense of the child in his presence. The hearing of a minor should be done carefully in order to not to be detrimental to the psychological well-being of that minor, especially if that minor is damaged by the offense. The hearing of minors will be done with the help of educators, psychologists, or other professional persons.

The Family law of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina regulates relationships in the family through principle that:

---

BDBiH“, No. 10/03, 48/04, 6/05, 14/07, 19/07, 21/07, 2/08, 17/09)

<sup>185</sup> Article 342 (1), (2) of the Criminal Procedure Code of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Article 348 of the Criminal Procedure Code of the Republika Srpska and Article 363 (2) of the Criminal Procedure Code of the Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina

<sup>186</sup> Article 154, Criminal Procedure Code of the Republika Srpska, ("Official Gazzate of RS", broj 50/03, 111/04, 115/04, 29/07)

„Parents are obligated to protect interests of the well-being of child and the State should secured protection of the family and the child in the need through tutelar protection of the children and protection of the children without parental care.”<sup>187</sup>

The Family law of Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina has special regulations, which are related to the protection of rights and interests of children in the Article 150:

„The guardianship authority has official duty to take special measures regarding protection of the rights and the best interest of the child, based on the immediate cognition or notifications about those kind of problems. The guardianship authority will listen a minor child before taking any kind of measures, if a child is capable to undersand what is going on, and the opinion of a child would be considered and respected in the case of measures of saporating the child from the parents.”<sup>188</sup>

“The guardianship authority is also obliged ex officio to take special measures to protect the rights and best interests of the child, at the request of one or both parents or ex officio guardianship authority may decide to place the child and his entrusting's custody to another person or entity, if it is necessary to protect the best interests of the child.”<sup>189</sup>

The Family Law of the Republika Srpska ensures special protection to the family, a mother and the child in accordance with internationally recognized Human Rights and basic freedoms.<sup>190</sup>

Protection issues and providing legal aid to the family and its members is carried on by the municipal authority responsible for social protection. Family and its members enjoy judicial protection, and all agencies, organizations and individuals are required to promptly notify the guardian in respect of children's rights, particularly on violence, abuse, sexual abuse and child abuse”<sup>191</sup>

The Family Law of Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina regulates the relations in the family based on „the parental commitment to ensure protection of the the best interests

---

<sup>187</sup> Article 2 (2), Family Law of Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, („Official Gazzate of FBiH“, No. 35/05 i 41/05)

<sup>188</sup>Article 150 (1)(5), Family Law of Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, („Official Gazzate of FBiH“, No. 35/05 i 41/05)

<sup>189</sup> Article 147 (1), Family Law of Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, („Official Gazzate of FBiH“, No. 35/05 i 41/05)

<sup>190</sup> Article 3, Family Law of the Republika Srpska, („Official Gazzate of RS“, broj 54702, 41/08)

<sup>191</sup> Article 13, Family Law of the Republika Srpska, („Official Gazzate of RS“, broj 54702, 41/08)

and well-being of the child, as well as to ensure their responsibilities in the upbringing and education of the child. “<sup>192</sup>

“The family relations are based on the Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina obligation to ensure the protection of the family, mother and child, in accordance with international conventions in this field and providing foster care for children without parental care.”<sup>193</sup>

According to the report of the Ombudsman for Children of Republika Srpska regarding the status of sexual exploitation, it is also emphasized the necessity of conducting in the best interests of the child.

“Kids are treated like someone who needs our care and protection, and if there is sufficient evidence to initiate proceedings against the abuser, the child is always treated as a protected victim witness, and during all procedures the obligation of all relevant institutions is to always conduct in the best interest of the child.”<sup>194</sup>

ii. In the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina in the case when:

“offense is committed within the family or close the child environment, the country is taking action to protect the rights and best interests of the child. This implies that they are obliged to provide police protection, guardianship authority and magistrates' court.”<sup>195</sup>

There are no special forces carried out an investigation in the case of the above crimes, the Prosecution of Bosnia and Herzegovina is in charge of the investigation in all cases. Inside the Prosecution of Bosnia and Herzegovina, there are three separate departments, which deal with certain crimes, but none of them has its own jurisdiction works in which they appear by children or adolescents as victims.

In the Republika Srpska there are special departments within the Ministry of Internal Affairs, which deal with the above issues and with investigating the works, gather evidence related to each individual's work, including child pornography.<sup>196</sup> Police Service collects evidence and investigates and informs the competent prosecutors responsible for the course

<sup>192</sup> Article 1, Family Law of the Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina, (“Official Gazzate of BDBIH, broj 23/97)

<sup>193</sup> Article 2, Family Law of the Brcko District of BiH, (“Official Gazzate of BDBIH, broj 23/97)

<sup>194</sup> "Preventing Exploitation of Children in Southeast Europe," Sexual exploitation of children in the Republika Srpska, Report of the Ombudsman for Children of the Republika Srpska, Banja Luka, 2012

<sup>195</sup> Article 380, Procedure for protection from violent behavior on the family, Family Law of Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, („Official Gazzate of FBiH“, No. 35/05 i 41/05)

<sup>196</sup> "Preventing Exploitation of Children in Southeast Europe," Sexual exploitation of children in the Republika Srpska, Report of the Ombudsman for Children of the Republika Srpska, Banja Luka, 2012

of investigation and indictment. From March 2010 within the framework of the Ministry of Internal Affairs of the Republika Srpska, the Criminal Police, the Department formed to prevent the high-tech crime. Within this department special emphasis in the future will be placed on the training and education of staff and combat child pornography.<sup>197</sup>

iii. According to the criminal procedure law in Bosnia and Herzegovina the report crime as “a way of informing the prosecutor on the criminal offense is possible through the application or report.”<sup>198</sup> Registration on the criminal offense is submitted to prosecutor, in written form or orally, while the report is also submitted to the competent prosecutor by an authorized person, but it contains a lot more arguments about the crime committed (statements, pictures, drawings, etc.).

“The application and the report are not evidence in criminal proceedings, but it provides the first information about the existence of grounds for suspicion of a crime.”<sup>199</sup>

With the aim of criminal protection of minors in Bosnia and Herzegovina, the Criminal Procedure Code of Bosnia and Herzegovina determines the obligation to report the criminal offenses by:

„Medical workers, teachers, pedagogues, parents, foster parents, adoptive parents and other persons authorized or obligated to provide protection and assistance to minors, to supervise, educate and raise the minors, are obligated to immediately inform the authorized official or the Prosecutor about their suspicion that the minor is the victim of sexual, physical or any other form of abuse“<sup>200</sup>

In addition to these mandatory reporting of crimes, there is optional reporting by citizens. Only when the crime was reported to the prosecutor, the prosecutor may order the investigation, if there are grounds for suspicion that a criminal offense has been committed. This rule applies to the territory of both entities, including the Republika Srpska; crime must be reported to be processed. Applications are submitted by the institutions that come into contact with the family or family members, social work centers, schools, health institutions

---

<sup>197</sup> The proceedings of the Annual Conference of the Network of Ombudsmen for Children of South East Europe

<sup>198</sup> H. Sijerčić-Čolić, "Criminal Procedure Law" (Book I, "The criminal process operators and criminal acts"), Sarajevo, 2008. page 30 or any other institutions. If the minor is one of those people who can refuse to testify, he (she) cannot be questioned as a witness, if in given age and mental development is unable to understand the significance of his privilege not to testify. The court according to circumstances and collected evidence provides the process continues.

<sup>199</sup> Ibid, page 33

<sup>200</sup> Article 213, Criminal Procedure Law of Bosnia and Herzegovina, ("Official Gazette of BiH, No. 36/03, 13/05, 48/05, 76/06, 32/07, 76/07, 21/07, 2/08, 12 / 09, 16/09)

iv. Limitation for criminal prosecution expires if elapsed:

1. Thirty five years from the commission of the criminal offense for which, according to the law, the punishment can be long-term imprisonment,
2. Twenty years after the commission of the criminal offenses for which a sentence of imprisonment can be more than ten years,
3. Fifteen years after the commission of the criminal offense for which a sentence of imprisonment can be more than five years,
4. Ten years after the commission of a criminal offense for which a sentence of imprisonment can be more than three years,
5. Five years from the commission of the criminal offense for which a sentence of imprisonment can be more than one year,
6. Three years from the commission of a criminal offense for which a sentence of imprisonment can exceeded one year or a fine. Obsolescence begins from the moment of the adulthood of the injured party.

v. National law always protects the interests of the victim, going in her favor.

"The general rule is that the court, in deciding on the merits of the criminal justice requirements, must fully establish all the facts relevant to the judgment, and in case of doubt whether there is a fact to the detriment of the accused must be taken that it does not exist, or if it is a fact in favor of the defendant must assume that it exists."<sup>201</sup>

vi. To record data on convictions and the provision of data, the Criminal Procedure Code of Bosnia and Herzegovina undertakes:

„Article 411

Centralisation of data

---

<sup>201</sup>. H. Sijerčić-Čolić, "Criminal Procedure Law" (Book I, "The criminal process operators and criminal acts"), Sarajevo, 2008. Page 328

Criminal offense of counterfeiting money and putting into circulation, illicit production, processing and distribution of narcotic drugs and poisons, human trafficking, production and dissemination of pornographic material, as well as other criminal offenses in respect of which the treaties provides centralization of data, the Court is required - without delay deliver to the competent Ministry of Bosnia and Herzegovina, the offense and the offender and the final verdict. When it comes to the money laundering offense or an offense in connection with money laundering, information must, without delay, be submitted to the authority of Bosnia and Herzegovina in charge of preventing money laundering.<sup>202</sup>

Exchange of information with competent authorities in other countries depends on the agreements and conventions on international criminal assistance, with respect to data protection.

3.2 Complaint Procedure

vi. A child or a minor, according to the Criminal Procedure Code of Bosnia and Herzegovina has a legal representative, and the ability to give evidence in writing or orally.

People who are legally authorized to file an appeal are called subjects appeal. In addition to the prosecutor, the right to appeal is extended to the legal representative, marital or non marital spouse of the defendant, parent or child and the adoptive parents, and adoptees. However, if an authorized person does not submit an appeal within the statutory deadline, the first instance verdict becomes final.

vii. As we said, when the offense is committed within the family or child's environment, the country is taking action to protect the rights and best interests of the child, which implies the involvement of custodial authority, who shall ex officio make decisions that serve the best interest of the child. As required by law, the participation of minors in criminal proceedings as a criminal offense under the provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code of Bosnia and Herzegovina, implies that the trials in which minors are being tried, are closed for media. Also, paragraph 4 Article 86 Criminal Procedure Code of Bosnia and Herzegovina, reads:

---

<sup>202</sup> Article 411, Criminal Procedure Law of Bosnia and Herzegovina ("Official Gazette of BiH, No. 36/03, 13/05, 48/05, 76/06, 32/07, 76/07, 21/07, 2/08, 12 / 09, 16/09)

„When hearing a minor, especially if the minor is victim of an offense, shall be handled carefully, that the hearing would not have an adverse effect on the psychological well-being the minor. If necessary, the hearing will be performed with the help of teachers or other professional.“<sup>203</sup>

And Article 90 which refers to the recording and examination of witnesses on audio-visual equipment, which reads:

"The hearing of witnesses may be recorded on audio-visual equipment at all stages of the proceedings. It must be recorded in the case when it comes to minors under sixteen years of age who were injured by the offense, and if there are grounds to fear that the witness can not be examined at trial."<sup>204</sup>

These provisions are determining participation and testimony of a juvenile in the trial.

4 COMPLEMENTARY MEASURES

i. Practice shows that there are no universal standards, nor a developed system for keeping records in cases of violence against children, and also the work of the police and judiciary and other competent institutions is more difficult due to lack of a unified database on violence against children and offenders against children in Bosnia and Herzegovina. For now overall concern about violence against children falls on the centers for social work, police, some non-governmental organizations<sup>205</sup> and a handful of public institutions.

During an interview with representatives of the institution "Cantonal Centre for Social Work" from Sarajevo, we got information about education of professionals who work at this center, dealing with child victims of sexual exploitation and abuse. Namely, all the professionals who are employed in the Centre, those who work with child victims of abuse; social workers, psychologists, educators and lawyers have a completed college education at the appropriate higher education institution, and the exam of competence. In addition to these basic conditions, the majority of employees are in a constant process of further education. Psychologists, social workers and teachers, mostly have finished one of psychotherapeutic training and are licensed to work as a psychotherapist. They very often attend additional programs, training, workshops and seminars on the subject.

---

<sup>203</sup> Article 86 (4), Criminal Procedure Law of Bosnia and Herzegovina ("Official Gazette of BiH, No. 36/03, 13/05, 48/05, 76/06, 32/07, 76/07, 21/07, 2/08, 12 / 09, 16/09)

<sup>204</sup> Article 90, Criminal Procedure Law of Bosnia and Herzegovina ("Official Gazette of BiH, No. 36/03, 13/05, 48/05, 76/06, 32/07, 76/07, 21/07, 2/08, 12 / 09, 16/09)

<sup>205</sup> One positive example is the NGO "Women Mostar", issued Handbook for Professionals "How to recognize violence and help child victims of violence?"

Regarding the problem of preventing violence against children in Bosnia and Herzegovina, the State passed „Government strategy for fight against children violence 2007-2010“. Based on Report of government strategy implementation, all positive results of this strategy regarding social sector can be seen:

„Dealing with prevention within social department, we can conclude that almost quarter of questioned examinees (22%) declare existence of counseling center for children, youth and parents. We can see that progress has been made in comparison with research report last year (2009-15%). It is of great importance to note that during 2010 rate of questioned examinees from this sector was lower. Number of users of these counseling centers is significantly reduced. For example, in 2010 there were 656 and in 2009 there were 922 users. It is still a question whether this reduction of 7% reporting units in 2010 resulted in reduced percentage of counsel users by third (30%). According to reports from 2010 and last year reports, competent , professional capacity in counsel centers is prevailed by social workers ,although in lower percentage (53%) while other professions are : lawyers 20%, psychologists 12% and pedagogues 6%. If we take a look at previous reporting period (2009), we can state that in mentioned counseling centers number of lawyers as competent workers has risen.

In 2009., sector of social protection in the Republika Srpska published “Practical guide in the case of domestic violence“ which encompasses procedure in case of violence against children, while in Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina above mentioned “Practical guide in case of domestic violence” was in process of editing during 2009 but it hasn’t been finished until today.

According to reports, we can conclude that during 2010. number of coordinating teams that fight against violence of children has grown on a local level. Currently, we have a total of 19 (19%) coordinating teams, in comparison to 12 % according to reports from 2009. In 2010. Bosnian and Herzegovinian Social Services reported the significant growth of registered victims of violence against children. This increase measures the influence of formal Social control in Bosnia and Herzegovina.”<sup>206</sup>

ii. Children are educated about this problem by the government but just in terms of recommendations and action plans. If we want to ephasize the importance of this problem, raise the public awareness and deal with the problem consequently, we need to involve parents and children together with educated personal. Currently, it is rather disorganized and uncoordinated, because entitets and Brčko District, each canton within Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, as well as each county in the Republika Srpska, separately regulates educational policy.

---

<sup>206</sup> „Report of implementation of the National Strategy to Combat Violence against Children 2007-2010“, Sarajevo, April 2012

Regarding the sector for education and raising public awareness through public lectures, seminars etc., following advancement were registered:

„Number of public discussions, lectures or seminars for professionals or general public regarding the issue of raising awareness of occurrence, characteristics and consequences of violence against children has risen thrice in all of the above mentioned sectors. In fact, during 2009 total number of lectures in all sectors regarding this subject was 385, while in 2010. there were total of 1046 lectures. This fact gives us the right to deduce that community took this problem very seriously and that formal institutions organized great number of public discussions and lectures regarding this subject (see table 3). Especially affirmative information is linked to the sector of education within which 645 lectures have been organized during 2010, unlike the previous year where only 141 lectures were held. After the educational sector, great advancement in these common social activities are reported by police forces where 116 lectures were held during 2010 as opposed to previous year in which only 40 lectures were organized. In addition, all other sectors report significant growth.“<sup>207</sup>

iii. Bosnia and Herzegovina hasn't carried out these programs on governmental level. Talking to employees from „Cantonal center for social work“ Sarajevo, we found out that this particular center carried out a project of working with bullies - respectively, with male violent offender. They tried to work on the changes in their behaviour, attitudes and prevention of further violent behaviour.

iv. The Laws of social protection in Bosnian and Herzegovinian entities, anticipate rehabilitation, integration, resocialization and children care (treatment). These laws include service and day care centers.

In Canton Sarajevo there is a social program which gives support to children, victims of violence, exploitation and abuse called „Day care center“, which is for children who work on the street. This project is carried out in partnership between „The Cantonal Center for Social Work “Sarajevo as implementer and Save the Children Norway as donator. Triennial regional project Save the Children Norway was developed because of the need for help in implementation of children rights for protection against all forms of violence, abuse and exploitation, for children on the streets and for children who work and live in the street – so called „invisible children“ or children under risk.

---

<sup>207</sup> Report of implementation of The National Strategy to Combat Violence Against Children 2007 - 2010“, Sarajevo, April 2012, page 11

In Herzegovina-Neretva Canton was signed protocol to help the victims of violence, which sets the principles, procedures, housing and financial aid to help victims of violence. It was signed by: the Ministry of Health, Labour and Social Affairs of the Herzegovina-Neretva Canton, the Ministry of Finance of the Herzegovina-Neretva Canton, the Herzegovina-Neretva Canton, NGO "Women of Bosnia and Herzegovina", "Caritas" and "Center for Women". This protocol regulates cooperation between the police, social welfare centers, health institutions, judicial institutions and non-governmental organizations, how to help victims of violence, and referral mechanisms between them.

v. Gender Centre of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina established emergency telephone number 1265 for victims of domestic violence in the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina. And for the Republika Srpska emergency phone was established by number 1264. The number is a free and provides confidential and anonymous information.

Local Democracy Foundation has also No. 033-222-000, which victim of violence can call and asked for help. The victims of violence can be addressed by each police department, as well as centers for social work.

vi. These issues were resolved by specific program of work with the victim. Professionals are fully aware of the consequences that violence, especially sexual, has impact on the physical, mental health, socialization and on the future lives of the victims, so they work on repairing those harmful consequences.

State institutions, primarily the Centers for Social Works and NGOs, are working on a voluntary basis. And every victim, in accordance with the provisions and principles of the victims, has a right to be fully informed by all agencies in relation to all information related to their treatment, rehabilitation and information related to the rights that can be exercised.

Child victims are usually placed in the shelters for adult victims of domestic violence, which is not an appropriate practice. In addition, children are placed in other families or institutions for the care of children. The physical safety of the victims is often a problem since there are not appropriate measures or procedures prescribed by the police to commit the removal and disposal of the victims from the environment in which violence occurs until the completed trial and punishment of the perpetrators, although children are considered as protected victims. Protecting the identity of the child victim is not legally regulated precisely; it also creates an additional problem. Also, there is the problem of ensuring that legal aid child or caregivers because there is no cooperation between the police and the organizations that provide legal assistance.

III NATIONAL POLICY REGARDING CHILDREN

i. Bosnia and Herzegovina in recent years made very important strategic documents in terms of children's rights, including:

- The Action Plan for the Children of Bosnia and Herzegovina 2002 - 2010<sup>208</sup>
- The Code of Ethics of Research on Children<sup>209</sup>
- The Strategy against Juvenile Delinquency in Bosnia and Herzegovina 2006 - 2010<sup>210</sup>
- Resolution of the fight against violence against women<sup>211</sup>
- Strategy of Bosnia and Herzegovina for resolving Roma people problems<sup>212</sup>
- The National Action Plan for Prevention of Trafficking in Bosnia and Herzegovina 2008 - 2012
- Development strategy of pre-primary education in Bosnia and Herzegovina<sup>213</sup>
- The National Strategy to Combat Violence against Children 2007 - 2010<sup>214</sup>
- Policy on the protection of children without parental care and families at risk in Bosnia and Herzegovina 2006 – 2016
- Resolution on the prevention of juvenile delinquency and treatment in the event of violence among children and youth
- Convention against Discrimination in Education<sup>215</sup>
- Strategy for preventing and combating domestic violence in Bosnia and Herzegovina for the period 2009-2011.<sup>216</sup>
- Resolution on improvement of family protection in Bosnia and Hercegovina<sup>217</sup>
- Resolution on the prevention and treatment of juvenile delinquency in the case of violence among children and youth<sup>218</sup>

---

<sup>208</sup> Draft revised in June 2009 years

<sup>209</sup> "Official Gazette of BiH", No. 26/06

<sup>210</sup> "Official Gazette of BiH", No. 14/08

<sup>211</sup> "Official Gazette of BiH", No. 15/08

<sup>212</sup> "Official of Gazette BiH", No. 67/05

<sup>213</sup> Adopted by the Council of Ministers of BiH in February 2005

<sup>214</sup> Issued by the Ministry of Human Rights and Refugees of BiH

<sup>215</sup> UNESCO Convention ratified by the SFRY Convencion against Discrimination in Education since 9th October 1963

<sup>216</sup> "Official Gazette of BiH", No. 50/09

<sup>217</sup> "Official Gazette of BiH", No. 50/09

<sup>218</sup> "Official Gazette of FBiH", No. 10/08

- Strategic plan for the prevention of domestic violence for the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina 2009-2010<sup>219</sup>
- Action plan for the children of the Republika Srpska 2001-2010<sup>220</sup>
- The strategy for the development of the family 2009-2014.

ii. Save the Children Norway regional office for South-East Europe,<sup>221</sup> led by the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child, seeks to promote and through its cooperation with partner organizations to ensure fulfillment of the rights of every child. Child should be protected from all forms of violence, and if violence happens, it should be ensured that every child has adequate protection. Strengthening the capacity of the Council for Children in recent years, Save the Children Norway has been trying to establish a foothold for the protection of children from all forms of violence at the state level. There for, Bosnia and Herzegovina has meet the requirements of the UN Secretary General to participate in the development of the UN Study on Violence Against Children. As the next step, the first report on violence against children has been made, which provided initial information about what needs to be done in order to create a unified state mechanism which will provide maximum protection to children from all forms of violence, particularly related to physical and sexual violence, which are daily increasing. It is still the main problem nonexistence of public awareness of the dispersion and growth of violence against children in Bosnia and Herzegovina. Another problem is in victims lack of knowledge and ignorance about their rights and possibilities. The third problem lies in the fact that violence against children is not recognized as a problem by an adult who comes in contact with children (parents, police, teachers, counselors, teachers, social workers, health workers and others). Often indiscriminate and unfair professional approach to the treatment of child abuse in the media is also one of the problems.

iii. With regard to sexual abuse and exploitation of children, Report on the Implementation of the National Strategy for Combating Violence against children 2007-2010, registered the following cases:

"In 2010 were registered 674 children victims of violence, which is a significant increase compared to 2009 year when he recorded 305 child victims of violence. Particularly worrying is the number of child victims of

---

<sup>219</sup> "Official Gazette of FBiH", No. 75/08

<sup>220</sup> "Official Gazette of RS", No. 43/01

<sup>221</sup> From 2012 on it is called: Save the Children (North West Balkan)

both sexes under the age of 5 years, and a large increase in cases of violence against children aged 15-16 years in the case of both sexes. When it comes to victims of violence by type of violence, sex and age of the victim is still the most common forms of violence against children infliction of light bodily injuries (43%) and physical abuse (20%). In cases of physical violence as victims prevail boys aged 11-18, while in cases of psychological abuse as victims prevail both boys and girls. For information about the so-called "peer violence" in 2010. We registered a dramatic increase in reported cases to the extent of 240 cases compared with 50 cases reported in 2009 year. It still prevalent physical violence and mild form of it (bodily injury) that have 199 registered offender. Males predominate as perpetrators of violence. Criminal and misdemeanor charges, as formal indicators of reported cases of violence against children in Bosnia and Herzegovina, show that in 2010, the police filed 684 applications which representing a significant increase compared to 2009 year when 320 cases were reported. The perpetrators continue to dominate men in the percentage of 84% (76% in 2009, respectively). According to the forms of violence, in 2010 the most common was physical violence, followed by physical abuse, economic exploitation, sexual abuse and negligence. Compared to 2009 there was an increase in all forms of violence. When it comes to the issue of so-called "cyber crime", we recorded a reduction in the establishment of special departments dealing with this issue for 33% of cases in 2009 to 15% in 2010. This information is logical, given the tendency to study cyber crime, especially in terms of quality, within the reporting units mainly positioned at the level of the entity ministries of Interior. We think that this issue has been done much, because the problem of cyber crime, particularly the protection of children from various types of abuse in cyberspace, was "taboo" until a year or two ago, and today we can still speak of the system funneled action. Certainly, these departments should strengthen human resources and finance, and should present the results of their work to the public"<sup>222</sup>

iv. One of the most significant projects within the National Action Plan for Children 2002 - 2010 was a project by UNICEF in cooperation with institutions of Bosnia and Herzegovina, and the project was called "Strengthening the social protection and inclusion of children in Bosnia and Herzegovina." Here are some details about the project from the Report on the implementation of the Action Plan for Children 2002 - 2010:

"On the 59th session of the Council of Ministers, held on September 11, 2008 the decision was made about forming a Steering Committee for coordinating of the project entitled "Strengthening the social protection and inclusion of children in Bosnia and Herzegovina." Committee is chaired by the Minister of Civil Affairs, and the members are representatives of UNICEF and the representatives of state and entity institutions, signatories of the Protocol of Cooperation. Management boards at the entity and state level are formed and they are coordinated by the Ministry of Human Rights and Refugees of Bosnia and Herzegovina, through the Expert Team at the state level. The project "Strengthening the social protection and inclusion of children in Bosnia and Herzegovina" is realized completely through the institutions in Bosnia and Herzegovina, including three levels: the level of the community, the level of social security institutions and the level of development and adoption of work policies. In the framework of the project "Strengthening the Social Protection and Inclusion of children in Bosnia and Herzegovina", whose realization is supported by UNICEF, in order to improve child development and parenting capacity improvements, we started with the establishment of 10 integrated centers for parents and children (ICRD) in the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina and the Serbian Republic. They will be complementary to all existing municipal services, which provide services in the fields of health, nutrition, education and social protection. They will not replace the existing services in these areas; their aim is to help them to work better and to complement the existing deficiencies in the services that they provide at the municipal level. Thus, the Steering Committee for the coordination of the project decided to initiate the project of creating the integrated center of early childhood development for parents and children in territory of Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina. Integrated center of early childhood development for the parents and children is a model that aims to promote and achieve a challenging and responsible parenting and early growth and development of children, from birth to age of ten, with a special focus on children from birth to three years of age. UNICEF, in collaboration with the Federal Ministry of Education and Science, Federal Ministry of Health and the Federal Ministry of Labour and Social Policy, created a proposition of integrated center of early childhood development and work programs of the center. Municipals of Novi Grad Sarajevo and Novi Travnik have already implemented activities for the opening of the integrated center. These activities considering the opening of integrated centers are also conducted in the Serbian Republic. "<sup>223</sup>

---

<sup>222</sup> „Report on the Implementation of the National Strategy to Combat Violence against Children 2007 - 2010", Sarajevo, April 2012, pages: 27- 29

v. Establishment of the Council for Children of Bosnia and Herzegovina and the adoption of the "Action Plan to combat violence against children Bosnia and Herzegovina 2002 – 2010" significant progress has been made towards the promotion of children's participation in law making, but still not so significant that we could claim that children in Bosnia and Herzegovina are participating in law making process.

---

<sup>223</sup> Report on implementation of the Action Plan for Children in Bosnia and Herzegovina 2002- 2010, Sarajevo, June 2011

Despite the fact that Child Rights Committee recommended to Bosnia and Herzegovina to strengthen and support the work of the Council for Children through human and financial resources the situational analysis prepared by two NGOs from Bosnia and Herzegovina; “Our Children” Sarajevo and “Zdravo da ste” Banja Luka, showed that Council for Children of Bosnia and Herzegovina is not functioning well in the practice.

“Not only that State has not done anything with the recommendations of the Committee, the State has allowed the situation in which this body hasn’t worked since 2007. Council for Children was the only mechanism for coordinating policy-making for children and monitoring implementation of the Action Plan for Children. Some of the activities in the domain of Council for Children conducted by the Ministry of Human Rights and Refugees Herzegovina, in whose shelter and worked Council. Unlike the Federation, who was waiting to activate the mechanism at the level of BiH, the RS government has been developing its own system of mechanisms to protect children and families. In addition to the Child Protection Fund, which operates at the entity level, Council for Children and the Republika Srpska Ombudsman for Children were formed and their financing issue is provided from the budget of the Republika Srpska. In 2011 mandate of the Council of the Republika Srpska has expired and at the moment the process of the formation of new session is going on, in which will participate NGOs as well.

In FBiH, child protection and protection of the family are generally the responsibility of Canton/county in the Brcko District of the Department for Child Protection and completely depends on the economic power of the cantons counties.”<sup>224</sup>

This situational analysis showed also that policy and law making process in Bosnia and Herzegovina carry on without children participation and participation of parents. The only way of children’s influence on decision making process is available in educational institutions through Council of pupils.

“The policy and law making process in Bosnia and Herzegovina carry on without child participation and participation of parents. Generally, adults hardly accept the right of child to participate, especially government officials. Only in educational institutions children and young people are in position to cooperate with the adults - their teachers. The Framework Law on Primary and Secondary Education in BiH and entity laws regarding education regulate major issues and rules of relations between all participants in the learning process, as well as parents. Based on these laws, schools may adopt rules governing the issue of rules of conduct at school. Though the right of children to participate is well-regulated by legal provisions, and by rule books in the primary and secondary schools, the practice evidently presents resistances, different practices and unequal conditions at the community level for the realization of children's participation. NGOs contribute with their projects to improvement of the atmosphere in the schools for general student activities. We can say that the school system formally ensure pupils' participation in some forms of governance or decision-making in schools during the last year, but it is necessary to work on the functioning and quality improvement of the facilities and programs of these bodies. In the future, special attention should be given to changing the situation regarding participation/ involvement of children in the local community and the local authorities. Research shows that children's participation at this level is passive and indirect, with no possibility of direct active participation and not through intermediaries, "delegates." The access does not mean that children meets the obligations set by adults, it means that children should also participate in the creation of plans and tasks to be addressed in the future. In our study, the largest shift in relation to the period prior to 4 years was recorded in relation to the existence of the Council of pupils in schools and all schools now have this body, but still between 20 and 40% of students not able to participate in decision making or articulating their voices when it comes to the scope of the school curriculum, choosing excursions, leisure activities, decision-making and management of schools, the work of teachers, etc. The reason for this is seen in the lack of support for the work of the Students' Council, not well informed children about their rights and lack of supportive atmosphere in the schools where there is students' participation."<sup>225</sup> vi. The group of non-governmental organizations that deal with the rights of the child; Citizens Association "Zdravo da ste" Banja Luka, HUG "Our Children" Sarajevo, Citizens Association "Future" Modrica, Citizens Association "Lighthouse" Prijedor, Citizens Association "Happy Gypsies" Tuzla, Citizens Association "Earth Child" Tuzla, Citizens Association "Association for mentally handicapped persons" in Banja Luka, CA "Be Active" Sarajevo, CA "Center for the Rights of the Child", Konjic, CA "Foundation of Local Democracy" Sarajevo, CA "Our Children" Zenica, CA "Step by Step" Sarajevo, CA "The sun is a common " Trebinje, on the initiative of the Save the Children Norway, signed a memorandum of cooperation with the aim of developing partnerships, improving the situation of children's rights in Bosnia and Herzegovina and the formation of NGO Network for the Rights of the Child called "Stronger Voice for Children". At the moment, the work of this NGO Network is supported by the European Commission, Save the Children and UNICEF BiH.

---

<sup>224</sup> “NGO report on the situation of children and children's rights in Bosnia and Herzegovina 2009-2011”, prepared by two NGOs: “Our Children” Sarajevo and “Zdravo da ste” Banja Luka with support of Save the Children Norway, page 3; taken from: www.zastitimodjecuodnasilja.org; October 2012

---

<sup>225</sup> "NGO report on the situation of children and children's rights in Bosnia and Herzegovina 2009-2011", prepared by two NGOs: "Our Children" Sarajevo and "Zdravo da ste" Banja Luka with support of Save the Children Norway

These non-governmental organizations, whose work towards the protection and assistance to women and children victims of domestic violence, are a tremendous social resource of knowledge, practice and experience in dealing with these issues and are positioned as a strong and competent partner of government. In the area of domestic violence, if we exclude the important activities conducted by NGOs on awareness raising and education of the public through various awareness campaigns, workshops, seminars and panel discussions, the most important activities are law and psychosocial support programs and the protection of victims of domestic violence, running shelters and maintaining of emergency telephone hotline for victims of violence. Law on Protection from Domestic Violence provides that the provision of physical protection and realization of rights and interests of victims of domestic violence, without fear or danger, the police and the Centre for Social Work and Social Welfare Service may, with the prior consent of the victim; the victim of violence temporarily disposed the relevant accommodation - safe house. Safe house is intended for temporary care of women and their children - victims of domestic violence and a realization of the rights of victims of domestic violence to the physical and psychological security, and should provide protection of the life, physical integrity and mental health and prevent further violent behavior in the family. Accommodation in the safe house is done on the basis of a decision adopted by the competent social work center, or the relevant police station.

IV OTHER

V CONCLUSION

While researching on this topic, we came to those brief conclusions:

- The majority of the State party's laws have been harmonized with the provisions of the Convention on the Rights of the Child, but there are still some of them which will need to be harmonized with the provisions of the Convention. Since Bosnia and Herzegovina has recently ratified Council of Europe Convention on the Protection of Children against Sexual Exploitation and Sexual Abuse, it will mean that Bosnia and Herzegovina will need to harmonize domestic legislation according to this Convention; especially when it comes to domestic criminal laws, which are in some provisions different than Convention's provisions.

- The big problem for the effective implementation of children rights in Bosnia and Herzegovina are the State party's complex political and administrative structure, (two entities, ten cantons and administrative districts) and each of this administrative part has different regulations, what means that children of Bosnia and Herzegovina are being subject to variations in the fulfilment of their rights depending on the territory in which they reside. Due to this problem, Child Rights Committee recommended to Bosnia and Herzegovina:

„The Committee recommends that the State party consider enacting a comprehensive child rights Act at the national level, which fully incorporates the principles and provisions of the Convention and its Optional Protocols and provides clear guidelines for their consistent and direct application throughout the territory of the State party.“<sup>226</sup>

- One of the crucial problems for activism in the field of children rights in Bosnia and Herzegovina is the fact that State doesn't fund enough child rights bodies and organizations, which makes them to „feel alone” in this field. Getting in the contacts with the centers for social work, we realized that they should also be provided by more sources as well as there should be more organized „safe houses“ for the victims of sexual abuse and exploitation.

„Rationalize the work of the various child rights bodies and provide them with the necessary human and financial resources to carry out their role with efficiency (...) Establish a budgeting process which adequately takes into account children's needs at the national and territory levels, with clear allocations to children in the relevant sectors and agencies, as well as specific indicators and a tracking system.“<sup>227</sup>

- One of the aggravating circumstances during our research was the fact that there is not data archive with the information about the case of domestic violence of children or information about sexual abuse of children, sexual exploitation of children; or there is but it is hard to approach to that kind of information.

---

<sup>226</sup> Committee on the Rights of the Child, Sixty - first session, 17 September – 5 October 2012, Consideration of reports submitted by States parties under article 44 of the Convention, Concluding observations: Bosnia and Herzegovina, CRC/C/BIH/CO/2-4, 5th October 2012

<sup>227</sup> Committee on the Rights of the Child, Sixty - first session, 17 September – 5 October 2012, Consideration of reports submitted by States parties under article 44 of the Convention, Concluding observations: Bosnia and Herzegovina, CRC/C/BIH/CO/2-4, 5th October 2012

- The positive thing about State's involvement in this field of children rights is newly adopted National Strategy to Combat Violence against Children 2011- 2014 as well as newly ratified Council of Europe Convention on the Protection of Children against Sexual Exploitation and Abuse, which will enter into force on 1st March of 2013. We honestly hope that those two important documents for Bosnia and Herzegovina will be implemented completely and that future generations of Bosnian kids will benefit from it.

REFERENCES:*National legislation:

Constitution of Bosnia and Herzegovina- BiH (Ustav Bosne i Hercegovine), Accessed from: website of the Constitutional Court of Bosnia and Herzegovina: www.ccbh.ba; September 2012,

Constitution of Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina- FBiH (Ustav Federacije Bosne i Hercegovine), ("Official Gazette of FBiH", No. 1/94, 21st July 1994), Constitution of Republika Srpska- RS with amendments (Ustav Republike Srpske sa amandmanima), ("Official Gazette of RS", No. 21/92, 28/94, 8/96, 13/96, 15/96, 16/96, 21/96, 21/02, 31/02, 31/03, 98/03 i 115/05), Statute of the Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina- BDBiH (Statut Brčko Distrikta Bosne i Hercegovine), ("Official Gazette of BDBiH", No. 1/00 i 24/05), Criminal Code of Bosnia and Herzegovina (Krivični zakon Bosne i Hercegovine), ("Official Gazette of BiH", No. 37/03, 54/04, 61/04, 30/05, 55/06, 32/07),

Criminal Code of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina (Krivični zakon Federacije Bosne i Hercegovine), ("Official Gazette of the FBiH", No. 36/03 corr. 21/04, 69/04, 18/05),

Criminal Code of the Republika Srpska (Krivični zakon Republike Srpske), ("Official Gazette of RS", No. 49/03, 108/04, 37/06, 70/06), Criminal Law of Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina (Krivični zakon Brčko Distrikta Bosne i Hercegovine), ("Official Gazette of BDBiH", No. 10/03, 45/04, 6/05), Criminal Procedure Code of Bosnia and Herzegovina (Zakon o krivičnom postupku Bosne i Hercegovine), („Official Gazette of BiH“, No. 03/03, 32/03, 36/03, 26/04, 63/04, 13/05, 48/05, 46/06, 76 / 06, 29/07, 32/07, 53/07, 76/07, 15/08, 12/09 and 16/09), Criminal Procedure Code of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina (Zakon o krivičnom postupku Federacije Bosne i Hercegovine), („Official Gazette of FBiH“, No. 35/03, corr. 56/03, corr. 37/03, 28/05, 55/06, 27/07, 53/07 and 9/09),

Criminal Procedure Code of the Republika Srpska (Zakon o krivičnom postupku Republike Srpske), ("Official Gazette of RS", No. 50/03, 111/04, 115/04, 29/07),

Criminal Procedure Code of Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina (Krivično procesni zakon Brčko Distrikta Bosne i Hercegovine), (“Official Gazette of BD”, No. 10/03, 48/04, 6/05, 14/07, 19/07, 21/07 and 2/08), Child Protection Law of the Republika Srpska (Zakon o dječijoj zaštiti Republike Srpske), („Official Gazette of RS“, No. 4/02, 17/08, 1/09), Child Protection Law of Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina (Zakon o dječijoj zaštiti Brčko Distrikta Bosne i Hercegovine), („Official Gazzete of BDBiH“, No. 01/03, 4/04, 21/05, 19/07, 2/08), Family law of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina (Porodični zakon Federacije Bosne i Hercegovine), (“Official Gazette of FBiH“, No. 35/05 i 41/05), Family law of the Republika Srpska (Porodični zakon Republike Srpske), (“Official Gazette of RS“, No. 54702, 41/ 08), Family Law of Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina, (Porodični zakon Brčko Distrikta Bosne i Hercegovine), („Official Gazette of RS“, No. broj 3/07), Law for the prohibition of discrimination in Bosnia and Herzegovina (Zakon o zabrani diskriminacije u Bosni i Hercegovini), (“Official Gazette of BiH”, No. 59/09)

Law for the equality of genders in Bosnia and Herzegovina – revised version (Zakon o ravnopravnosti spolova u Bosni i Hercegovini - prečišćeni tekst), (“Official Gazette of BiH“, No.. 32/10),

Law for the protection of the rights of national minorities of Bosnia and Herzegovina (Zakon o zaštiti prava nacionalnih manjina Bosne i Hercegovine), (“Official Gazette of BiH“, No.. 12/03, 93/08),

Law for the protection of the rights of national minorities of Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina (Zakon o zaštiti prava nacionalnih manjina Federacije Bosne i Hercegovine), (“Official Gazette of FBiH“, No. 56/08),

Law for the protection of the rights of national minorities of Republika Srpska (Zakon o zaštiti prava nacionalnih manjina Republike Srpske), (“Official Gazette of RS“, No. 2/05),

Law for the protection from domestic violence of Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina (Zakon o zaštiti od nasilja u porodici Federacije Bosne i Hercegovine), (“Official Gazette of BiH“, No. 22/05), Law for the protection from domestic violence of Republika Srpska (Zakon o zaštiti od nasilja u porodici u Republici Srpskoj), („Official Gazette of RS“, No. 118/05, 17/08), Law for the process of conclusion and implementation of international agreements (Zakon o sklapanju i provedbi međunarodnih ugovora), („Official Gazzete of BiH“, No. 29/00), Law on Procedure of the Constitutional Court of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina (Zakon o postupku pred Ustavnim sudom Federacije Bosne i Hercegovine), („Official Gazette of FBiH“, No. 6/95), Law on the Constitutional Court of the Republika Srpska (Zakon o Ustavnom sudu Republike Srpske), („Official Gazette of RS“, No. 109/2007, 99/2011), Law on the Courts of Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina (Zakon o sudovima Brčko Distrikta Bosne i Hercegovine) („Official Gazette of BD“, No. 19/07), Law on Obligation relations of Bosnia and Herzegovina (Zakon o obligacionim odnosima Bosne i Hercegovine), („Official Gazette of BiH“, No. 2/92, 13/93, 13/94 Law on the takeover of Code on Obligations of Yugoslavia, changes), Law on Obligation relations of the Republika Srpska (Zakon o obligacionim odnosima Republike Srpske), („Official Gazette of RS“, No. 17 / 93, 3/96, 39/03, 74/04 and 19/05),

Books, publications, reports, presentations, strategies, action plans and web:

Abedin Bikić, "Obligational Law, General Part", Law Faculty, University of Sarajevo, („Obligacije- Opći dio“, Pravni fakultet Univerziteta u Sarajevu), Sarajevo, 2007,

Action Plan for the Children in Bosnia and Herzegovina 2011-2014, the Ministry for Human Rights and Refugees of Bosnia and Herzegovina, July 2011, Sarajevo, Action Plan for the Children in Bosnia and Herzegovina 2002 – 2010 (Akcioni plan za djecu Bosne i Hercegovine 2002- 2010), The Code of Ethics of Research on Children, („Official Gazette BiH“, No. 26/06), Action Plan for the Children of the Republika Srpska 2001-2010, („Official Gazette of Republika Srpska“, No. 43/01), “Analysis of the harmonization of the legislation of BiH with the Convention on the Rights of the Child“, Institution of Ombudsman for Human Rights of Bosnia and Herzegovina in cooperation with Save the Children Norway, Sarajevo, November 2009,

“Annual report on occurrences of discrimination in Bosnia and Herzegovina for 2011“, Institution of Ombudsman for Human Rights of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Banja Luka, February 2012 ; accessed from: www.ombudsmen.gov.ba October 2012,

A. Alibašić, “Religious education in public schools in Bosnia and Herzegovina: Towards a model that supports coexistence and mutual understanding”, publication “Religion and education in an open society” (“Vjersko obrazovanje u javnim školama u Bosni i Hercegovini: Ka modelu koji podržava suživot i uzajamno razumijevanje”, publication: “Religija i školovanje u otvorenom društvu”), Open Fund Society of Bosnia and Herzegovina, September 2009, Sarajevo,

"Alternative Report of the Ombudsman for Human Rights on the implementation of the Convention on the Rights of the Child for the period from 1st June of 2009 until the end of 2011" (“Alternativni izvještaj institucije Ombudsmene za ljudska prava BiH o primjeni Konvencije o pravima djeteta za period od 1.6.2009. do kraja 2011.god.”); The Institution of Ombudsman for Human Rights, Banja Luka 2011, taken from: www.ombudsmen.gov.ba October 2012,

Committee on the Rights of the Child, Sixty - first session, 17 September – 5 October 2012, Consideration of reports submitted by States parties under article 44 of the Convention, Concluding observations: Bosnia and Herzegovina, CRC/C/BIH/CO/2-4, 5th October 2012, Degan, V.Đ, "International law", Law Faculty, University of Rijeka., 2000 („Međunarodno pravo“, Pravni fakultet Sveučilišta u Rijeci, 2000), Džamna Duman, „Women, gender and child sexual abuse inside and outside family: The Balkans”, Family, Law and Politics - Sexual Abuse: Children, The Balkans”, Encyclopaedia of Women and Islamic Cultures, Faris Vehabović, “The relation between BiH Constitution and the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental freedoms”, Alumni Association of the Center for Interdisciplinary Studies, („Odnos Ustava BiH i Europske konvencije za zaštitu ljudskih prava i osnovnih sloboda“, Asocijacija Alumni Centra za interdisciplinarne postdiplomske studije- ACIPS), Sarajevo, 2006, Hajrija Sijerčić-Čolić, "Criminal Procedure Law", Book I, "The criminal process operators and criminal acts", Faculty of Law, University of Sarajevo, Sarajevo, 2008, („Krivično procesno pravo“, Knjiga I, „Krivičnoprocesni subjekti i krivičnoprocesne radnje“, Pravni fakultet Univerziteta u Sarajevu, Sarajevo, 2008),

International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia verdicts, the cases: (IT-96-23/2), (IT-96-23 i 23/1); www.icty.org/case,

Marko Mladenović, Stanka Stjepanović, Milorad Živanović “Family Law” (“Porodično pravo”), Pale 2003

Mark Joseph: Five years of constitutional courts in Bosnia and Herzegovina: First Balance

“Men and women in Bosnia and Herzegovina”, Agency for Statistics of Bosnia and Herzegovina, (“Žene i muškarci u Bosni i Hercegovini“, Agencija za statistiku Bosne i Hercegovine), Sarajevo, December 2011, TB 03, Thematic Bulletin, ISSN 1840- 104X; accessed from www.bhas.ba October 2012,

National Strategy to combat sexual violence against children 2007- 2010, the Ministry for Human Rights and Refugees of Bosnia and Herzegovina (Državna strategija za borbu protiv nasilja nad djecom 2007- 2010, Ministarstvo za ljudska prava i izbjeglice Bosne i Hercegovine), Nerimana Traljić, Suzana Bubić, „Marital law“, Faculty of Law, University of Sarajevo, Sarajevo, 2007, („Bračno pravo“ Pravni fakultet Univerziteta u Sarajevu, Sarajevo, 2007),

Opening address and introduction of the delegation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Geneva 18- 20 September, Presentation of the combined second, third and fourth periodic reports of Bosnia and Herzegovina on the implementation of UN Convention on the Rights of the Child; taken from: <http://www2.ohchr.org/english/bodies/crc/crcs61.htm>; September 2012

Presentation by Džamna Duman (Senior Assistant Law Faculty in Sarajevo), the seminar "Regular and subsequent registration in the register of births" („Redovni i naknadni upis u matičnu knjigu rođenih“), organized by the organization "Your Rights BiH" (Legal Aid Network) and the UNHCR, 19th - 21st December 2010, Vlašić, Bosnia and Herzegovina,

“Preventing Exploitation of Children in Southeast Europe," Sexual exploitation of children in the Republika Srpska, Report of the Ombudsman for Children of the Republika Srpska, Banja Luka, 2012,

Publication: “How to protect from discrimination? The application of the Law on the prohibition of discrimination in Bosnia and Herzegovina (BiH)”, Implemented by the Initiative and civil action (ICVA) in cooperation with “Rights for all BiH” and organizations of civil society in Bosnia and Herzegovina (“Kako se zaštititi od diskriminacije? Primjena Zakona o zabrani diskriminacije u Bosni i Hercegovini”; accessed from: www.rightforall.ba; September 2012, “Report for 2011 of the Legal Aid Office”, Helsinki Committee for Human Rights of Bosnia and Herzegovina, accessed from: www.bh-hchr.org October 2012,

Report of the Ombudsmen for Human Rights in Bosnia and Herzegovina on the implementation of the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography, downloaded http://www.ombudsmen.gov.ba/materijali/Seksualna\_eksploatacija\_djece.pdf,

“Report on the results on the public poll of the perception and experiences of discrimination” (“Izvještaj o rezultatima ispitivanja javnog mnijenja o percepciji i iskustvu diskriminacije”), Open Society Fund Bosnia and Herzegovina; accessed from: www.diskriminacija.ba September 2012,

„Report on the Implementation of the National Strategy to Combat Violence against Children 2007 - 2010 ” (“Izvještaj o implementaciji Državne strategije za borbu protiv nasilja nad djecom 2007- 2010”), Sarajevo, April 2012,

“Report on the status of human rights in Bosnia and Herzegovina for 2011” (“Izvještaj o stanju ljudskih prava u Bosni i Hercegovini za 2011. godinu”), Helsinki Committee for Human Rights of Bosnia and Herzegovina, accessed from: www.bh-hchr.org October 2012,

Resolution on improvement of family protection in Bosnia and Herzegovina (Rezolucija o unapređenju zaštite porodice u Bosni i Hercegovini), (“Official Gazette of BiH”, No. 50/09),

Resolution on the prevention and treatment of juvenile delinquency in the case of violence among children and youth (Rezolucija o sprečavanju maloljetničke delinkvencije i postupanje u slučaju nasilja među djecom i mladima), (“Official Gazette of FBiH”, No. 10/08),

Resolution to combat violence against women in the families (Rezolucija o borbi protiv nasilja nad ženama u porodici), (“Official Gazette of BiH”, No. 15/08), Sabina Ćudić, “Different Religions under One Roof: Towards Inclusive Religious Education in Bosnia and Herzegovina, publication “Religion and education in an open society”, Open Fund Society of Bosnia & Herzegovina, September 2009, Sarajevo, Sijerčić-Čolić, H. Hadžiomerađić, M. Jurčević Kaurinović M., D. Simović, "Comments on Criminal Law / Criminal Procedure Code of Bosnia and Herzegovina", Sarajevo, 2005,

Special Report-Prevention of child exploitation in South East Europe, the sexual exploitation of children in Republika Srpska

Strategy against Juvenile Delinquency in Bosnia and Herzegovina 2006 – 2010 (Strategija protiv maloljetničkog prestupništva u BiH 2006-2010), ("Official Gazette of BiH", No. 14/08),

Strategy of Bosnia and Herzegovina for resolving Roma people's problems (Strategija Bosne i Hercegovine za rješavanje problema Roma), ("Official Gazette of BiH", No. 67/05),

Strategy for preventing and combating domestic violence in Bosnia and Herzegovina for the period 2009-2011 (Strategija za prevenciju i borbu protiv nasilja u obitelji za Bosnu i Hercegovinu za razdoblje 2009- 2011. godina), ("Official Gazette of BiH", No. 50/09),

Strategic plan for the prevention of domestic violence for the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina 2009-2010 (Strateški plan za prevenciju nasilja u porodici za Federaciju Bosnu i Hercegovinu 2009- 2010), ("Official Gazette of FBiH", No. 75/08),

"Survey on household consumption in BiH in 2007", "Themed Bulletin:" Women and Men in BiH ", ISSN 1840- 104X, Agency for Statistics BiH, („Anketa o potrošnji domaćinstva u BiH u 2007. god.“, Tematski bilten: „Žene i muškarci u BiH“, ISSN 1840- 104X, Agencija za statistiku BiH),

The proceedings of the Annual Conference of the Network of Ombudsmen for Children of South East Europe

The release of the Agency for Statistics of BiH: "Natural population in Bosnia and Herzegovina in 2011" March 2012, (Saopštenje Agencije za statistiku u BiH „Prirodno kretanje stanovništva u Bosni i Hercegovini u 2011 godini“, godina VI, broj 1, dana 28.3.2012. godini),

The Verdict „Sejdic- Finci v. Bosnia and Herzegovina“:
http://www.coe.org.rs/eng/news\_sr\_eng/?conid=1545

The proceedings of the Annual Conference of the Network of Ombudsmen for Children of South East Europe,

United Nations, Report on the situation of human rights in the territory of the former Yugoslavia, submitted by Mr. Tadeusz Mazowiecki, Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights, pursuant to Commission resolution 1992/S- 1/1 of 14 August 1992, The Archives of the ICTY; www.unhchr.ch,

<http://www.dei.gov.ba/dokumenti/?id=4871>

http://www.coe.int/t/dg3/children/1in5/News/BosniaAndHerzegovinaSignature\_en.asp

https://www.parlament.ba/sadrzaj/ostali\_akti/ratificirani/default.aspx?id=34958&langTag=bs-BA&pril=b

http://www.coe.int/t/dg3/children/1in5/News/BiHRatification\_en.asp

<http://www.un.org/documents/ga/res/46/a46r237.htm>

www.mojevijesti.ba

www.slobodnaevropa.org

www.bhas.ba

www.banjaluka.com

ELSA CROATIA

I Introduction.....	131
1 General .....	131
2 The Lanzarote Convention.....	140
II National Legislation .....	140
1 General Principles Of The Jurisdiction .....	141
2 Substantive Criminal Law .....	153
2.1 Sexual Abuse.....	153
2.2 Child Prostitution .....	158
2.3 Child Pornography .....	159
2.4 Corruption of Children.....	164
2.5 Solicitation of Children for Sexual Purposes.....	166
2.6 Corporate Liability.....	167
2.7 Aggravating Circumstances .....	170
2.8 Sanctions and Measures .....	172
3 Criminal Procedure .....	183
3.1 Investigation .....	183
3.2 Complaint procedure .....	190
4 Complementary Measures.....	197
III National Policy Regarding Children.....	203
IV Other.....	213
V Conclusion.....	213

National Researchers

Paulina Bače

Martina Bosak

Nives Gabrić

Katarina Garma

Anja Lučić

Tina Matić

Iva Mihalinec

Dora Skalicki

Vedrana Smlatić

Petra Terzin

National Coordinator

Marko Dolenec

National Academic Advisor

doc. dr. sc. Ivana Milas Klaric

I INTRODUCTION

1 GENERAL

Equal Rights

i. According to the research conducted by Freedom House, a non-governmental organisation for the promotion of freedom, which covered events that happened in the period from 1 January 2011 to 31 December 2011 in 195 countries and 14 territories, Croatia scored a 2 for civil liberties on a scale of 1-7 (1 signifies the highest level of freedom and 7 the lowest level of freedom). Countries and territories with grade 2 have less civil liberties, due to various factors such as the limited independence of the media, limiting union activity, and discrimination against minority groups and women.<sup>1</sup>

Based on the Freedom House survey, which included a range of civil rights and freedoms that were respected and less respected, and the grade that Croatia was given, I have decided which freedoms to present as the least respected. These are gender equality, minority rights and sexual orientation.

The Constitution of the Republic of Croatia prohibits gender discrimination. Nevertheless, a high percentage of women are unemployed and earn less than men. Under the Gender Equality Act 2008 women should be equally represented in the lists of candidates, but only 35 percent of candidates for the elections in December 2011 were women. Also, a large and under-recognized problem in Croatia is domestic violence against women.<sup>2</sup> “The Ombudsman notes that the legislative framework for combating bullying exists, and that it is being improved and developed through application. What does not exist is a system of measures to help and support victims of violence and their children when the repressive apparatus has done its part in the prosecution of offenders.”<sup>3</sup> Respect for the rights of minorities has improved over the last decade, although the Serbian population continues to face harassment from the local population.

---

<sup>1</sup> Freedom House, Freedom in the world, Washington, viewed on 14 August 2012, <http://www.freedomhouse.org/report/freedom-world/2012/croatia>

<sup>2</sup> Freedom House, Freedom in the world, Washington, viewed on 14 August 2012, <http://www.freedomhouse.org/report/freedom-world/2012/croatia>

<sup>3</sup> Višnja Ljubičić, “Izvješće o radu za 2011”, Ombudsman for Gender Equality, viewed on 14 August 2012, http://www.prs.hr/attachments/article/97/Izvjesce\_o\_radu\_za\_2011\_Pravobranitelja\_ice\_za\_ravnopravnost\_spolova\_.pdf

Despite the Constitutional Act on the Rights of National Minorities 2002 that enhances the protection of the status of national minorities in the society and the method of selecting their representatives for the participation in public life and administration of local affairs through councils and representatives of national minorities in the units of self-government, the presence of minorities in the public sector is insufficient. Around 70 000 Serbs are registered as refugees. The Action Plan for an accelerated housing program to assist returnees was fully implemented in October 2011, but further improvement in housing is still needed.<sup>4</sup> The Roma minority also faces a lot of discrimination, but on a much wider scale (access to education, welfare, healthcare, employment and adequate housing), and with widespread poverty. There has been progress in education, especially pre-school education, while further progress in ensuring that Roma children complete primary and secondary education is very low. Many Roma don't have a settled status (permanent residence and citizenship), which creates difficulties when it comes to providing services, access to education, healthcare and free legal aid. All these examples are the reason why unemployment is high despite various measures, such as vocational training for young Roma women.<sup>5</sup>

The Anti-Discrimination Act 2008<sup>6</sup> provided for the first time protection against discrimination based on sexual orientation. It was only in 2008 that the legal framework of protection was formed, while its implementation in practice is still in development.

Based on the report of the Ombudsman, which integrated the reports of all ombudsmen, the conclusion is that the overall number of complaints in relation to 2010 did not increase, but there was an increase (from 45 in 2010 to 60 in 2011) in the number of cases in which the Ombudsman for Gender Equality detected discrimination.<sup>7</sup> The largest increase is seen in the case of gender discrimination, while complaints regarding sexual orientation are slowly

---

<sup>4</sup> Freedom House, Freedom in the world, Washington, viewed on 18 August 2012, <http://www.freedomhouse.org/report/freedom-world/2012/croatia>

<sup>5</sup> European Commission, "Izvešće o napretku Hrvatske za 2011.", Delegacija Europske unije u Republici Hrvatskoj, viewed on 18 August 2012, http://www.delhrv.ec.europa.eu/files/file/articles-hr\_rapport\_2011\_en-1318419216.pdf

<sup>6</sup> „This Act provides for the protection and promotion of equality as the highest values of the constitutional order of the Republic of Croatia, creates assumption for the achievement of equal opportunity and for protection against discrimination on grounds of race or ethnic background or skin color, sex, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, property status, trade union membership, education, social status, marital or family status, age, health status, disability, genetic heritage, gender identity, expression or sexual orientation“ (The Anti – Discrimination Act, Official Gazette, 85/08, Art 1.).

<sup>7</sup> Of 188 received complaints, 16 cases (8.5%) were related to gender discrimination.

increasing as they did in 2010 and 2009 as well. Their number is still significantly lower than expected, which indicates that people are not familiar with the possibility of addressing the Ombudsman for Gender Equality, and those who are familiar are still reluctant to use legal instruments for protection. The predominant discriminatory bases in proceedings before courts are race, gender and sexual orientation, and the highest number of cases relates to employment, hate crimes and violence during the Pride parade in Split.<sup>8</sup> "The distribution of homophobic and transphobic hate crimes is greatest in the context of maintaining Pride parades in Croatia. In 2011 the first Pride parade in Split was jeopardized by violence, when more than 3500 protesters threw rocks, bottles and other objects at the participants of the Pride parade. Eight people were injured and the police recorded 44 cases of hate crimes based on sexual orientation."<sup>9</sup>

Family Protection

ii. Neither the sources of family law, nor the Constitution of the Republic of Croatia itself contain an exact definition of family. In the primary source of family law, the Family Act (Official Gazette, 61/11), there is no legal definition of the family. "The family is under special protection of the Republic. Marriage and legal relations in marriage, cohabitation and family are regulated by law."<sup>10</sup> the constitutional norm is a norm of a categorical nature and requires special consideration for the needs of the family at different times. The reluctance of the legislator for a more durable statutory definition of family determination is conditioned by the realization that family relations are not static and that endless processes take place in them that deprive or diminish the initial meaning of existing legal norms.<sup>11</sup>

"Family members are spouses and common-law spouses, former spouses and common-law spouses, relatives by blood in a direct line, adoptive parents and adopted children, relatives of the lateral line to the third degree and relatives by marriage up to the second degree"<sup>12</sup> –

---

<sup>8</sup> Jurica Malčić, "Izvešće o pojavama diskriminacije za 2011.", Republic of Croatia, Ombudsman, viewed on 19 August 2012, <http://www.ombudsman.hr/dodaci/Izvje%C5%A1%C4%87e%20o%20pojavama%20diskriminacije%20za%202011.pdf>

<sup>9</sup> Amnesty International, "Nezaštićeni", Amnesty International Croatia, viewed on 19 August 2012, <http://amnesty.hr/wp/wp-content/uploads/2012/06/Neza%C5%A1ti%C4%87eni.pdf>

<sup>10</sup> Constitution of the Republic of Croatia (consolidated text, Official Gazette, 56/90, 135/97, 8/98, 113/00, 124/00, 28/01, 41/01, 55/01, 76/10, 85/10), Art. 61.

<sup>11</sup> Mira Alinčić, "Obitelj u obiteljskom zakonodavstvu", Revija za socijalnu politiku, viewed on 20 August 2012, <http://www.rsp.hr/ojs2/index.php/rsp/article/viewFile/579/568>

<sup>12</sup> Criminal Code (Official Gazette, 57/11), Art 89(30)

the purpose of the of dull recital of family members in the Criminal Code is not to determine who makes close family and who extended family, but who of the family members can be punished under it.

The status of marriage in Croatia is regulated by the Family Act. The status of marriage is provided only for a heterosexual community if it fulfils the other two hypotheses for the existence of marriage<sup>13</sup>.

According to the Croatian Bureau of Statistics, the average age for the first marriage increases with the passage of time and development. Thus, the average age for the first marriage in 2000 was 28.6 for men, while for women it was 25.3. The data from 2010 indicate that the average age is growing fast, so that the average age for the first marriage was over 30 for men, or more specifically 30.1, and for women it was over 27, or more specifically 27.2<sup>14</sup>

Child Protection

iii. The Convention on the Rights of the Child is considered a document that for the first time included all children's rights, incorporated children's rights into human rights and is a milestone in the treatment of the latter. Therefore, it will be described the general status of the child before 1992, when Croatia ratified the Convention, and the situation today. The former approach and attitude towards children's rights, as seen through our (family) legislation was completely different than it is today. Children were not perceived as a special group to which special measures of protection should be applied, but were treated incidentally. Parental rights were the starting point and parents were always mentioned in the first place (in relation to support, education, etc.). Thus, the Marriage and Family Relations Act 1978, which regulates the relationship between parents and children, talks primarily about the parental right - Art. 69 "Parents have the right and duty to keep their underage

---

<sup>13</sup> For the existence of a marriage it is necessary: 1. that the bride and groom are persons of a different sex, 2. that the bride and groom gave their consent to the marriage, 3. that the marriage in a civil ceremony was contracted before a registrar or that the marriage in a religious ceremony was made under the provisions in Article 8 and Article 20, Paragraph 1 and 4 of this Act. (Family Act, Official Gazette, 61/11, Art 24).

<sup>14</sup> Croatian Bureau of Statistics, "Prirodno kretanje stanovništva u 2010", viewed on 19 August 2012, http://www.dzs.hr/Hrv\_Eng/publication/2011/SI-1439.pdf

children safe and ensure that they are alive and healthy" or Art. 71 "Parents have the right and duty to ensure that their underage children have an education".<sup>15</sup>

In the Constitution of 1990 that was influenced by the then awareness and international law, the term "child" was only mentioned once. "A physically and mentally disabled and socially neglected child is entitled to special care, education and welfare."<sup>16</sup>, while in other cases children were treated as passive subjects. Almost always, they were dependent on their parents in exercising their rights.

In contrast, the new Family Act, which is under the influence of the Convention, approaches the parent - child relationship in a completely different way. The relationships have been established so that the child's rights and duties are in the first place, parental rights are no longer mentioned – they are replaced by the term parental care, which consists of the duties, responsibilities and rights in order to protect the child's welfare. A parent cannot relinquish the care for their child, and that care may be limited and taken from the parent by the relevant authorities for the reasons stated by the Family Act.

The norms of the present Constitution, in relation to children's rights, have not progressed much since 1990, and should be updated and incorporate the principles of the Convention. In such a fundamental document childhood should be recognized as the comprehensiveness of developmental and active needs of children as equal citizens.

Furthermore, the Convention has established new legal standards such as "the best interest of the child" and "child benefit" that must be implemented in the national legislation in order to fulfil the full purpose of the latter. In all actions concerning the child, Member States are obligated to give priority to the best interest of the child, no matter who undertakes them. In Croatia, a lot has been done concerning the implementation of the Convention since all of the laws and regulations follow the Convention, but nevertheless we are still far from the desired goal. It is imperative that these legal standards prescribed by the Convention be implemented and that they obtain more specific content because every time an excessive event occurs we realize how little we invest in child care and prevention programs.<sup>17</sup>

---

<sup>15</sup> M. Jelavić, "Zaštita dječjih prava nije među prioritetima", Civilno društvo, vol. 34, winter 2009, p. 13

<sup>16</sup> Constitution of the Republic of Croatia (Official Gazette 056/1990), Art 63

<sup>17</sup> M. Jelavić, "Zaštita dječjih prava nije među prioritetima", Civilno društvo, vol. 34, winter 2009, p. 13-14.

Awareness of the importance of the problem of violating children's rights has grown throughout history and the number of reported cases has grown in parallel as well. The approach to the problems of children's rights changed as awareness grew. In recent years, this awareness has been growing more rapidly, the public is more sensitive so more and more cases of violation of children's rights are revealed. The media give more and more space to issues such as violence against children, children's rights, and the relevant experts and representatives of civil society are invited to participate in TV shows and printed media. Today, the problems of children's rights are approached from a wide range of options - from the side of the civil society, the media, research, humanitarian actions to the establishment of the Office of the Ombudsman for Children in 2003, by which the children became recognized as a distinct social group that is entitled to special protection, and the "Brave phone". All of this is aimed at raising public awareness and the responsibility of every citizen to protect children. The goal of this comprehensive approach is the active involvement and the participation of children in making decisions that affect them<sup>18</sup>.

A new major issue and concern when it comes to children's rights themselves is their violation through the electronic media and the lack of education of teachers and parents on this topic.

Today, more and more information is available on the Internet to adults, young people and children, so responsibility in the handling, use and understanding of that information is growing too.

Progress in this area is visible. On 5 June 2012 a Strategic Partnership Agreement to establish a Centre for Safer Internet was signed at the Police Directorate by seven institutions. The Centre for Safer Internet is part of the IPA 2009 twinning project "Strengthening capacities in the field of prevention of sexual exploitation and abuse of children and providing assistance to vulnerable crime victims" and one of its goals is providing the possibility of unilateral online reports of illegal, harmful and dangerous content and activities.<sup>19</sup>

---

<sup>18</sup> H. Hrpka, J. Tomić, "Vrijeme velikog pomaka", Civilno društvo, vol. 34, winter 2009, p. 16-17.

<sup>19</sup> Ministry of the Interior of the Republic of Croatia, Sporazumom o strateškom partnerstvu uspostavljen Centar za sigurniji Internet, viewed on 25 August 2012, <http://www.mup.hr/127413.aspx>

A long-time social problem is the violation of children's rights by the media. The problem assumed major proportions in 2004 when around the end of October the Committee on the Rights of the Child expressed concern caused by the violation of the privacy rights of children in the Croatian media. Sensationalism in the media took upon itself the obligation to inform the public and many public media at the time followed that trend, and not just the tabloids.<sup>20</sup>

Today the situation has improved, although the situation is still worrisome because editors, publishers, etc., still do not notice in many situations that the child's well-being is seriously compromised by particular media coverage.

Furthermore, The Institution of the Ombudsperson for Children was established in 2003 as the first specialized institution of its kind in The Republic of Croatia. Its goal was to protect and promote children's rights and interests. The urge for establishing the institution came from recommendations of The UN Committee on the Rights of the Child (1996) which recommended the establishment of an independent watchdog body. The scope of The Ombudsperson for Children had been laid down in The Ombudsperson for Children Act (Official Gazette 96/2003). The act safeguards, monitors, and promotes the rights and interests of Croatian children. In addition, it is based on The Constitution of The Republic of Croatia, The UN Convention on the Rights of the Child, other international documents and the legislation of The Republic of Croatia. The Ombudsperson for Children acts on the basis of complaints, or on his or her own initiative, whether in responding to individual violations of children's rights and interests, or in general. The Ombudsperson for Children is appointed by the Croatian Parliament for a period of eight years, acts independently and autonomously, adhering to principles of equity and morals.<sup>21</sup>

iv. Relevant legislation in the implementation of international agreements is the Constitution, the Act on the Conclusion and Implementation of International Agreements (Official Gazette, 28/96), the Vienna Convention regarding the law on international agreements, which Croatia has accepted by a notification of succession to the UN Secretary General and the Vienna Convention on succession regarding international agreements, which refers to the specific problem of state succession.

---

<sup>20</sup> UN report: Hrvatski mediji krše prava privatnosti, Index, viewed on 25 August 2012, <http://www.index.hr/vijesti/clanak/-una-hrvatski-mediji-krse-prava-privatnosti-djece/246797.aspx>

<sup>21</sup> M.Hrabar et al, "Evaluation of the institution of the Ombudsperson for Children", viewed on 26 October 2012, <http://www.dijete.hr/hr/component/content/article/66-ostalo/756-evaluacija-institucije-pravobranitelja-za-djecu.html>

The Constitution of the Republic of Croatia stipulates in Chapter VII who is in charge of concluding international agreements, which depends on the nature and content of the international agreement.<sup>22</sup> As regards the Act on the Implementation of International Agreements, it provides a procedure for the conclusion and execution of any international agreement including the loan and guarantee agreements between the Croatian and international financial institutions to fund individual projects.

The relationship between the international and domestic law is based on the monistic principle. This is what the Croatian Constitution tells us about it: "International agreements concluded and ratified in accordance with the Constitution and made public, and which are in force, shall be part of the internal legal order of the Republic of Croatia, and have primacy over the law. Their provisions may be amended or repealed only under conditions and in the manner specified therein, or in accordance with the general rules of international law."<sup>23</sup>

Legal monism understands that national law and international law constitute a single legal system, and the legal rules of international law can be directly applied in the courts and other state bodies, with no added regulatory activities of the parliament or the government.<sup>24</sup>

The Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia ratified the Convention on the Rights of the Child on 3 January 1991. Since Croatia was a part of it to 25 October 1991, it was decided, on the basis of the Constitutional Decision on the Sovereignty and Independence of the Republic of Croatia on 25 June 1991 and the Decision of the Croatian Parliament, and the <sup>22</sup> "(1) The Croatian Parliament acknowledges international agreements which require the adoption or amendment of laws, international agreements of military and political nature and international agreements that are financially binding on the Republic of Croatia. (2) International agreements which give international organizations or alliances powers derived from the Constitution of the Republic of Croatia are acknowledged by a two-thirds majority vote of all the members of the Croatian Parliament. (3) The President of the Republic shall sign the instrument of ratification, accession, approval or acceptance of international agreements approved by the Croatian Parliament in conformity with paragraphs 1 and 2 of this Article. (4) International agreements not subject to ratification by the Croatian Parliament are concluded by the President of the Republic on the proposal of the Government or the Government of the Republic of Croatia itself " Constitution of the Republic of Croatia. (Official Gazette, 76/10), Art 140.

---

<sup>23</sup> Constitution of the Republic of Croatia (Official Gazette 76/10), Art 141.

<sup>24</sup> S. Rodin, T. Čapeta, Učinci direktiva Europske unije u nacionalnom pravu, viewed on 30 August 2012, http://www.pravo.unizg.hr/\_download/repository/Direktive\_final\_2008%5B1%5D.pdf

succession of SFRY of 8 October 1991, that Croatia was to be considered a party to the conventions that SFRY and its predecessors (Kingdom of Yugoslavia, the Federal People's Republic of Yugoslavia) ratified. One of the accepted conventions was the Convention on the Rights of the Child. Therefore, Croatia has been considered a party to the Convention since its independence, i.e. 8 October 1991, and has included it in its own legislation by ratifying it on 12 October 1992.<sup>25</sup>

Croatia has made a reservation, which reads: "The Republic of Croatia reserves the right not to apply Article 9, Paragraph 1 of the Convention since the internal legislation of the Republic of Croatia provides the right of the competent authorities (centres for social work) to decide on the separation of children from their parents without prior judicial review".<sup>26</sup> However, on 26 February 1998 the Croatian Government adopted the "Decision on the withdrawal of the reservation to Article 9, Paragraph 1 of the Convention on the Rights of the Child ", so that today there are no more reservations to the Convention.<sup>27</sup>

Since 1992, when Croatia ratified the Convention on the Rights of the Child, a lot has changed regarding the rights of the child and even the status of the child itself, pointing to the positive implementation of the Convention in its large majority. Children's rights in the Convention can be divided into: survival rights, development rights, participation rights and protection rights.

A big step has been made in the normative area, i.e. in the implementation of the Convention on the Rights of the Child into national legislation. Almost all of our laws and regulations follow the Convention. Adoption of the Act on the Ombudsman for Children in 2003, amendments to the Criminal Act, Family Act, Criminal Procedure Act, etc. are getting closer all legislation to the Convention. In the area of health care are all aligned to the Convention Regulations, e.g. the state is the main insurer of healthcare for vulnerable groups and compulsory health insurance is secured for people under 18, who have permanent or temporary residence in Croatia.

Furthermore, according to the Convention, children have the right to an adequate standard of living, and if their parents or guardians cannot afford such a standard, the state has to

---

<sup>25</sup> United Nation Treaty Collection, viewed on 28 August 2012,
http://treaties.un.org/Pages/ViewDetails.aspx?src=TREATY&mtdsg\_no=IV-11&chapter=4&lang=en#3

<sup>26</sup> Ibid.

<sup>27</sup> Ibid.

help them. Thus, under the Child Support Act, a parent or other person designated by law is entitled to financial support for child support. The funds allocated for child support amounted to about 0.5% of GDP in 2008 and the first half of 2009.<sup>28</sup>

2 THE LANZAROTE CONVENTION

i. Croatia ratified the Convention on the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms on 5 November 1997.

ii. The Republic of Croatia signed the Council of Europe Convention on the Protection of Children against Sexual Exploitation and Sexual Violence on 25 October 2007, ratified it on 21 September 2011, and the Convention entered into force on 01 January 2012. There are no reservations to the Convention.<sup>29</sup>

v. The Republic of Croatia follows the monistic principle, which means that international agreements are above the law and so is the Convention itself. International agreements are implemented directly. Therefore, in order for a legal rule of international law to have an application in the national legal order, there need not be a legal norm, i.e. an implementing law that allows it. The Lanzarote Convention is implemented directly.

vi. The question has been answered under number v.

vii. The question has been answered under number v.

vii. Croatia has not made a reservation to the Convention.

II NATIONAL LEGISLATION

---

<sup>28</sup> A. Brajša-Žganec et al., Analiza stanja prava djece i žena, UNICEF, viewed on 31 August 2012, http://www.unicef.hr/upload/file/370/185135/FILENAME/Analiza\_stanja\_prava\_djece\_i\_zena.pdf

<sup>29</sup> Council of Europe, Zaštita djece od seksualnog iskorištavanja i seksualnog nasilja, viewed on 28 August 2012, <http://conventions.coe.int/Treaty/Commun/ChercheSig.asp?NT=201&CM=1&DF=&CL=ENG>

1 GENERAL PRINCIPLES OF THE JURISDICTION

i. Croatia is a small country situated in Middle Europe. But the size of the country isn't important when history matters. Croatia has a big history of its state and governmental regime which has changed a lot during the centuries. Not being free and independent country until modern history (1990-ies) was the thing that influenced on this county a lot and left some marks on it permanently. In addition to that you can probably assume that today's independence of Croatia was achieved by a long history of struggle. In the last century Croatia was a part of Yugoslavia and had its own limited independence in internal political decisions and matters. But, the reality was much different and Croatia wanted to gain its independence.

In 1991 Croatia aimed to leave Yugoslavia as a sovereign country, while the Communist leaders of Serbia directly and by manipulating the Serbian minority in Croatia opposed the dissolution of Yugoslavia and wanted Croatia to remain a part of Yugoslavia dominated by Serbian majority and leaders of Serbian Communist party.. That's the reason why the war started. It lasted for 5 years and the result was Croatian independence.

On January 15, 1992, the Republic of Croatia was recognized as a sovereign state by the Ministerial Council of the European community and on the same day it was also recognized by many European and non-European countries. The Republic of Croatia was admitted as a full member to the United Nations at the 45th meeting of the General Assembly of the United Nations on May 22, 1992.

Croatia has been independent for almost 22 years and since it established as a free and sovereign country and its governmental regime hasn't changed much with exception regards the rule of the president of the republic whose authorities were seriously declined in the year of 2000/2001.

According to the Croatian Constitution, the government of Croatia is organized on the principle of the separation of powers into the legislative, executive and judicial branches.

The President of the Republic is the head of state, elected directly by the people, for a term of five years. It can be elected for a maximum of two terms<sup>30</sup>. The President of the Republic shall represent the Republic at home and abroad, be responsible for abiding by the Constitution, and ensure the continuance and unity of the Republic and the regular functioning of government. The president is commander-in-chief of the armed forces and Chairman of the National Defense Council.

The Government of the Republic of Croatia consists of a Prime Minister, Ministers and other members. They must exercise executive powers in conformity with the Constitution and law. All decisions, operations, organizations must be regulated by law and by procedural rules. The Government is responsible to the Parliament. The Prime Minister, ministers and members of the Government are jointly responsible for the decisions made by the Government and are personally responsible for their respective departments<sup>31</sup>.

The judicial power is exercised by courts, which are autonomous and independent. They administer justice in accordance with the Constitution and law. There is a Supreme Court, as the highest court, with the duty to ensure uniform application of laws and equality of citizens. There are also commercial courts, as a separate judicial branch. The establishment, jurisdiction, composition and organization of courts and court proceedings are regulated by law. Judges shall, in conformity with law, enjoy the same immunity as representatives of the Croatian Parliament. Judicial service is permanent and the Constitution sets the conditions when a judge may be relieved of his duties. A judge may not be transferred against his will. Judges may be brought to disciplinary proceedings in front of State Judiciary Council composed of a president and 14 members. According to the Constitution, the members of the State Judiciary Council are elected by the Croatian Parliament (Sabor) for a period of eight years<sup>32</sup>.

ii. Human rights were always very important in Croatian legislative. That is why they were immediately mentioned in the Constitution which was delivered during the time when Croatia fought for its independence. The Constitution was adopted in 1990, actually 22nd

---

<sup>30</sup> Constitution of the Republic of Croatia, Articles 94 - 107, Official Gazette (NN 85/10)

<sup>31</sup> Ibid, art. 108 - 117

<sup>32</sup> Ibid, art. 118 - 124

December 1990 by Croatian Parliament. At that moment the strongest political power in the parliament was popularly-elected, right-of-centre Croatian Democratic Party (HDZ). It is very important to mention that before declaring the independence the referendum regards the independence was held in Croatia. Practically 90% of the voters voted in favour of independence. On the basis of this fact we can state that the independence was the policy of all political options active in Croatia. Croatian Constitution is often referred to as “Christmas Constitution,” anticipating its departure from the ailing Yugoslav Federation. Due to all that there is no Bill of Rights in Croatia.

Human rights are mentioned in the Constitution and they are divided into many types, such as: fundamental, personal, political, social and cultural rights<sup>33</sup>. Every human being has right to live and there is no capital punishment in Croatia. Man's freedom and personality are inviolable and nobody can be deprived of liberty, nor can liberty be restricted if so isn't specified by law. Furthermore, no one can be arrested or detained without a written court order based on law. Such an order shall be read and given to the arrested person at the moment of arrest. The arrested person shall be immediately informed in a way understandable to him of the reasons for arrest and of his rights determined by law. Any person arrested or detained shall have the right to appeal to the court, which shall without delay decide on the legality of the arrest.

There are some specific provisions due to children but there are also some provisions from which we can conclude that they are very important for children. One of those provisions is that all citizens are guaranteed respect for their family life, dignity, reputation and honour. Or the provision related to education which says that Primary education shall be compulsory and free. That means that all children must attend elementary school in order to gain fundamental education. Also it says that the costs of it are provided by the country. There are couple of Provisions that are specifically oriented on children and their protection: One of them says that it is parents duty to bring up, support and educate their children, and that they shall have the right and freedom to decide independently on the upbringing of their children. They are also responsible to ensure full and harmonious development of their children personalities. Nevertheless, the parents are not the only one who should take care of the children. Due to the Constitution everyone shall have the duty to protect children and also, helpless persons. Children can't be employed before reaching the legally determined age, nor may they be forced or allowed to do work which is harmful to their health or morality. When community can't protect children in a necessary amount the State shall take special care of parentless minors or parentally neglected children. But, not only parents and whole community have obligations to children. According to Constitution children have some obligations too. They are bound to take care of their old and helpless parents.

---

<sup>33</sup> Ibid, art. 14 - 70

iii. Constitutional judicature was introduced in the Republic of Croatia in 1963 and the Constitutional Court began to work in 1964. It was divided in two historical periods:

(1) Constitutional judicature in the former Socialist Republic of Croatia from 1963 to 1990 - the period when Croatia was one of the six federal units (republics) of the former Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia and

(2) Constitutional judicature in the Republic of Croatia after 1990 - the period after the Republic of Croatia gained independence and sovereignty.

The work of the Constitutional Court is regulated by the Constitutional Act on the Constitutional Court of the Republic of Croatia published in "Narodne novine", No. 99/99 of September 29, 1999, and the text of the Constitutional Act on Revisions and Amendments of the Constitutional Act on the Constitutional Court of the Republic of Croatia published in "Narodne novine", No. 29/2002 of March 22, 2002.

In the first article of the Act it is stated that This Constitutional Act regulates conditions and procedure for the election of judges of the Constitutional Court of the Republic of Croatia and termination of their office, conditions and terms for instituting proceedings for the review of constitutionality and legality, procedure and legal effects of its decisions, protection of human rights and fundamental freedoms are guaranteed by the Constitution and other issues of importance for the performance of duties and functions of the Constitutional Court.

This Act considered to be the part of the Croatian Constitutional System consisting of the Constitution by itself and this Act.

In accordance with the Constitution Constitutional Court consists of thirteen judges who are elected by the Parliament upon proposal of the Parliamentary committee which has jurisdiction regards constitutional matters. They are to be elected for a term of eight years, from among outstanding jurists, especially judges, public prosecutors, lawyers and university professors of law. The court has its own president who is elected by the judges of the Constitutional court for a term of four years. The judges of the Constitutional Court may not perform any other public or professional duty and they enjoy the same immunity as members of the Croatian Parliament. Also, a judge of the Constitutional Court may be relieved of office before the expiry of the term for which he was elected if he so requests, if he is sentenced to a term of imprisonment, or if he is permanently incapacitated for performing his office, as established by the Constitutional Court itself After understanding the way the Constitutional Court is organized it is important to know what are his specific duties.

It: - decides on the conformity of laws with the Constitution and may repeal a law if it finds it to be unconstitutional;

- decides on the conformity of other regulations with the Constitution and law and may repeal or annul any other regulation if it finds it to be unconstitutional or illegal.;

- protects the constitutional freedoms and rights of man and citizen in proceedings instituted by a constitutional complaint;

- decides jurisdictional disputes among the legislative, executive and judicial branches;

- supervises the constitutionality of the programmes and activities of political parties and may ban their work if their programme or their activities threaten violence against the democratic constitutional order, independence, unity or territorial entirety of the Republic of Croatia;

- supervises the constitutionality and legality of elections and the republican referendum and decides electoral disputes which do not fall within the jurisdiction of courts;

- at the proposal of the Government of the Republic of Croatia, establishes that the President of the Republic is permanently unable to perform his duties, in which case the duties of the President of the Republic are temporarily assumed by the Speaker of the Croatian Parliament;

- in proceedings instituted by a two-thirds majority vote of all representatives of the Parliament, decides by a two-thirds majority vote of all the judges on the impeachment of the President of the Republic. If the

Constitutional Court sustains the impeachment, the duty of the President of the Republic ceases by force of the Constitution <sup>34</sup>

But, the majority of Constitutional Court's work is to protect violated human rights and to provide human freedom in the society. That is possible via constitutional complaint. The constitutional complaint represents an instrument for the protection of the basic rights and freedoms of citizens in front of the Constitutional Court.

Everyone may lodge a constitutional complaint with the Constitutional Court if he deems that the individual act of a state body, a body of local and regional self-government, or a legal person with public authority, which decided about his/her rights and obligations, or about suspicion or accusation for a criminal act, has violated his/her human rights or fundamental freedoms guaranteed by the Constitution, or his/her right to local and regional self-government guaranteed by the Constitution. This means it is possible to apply individually. But, that is not possible to do it directly.

According to article 62 of the mentioned Act it is said that if there are some other legal remedies provided against violation of the constitutional rights, the constitutional complaint may be lodged only after that remedies have been exhausted. From a practical aspect this means that citizens before using the constitutional complaint should absolve the administrative or regular judicial procedure. That means that constitutional complaint is treated as an exceptional and specific legal instrument which can be used only if the national legal order did not foresee any other method of protection of the breached right. So the hierarchy system is clearly visible. Furthermore, to use this specific legal instrument there are some other conditions that must be fulfilled: (As we have already mentioned) it can be used only if previously all other instruments for protection foreseen within the legal system were exhausted and only against final acts (when referring to judicial decisions on which there is a petition against the breach of the right of the citizen).

The Constitutional complaint can be filed within a period of 30 days from the day of receiving the decision.

---

<sup>34</sup> Ibid, art. 129

If the constitutional court of Croatia decides to accept the complaint that automatically means that the previous decision becomes abrogated. Still, the constitutional court can initiate a procedure on the basis of the constitutional complaint before the exhaustion of the regular legal protection in a situation where:

- there is doubt that the regular court did not proceed in a reasonable period of time and with that behaviour breached the right of the complainer or,
- with the disputed single legal act the citizens constitutional rights were abusively breached.

As we have concluded the right for application of the constitutional complaint must be explicitly foreseen, as well as its content. Every constitutional complaint must contain:

(Article 65 of the Constitutional Act):

- the name and surname of the submitter;
- the registration number of the submitter;
- the address of permanent or temporary residence;
- if the complaint is filed through an authorized person then its name and surname;
- the number of the decision on which the constitutional complaint is based on;
- the constitutional right which the complainer feels is breached (it must be explicitly stated which articles of the Constitution guarantee breached rights);
- the reasons for the complaint submitting;
- evidence that all other legal instruments were exhausted;
- the complaint has been filed within the legally permissible period of time; and
- the signature of the person submitting the complaint

The complaint mandatory have to contain the contested act in the original form or a copy verified by a notary. Complaint will be examined by a council of six judges. They can decide only, when all judges are present. If the council cannot achieve unanimity, or if the council feels that the subject of the constitutional complaint has a wider meaning, the decision on the complaint can be made during a general meeting of the Constitutional court. In Croatia, with exception of Municipal Criminal Court of Zagreb, all courts have full jurisdiction. It means that they decide in criminal and civil matters.

iv. There is not a Supreme Criminal Court in Croatia but the final decisions in Criminal matters are passed by the Supreme Court of Croatia. But, The High Criminal Court will be established on 1st of January 2015<sup>35</sup>.

Criminal proceeding is a set of legally regulated activities, defined by regulations, that are executed by authorities and other persons determined by the law whenever there is a suspicion that a criminal act has been committed. The goal of the criminal procedure is to determine, ( by the court) if the criminal act has been committed who has committed the act, or, has it been committed by the defendant, can a sentence or other measure set forth by criminal law be pronounced against the perpetrator.

To start procedures prior to criminal proceedings (criminal investigation, emergency investigation prior to the formal commencement of investigation), submitting the request for investigation, decision on conducting the investigation, indictment; shall be undertaken if there is reasonable suspicion that a person has committed a crime. That level of certainty can vary. Every person is innocent and shall not be considered guilty of a crime until proven guilty by a court's final decision. That because only the court, within the criminal procedure, can determine whether a person has committed a crime. Reasonable suspicion means that there is a certain level of certainty based on gathered information and evidence that a certain person has committed a crime.

Only the authorized prosecutor can initiate a criminal procedure.

Institution of criminal proceedings depends exclusively and only on the authorized prosecutor. Whether an act ends before a court, and whether it will be taken through criminal proceedings depends only on the authorized prosecutor instituting a criminal procedure. The court shall never institute a criminal procedure ex officio, or issue the decision on the commencement of criminal proceedings without a motion with which authorized prosecutor institutes criminal proceedings. After the authorized prosecutor submits a motion that institutes criminal procedure, and provides that the legal conditions are met, the court shall issue an act that commences the criminal procedure. Authorized prosecutor are, firstly, State Attorney – for criminal offenses subject to public prosecution, secondly, Private Prosecutor – for criminal offences subject to private charge and an Injured Person – can replace the State Attorney if the State Attorney establishes that there is no foundation for the institution and conducting of criminal proceedings.

---

<sup>35</sup> Criminal Procedure Act, art. 19.e, Official Gazette (NN 152/08, 76/09, 80/11, 121/11)

Prosecution commences in various situations, when:

- Investigative Judge issues a decision on conducting the investigation
- Investigative Judge issues approval to the authorized prosecutor to raise direct indictment
- President of the panel orders the trial (main hearing) based on a direct indictment if there was no objection against the indictment or President of the panel did not demand to question the indictment
- Indictment becomes final
- President of the panel or single judge orders the trial (main hearing) in summary proceedings
- Single judge issues penal order.

We can divide criminal proceeding in five phases:

1. Investigation,
2. Indictment with possible control of the indictment,
3. Trial (main hearing) with rendering and pronouncement of judgment,
4. Procedure following an appeal against a judgment and
5. Serving the judgment.

Investigation is a group of procedural actions that shall be conducted by the investigating judge, upon the request of the authorized prosecutor, when reasonable suspicion exists that a certain person has committed a criminal offense. The purpose of investigation is to collect evidence and information necessary for a decision on whether to refer an indictment or to discontinue proceedings as well as evidence that may not be possible to repeat at the trial or if its examination may involve some difficulties. The investigation judge shall conclude the investigation when he finds that the case has been sufficiently clarified so that the indictment may be preferred or the proceedings discontinued

Indictment is an indicting act of the State Attorney or the subsidiary prosecutor in the regular criminal proceedings. The proceedings before the court shall be conducted only on the basis of the indictment. The court shall serve the indictment to the defendant and his defense counsel. They are entitled to submit an objection to an indictment within a term of eight days from the day it is served. The president of the panel may make the request for examination of the indictment up until the trial is scheduled and not later than two months from the day when the indictment is submitted to the court. An indictment shall become final on the day when the non-trial panel, deciding on the request from the president of the panel, agrees with the indictment. Also, when an objection against it is being rejected it becomes final.

The trial is a part before a court where the procedural materials needed to reach the judgment are considered publicly, orally, contradictorily and directly. The president of the panel shall order the day, hour and place of the trial with an order. He should also direct the trial. His duty is to maintain order and to protect the court's dignity. The trial shall be held in open court and any person 18 or over the age of 18 may be present at the trial. When the trial is over the judgment must be rendered. It is the most important act in criminal procedure and it can be rendered only by a court. Then it follows pronouncement of the judgment which consists of reading of the judgment and brief statement of reasons for the judgment. There are four types of judgment:

1. Judgment rejecting the charge
2. Judgment of acquittal
3. Judgment of conviction
4. Judgment of "determination"

But, against all that judgments there are some legal remedies which can be used.

Appeal is the only ordinary all-encompassing judicial remedy against the judgment. An appeal shall be reviewed in the second instance by the higher court than the one that rendered the judgment (devolutive quality of an appeal). A filed appeal shall stay the execution of the judgment (suspension quality of an appeal). It may be taken within a term of fifteen days from the day the copy of the judgment is served.

There are a couple of grounds for challenging a judgment: 1. For substantial violation of the criminal procedure provisions 2. For violation of the Criminal Code 3. For erroneous or incomplete determination of the factual situation 4. In regard to the decision on criminal sanctions, confiscation of pecuniary benefit, costs of criminal proceedings, claims for indemnification as well as the decision to publish the judgment in the media.

When a judicial decision becomes final, appeal cannot be used. Against final judicial decision extraordinary judicial remedies may be stated. There are 3 types of extraordinary remedies like: 1) Reopening of criminal proceedings, 2) Extraordinary mitigation of punishment, 3) Request for the protection of legality and a 4) Request for extraordinary review of final judgment

The final judgment means that the judgment cannot be recalled or altered within the proceedings, but it shall be enforced. The judgment shall become final after it can no longer be challenged by an appeal or when it is not subject to appellate review. If there was no appeal, the first instance judgment shall become final after the expiry of the term for appeal. If an appeal was filed and the second instance court confirmed or revised the first instance judgment, it shall become final on the day the second instance court reached the decision.

v. According to article 10 of Croatian Criminal Code it is stated that criminal legislation shall not be applied to a child who, at the time of committing a criminal offense, had not reached fourteen years of age. That article represents Exclusion of Applying Criminal Legislation to Children. So, we can conclude that the age of criminal liability is 14 years of age.

Also, in the following article (article 11) it is stated that this code shall apply to young perpetrators of criminal offenses (juveniles and adolescents), unless a special statute on young perpetrators provides otherwise.

Juvenile perpetrator of criminal offences are persons who turned 14 but not yet 18 at the time of committing the criminal offence, against whom legal proceedings have not been initiated (crime report dropped), interlocutory proceedings have been terminated or a proposal for a penal sentence has been filed. Legal proceedings through a senate have been validly concluded by issuing the decision on termination of proceedings or pronouncing of sanctions.

Younger juvenile is a person who turned 14 but not yet 16 at the time of committing a criminal offence and who may not be sentenced to juvenile imprisonment but may only be given educational measures.

Older juvenile is a person who turned 16 but not yet 18 at the time of committing a criminal offence and who may be given educational measures, but may also be sentenced to juvenile imprisonment, if the Code foresees any conditions for that.

The regulation regards the criminal liability of the young adults is generally regulated in the Criminal Act where it is stated in article 10 that this law is to be applied unless the specific law has different regulation. The Criminal Act does not define how old is young adult criminal. This definition is given in the Law on the Courts of Juveniles where in article 2 they are defined as persons between 18 and 21 years old. This rule is applied in practice of criminal courts. The new regulation is given in the art. 48 of of the Courts for Juveniles where a privileged position in the criminal procedure is not given to persons from 18 to 21 years but also to youngsters from 21 to 23 years. The level of the specific procedure rights is much lower for those who are 21 to 23 years old comparing to persons from 18 to 21 years of age.

The number of juveniles to whom criminal sanctions were pronounced amounted to 814 in 2011. Out of that number, 766 were educational measures, that is, 94.1%. When pronouncing criminal sanctions, juveniles are divided to older and younger juveniles. The number of convicted older juveniles (498) decreased by 15.4% and the number of convicted younger juveniles (316) by 6.0%, all compared to 2010. There were 15 juvenile imprisonment sentences (increase of 15.4%) and 33 suspended juvenile imprisonment sentences (decrease of 26.7%) pronounced to older juveniles. The largest number of criminal offences recorded was against property, that is 2 131 crime reports (63.1%) and 661 accusations.

2 SUBSTANTIVE CRIMINAL LAW

2.1 Sexual Abuse

i. Regarding the general structure of criminalizing sexual abuse, firstly, criminal law defines the criminal offenses of sexual abuse and exploitation of a minor separately<sup>36</sup> from the criminal acts against sexual freedom.<sup>37</sup>

Further, in the criminal offenses of sexual abuse of a child, the law makes a distinction between abuse committed against a child under the age of fifteen from the abuse of a child of fifteen years of age.<sup>38</sup> With regard to sexual abuse of a child under fifteen years of age, we distinguish sexual activities in the essence of which is the commitment of the act with a child per se,<sup>39</sup> from the sexual activities which are committed under violent circumstances,<sup>40</sup> to be explained more thoroughly later.<sup>41</sup> The law also distinguishes lewd acts committed under the circumstances with<sup>42</sup> or without the use of force.<sup>43</sup>

With regard to criminal acts committed against a child above the age of fifteen, criminalized are the sexual activities in which the person who committed the act has taken advantage of the child's dependent state in relation to him or her.<sup>44</sup>

---

<sup>36</sup> CC 2011 c 17

<sup>37</sup> ibid c 16

<sup>38</sup> For further explanation on the development of CC 2011 and its differences towards previous CC 1997, see: K. Turković, A. Maršavelski, 'Nacrt posebnog dijela novog Kaznenog zakona - pregled pet glava' (2010) 17 Croatian Ann. of Crim. L. and Prac. 503.

<sup>39</sup> CC 2011 art 158(1), "Whoever performs forcible sexual intercourse or an equivalent sexual act against a child under fifteen or sexual coercion or engagement in equivalent sexual acts with a third person or induces the victim into performing such an act on himself or herself, shall be punished by imprisonment for one to ten years."

<sup>40</sup> ibid art 158(5), "Whoever performs forcible sexual intercourse or an equivalent sexual act against a child under fifteen years of age by force or threat, deceit, abuse of authority or helpless or dependent state of the victim, shall be punished by imprisonment for three to fifteen years."

<sup>41</sup> See below c 2(2)(a)(iv)

<sup>42</sup> CC 2011 art 158(6), "(6) Whoever under the conditions of paragraph 5 of this Article performs lewd acts against a child under fifteen years of age, shall be punished by imprisonment for one to eight years."

<sup>43</sup> ibid art 158(2), "Whoever performs lewd acts against a child under fifteen years of age, or induces the child to perform lewd acts with a third person or himself, shall be punished by imprisonment for six months to five years."

<sup>44</sup> ibid art 159(1), "Whoever performs sexual intercourse or an equivalent sexual act upon a child above the age of fifteen by using his/her status or relationship towards a child who is entrusted to him/her for education, upbringing, custody or care, shall be punished by imprisonment for six months to five years."

Under the term 'sexual activities' the following is implied: sexual intercourse or an equivalent sexual act, sexual coercion or engagement in equivalent sexual acts with a third person or inducing the victim into performing such an act himself or herself.<sup>45</sup> Moreover, the legislation also defines lewd acts as sexual activities, also as inducing a person to undertake or participate in a lewd act with another person or oneself.<sup>46</sup> In addition to the mentioned sexual activities, the national legislation criminalizes satisfying lust in the presence of a child under the age of fifteen<sup>47</sup> as well as seduction of a child for the purpose of satisfying lust.<sup>48</sup>

Therefore, we may conclude that the acts criminalized under sexual activities are applied fairly broadly.

ii. The law does not use the term 'intentionally', but by contrast, stresses the case when the offender does not realise that the child is under fifteen years of age, but has reasonable doubts for assuming, that the child is above that age, and undertakes sexual activities without use of force and equivalent circumstances.<sup>49</sup> Therefore the offender is also in error of having committed a criminal act. This leads us to conclude, argumentum a contrario, that in the cases other than this the law implies that the act was committed intentionally. Therefore, all these forms of criminal offenses can be perpetrated only intentionally, i.e. if the perpetrator is known with the fact or at least permitting the fact of committing a criminal offense.<sup>50</sup>

---

<sup>45</sup> ibid art 158(1); the former CC 1997 mentions only the terms "sexual intercourse and an equivalent sexual act".

<sup>46</sup> ibid art 158(2),(6)

<sup>47</sup> ibid art 160(1), "Whoever, in the presence of a child under fifteen years of age, performs acts aimed at satisfying his own lust or the lust of a third person, shall be punished by imprisonment for at most one year."

<sup>48</sup> ibid art 161, "An adult who in intention to commit an offense from Article 158 towards a child under fifteen years of age, by communication technologies or by another manner suggests a meeting with that person oneself or a third person and takes the measures to realize that meeting, shall be punished by imprisonment for at most three years."; this criminal act was introduced by CC 2011 and it is known as the criminal act of "grooming".

<sup>49</sup> ibid art 158(4), "If the perpetrator was in an avoidable mistake that the child from the paragraph 1 of this Article was at least of fifteen years of age, shall be punished by imprisonment for six months to five years. If the perpetrator was in an avoidable mistake that the child from the paragraph 2 of this Article was at least of fifteen years of age, shall be punished by imprisonment for at most three years."

<sup>50</sup> D. Derenčinović, P. Novoselec, L. Cvitanović, K. Turković, A. Kurtović, I. Bojanić, V. Grozdanić, Posebni dio kaznenog prava (P. Novoselec, editor, Pravni fakultet u Zagrebu, 2007) 168.

Crimes of sexual abuse against a child are classified into several categories, and accordingly, the criminal liability or sanctions differ in accordance with the determined penalty.

Given that the legal age for consensual sexual intercourse in Croatian legislative is fifteen, the basic criminal act is sexual child abuse under the age of fifteen.

Criminalized is the act of sexual activities per se (broadly applied definition above) with a child, therefore sexual intercourse and equivalent sexual acts<sup>51</sup> in addition to lewd acts,<sup>52</sup> and the offender shall be sentenced from one to ten years of imprisonment, or from six months to five years respectively.

Qualified is the case of sexual intercourse or equivalent acts if they involve violence or threat, coercion, seduction or abuse of authority, or the child's helpless or dependent state, in which case the offender shall be sentenced to imprisonment from three to fifteen years.<sup>53</sup> In case of committing lewd acts under the given circumstances, the offender shall be sentenced to imprisonment from one to eight years.<sup>54</sup>

Additionally, the law criminalizes serious criminal offenses of sexual abuse for which the highest penalties are determined.<sup>55</sup> The essence of the criminal offense comprises the following qualified circumstances: the child suffered serious physical injury, or his physical or emotional development is seriously threatened, or the child became pregnant, the act involved several perpetrators, or the act was committed against a particularly vulnerable child or it was committed by a member of the family or any person with whom the child shares the household, or it was committed under particularly ruthless and brutal circumstances. If the offender committed an act of sexual child abuse without the use of force, and under the circumstances given, shall be sentenced to imprisonment from three to fifteen years.<sup>56</sup> In

---

<sup>51</sup> CC 2011 art 158(1)

<sup>52</sup> ibid art 158(2)

<sup>53</sup> ibid art 158(5)

<sup>54</sup> ibid art 158(6)

<sup>55</sup> ibid art 166

<sup>56</sup> ibid art 166(1), "If, by the criminal offense referred to in paragraph 1 of Article 158, paragraphs 1 and 2 of Article 162, paragraphs 1 and 2 of Article 163 and paragraph 1 of Article 164, a serious bodily injury is inflicted on the child or his health is severely impaired or the female child is left pregnant, or his physical or emotional development is seriously threatened, or the act involved several perpetrators, or the act was committed against a particularly vulnerable child or it was committed by a member of the family or any case of the given circumstances, for sexual abuse with the use of force and comparable circumstance, the offender shall be sentenced to imprisonment for not less than five years.<sup>57</sup> As most serious circumstances, the law defines the child's death as consequence of the mentioned criminal offense, in which case the offender shall be sentenced to not less than ten years or long-term imprisonment.<sup>58</sup>

iii. Legal age for engaging in sexual activities is fifteen.<sup>59</sup> But if the child is under fifteen, and the age difference between the persons engaged in sexual intercourse or an equivalent act or in a lewd act does not exceed three years, in that case no criminal offense of sexual child abuse has been committed.<sup>60</sup>

iv. With the basic criminal offense of sexual child abuse under the age of fifteen, criminalized are the sexual activities with a child per se, without the use of force and comparable circumstances. However, the law with the same criminal act defines as qualified comparable circumstances the use of force or threat, seduction, coercion or abuse of authority, or the child's helpless or dependent state in relation to him or her. In that case, for sexual intercourse or an equivalent sexual act with a child under fifteen, the offender shall be sentenced from three to fifteen years of imprisonment.<sup>61</sup> For lewd acts committed under the given circumstances, the offender shall be sentenced to imprisonment from one to eight person with whom the child shares the household, or it was committed under particularly ruthless and brutal circumstances, the perpetrator shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than eight years or by long-term imprisonment.”

---

<sup>57</sup> ibid art 166(2), “If, by the criminal offense referred to in paragraph 5 of Article 158, paragraph 3 of Article 162, paragraphs 3 of Article 163 and paragraph 2 of Article 164, a serious bodily injury is inflicted on the child or his health is severely impaired or the female child is left pregnant, or his physical or emotional development is seriously threatened, or the act involved several perpetrators, or the act was committed against a particularly vulnerable child or it was committed by a member of the family or any person with whom the child shares the household, or it was committed under particularly ruthless and brutal circumstances, the perpetrator shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than five years.”

<sup>58</sup> ibid art 166(3), “If, by the criminal offense referred to in Article 158, Article 162, Article 164, the death of the child was caused, the perpetrator shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than ten years or long-term imprisonment.”

<sup>59</sup> ibid art 158; in the previous CC 1997 the legal age for engaging in sexual activities was fourteen years of age.

<sup>60</sup> ibid art 158(3); in the previous CC 1997 consensual sexual activities between minors were not regulated.

<sup>61</sup> ibid art 158(5)

years.<sup>62</sup> Serious criminal acts under the given circumstances have been dealt with in the above paragraph.<sup>63</sup>

v. It is provided that a person who engages in sexual intercourse or an equivalent act with a descending or ascending relative, brother, sister, half-brother or half-sister, by blood or adoption, shall be sentenced to imprisonment for at most one year.<sup>64</sup>

However, the person who was a child at the time of the sexual activity committed, shall not be punished.<sup>65</sup>

vi. In criminalizing the offenses of sexual abuse of a child under fifteen, in case of the use of force and threat, the law also provides the abuse of authority or the child's helpless or dependent state in relation to the offender, defining thus these circumstances as comparable to force.<sup>66</sup>

However, the law particularly criminalizes the case when a child above fifteen is placed in someone's responsibility for the purpose of upbringing, education, charity, and that person engages in sexual activities with the child, or coerces the child into sexual activities with another person or coerces the child into performing sexual activities himself.<sup>67</sup> The offender shall be sentenced to imprisonment from six months to five years. The same penalty is imposed if the offender is a relative by blood or adoption in the descending or ascending line, stepfather or stepmother who engages in sexual activities with a child of fifteen years of age.<sup>68</sup>

---

<sup>62</sup> ibid art 158(6)

<sup>63</sup> See above c 2(2)(a)(ii)

<sup>64</sup> CC 2011 art 179(1), "Whoever performs sexual intercourse or an equivalent sexual act with a relative by blood in a direct line or with a sibling shall be punished by a fine or imprisonment not exceeding one year."

<sup>65</sup> ibid art 179(2), "the person who was a child at the time of the sexual activity committed, shall not be punished."

<sup>66</sup> ibid art 158(5)

<sup>67</sup> ibid art 159(1)

<sup>68</sup> ibid art 159(2)

2.2 Child Prostitution

vii. Croatia signed the Council of Europe Convention on Action against Trafficking in Human Beings on 16th May 2005 and ratified the Convention on 5th September 2007 which further entered into force on 1st January 2012.<sup>69</sup>

vii. Croatian criminal law defines a criminal act of pandering in which the offender, for the purpose of financial exploitation or any other benefit, seduces or coerces child into prostitution, or organizes or acts as accessory to child prostitution. A criminal act of pandering implies that the offender knew or must have had knowledge or assumed that the victim was a child, the sentence for this offence being one to ten years of imprisonment.<sup>70</sup>

In this manner, the essence of this criminal offense overlaps with the definition of the Lanzarote Convention, in the sense that the act of prostitution is performed for the purpose of profit or other benefit, but differs in relation to the addressee of this benefit. Croatian law takes into consideration only the benefit that the offender takes for himself, unlike the Lanzarote Convention which provides a broader definition, in that the remuneration could also be promised to the child or another person. By contrast, the Criminal Law does not mention that the child could be given any recompense.

In addition to the basic criminal offense of pandering, there is also a qualified act, committed under the circumstances of force or threat, deceit, abuse of authority or helpless or dependent state of the victim, for which a sentence of three to fifteen years of imprisonment may be imposed.<sup>71</sup> Also criminalized is the publication of the exploitation of

---

<sup>69</sup> Council of Europe Treaty Office
<<http://www.conventions.coe.int/Treaty/Commun/ChercheSig.asp?NT=197&CM=8&DF=27/08/2012&CL=ENG>> accessed 20 August 2012

<sup>70</sup> CC 2011 art 162(1), "Whoever, for profit, organizes, assists or induces a child in offering sexual services, shall be punished by imprisonment for one to ten years."

<sup>71</sup> ibid art 162(3), "Whoever induces a child by force or threat, deceit, abuse of authority or helpless or dependent state of the victim, in offering sexual services, shall be punished by imprisonment for three to fifteen years."

the child's sexual services, for which a sentence of six months to five years of imprisonment is provided.<sup>72</sup>

The above mentioned imprisonment penalties shall therefore be imposed on the recruiter of the child prostitution.

ix. Croatian criminal law takes into consideration, as earlier mentioned, the liability of the recruiter but equally so that of the user. In child prostitution under the circumstances of the use of force or threat, deceit, abuse of authority or the child's helpless or dependent state, the user shall be sentenced to an equal penalty as the recruiter, from three to fifteen years of imprisonment, if he knew or must have had knowledge of the given circumstances.<sup>73</sup> Contrarily, the user who conducts sexual activities with a child of fifteen years of age, with remuneration, shall be sentenced to imprisonment from six months to five years,<sup>74</sup> if he knew or must have had knowledge of the person being a child.<sup>75</sup>

2.3 Child Pornography

Child pornography in general:

x. The Republic of Croatia is a member of the Convention on Cybercrime of the Council of Europe which was signed on 23 November 2001 when was adopted at the conference of the Council of Europe in Budapest. After the adoption of the Law on Ratification of the Convention, Croatia has ratified the Convention on Cybercrime as the second state on 17 October 2002. The provisions of the Convention are implemented in the Croatian Criminal Code by the Act on modifications and amendments to Criminal Code, which entered into force on 1 October 2004 when a sufficient number of states ratified the Convention. It was added to the Criminal Code as "Child pornography on a computer system or network" and Article 197a<sup>76</sup> which criminalized a number of socially unacceptable behaviours related to

---

<sup>72</sup> ibid art 162(4), "Whoever publishes the exploitation of the child's sexual services, shall be punished by imprisonment for sixth months to five years."

<sup>73</sup> ibid art 162(3)

<sup>74</sup> ibid art 162(2)

<sup>75</sup> The user who conducts sexual activities with a child under fifteen shall be liable for the act of sexual abuse under CC 2011 art 158.

<sup>76</sup> Criminal Code (NN 110/97, 27/98, 50/00, 129/00, 51/01, 111/03, 190/03, 105/04, 84/05, 71/06, 110/07, 152/08, 57/11) -Child pornography on a computer system or network
Article 197 a

Whoever produces, offers, distributes or procures through a computer system or network for himself or for computers and computer networks. The Convention on Cybercrime has enabled the police and judicial authorities more effective prosecution of perpetrators of criminal offenses against the confidentiality, integrity and availability of computer data and systems and the fight against criminal offenders of child pornography.

xi. In the Croatian Criminal Code, which entered into force on 1st January 1998, there is no definition of the term "child pornography" or pornography in general. Legislators believed the term is too extensive and it is not easy to define. Despite the lack of definition, from the Article 196 (1)<sup>77</sup> can be concluded that pornographic material are photographs, audiovisual materials, and other items of pornographic content. Because of the large gap between reality and the current Criminal Code, as a result of globalization and progress in all fields, new Criminal Code is prepared and will enter into force on 1st January 2013. It is compatible with the Convention on Cybercrime, Lanzarote Convention and other documents that the Republic of Croatia has signed in the meantime.

Article 163 (6) of the new Criminal Code defines child pornography as "material that visually or otherwise shows a real child or realistically depicted non-existent child or a person who looks like a child engaged in real or simulated sexually explicit conduct or showing sexual organs of children in sexual purposes. Materials that have an artistic, medical, scientific, information or similar importance should not be considered pornography in terms of this Article".<sup>78</sup> The definition is made based on the Article 20 (2) Lanzarote Convention<sup>79</sup> and has another person, or who possesses in a computer system or on a computer-data storage medium pornographic contents which show children or minors engaged in sexually explicit conduct or which are focused on their sexual organs, shall be punished by imprisonment for one to ten years.

---

Whoever makes accessible to a child, through a computer system, network or a computer-data storage medium, the pictures, audio visual material or other objects of pornographic content, shall be punished by a fine or by imprisonment not exceeding three years.

Special devices, objects, computer programs or data used or adapted for the perpetration of criminal offense referred to in paragraphs 1 and 2 of this Article shall be forfeited.

<sup>77</sup>Criminal Code (NN 110/97, 27/98, 50/00, 129/00, 51/01, 111/03, 190/03, 105/04, 84/05, 71/06, 110/07, 152/08, 57/11) - Abuse of children or juveniles in pornography

Article 196

Whoever uses a child or a juvenile for the purpose of making pictures, audio visual material or other objects of a pornographic nature, or possesses, imports, sells, distributes or presents such material, or induces such persons to take part in pornographic shows shall be punished by imprisonment for one to five years.

<sup>78</sup>Criminal Code (NN 125/11), Article 163 (6)

<sup>79</sup>Lanzarote Convention – Offences concerning child pornography
Article 20

been further extended with parts from paragraph (3) in which the state is given the option to retain the right not to apply.

xii. Pursuant to paragraph (1) of the same article was made Article 163 (2)<sup>80</sup> of the new Croatian Criminal Code that criminal liability for offenses related to child pornography attributed to everyone who has any connection with child pornography, from direct producers to the end users who knowingly gain access to child pornography through information and communication technologies. The right of reservations from the Lanzarote Convention, Article 20 (4), has not been used. Opinions are divided. Liberal claims that the new Criminal Code is too hard on those who are in no way in contact with an actual child. They state that it would lead to the criminalization of a large number of people because the criteria are lower, more people will satisfy them and instead of a reduction it will come to an increase in criminal activity. After the new law, which criminalizes and only surfing through the sites that do not have to show a child but just a person who looks like a child, entry into force, the number of pedophiles that have never touched a child will suddenly increase. There is a possibility that the law will not have desired legal effect on increasing the security but it will draw attention to capturing easily available end users through their IP addresses, instead of discovering the real sex offenders and rapists who, when put photographs and

---

Each Party shall take the necessary legislative or other measures to ensure that the following intentional conduct, when committed without right, is criminalized:

- a) producing child pornography;
- b) offering or making available child pornography;
- c) distributing or transmitting child pornography;
- d) procuring child pornography for oneself or for another person;
- e) possessing child pornography;
- f) knowingly obtaining access, through information and communication technologies, to child pornography.

For the purpose of the present article, the term “child pornography” shall mean any material that visually depicts a child engaged in real or simulated sexually explicit conduct or any depiction of a child’s sexual organs for primarily sexual purposes.

Each Party may reserve the right not to apply, in whole or in part, paragraph 1.a and e to the production and possession of pornographic material:

- consisting exclusively of simulated representations or realistic images of a non-existent child;
- involving children who have reached the age set in application of Article 18, paragraph 2, where these images are produced and possessed by them with their consent and solely for their own private use.

(4) Each Party may reserve the right not to apply, in whole or in part, paragraph 1.f.

<sup>80</sup>Criminal code (NN 125/11) - Exploitation of children for pornography

Article 163

The punishment referred to paragraph (1) of this Article shall be inflicted on an unauthorized recording, products, offers, makes available, distributes, expands, imports, exports, obtains for himself or for another, sells, gives, displays or possesses child pornography or knowingly accesses through information and communication technologies.

videos on the Internet, skilfully hiding behind various proxy and are rarely discovered. They are also refer to one of the basic principles of law which says that "if the perpetrating the criminal offense has no victim, there is no crime," thus raising a question whether viewing pictures is the worst thing than sexual harassment, rape and physical abuse. Supporters of the new Criminal Code considered that the tightening of sanctions and the introduction of new offenses is necessary to decrease the crime rate. They believe that capturing the end users (those who only watch) will get to the drop in demand for the content of child pornography, and thus to a narrowing of the pornography market. The main argument is the prevention and correction of "moderate pedophiles" who buy and watch, and the ability to get through them to dealers and producers of pornographic material, and thereby break the whole chain. Thing about which everyone agrees is that the penalties for sexual abuse of children are too small in the legal and judicial practice, and is also mentioned the disproportion amount of penalties in compared to the actual gravity of the offense and harm to the victim. Also in Croatia, there is the problem of frequent determining the minimum penalty prescribed in many easier or more difficult cases.

xiii. Ministry of Internal Affairs is responsible for the control, detection and suppression of child pornography, along with the police. Unfortunately, despite many attempts, we did not get any further information from the Ministry. For protection of children from violence in general, responsible are police, courts and social welfare centres (child protection centres). Child protection in general is the responsibility of the police, courts and social welfare centres (child protection centres). They act according to the Law on Protection from Domestic Violence<sup>81</sup>, Family Law<sup>82</sup>, Criminal Law<sup>83</sup>, Criminal Procedure Code<sup>84</sup> and the Law on Juvenile Courts<sup>85</sup>. The results of an international research project BECAN<sup>86</sup> for Croatia pointed out the poor organization and functioning of the system where the common problem is losing or lack of official documents, contradictory data and the lack of relevant data. But Croatia is already working to improve the system, the National Strategy for

---

<sup>81</sup> Law on Protection from Domestic Violence (NN 137/09, 14/10, 60/10)

<sup>82</sup> Family Law (NN 116/03, 17/04, 136/04, 107/07, 57/11, 61/11)

<sup>83</sup> Criminal Law (NN 110/97, 27/98, 50/00, 129/00, 51/01, 111/03, 190/03, 105/04, 84/05, 71/06, 110/07, 152/08, 57/11), respectively from January 1, 2013 Criminal Law (NN 125/11)

<sup>84</sup> Criminal Procedure Code (NN 152/08, 76/09, 80/11, 121/11)

<sup>85</sup> Law on Juvenile Courts (NN 84/11)

<sup>86</sup> BECAN – Balkan Epidemiological Study on Child Abuse and Neglect

Protection against Domestic Violence for the period 2011 by 2016 in which is described the current situation and given the goals to be achieved by 2016.

Participation of child in pornographic performances

xiv. In the Croatian Criminal Code, which is in force until 31st December 2012, there is no article that refers to the participation of children in pornographic performances. The new Criminal Code, which will 1st January 2013 take effect, severely criminalizes procuring a child in any manner and for any purpose as well as each participation of a child in pornographic shows. According to the Article 21 of Lanzarote Convention<sup>87</sup> which refers to offenses related to the participation of children in pornographic performances, composed Article 164 of Croatian Criminal Code<sup>88</sup> entitled "Exploitation of children in pornographic performances". In the Article have been introduced all the provisions of Article 21 of the Convention and the content is additionally expanded with the provisions in paragraph (5) relating to the confiscation of all devices, tools and computer programs, and the destruction of pornographic material formed through perpetration of criminal offense. Croatia did not

---

<sup>87</sup>Lanzarote Convention – Offences concerning the participation of a child in pornographic performances
Article 21

Each Party shall take the necessary legislative or other measures to ensure that the following intentional conduct is criminalized:

a)recruiting a child into participating in pornographic performances or causing a child to participate in such performances;

b)coercing a child into participating in pornographic performances or profiting from or otherwise exploiting a child for such purposes;

c)knowingly attending pornographic performances involving the participation of children.

Each Party may reserve the right to limit the application of paragraph 1.c to cases where children have been recruited or coerced in conformity with paragraph 1.a or b.

<sup>88</sup>Criminal Code (NN 125/11) - Exploitation of children in pornographic performances

Article 164

Whoever child entices, recruits, or encouraged to participate in pornographic performances shall be punished by imprisonment from one to eight years.

Who earns from pornographic performances in which it participates child, or otherwise exploits the child in pornographic performances shall be punished by imprisonment from one to ten years.

Whoever, by force, threat, deception, fraud, abuse of power or position, or difficult position or relation of dependency, coerces or induces child to participate in pornographic performance, shall be punished by imprisonment from three to twelve years.

Imprisonment from paragraph 1 of this Article shall be inflicted who is watching pornographic show live or via communication gadget if he knew or should have known that in it participates a child.

Special devices, equipment, computer programs or data designed, adapted or used to commit or facilitate the perpetrating the criminal offense referred to in paragraphs 1, 2 and 3 of this Article shall be confiscated, and pornographic material that has emerged of the offense from paragraph 1 and 2 this article will be destroyed.

use the right of reservations from the Article 21 (2) of Lanzarote Convention, but already severely criminalizes visits to all pornographic performances in which children are involved. In the new Criminal Code, under Article 87 (7)<sup>89</sup> a child is considered a person who has not attained the age of eighteen. In the law, any contact of children with pornography has been described as a crime, so the state makes no difference between recruitment and coercion when it comes to participation of a child in pornography. General recruitment is regulated by the Labor Act that its provisions leave very little room for the minors' work. According to Article 17 (1) of the Labour Act<sup>90</sup>, persons under the age of fifteen years shall not be employed in general as well as persons over fifteen and under eighteen years old who attend compulsory primary education. Considering that the basic obligatory education is available to all Croatian citizens, and ends about the age of eighteen, the legislature has limited work of minors. There are always exceptions, so those juveniles who, for unknown reasons, do not attend school but working, protects the Article 19 (1) of the Labour Act<sup>91</sup> which prohibits the employment of minors in performing certain activities that may endanger their safety, health, morality or development.

2.4 Corruption of Children

xv. In the Republic of Croatia, in accordance with Article 160 of the Criminal Code that states that "Whoever, in the presence of a child younger than fifteen years performs sexual acts aimed at satisfying one's own lust or the lust of a third person, shall be punished by imprisonment for up to one year."<sup>92</sup>, also states that the presence of a child who is younger than fifteen years perpetrates offense from Article 152 to Article 155, under Article 158 or Article 159 hereof, shall be punished by imprisonment for up to three years. Deliberately exposing a child to witness sexual activity and sexual abuse, without necessarily participating in them, is regulated as an offense by the state.

In cases where there is no physical contact with the child but the perpetrator makes actions designed to meet his/her own or someone else's lust in front of children is regulated as a

---

<sup>89</sup>Criminal Code (NN 125/11), Article 87 (7)

<sup>90</sup>Labour Act (NN 149/09, 61/11, 82/12), Article 17 (1)

<sup>91</sup>Labour Act (NN 149/09, 61/11, 82/12), Article 19 (1)

<sup>92</sup> „Criminal Code", The Official Gazette of the Republic of Croatia "Narodne Novine" No. 125/11, Article 160, Paragraph 1, „Whoever, in the presence of a child younger than fifteen years performs sexual acts aimed at satisfying one's own lust or the lust of a third person, shall be punished by imprisonment for up to one year."

criminal offense by this article. The committing act is any act which may lead to or enhance sexual arousal or prolong the existing arousal.

With this provision, the legislator has incriminated behaviour in the sphere of sexuality where there was no physical contact between the perpetrator and the victim, but only a visual bond which cannot be classified under the term lewd act, but that, because of the sexual and corruptive influence on the victim, deserves to be classified as criminal behaviour.

Such behaviour was classified by the legislator under the concept of satisfying lust, which in this study can be linked to the notion of “causing”. Such actions in which the perpetrator is intentionally exposing a child to sexual activity or actions designed to gratify lust in front of others are the ones that are objectively designed to achieve sexual excitement of the offender or a third person and to enhance or prolong the existing arousal.

Article 158 states that whoever performs lewd acts with a minor under the age of fifteen years or makes the minor perform lewd acts with another person or on oneself, shall be punished by imprisonment for six months to five years.<sup>93</sup> Paragraph 3 of this article states that there is no criminal offense referred to in paragraph 1 and 2 if the difference in age between persons who perform sexual intercourse or an equivalent sexual or lewd act is not more than three years.<sup>94</sup>

It is not relevant whether satisfying lust is achieved by the fact that it is done in front of a child or by the action, regardless of the child's presence. The sexual sphere of a child enjoys full criminal-law protection from sexual intercourse with an equivalent sexual and lewd act, regardless of the child's consent, or even boost. Therefore, the criminal-justice protection of a child against criminal activities which satisfy lust is only a further form of protection of its sexual sphere.

There is a difference in sentencing based on whether certain sexual and lewd acts in front of a child were performed by duress, with the use of deceit, fraud or misuse of power or position, or the depending relationship of the child to the perpetrator. Thus paragraph 5 of Article 158 states that whoever commits sexual intercourse or an equivalent sexual act with a child under the age of fifteen years by duress, with the use of deceit, fraud or abuse of authority or difficult position, or the depending relationship of the child to the perpetrator, shall be punished by imprisonment for three to fifteen years.<sup>95</sup> Paragraph 6 of the same article states that anyone who performs a lewd act against a child younger than fifteen years under the conditions of existence of force, threats, deception, fraud or misuse of power or position, or a relationship of child's dependency, shall be punished by imprisonment for one to eight years.<sup>96</sup>

---

<sup>93</sup> Ibid., Article 158, Paragraph 1, „Whoever performs lewd acts with a minor under the age of fifteen years or makes the minor perform lewd acts with another person or on oneself, shall be punished by imprisonment for six months to five years.”

<sup>94</sup> Ibid., Paragraph 3, „There is no criminal offense referred to in paragraph 1 and 2 if the difference in age between persons who perform sexual intercourse or an equivalent sexual or lewd act is not more than three years”

The offender who was under the eliminable misapprehension that a child from paragraph 1 of Article 158 has a minimum of fifteen years shall be punished by imprisonment for six months to five years, and if the offender who was under the eliminable misapprehension that a child from paragraph 2 of the same article has a minimum of fifteen years shall be punished by imprisonment of up to three years.

In Croatian legislation, the term "causing" is defined as satisfying lust in front of a child or a juvenile. It differs from the criminal act of lewd behaviour precisely because of the fact that in the realization of this crime there is no contact between the bodies of the perpetrator and victim. The term "in front" suggests that they are in some sort of a contact that is not tactile, but can be visual or any other direct contact. Telephone conversation, especially a conversation in which the victim, because it is being blackmailed, cannot arbitrarily terminate that same contact, but is forced to participate in it should be regarded as direct contact.

2.5 Solicitation of Children for Sexual Purposes

xvi. Sexual gratification through the information and communication technology with intent by an adult offender is regulated by Article 161 of the Criminal Code of the Croatian criminal legislation which states that adult acting person contacts a juvenile under the age of fifteen years with the intention that they or another person commit the offense from the Article 158 of the Criminal Code, through information and communication technologies, or otherwise, suggest meeting with them or another person and then take measures for this meeting to happen, shall be punished by imprisonment not exceeding three years.<sup>97</sup> In the second paragraph of this legal article it is stated that whoever collects, provides or transmits data on a person under the age of fifteen years for an offense referred to in paragraph 1 of this article shall be punished by imprisonment not exceeding one year. An attempted criminal offense referred to in paragraph 1 of this article shall be punished.<sup>98</sup>

---

<sup>95</sup> Ibid., Paragraph 5, „Whoever commits sexual intercourse or an equivalent sexual act with a child under the age of fifteen years by duress, with the use of deceit, fraud or abuse of authority or difficult position, or the depending relationship of the child to the perpetrator, shall be punished by imprisonment for three to fifteen years.”

<sup>96</sup> Ibid., Paragraph 6, „Anyone who performs a lewd act against a child younger than fifteen years under the conditions of existence of force, threats, deception, fraud or misuse of power or position, or a relationship of child's dependency, shall be punished by imprisonment for one to eight years. ”

Our criminal code specifies that the offender should propose or initiate a meeting with a potential victim or propose a meeting between a victim and another person.

The notion of seduction or “grooming” does exist in Croatian criminal legislation and it is dealt with in Article 161 of the Criminal Code.

xvii. Aiding, facilitating and attempting criminal acts of sexual abuse, child prostitution and child pornography is regulated by the state as an offence. The characteristics of these criminal acts were effectuated by the very act of helping, facilitating and attempts.

All actions, that create either necessary or only favourable conditions for executing a criminal offense for another person, are classified under the concept of facilitating and assisting. Facilitating can also be done by omission, i.e. passivity, tolerance.

An attempt to commit these crimes is considered the first step in their implementation. An attempt is considered as such when the offender started any of the actions that will be included in such an offense.

2.6 Corporate Liability

xvii. In the Croatian legislation, the state considers the legal person liable if the offense was committed against children by private persons, i.e. employees in a legal entity (for example, institutions, companies, organizations, etc.). In such cases, civil liability is prescribed. The civil liability of both natural and legal persons is prescribed by the provisions of the Law of Obligations, which gives an opportunity to the injured party in the civil case to exercise the right to compensation for damage caused due to mental pain and injury.

---

<sup>97</sup> Ibid., Article 161, Paragraph 1, „Adult acting person contacts a juvenile under the age of fifteen years with the intention that they or another person commit the offense from the Article 158 of the Criminal Code , through information and communication technologies, or otherwise, suggest meeting with them or another person and then take measures for this meeting to happen, shall be punished by imprisonment not exceeding three years.”

<sup>98</sup> Ibid., Paragraph 2, „Whoever collects, provides or transmits data on a person under the age of fifteen years for an offense referred to in paragraph 1 of this article shall be punished by imprisonment not exceeding one year. An attempted criminal offense referred to in paragraph 1 of this article shall be punished.”

Differentiating the position of a natural person in a legal person is essential for personal or criminal liability. More severe penalties are prescribed if the offense is committed by a person close to the child, a person that has the child's trust, a person which is entrusted with the child's care and education or a person with whom a child has a relationship based on dependency. This is evident in almost all legal articles of the Criminal Code related to crimes of sexual abuse and exploitation of children. Closely, the Article 159 - Sexual abuse of a child older than 15 years – talks that whoever, with a child who is older than fifteen years and who is entrusted to him/her for education, upbringing, custody or care, performs sexual intercourse or an equivalent sexual act upon such a person, or encourages the child to perform sexual intercourse or an equivalent sexual act with another person, or to auto perform a sexual act equivalent to a sexual intercourse on himself/herself, shall be punished by imprisonment for six months to five years.<sup>99</sup> The punishment referred to in paragraph 1 of the same article shall be appointed to a blood relative or to a relative by adoption in a direct line, step-father or step-mother that performs sexual intercourse or an equivalent sexual act upon a child that is older than fifteen years, or encourages the child to perform sexual intercourse or an equivalent sexual act with another person, or encourages a child to auto perform a sexual act equivalent to a sexual intercourse on himself/herself;<sup>100</sup> Article 163 - Abuse of children or juveniles in pornography – talks about whoever recruits, encourages or induces a child to take part in the shooting of child pornography or who organizes or makes the shooting possible shall be punished by imprisonment for one to eight years. Whoever induces a child by duress, with the use of deceit, fraud or abuse of authority or difficult position, or the depending relationship of the child to the perpetrator to take part in the shooting of child pornography shall be punished by imprisonment for three to twelve years.<sup>101</sup>; Article 164 - Abuse of children or juveniles in pornographic - shows that whoever recruits, encourages or induces a child to take part in a pornographic show shall be punished by imprisonment for one to eight years. Whoever induces a child by duress, with the use of deceit, fraud or abuse of authority or difficult position, or the depending relationship of the child to the perpetrator to take part in a pornographic show shall be punished by imprisonment for three to twelve years.<sup>102</sup>

---

<sup>99</sup> Ibid., Article 159, Paragraph 1, „ whoever, with a child who is older than fifteen years and who is entrusted to him/her for education, upbringing, custody or care, performs sexual intercourse or an equivalent sexual act upon such a person, or encourages the child to perform sexual intercourse or an equivalent sexual act with another person, or to auto perform a sexual act equivalent to a sexual intercourse on himself/herself, shall be punished by imprisonment for six months to five years.”

<sup>100</sup> Ibid., Paragraph 2, „The punishment referred to in paragraph 1 of the same article shall be appointed to a blood relative or to a relative by adoption in a direct line, step-father or step-mother that performs sexual intercourse or an equivalent sexual act upon a child that is older than fifteen years, or encourages the child to perform sexual intercourse or an equivalent sexual act with another person, or encourages a child to auto perform a sexual act equivalent to a sexual intercourse on himself/herself.”

The difference in the responsibilities related to the position of individuals in the legal entity exists when it comes to criminal liability of natural persons and is irrelevant to the case concerning civil liability of legal persons.

xix. Croatian national legislation regulates civil liability for legal persons but regulates both criminal and civil liability for natural persons for crimes related to sexual violence against children.

For example, when a school compensates damages for the criminal acts of child sexual abuse by its employee, for that kind of responsibility there is no regulation that specifies that the school, as a legal person, shall be required to pay a higher or lower compensation to the injured person due to the position that the perpetrator has as an employee.

With criminal liability, the person's position or his/her relationship with a minor is important and therefore severe punishments are prescribed for teachers, educators and persons entrusted to safeguard the child, as well as child's guardian, step-father, step-mother, as people who have established particular relationship based on trust with the child.

xx. Croatian national legislation does not exclude individual liability in cases where the liability of legal persons is present. Since for the Croatian national legislation relating to sexual offenses, there is only a civil liability of legal persons, the perpetrator of such a crime is personally responsible for the commission of the offenses in both criminal justice and civil law sense. Liability of legal persons does not exclude the personal liability of the perpetrator of the criminal act of sexual misconduct neither in accordance with the criminal nor the civil law regulations by the Croatian Criminal Code and the Law on Obligations.

---

<sup>101</sup> Ibid., Article 163, Paragraph 3, „Whoever recruits, encourages or induces a child to take part in the shooting of child pornography or who organizes or makes the shooting possible shall be punished by imprisonment for one to eight years. Whoever induces a child by duress, with the use of deceit, fraud or abuse of authority or difficult position, or the depending relationship of the child to the perpetrator to take part in the shooting of child pornography shall be punished by imprisonment for three to twelve years.

<sup>102</sup> Ibid., Article 164, Paragraph 3, „Whoever recruits, encourages or induces a child to take part in a pornographic show shall be punished by imprisonment for one to eight years. Whoever induces a child by duress, with the use of deceit, fraud or abuse of authority or difficult position, or the depending relationship of the child to the perpetrator to take part in a pornographic show shall be punished by imprisonment for three to twelve years.

2.7 Aggravating Circumstances

xxi. The Croatian Criminal Code does not define specifically extenuating and aggravating circumstances. There is a general rule about choosing the type and measures of punishment in Article 56 (2)<sup>103</sup> of the current Criminal Code which enumerates the circumstances relevant to sentencing. All stated circumstances may be extenuating or aggravating, depending on whether they are in favour of the claimant or the defendant. They affect whether the punishment will be higher or lower, but always within the limits prescribed by the law. The court, based on the existence of certain circumstances, assesses their significance for meting out penalties in a specific case. In the new Criminal Code content of the Article 56(2) is given in the shorter version in Article 47<sup>104</sup>. But in part of the criminal law that relates to offenses of sexual abuse of a child, the novelty is an Article 166 which prescribes penalties for severe forms of abuse and exploitation of children. The article quotes the offenses from previously stated articles with certain circumstances of the offense and consequences arising from the criminal offense. The content of this article refers to the

---

<sup>103</sup> Criminal code (NN 110/97, 27/98, 50/00, 129/00, 51/01, 111/03, 190/03, 105/04, 84/05, 71/06, 110/07, 152/08, 57/11)- A General Rule on the Selection of the Type and Range of Punishment
Article 56

Determining the type and range of penalties that will apply, the court shall take into consideration all the circumstances that affect the sentence by type and a less or more difficult for the offender (mitigating and aggravating circumstances), especially this: the degree of guilt, motives which the offense was committed, the degree of danger or injury offense protected object, the circumstances in which the offense was committed, the circumstances in which the offender lived prior to committing the crime and compliance with the laws of his or her conduct, the circumstances in which he lives and his conduct after the commission of a criminal works, especially the relationship between the injured and compensation for damage, the totality of the social and personal causes that contributed to the commission of the offense.

<sup>104</sup>Criminal code (NN 125/11) - Meting of punishments
Article 47

In selecting the type and length of sentence, the court shall, on the basis of the degree of guilt and sentencing purposes, to evaluate all the circumstances that affect the sentence by type and a less or more severe (mitigating and aggravating circumstances), and in particular the degree of danger or injury to the protected object, the motives for the crime was committed, the degree of injury offenders duties, the manner of committing and wrongful effects of the offense, perpetrator former life, his personal and financial circumstances and his conduct after the commission of the offense, the relationship between the victim and the effort to compensate for the damage.

Elevation of penalties must not exceed the degree of guilt.

crimes of sexual abuse of a child younger than fifteen years (Art. 158)<sup>105</sup>, the procuring a child (Art. 162)<sup>106</sup>, the exploitation of children for pornography (Art. 163)<sup>107</sup>, and the use of children in pornographic performances (Art. 164)<sup>108</sup>. Listed acts are difficult by itself, but according to the Article 166<sup>109</sup> they receive additional weight if the child suffered serious

<sup>105</sup> Criminal Code (NN 125/11) - Sexual abuse of a child younger than fifteen years

Article 158

Whoever performs sexual intercourse or an equated sexual act with a child under the age of fifteen years, or states him that performs sexual intercourse or an equivalent sexual act with a third person or against oneself out of the sexual intercourse equated sexual act, shall be punished by imprisonment for one to ten years.

Whoever over child younger than fifteen years perform a lewd act, or states him that perform lewd act with another person or against oneself perform a lewd act, shall be punished by imprisonment from six months to five years.

Whoever performs sexual intercourse or an equated sexual act with a child under the age of fifteen years with the use of force or threats, deceit, fraud or misuse of power or position, or severe dependency of the child's relationship to him, shall be punished by imprisonment from three to fifteen years.

<sup>106</sup> Criminal Code (NN 125/11) - Procuring of a child

Article 162

Whoever, for profit or other benefits lures a child, recruits, encouraged to provide sexual services, or organizes or enables providing sexual services with a child, and he knew or should have known that it is a child, shall be punished by imprisonment from one to ten years.

Whoever uses sexual services of a child who reached the age of fifteen with giving any kind of compensation, and he knew or should have known that it is a child, shall be punished by imprisonment from of six months to five years.

Whoever, the person for who knew or should have known that it is a child, for profit by force, threat, deception, fraud, abuse of power or position or a dependency relation, coerces or induces to offer sexual services, or who uses sexual services of that child with payment, and he knew or should have known for these circumstances, shall be punished by imprisonment of three to fifteen years.

<sup>107</sup> Criminal Code (NN 125/11) - Exploitation of children for pornography

Article 163

Whoever lures a child, recruits, encouraged participating in the making of child pornography or who organizes or enables its recording shall be punished by imprisonment from one to eight years.

The punishment referred to paragraph 1 of this Article shall be punished who an unauthorized records, products, offers, makes available, distributes, expand, imports, exports, obtains for himself or for another, sells, gives, display or possess child pornography or knowingly access to it through information and communication technologies.

Whoever a child by force, threat, deception, fraud, abuse of authority or difficult position or, coerces or induces to record of child pornography, shall be punished by imprisonment from three to twelve years.

<sup>108</sup> Criminal Code (NN 125/11) - Exploitation of children in pornographic performances

Article 164

Whoever a child lures, recruits, encourage to participate in pornographic performances shall be punished by imprisonment from one to eight years.

Who earns from pornographic performances in which participates a child, or otherwise exploits the child in pornographic performances, shall be punished by imprisonment from one to ten years.

<sup>109</sup> Criminal Code (NN 125/11) - Serious crimes of sexual abuse and exploitation of children

Article 166

If the offense referred to in Article 158 Paragraph 1, Article 162 paragraph 1 and 2, Article 163 paragraph 1 and 2 and Article 164 paragraph 1 of this Act, the child suffered serious bodily injury or is compromised his physical or emotional development or the child is left pregnant, if the crime involved more than one offender or the offense is committed against particularly vulnerable child or is committed by a family member or a person with whom the child lives in the same household, or is committed in an especially cruel or degrading manner, shall be punished by imprisonment from three to fifteen years.

If the offense referred to in Article 158(5), Article 162(3), Article 163 (3), Article 164 (2) of this Act the child bodily injury or is compromised his physical or emotional development or the child is left pregnant, if the crime involved more than one offender or the offense is committed against particularly vulnerable child, if committed by a family member or a person with whom the child lives in the same household, or was committed in an especially cruel or degrading manner, especially if the offense caused the death of a child.

2.8 Sanctions and Measures

xxii. The above mentioned crimes are sanctioned in the Chapter 17 „Criminal offenses against sexual abuse and exploitation of a child“ and Chapter 9, „Criminal offenses against humanity and human dignity“ of Croatian Criminal Code. Penalty includes deprivation of liberty for all of them.

Sexual abuse is sanctioned in Article 158 – Sexual abuse of a child younger than 15 years, Article 159– Sexual abuse of a child older than 15 years and Article 166 - Serious offences against sexual abuse and exploitation of a child.

Article 158 talks about Sexual abuse of a child younger than 15 years and states that whoever performs sexual intercourse or an equivalent sexual act on a child younger than 15 years, or forces a child to perform sexual intercourse or an equivalent sexual act with a third person or an equivalent sexual act on itself shall be punished by imprisonment for one to ten years. If the offender was in avoidable mistake that the child has at least fifteen years shall be punished by imprisonment for six months to five years.

Whoever performs lewd acts on a child younger than 15 years or makes a child to perform lewd act with another person or on itself shall be punished by imprisonment for six months to five years<sup>110</sup>. If the offender was in avoidable mistake that the child has at least fifteen years shall be punished by imprisonment for maximum three years.

---

suffered serious bodily injury or is compromised his physical or emotional development or the child is left pregnant, if the crime involved more than one offender or the offense is committed against particularly vulnerable child or is committed by a family member or a person with whom the child lives in the same household, or is committed in an especially cruel or degrading manner, shall be punished by imprisonment for at least five years.

If the offense referred to in Article 158, Article 162, Article 163 or Article 164 this Act, caused the death of the child, the offender shall be punished by imprisonment not less than ten years or long term imprisonment.

<sup>110</sup>“Criminal Code“, The Official Gazette of the Republic of Croatia “Narodnenovine” No. 125/11, Article 158, Paragraph 2, “Whoever performs lewd acts on a child younger than 15 years or makes a child to perform lewd act with another person or on itself shall be punished by imprisonment for six months to five years”.

If the age difference between persons performing sexual or an equivalent act from the paragraphs 1 and 2 is not bigger than three years, there is no criminal offense.

Whoever performs sexual intercourse or an equivalent sexual act on a child younger than 15 years by using force or threat, deceit, fraud or abuse of position, difficult position or relationship of child's dependence, shall be punished by imprisonment for three to fifteen years<sup>111</sup>. If under the same conditions a lewd act has been performed on a child younger than fifteen years, the perpetrator shall be punished by imprisonment for one to eight years.

Article 159 talks about Sexual abuse of a child older than 15 years and states that whoever on a child older than 15 years who is entrusted to him/her for upbringing, education, custody or care, performs sexual intercourse or an equivalent sexual act, or makes the child to perform the sexual intercourse or an equivalent sexual act with another person, or performs an equivalent sexual act on itself, shall be punished by imprisonment for six months to five years<sup>112</sup>. The same punishment shall be applied against the blood relative, adoptive relative in straight line, step-father or step-mother with, who a child who is older than fifteen years, performs sexual intercourse or an equivalent sexual act, or makes the child perform the sexual intercourse or an equivalent sexual act with another person, or performs an equivalent sexual act on itself.

Article 166 talks about serious offences against sexual abuse and exploitation of a child. If the offenses from Article 158 Paragraph 1, Article 162 Paragraph 1 and 2, Article 163 Paragraph 1 and 2, Article 164 Paragraph 1 cause serious body injuries or impair its physical and emotional development, or the child becomes impregnated, if a number of perpetrators participated, if it is perpetrated on a vulnerable child or it is perpetrated by a family member or a person who lives in the same household with a child, or is performed in a particularly <sup>111</sup>Ibid, Article 158, Paragraph 5, „Whoever performs sexual intercourse or an equivalent sexual act on a child younger than 15 years by using force or threat, deceit, fraud or abuse of position, difficult position or relationship of child's dependence, shall be punished by imprisonment for three to fifteen years“.

---

<sup>112</sup>Ibid, Article 159, Paragraph 1, „Whoever on a child older than 15 years who is entrusted to him/her for upbringing, education, custody or care, performs sexual intercourse or an equivalent sexual act, or makes the child to perform the sexual intercourse or an equivalent sexual act with another person, or performs an equivalent sexual act on itself, shall be punished by imprisonment for six months to five years . The same punishment shall be applied against the blood relative, adoptive relative in straight line, step-father or step-mother with, who a child who is older than fifteen years, performs sexual intercourse or an equivalent sexual act, or makes the child perform the sexual intercourse or an equivalent sexual act with another person, or performs an equivalent sexual act on itself.“.

cruel or humiliating way, the perpetrator shall be punished by imprisonment for three to fifteen years.

If the offenses from Article 158 Paragraph 5, Article 162 Paragraph 3, Article 163 Paragraph 3, Article 164 Paragraph 2 cause serious body injuries or impair its physical and emotional development, or the child becomes impregnated, if a number of perpetrators participated, if it is performed on a vulnerable child or it is performed by a family member or a person who lives in the same household with a child, or is performed in a particularly cruel or humiliating way, the perpetrator shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than five years.

If the offenses from the Articles 158, 162, 163 and 164 cause the death of the child, offender shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than ten years of long term imprisonment.

Child prostitution is sanctioned in the Article 162as Pandering which states that whoever for profit or other benefit lures, recruits or encourages a child to offer sexual services, or organizes or enables sexual service with a child, and knew or was supposed to know that the person is a child, shall be punished by imprisonment for one to ten years. Whoever uses sexual services from a child older than fifteen years by giving any kind of reimbursement or performance, and knew or was supposed to know that the person is a child, shall be punished by imprisonment for six months to five years.

Whoever knew or was supposed to know that the person in a child, for profit by force or threat, or by deceit, fraud or abuse of position, difficult position or relationship of child's dependence, forces or makes a child to offer sexual services, or uses sexual services from that child for compensation, and knew or was supposed to know the mentioned circumstances, shall be punished by imprisonment for three to fifteen years<sup>113</sup>. Whoever advertises exploitation of sexual services of a child, shall be punished by imprisonment for six months to five years.

Child pornography is sanctioned Article 163 - Exploitation of children for prostitution, Article 164 - Exploitation of children for pornographic plays and Article 165 - Introducing pornography to children. Article 163 talks about Exploitation of children for prostitution and states that whoever lures, recruits or encourages a child on participating in filming child pornography, or whoever organizes or enables its filming, shall be punished by imprisonment for one to eight years<sup>114</sup>.

---

<sup>113</sup>Ibid, Article 162, Paragraph 3, „Whoever knew or was supposed to know that the person in a child, for profit by force or threat, or by deceit, fraud or abuse of position, difficult position or relationship of child's dependence, forces or makes a child to offer sexual services, or uses sexual services from that child for compensation, and knew or was supposed to know the mentioned circumstances, shall be punished by imprisonment for three to fifteen years“

The same punishment shall be applied towards the offender who unauthorized films, produces, offers, makes available, distributes, spreads, imports, exports, purchases for itself or another one, sells, gives, presents or possesses child pornography or consciously accesses it through communication technologies. Whoever by use of threat or force, or by deceit, fraud or abuse of position, difficult position or relationship of child's dependence, forces a child on filming child pornography, shall be punished by imprisonment for three to twelve years. A child shall not be punished for production and possession of pornographic material which shows him/herself alone or with another child, if they have produced and possessed that material with the consent from each of them and only for their personal use<sup>115</sup>.

Paragraph 6 of that article defines Child pornography as material which visually or in other way shows a real child or realistically showed non existing child or a person that looks like a child, u a real or simulated sexually explicit behaviour or which shows genitals of children in sexual purpose. Materials that have artistic, medical, scientific, informative or similar significance shall not be considered pornography.

Article 164 talks about exploitation of children for pornographic shows and states that whoever lures, recruits or encourages a child on participating in pornographic shows, shall be punished by imprisonment for one to eight years<sup>116</sup>. The same punishment shall be applied to perpetrator who watches pornographic shows in live or through communication devices, or who knew, had to know and could know that a child is participating in it.

Whoever benefits from pornographic shows in which a child in taking part, or in other way exploits the child for pornographic shows, shall be punished by imprisonment for one to ten years.

---

<sup>114</sup>Ibid, Article 163, Paragraph 1, „Whoever lures, recruits or encourages a child on participating in filming child pornography, or whoever organizes or enables its filming, shall be punished by imprisonment for one to eight years“.

<sup>115</sup>Ibid, Article 163, Paragraph 5, „A child shall not be punished for production and possession of pornographic material which shows him/herself alone or with another child, if they have produced and possessed that material with the consent from each of them and only for their personal use“.

<sup>116</sup>Ibid, Article 164, Paragraph 1, „Whoever lures, recruits or encourages a child on participating in pornographic plays, shall be punished by imprisonment for one to eight years“.

Whoever by use of threat or force, or by deceit, fraud or abuse of position, difficult position or relationship of child's dependence, forces or makes a child to take a part in the pornographic show, shall be punished by imprisonment for three to twelve years.

Sexual abuse, prostitution and pornography are also included in the Chapter 9 – „Criminal offenses against humanity and human dignity“ and are sanctioned in Article 106 as Human Trafficking. Whoever recruits, transports, transfers, hides or hands over a child, or exchanges or transfers the supervision of a child for exploitation of its work through forced labour or servitude, established slavery or a similar relationship, exploitation for prostitution or other forms of sexual exploitation including pornography, or for concluding illegal or forced marriage or illegal adoption, or illegal transplantation of parts of a human body, or for exploitation in armed conflicts, shall be punished by imprisonment for one to ten years.

Whoever by force or threat, or by deceit, fraud, kidnap or abuse of position, difficult position or relationship of child's dependence, by giving or receiving financial compensation or other benefit for receiving a consent of a person who has supervision over other person, or in other way recruits, transports, transfers, hides or hands over a child, or exchanges or transfers supervision of a child for exploitation of its work through forced labour or servitude, established slavery or a similar relationship, exploitation for prostitution or other forms of sexual exploitation including pornography, or for concluding illegal or forced marriage or illegal adoption, or illegal transplantation of parts of a human body, or for exploitation in armed conflicts, shall be punished by imprisonment for three to ten fifteen.

The same punishment shall be applied if the criminal offense from the paragraphs 1 and 2 was performed by official person while performing her /his duties, or if it is committed against a larger number of persons or has intentionally put in danger life of one or more persons.

Whoever, knowing the fact that the person is victim of human trafficking, uses its services which are result of one of the forms of its exploitation states in paragraphs 1 and 2, shall be punished by imprisonment from one to ten years.

Corruption of children is sanctioned in the Article 165 - Introducing pornography to children, Articles 160 - Satisfaction of lust in front of a child younger than 15 years, and in Article 61- Luring of children for satisfaction of sexual needs.

Article 165 states that whoever sells, gives, shows or publicly exhibits through a computer system, network od a media for storing computer data or in other way makes accessible documents, photographs, audio-visual content or other objects of pornographic content or shows a pornographic show to a child younger than fifteen years, shall be punished by imprisonment for not more than three years.

Article 160 states that whoever, in the presence of a child younger than fifteen years, performs acts with the aim to satisfy his/her own lust or the lust of a third person, shall be punished by imprisonment for not more than one year.

Whoever, in the presence of a child younger than fifteen years, performs criminal offense of sexual intercourse without consent, rape, serious criminal offense against sexual freedom, lewd acts or sexual exploitation of a child, shall be punished by imprisonment for not more than three years. The attempts shall also be punished.

Solicitation of Children for Sexual Purposes is sanctioned in the Article 161 which states that an adult who, to a person younger than fifteen years, with an intent that he/she or another person perpetrates a crime from the Article 158 of this Code over the person younger than fifteen years, through information communication technology or in other way suggests a meeting with him/her or with another person, and which takes measures that the meeting happens, shall be punished by the imprisonment for maximum three years. Whoever collects, gives or transfers information about the person younger than fifteen years with the aim of committing the crime from the paragraph 1 of this article, shall be punished by the imprisonment for maximum one year<sup>117</sup>.

Regarding extradition, the „Act on mutual legal assistance in criminal matters“ in Article 32 states that a Croatian national may not be extradited for criminal prosecution or enforcement of a prison sentence in a foreign state, nor he may be transferred as a convicted person from the Republic of Croatia to another state for the purpose of serving the prison sentence.

Article 33 states that a foreigner may be extradited to another state for the purpose of criminal prosecution or enforcement of a sanction implying deprivation of liberty, if that state requested extradition or has taken over criminal prosecution or enforcement of a criminal verdict, upon request of the Republic of Croatia, i.e. with its consent.

---

<sup>117</sup>Ibid, Article 161, Paragraph 2, „Whoever collects, gives or transfers information about the person younger than fifteen years with the aim of committing the crime from the paragraph 1 of this article, shall be punished by the imprisonment for maximum one year“.

Article 34 states that a foreigner who has been prosecuted or convicted based on a decision of a foreign judicial authority of the requesting state, for criminal offences punishable pursuant to the law of that state, shall be extradited to that state, for the purpose of carrying out the criminal proceedings, i.e. enforcement of sanctions which include deprivation of liberty, provided that the domestic law incorporates corresponding essential features of the relevant offences.

Extradition for the purpose of carrying out criminal proceedings may only be granted for offences that are punishable pursuant to the domestic law by prison or security measure implying deprivation of liberty for the longest period of at least one year or by application of a more severe penalty<sup>118</sup>.

Extradition for the purpose of enforcement of sanctions including deprivation of liberty may be granted when, in cases of offences referred to in paragraph 1 of this Article, a final verdict has been issued for the prison sentence or security measure implying detention, determined for a period of at least four months<sup>119</sup>.

As an exception, if the request for extradition covers several separate criminal offences out of which some fail to satisfy the conditions referred to in paragraphs 1 and 2 of this Article in respect of the duration of the penalty that may be determined or if the offences concern only pecuniary fine, the extradition may also be granted for these offences. Extradition shall be allowed if the requesting state guarantees that it would grant the request of the Republic of Croatia of the same kind<sup>120</sup>.

xxiii. I consider the sanctions effective, proportionate and dissuasive. Compared to German law, our sanctions are similar, in some cases even stricter. The new Criminal Code includes also measures against solicitation of children for sexual purposes, what wasn't sanctioned in the old Criminal Code. The new Criminal Code has introduced a whole new chapter dedicated only to criminal offenses against sexual abuse and exploitation of a child, which I consider very effective. It seems that the legislators have understood how vulnerable the children are, especially in the virtual world, where is pretty hard to control the offenses.

<sup>118</sup> „Act on mutual legal assistance in criminal matters“, The Official Gazette of the Republic of Croatia “Narodnenovine” No. 178/04, Article 34, Paragraph 2, „Extradition for the purpose of carrying out criminal proceedings may only be granted for offences that are punishable pursuant to the domestic law by prison or security measure implying deprivation of liberty for the longest period of at least one year or by application of a more severe penalty“

<sup>119</sup> Ibid., Article 34, Paragraph 3, „Extradition for the purpose of enforcement of sanctions including deprivation of liberty may be granted when, in cases of offences referred to in paragraph 1 of this Article, a final verdict has been issued for the prison sentence or security measure implying detention, determined for a period of at least four months“

<sup>120</sup> Ibid., Article 34, Paragraph 4, „Extradition for the purpose of enforcement of sanctions including deprivation of liberty may be granted when, in cases of offences referred to in paragraph 1 of this Article, a final verdict has been issued for the prison sentence or security measure implying detention, determined for a period of at least four months“

In Croatia there is no special fund for the victims of sexual violence, but some initiatives have been made towards introducing a protocol about acting in cases of sexual violence. In that way a standardized procedure would be announced towards children victims of sexual violence, similar to the protocol made for the victims of violence in the family.

xxiv. The „Act on responsibility of legal persons for the criminal offences „prescribes prerequisites of punishment. Article 3 of that act prescribes the foundation of responsibility of legal persons and states that the legal person shall be punished for a criminal offence of a responsible person if such offence violates any of the duties of the legal person or if the legal person has derived or should have derived illegal gain for itself or third person. The responsible person within the meaning of this Act is a natural person in charge of the operations of the legal person or entrusted with the tasks from the scope of operation of the legal person. Responsibility of legal person is based on the guilt of the responsible person<sup>121</sup>.

Article 8 prescribes types of punitive measures and states that for their criminal offences, legal persons may be imposed penalties, and pronounced suspended sentences and security measures. For their criminal offences, legal persons may be punished with fines or termination of the legal person.

If the criminal offence is punishable by imprisonment for a term of up to one year, the legal person may be punished by a fine of 5.000,00 to 5.000.000,00kuna. If the criminal offence is punishable by imprisonment for a term of up to 5 years, legal person may be punished by a fine of 10.000,00 to 6.000.000,00kuna. If the criminal offence is punishable by imprisonment for term of up to 10 years, legal person may be punished by a fine of 15.000,00 to 7.000.000,00kuna. If the criminal offence is punishable by imprisonment for a term of up to 15 years or by long-term imprisonment, the legal person may be punished by a fine of <sup>121</sup> „Act on the responsibility of legal persons for the criminal offences“, The Official Gazette of the Republic of Croatia “Narodnenovine” No. 151/03, 110/07 and 45/11, Article 4, „The legal person shall be punished for a criminal offence of a responsible person if such offence violates any of the duties of the legal person or if the legal person has derived or should have derived illegal gain for itself or third person.

---

Under the conditions referred to in paragraph 1 of this Article the legal person shall be punished for the criminal offences prescribed by the Criminal Code and other laws prescribing the criminal offences.“

20.000,00 to 8.000.000,00kuna<sup>122</sup>. Instead of a fine the court may pronounce a suspended sentence on the legal person and simultaneously determine that the fine shall not be collected if the legal person does not commit another criminal offence within the time specified by the court, which may not be shorter than one or longer than three years. Suspended sentence may be pronounced for criminal offences punishable by imprisonment for a term of up to three years, and the court has imposed a fine on the legal entity in the amount of up to 50.000,00 kuna.

The legal person may be terminated if it has been established for the purpose of committing criminal offences or if the same has used its activities primarily to commit criminal offences. There is also a possibility for security measures to be imposed, such as : ban on performance of certain activities or transactions, ban on obtaining of licenses, authorizations, concessions or subventions, ban on transaction with beneficiaries of the national or local budgets, and confiscation.

According to the research of Croatian Bureau of statistics, in the period from 2005 to 2009, criminal offenses against sexual freedom and sexual morality created only less than 10 % of the total lawsuits and condemnations for responsibility of legal persons for the criminal offences<sup>123</sup>.

xxv. Regarding the crimes related to child pornography, the special objects, resources, computer programs or data meant, adapted and used for the perpetration of the criminal offense and to make it easier to perpetrate it shall be forfeited and the objects that are the result of the perpetration of the criminal offense shall be forfeited and destroyed. The Article 79 states generally that the security measure of forfeiture may be ordered with regard to an object which was designed for, or used in, the perpetration of a criminal offense, or came into being by the perpetration of a criminal offense, when there is a danger that the person may be punished by a fine of 5.000,00 to 5.000.000,00 kuna.

---

<sup>122</sup> Ibid., Article 10, „If the criminal offence is punishable by imprisonment for a term of up to one year, the legal

If the criminal offence is punishable by imprisonment for a term of up to 5 years, legal person may be punished by a fine of 10.000,00 to 6.000.000,00kuna.

If the criminal offence is punishable by imprisonment for term of up to 10 years, legal person may be punished by a fine of 15.000,00 to 7.000.000,00kuna.

If the criminal offence is punishable by imprisonment for a term of up to 15 years or by long-term imprisonment, the legal person may be punished by a fine of 20.000,00 to 8.000.000,00“ kuna.

<sup>123</sup>Croatian Bureau of statistics, „Analysis of Responsibility of legal persons for the criminal offences 2005. – 2009.“, Zagerb, 2010.

object will be used again for the perpetration of a criminal offense or when the purpose of protecting the public safety, public policy or moral reasons.

The state doesn't mention protection of bona fides third parties. However, Articles 30 – 32 talk about mistake of law and mistake of fact, and in certain cases protect the perpetrator.

Article 30 states a perpetrator does not act intentionally if at the time of the perpetration of a criminal offense he is not aware of one of its material elements. If that mistake was avoidable, perpetrator shall be punished according to rules of negligence, if the Code prescribes punishment for such an offense also when committed by negligence.

Article 31 states that the perpetrator shall not be punished for intent if at the time of the perpetration of a criminal offense he mistakenly assumed that the circumstances existed, which, had they actually existed, would have rendered his conduct lawful. If that mistake was avoidable, perpetrator shall be punished according to rules of negligence, if the Code prescribes punishment for such an offense also when committed by negligence.

Article 32 states that the perpetrator who, at the time of committing the criminal offense, doesn't know and was not required to know that the offense is prohibited, shall not be culpable. If that mistake is avoidable, the punishment may be mitigated.

For now there isn't any special fund for financing prevention or intervention programmes, apart from the ones conducted by NGO-s.

xxvi. There are two Articles that sanction the crimes committed within the family or within the close environment of the child, and those are previously quoted articles 159 and 166. The state steps in when parents do not follow the rules and regulations of the Family Act, i.e. when they do not exercise their rights and fulfil their responsibilities towards children. The benefits and interests of the child in such cases are being protected by the social welfare centre and the court in an extra-contentious procedure. Only rarely children themselves can identify that their rights are being infringed. And the situations when the children themselves notify the state institutions about it are even rarer. Having this in mind, the Family Act stipulates that “every person is obliged to notify a social welfare centre about infringement of the child's rights, especially about all forms of physical or mental violence, sexual abuse, neglect or negligence, abuse or exploitation of the child."<sup>124</sup>

Immediately upon receiving such information, a social welfare centre is obliged to examine the case and take measures for the protection of the child's rights. In some cases the social welfare centre shall implement some of the preventive measures towards parents for the protection of the child's rights; and sometimes, when the situation demands, it shall notify the court about the infringement of the child's rights. The court shall then decide in extra-contentious procedure whether to impose more repressive measures upon the parents. The implementation of some of these measures shall include the cooperation with the police authorities, state attorney or ombudsperson for children.

Most of the measures for the protection of the child's benefits and interests are of personal nature; since the children are dependent on their parents, and being one of the most vulnerable groups in society. Some of personal measures are: a warning to the parents of the errors and omissions related to the care and raising of the child, supervision over the exercise of parental care and revocation of the right of the parent to live with the child and raise it. In addition, there are measures for the purpose of protecting property interests of the child; such as a request from the parents to render accounts for managing the child's property and the incomes of the child.

Less rigorous measures are of preventive character and implemented by the social welfare centre, in cases when parent does not significantly neglect the child's upbringing, raising and education. If, however, a parent abuses or gravely infringes parental responsibilities and duties more rigorous measures shall be applied, by the court in an extra-contentious procedure.<sup>125</sup>

---

<sup>124</sup> Family Act, Official Gazette 116/2003, Zagreb, article 108(1) Every person is obliged to notify a social welfare centre about infringement of the child's rights, especially about all forms of physical or mental violence, sexual abuse, neglect or negligence, abuse or exploitation of the child. (2) After the reception of the notification, the social welfare centre has to examine the case and undertake measures for the protection of child's rights. (3) If the social welfare centre has received this notification from the other authority or institution, it is obliged to inform that authority or institution about the undertaken measures. (4) The court where the misdemeanour or criminal proceedings against the violation of child's right is held, has to inform the social welfare centre and the court (which is competent of pronouncing measures for protection child's rights) about instituting proceeding.

<sup>125</sup> Alinčić, M.; Hrabar, D.; Jakovac-Lozić, D.; Korać Graovac, A.: Family Law, Official Gazette, Zagreb, 2007, p. 282-285.

However, among the other institutes, it is also important to emphasize the role of the ombudsman for children, who was introduced by the Law on the Ombudsman for children in 2003. The main goal of his work is protection and promotion of children's rights according to the Croatian regulations and international Treaties, but he is also entitled to warn the public about their violation and therefore undertake required measures.<sup>126</sup> The State also protects children's rights by appointing children's parents as a «guarantors». The «guarantor», in this case, is a person who guarantees that children's rights will not be violated, and that the harmful consequence will never happen. Otherwise, they will suffer more severe punishment.

3 CRIMINAL PROCEDURE

3.1 Investigation

i. “The best interest of the child” is a criterion for treating a child and making decisions regarding him/her established by the Convention on the Rights of the Child. Following the Convention, the best interest of the child should be a priority regardless of actions being taken by public or private institutions of social care, courts, administration or juridical bodies.<sup>127</sup>

The Criminal Procedure Act in Article 43 stipulates that the victim of crime has right to psychological and other specific assistance and support of the body, organization or institution providing help to victims of crime according to the law, right to participate in the criminal procedure as a damaged party and other rights established by law. Besides that, the victim - child or minor - has right to get an attorney who will be paid by state budget, right for his/her personal data to be kept secret and right for public to be excluded from the process. The court, state attorney, investigator and the police should treat the child or younger minor, the victim of crime, very tactfully bearing in mind his/her age, personality and other circumstances to avoid harmful consequences for child's or younger minor's education and development.<sup>128</sup>

---

<sup>126</sup> Alinčić, M.; Hrabar, D.; Jakovac-Lozić, D.; Korać Graovac, A.: Family Law, Official Gazette, Zagreb, 2007, p. 258.

<sup>127</sup> Alinčić, M.; Hrabar, D.; Jakovac-Lozić, D.; Korać Graovac, A.: Family Law, Narodne novine, Zagreb, 2007.

<sup>128</sup> The Criminal Procedure Act, Narodne novine 121/11, Zagreb, art 43.

Juvenile Courts Act stipulates that the president of the Court, if he finds it necessary, decides on assigning the attorney to the damaged party or to the damaged party in the capacity of accuser to protect his/her legal interest. That decision is to be made upon suggestion of the investigation judge, namely judge for young people.<sup>129</sup>

Minor cannot be questioned in the capacity of witness if he/she is not, due to his/her age and psychological development, capable of understanding the very meaning of the right not to witness, but information given by him/her through experts, relatives and other persons in contact with him/her can be used as evidence. Questioning of minor, especially if he/she is a damaged party, will be carried out with tact not to harm him/her psychologically.

During investigation questioning is in principle done by video-link. Questions put by judge, state attorney or defense attorney are presented to the child, in an understandable way, by expert court collaborator who has previously prepared the child for questioning. During that kind of questioning the child is to be placed in separate room designed appropriately for children.

If the witness is a child who is at the same time damaged party, the questioning is to be done with assistance of a psychologist, pedagogue or similar expert. Investigative judge will order the questioning to be video and audio taped. It will be done in a room without presence of judge and other parties. They can put questions through investigative judge and psychologist, pedagogue or other expert.

If a child or younger minor damaged by one or more following crimes (first degree murder, infanticide, participation in suicide, illegal freedom deprivation, kidnapping, abuse of public duty or force, domestic violence, rape, sex with disabled person, forced sex, sex as result of position abuse, sex with child, acts of indecency, satisfying lust in front of a child or a minor, soliciting, using children or minors for pornography, introducing pornography to children, incest, violation of duty to support, taking off child or a minor, change of family situation, extramarital life with a minor, preventing or not executing decisions for child or minor protection, trafficking and slavery, international prostitution) is questioned in the capacity of the witness, questioning can take two sessions at the most and is done with assistance of psychologist, pedagogue or other expert.

---

<sup>129</sup> Juvenile Courts Act, Narodne novine 84/11, Zagreb

Children and younger minors in a capacity of damaged party can be questioned in their own premises or some other venue they stay in or in a centre for social care instead in the Court. When child or younger minor has been questioned in previously described way, his/her statement will be read or reproduced at the trial.

Data collected by audio-visual devices will be destroyed after 5 years starting from the date of final judgment.

Furthermore, if a minor is questioned in the capacity of witness, the court chamber may order for him/her to be questioned outside the hearing by its president or a judge, member of the court chamber. It can also be decided to do it by the local investigating judge regarding the region the witness or the expert is from.

Limited number of interrogation of a child is legally stipulated only regarding court procedure – it understands two interrogations for a child or younger minor at the most. But in reality it does not mean that a child will be interrogated about the crime actually just two times, as we know that the court procedure is preceded, as already mentioned, by police investigation.

Data about minor participating in the court procedure is considered a secret and everybody or person knowing these data are to keep them confidential.

Any time, from the very beginning to its closure, the court chamber may exclude the public entirely or just for one part of the hearing according to its own decision or according to suggestion of the parties participating the court procedure due to protection and well-being of the minor. If a minor is present at the hearing in the capacity of witness or a damaged party, he/she will be asked to leave the courtroom as soon as his/her presence is no longer necessary.<sup>130</sup>

---

<sup>130</sup> <http://www.antikorupcija.hr/Default.aspx?sec=438>

ii. Special police officers for young people are officers trained to work with children and younger minors regardless of them being perpetrators or victims of crimes against them. These officers have affinity to work with that group of young people, they are highly educated, mostly with degree in social sciences; criminologists, social pedagogues, pedagogues, psychologists, social workers, jurists etc, all of them with special training for working with minors. The training lasts 6 weeks and is focused, among other things, on methods and techniques of questioning children – perpetrators of crime. These officers are authorized to conduct first informative interviews with children and minors.<sup>131</sup>

In certain specifically listed offenses some of which are related to children special police actions are prescribed by Article 332 of the Criminal Procedure Act. These actions may be taken by the police and confidants who are temporarily restricted of individual constitutional citizen rights. Actions are as follows:

- a) surveillance and technical recording of telephone conversations and other communications from distance,
- b) intercepting, collecting and recording computer data,
- c) entering the premises for the purpose of conducting surveillance and technical recording of premises,
- d) secret surveillance and technical recording of individuals and objects,
- e) using undercover agents and informants,
- f) simulating sale and purchase of objects as well as simulating giving and taking bribe,
- g) providing simulated business services and concluding simulated legal affairs,
- h) supervised transport and delivery of objects of criminal offense.

Specific evidence listed in Article 332 of the Criminal Procedure Act may be stipulated for crimes committed against children and minors. <sup>132</sup>

Special units within the police investigate and analyze child pornography material.

iii. Everybody has the obligation to inform the Center for social care about violation of child's rights especially about all kinds of physical and mental abuse, sexual abuse, about cases of neglecting a child or careless actions regarding him/her, about abuse or exploitation of a child and the Center needs to take measures to protect the child. If he/she has been damaged by a crime, the Center needs to inform the police or state attorney about it. Every child or any other person can file a report or ask for help regarding any inappropriate behavior against child. The report can be filed to the following authorities:

---

<sup>131</sup> <http://www.antikorupcija.hr/Default.aspx?sec=438>

<sup>132</sup> The Criminal Procedure Act, Narodne novine 121/11, Zagreb, art 332.

1. Center for social care
2. The school; it needs to inform the proper authorities
3. The police (to special police officers dealing with legal protection of children and minors)
4. Ombudsman for children
5. NGOs dealing with protection of children's rights
6. State attorney, directly

There are no limitations on possible ways of reporting on misdemeanors or crimes. The report can be filed by a child-victim, his/her legal representative or any other citizen, legal person or state body that has information about crime committed. Report can be filed anonymously or under false name. In general, the report about crime should be taken from damaged child or his/her parents or legal representative by police officer specialized in minor delinquency and crimes against young people and family. The report can be filed in police station, but equally in child's home or Center for social care if circumstances show that it is the best way to protect child's interest and lower secondary victimization. If minor is 16 he/she can file the criminal prosecution or private charges himself/herself. Minor under 16 can do it only through a legal representative.<sup>133</sup>

The Criminal Procedure Act in Article 2 stipulates that state attorney has duty to undertake criminal prosecution if there is reasonable doubt that certain person has performed criminal act persecuted in a line of duty and if there are no legal obstacles for persecution of the person involved.<sup>134</sup>

iv. Period of limitation depends on the penalty anticipated for specific crime. The Criminal Act in Article 81. stipulates:

(1) Prosecution is in the state of statute limitation after:

---

<sup>133</sup> <http://www.antikorupcija.hr/Default.aspx?sec=438>

<sup>134</sup> The Criminal Procedure Act, Narodne novine 121/11, Zagreb, art 2.

- 40 years for crimes subjected to possible punishment of long lasting jail sentence and sentences of longer than 15 years of imprisonment,

-25 years for crimes subjected to possible punishment of jail sentence longer than 10 years of imprisonment,

-20 years for crimes subjected to possible punishment of jail sentence longer than 5 years of imprisonment,

-15 years for crimes subjected to possible punishment of jail sentence longer than 3 years of imprisonment,

-10 years for crimes subjected to possible punishment of jail sentence longer than 1 year of imprisonment,

-6 years for other crimes.

(2) Criminal prosecution is limited to the crime of genocide (art 88), the crime of aggression (art 89), crimes against humanity (art 90), war crimes (art 91), and other offenses that do not expire according to the Croatian Constitution or international law.

(3) If before the expiration of the periods referred to in paragraph 1 of this Article, the first-instance judgment, limitations for criminal prosecution shall be extended for two years.<sup>135</sup>

The course of limitation is regulated by Article 82. of the Criminal Act and it stipulates that

(1) Limitation of criminal prosecution starts with the day the crime has been committed. If the consequence characteristic for the crime appears later, statute limitation starts from that moment.

(2) Time in which criminal prosecution is not possible or it cannot go on is not incorporated in limitation.

(3) For crimes referring to in Criminal Procedure Act 1: slavery (art 105 (3)), trafficking (art 106 (2 and 3)), murder (art 110), murder in the first degree (art 111), death (art 112(1)), assisted suicide (art 114), mutilation of female sex organs (art 116), heavy physical injury (art 118), very heavy physical injury (art 119), heavy crimes against sexual freedom (art 154 (1)(2)), sexual abuse of a child under age of 15 (art 158), sexual abuse of a child older than 15 (art 159), soliciting of a child (art 162), using child for pornographic materials (art 163), using child for pornographic shows (art 164), heavy crimes of child sexual abuse and exploitation (art 166), facilitating extra marital life with a child (art 170), abandoning family member in a difficult situation (art 171), abandoning a child (art 176), neglecting and violating child's rights (art 177) committed against the child the statute limitation starts with the moment the victim becomes of age.

---

<sup>135</sup> The Criminal Act, Narodne Novine 125/11, Zagreb, art 81.

The Criminal Act stipulates that limitation of prosecution for crimes committed against child and minor cannot become effective until child or minor becomes of age. That stipulation gives possibility for child or minor to start the criminal prosecution of the perpetrator once he/she becomes of age independently of his/her parents or legal representatives.<sup>136</sup>

The Criminal Procedure Act stipulates in Article 3 that doubt regarding the existence of the facts which constitute the elements of the definition of the criminal offence, or which are conditions for the implementation of a certain provision of the criminal law, shall be decided in favour of the defendant.<sup>137</sup> If the case refers to a minor, his/her guardian is informed and he represents him/her. If the person is of age, he/she can represent himself/herself. If some doubts about the age of a person or if there is no document about it, the person will be considered to be a minor and will be given a representative.

vi. Ministry of Internal Affairs is the main institution responsible for recording and storing data for convicted offenders. Data are stored separately in both electronic system and in paper files<sup>138</sup>. Currently, regulation of transmission of the data is in the process of alignment with the acquis communautaire and soon Republic of Croatia will be part of the European Criminal Record Information System what will ensure better cooperation in finding and processing the criminal offenders. So far the cooperation between Croatian authorities and authorities in foreign countries in this matter was also satisfied and transmission of data was usual, but sometimes it lasted very long due different and sometimes very difficult preconditions. By transmission of data authorities completely respect protection of personal data. Informations are available only to authorized bodies and institutions (courts, state prosecutor offices and ministries upon request for certain procedures). If some other institutions request informations, e.g. schools when employing teachers or jails when

---

<sup>136</sup> The Criminal Act, Narodne Novine 125/11, Zagreb, art 82.

<sup>137</sup> The Criminal Procedure Act, Narodne novine 121/11, Zagreb, art 3(2)

<sup>138</sup> Dana contains the following informations: personal informations, information about the conviction, criminal offence, about sanctions and about changes in the conviction.

employing guardians, Ministry of Internal Affairs gives only information if persons was criminal offender or not without any details.

3.2 Complaint procedure

vii. The first stage of the criminal procedure are the preliminary proceedings within which evidence is collected about possible criminal offence and its perpetrator in order to decide whether to try the suspect or drop the charges. The preliminary proceedings, consequently, include criminal prosecution, investigation and indictment.<sup>139</sup>

Criminal prosecution begins with filing a criminal application with the public prosecutor. «Applications filed with a court, the police or a public prosecutor lacking the proper jurisdiction shall be accepted and immediately forwarded to the public prosecutor with proper jurisdiction.»<sup>140</sup>

Accepted criminal applications are registered with the Register of Criminal Applications. Thereupon, the inquiry into the criminal offence begins i.e. information is detected and collected about possible criminal offence, its perpetrator and other circumstances relevant to the procedure. The inquiry into the criminal offence is followed by a preliminary (evidentiary) hearing conducted by the investigating judge, at which witnesses are interrogated who are protected under international law and cannot be interrogated at the trial, or witnesses who could alter their testimony under influence. In addition, the preliminary hearing enables the presentation of evidence that can be used at the trial, as well as the evidence that affects the indictment decision.<sup>141</sup>

When the inquiry has been completed, there follows the decision on the application by the public prosecutor. The public prosecutor may issue an order to conduct an investigation if there is ground to suspect that a crime has been committed for which long prison term is prescribed, or a crime to which a regular procedure applies. After the investigation, the public prosecutor brings charges.

<sup>139</sup> Z. Đurđević, S. Gluščić: Criminal Procedure Law: Handbook, Official Gazette, Zagreb 2010, p.45

<sup>140</sup> Criminal Procedure Act, Official Gazette 121/11, Zagreb, art 205(3);(1) The report shall be filed with the competent State Attorney in writing or orally. (2) If the report is filed orally, the person who filed it shall be warned about the consequences of a false report. An oral report shall be entered in the record and if the report was conveyed by telephone or using other means of telecommunication, an official note shall be made. (3) If the report was filed with the court, the police authority or a State Attorney lacking jurisdiction, they shall receive it and immediately forward it to the State Attorney having jurisdiction.(4) The State Attorney enrolls criminal applications in the register of criminal applications as soon as they are submitted except in the cases from art 206 (7)(8) of this act. (5) Minister of Justice prescribes the way of conducting of the register of criminal applications.

<sup>141</sup> Z. Đurđević, S. Gluščić: Criminal Procedure Law: Handbook, Official Gazette, Zagreb 2010, p.48

From the arraignment on, the suspect becomes the accused and is entitled to enter a plea to the charges and evidence against him. On this basis the grand jury decides whether the charges are justified, and if yes, issues a decision to confirm the charges. At this stage of the procedure, parties may negotiate the terms for pleading guilty and reaching agreement on the sanction, which in Croatian legislation is known as settlement or agreement between the parties. Settlement between the parties enables passing a convicting court judgement without trial, with both parties consenting to the content of the judgement.

When the bill of indictment with the decision of the grand jury and the trial file has been submitted to the court with proper jurisdiction, the case then enters the stage of trial. Preparations for the trial (preparatory hearing) are conducted by the president of the trial chamber. At the preparatory hearing formal things are done relevant to holding the trial, new evidence is presented that has been collected following the indictment, and items and documents are obtained that are in the possession of the court or another authority. At the final stage of the preparatory hearing, the president of the trial chamber determines the time and venue for the trial, as well as which witnesses and experts to call, and what other evidence to obtain.

“The main hearing begins with the introductory formalities conducted by the president of the trial chamber (checking the identity of the accused, whether he/she was provided written information about his/her rights, preventing consultations between the parties and witnesses or experts...). This is followed by the reading of the suit claim and the plea of the accused, and the opening statements of the parties, and presentation of evidence.”<sup>142</sup> Evidence at the hearing is presented in the following order: evidence of the prosecution, evidence of the defence, evidence of the prosecution to rebut the claims of the defence, evidence of the defence in response to the rebuttal, evidence of the court, evidence of the facts decisive in pronouncing the criminal law sanction. After the presentation of evidence has been completed, there follow the closing statements of the parties in the following order: prosecutor, injured party, defence attorney, accused.

---

<sup>142</sup> Criminal Procedure Act, Official Gazette 121/11, Zagreb, art 413(1) When the president of the council determines that all summoned persons have appeared, when the panel decides to hold the trial in the absence of some of the summoned persons or when the panel decides to postpone a decision on such issues, the president of the panel shall call on the accused to give his personal data, except data about prior convictions in order to determine his identity. (2) Presiding judge will determine if the defendant has received and understood the written „instruction on rights“. If the defendant did not receive the „instruction on rights“, the president of the council will proceed as described in art 350(1), and if the defendant has received the „instruction on rights“, but he did not understand it, the president of the council will explain it to him.

After the closing statements, the chairman of the trial chamber closes the hearing and goes on to pass the judgement. The parties are entitled to appeal against the judgement by means of regular and special remedies. Regular remedies include: appeal against a judgement passed by a court of the first instance, appeal against a judgement of a court of the second instance, and complaint against a decision. Special remedies include: motion for retrial, motion for the protection of law, motion for extraordinary examination of a final judgement.

Croatian legislation differentiates between the notion of a “child” (a person aged 0-14 years), “minor” (a person aged 14-18 years) and “young adult” (a person aged 18-21 years). A child cannot submit a charge by himself, but by its legal representative (a parent, foster- parent or legal guardian). On the other hand, a minor of sixteen years of age or more may submit a private charge by himself. A private charge must be submitted with the court which has (subject matter and territorial) jurisdiction. The private prosecutor, in his statement given to the court in charge of the proceedings, may withdraw the private charge until the conclusion of the trial. In such a case he forfeits his right to submit the private charge anew for the same criminal offence<sup>143</sup>.

As regards criminal offences prosecuted upon a private charge; the private charge must be submitted within a term of three months from the day when the authorized person learns of the offence and perpetrator.

Certainly, one of the most important methods of collecting evidence is the interrogation of defendant and the examination of witnesses and experts.

When the defendant is interrogated for the first time, he shall be asked for his personal data (first name and surname, the day, month and year of his birth, the place of his birth, his ethnic group, occupation...) Thereafter, the defendant shall be instructed on his rights in a written form, and then he shall declare whether he shall be represented by a defense counsel of his own choosing.

---

<sup>143</sup> Criminal Procedure Act, Official Gazette 121/11, Zagreb, article 60(1) The private charge will be submitted to the court having jurisdiction over the case. (2) The private prosecutor can, with his statement to the court, drop the private charge until the end of the dispute. In that case he loses the right to submit the private charge again for the same crime. (3) The private prosecutor has the same rights as the State Attorney, except the rights which belong to him as the government body. (4) Articles 54-59 are applicable on the public prosecutor.

The written instruction on defendant's rights must contain information on the charges placed against him as well as of the main grounds for suspicion against him, if beforehand he had not been served a warrant of investigation; he shall be instructed that he need not present his defence or answer any questions; that he is entitled to examine, transcribe, copy and record the files and objects that can be used as evidence against him and that he is entitled to be represented by a defence counsel of his own choosing or by a defence counsel that shall be appointed to him in accordance with the provisions of Criminal Procedure Act, who shall be financed out of the State Budget. Interrogation shall be performed in such a manner that the defendant's person is fully respected. "The defendant shall be interrogated orally and during interrogation he may be permitted to use his notes. It is forbidden to use force, threat, deception or other similar means to obtain a defendant's statement or confession."<sup>144</sup>

As far as the examination of witnesses is concerned; persons who are likely to furnish information regarding the offence, the perpetrator and other relevant circumstances shall be summoned as witnesses.

Every person summoned as witness is bound to appear at the court and to testify, unless otherwise prescribed by Criminal Procedure Act.

According to Criminal Procedure Act, article 285, paragraph 1 the following persons are exempted from the duty to testify: the defendant's spouse or common-law spouse, the defendant's linear relatives by blood, collateral relatives by blood to the third degree and relatives by affinity to the second degree, the defendant's foster-parent and adopted child. Furthermore; attorneys, public notaries, tax consultants, physicians, dentists, psychologists, and social workers regarding information disclosed to them by the defendant while performing their respective professions. Also, journalists and their editors in the media regarding sources of information and data coming to their knowledge in the performance of their profession and provided that their sources were used in the editorial process, except if they are released of keeping information confidential.

---

<sup>144</sup> Criminal Procedure Act, Official Gazette 121/11, Zagreb, article 276 (1) Examination should be carried out in the way of absolute respect do the defendant. (2)The defendant shall be interrogated orally and during interrogation he may be permitted to use his own notes. (3)During the examination, no matter if the defendant answers the questions or not, he has the right to manifest about every circumstances charged and to take out facts in his defense. (4)When the defendant finishes his statement, he will be asked, if needed, to bring up evidences, to fill in the blanks or to eliminate the contradictions and ambiguities in his examination. (4)It is forbidden to use force, threat, deception or other similar means to obtain defendant's statement or confession.

As regards to the examination of witnesses; “witnesses shall be examined separately and in the absence of other witnesses. The witness shall be bound to give his answers orally. In addition, the witness shall be informed of his duty to tell the truth and not to withhold anything and that giving false testimony is a criminal offence.”<sup>145</sup>

In special cases, i.e. when a witness examined is a child, the examination shall be carried out in the absence of the judge and parties in a room where the child is situated, by means of technical devices for video and audio taping operated by professional technician. The examination is carried out with the assistance of a psychologist, educator or other expert person. The parent or legal guardian of the child shall be present during the examination, except in cases when their presence is contrary to the interests of criminal proceedings or a child. The child may be questioned - under the authorization of the investigating judge - by the parties through the expert person. The examination shall be video-taped and audio-taped. The video and audio tape shall be sealed and entered in the record. A child can only exceptionally be re-examined, and that in the same manner.

To protect the most vulnerable groups in society (such as children and minors), Criminal Procedure Act, article 285, paragraph 4 prescribes that a minor who due to his age and mental development is unable to understand the meaning of the right to exemption from testifying cannot testify as a witness, but the information obtained from him through expert persons, relatives or other persons who have been in contact with him can be used as evidence.

viii. Children must have a person who shall be their legal representative. In most cases, children are represented by their parents. However, a child can be represented in legal matters by its foster-parents and legal guardians too. According to Croatian Family Act parents have a right, - and at the same time a responsibility - to represent their child: “Parents are obliged and entitled to represent their child and make legal transactions on its behalf, unless stipulated differently by this Act”<sup>146</sup>.

---

<sup>145</sup> Criminal Procedure Act, Official Gazette 121/11, Zagreb, article 288(1) Witness shall be examined separately and in the absence of other witnesses. The witness shall be bound to give his answers orally. (2)Firstly, witness will be asked for name and last name, name of his father, profession, residence, place of birth, age, personal identity number, and his relationship with defendant and injured party. (3)After that, witness will be warned that he has to tell the truth, that he is not allowed to pass over, and that giving the false statement is crime. The witness will be also warned that he does not have to answer the questions predicted in art 45(1)(3), and also in art 286(1).

The role of parents in legal representation of their child ends when the child acquires legal capacity. Generally, legal capacity is acquired at full age i.e. at the age of eighteen. However, legal capacity prior to the age of eighteen may be acquired by marrying before full age (with permission of the court) or by acquiring the legal capacity by the decision of the court. There is a possibility that parents maintain legal representation even after the age of eighteen of their child; in cases when had been decided, in special procedure, that parents shall maintain their parental care after full age of their child<sup>147</sup>.

There are, however, some exceptions to the rule that the parents are legal representatives of their children. For instance, Family Act allows for a minor of sixteen years of age to submit to a court a proposal for issuing the court’s decision on the permission for her/his marriage, as well as to appeal against the court’s decision if rejected. Also, when a minor with court’s permission enters into marriage, she/he does so independently; without legal representation by her/his parents.

Also, parents’ representation of their child is not necessary in certain circumstances in which a minor is entitled to give statements relating to her/his personal conditions and interests; e.g. “maternity and paternity may be acknowledged independently by a minor who has turned sixteen years of age.”<sup>148</sup>

Parent is not allowed to represent its child when the interests of the child and the parent are in conflict. In such situation a social welfare centre shall appoint a special guardian to a child.

---

<sup>146</sup> Family Act, Official Gazette 116/2003, Zagreb, article 98(1)Parents are obliged and entitled to represent their child and make legal transactions on its behalf, unless stipulated differently by this Act. (2)Abstention of the child is the duty and the right of the parents. (3)Parents have duty and right, according to this Act, to manage the property of their child until its majority.

<sup>147</sup> Alinčić, M.; Hrabar, D.; Jakovac-Lozić, D.; Korać Graovac, A.: Family Law, Official Gazette, Zagreb, 2007, p. 261.

<sup>148</sup> Family Act, Official Gazette 116/2003, Zagreb, article 57(1) Maternity and paternity may be acknowledged independently by a minor who has turned sixteen years of age. (2)Maternity and paternity can be also acknowledged by the person who is partially incapacitated, if he/she is capable of understand the meaning of acknowledging, except he/she is, by the special decision of the court, forbidden to give statements concerning his/hers personal status.

“Special guardian shall be appointed; to a person in case when interests of the person and its legal representative (parent, foster - parent or guardian) are in conflict; when there is a conflict of interests between persons represented by the same legal representative, and in some special cases prescribed by law.”<sup>149</sup> In Croatian legal system, a special guardian representing a child involved in a legal dispute with its parents is referred to as “collision of interests’ guardian”. In general, “every person victim of criminal offence has according to the law a right to efficient psychological and other help and assistance provided by the state body, organisation or institution for assisting the victims of crime. The victim has the right to participate in criminal proceedings as an injured party, and has other rights prescribed by law.”<sup>150</sup>

Besides the aforementioned rights, a child or a minor injured by the criminal offence has additional rights: a legal representative financed out of the State Budget, confidentiality regarding its personal data and the exclusion of the public from the trial. In addition, “a court, state attorney, investigating judge and police must treat a child or minor injured by the criminal offence with special attention and utmost consideration, taking into account the victim’s age, personality, and other circumstances; in order to avoid any negative effects to the upbringing and development of the child or minor.”<sup>151</sup> Exceptionally, in connection with the criminal offences against sexual freedom and sexual morality the victim in such cases has the right: to counselling financed out of the State Budget prior to the examination; when examined by the police officers and the state attorney to be examined by a person of the same sex; to refuse to answer strictly personal questions; to demand to be examined by means of technical devices for video and audio taping; to confidentiality regarding her/his personal data and the exclusion of the public from the trial. Prior to the first examination a court, state attorney, investigating judge and police must inform the victim of criminal offence against sexual freedom and sexual morality of her/his rights.

<sup>149</sup> Alinčić, M.; Hrabar, D.; Jakovac-Lozić, D.; Korać Graovac, A.: Family Law, Official Gazette, Zagreb, 2007, p. 382.

<sup>150</sup> Criminal Procedure Act, Official Gazette 121/11, Zagreb, article 43(1) The victim of criminal offence has, according to the law, right to efficient psychological and other help and assistance provided by the state body, organization, institution for assisting the victims of crime according to this act, the right to participate in criminal proceedings as an injured party, and other rights prescribed by law. (2) The victim of the criminal offences (for which the prescribed punishment is five or more years of jail) has also right to get advisor who is guaranteed by state before giving the statement in criminal proceedings if he/she suffers more severe psychophysical damages or more severe consequences of the crime. He/she also has the right of reimbursement of pecuniary and non-pecuniary damages from the state fund under conditions and on the way prescribed by special law. (3) The court, State Attorney, investigator or the police, while undertaking the first step, have to inform the victim about his/her rights from the art. 44(1)(2) and the rights which he/she has as the injured party.

<sup>151</sup> Criminal Procedure Act, Official Gazette 121/11, Zagreb, article 44(1) A child or the minor who is victim of the crime has, except the rights which has the victim from article 43, the right to have the assignee provided by the state, the confidentiality of personal data and the exclusion of the public. (2) A court, state attorney, investigation judge and the police must treat a child or minor injured by the criminal offence with special attention and utmost consideration, taking into account the victim’s age, personality and other circumstances, in order to avoid any negative effects to the upbringing and development of the child or minor.

4 COMPLEMENTARY MEASURES

Preventive Measures

i. After some time spent on research of the subject one conclusion came up, that Croatia doesn't offer enough in education of professionals in the area of sexual exploitation and sexual abuse yet. There are some steps forward but it is still things to be done, especially in explanation of protocol, i.e. who is in charge for the certain steps.

First, I would refer to medicine doctors, because they are among professionals first who meet with abused child. In my research I received help from specialist in family medicine<sup>152</sup>, who confirmed that the education depends on free will of doctors and their own organisation. She, together with few colleagues and with association of Autonomous Women's House Zagreb ("Autonomna ženska kuća Zagreb")<sup>153</sup> held a big number of workshops in many cities all around country for colleague doctors, psychologists and social workers, on the subject of all types of violence against woman and children, including the sexual. They searched for the support from state districts, some of which showed interest and gave financial support, and some of which have shown no interest, which is not good information due to the importance of this issue.

A lot of doctors while meeting a child victim don't know who to call, talk to and which are their legal obligations. That causes problems, serious as breaking the law etc.

---

<sup>152</sup>MD Dijana Ramić Severinac.

<sup>153</sup> Autonomous Women's House Zagreb is feminist, non-governmental and non-profit organization, which priority is working in civil society. AWHZ was founded on December 14th, 1990., in order to respond on need for safe shelter for women and their children exposed to violence - psychical, psychological, sexual, economical or institutional.

Big research of Child protection centre -Zagreb<sup>154</sup> shows that medical doctors are aware of lack of knowledge and education in this area. Almost 86% of paediatricians and 83% of school doctors, general practitioners and family doctors want to be educated more in area of abuse and neglect of children.<sup>155</sup>

Since the Campaign 1 in 5 started performing, the situation in Croatia is improving regarding the relations of the state to education. Head of campaign is Ministry of Social Policy and Youth<sup>156</sup>. Project and workshops are co-financed by Ministry of Science, Education and Sports. Projects and workshops are held by Udruga roditelja korak po korak (Parent's Association Step by Step)<sup>157</sup>. On the workshops organised by Parents' Association Step by Step participate professionals from the education area, social and medical protection, representatives of the police and local government and all the others interested in protection of children's rights and interests.

There is a special education in Ministry of the Interior for police officers who work with children - victims of sexual abuse and exploitation. There is a special course<sup>158</sup> for this area and passing the course is a main request for employment on positions in a specific area in police system. Other requirements are high education (degree in criminology, psychology, social work, law, pedagogy etc.) and affinity for work with children. On Police Academy in Zagreb there are basic courses for other police officers on the subject of domestic violence that provide knowledge in criminal law protection of children. Police Academy also performs extra education of special police officers who treat children, victims of crimes. Police officers are also educated in this area through seminars, conferences or courses organised in the country or abroad.

On faculties, where future professionals are being educated, there is also not enough education on this issue. On Faculty of Social Work and Faculty of Teacher Education there are subjects but they are optional.

---

<sup>154</sup>Poliklinika za zaštitu djece grada Zagreba - Child protection center Zagreb - its activities are treatment of children and families, research and publications, education of professionals from medical and other institutions, supervising. It was recognized by Council of Europe and included in Campaign 1 in 5.

<sup>155</sup>Poliklinika za zaštitu djece grada. 2008.-2011. Piartis. Aug. 2012. <www.poliklinika-djeca.hr>

<sup>156</sup> Former Ministry of Families, Veteran's Affairs and Intergenerational Solidarity

<sup>157</sup> Parents' Association "Step by Step" is a non-governmental and non-profit association whose main objective is to promote value of the community focused on children.

<sup>158</sup> Course duration is six weeks.

ii. Referring to education of children in matters of sexual abuse, situation in Croatia is far from the ideal. There is no system education in school. It is not the subject in psychology or biology classes. Themes in master classes are violence, physical and psychical, but not sexual. Some experts think that it is needed for safety and equality in schools, and the public mostly agrees with the idea.

Theoretically there is possibility for the class master to choose the subject of sexual violence for the pupils, but it depends on his will.

In some schools in the country, teachers, pedagogues and psychologists are informed and organised by themselves, and they joined to the Council of Europe programme Building a Europe for and with children and Council of Europe campaign to stop sexual violence against Children<sup>159</sup>. In 2011 they organised extracurricular activities for children such as workshops, presentations and lessons. Psychology students also held lessons about the subject matter for high school students. In some schools external experts hold lessons for parents.

Ministry of social policy and youth, as the head of Campaign 1 in 5, made an Action plan for 2011 for implementing the campaign, and according to that plan Family centres<sup>160</sup> conduct the programme and hold lessons in schools and kindergartens for children, for parents and teachers, in 2011 and continued in 2012. Parents' association step by step also contributes the campaign through its CAP programme and it is among several institutions mostly involved in this campaign. They conduct CAP programme<sup>161</sup> in Croatia since 2000. The programme is based on three types of violence: violence between coevals, violence by adults and sexual violence. The leader of the project Marina Trbus<sup>162</sup> says that people accept the programme against violence between coevals better than programmes against sexual violence because there is general opinion that it is not so often and it is kind of a taboo or shame to talk about. She says that Lanzarote Convention helps them boost both

---

<sup>159</sup>Campaign 1 in 5

<sup>160</sup>Family centers are institutions founded by Republic of Croatia based on Social care law, NN 33/12

<sup>161</sup> The CAP (Child Assault Prevention) Programme is one of the most acknowledged and one of the best world programs in primary prevention of child abuse. The CAP seeks to integrate the best resources of a community in an effort to reduce a child's or a young person's vulnerability to verbal, physical and sexual assault. The Child Assault Prevention (CAP) Project originates in Columbus, Ohio in the late 1970's, as a response to the rape of a young child.

<sup>162</sup>Marina Trbus, professor of psychology, leader of CAP programme in Croatia programmes (CAP and 1 in 5) because it gives them legal grounds for what is ought to be done.

All these activities and events are in order to raise and develop education of children and parents. Majority of them where happening recently, through 2011. and 2012., and are still in form of extracurricular activities.

iii. Croatia still doesn't have any prevention programmes for people who fear that they may commit the crime. For the time of being, it is just an idea that is mentioned among experts as a necessity, because it is required by Council of Europe Convention on the Protection of Children against Sexual Exploitation and Sexual Abuse<sup>163</sup>. It was talked about on expert debates, discussions and on round table "Prevention of sexual harassment and abuse of children"<sup>164</sup>.

Protective Measures and Assistance to Victims

iv. One of the first social programmes to notice are helplines, which provide help and support for victims, conversation to educated volunteers and professionals about their problem.<sup>165</sup>

Helplines don't offer enough, so volunteers address victims to Child protection center in Zagreb where children receive proper help and treatment. Children also go to other hospitals for children, such as Children's hospital Zagreb, where they are appointed by their general practitioners; and mental institutions as well. The Child protection centre is a specialized institution in health care system where children also arrive appointed by their general practitioners. The centre receives children from the whole country, because for now it is the only institution of that type in Croatia<sup>166</sup>. They receive 40% of sexually abused children from Zagreb, and 60% from the rest of the country. Centre has multidisciplinary approach and victims are treated by highly profiled specialists. Victims of sexual abuse have advantage in this clinic and receive treatment within five days.

---

<sup>163</sup>Lanzarote Convention.

<sup>164</sup>Event organised by Parents' association step by step, Ombudsman for children and Child protection center Zagreb scheduled within activities in Action plan for enforcement of Campaign 1 in 5.

<sup>165</sup>More about this type of support in next question, number v.

<sup>166</sup> It is the centre for abused and neglected children.

Other public institutions, such as Social care centres, which are the first institutions that need to be informed about abuse, have limited support for victims. Family centres also are not the institutions that provide support programmes, although they work on prevention and organise lessons in schools.<sup>167</sup>

Children can also turn to non-governmental and non-profit organisations. The best example is Autonomous Women's House Zagreb<sup>168</sup>, an institution for abused woman and children that provides safe shelter in a period up to twelve months, as well as physical and psychological recovery, counselling and all similar care. Institution also acts as an intermediary between the women (and their children) and the relevant institutions (social, legal, medical, educational, humanitarian).

Children homes all over country are facilities for children without parents or proper family care, where employers are specialists who work with children and give them treatment and recovery in cases that need it.

v. There are several helplines in service for the victims in Croatia. There is "Hrabri telefon" ("Brave phone"), an organisation founded in 1997 and registered in 2000, which today runs several programmes. Among them one is advisory helpline for abused and neglected children, known under the same name as the organization: "Hrabri telefon". Advisory helpline is free and anonymous phone-line opened every working day from 9 am until 8 pm on the number 0800 0800. Except on the phone line, advisory help is also possible on the Internet i.e. Chat every working day from 3 pm until 6 pm, also on e-mail and forum. Besides from the children, help can be asked from parents and professionals who work with children and other adults who are voluntarily involved to help children.

"Hrabritelefon" is led by following principles: accessibility, confidentiality and the best interests of the child. Principle of accessibility is shown from the services which are free of charge for all users, confidentiality means that the information about users are used exclusively for statistical analyses and are not available to public, strictly confidential. Counselling and support are aimed with the principle of the best interest of the child.

---

<sup>167</sup>Family centers and Social care centers are institutions founded by Republic of Croatia based on Social care law, NN 33/12.

<sup>168</sup>Autonomna ženska kuća Zagreb is feminist, non-governmental and non-profit organisation, which priority is working in civil society. AWHZ was founded on December 14th, 1990., in order to respond on need for safe shelter for women and their children exposed to violence - psychical, psychological, sexual, economical or institutional.

Users contact the advisory helpline regarding the matter of child protection from abuse and neglected types of violence, the questions are mostly raised by children. The line is also open for advices in parenting, raising the children and education. According to statistics incoming calls primarily refer to physical and emotional child abuse.

People who work on the “Hrabri telefon” helpline are volunteers, around forty of them, scheduled in shifts of 3 to 4 hours per day. They are students of final years in humanistic faculties (psychology, social work, education and rehabilitation) who passed special education, continue educating, and are monitored by experts: psychologists, psychiatrists and social workers.

Apart from “Hrabri telefon” organisation exists “Plavi telefon” (“Blue line”) organisation with its helpline “Plavi telefon”. It is opened every working day from 9 am until 9 pm, and its goal is to help children, young and adults, from giving information to solving abuse etc. People who work on this phone line are also volunteers, around twenty five of them involved, who are also educated and monitored by experts.

There are also other helplines on the areas of all bigger cities in Croatia available for children, parents and everyone else who need advice of experts.

vi. The answer on first question is given under question number iv. The most important thing when it comes to recovery of victims is co-operation of institutions: Child protection centre, Social care centre, police department, judiciary, schools and kindergartens.

The state offers posttraumatic treatment and support in Child protection centre through health care system. Other hospitals and clinics also work through health care system, but this centre is a specialized institution.<sup>169</sup> The services are free for children in Croatian healthcare

There is a tendency to decrease a number of interrogating of victims, so the centre has two special rooms with cameras and microphones, where a child talks to a psychologist. Everything is filmed and observed from the other room by other subjects in trial: judge, state attorney, the defendant and his lawyers. Cases finish quickly; child is questioned only once, in friendly environment, the tape is used as evidence in court. Unfortunately, judges show lack of interest for this type of examination, only two judges in 2011 used the forensic room of the centre.

---

<sup>169</sup> The services are free of charge for children in Croatian healthcare.

The specialists are aware of the possibility that child victims could have sexual behaviour problems in the future. It could be agreed to observe the situation with the child in the future.

The legal system has clearly instructed institutions how to react and work in cases of sexual violence and abuse, and there is a protocol of actions. All people working with children should know and obey the rules but there is a doubt how it works in practice. Institutions i.e. people who work on Campaign 1 in 5 and similar programmes, workshops etc. are teaching professionals who work with victims what is their legal obligation.

III NATIONAL POLICY REGARDING CHILDREN

i. Child sexual abuse and harassment are the hardest forms of violence against children. Considering aforementioned, the Republic of Croatia is taking the necessary activities whose goals are securing the most efficient way of protecting children from sexual abuse, protecting the victims of sexual abuse and preventing this crime from happening. Certain rules and regulations are being decreed. As a part of National plan of activities for children's rights and interests between the year 2006 and 2012 certain precautions, which are directed towards the protection of children from all the forms of abuse and neglect, are provided. The national strategy of protection against family violence between the year 2011 and 2016 is introducing a series of measures which define protection of children, i.e. measures directed towards development and conduction of professional care oriented towards the needs of each child with a history of family violence. A better child protection can be applied if all of the relevant participants on all of the levels of society are working together to stop sexual abuse of children and protect them against all forms of dangers that modern lifestyle brings. Considering this, The Ministry of Internal Affairs has nominated a project called Maximizing the capacity of The Ministry of Internal Affairs in suppression of child sex abuse, as well as providing police help to the vulnerable victims, has been carried out as a part of IPA European Commission for the year 2009. It involves empowerment of institutions in suppressing and fighting against sexual abuse of children. The Ministry of Internal Affairs is, along with numerous partners, also planning to introduce a preventive program called „New media“, whose goal would be elevating the security and protection of children from a series of modern technology abuse (with the focus on the internet, computers and cell phones), as well as informing the public on potential threats and risks of misuse of the new media. Civil society organizations and their expertise and continuous, supported, work also have a significant role in protection of children. Some of the organizations representatives were included in the preparation of this Action Plan – The Coordination of Organizations for Children have presented their plan of activities as well as their work on this area of expertise, with their emphasis on the work of Parents Association „Step by Step“ whose work CAP program of prevention of child abuse has been known in Croatia since 1999.

The Office of Children Ombudswomen, whose work began on 25th of September 2003, has been recognized by the public in these past few years, which is definitively an indicator of rising public awareness of children's rights and the success of the existing model. In the past three years (from 2009 to the end of 2011), for example, the Office has been mentioned 1499 times in the mass media, with 357 radio and 286 television broadcasts. Numerous public statements were an opportunity for addressing the principles of children's legal rights as well as their best social interests. During the year 2011, the Office answered numerous questions, indicating the journalist's interests in children's legal rights. The whole report has been posted on the websites of Croatian Parliament and the Office of Children Ombudswomen.

ii. Civil society organizations are involved as follows:

- Organizing public presentations on projects that include children's rights focused on prevention of sexual abuse
- Organizing workshops for teachers, social and health workers, police, the church and other self-government workers
- Organizing meetings in collaboration with The Office of Children Ombudswoman and Zagreb Polyclinic for children protection, with topics concerning the prevention of sexual abuse of children
- Organizing pilot implementation of CAP programs for children with development issues (presentations for parents and staff, workshops for children). They, also, educate new CAP teams in implementations of Preschool, Basic and TeenCAP. They deal brochures with informations regarding CAP programs

- Publication of educative texts on their webpage
- Cooperation with other national and local participants in the realization of the program
- Involvement in tv and radio shows and cooperation with newspapers during their presentations on prevention of sexual abuse
- Direct work with children in order to establish the forms of sexual abuse
- Providing professional advice

iii. In order to procure a real assessment of the weight of socially negative event and create necessary precautions and modality during the criminal procedures, we are inclined to have access to the latest data that can point us at the severity and the trend of this event. In the situation of the extent and trend of sexual abuse of children, we have to rely on statistical data, which can be obtained from certain institutions, such as The Ministry of Internal Affairs, the police stations, the state Attorney, the courthouses and The Office of Judicial Statistics of the State Institute of Statistics of Croatia. The main notion is a presumption that the trend of sexual delicts is fairly accurate within the data procured by the Ministry of Internal Affairs and the state Attorney's office. Based on the data given by the Office of Analytics of the Ministry of Internal Affairs we can follow the trend of sexual felonies, the quota of each felony, territorial allocation and age and sex of the felons and victims.

Table 1. Total number of felonies against sexual freedom and morality with children and minor as victims between 2005 and 2010.

YEAR	The number of sex felonies against children	The number of sex felonies against minors
2005.	212	193
2006.	237	196
2007.	178	268
2008.	203	234
2009.	223	195
2010.	134	221

Chart 1. Trend of sexual felonies against children (blue) and minors (red)

Table 2: Number of victims in years 2005 and 2006 (by age and sex)

Felonies	Victims in 2005.				Victims in 2006.
	Until 14 years		14-18 years		Until 14 years		14-18 years
	Male	Female	Male	Female	Male	Female	Male	Female
Article 188. st. 4.5 i 6 - Rape	0		4	17	0	1	2	29
Article 189. Sexual intercourse with an infirm person	0		2	2	0		3	4
Article 190. Forced intercourse	0		0	1	0		0	1
Article 191. Intercourse with abuse of position	0	2	0	2	0		4	2
Article 192. Intercourse with a child	22	18	4	26	8	25	2	27
Article 193. Fornication	11	69	9	58	7	65	4	57
Article 194. Fornication in front	8	47	4	27	8	25	3	43

of a child or a minor
Article 195 Pimping	0		0	3	0		0	1
Article 196 Child or minor pornographic abuse	4	1	2	5	2	4	4	5
Article 197 Introducing children to pornography	10	15	1	17	10	3	0	0
Article 197a Children pornography on PC or internet	2	0	2	5	42	29	0	1
Article 198 Incest	1	2	0	2	3	5	0	4
TOTAL	58	154	28	165	80	157	22	174

Table 3: Number of victims in years 2007 and 2008 (by age and sex)

Felonies	Victims in 2007.				Victims in 2008.
	Until 14 years		14-18 years		Until 14 years		14-18 years
	Male	Female	Male	Female	Male	Female	Male	Female
Article 188. st. 4.5 i 6 - Rape	0	0	5	27	0	6	6	25
Article 189. Sexual intercourse with an infirm person	0	0	0	2	0	0	0	12
Article 190. Forced intercourse	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0

Article 191. Intercourse with abuse of position	0	0	2	1	0	0	0	5
Article 192. Intercourse with a child	10	20	6	35	13	15	1	24
Article 193 Fornication	18	43	5	95	9	65	9	73
Article 194 Fornication in front of a child or a minor	6	42	7	30	15	51	5	20
Article 195 Pimping	1	0	1	2	0	0	0	4
Article 196 Child or minor pornographic abuse	1	10	1	13	2	5	2	22
Article 197 Introducing children to pornography	10	9	5	6	11	13	0	2
Article 197a Children pornography on PC or internet	1	4	2	17	0	4	4	16
Article 198 Incest	0	3	3	3	0	1	0	4
TOTAL	47	131	37	231	50	153	27	207

Table 4: Number of victims in years 2009 and 2010 (by age and sex)

Felonies	Victims in 2009.				Victims in 2010.
	Until 14 years		14-18 years		Until 14 years		14-18 years
	Male	Female	Male	Female	Male	Female	Male	Female
Article 188. st. 4.5 i 6 - Rape	0	0	1	21	0	0	0	25
Article 189. Sexual intercourse with an infirm person	0	0	0	1	0	0	2	8
Article 190. Forced intercourse	0	0	0	1	0	0	0	1
Article 191. Intercourse with abuse of position	0	1	0	4	0	0	0	5
Article 192. Intercourse with a child	9	28	2	27	9	21	3	36
Article 193 Fornication	17	60	5	75	3	56	3	54
Article 194 Fornication in front of a child or a minor	11	44	11	14	2	27	2	23
Article 195 Pimping	0	0	0	2	0	0	0	8
Article 196 Child or minor pornographic abuse	3	10	2	9	0	2	3	11

Article 197 Introducing children to pornography	23	12	4	5	5	3	0	1
Article 197a Children pornography on PC or internet	0	4	0	11	0	4	1	34
Article 198 Incest	1	0	0	0	0	2	0	1
TOTAL	64	159	25	170	19	115	14	207

In the period set in the tables we can see that the most common felony is fornication (35,4 %), followed by fornication in front of a child or a minor (24,1 %), sexual intercourse with a child (16,7 %), introducing children to pornography (10,4 %), children pornography on PC or internet (7,6 %), child or minor pornographic abuse (3,7 %) and incest (1,5 %). In cases where minors are involved, the most common felonies are as follows: fornication (34,5%), rape (12,5%), fornication in front of a child or a minor (14,6%), children pornography on PC or internet (6,5%), child or minor pornographic abuse (6,1%), incest (1,3%). Regarding the prosecution of felonies against sexual freedom and morality with children and minors as victims, the number of legal registrations, prosecutions and verdicts is as follows: in the year 2007 - 249 registrations, 203 prosecutions, 164 verdicts; in the year 2008 – 312 registrations, 224 prosecutions, 130 verdicts; and in the year 2009 - 236 registrations, 152 prosecutions, 130 verdicts.

iv. Currently in Croatia, the European Council is promoting a campaign called „One of five“ with the goal of preventing sexual abuse of children, which started in Rome, in the end of November 2010. This campaign has two main goals:

- Promoting of signing, ratification and implementation of Convention of European Council about protecting the children from sexual abuse (so-called Lanzarote Convention)
- Supporting children, parents, experts and society with knowledge in preventing and notifying the authorities in sexual abuse of children, which can raise public awareness on such matters.

The campaign has been successfully implemented in kindergartens, schools and various other institutions in Republic of Croatia.

The campaign has been successfully implemented in kindergartens, schools and various other institutions in Republic of Croatia.

v. The Office of Children Ombudswomen offers its opinions on the matters of decreeing regulations of protection of children against sexual abuse. The experts of health department, social workers, the police and civil organizations are inclined to assist in the creation of legislative regulations, if needed.

vi. Holders of campaign for prevention of sexual abuse and molesting of children are:

National level:

- Former Ministry of family, war veterans and intergenerational solidarity
- Ministry of Justice
- Ministry of Internal Affairs
- Ministry of Health and Social Care
- Ministry of Science, Education and Sports
- Office for Human Rights of Government of the Republic of Croatia

Local level:

- Family Centres
- Units of local and regional self-government
- Civil society organizations

Non-government organizations in Republic of Croatia are:

1. Brave phone - helpline for abused and neglected children is non-governmental, non-profit organization founded in 1997, and registered in 2000 with goals to provide direct help and support to abuse and neglect children and their families and work on prevention of abuse and neglect as well as unacceptable behaviour of children and youth. In professional work Organization leads with several principals: accessibility (all activities and services are free of charge for users); confidentiality (information about users are used exclusively for statistic analyses that are not available to public) and the best interests of the child (counselling and support are aimed with this principal). In every day work organization place an efforts in achieving and stimulating positive changes in society and own growth and progress it terms of professional standards of quality in providing services to users. Also, in taking care for employees and volunteers who have been included more than 500 so far in the work of Brave phone.

Web page: <http://www.hrabritelefon.hr/hr/home>

2. Blue phone - is non governmental, non-profit organization founded 1991.

Web page: <http://www.plavi-telefon.hr/>

3. Parents' Association "Step by Step" is a non-governmental and non-profit association whose main objective is to promote value of the community focused on children. Such society perceives children as its most valuable treasure and creates a priority for their welfare, development and education. Moreover, the restoration of the value of parenting is considered as a possibility for balancing work and care for children while doing everything in our might to start appreciating parenting and make it easier. Association's activities include promotion of children's rights as well as rights of their families to honourable life; cooperation with preschool, school and other institutions which take care of children and families; joint efforts of Association's members before authorities, institutions and local communities; organization of seminars and public lectures; distribution; cooperation with domestic and foreign organizations and encouraging donations and sponsorships.

Main objective and activities of the Association:

- Encouragement of the educational politics which provides equal opportunities and approach to free compulsory education for all children;
- Encouragement of the volunteer participation of parents in matters of great importance for their children;
- Encouragement of the use of methodology focused on children in nurseries and schools in order to provide better learning environment where children like to learn and continually question their knowledge, adopting democratic attitudes, values and behaviour.
- Working with adults, especially parents, teachers and educators with the aim of promoting interculturalism, multiculturalism, inclusion, child assault prevention, prevention of different kinds of addictions, setting up standards in practical work which will lead to better living conditions of children and adults;

- Encouragement of partner relations between children and adults in order to achieve their rights; encouragement of socially responsible business sector with the aim of fulfilling the needs of children and their parents;
- Cooperation with government institution and other associations in promoting the value of community focused on children.

Web page: <http://www.udrugaroditeljakpk.hr/>

4. UNICEF has been active in Croatia since 1947, when the first shipment of aid in food and clothing sent by UNICEF arrived on the territory of the then SFRY. From an agency providing aid in food, clothing, footwear, equipment and medicines, UNICEF has been transformed into an agency raising funds for programmes to protect and promote the rights of children and forming partnerships between individuals, companies and the government for the better life of children in Croatia and the world.

Web page: <http://www.unicef.hr>

IV OTHER

V CONCLUSION

Croatia is the only post-communist country in which the parallel process of democratization and transition bred the process of state creation and war. After the disintegration of Yugoslavia, Croatia had a lot of challenges ahead. As a young and inexperienced state in which all three processes culminated and jeopardized the process of state creation and development, Croatia reached its then goals through strong struggle for sovereignty. The crown of that long-suffering struggle for development was the conclusion of negotiations on membership in the European Union, so Croatia will become a full member on 1 July 2013. In the process of accession Croatia had to fulfil various requirements in order to implement acquis communautaire. Of the 35 chapters, Croatia had the most difficulty with Chapter 23 - Judiciary and fundamental rights. The rule of law, human rights and minority rights proved to be crucial and decisive in the closure of negotiations with the European Union in June last year. However, Croatia still has a long way to go in order to truly become a modern and organized country in which human rights are fully respected.

The Republic of Croatia signed the Council of Europe Convention on the Protection of Children against Sexual Exploitation and Sexual Violence on 25 October 2007, ratified it on 21 September 2011, and the Convention entered into force on 01 January 2012. Also, there are no reservations to the Convention. According to legal monism which is accepted in the Croatian legal order, Convention is above national laws and under the Constitution and it is directly applicable.

In 2011 there was a reform of the criminal legislation and new Criminal Code was laid down. It will enter into force on the 1st of January 2013 and it is completely in accordance with international obligations which Croatia has taken over in past 20 years among which important role also has Lanzarote Convention. It has introduced a lot of changes and for are most important those related to the Lanzarote Convention. All criminal offences related to the sexual exploitation and abuse are mentioned in the separate chapter and some new offences are introduced which hasn't been included in the Criminal Code from 1997. Legal age for engaging in sexual activities is fifteen. But if the child is under fifteen, and the age difference between the persons engaged in sexual intercourse or an equivalent act or in a lewd act does not exceed three years, in that case no criminal offense of sexual child abuse has been committed.

In the previous Croatian Criminal Code there is no definition of the term "child pornography" or pornography in general, but finally, new Criminal Code introduced the definition and it is compatible with the Convention on Cybercrime, Lanzarote Convention and other documents that the Republic of Croatia has signed in the meantime.

Article 163 (6) of the new Criminal Code defines child pornography as "material that visually or otherwise shows a real child or realistically depicted non-existent child or a person who looks like a child engaged in real or simulated sexually explicit conduct or showing sexual organs of children in sexual purposes. Materials that have an artistic, medical, scientific, information or similar importance should not be considered pornography in terms of this Article". The definition is made based on the Article 20 (2) Lanzarote Convention and has been further extended with parts from paragraph (3) in which the state is given the option to retain the right not to apply. New Croatian Criminal Code attributes criminal liability for offenses related to child pornography to everyone who has any connection with child pornography, from direct producers to the end users who knowingly gain access to child pornography through information and communication technologies. The right of reservations from the Lanzarote Convention, Article 20 (4), has not been used.

The new Criminal Code severely criminalizes procuring a child in any manner and for any purpose as well as each participation of a child in pornographic shows.

According to the Article 21 of Lanzarote Convention which refers to offenses related to the participation of children in pornographic performances, composed Article 164 of Croatian Criminal Code entitled "Exploitation of children in pornographic performances". In the Article have been introduced all the provisions of Article 21 of the Convention and the content is additionally expanded with the provisions in paragraph (5) relating to the confiscation of all devices, tools and computer programs, and the destruction of pornographic material formed through perpetration of criminal offense. Croatia did not use the right of reservations from the Article 21 (2) of Lanzarote Convention, but already severely criminalizes visits to all pornographic performances in which children are involved. In the new Criminal Code, under Article 87 (7) a child is considered a person who has not attained the age of eighteen.

Sexual gratification through the information and communication technology with intent by an adult offender is regulated by Article 161 of the Criminal Code of the Croatian criminal legislation which states that adult acting person contacts a juvenile under the age of fifteen years with the intention that they or another person commit the offense from the Article 158 of the Criminal Code, through information and communication technologies, or otherwise, suggest meeting with them or another person and then take measures for this meeting to happen, shall be punished by imprisonment not exceeding three years. In the second paragraph of this legal article it is stated that whoever collects, provides or transmits data on a person under the age of fifteen years for an offense referred to in paragraph 1 of this article shall be punished by imprisonment not exceeding one year. An attempted criminal offense referred to in paragraph 1 of this article shall be punished.

Our criminal code specifies that the offender should propose or initiate a meeting with a potential victim or propose a meeting between a victim and another person.

The novelty is that term "grooming" now exists in Croatian criminal legislation and it is dealt with in Article 161 of the Criminal Code.

The above mentioned crimes are sanctioned in the Chapter 17 „Criminal offenses against sexual abuse and exploitation of a child“ and Chapter 9 „Criminal offenses against humanity and human dignity“ of Croatian Criminal Code. Penalty includes deprivation of liberty for all of them.

In the Croatian legislation, the state considers the legal person liable if the offense was committed against children by private persons, i.e. employees in a legal entity (for example, institutions, companies, organizations, etc.). In such cases, civil liability is prescribed. The civil liability of both natural and legal persons is prescribed by the provisions of the Law of Obligations, which gives an opportunity to the injured party in the civil case to exercise the right to compensation for damage caused due to mental pain and injury.

“The best interest of the child” is a criterion for treating a child and making decisions regarding him/her established by the Convention on the Rights of the Child. Following the Convention, the best interest of the child should be a priority regardless of actions being taken by public or private institutions of social care, courts, administration or juridical bodies.

The Criminal Procedure Act also stipulates that the victim of crime has right to psychological and other specific assistance and support of the body, organization or institution providing help to victims of crime according the law, right to participate the criminal procedure as a damaged party and other rights established by law. Besides that, the victim - child or minor - has right to get an attorney who will be paid by state budget, right for his/her personal data to be kept secret and right for public to be excluded from the process. The court, state attorney, investigator and the police should treat the child or younger minor, the victim of crime, very tactfully bearing in mind his/her age, personality and other circumstances to avoid harmful consequences for child's or younger minor's education and development.

Minor cannot be questioned in the capacity of witness if he/she is not, due to his/her age and psychological development, capable of understanding the very meaning of the right not to witness, but information given by him/her through experts, relatives and other persons in contact with him/her can be used as evidence.

During investigation questioning is in principle done by video-link. Questions put by judge, state attorney or defense attorney are presented to the child, in an understandable way, by expert court collaborator who has previously prepared the child for questioning. During that kind of questioning the child is to be placed in separate room designed appropriately for children.

If the witness is a child who is at the same time damaged party, the questioning is to be done with assistance of a psychologist, pedagogue or similar expert. Investigative judge will order the questioning to be video and audio taped. It will be done in a room without presence of judge and other parties. They can put questions through investigative judge and psychologist, pedagogue or other expert.

Children and younger minors in a capacity of damaged party can be questioned in their own premises or some other venue they stay in or in a centre for social care instead in the Court. When child or younger minor has been questioned in previously described way, his/her statement will be read or reproduced at the trial.

Furthermore, if a minor is questioned in the capacity of witness, the court chamber may order for him/her to be questioned outside the hearing by its president or a judge, member of the court chamber. It can also be decided to do it by the local investigating judge regarding the region the witness or the expert is from.

Limited number of interrogation of a child is legally stipulated only regarding court procedure – it understands two interrogations for a child or younger minor at the most. But in reality it does not mean that a child will be interrogated about the crime actually just two times, as we know that the court procedure is preceded, as already mentioned, by police investigation.

Data about minor participating in the court procedure is considered a secret and every body or person knowing these data are to keep them confidential.

Any time, from the very beginning to its closure, the court chamber may exclude the public entirely or just for one part of the hearing according to its own decision or according to suggestion of the parties participating the court procedure due to protection and well-being of the minor. If a minor is present at the hearing in the capacity of witness or a damaged party, he/she will be asked to leave the courtroom as soon as his/her presence is no longer necessary.

“The best interest of the child” is ensured that everybody has the obligation to inform the Center for social care about violation of child’s rights especially about all kinds of physical and mental abuse, sexual abuse, about cases of neglecting a child or careless actions regarding him/her, about abuse or exploitation of a child and the Center needs to take measures to protect the child. If he/she has been damaged by a crime, the Center needs to inform the police or state attorney about it.

After this research we can conclude that Croatia doesn't offer enough in education of professionals in the area of sexual exploitation and sexual abuse yet. There are some steps forward but it is still things to be done. There is a special education in Ministry of the Interior Affairs for police officers who work with children - victims of sexual abuse and exploitation. There is a special course for this area and passing the course is a main request for employment on positions in a specific area in police system. On Police Academy in Zagreb there are basic courses for other police officers on the subject of domestic violence that provide knowledge in criminal law protection of children. Police Academy also performs extra education of special police officers who treat children, victims of crimes. Police officers are also educated in this area through seminars, conferences or courses organised in the country or abroad.

Referring to education of children in matters of sexual abuse, situation in Croatia is far from the ideal. There is no system education in school. It is not the subject in psychology or biology classes. Themes in master classes are violence, physical and psychical, but not sexual. Some experts think that it is needed for safety and equality in schools, and the public mostly agrees with the idea.

Ministry of social policy and youth, as the head of Campaign 1 in 5, made an Action plan for 2011 for implementing the campaign, and according to that plan Family centres conduct the programme and hold lessons in schools and kindergartens for children, for parents and teachers, in 2011 and continued in 2012. Parents' association step by step also contributes the campaign through its CAP programme and it is among several institutions mostly involved in this campaign. They conduct CAP programme<sup>170</sup> in Croatia since 2000. The programme is based on three types of violence: violence between coevals, violence by adults and sexual violence.

---

<sup>170</sup> The CAP (Child Assault Prevention) Programme is one of the most acknowledged and one of the best world programs in primary prevention of child abuse. The CAP seeks to integrate the best resources of a community in an effort to reduce a child's or a young person's vulnerability to verbal, physical and sexual assault. The Child Assault Prevention (CAP) Project originates in Columbus, Ohio in the late 1970's, as a response to the rape of a young child.

Considering aforementioned, the Republic of Croatia is taking the necessary activities whose goals are securing the most efficient way of protecting children from sexual abuse, protecting the victims of sexual abuse and preventing this crime from happening.

Civil society organizations and their expertise and continuous, supported, work also have a significant role in protection of children, but the most important role has the Office of Children Ombudswoman, whose work began on 25th of September 2003, has been recognized by the public in these past few years, which is definitively an indicator of rising public awareness of children's rights and the success of the existing model. Numerous public statements were an opportunity for addressing the principles of children's legal rights as well as their best social interests.

The increasing transformation of social role of children and of traditional conduct towards them is present in Croatia in past years and it helped a lot in highlighting the importance for the protection and respect of children's rights. Even more important is that number of protecting mechanisms has increased and today they are satisfactory and sufficient, but there is still huge need for raising the awareness and educate the children, parents and all people working with children how to properly use them. We truly hope that this Legal research group will give its contribution both to education and to establishing the common legal framework for the protection of the children from the sexual abuse and exploitation.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

We are grateful to all members of Department for Family Law at the Faculty of Law, University of Zagreb especially to its Head, Professor Dubravka Hrabar, to assistant professor Irena Majstorović and to our academic advisor assistant professor Ivana Milas Klarić for their unlimited and constant support during the research.

Also, we are grateful to Government Team for Social Networks for helping us finding the right persons for some answers and to Ministry for Internal Affairs for being prompt in giving them.

ELSA ESTONIA

I Introduction.....	223
1 General .....	223
2 The Lanzarote Convention.....	233
II National Legislation .....	233
1 General Principles Of The Jurisdiction .....	234
2 Substantive Criminal Law .....	243
2.1 Sexual Abuse.....	243
2.2 Child Prostitution .....	245
2.3 Child Pornography .....	246
2.4 Corruption of Children.....	247
2.5 Solicitation of Children for Sexual Purposes.....	248
2.6 Corporate Liability.....	249
2.7 Aggravating Circumstances .....	251
2.8 Sanctions and Measures .....	254
3 Criminal Procedure .....	259
3.1 Investigation .....	259
3.2 Complaint Procedure .....	264
4 Complementary Measures.....	265
III National Policy Regarding Children.....	269
IV Other.....	276
V Conclusion.....	278

National Researchers

Natalia Aleksejeva,

Kati Kruut,

Liis Lõhmus

Academic Advisor

professor Jaan Ginter, mag.iur Maria Tamm

National Coordinator

Natalia Aleksejeva

Special thanks to:

Andres Aru, Head of the Chancellor of Justice Children's Rights Department

Toomas Palu, Executive Director of UNICEF Estonia

I INTRODUCTION

1 GENERAL

i. The Constitution of the Republic of Estonia prohibits discrimination for any reason, however there are several serious discrimination issues remaining in Estonia.<sup>1</sup>

Gender-Based Discrimination

Although women have the same legal rights as men under the law and are entitled in theory to equal pay for equal work, this is not the case in practice. While women's average educational level is higher than that of men, their average pay in general is lower, and there continue to be female- and male-dominated professions.<sup>2</sup>

In 2011 The Estonian Ministry of Social Affairs released a publication on the wage difference between men and women in Estonia. According to the research, the wage difference in the year 2008 was about 31,4 %<sup>3</sup>, whereas the average wage difference in European Union is 15%. Taking into account that according to Eurostat the range of difference in salaries by gender is 3-27% it is clearly seen that gender-based discrimination is quite a serious issue in Estonia. Most of the companies still prefer hiring men to women. Women constitute slightly less than half of the work force; they also carry most major household responsibilities.

Violence against women, including spousal abuse, is reportedly also common and continues to be the subject of discussion and media coverage. Neither domestic violence nor marital rape is criminalized, although they could be prosecuted under the general clauses of the Estonian Penal Code, prohibiting physical violence and rape.<sup>4</sup> The studies show that 40 percent of the crimes, including domestic violence, go unreported. Even when the police are called, the abused spouse often declines to press charges due to societal pressure.<sup>5</sup>

There are also reports, stating that women are trafficked for prostitution.

---

<sup>1</sup> Constitution of the Republic of Estonia, <http://www.president.ee/en/republic-of-estonia/the-constitution/index.html>

<sup>2</sup> Estonia Human Rights Report, <http://www.ncbuy.com/reference/country/humanrights.html?code=en&sec=5>

<sup>3</sup> Ministry of Social Affairs, publication on Gender pay gap in Estonia 2011.

<sup>4</sup> Penal Code of the Republic of Estonia (Karistusseadustik), <https://www.riigiteataja.ee/akt/104042012003>

<sup>5</sup> Estonian Human Rights Report

The Estonian Women's Studies and Resource Centre, Civil Training Center, Round Table of Harju County Women, and other non-governmental organizations (NGOs) are working to promote women's rights in Estonia.

Racial and Ethnic Discrimination

During the years of the country's forced annexation by the Soviet Union, large numbers of non-Estonians, predominantly ethnic Russians, were encouraged to migrate to the country to work as labourers and administrators. These immigrants and their descendants made up approximately one-third of the total population, about 40 percent of whom were born in the country.

The Law on Cultural Autonomy provides for the protection of cultures of citizens belonging to minority groups. Some non-citizens alleged that the law is discriminatory, because it restricts cultural autonomy only to citizens; however, non-citizens may participate fully in ethnic organizations, and the law includes subsidies for cultural organizations. In districts where more than one-half of the population speak a language other than Estonian, the law entitles inhabitants to receive official information in that language. All residents, whether or not they were citizens, could complain directly to the State Court about alleged violations of human or constitutional rights. The State Court justices review each case. All decisions are issued in Estonian, but if a complaint is received in a language other than Estonian (usually Russian), the court provides a translation.

However, some non-citizen residents, particularly ethnic Russians, continue to allege job, salary, and housing discrimination because of Estonian language requirements. According to Amnesty International, linguistic minorities face discrimination in a number of areas, especially in employment and education. Migrants were exposed to harassment by state officials and attacks by extremist groups. Criminal investigations into allegations of excessive use of force by police were dismissed. Also Estonian Security Police (Kaitsepolitsei) made allegations against the Legal Information Centre for Human Rights (LICHR), which it claims is widely seen as an attempt to misrepresent the organization and to undermine its work.<sup>6</sup>

---

<sup>6</sup> Wikipedia: Human Rights in Estonia, http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Human\_rights\_in\_Estonia#cite\_note-humarightswatch1-2

The United Nations Special Rapporteur on racism, reporting on a visit to Estonia in September 2007, expressed his concern at the conditions of the Russian-speaking minority. The Rapporteur noted a high level of discrimination particularly in the field of employment, where Russian speakers suffer unemployment rates almost twice as high as among ethnic Estonians. The Rapporteur urged the government to take measures to facilitate the naturalization process of stateless people.

The government started to implement the “New Strategy for Integration of Society (2008-2013)”, which aims at improving knowledge of the Estonian language among those who do not speak it as a first language, providing free language courses for citizenship applicants and for a number of different groups of workers.<sup>7</sup>

Workers from minority groups faced regular monitoring of their Estonian language proficiency by the Language Inspectorate, a state agency charged with overseeing the implementation of the Language Act. According to the data made public in 2008, and referring to 2007, around 97 per cent of the teachers in Russian schools and kindergartens checked by the Inspectorate failed the controls. Local media and organizations raised concerns about the discriminatory character of the linguistic requirements.<sup>8</sup>

According to Human Rights Watch report, the organisation did not find systematic, serious abuses of human rights in the area of citizenship. Non-citizens in Estonia were guaranteed basic rights under the Constitution of Estonia. However there were some problems concerning the successful integration of some who were permanent residents at the time Estonia gained independence.<sup>9</sup>

The President's roundtable continued to seek practical solutions to the problems of non-citizens. The Government continued implementing an integration program aimed at fostering the integration of the non-Estonian-speaking population into society. At least 10 NGOs developed and implemented local programs to assist the integration of non-Estonians into society.<sup>10</sup>

Sexual Orientation-Based Discrimination

---

<sup>7</sup> Amnesty International's Report 2009, <http://report2009.amnesty.org/en/regions/europe-central-asia/estonia>

<sup>8</sup> Amnesty International's Report 2009

<sup>9</sup> Human Rights Watch, Integrating Estonia's Non-Citizen Minority, <http://www.hrw.org/en/reports/1993/10/01/integrating-estonia-s-non-citizen-minority>

<sup>10</sup> Estonia Human Rights Report

Homosexual sex, which was illegal in the Soviet Union, was legalized in Estonia in 1992. Homosexuals are not banned from military service and there are no laws discriminating them.

As an obligation for acceptance into the European Union, Estonia transposed an EU directive into its own laws banning discrimination based on sexual orientation in employment from 1 May 2004. The Law on Equal Treatment, which entered into force on 1 January 2009, prohibits discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation in areas other than employment, such as health care, social security, education and the provision of goods and services.<sup>11</sup>

Since 2006, the Penal Code prohibits public incitement to hatred on the basis of sexual orientation. There are several gay clubs in Tallinn. Pride parades have been organised since 2004. From 6 June to 12 June 2011, Estonia hosted Baltic Pride, a festival to promote greater support and awareness for LGBT people.

However several surveys and practical cases showed that there is a high level of discrimination against gay, lesbian and bisexual people in Estonia. They also showed that the households headed by same-sex couples are not eligible for the same legal protections available to opposite-sex couples.

In June 2006, Dutch Ambassador to Estonia Hans Glaubitz requested he be transferred to the Dutch consulate in Montreal, Canada after ongoing homophobic and racial verbal abuse being hurled against his partner, an Afro-Cuban dancer named Raúl García Lao, by citizens in the capital of Tallinn. The incident made international headlines. A released statement by the Estonian authorities stated that they "regretted the incidents very much".<sup>12</sup>

There is currently no legal recognition of either same-sex marriage or civil union in Estonia. However, the launch of a new Family Law proposal by the Estonian Ministry of Justice, which explicitly declared marriage to be an institution between a man and a woman, provoked a public debate on this issue starting from December 2005. The public debate was called by the Ministry of Social Affairs, which said it had reservations about the draft law.

---

<sup>11</sup> Country Report: Estonia, 2010, On Measures to Combat Discrimination, http://www.non-discrimination.net/content/media/2010-EE-Summary%20country%20Report%20LN\_FINAL.pdf

<sup>12</sup> The Guardian: Ambassador Quits Estonia Over Gay Abuse, <http://www.guardian.co.uk/world/2006/jun/08/gayrights.nickpatonwalsh>

The public debate brought about a significant response from LGBT rights groups, which opposed the Family Law proposal and urged the government to not discriminate between same-sex and heterosexual couples in marriage, stating that, "We call on the government to drop a clause in the draft law on the family, which does not allow the registration of same-sex marriages or partnerships". On January 4, 2006, five Estonian NGOs supporting gay rights issued a press release asking for the government to draft a new partnership law that would give same-sex couples equal rights with heterosexual couples.<sup>13</sup>

On the other hand, various conservative politicians claimed that Estonia was not yet ready for same-sex marriage, and that there is no need to create a separate law on same-sex unions since existing laws already imply the protection of some of these unions (even though there is no explicit legal mention of same-sex unions).<sup>14</sup>

In July 2008, the Ministry of Justice announced that it was drafting a law on registered partnership for same-sex couples. The law, which was initially expected to come into force in 2009, was intended to provide a number of rights for same-sex couples, such as inheritance and shared property ownership. The law had the support of most factions in Estonia's Parliament.

The Ministry of Justice studied proposals for the recognition of unmarried couples, including same-sex couples. A comprehensive report was released in July 2009 which looked at three options: the recognition of unregistered cohabitation, the creation of a partnership registry, and the opening of marriage to same-sex couples. It left the decision of which model to implement up to the legislature and other "stakeholders". On July 1, 2010 a new family law was passed, defining marriage as between a man and a woman and declaring unions between members of the same sex "null and void". Prime Minister Andrus Ansip was quoted as saying, "I do not believe that Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania would soon accept same-sex marriage in the eyes of the law".

On May 25, 2011, Chancellor of Justice Indrek Teder requested that the Ministry of Justice to introduce civil partnership law. He found that unrecognising same-sex relationships is contrary to the constitution of Estonia. Thereafter the subject of partnership law again became an actual political topic in Estonia. The Reform Party and the Social democratic Party agree to introduce a partnership law, conservative the Union of Pro Patria and Res Publica is still against it. The Centre Party is supporting to discuss it. The proposal is expected to be drafted this year.<sup>15</sup>

---

<sup>13</sup> Estonian Gays Want Right to Wed, <http://www.sawfnews.com/lifestyle/5630.aspx>

<sup>14</sup> UK Gay News, First Test of Tolerance and Common European Values in Estonia for Gays, <http://www.ukgaynews.org.uk/Archive/2006jan/1002.htm>

Disability-Based Discrimination

While the Estonian Constitution provides for the protection of persons with disabilities against discrimination, and both the Government and some private organizations provided them with financial assistance, little has been done to enable persons with disabilities to participate normally in public life. There is no public access law, but some effort was made to accommodate persons with disabilities; for example, ramps were installed at curbs on new sidewalk construction, and public transportation firms acquired some vehicles that are accessible, as have some taxi companies. The law allows for persons with serious sight, hearing, or speech impediments to become naturalized citizens without having to pass an examination on the Constitution and language.<sup>16</sup>

There is also a discrimination problem regarding the HIV-positive members of the society. In 2011, the Estonian Network of PIWH <sup>17</sup>(People Infected with HIV) did an exhaustive study on the stigmatization index of HIV-positive individuals in Estonia. The results of the study were quite unpleasant – in general HIV-positive individuals are often being verbally and physically abused, discriminated (8% of HIV-positives were not given the medical care they required and were entitled to) and threatened.

ii. According to § 27 of the Constitution of the Republic of Estonia: „the family, being fundamental to the preservation and growth of the nation and as the basis of society shall be protected by the state. Spouses have equal rights. Parents have the right and the duty to raise and care for their children. The protection of parents and children shall be provided by law. The family has a duty to care for its needy members”.<sup>18</sup>

---

<sup>15</sup> Wikipedia: Recognition of Same-Sex Unions in Estonia, http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Recognition\_of\_same-sex\_unions\_in\_Estonia#cite\_note-0

<sup>16</sup> Estonian Human Rights Report

<sup>17</sup> The study on the stigmatisation indice of HIV positive individuals in Estonia -
http://www.ehpv.ee/Docs/HIV\_pos\_stigma\_uurimuse\_raport\_12052011.pdf

<sup>18</sup> Constitution of the Republic of Estonia, Clause 27.

Though the term “family” is not defined neither by the Constitution, nor by the Family Law Act, it is generally determined as a relationship between spouses. The term “family life” also includes non-marital partnership between a man and a woman, a relationship between a child and his/her biological and/or foster parents and the relations between other relatives. According to the Estonian Child Protection Act, one parent family is equal to full family.<sup>19</sup>

According to the Estonian statistics, the average marital age of men is 30,4 years, while the average marital age of women is 27,9 years.<sup>20</sup>

iii. The principle of protecting children in Estonia has always given priority to the interests of the child. Child protection is ensured by national, local and social authorities. All the authorities and institutions dealing with the promotion of welfare of people living in Estonia must observe the interests of the child in their activities.

In Estonia, child protection is organised on three levels: local, county and state level. The local level (city or rural municipality) is the first level to deal with child protection and assistance. Decisions concerning all Estonian children are made at the state level. The county level between these two levels assists and monitors the local level in guaranteeing and executing the child protection and assists the state level in carrying out child protection tasks.<sup>21</sup> Several important steps have been taken to strengthen the child protection system in Estonia. Since 1 January 2009, there is a common European helpline 116,111 which can be used to notify about a child in danger. The European hotline number for missing children 116 000 was launched at the beginning of 2011. The hotline enables to pass on information about missing children, the counsellors give preliminary advice how to act in the situation and carry out crisis counselling. The hotline works closely in co-operation with Police and Border Guard Board.<sup>22</sup> In 2010 the Department of Children and Families was established in the Ministry of Social Affairs. In the same year the special Departments for Child Protection were opened in the Estonian Police and Border Guard Board Prefectures. On 19 March 2011 the position of the Ombudsman for Children was created, when the Chancellor of Justice took over the tasks to protect and promote children's rights. The Ombudsman for Children in Estonia is the Chancellor of Justice, Indrek Teder. To fulfil the tasks of the

---

<sup>19</sup> Child Protection Act of the Republic of Estonia (Eesti Vabariigi Lastekaitse seadus), Clause 26, <https://www.riigiteataja.ee/akt/121032011050>

<sup>20</sup> Statistics Estonia, Statistical Yearbook of Estonia 2011.

<sup>21</sup> The Ombudsman for Children in Estonia, <http://lasteombudsman.ee/en/child-protection-system-in-estonia>

<sup>22</sup> Lasteabi.ee, <http://www.lasteabi.ee/eng>

Ombudsman for Children, there is the Children's Rights Department in the Office of the Chancellor of Justice which employs 4 persons.<sup>23</sup>

Clause 10 of the Estonian Child Protection Act importantly establishes the principle of non-discrimination. Children have an equal right to receive assistance and care and to develop, regardless of their gender or ethnic origin, regardless of whether they live in a two-parent family or single-parent family, whether they are adopted or under curatorship, whether they are born in wedlock or out of wedlock, or whether they are healthy, ill or disabled. The child also has the right to participate in the development of child protection programmes either personally or through a representative selected by the child. The principle of taking the child's opinion into consideration and the principle of involvement are reflected in Clauses 11 and 16 of the Child Protection Act.<sup>24</sup> At the same time, child protection activists in Estonia, the Institute of Human Rights and the Chancellor of Justice have pointed to the need to modernise the Child Protection Act. Therefore, the Ministry of Social Affairs has started analysing the Child Protection Act and drawing up the concept for the new Act.

In Estonia, several strategy documents on children have been adopted. The Strategy for Guaranteeing the Rights of Children 2004–2008 was the first development plan which focused on the welfare and life of children, and one of its important outcomes is also improved cooperation between different areas and ministries in ensuring the rights of children. In the course of implementing the strategy, several other development plans and strategy documents on the rights and welfare of children were also drawn up. For example, in 2005 the Government approved the conception of child protection aimed at creating an integrated system for protecting the rights of children and obtaining proposals for amending laws and regulations in this area (e.g. the Family Law Act). In 2010, the Ministry of Social Affairs has started drawing up the development plan for children and families 2011–2020, which aims to ensure better protection of the rights of children as well as raising the quality of life of families.<sup>25</sup>

Supervision over compliance with the rights of children is exercised by the Ombudsman for Children. His job is to protect the rights of children in their relations with the individuals

---

<sup>23</sup> The Ombudsman for Children in Estonia

<sup>24</sup> Child Protection Act of the Republic of Estonia

<sup>25</sup> ENOC (European Network of Ombudspersons for Children), Estonia: Children's Rights References in the Universal Periodic Reviews, <http://www.crin.org/enoc/resources/infodetail.asp?id=23806>

and authorities that perform public functions. The Ombudsman's task is also to ensure that all those who make decisions affecting children are guided by their best interests and take into account the opinions of children. The Ombudsman for Children helps to make the voices of children heard by decision-makers. He has recently released his first report on the protection of children and children's rights in Estonia. According to the report, one in four adults and one in six children in Estonia has never heard of the notion of children's rights. Also, approximately 25 percent of parents do not consider physical punishment of children to constitute domestic violence. In his statement coinciding with the International Child Protection Day, Ombudsman said that physical punishment of children should be clearly prohibited by the law and parents must learn to use alternative correction methods. The report also points out that every tenth child has witnessed violence at home, while around 50 percent have been bullied at school at least once in their life. The Ombudsman for Children Indrek Teder noted that the problems revealed in the report require consistent, deliberate and systematic attention.<sup>26</sup>

Several campaigns and information activities have been carried out and debates in the media have been organised in order to raise the awareness of the public about noticing mistreatment of children and notifying and preventing it. The representatives of Children's Rights Department in the Office of the Chancellor of Justice are carrying out special campaigns and debates, supervising the film festivals and organize events to raise the public awareness about children's rights in Estonia. An important role in child protection in Estonia is also played by non-governmental organisations which in close cooperation with the state help to guarantee the rights of children and provide services to children and families.<sup>27</sup>

iv. Chapter IX of the Constitution of the Republic of Estonia states that the procedure for the relations of the Republic of Estonia with other states and with international organisations shall be provided by law. Foreign relations can take place as participation of Estonia in the international legislative drafting or as everyday operative activities in organising relations between countries via negotiations and correspondence. Foreign relations are managed by the foreign relations bodies – the Riigikogu, the President of the

---

<sup>26</sup> ERR News: Justice Chancellor Introduces First Report on Children's Rights, <http://news.err.ee/society/c003d85d-fd5c-4878-b121-4d2b56b9bc72>

<sup>27</sup> ENOC

Republic, the Government of the Republic, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and other ministries within their areas of government. Foreign relations are also regulated by the principles and rules of the international law. The relevant rules of the international law become rules of the Estonian legal system by signing or ratification of international agreements.<sup>28</sup>

According to the Estonian Foreign Relations Act, the right to initiate the ratification of the international treaties belongs to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. If any other ministry or the State Chancellery considers it necessary to ratify any international treaty, it should present the proposal to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and if the answer is positive, the respective preparation steps should be taken. Depending on whether the Republic of Estonia is negotiating an entirely new international agreement or acceding to the already existing international treaty, the preparation steps are different.

In the first case the required negotiations should be conducted to prepare the text of the agreement. In the case of acceding to the international treaty, the already existing text of the treaty should be analyzed and translated into Estonian and the draft explanatory note should be prepared. All the required documents should be presented to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, which controls their accordance to the Estonian legal acts.<sup>29</sup> The international treaties are then signed by the Government of the Republic. Those treaties that need ratification are presented to the Riigikogu. The same rule applies to the agreements changing the state borders, agreements requiring an approval, amendment or cancellation of Estonian laws in order to be applied, agreements by which the Republic of Estonia joins with international organisations and associations and the agreements by which the Republic of Estonia takes military or proprietary obligations. The Riigikogu ratifies agreements via approving a law and the ratification law is published in the State Gazette. International treaties ratified by the Riigikogu are signed by the President of the Republic of Estonia; those ratified by the Government can be signed either by the Prime Minister or by the Minister of Foreign Affairs. The note concerning the entry into force is signed by the Minister of Foreign Affairs or the respective authorized person. The date of entry into force is specified in the treaty.

---

<sup>28</sup> The Estonian State Portal, Foreign Relations and International Agreements, https://www.eesti.ee/eng/riik/valissuhted\_ja\_valislepingud/

<sup>29</sup> Estonian Ministry of Foreign Affairs, <http://www.vm.ee/?q=node/4518#II>

The Republic of Estonia does not sign any such international agreements that are in discrepancy with the Constitution. An international agreement can be in discrepancy with an Estonian legal act regulating the same matter and in this case the international agreement is taken as a basis for activities and decisions.<sup>30</sup>

The relationship between State law and international treaties is monalistic.

Estonia ratified the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child on 21st October 1991 with no reservations.

v. Estonia is the state member of European Union since the year 2004.

According to the Estonian Ministry of Justice 2012-2013 year plan, the legal analysis and draft explanation note for the implementation of Directive 2011/93/EU of the European Parliament and the European Council of 13 December 2011 should be prepared by the Ministry of Justice Department of Criminal Law and Criminal Procedure during 2012-2013, to be then presented to the State Government.<sup>31</sup>

2 THE LANZAROTE CONVENTION

i. Estonia ratified the European Convention on Human Rights in 1996.

ii. Estonia signed the Lanzarote Convention September 17, 2008, but has not ratified it so far. However, according to the Estonian Ministry of Justice 2012-2013 year plan, the legal analysis and draft explanation note for the implementation of the Lanzarote Convention together with Directive 2011/93/EU of the European Parliament and the European Council of 13 December 2011 should be prepared by the Ministry of Justice Department of Criminal Law and Criminal Procedure during 2012-2013, to be then presented to the State Government.

II NATIONAL LEGISLATION

---

<sup>30</sup> Estonian Ministry of Foreign Affairs

<sup>31</sup> The Ministry of Justice of Estonia 2012-2013 Year Plan,
<http://www.just.ee/orb.aw/class=file/action=preview/id=56077/Justiitsministeeriumi+t%F6%F6plaan+astaks+2012.pdf>

1 GENERAL PRINCIPLES OF THE JURISDICTION

i. Estonians are one of the longest-settled European people and have lived along the Baltic Sea for over 5,000 years. The Estonians were an independent nation until the 13th century A.D. The country was subsequently conquered by Denmark, Germany, Poland, Sweden, and finally Russia, whose defeat of Sweden in 1721 resulted in the Uusikaupunki Peace Treaty, granting Russia rule over what became modern Estonia.

Independence remained out of reach for Estonia until the collapse of the Russian empire during World War I. Estonia declared itself an independent democratic republic on February 24, 1918. In 1920, by the Peace Treaty of Tartu, Soviet Russia recognized Estonia's independence and renounced in perpetuity all rights to its territory.

The first constitution of the Republic of Estonia was adopted in 1920 and established a parliamentary form of government.<sup>32</sup> The parliament Riigikogu (State Assembly) elected a Riigivanem who acted both as Head of Government and Head of State. During the Era of Silence political parties were banned and the parliament was not in session between 1934 and 1938 as the country was ruled by decree by Konstantin Päts, who was elected as the first President of Estonia in 1938. In 1938 a new constitution was passed and Riigikogu was convened once again, this time bicamerally, consisting of Riigivolikogu (upper house) and Riiginõukogu (lower house), both meaning State Council in direct translation.<sup>33</sup> Estonia's independence lasted for 22 years, during which time Estonia guaranteed cultural autonomy to all minorities, including its small Jewish population, an act that was unique in Western Europe at the time.

Leading up to World War II (WWII), Estonia pursued a policy of neutrality. However, the Soviet Union forcibly incorporated Estonia as a result of the Molotov-Ribbentrop Pact of 1939, in which Nazi Germany gave control of Estonia, Latvia, and Lithuania to the Soviet Union in return for control of much of Poland. In August 1940, the U.S.S.R. proclaimed Estonia a part of the Soviet Union as the Estonian Soviet Socialist Republic (E.S.S.R.).

In the late 1980s, looser controls on freedom of expression under Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev reignited the Estonians' call for self-determination. In November 1988, Estonia's

---

<sup>32</sup> U.S. Department of State, Diplomacy in Action, Estonia, <http://www.state.gov/r/pa/ei/bgn/5377.htm>

<sup>33</sup> Wikipedia: Politics of Estonia, http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Politics\_of\_Estonia

Supreme Soviet passed a declaration of sovereignty; in 1990, the name of the Republic of Estonia was restored, and during the August 1991 coup in the U.S.S.R., Estonia declared full independence. The U.S.S.R. Supreme Soviet recognized independent Estonia on September 6, 1991. Unlike the experiences of Latvia and Lithuania, Estonia's revolution ended without blood spilled. After more than 3 years of negotiations, on August 31, 1994, the armed forces of the Russian Federation withdrew from Estonia.<sup>34</sup>

In 1992, a constitutional assembly introduced amendments to the 1938 constitution. After the draft constitution was approved by popular referendum, it came into effect July 3, 1992. Under the constitution adopted on June 28, 1992, Estonia has a parliamentary system of government, with a prime minister as chief executive.<sup>35</sup> Politics in modern Estonia takes place in a framework of a parliamentary representative democratic republic, whereby the Prime Minister of Estonia is the head of government, and of a multi-party system. Legislative power is vested in the Estonian parliament. Executive power is exercised by the Government which is led by the Prime Minister. The Judiciary is independent of the executive and the legislature.<sup>36</sup>

The President is elected indirectly by parliament or, if no candidate wins a two-thirds majority in parliament, by an electoral college composed of members of parliament and of local councils' representatives. Estonia holds presidential elections every 5 years. The next presidential election will be in 2016. The President serves a maximum of two terms.<sup>37</sup> As Estonia is a parliamentary republic, the President is mainly a symbolic figurehead and holds no executive power. The President is obliged to suspend his (or her) membership in any political party for the term in office. Upon assuming office, the authority and duties of the President in all other elected or appointed offices terminate automatically.<sup>38</sup>

Parliamentary elections take place every 4 years; members are elected by direct ballot in local districts and by proportional representation. A party must gather at least 5% of the votes to take a seat in parliament. Citizens 18 years of age or older may vote in parliamentary elections and be members of political parties. EU citizens who are 18 years of age or older

---

<sup>34</sup> U.S. Department of State

<sup>35</sup> Estonian Government,

http://www.mongabay.com/reference/country\_studies/estonia/GOVERNMENT.html

<sup>36</sup> Wikipedia: Politics in Estonia

<sup>37</sup> U.S. Department of State

<sup>38</sup> President of the Republic of Estonia, <http://www.president.ee/en/>

and registered in the population register may vote in European Parliament elections and if they are registered in a local district population register, they may also vote in local elections. In addition, non-citizen long-term residents may vote in local elections, although they may not run for office.

After parliamentary elections, the president traditionally asks the party with the most votes to form a new government. The president chooses the prime minister - usually the leader of the largest party or coalition in the parliament--with the consent of the parliament to supervise the work of the government. The Estonian Government has 12 ministers.

At the local level, Estonians elect government councils by proportional representation. The individual councils vary in size, but election laws stipulate minimum size requirements depending on the population of the municipality.

Estonia's Supreme Court, the Riigikohus, has 19 justices, all of whom receive lifetime tenure appointments. The parliament appoints the chief justice on nomination by the president. Estonians may vote via the Internet in local, Estonian parliamentary elections, and European Parliament elections.<sup>39</sup>

ii. Human rights in Estonia are acknowledged as generally respected by the government. Individuals are guaranteed basic rights under the Constitution, legislative acts, and treaties relating to human rights ratified by the Estonian government.<sup>40</sup> The Constitution opens with a set of general provisions and a forty-eight-article section establishing the fundamental rights, liberties, and duties of citizens. Freedom of expression and assembly, freedom of information, the right to petition the courts, and the right to health care are all guaranteed. Censorship and discrimination on the basis of nationality, gender, religion, or political belief are forbidden.<sup>41</sup>

Estonia is a party to the United Nations (UN) Conventions on Human Rights and is dedicated to protecting and promoting human rights and fundamental freedoms in Estonia and through international organisations. Expanding the observance of principles of human rights, democracy and rule of law, as well as the development of international law, is one of Estonia's five foreign policy priorities. Estonia's particular focus is on supporting freedom

---

<sup>39</sup> U.S. Department of State

<sup>40</sup> Wikipedia: Human Rights in Estonia

<sup>41</sup> Estonian Government

of expression and media and issues related to the rights of women, children and indigenous peoples. Estonia places a high importance on close co-operation with organisations working to promote human rights. It is in the running to be a member of the United Nations (UN) Human Rights Council from 2013-2015 because it would like to make more effective the protection, advancement, and awareness of human rights and fundamental freedoms through international channels and steps.<sup>42</sup>

Estonia's membership in international organisation and its bilateral relations provides it with a number of opportunities to address the protection, promotion, as well as violations of human rights. Estonia is actively engaged with human rights issues within the framework of the European Union (EU), UN, Organisation for Security and Co-operation in Europe (OSCE), and the Council of Europe.

Within the EU Common Foreign and Security Policy, Estonia has focused on keeping its human rights priorities on the EU agenda and also served as a representative of the EU in negotiations on these topics with third countries in the UN. The EU has defined human rights as an important foreign policy area and Estonia has supported the achievement of human rights goals that are important to the EU, including abolishing the death penalty and eliminating violence against women.

Over the years, Estonia has intensified its human rights-related work in the UN. Estonia was the chair of the Consultative Committee of the UN Development Fund for Women (UNIFEM) from 2007-2009, and an Estonian expert was a member of the UN Permanent Forum on Indigenous Issues from 2005-2007. For more than ten years Estonia has also made regular voluntary contributions for promoting human rights, including the rights of women, children, and indigenous peoples. The contributions have supported the activities of the UN Office of the High Commissioner on Human Rights (OHCHR), the UN Children's Fund (UNICEF), the UN Development Programme (UNDP), the UN Population Fund (UNFPA), the UN Development Fund for Women (UNIFEM), the UN Girls' Education Initiative (UNGEI), and the UN Fund for Indigenous Populations.<sup>43</sup>

---

<sup>42</sup> Estonian Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Estonia as a Candidate for the UN Human Rights Council, <http://www.vm.ee/?q=node/10668>

<sup>43</sup> Estonian Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Human Rights and Estonia, http://www.vm.ee/?q=en/human\_rights

iii. Estonia has a three-level court system. County courts and administrative courts adjudicate matters in the first instance. Appeals against decisions of courts of first instance shall be heard by courts of second instance. Courts of appeal are courts of second instance (sometimes also called circuit courts or district courts). The courts of appeal are situated in Tartu and Tallinn. The Supreme Court, situated in Tartu, is the court of the highest instance.

A statement of claim is filed with the court of first instance, an appeal with the court of second instance and an appeal in cassation with the court of third or the highest instance. A matter shall be heard in the Supreme Court only after all previous court instances have been passed. The filing of an appeal is governed by respective codes of court procedure.<sup>44</sup>

When a person thinks that his/her human rights have been violated, he/she should address a court (normally an administrative court) to establish an infringement. It is possible to demand the elimination of the violation or compensation for the damages.

When a person has gone through all the instances of the court of the Republic of Estonia but has not achieved the desired result, he/she has the right to turn to the European Court of Human Rights. A number of requirements must be met before that. It is important that all national instances of the court be addressed, that the appeal be against a country that has joined the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, and that the violation has taken place after joining the convention on 16 April 1996.<sup>45</sup> The court in Strasbourg can establish whether the country has violated a person's fundamental rights, but it cannot annul judgments of Estonian courts. However, the judgement of the European Court of Human Rights may later be a basis for a review procedure in the Supreme Court.<sup>46</sup>

According to the Constitution of the Republic of Estonia, the Supreme Court is the highest court in Estonia and shall review court judgments by way of cassation proceedings. The Supreme Court is also the court of constitutional review, i.e. the constitutional court.

The Supreme Court employs 19 judges. All judges (except the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court) administer justice in one of three Chambers: the Civil Chamber, the Criminal

---

<sup>44</sup> Estonian Court System, <http://www.kohus.ee/6908>

<sup>45</sup> Eesti.ee, Violation of Human Rights, https://www.eesti.ee/eng/topics/citizen/oigusabi/mida\_teha\_voi\_kuhu\_ja\_kellele\_kaevata\_kui/inimoiguste\_rikkumine

<sup>46</sup> Supreme Court of Estonia, http://www.riigikohus.ee/vfs/1264/Riigikohus\_brozh2011\_ENG\_www.pdf

Chamber or the Administrative Law Chamber. The Chief Justice of the Supreme Court is ex officio the Chairman of the Constitutional Review Chamber.

The Supreme Court adjudicates constitutional review cases either at the sessions of the Constitutional Review Chamber or sitting en banc. Constitutional Review Chamber hears cases in panels of at least three members. By way of constitutional review the Supreme Court verifies the conformity of legislation of general application, refusal to issue an instrument of legislation of general application or an international agreement with the Constitution. In addition, the Constitutional Review Chamber of the Supreme Court has several more specific functions. For example, the Riigikogu may request from the Supreme Court an opinion on the interpretation of the Constitution in conjunction with the European Union law, if the interpretation of the Constitution is of decisive importance in the passing of a draft Act which is necessary for the fulfilment of obligations of the Member State of the European Union.

The following can have recourse to the Supreme Court by way of constitutional review

- the President of the Republic,
- the Chancellor of Justice,
- local government councils and courts.

The Constitutional Review Court Procedure Act does not provide for the possibility to address the Supreme Court with individual constitutional complaints. Nevertheless, in its practice the Supreme Court has accepted the possibility of individual complaints in the cases when a person has no other effective possibilities to exercise the constitutional right to the protection of the courts.

Pursuant to the Constitutional Review Court Procedure Act, the Supreme Court shall adjudicate a constitutional review case within four months as of the receipt of the appeal.<sup>47</sup>

iv. There are four Chambers in the Supreme Court: the Civil Chamber, the Criminal Chamber, the Administrative Law Chamber and the Constitutional Review Chamber. Every justice (except the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court) belongs either to the Civil, the Criminal or the Administrative Law Chamber. There are six justices in the Criminal

---

<sup>47</sup> Supreme Court of Estonia

Chamber of the Supreme Court. Since 2009 the Chairman of the Criminal Chamber is Priit Pikamäe.

According to the Criminal Procedure Code of Estonia, the judicial proceedings for alleged crime are started after the authorities have been informed. This information can be received in various ways such as through a written report given to the Public Prosecutor's Office or an investigating body or an oral report which will be written down later on or a publication in the press.<sup>48</sup> After receiving such information, pre-trial investigation is carried out by entitled institutions including the Police and Border Guard Board, Security Police Board, Tax and Customs Board, Competition Board, the Prisons Department of the Ministry of Justice and the prison, within the limits of their competence.<sup>49</sup>

The main goal of the pre-trial investigation is to collect evidence with regard to alleged crime. However, the Public Prosecutor's Office and the investigative body have to, as it is usual in a civil law system, collect evidence either against or in favour of the accused. They have this responsibility because the pre-trial procedure is conducted to reach the pure facts.

Having collected the evidence, it is the investigative body that decides whether or not the collected evidence is sufficient enough to continue the proceedings to the Public Prosecutor. Where they decide not to pursue the file, the victim has the right to appeal against this decision initially to the prosecutor and if it has not been changed, the applicant can appeal against the public prosecutor's decision, via an advocate, to the circuit court. Where the collected evidence is sufficient according to the investigative authority, they prepare a reasoned order on charging the person under investigation with a criminal offence. The prosecutor is responsible for ensuring the legality and efficiency of the pre-trial investigation. When it is needed he or she has the authority to issue orders to investigative bodies or to annul or to amend the orders of them and even to remove the officer from the investigation.

The Public Prosecutor is the entitled authority to complete pre-trial investigation by verifying the summary of charges. He/she has the power to approve or amend the summary of charges and if he or she thinks that there is a lack of evidence, he/she has also the power to terminate the proceedings. On the other hand, the prosecutor has the right to annul the

---

<sup>48</sup> Criminal Justice in Estonia, http://www.justice.gov.tr/e-journal/pdf/CRIMINAL\_JUSTICE.pdf

<sup>49</sup> Estonian Code of Criminal Procedure (Kriminaalmenetluse seadus), <https://www.riigiteataja.ee/akt/109072012005>

order of the investigator claiming that there is no need to proceed. In that case the prosecutor him/herself can resume the criminal proceedings. The prosecutor, who receives a criminal file, shall declare the pre-trial proceedings completed, require the investigative body to perform additional acts, if it is needed. If it is necessary, the prosecutor him/herself shall perform additional acts after the receipt of the file. A copy of the criminal file is given to the criminal defence counsel and submitted for examination. Having submitted the file for examination and thereafter being convinced that the necessary evidence in the criminal matter has been collected, the prosecutor shall prepare the statement of charges.

Having received a statement of charges, the judge at the first instance court holds a preliminary hearing on the following grounds:

- 1) in order to apply or to alter the preventive measures;
- 2) to return the statement of charges to the Prosecutor's Office, if it is not prepared in a proper way;
- 3) to decide whether or not it is needed to continue the proceedings (if there is no ground for criminal proceedings, such as the death of a suspect or accused or where an amnesty precludes the imposition of a punishment and so on, the judge decides not to go on proceedings).

If there is no problem to pursue the case according to the preliminary hearing, the hearing shall be held with the participation of all parties including prosecutor, accused, counsel etc. Apart from some exceptions, which are mentioned explicitly in the law, a hearing cannot be held without all parties.

If one of the parties of the case does not agree with the judgement he/she can appeal against it. The right to appeal to the Supreme Court also exists where the second instance court changed or overturned the judgement of the first instance court.

After the appeal proceedings, if the judgement of conviction is made as a result of the hearings, that commission of the criminal offence by the accused is proved, the next step will be the execution of this sentence.<sup>50</sup>

---

<sup>50</sup> Criminal Justice in Estonia

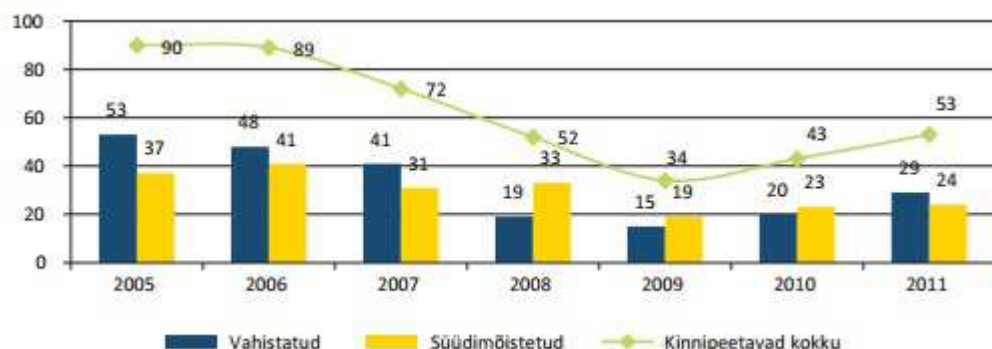

v. The age of criminal liability in Estonia is 14 years. Minors younger than 14 years old are incapable of guilt and all the criminal proceedings against them are terminated on the grounds of their age. If commencement of criminal proceedings is refused or a criminal proceeding is terminated for the reason that the unlawful act was committed by a minor who was incapable of guilt on the grounds of his or her age, the investigative body or Prosecutor's Office shall refer the materials of the criminal matter to the juvenile committee of the place of residence of the minor. If a Prosecutor's Office finds that a minor who has committed a criminal offence in the age of 14 to 18 can be influenced without imposition of a punishment or a sanction prescribed in Clause 87 of the Penal Code, the Prosecutor's Office shall terminate the criminal proceeding by a ruling and refer the criminal file to the juvenile committee of the place of residence of the minor. Prior to referral of materials to a juvenile committee, the nature of the act with the elements of a criminal offence and the grounds for termination of the criminal proceeding shall be explained to the minor and his or her legal representative.

According to the statistics, provided by the Ministry of Justice of Estonia, by the end of the year 2011, there were 53 prisoners of less than 18 years of age in the Estonian prisons - 24 of them were convicted offenders and 29 were those under arrest. The number of the arrested minors was 9 times bigger than that in 2010 and almost 2 times bigger than that in 2009. The number of convicted offenders was pretty much at the same level, as in 2010. Unlike in 2011, in previous years the number of arrested minors was smaller than that of convicted ones.

The following table demonstrates the available statistics regarding prisoners of less than 18 years of age in the Estonian prisons:<sup>51</sup>

---

<sup>51</sup> Vahistatud – persons under arrest, süüdimõistetud – convicted offenders; kinnipeetavad kokku – total number of prisoners.

By the end of 2011, there were 21 boys and 3 girls among the convicted minors (there were no girls at all the year before). There were no convicted offenders of 14 and 15 years of age, 7 of the offenders were 16 and 17 were 17 years old.<sup>52</sup>

According to the information, available on the Estonian Prison Service website, there are currently 80 minors in the Estonian prisons; this is the total number of all the prisoners – both convicted offenders and persons under arrest.<sup>53</sup>

2 SUBSTANTIVE CRIMINAL LAW

2.1 Sexual Abuse

i. The term “sexual activities” is not directly defined by the Estonian national legislation. 7th Division of the Estonian Penal Code criminalizes offences against sexual self-determination – these offences include rape, satisfaction of sexual desire by violence, compelling person to engage in sexual intercourse, compelling person to satisfy sexual desire, sexual intercourse with descendant, sexual intercourse with child and satisfaction of sexual desire with child.<sup>54</sup>

According to the Estonian Supreme Court (Riigikohus) decision nr 3-1-1-95-04, sexual intercourse is defined as the insertion of a male's penis into a female's vagina, but also the insertion of a male's penis into a mouth or anus or the insertion of any other body part or foreign object into a female's vagina. Sexual intercourse is distinguished from the sexual activities not qualified as sexual intercourses by the fact that at least on the one part a genital organ is involved. Other forced sexual activities are criminalized by the Penal Code as the satisfaction of sexual desire by violence. These activities include, for example, masturbation, touching the genitals or other erogenous zones, stripping oneself naked etc. It doesn't matter, if sexual activities are hetero-, homo- or bi-sexual.<sup>55</sup> ii. According to Clause 16 of the Estonian Penal Code, intent is deliberate intent, direct intent or indirect intent.

<sup>52</sup> Ministry of Justice of Estonia, Crime in Estonia in Year 2011, http://www.just.ee/orb.aw/class=file/action=preview/id=57202/Kuritegevus\_Eestis\_2011.pdf

<sup>53</sup> Estonian Prison Service, <http://www.vangla.ee/41291>

<sup>54</sup> Penal Code of the Republic of Estonia

A person is deemed to have committed an act with deliberate intent if the aim of the person is to create circumstances which belong to the necessary elements of an offence and is aware that such circumstances occur or if he or she at least foresees the occurrence of such circumstances. A person is also deemed to have committed an act with deliberate intent if the person assumes that the circumstances which constitute the necessary elements of an offence are an essential prerequisite for the achievement of the aim.

A person is deemed to have committed an act with direct intent if the person knowingly creates circumstances which belong to the necessary elements of an offence and wants or at least tacitly accepts the creation of the circumstances.

A person is deemed to have committed an act with indirect intent if the person foresees the occurrence of circumstances which constitute the necessary elements of an offence and tacitly accepts that such circumstance may occur.

A person is guilty of committing rape, satisfaction of sexual desire by violence, compelling person to engage in sexual intercourse, compelling person to satisfy sexual desire, sexual intercourse with descendant, sexual intercourse with child or satisfaction of sexual desire with child, if the crime was committed with at least indirect intention.<sup>56</sup>

iii. The legal age for engaging in sexual activities in Estonia is 14 years of age. An adult person, who engages in sexual intercourse with a person of less than 14 of age shall always be punished, no matter, whether there was any violence used against a child or not. The Penal Code also states that a person is deemed to be incapable to comprehend if he or she is less than 10 years of age.<sup>57</sup>

---

<sup>55</sup> Penal Code Commentary, p. 412-418

<sup>56</sup> Estonian Penal Code, Clause 56

<sup>57</sup> Estonian Penal Code, Clause 147

The consensual sexual activities between minors are not regulated by the Penal Code. To be held responsible for sexual intercourse with a child, a person has to be at least 18 years of age.

iv. Estonian legal system protects the sexual self-determination of a child, so it doesn't matter, if an adult person, who engages in sexual intercourse or satisfies his sexual desire with a person less than 14 years of age, uses force or threat against a child or takes an advantage of his or her disability – a person under 14 years of age cannot legally consent to sexual activities, so in such cases, sexual abuse of a child is always assumed. The main purpose of criminalizing all the sexual activities with a person less than 14 years of age is to prevent the sexual abuse and exploitation of children and protect their normal development.

v. The crime of incest is regulated by clause 144 of the Penal Code, which criminalizes sexual intercourse with descendant. According to this clause, a parent, a person with the rights of a parent, or a grandparent, who engages in sexual intercourse with his or her child or grandchild shall be punished by up to 5 years' imprisonment.

vi. The Penal Code criminalized the employment of person prohibited, based on law, from working with children. An employer who employs a person for work or service related to children if it is prohibited based on law, or a person authorised to issue activity licences who issues an activity licence for provision of services to children if this is prohibited by law shall be punished by a fine of up to 300 fine units. The same act, if committed by a legal person, is punishable by a fine up to 3200 euros.

2.2 Child Prostitution

vii. Estonia signed the Council of Europe Convention on Action against Human Trafficking on February 3, 2010, but has not ratified the Convention yet. However the Convention was taken as one of the principle international treaties, while drafting the new regulation of the Estonian Penal Code, which contained new human trafficking clauses. For example, the principle from the Article 4, clause b, which states that the consent of a victim of "trafficking in human beings" to the intended exploitation shall be irrelevant, was adopted.<sup>58</sup>

---

<sup>58</sup> The Parliament of Estonia, Karistusseadustiku ja sellega seonduvate seaduste muutmise eelnõu, www.riigikogu.ee/%2F%3Fop%3Ddemsplain%26page%3Dpub\_file%26file\_id%3Dfc4c619a-4b3b-8891-7c60-afda3cd81779%26&ei=ubmTULqXCdCGhQfh74DQBA&usg=AFQjCNFakw9WL2EGwb30oM6Uiddo2

There is no information available, of whether Estonia is planning to ratify the Convention.

viii. According to Lanzarote Convention, the term “child prostitution” shall mean the fact of using a child for sexual activities where money or any other form of remuneration or consideration is given or promised as payment, regardless if this payment, promise or consideration is made to the child or to a third person.

The Estonian Penal Code does not give the explanation to the term „child prostitution“. It is criminalized by the general article of the Penal Code „Trafficking in Human Beings“ and “Human Trafficking with the Purpose of Child Exploitation”.<sup>59</sup>

ix. Estonian national legislation criminalizes the recruiter – the person that coordinates the business of child prostitution. There is currently no specific clause, which would criminalize the user - person that pays to conduct sexual activities with children. Such person may be responsible under any of the clauses of the Penal Code, which criminalize the offences against sexual self-determination (generally either sexual intercourse with child, or satisfaction of sexual desire with child).

The Estonian Social Democratic Party has recently made a preposition to Riigikogu, to add the specific clause to the Penal Code, which would criminalize the actions of a person, who pays or offers to pay with the purpose to conduct sexual activities with a person of less than 18 years of age. The issue has been discussed in June 2012.<sup>60</sup>

2.3 Child Pornography

x. Estonia is a party to the Council of Europe Convention on Cybercrime. The date of signature is November, 23, 2001. The date of ratification is May, 12, 2003.

xi. Estonian national legislation does not directly define the term “child pornography”.

xii. According to clause 178 of the Penal Code, criminal liability is attributed to a person, who manufactures, stores, hands over, displays or makes available in any other manner of pictures, writings or other works or reproductions of works depicting a person of less than

---

ZP1Ww&cad=rja

<sup>59</sup> Estonian Penal Code, Clauses 133 and 175

<sup>60</sup> Karin Kangro, Riigikogu arutas alaealistelt seksi ostmise kriminaliseerimist, <http://www.postimees.ee/865768/riigikogu-arutas-alaealistelt-seksi-ostmise-kriminaliseerimist/>

18 years of age in a pornographic situation, or person of less than 14 years of age in a pornographic or erotic situation.

It is almost compatible with the Article 20 (1.a) to (1.f) of Lanzarote Convention, with the exception of the act of knowingly obtaining access, through information and communication technologies, to child pornography, which is criminalized by section 1.f. of Article 20 of the Lanzarote Convention.

xiii. The availability of child pornography on someone's computer is controlled by the Estonian Police and Border Guard Board. If someone accidentally comes across a pornographic material, depicting a child, in the internet he or she can report this directly to the Police and Border Guard Board or it is also possible to contact the Internet policeman.

xiv. Clause 175 of the Estonian Penal Code criminalizes human trafficking with the purpose of child exploitation, which is among other things "inducing minors to participate as models or actors in pornographic or erotic performances". The national legislation does not highlight and differentiate between recruitment and coercion.

2.4 Corruption of Children

xv. Clause 179 of the Estonian Penal Code criminalizes handing over, displaying or making otherwise knowingly available pornographic works or reproductions thereof to a person of less than 14 years of age, engaging in sexual intercourse in the presence of such person or knowingly sexually enticing such person in any other manner. Any person who performs such act shall be punished by a pecuniary punishment or up to 3 years' imprisonment. A person is guilty, if he had at least indirect intention to commit the crime.

The Act to Regulate Dissemination of Works which Contain Pornography or Promote Violence or Cruelty prohibits dissemination and exhibition to minors of works which contain pornography or promote violence or cruelty and the presence of minors in shops, cinemas, video theatres or on the premises of other places of business (hereinafter specialised places of business) which are licensed to disseminate or exhibit works which contain pornography or promote violence or cruelty. Clause 3 of this legal act states that specialised places of business shall display a sign "prohibited to minors". Upon dissemination outside of specialised places of business of works which contain pornography or promote violence or cruelty: they shall be offered in a manner which prevents examination of the works by minors and the works shall not be displayed in a visible place.

If the rule of law is broken and any work, which contains pornography or promotes violence or cruelty, has been made available or shown to a minor, it is punishable as a misdemeanour, on condition that it was committed with at least indirect intent.<sup>61</sup>

There is no specific term for “causing” in the Estonian Penal Code.

2.5 Solicitation of Children for Sexual Purposes

xvi. The crime of grooming is criminalized as „sexual enticement of children” by Clause 179 of the Estonian Penal Code. It does not specify that the perpetrator should also propose a meeting with the potential child victim and come to the meeting place in order to be accused. If the perpetrator proposes a meeting, it is punishable under the clause 178<sup>1</sup>.

According to the clause 178<sup>1</sup> section 1, making a proposal for meeting a person of less than 18 years of age who was not capable of comprehending the situation, or a person of less than 14 years of age, or concluding an agreement to meet him or her, and performance of an act preparing the meeting, if the aim of the meeting is to commit an offence provided for in Clauses 133, 133<sup>1</sup>, 141 - 146, 175, 178 or § 179 of this Code with respect to the specified person, is punishable by a pecuniary punishment or up to 3 years' imprisonment. Section 2 of the same clause states that that the same act, if committed by a legal person, is punishable by a pecuniary punishment.

xvii. There is a general rule, stated by the Penal Code, that the offenders are principal offenders and accomplices.<sup>62</sup> Clause 22 of the Penal Code defines that the accomplices are abettors and aiders. An abettor is a person who intentionally induces another person to commit an intentional unlawful act. An aider is a person who intentionally provides physical, material or moral assistance to an intentional unlawful act of another person. Unless the accomplice has any special personal characteristics, that means circumstances which constitute a necessary element of an offence prescribed in the Special Part of the Code or another Act and which describe the personal characteristics, aims or motives of an offender., a punishment shall be imposed on an accomplice pursuant to the same provision of law which prescribes the liability of the principal offender.

---

<sup>61</sup> Commentary to the Estonian Penal Code, p 250-251

<sup>62</sup> Clause 20 of the Penal Code

If an accomplice lacks the specific personal characteristics which pursuant to law constitute prerequisites for the liability of the principal offender, a court may mitigate the punishment of an accomplice, as provided by the clause 60 of Penal Code.<sup>63</sup>

The above mentioned rules apply to all the criminal offences, punishable under the Penal Code, including those mentioned in the subsections a, b, c, d and e.

Besides, there is a special clause 133<sup>1</sup>, in the Penal Code, which criminalizes aiding trafficking in human beings, including trafficking in minors. This clause criminalizes such acts as transporting, delivering, shipping, accepting, hiding and housing the victim of human trafficking or aiding human trafficking in any other way.

Clause 175 of the Penal Code criminalizes both inducing a person under 18 years of age to commit or continue committing the crime, to beg, to engage in prostitution or work in similar circumstances and to participate in pornographic or erotic performances or representations, as well as aiding the above mentioned acts.

2.6 Corporate Liability

xviii. Clause 14 of the Estonian Penal Code states that in the cases provided by law, a legal person shall be held responsible for an act which is committed in the interests of the legal person by its body, a member thereof, or by its senior official or competent representative. The provisions of this Act do not apply to the state, local governments or to legal persons in public law. Clause 37 of the Penal Code states that legal persons with passive legal capacity are capable of guilt.

All the provisions, concerning the prosecution of criminal offences, applicable to an individual are also applicable to a legal person. The basis for punishment is also the same: a person, either an individual or a legal person, shall be punished for an act if the act comprises the necessary elements of an offence, is unlawful and the person is guilty of the

---

<sup>63</sup> Clause 60 of the Estonian Penal Code. Mitigation of punishment in cases provided by law

- (1) In the cases specified in the General Part of this Code, a court may mitigate the punishment of a person pursuant to the procedure provided for in subsections (2)–(4) of this section.
- (2) The maximum rate of a mitigated punishment shall not exceed two-thirds of the maximum rate of the punishment provided by law.
- (3) The minimum rate of a mitigated punishment shall be the minimum rate of the corresponding type of punishment provided for in the General Part of this Code.
- (4) If the Special Part of this Code prescribes life imprisonment as a punishment for a criminal offence, an imprisonment for a term of not less than three years shall be imposed in mitigation of the punishment.

commission of the offence.<sup>64</sup> As a result a legal person can also be responsible for the omission and the attempt of crime and the same circumstances precluding unlawfulness (clauses 27-31 of the Penal Code) are applicable to him.<sup>65</sup>

A legal person can be responsible as for criminal offence, so for misdemeanour. However, a legal person is not responsible for all the offences, but can only be responsible under the clauses contained in the Special Part of the Penal Code or any other legal act, where the responsibility of a legal person is specified. These clauses contain a special sentence, which states „ the same act, if committed by a legal person...“. As a matter of fact a legal person is responsible for almost all the offences an individual is responsible for, unless the offence is only possible to be committed by an individual.<sup>66</sup>

In general, a legal person is responsible for the offences, committed by its persons in position of authority: a body, a member thereof, or by its senior official or competent representative. However it can also be responsible for the offence, committed by a regular employee, if the offence is committed under the command or at least the approval of the body or a leading person. In such case the act of taking advantage of another person has to be detected.<sup>67</sup>

In both cases, where the offence was committed by a person in position of authority and by a regular employee, a condition of committing the offence in the interests of a legal person must be met. That means, that the offence has to be committed in the field of this legal persons' activity or at least in the related field of activity. A legal person is not guilty of the offence, which was committed in the person's position of authority own interest or any third party's interest. Neither is it guilty of the offence, which was not related to the employee's work tasks or which was committed outside working hours.<sup>68</sup>

- xix. For criminal offences, committed by legal persons, national legislation imposes criminal liability, generally pecuniary punishment in the amount of 3200 – 16000000 euro. However, a court may also impose the compulsory dissolution on a legal person, who has committed a criminal offence, if commission of criminal offences

---

<sup>64</sup> Clause 2 of the Estonian Penal Code

<sup>65</sup> Commentaries of the Penal Code, p. 77

<sup>66</sup> Commentaries of the Penal Code, p.77-78

<sup>67</sup> Estonian Supreme Court's Decisions, RKKK 3-1-1-82-04, 3-1-1-145-05, 3-1-1-9-08

<sup>68</sup> Estonian Supreme Court's Decision, RKKK 3-1-1-108-03

has become part of the activities of the legal person,<sup>69</sup> for example if a legal person is guilty of trafficking in human beings or manufacturing works involving child pornography or making child pornography available.<sup>70</sup>

For misdemeanours national legislation also imposes criminal liability, generally pecuniary punishment in the amount of 32 - 32000 euro.<sup>71</sup>

xx. Clause 14 section 2 of the Penal Code states that prosecution of a legal person does not preclude prosecution of the natural person who committed the offence. Thus national legislation does not exclude individual liability when there is a corporate liability. Charging an individual, who committed the offence in the interests of a legal person and a legal person itself is a regular case and does not represent the violation of the principle ne bis in idem.<sup>72</sup>

2.7 Aggravating Circumstances

xxi. According to Estonian Penal Code the same aggravating rules apply to all types of crimes.

The general aggravating circumstances are:

- 1) self interest or other base motives;
- 2) commission of the offence with peculiar cruelty, or degradation of the victim;
- 3) commission of the offence knowingly against a person who is less than 12 years of age, pregnant, in an advanced age, in need of assistance or has a severe mental disorder;
- 4) commission of the offence against a person who is in a service, financial or family-related dependent relationship with the offender;
- 5) commission of the offence during a state of emergency or state of war;
- 6) commission of the offence by taking advantage of a public accident or natural disaster;

---

<sup>69</sup> Clause 46 of the Estonian Penal Code

<sup>70</sup> Clause 178 of the Estonian Penal Code

<sup>71</sup> Clause 47 of the Estonian Penal Code

<sup>72</sup> Estonian Supreme Court's Decisions, RKK 3-1-1-7-04, 3-1-1-137-04

- 7) commission of the offence in a manner which is dangerous to the public;
  - 8) causing of serious consequences;
  - 9) commission of the offence in order to facilitate or conceal another offence;
  - 10) commission of the offence by a group;
  - 11) taking advantage of an official uniform or badge in order to facilitate commission of the offence.
- Self interest means that the offender wants to receive any kind of material benefit, which may be money, things, property, freedom from financial obligation etc. This is considered a base motive, because the offender is trying to get the above mentioned, committing the crime. Other base motive is any generally condemned motive, e.g. envy, greed, reckless careerism etc.
  - Peculiar cruelty means that the offender takes pleasure in violence or uses brutal violence, despite victims' suffering. Degradation of the victim means physical or verbal abuse, making the victim do humiliating acts. The act was committed in a cruel and agonizing way if it caused a victim great pain or long-lasting physical impairments.<sup>73</sup>
  - A person younger than 12 years is a minor, a person younger than 10 years old is not capable to comprehend the situation. This aggravating circumstance applies only to offender, who is aware of a victim's age.<sup>74</sup> A person may be in need of assistance, because of his or her age (a child or an old man), health condition, pregnancy, but also a sleeping, drunk, unconscious or for any other reason motionless person.
  - A service dependent relationship means a superior-subordinate relationship in a public service, legal person etc. Financial dependency may be based on a contract, tortious conduct etc. Family-related dependent relationship is based on the relationship of dependency between family members.
  - The state of emergency is declared by Riigikogu on the basis of the President's of the State proposal, in case if the state's constitutional regime is at risk and this risk cannot be overcome without the use of the emergency measures, specified in the State of Emergency Act. The state of emergency can be declared for up to 3 months.

---

<sup>73</sup> Commentary's of the Estonian Penal Code, page 195

<sup>74</sup> Commentary's of the Estonian Penal Code, page 195

The state of war is declared by Riigikogu on the basis of the President's of the State proposal. According to the Constitution of Estonia, in case of the crime of aggression, directed against the state, the state of war can also be declared by the President himself. The state of war lasts until the Riigikogu on the basis of the President's proposal declares an end to it.

The aggravating circumstance is that the offender commits the offence during this period; it's no matter, whether it's the state of emergency or the state of war.

- The public accident may be for example fire, epidemic etc. Natural disaster is a flood, forest fire, drought, storm, downpour etc. The aggravating circumstance is not just the commitment of the offence during the period or in the place of public accident or natural disaster, but taking advantage of it – for example the offender may take an advantage of the fact, that people's attention and efforts are addressed to relieving the disaster.
- A manner, which is dangerous to public, is committing the offence with the use of poisoning, explosion, arson etc, no matter what the final consequences are.
- Causing of serious consequences can be e.g. physical harm (death, health damage).
- Commission of the offence in order to facilitate or conceal another offence is the aggravating circumstance, if the perpetrator operated with a purpose of facilitating or concealing another offence (with a deliberate intent), no matter whether he succeeded or not.
- Commission of the offence by a group is a joint offence. If at least two persons agree to commit an offence jointly, each of them shall be held liable as a principal offender (joint principal offenders). An offence is deemed to be a joint offence also if an act committed by several persons jointly and in agreement comprises the necessary elements of an offence.
- Taking advantage of an official uniform (for example the policeman uniform) or badge (for example a sign) is the facilitation of the commission of the offence. If the uniform or badge was used to hide the crime this is also considered the aggravating circumstance.

2.8 Sanctions and Measures

Criminal offence	Sanction against an individual	Sanction against a legal person
Rape (if committed against a person of less than 18 years of age)	6 to 15 years' imprisonment	-
Satisfaction of sexual desire by violence (if committed against a person of less than 18 years of age)	1 to 10 years' imprisonment.	-
Compelling person to engage in sexual intercourse (if committed against a person of less than 18 years of age)	up to 5 years' imprisonment.	-
Compelling person to satisfy sexual desire (if committed against a person of less than 18 years of age)	up to 5 years' imprisonment	-
Sexual intercourse with descendant	up to 5 years' imprisonment	-
Sexual intercourse with child	up to 5 years' imprisonment	-
Satisfaction of sexual desire with child	up to 5 years' imprisonment	-
Human trafficking (if committed against a person of less than 18 years of age)	3 to 15 years' imprisonment	pecuniary punishment or compulsory dissolution
Aiding human trafficking (if committed against a person of less than 18 years of age)	2 to 10 years' imprisonment	pecuniary punishment or compulsory dissolution
Human trafficking for the purpose of child exploitation	2 to 10 years' imprisonment	pecuniary punishment or compulsory dissolution

Manufacture of works involving child pornography or making child pornography available	pecuniary punishment or up to 3 years' imprisonment	pecuniary punishment or compulsory dissolution
Agreement of sexual purpose for meeting with child	pecuniary punishment or up to 3 years' imprisonment	pecuniary punishment
Sexual enticement of children	pecuniary punishment or up to 3 years' imprisonment	pecuniary punishment

As a supplementary punishment for offences imposed on natural persons, clause 53 of the Penal Code states that if a court convicts a person of a criminal offence and imposes imprisonment for a term of more than three years or life imprisonment, the court may, in the cases provided by law, impose a supplementary punishment according to which the convicted offender is to pay an amount up to the extent of the total value of all the assets of the convicted offender.

Extradition is carried out on the basis of European Convention on Extradition (1957) and its two additional protocols and in some cases on the basis of Convention On Simplified Extradition Procedure Between the Member States of the European Union (1995) and Convention on the Extradition Between the Member States of the European Union (1996). The last two conventions are not considered independent legal acts, but only contain some important aspects, related to extradition procedure between the European Union member states and are based on 1957 year convention.<sup>75</sup>

The Convention on Extradition provides that the Contracting Parties undertake to surrender to each other all persons against whom the competent authorities of the requesting Party are proceeding for an offence or who are wanted by the said authorities for carrying out a sentence or detention order. The Convention is not applied in case of military or political offences. In case of fiscal offences extradition is granted only if the Contracting Parties have so decided in respect of any such offence or category of offences. If the offence for which extradition is requested is punishable by death under the law of the requesting Party, extradition may be refused.<sup>76</sup>

---

<sup>75</sup> Estonian Ministry of Justice, <http://www.just.ee/26326>

xxiii. In the context of the Estonian legal system the sanctions for the crimes against children, mentioned above, are proportionate. The sanction applied to the offender in every particular case depends on the particular specific circumstances and evidence, which the police have managed to collect. It is often discussed among people that the punishments applied to child offenders are not strict enough. However it has to be understood that punishments are not applied for the offender's general tendency, but for the particular crime he has committed.<sup>77</sup>

Besides, Estonia pays much attention on the crime prevention programs. The penalty, applied to paedophile, usually goes in complex with special preventive measures: psychological treatment, the prohibition of visiting websites, created for children; the prohibition of communicating with minors of less than 14 years of age etc. If during the period of probation a person breaks any of those restrictions the probation period will be extended or a person may be sent to jail.<sup>78</sup> Whether the sanctions are effective and dissuasive depends on every particular case: some offenders continue committing child abuse crimes soon after their release, some of them do not. That, however, generally depends on a particular person, not a sanction.

xxv. A court may apply confiscation of the object used to commit an intentional offence if it belongs to the offender at the time of the making of the judgment or ruling. In the cases provided by law, a court may confiscate the substance or object which was the direct object of the commission of an intentional offence, or the substance or object used for preparation of the offence if these belong to the offender at the time of the making of the judgment and confiscation thereof is not mandatory pursuant to law.

---

<sup>76</sup> Estonian Courts, <http://www.kohus.ee/7254>

<sup>77</sup> Prokurör: pedofiilide karistused on piisavad, <http://www.delfi.ee/news/paevauudised/eesti/prokuror-pedofiilide-karistused-on-piisavad.d?id=27338783>

Pille Alaver: pedofiil võib olla kes tahes meie hulgast, <http://www.minut.ee/article.pl?sid=12/03/30/1229242>

<sup>78</sup> Urmo Soonvalt, Pomerants: kohtunikud ei suutu pedofiilide süütegudesse liiga leebelt, <http://www.delfi.ee/news/paevauudised/eesti/pomerants-kohtunikud-ei-suutu-pedofiilide-suutegudesse-liiga-leebelt.d?id=63776930>

As an exception, a court may confiscate the above mentioned objects or substance if it belongs to a third person at the time of the making of the judgment or ruling and the person:

- 1) has, at least through recklessness, aided in the use of the objects or substance for the commission or preparation of the offence,
- 2) has acquired the objects or substance, in full or in the essential part, on account of the offender, as a present or in any other manner for a price which is considerably lower than the normal market price; or
- 3) knew that the objects or substance was transferred to the person in order to avoid confiscation thereof.<sup>79</sup>

In the case of confiscation, the rights of third persons remain in force. The state shall pay compensation to third persons, except in the cases provided for in subsections 83 (3)<sup>80</sup> and (4)<sup>81</sup>, 83<sup>1</sup> (2)<sup>82</sup> and 83<sup>2</sup> (2)<sup>83</sup> of the Penal Code.

Confiscated objects shall be transferred into state ownership or, in the cases provided for in an international agreement, shall be returned.<sup>84</sup> There are no regulations concerning

---

<sup>79</sup> Clause 83 (1), (2), (3) of the Penal Code

<sup>80</sup> Clause 83 section 3 states that as an exception, a court may confiscate the objects or substance specified in subsections (1) and (2) of this section if it belongs to a third person at the time of the making of the judgment or ruling and the person:

- 1) has, at least through recklessness, aided in the use of the objects or substance for the commission or preparation of the offence,
- 2) has acquired the objects or substance, in full or in the essential part, on account of the offender, as a present or in any other manner for a price which is considerably lower than the normal market price; or
- 3) knew that the objects or substance was transferred to the person in order to avoid confiscation thereof.

<sup>81</sup> Clause 83 section 4 states that in the absence of the permission necessary for the possession of an object or substance, such object or substance shall be confiscated.

<sup>82</sup> Clause 83<sup>1</sup> section 2 states that as an exception, a court shall confiscate the assets or substance specified in subsection (1) this section if these belong to a third person at the time of the making of the judgment or ruling, and if:

- 1) these were acquired, in full or in the essential part, on account of the offender, as a present or in any other manner for a price which is considerably lower than the normal market price; or
- 2) the third person knew that that the assets were transferred to the person in order to avoid confiscation.

<sup>83</sup> Clause 83<sup>2</sup> section 2 states that as an exception, a court may confiscate the assets of a third person on the bases and to the extent specified in subsection (1) this section if these belong to the third person at the time of the making of the judgment or ruling, and if:

- 1) these were acquired, in full or in the essential part, on account of the offender, as a present or in any other manner for a price which is considerably lower than the normal market price; or allocation of a special fund for financing prevention or intervention programmes in which the confiscated properties would be allocated.
- 2) the third person knew that that the assets were transferred to the person in order to avoid confiscation.

xxvi. The Estonian Constitution states that everyone is equal before the law. If a family member or a member of the close environment of the child commits the offence against a child, he is responsible under one or several clauses of the Penal Code, which criminalizes offences against sexual self-determination and offences against a minor.

However, if the offence was committed by a child's parent, parental rights may be revoked by court order. This does not relieve the parent of the obligation to provide financial support for the child. A child may be removed from parental custody also without revocation of the parents' parental rights. A social worker shall monitor the necessity of separating a child from his or her parents. If the child's health or life would be endangered by remaining with his or her parent, a guardianship authority may remove the child from the parent's custody before a court decision. Brothers and sisters from one family who are removed from a home and family must not be separated unless it is against the children's best interests for them to remain together.<sup>85</sup>

Clause 27 of the Estonian Child Protection Act states that the child and his or her parents shall not be separated against their will except if such separation is in the best interests of the child, if the child is endangered and such separation is unavoidable, or if such separation is demanded by law or a judgment which has entered into force.<sup>86</sup>

Clause 134 of the Estonian Family Law Act provides that if the physical, mental or emotional well-being or the property of a child is endangered by abuse of the parent's right of custody, neglecting the child, inability of the parents to perform their obligations or conduct of a third person and the parents do not wish or are unable to prevent danger, a court shall apply necessary measures for the prevention of danger.

---

<sup>84</sup> Clause 85 of the Penal Code

<sup>85</sup> Eesti.ee, Orphans and Children Deprived of Parental Care,
https://www.eesti.ee/eng/topics/perekond/lapsed\_perekonnas/orvud\_ja\_vanemliku\_hoolitsuseta\_lapsed\_1

<sup>86</sup> Republic of Estonia Child Protection Act, www.childcentre.info/.../legislation/estonia/dbaFile1076...

Clause 135 of the same legal act explains that a court may separate a child from the parents only if damage to the interests of the child cannot be prevented by other supporting measures applied in the relationship between the parents and the child.<sup>87</sup>

If a crime against a child was committed by a member of the close environment, a court may impose a temporary restraining order to protect the rights and privacy of a child. That means that a perpetrator is forbidden to stay in certain places, stated by the court; to approach a child and talk to him.<sup>88</sup> The Penal Code states that violation of a restriction order or other measure of protection of personality right imposed by a court decision, if this poses a danger to the life, health or property of persons, or repeated violation of a restriction order or other measure of protection of personality right is punishable by a pecuniary punishment or up to one year of imprisonment.<sup>89</sup>

3 CRIMINAL PROCEDURE

3.1 Investigation

i. Clause 3 of the Republic of Estonia Child Protection Act states that child protection is based on the principle that the best interests of the child shall be a primary consideration at all times and in all cases. It can be stated that the possibilities of special treatment to secure the rights and interests of child victims/witnesses, based on this principle, are present in the new law of criminal procedure, which came into force 1.08.2012.

Clause 70 of the Code of Criminal Procedure states that the investigator may appoint a child protection official, social worker or psychologist to participate in the interrogation of a witness under 14 years of age. Participation of a child protection official, social worker or psychologist in the child interrogation is mandatory, if the investigator himself lacks a specific training and:

- 1) A witness is younger than 10 years of age and a repeated interrogation may cause harm to child's mental health.

---

<sup>87</sup> Estonian Family Law Act,
<http://www.legaltext.ee/et/andmebaas/tekst.asp?loc=text&dok=XXXXXX33K3&keel=en&pg=1&ptyyp=RT&tyyp=X&query=perekonnaseadus>

<sup>88</sup> Clause 141<sup>1</sup> of the Estonian Code of Criminal Procedure

<sup>89</sup> Clause 331<sup>2</sup> of the Estonian Penal Code

- 2) A witness is younger than 14 years of age and the interrogation is based on family violence or sexual abuse case.
- 3) A witness has a speech, learning or mental disability.

The interrogation of a child may be video recorded. In cases mentioned above the video recording of the interrogation is mandatory, because, if due to his age or mental condition a child cannot take part in court proceedings, the tape will later be used in trial as evidence. The same rules apply to child victims.<sup>90</sup>

Those witnesses under 14 years of age, who are capable and are allowed to participate in court proceedings, shall not be cross-examined. A witness who is a minor of less than 14 years may be heard in the presence of a child protection official, social worker or psychologist who may question the witness with the permission of the judge. A judge shall make a proposal to a witness who is a minor of less than 14 years of age to tell the court everything he or she knows concerning the criminal matter. After a witness who is a minor of less than 14 years of age has given testimony, he or she shall be examined by the parties to the court proceeding in the order determined by the court. The perpetrator is allowed to ask a child witness questions via his lawyer. The court shall overrule leading and irrelevant questions. Taking into consideration witnesses' mental or physical condition and his or her age, a court may interrupt the examination of the witness and question him or her on its own initiative or on the basis of questions, written down by the parties of court proceedings. If the presence of a minor is not necessary after he or she has been heard, the court shall ask him or her to leave the courtroom. The same rules apply to child victims.<sup>91</sup>

If due to his age or health condition a child victim or witness cannot take part in court proceedings, he is not appointed any special representatives. Instead, the testimony given by witness or victim in pre-trial procedure is being disclosed and used as evidence in the court.<sup>92</sup>

---

<sup>90</sup> Clause 70 of the Estonian Code of Criminal Procedure, <http://legislationline.org/download/action/download/id/1666/file/1f0a92298f6ba75bd07e101cdb93.htm/preview>

<https://www.riigiteataja.ee/akt/109072012005#jg5>

<sup>91</sup> Clause 290 of the Estonian Code of Criminal Procedure

<sup>92</sup> Clause 290<sup>1</sup>

ii. Since the year 2009 there are special Child Protection Services in all the Police Prefectures of the Estonian Police and Border Guard Board, which are authorized to detect and investigate all the criminal offences against children and to carry out operations, related to these cases. They also investigate and analyze child pornography materials.

There is also a Special District Prosecutor in The Southern District Prosecutor's Office and the Department for Juvenile Crimes in Northern District Prosecutor's Office, who direct pre-trial proceedings in child abuse and domestic violence cases and ensure the legality and efficiency thereof and represent public prosecution in court.

iii. As has already been mentioned in the General Jurisdiction part, the reason for the commencement of criminal proceedings, as stated in the Estonian Code for Criminal Procedure, is a report of a criminal offence or other information indicating that a criminal offence has taken place. The grounds for a criminal proceeding are constituted by ascertainment of criminal elements in the reason for the criminal proceeding.

The Code for Criminal Procedure contains the principle of mandatory criminal proceedings, which means that investigative bodies and Prosecutors' Offices are required to conduct criminal proceedings upon the appearance of facts referring to a criminal offence unless the circumstances provided for in Clause 199 of this Code which preclude criminal procedure or the grounds to terminate criminal proceedings for reasons of expediency pursuant to Clauses 201 (2), 202, 203, 203<sup>1</sup>, 204, 205 or 205<sup>1</sup> of this Code exist.

According to the above mentioned clauses, the grounds for termination of criminal proceedings are the referral of materials to juvenile committee, if a Prosecutor's Office finds that a minor who has committed a criminal offence in the age of 14 to 18 can be influenced without imposition of a punishment or a sanction; lack of public interest in proceedings and negligible guilt; lack of proportionality of punishment; reconciliation of the parties; if the crime was committed by foreign citizens or in foreign states; assistance received from person upon ascertaining facts relating to subject of proof; in case of competitive crime.

Withdrawal of the statement itself is not a ground for termination of criminal proceedings, if there are still facts referring to a criminal offence. Neither can the proceedings be terminated due to reconciliation of the parties, as according to the clause 203<sup>1</sup> of the Code of Criminal Procedure, the criminal proceedings cannot be terminated on this ground, in case of serious crimes, including the offences against sexual self-determination or in case, where the offence was committed by an adult against a minor.

iv. The limitation periods are regulated by the Penal Code. It is stated that no one shall be convicted of or punished for the commission of a criminal offence if the following terms have expired between the commission of the criminal offence and the entry into force of the corresponding court judgment:

- 1) ten years in the case of commission of a criminal offence in the first degree;
- 2) five years in the case of commission of a criminal offence in the second degree.<sup>93</sup>

A criminal offence in the first degree is an offence the maximum punishment prescribed for which in this Code is imprisonment for a term of more than five years, life imprisonment or compulsory dissolution.

A criminal offence in the second degree is an offence the punishment prescribed for which in this Code is imprisonment for a term of up to five years or a pecuniary punishment.<sup>94</sup>

Offences against humanity, war crimes and offences for which life imprisonment is prescribed do not expire. A misdemeanor expires after two years have passed between the commission thereof and the entry into force of the corresponding judgment or decision. A tax misdemeanor expires after three years have passed between the commission thereof and the entry into force of the corresponding judgment or decision.

In the case of an intermittent offence, the limitation period shall be calculated as of the commission of the last act. In the case of a continuous offence, the limitation period shall be calculated as of the termination of the continuous act.

The limitation period of a criminal offence is interrupted with the performance of the following procedural act in the criminal proceeding:

- 1) application of a preventive measure with regard to the suspect or accused, or seizure of his or her property, or property which is the object of money laundering;
- 2) the prosecution of the accused;
- 3) adjournment of the hearing of a matter in the case the accused fails to appear;
- 4) interrogation of the accused in the court hearing;
- 5) ordering of expert assessment or additional evidence in the court hearing.

---

<sup>93</sup> Clause 81 of the Estonian Penal Code

<sup>94</sup> Clause 4 of the Estonian Penal Code

If the limitation period of a criminal offence is interrupted, the limitation period shall commence again with the performance of the procedural act provided above. A person shall however not be convicted of or punished for the commission of a criminal offence if the period between the commission of the criminal offence and the entry into force of the corresponding court judgment is five years longer than the general term.

The limitation period of offence is interrupted:

- 1) in the case a suspect, accused or person subject to proceedings absconds from pre-trial proceedings, extra-judicial proceedings or court, until the person is detained or appears before the body conducting the proceedings;
- 2) upon commencement of criminal proceedings in a matter of an act with elements of a misdemeanour, until the termination of the criminal proceedings;
- 3) upon commission of a criminal offence against sexual self-determination against a person younger than eighteen years of age, until the victim attains 18 years of age unless the reason for the criminal proceedings became evident before the victim attained such age.

In the first two cases, the limitation period shall not be resumed if more than fifteen years have passed from the commission of the criminal offence or more than three years have passed from the commission of the misdemeanor.

v. If the age of the victim is not certain, but there is a reason to believe that he or she a child, it is assumed that the victim is a child and he or she is treated with respects to this, until the victim's real age is specified.<sup>95</sup>

vi. The Estonian Centre of Registers and Information Systems is responsible for recording and storing data for convicted offenders. All this data is stored in the Punishment Register.

The Punishment Register is a state database holding data about punished persons and their punishments. Since year 2012 the Punishment Register is a part of the state-wide e-File. The valid records of the Punishment Register are public – except misdemeanour cases where the person has only one valid misdemeanour record with the main punishment being less than 200 euro (50 fine units) and with no additional punishment. The Punishment Register also doesn't publish the data about punishments of minors.

---

<sup>95</sup> H.Pärna, K.Janter, Saatjateta ja kaubitsetud lapsed, http://www.childcentre.info/public/Saatjata\_ja\_kaubitsetud\_lapsed.pdf

Everyone, including the competent authorities of other states, can ask for data from the Punishment Register electronically or sending a query application by email or regular mail.<sup>96</sup>

The publicity of the Punishment Register is in accordance with the law, the data, regarding person's convictions and punishments is not considered sensitive.<sup>97</sup>

Unfortunately there is still no Sexual Offender Registry in Estonia. It has been discussed that such register should be established to enable the police, courts, prisons and other administrative services to have more information on the exact location of sex offenders and that it would also help improve the cooperation with other countries.<sup>98</sup>

3.2 Complaint Procedure

vii. In case of criminal offence, a person can get the quickest help from the Police and Border Guard Board. Victims of a crime can also receive help from their rural municipality government or city government and the volunteers of Victim Support. Since 1 January 2009, there is also a common European helpline 116,111 which can be used to notify about a child in danger. A report of a criminal offence shall be submitted to an investigative body or a Prosecutor's Office orally or in writing. A person can generally report a crime by calling the toll-free number of the police, calling the alarm centre or going to the nearest police station. A report in which a person is accused of a criminal offence is a complaint of crime. An oral report of a criminal offence which is submitted directly on site of the commission of the offence shall be recorded in a report, and a report of a criminal offence communicated by telephone shall be recorded in writing or audio-recorded.<sup>99</sup> A person of every age can present his or her individual complaint.

An investigative body or Prosecutor's Office shall, within ten days as of the receipt of a report of a criminal offence, notify the person who submitted the report of the refusal to

---

<sup>96</sup> Estonian Centre of Registers and Information Systems (ERIK), Punishment Register, <http://www.rik.ee/en/punishment-register>

<sup>97</sup> Madis Filippov, Tuhanded inimesed esitavad karistusregistrisse enda kohta päringuid,
<http://www.postimees.ee/780168/tuhanded-inimesed-esitavad-karistusregistrisse-enda-kohta-paringuid/>

<sup>98</sup> Rain Kooli, Pille Alaver: Eestis tuleks luua seksuaalkurjategijate register,
<http://uudised.err.ee/index.php?06249368>

<sup>99</sup> Eesti.ee

commence criminal proceedings pursuant to subsection 199 (1) or (2) of the Criminal Procedure Code of Estonia. According to this subsection, the criminal proceedings shall not be commenced, if there are no grounds for criminal proceedings, the limitation period for criminal offence has expired, an amnesty precludes imposition of a punishment, the suspect or the accused is dead or the suspect or accused who is a legal person has been dissolved a decision or a ruling on termination of criminal proceedings has entered into force in respect of a person in the same charges on the bases provided for in Clause 200 of this Code. If circumstances specified in Clause 199 of this Code which preclude criminal proceedings become evident in pre-trial proceedings, the proceedings shall be terminated on the basis of an order of the investigative body with the permission of a Prosecutor's Office, or by an order of a Prosecutor's Office.

viii. A person younger than 15 years of age should have a legal representative to participate in criminal proceedings.

According to the Family Law Act, a parent who has the right of custody is the legal representative of a child. Parents who have joint custody have a joint right of representation.<sup>100</sup>

In case, where parents cannot represent a child, including in the case of complaint against parents, the legal representative of a child is the appointed representative of the local government.<sup>101</sup>

Clause 11 of the Code of Criminal Procedure states that the principle of public access applies to the pronouncement of court decisions without restrictions unless the interests of a minor, spouse or victim require pronouncement of a court decision in a court session held in camera. In the interests of a minor a court may declare that a session or a part thereof be held in camera.<sup>102</sup>

4 COMPLEMENTARY MEASURES

i. Most of the professionals working with children in the area of sexual exploitation and sexual abuse are social workers, police officers, medical workers, paediatricians and child

---

<sup>100</sup> Clause of the Estonian Family Law Act

<sup>101</sup> Estonian Police and Border Guard Board, <http://www.politsei.ee/et/teenused/lingid/seaduslik-esindaja/index.dot>

<sup>102</sup> Clause 12

psychologists or psychiatrists. There are social workers, working with children, in all the city administrations and local governments, all of them should have a higher social work education or a special training, which allows them to work with children. Psychologists and psychiatrists, working with children, should have a higher education in psychology or psychiatry with a specialization in child psychology or psychiatry. All the medical workers and paediatricians are also required to have a higher medical education with a specific specialization. Police officers, working with these children are the representatives of special Child Protection Services and have all received a special training to work with children.

All the professionals working with children in the area of sexual exploitation and sexual abuse are generally required to have a special training for working with abused children.

In the recent years, various training events have been organised to boost institutional capacity by raising the awareness and qualification of experts dealing with children and young people. Special attention is given to developing the skills of police officers, prosecutors and judges in dealing with children. Regular training for specialists and officials has been provided to offer them information about the rights of the child, human trafficking, sexual harassment and other issues relating to violence.<sup>103</sup>

ii. There is a special Sexual Education class in some Estonian schools, where among other things, children can learn about sexual behaviour and risks, related to it, including sexual violence, abuse and exploitation. Some organizations, including Estonian Sexual Health Association and Estonian Medical Association have asked the Estonian Ministry of Education and Research to make the Sexual Education class mandatory in all school programs. However this problem has not been solved so far. In some schools sexual education issues are discussed in Human Studies class, but in some schools sexual abuse and exploitation problems are not discussed with children at all.<sup>104</sup>

iii. In June 2012 the Estonian Parliament has approved chemical castration for sex offenders. The bill has been adopted in the second reading. Estonian Justice Minister Kristen Michal said that chemical castration, which is administration of medication to suppress libido, will be applied to mainly convicted paedophiles.

---

<sup>103</sup> ENOC: European Network of Ombudspersons for Children

<sup>104</sup> Seksuaalkasvatus koolis kohustuslikuks, <http://www.delfi.ee/news/paevauudised/eesti/seksuaalkasvatus-koolis-kohustuslikuks.d?id=11858703>

According to the new legislation, courts will be able to impose a course of medical treatment on sex offenders, who would be obliged to take special medication for up to three years. Chemical castration may also be a precondition for the offender to be released on parole.<sup>105</sup>

The State has not created any preventive intervention programmes for people who fear that they may commit the crime, but have not yet been convicted for any of such crimes. If a person fears that he or she may commit the crime, he or she must seek a regular psychological or psychiatric help.

iv. The Estonian Victim Support Act entered into force on 1 January 2004; the part covering victim support services entered into force on 1 January 2005.

According to the law, all persons who have fallen victim to negligence, mistreatment or physical, mental or sexual abuse, i.e. all those to whom suffering or injury have been caused, are entitled to victim support. A crime is not a prerequisite for victim support.

The purpose of the victim support service is to maintain or improve a victim's ability to cope. For improved coping, a victim needs both emotional support and information on the forms of assistance available (such as psychological counselling, legal assistance etc), and guidance on how to address the organisations. If a victim is assisted in due course, his/her coping ability can be maintained.

The law also provides for the establishment of a network of victim support centres in all counties. Victim support centres are located on police premises and, for the time being, partly on Pension Board premises. The main duty of regional victim support services is to create and employ a network of organisations in the region which offer assistance and services to victims of crime, and to develop and strengthen this network where possible. The newly created victim support centres employ 35 victim support co-ordinators who have undergone two-month training to obtain systematic knowledge and skills in victim support work so as to be able to organise the provision of victim support services to victims and be able to incorporate the regional victim support system into the nationwide network.<sup>106</sup>

---

<sup>105</sup> Ministry of Justice of Estonia, Riigikogu võttis vastu keemilise kastreerimise eelnõu, <http://www.just.ee/56881>

<sup>106</sup> Estonian Ministry of Social Affairs, Victim Support, <http://www.sm.ee/eng/activity/benefits-and-support/victim-support.html>

v. The child helpline service was launched at 01.01.2009 using the nationwide free of charge round the clock operational helpline number 116 111. The objective of the service is to enable everybody to report about a child in need, forward the information to respective specialists and to offer children and other people primary social counselling and crisis counselling, if necessary. The service is provided in accordance with Article 59 of the Estonian Child Protection Act, according to which every person is required to immediately notify the social services departments, police or some other body providing assistance if the person knows of a child who is in need of protection or assistance.

The number 116 111 can be called from all over Estonia using both fixed and mobile phones.

The calls are answered by experienced counsellors who have passed the necessary training. They are ready to listen to the problems and advice how to act at once and in the long run.

The helpline is aware of the confidentiality principles. Counselling is anonymous; no one asks for the name of the person.<sup>107</sup>

vi. There are no State intervention programmes, when it comes to the victims' recovery. However, according to the Victim Support Act, the victims have the right to compensation.

The circle of those entitled to compensation has been extended. Compensation is now also available to victims of violent crimes committed through negligence (earlier, compensation was available only to victims of intentionally committed crimes). The degree of the criminal offence (such as whether serious health damage has been suffered or not) is determined by forensic medical examination. After a forensic medical examination report is prepared, the victim must address the local Pension Board office for compensation.

The rights of European Union citizens have also been extended, regardless of their permanent place of residence (such as tourists), alongside the rights of citizens of the countries which have joined the European Convention on the Compensation of Victims of Violent Crimes. However, the rights will be extended to the parties to the Convention after Estonia has joined it.

Compensation for a victim's funeral expenses and medical treatment expenses is available to the persons who actually incurred these expenses, in the present case, to the child's parents.

---

<sup>107</sup> Child Support Helpline in Estonia, <http://www.lasteabi.ee/eng>

Besides the expenses of restoring physical health, the cost of restoring mental health is also compensated. The law also extends compensation for medical treatment expenses to psychological counselling and psychotherapy.<sup>108</sup>

III NATIONAL POLICY REGARDING CHILDREN

i. There is no serious political discussion, regarding the children in Estonia. However there have been several discussions in regard of children's rights and child protection issues, mostly raised by the Ombudsman for Children in Estonia.

In December 2011, The Ombudsman for Children drafted a manual "Informing about a child in need of help and data protection". With this manual, the Ombudsman for Children hopes that children's problems will be noticed even more and encourages to inform about every abuse case involving a child, but also for instance if the primary needs of a child are not fulfilled. The manual is mainly targeted to specialists in the field of education, medicine, social work and police who work with children daily. The manual was drafted in cooperation with the Data Protection Inspectorate and specialists.

The manual gives an overview which information, in which cases, to whom and via which channels can be communicated about a child in need of help, without an approval from the child and/or his/her legal representative, and based on which legal provisions. Information concerning abuse and special needs of children must be communicated to the rural municipality's or city government's child care official and in case of need to the police, who have the legal basis to interfere and the capabilities to provide help.

The precondition for helping a child is that the information about the child's need for help has reached a competent official or institution. Therefore early detection and work in networks are important pillars of child protection. The network consists of people who are in close contact with the child: a kindergarten or school teacher, head of a hobby group, coach, doctor, parents of a friend or playmate, youth police officer, etc. All of them have an important role in detecting the child's needs and notifying competent institutions. But the Child Protection Act states that every person has the obligation to immediately inform about a child in need of help (subsection 59 (1) of the CPA), be they relatives, neighbours or random people passing by. Leaving a child without assistance or protection is on everyone's conscience who notices that a child needs help but does not inform anyone of it. One cannot justify not informing anyone of the situation, with a claim that he/she was not sure whether the child's need for help was credible enough or informing anyone about the situation might seem as an accusation targeted towards the family or as shaming the child. Competent institutions decide and determine whether there is need for intervention or how important the information is. For instance, a physical education teacher must inform someone about his/her doubts when he/she notices blue marks on the back of a child or a doctor must inform someone about his/her doubts when a child has come to see him/her with many traumas and there is a doubt that these traumas have not been caused by the child. A neighbor must inform if frequent yelling, crying and throwing of things takes place in a family with children. A parent of a child's playmate has to inform someone of the situation when his/her child's friend accidentally breaks a mug and is extremely afraid that he/she will be beaten as a punishment.

---

<sup>108</sup> Estonian Ministry of Social Affairs, Victim Support

“Inform anyone of a child in need of help!” emphasizes the Ombudsman for Children, Indrek Teder, in the summary of the manual. “A child needs help if his/her life, health, feeling of security, development or wellbeing is under threat. Everyone is obliged to notify about a child in need of help. One should inform the rural municipality government or a city government (if possible, a child protection official directly) or the police about it. The rural municipality government or city government and the police are administrative institutions, whose public task, pursuant to law, is to help and protect a child. To carry out this task, the rural municipality government or city government and the police can process personal data related to the child's need for help. As the rural municipality government or city government and the police have the right to process personal data, one can inform them about the child's need for help without the approval from the child and/or his/her legal representative. Data protection is not an obstacle.”

In the course of drafting this manual, Margit Sarv, Senior Adviser, and Andres Aru, Head of the Children's Rights Department of the Office of the Chancellor of Justice, led a project with an aim to analyse situations when information about a child in need of help, despite the obligation prescribed in the Child Protection Act, did not reach competent institutions rapidly enough. One of the causes of the problem is that due to limitations prescribed in the Personal Data Protection Act, specialists working daily with children have been feeling insecure when processing the personal data of a child in need of help. Therefore the Chancellor of Justice as the Ombudsman for Children decided that there is a dire need for a single and unambiguous manual, which would help specialists who work with children daily fulfill their obligations, pursuant to law, in relation to helping children and informing of the child's need for help, at the same time following the principles of personal data protection. Led by the Ombudsman for Children, the manual was drafted in cooperation with the Data Protection Inspectorate and representatives from the field of social work, the police, healthcare and education and citizens' associations fighting for children's rights.

The manual "Informing about a child in need of help and data protection" is sent to local governments, the Police and Border Guard Board and organizations and associations working with children, so that it can be taken into use and circulated.<sup>109</sup>

In March 2012 the The Ombudsman for Children in Estonia also organised a roundtable "Children's poverty – let's find solutions!". The aim of the roundtable was to draw the decision makers' attention to the problems that associate with the children's poverty in Estonia and to jointly seek solutions to these problems. The members of the Social Affairs Commission of the parliament, the Minister of Social Affairs, the Minister of Education and Research, the Minister for Regional Affairs and representatives of the Associations of Estonian Cities, the Associations of Municipalities of Estonia, universities and NGOs took part in the roundtable.<sup>110</sup>

The bad news came in the midst of a financial crisis that has affected many European countries. For Estonia one major toll of the crisis is the rise in child poverty. A recent report by the Ombudsman for Children said that in 2010 more than 63,000 lived in absolute poverty or at risk of poverty. That's 26 percent of all Estonians under the age of 18.

The report highlights the biggest challenge for Estonia is to get help directly to children instead of through family subsidies. It is also said that the social circle around the child is very important. For example, better cooperation between the school, doctors and child protection services is key to a child's development, and it has been improving in the past couple of years.

---

<sup>109</sup> Chancellor of Justice of Estonia, The Ombudsman for Children drafted a manual to inform about a child who needs help, <http://oiguskantsler.ee/en/the-ombudsman-for-children-drafted-a-manual-to-inform-about-a-child-who-needs-help>

<sup>110</sup> The Ombudsman for Children in Estonia, Roundtable "Children's Poverty – Let's Find Solutions!", <http://lasteombudsman.ee/en/roundtable-childrens-poverty-lets-find-solutions>

One of the things the Chancellor of Justice Office Children's Rights Department has done is set up a free breakfast program at schools for all the children. This makes sure to feed those children who need it without pointing them out to their peers. The Justice Chancellor's Office has also proposed a new measure to give free psychological help to poor families.<sup>111</sup>

On Child Protection Day, June 1st, the Ombudsman for Children introduced to the public the research on children's rights and parenthood, which was carried out in Estonia for the first time. The research shows that the general public awareness of the children's rights issues is very low. Children are not enough included in the decisions, which impact their welfare. Most adults do not inform anyone of child in need of help, as they are unable to assess, whether the child needs this help or not. The parents themselves admit that they lack knowledge of how to raise their children. Many of them consider the physical punishment of children allowed.<sup>112</sup>

ii. Besides the above mentioned reports, discussions and the research, the specialists of the Chancellor of Justice of Estonia Children's Rights Department generally work to raise the awareness within the society regarding children's rights. Their work includes making special reports and presentations for children in schools and other institutions, introducing them the general issues of children's rights. The representatives of the department always participate in different events, campaigns and film festivals, dedicated to children and their rights, giving speeches and sharing their opinions on the particular issues. All this however does not include raising the society's awareness particularly regarding children's sexual abuse and exploitation, as the particular Department does not deal with these issues and cases in their work sphere.

The non-governmental non-profit organization, Estonian Union for Child Welfare also works actively to raise the public awareness of children's rights and contribute to child welfare movements, organizing discussions, conferences and holding different studies and analyzes. There has also been created the Estonian Union for Child Welfare children's rights information centre Märka Last (Notice the Child) to help the development of a child-friendly society, where every activity thinks of the children's interests and every child is provided with support for the development of their personalities, talents and abilities.<sup>113</sup> There is also a special magazine Märka Last being published regularly. The Autumn 2011 issue of the magazine contained several articles on child sexual education and child sexual abuse.<sup>114</sup> Besides that nothing else has been done to raise the society's awareness regarding child sexual abuse and exploitation.

---

<sup>111</sup> Euroviews, Estonia's Children Victims to Economic Crisis, <http://www.euroviews.eu/?p=3725>

<sup>112</sup> The Ombudsman for Children in Estonia, <http://lasteombudsman.ee/et/lasteombudsman-tutvustab-lastekaitsepaeval-lapse-oiguste-ja-vanemluse-monitooringut>

UNICEF Estonia is another non-governmental organization, which works to raise the awareness about child protection.<sup>115</sup> Some of their brochures contain the information about trafficking in human beings and how not to become the victim of it.

A few projects and campaigns on child sexual abuse and exploitation have been carried out by Tartu Child Support Centre, which cooperates with ECPAT International.<sup>116</sup> In November 2012 a conference in cooperation with the international project „Child Abuse Victim and Offender –Two Sides of the Coin“ is about to take place. However this conference and other workshops and studies, organized by the Support Centre, are generally meant for specialists working with children particularly and not for the wide public.

There has been created a special website Laps netis (Child in the Internet) to raise the awareness regarding children's safety in the Internet and the risks of sexual abuse and exploitation they can meet there. The website contains several related videos and materials for children and their parents.<sup>117</sup>

In general it can be said that there has not been a lot of action undertaken by committed NGOs or the State to raise the awareness within the society regarding children's sexual abuse and exploitation.

iii. The statistics on how many reporting has been done regarding children's sexual exploitation in the last 5 years is available in the Ministry of Justice of Estonia annual reports.

---

<sup>113</sup> Estonian Union for Child Welfare, <http://www.lastekaitseliit.ee/?lang=en>

<sup>114</sup> Magazine Märka Last, Autumn 2011, <http://ajakiri.lastekaitseliit.ee/2012/07/sugis-2011/>

<sup>115</sup> UNICEF Estonia, <http://www.unicef.ee>

<sup>116</sup> Tartu Child Support Centre, <http://www.tugikeskus.org.ee/kodu/>

<sup>117</sup> Laps netis, <http://lapsnetis.eesti.ee/>

Up to April 2012 the old Estonian Penal Code was in force, which contained the following articles regarding child sexual exploitation:

- 1) Article 175 – disposing minors to engage in prostitution
- 2) Article 176 – aiding prostitution involving minors
- 3) Article 177 – use of minors in manufacture of pornographic works
- 4) Article 177<sup>1</sup> – use of minors in manufacture of erotic works
- 4) Article 178 - manufacture of works involving child pornography or making child pornography available
- 5) Article 179 – sexual enticement of children<sup>118</sup>

The following table provides the results of the statistical research, carried out by the Ministry of Justice of Estonia:

- All records from 2006-2011 <sup>119</sup>		2006	2007	2008	2009	2010	2011
§ 175	- Disposing minors to engage in prostitution		1	9	5	1
§ 176	- Aiding prostitution involving minors	2	4	6	2
§ 177	- Use of minors in manufacture of pornographic works	10	4	4	1	2	40
§ 177 <sup>1</sup>	- Use of minors in manufacture of					4	7

<sup>118</sup> Estonian Penal Code 2011, <https://www.riigiteataja.ee/akt/106012011010>

<sup>119</sup> Ministry of Justice of Estonia, Statistics on the Crime Rate, <http://www.just.ee/30140>

	erotic works
§ 178	- Manufacture of works involving child pornography or making child pornography available	29	22	52	27	76	17
§ 179	- Sexual enticement of children	11	10	29	20	13	57

iv. In general there have been no specific promotional campaigns in Estonia, regarding sexual exploitation of children, so far.

v. The old regulation of the Estonian Penal Code, which was in force up to April 2012, contained several clauses, which criminalized certain elements of trafficking in human beings, including trafficking in minors. Among them were clauses, criminalizing child sexual exploitation, which have already been mentioned above.

The analysis made by the Ministry of Justice of Estonia in 2009 showed, however, that those articles did not contain all the prohibited aspects of human trafficking, especially those, regarding minors. In particular, the old regulation of the Penal Code did not specify that trafficking in minors is punishable even if no violence or deception has been used against a minor. In other words the regulation was not in accordance with human trafficking regulations, established in international legal acts – that is, minors should always be considered as victims, no matter under which circumstances the offence against them was perpetrated. This problem, regarding minors, was one of the main reasons why the new specific clauses of trafficking in human beings were added to the Estonian Penal Code in spring 2012.

According to the new regulation of the Estonian Penal Code, trafficking in minors, which included the use of threat, force, violence, deception etc is punishable under Clause 133 section 2 item 2 (human trafficking against a person of less than 18 years of age). If no force or any other kind of violence was used against a minor, the act is still punishable under Clause 175 of the Penal Code (human trafficking with the purpose of child exploitation).<sup>120</sup>

When it comes to laws, which impact children's welfare, the professionals working with children and children's rights always participate in the law making process, sharing their opinions on the particular issues.

vi. The main Non-Governmental Organisations working on the topic of children's rights in Estonia are:

- Estonian Union for Child Welfare
- United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) Estonia
- SOS Children's Village

IV OTHER

Crime Rate in General

According to statistics, provided in the yearbook of crimes in Estonia by the Ministry of Justice, 75% of all the crimes against sexual self-determination, committed in 2011, were committed against minors.<sup>121</sup> A dramatic increase saw the crimes, committed via communication and information technologies, such as child sexual enticement (grooming). The number of these cases reached as high as 57 compared to 13 in 2010. There were 11 cases of agreement of sexual purpose for meeting a child, though in 2010 there was only one such case. The offenders mostly proposed meetings, communicating with children via Internet. There were also more cases of using minors in manufacture of pornographic and erotic works, comparing to previous 4 years. On the other hand, there was committed much less of such crimes as rape and satisfaction of sexual desire by violence.<sup>122</sup>

The increase in figures does not suggest that more sexual crimes against children are being committed, Pille Alaver, head of the Child Protection Service at the North Police Prefecture,

---

<sup>120</sup> The Parliament of Estonia, Karistusseadustiku ja sellega seonduvate seaduste muutmise seaduse eelnõu seletuskiri

<sup>121</sup> Ministry of Justice of Estonia, Crime in Estonia in the Year 2011, http://www.just.ee/orb.aw/class=file/action=preview/id=57202/Kuritegevus\_Eestis\_2011.pdf

<sup>122</sup> Ministry of Justice of Estonia, Crime in Estonia in the Year 2011

said. She said that it is instead a sign that the topic is acute and the law enforcement agencies have become more efficient in monitoring the online environment, paying particular attention to the safety of children, she said. It is also known that most of the child abuse and exploitation cases remain unreported. The increase of number of such cases may also mean that victims are becoming more eager to come to the police and report the crimes.

Also, Alaver said, the criminalization in 2010 of child grooming - actions undertaken by an adult to establish an emotional connection with a child for the purpose of sexual activity or exploitation - has contributed to the rise in the number of cases. Before grooming became a criminal offense, adults could freely contact children online and the police had no right to intervene, said Alaver. "The offenders could say they were joking or just experimenting to see what the kid would say," she explained.<sup>123</sup>

The following table provides a review of the number of sexual crimes of all kind, committed against children, in the period of 2006-2010 years.<sup>124</sup>

Crime	2006	2007	2008	2009	2010
Rape	57	41	67	49	27
Satisfaction of sexual desire by violence	41	24	35	49	38
Compelling person to engage in sexual intercourse	2	4	4	1	0
Compelling person to satisfy sexual desire	0	4	12	5	2
Sexual intercourse with descendant	0	2	3	2	1
Sexual intercourse with child	30	10	11	14	11
Satisfaction of sexual desire with child	62	23	28	25	28
Crimes committed against children in connection with prostitution	2	5	15	7	1

<sup>123</sup> Ingrid Teesalu, Child Sexual Enticement Cases More Frequent, <http://news.err.ee/Society/82b02f55-f8bb-490b-a495-1738f6fe79db>

<sup>124</sup> Ministry of Justice of Estonia, Crime in Estonia in the Year 2010, http://www.just.ee/orb.aw/class=file/action=preview/id=54602/KuritegevusEestis2010\_web.pdf

Use of minors in manufacture of pornographic works	10	4	4	1	2
Use of minors in manufacture of erotic works	-	-	-	-	4
Manufacture of works involving child pornography or making child pornography available	29	22	52	27	76
Agreement of sexual purpose for meeting with child					1
Sexual enticement of children	11	10	29	20	13
Total	244	149	260	200	204

V CONCLUSION

Estonia is taking efforts in legislation, law enforcement, education, prevention programmes and social support to reduce child sexual abuse and exploitation. However, children in Estonia remain at risk of sexual violence, so a lot is still needed to be done. More attention has to be paid on raising the awareness within the society regarding the issues of children's sexual abuse and exploitation: the first step could be the organization of special events, conferences and discussions, distribution of brochures and reading materials, asking the specialists working with children to give more public speeches and share their opinions on children's rights problems in the country. More information campaigns have to be held to promote children's rights.

Special sexual education programmes have to become mandatory in the Estonian schools, so children could learn about risks of abuse and exploitation they can meet in their everyday life and ways to avoid them.

Estonia has moved to harmonize its laws with international conventions protecting children and prohibiting human trafficking, and has also taken practical steps, especially in its justice system, to benefit children. However many legislative problems still need to be discussed and solved – adding a special clause, criminalizing child prostitution to the Estonian Penal Code; entry into force of a new regulation of the Estonian Child Protection Act; bringing the definitions of child pornography and other specific terms into legal acts – are just a few of them.

ELSA FINLAND

I Introduction.....	283
1 General .....	283
2 The Lanzarote Convention.....	295
II National Legislation .....	296
1 General Principles Of The Jurisdiction .....	296
2 Substantive Criminal Law .....	308
2.1 Sexual Abuse.....	308
2.2 Child Prostitution .....	313
2.3 Child Pornography .....	315
2.4 Corruption of Children.....	321
2.5 Solicitation of Children for Sexual Purposes .....	322
2.6 Corporate Liability.....	324
2.7 Aggravating Circumstances .....	326
2.8 Sanctions and Measures .....	329
3 Criminal Procedure .....	336
3.1 Investigation .....	336
3.2 Complaint Procedure .....	347
4 Complementary Measures.....	360
III National Policy Regarding Children.....	373
IV Other.....	376
V Conclusion.....	380

National Researchers:

Sonja Helminen

Miika Honkanen

Isabella Lehti

Sini Majlander

Vilma Pasanen

Henriikka Pulli

Louna Taskinen

Laura Tuuli

National Advisor:

Timo Ojala

National Coordinator:

Laura Päivinen

I INTRODUCTION

1 GENERAL

- i. According to Suomen Perustuslaki, The Constitution of Finland (731/1999), discrimination on the basis of age, origin, language, religion, ideology, opinion, health, disability or on other personal grounds is prohibited (s 6). Section 11 of the Chapter 11 of Rikoslaki, the Criminal Code (39/1889) also prohibits discrimination in general, whereas section 3 of the Chapter 47 of the Criminal Code prohibits discrimination in employment. In addition, Yhdenvertaisuuslaki, the Equality Act (21/2004) obligates the authorities to promote equality and prohibits discrimination in employment and working life, commercial activity, labour market organisations and entry into education, while Laki naisten ja miesten välisestä tasa-arvosta, the Gender Equality Act (609/1986) prohibits gender discrimination in employment.

In Finland, there exists an official group for the monitoring of discrimination. The group includes representatives from the Ministries of Justice, Internal Affairs, Education, Labour and Social Affairs and Health as well as other officials, trade unions, and NGOs representing different groups, such as disabled people, the Roma, the Sami and sexual minorities.<sup>1</sup>

Within the framework of the monitoring group, human rights NGO Ihmisoikeusliitto, Finnish League for Human Rights has compiled a report on discrimination problems in Finland.<sup>2</sup> According to the report, in 2007 käräjäoikeudet, the Finnish district courts<sup>3</sup>, dealt with 29 cases of alleged discrimination, 13 of which concerned discrimination in employment (Criminal Code c 47 s 3). In all of the 16 cases concerning discrimination in general (Criminal Code c 11 s 11), ethnic origin was the alleged basis of discrimination. Most of the complainants belonged to the Roma minority and the alleged discrimination had occurred in the provision of services. In 58% of the cases, the courts found that discrimination had occurred. In the cases concerning discrimination in employment, ethnic origin, gender and age were the

---

<sup>1</sup> The homepage of the group monitoring discrimination, viewed on 7 November 2012, <www.yhdenvertaisuus.fi>.

<sup>2</sup> M. Aaltonen, M. Joronen and S. Villa, 'Syrjintä Suomessa 2008', 2009, Ihmisoikeusliitto (Finnish League for Human Rights).

<sup>3</sup> More information about the Finnish court system in the chapter II of this report.

alleged grounds in 19%, 25% and 25% of the cases, respectively. In 50% of the cases discrimination was found to have occurred.<sup>4</sup>

According to a report by Poliisiammattikorkeakoulu, the Police College of Finland on suspected hate crimes reported to the police, 860 crimes were classified as hate crimes, a reduction of 15 % compared to the previous year. The motive was related to the ethnic or national background of the alleged victim in 86 % of the cases, and the most common of these suspected crimes were assaults. In 6 % of the cases, the motive related to religion or ideology; in 5 % to sexual orientation; and in 2.4 % to disability.<sup>5</sup>

According to a Eurobarometer survey in 2009 12 % of Finns said they had experienced some form of discrimination,<sup>6</sup> in the 2008 the percentage was 15.<sup>7</sup> Examples of discrimination cited in the Finnish League for Human Rights' report Syrjintä Suomessa 2008, include bullying in schools as a form of discrimination that occurs on the basis of sexual orientation or ethnic origin and problems in the education system especially for the Roma, the Sami, asylum seekers and disabled people.<sup>8</sup> Inequalities between men and women in working life have persisted and men's average wages are higher than those of women. According to research, having a family can hamper a woman's employment prospects while a similar effect has not been noted for men.<sup>9</sup> Also the UN CEDAW Committee has called for measures to tackle segregation in job markets and expressed concern at the prevalence of discrimination against immigrant women.<sup>10</sup> Discrimination in working life was also seen to occur on the basis of ethnic origin (especially for the Roma people) and disability.<sup>11</sup>

---

<sup>4</sup> Aaltonen et al, 'Syrjintä Suomessa 2008', p. 28 – 32.

<sup>5</sup> J. Niemi, 'Polisin tietoon tullut viharikollisuus Suomessa 2010', Poliisiammattikorkeakoulun raportteja 95, Tampere, 2011 p. 9.

<sup>6</sup> Special Eurobarometer 317, 'Discrimination in the EU in 2009', 2009, p. 23.

<sup>7</sup> Special Eurobarometer 296, 'Discrimination in the European Union: Perceptions, Experiences and Attitudes', 2008, p. 13.

<sup>8</sup> Aaltonen et al, 'Syrjintä Suomessa 2008', p. 62 – 76.

<sup>9</sup> Aaltonen et al, 'Syrjintä Suomessa 2008', p. 98 – 106.

<sup>10</sup> Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women, 'Concluding observations of the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women: Finland', 2008, p. 6.

<sup>11</sup> Aaltonen & al, 'Syrjintä Suomessa 2008', p. 87 – 98.

The Committee on the Rights of the Child has also expressed its concern at the widespread occurrence of discrimination against immigrant and refugee children and children belonging to ethnic minorities as well as disabled children.<sup>12</sup>

- ii. The definition of family has always been complex in the Finnish legislation. In the 1990s, the subject was widely discussed and two committee reports were made.<sup>13</sup> The committee reports did not lead to simplifying the definition of the term but, some principles were recognized: The aim of the legislator is neutral family law and principle of neutrality should be followed in defining the term family.<sup>14</sup> According to the report of Perhetoimikunta, the Family Committee, neutrality is interpreted to mean the avoidance of groundless different treatment.<sup>15</sup>

Family is not defined in the Constitution. In the Government Bill 309/1993 on the reformation of fundamental rights, the right to privacy is discussed. In the bill it is suggested that the right to privacy, which is regulated in the Constitution section 10, includes the protection of family life, and thus protection of family life is not separately mentioned in the Constitution. According to the bill, family life is interpreted in the same way as in article 8 of the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms; no further definition is given.<sup>16</sup>

According to the Government Bill 200/2000 legislation concerning family can be divided into two categories; actual family legislation and legislation regarding family. Actual family legislation regulates rights and obligations of the parties, how to form and break family relations and for example the right to financial support and the rules of inheritance.<sup>17</sup> Also according to Perhekäsityöryhmän mietintö, the Family Term Committee's report, the purpose of the definition of family in private law is to define the ones, who have the right to inheritance

---

<sup>12</sup> Committee on the Rights of the Child, 'Consideration of reports submitted by State parties under article 44 of the Convention. Concluding Observations: Finland', 2011, Section III B 24.

<sup>13</sup> KM 1992:12 (Family Committee report) and STM 1993:26 (Family Term Committee report).

<sup>14</sup> KM 1992:12, p. 79-80.

<sup>15</sup> KM 1992:12, p.80.

<sup>16</sup> HE 309/1993, p. 53.

<sup>17</sup> HE 200/2000, p. 4.

and financial support. In private law, family is defined with biological factors and marriage.<sup>18</sup> To conclude the insight of the term family in private law is a classical nuclear family.

In legislation regarding family, it is defined, how family relations affect individual's other rights and obligations, such as welfare benefits.<sup>19</sup> In connection with welfare benefits, it is common to speak of a financial support assumption, which means that the group of people living in a same household are supposed to support each other financially. According to this assumption, in public law, and especially in social law, family is usually interpreted to be a group of people, who share the same household.<sup>20</sup>

In criminal law, the term family is not specially defined, but the term has a special meaning when dealing with family violence. Although the term family violence is not used in the Criminal Code, the special nature of violence in close relationship is recognized for example among restraining orders. In Laki lähestymiskiellosta, the Act on Restraining Order, (898/1998) perheen sisäinen lähestymiskielto, intra family restraining order, is mentioned. The intra family restraining order is defined in the Act on Restraining Order in section 2(2). It concerns people living in the same household. Also when considering to put assault in private place under public prosecution<sup>21</sup>, it was specially mentioned that the purpose was to prevent family violence. The term family violence was defined to refer to a violent behavior among the people living in the same household.<sup>22</sup> In criminal law, in some cases, family is also defined by biological and genetic relations. For example incest is criminalized in Criminal Code in the chapter about crimes against public order (Criminal Code c 17 s 22). Incest is defined to be sexual intercourse with an own biological child or other descendant, own parent or other ascendant, or sibling (Criminal Code c 17 s 22(1)). In this case, a close genetic relationship is the defining factor of family.<sup>23</sup>

---

<sup>18</sup> STM 1993:26, p. 10.

<sup>19</sup> HE 200/2000, p.4.

<sup>20</sup> STM 1993:26, p. 7 and p. 10. To mention, particularly among young people, the legislator recognizes housing arrangements, whose purpose is not to create family relations. For example housing benefit in Act on Student Grant isn't reliable on one's partner's incomes, opintotukilaki, Act on Student Grant (65/1994) s 14.

<sup>21</sup> More about public prosecution in the Finnish Police homepage, viewed on 30 October 2012, <<http://www.poliisi.fi/poliisi/home.nsf/pages/E23ED9E330FA6185C2256BBA0038694C?opendocument>>.

<sup>22</sup> HE 144/2003, p.4.

<sup>23</sup> See more about Incest Chapter II 2(a)(v) of this report.

It is not possible to present a comprehensive list of all laws concerning and defining family.<sup>24</sup> Some laws give rights and obligations to family members without defining the term in the legislation. Finally, it is important to emphasize that a child's right to financial support and care does not depend on the child's family relations.<sup>25</sup> Children's rights are secured as individual's rights.<sup>26</sup>

According to Government Bill 200/2000, marriage has preserved its role as a form of an established relationship, although other options of a common life such as cohabitation and registered partnership have become more and more common. Marriage is no longer the only option for organizing a common life together and raising children.<sup>27</sup> It should also be mentioned, that in Finland polygamous marriages are not possible. It is separately concluded in Government Bill 309/1993 that polygamous marriages do not fit in the Finnish legal system.<sup>28</sup>

Marriage still contains some legal effects that cannot be achieved in any other way. For example, the presumption of paternity is still connected to marriage. According to Isyyslaki, the Paternity Act (700/1975) section 2, if a couple is married when the child is born, the husband is considered to be the father of the child.

According to Tilastokeskus, Statistics Finland the average age of couples entering their first marriage was 30.6 years among women and 32.9 years among men in 2011. The average age of the persons entering marriage for the first time has risen about 8 years among both women and men in the past decade. The number of marriages has decreased and divorces are also common. According to Statistics Finland, 28 408 couples got married in 2011. This

---

<sup>24</sup> HE 200/2000, p. 5.

<sup>25</sup> Laki lapsen elatuksesta, Act on the Financial Support of a Child, (704/1975) s 2 and in Laki lapsen huollosta ja tapaamisoikeudesta, Act on the Child Custody and the Right to Access, (361/1983) it is defined that parents or other custodians have the primary obligation to take care of their children.

<sup>26</sup> See also Constitution s 6(3), "Children shall be treated equally and as individuals and they shall be allowed to influence matters pertaining to themselves to a degree corresponding to their level of development".

<sup>27</sup> HE 200/2000, p.5. Also Laki avopuolisoiden yhteistalouden purkamisesta, Act on the Dissolution of the Household of Cohabiting Partners (26/2011) came into force on 1 April 2011 and Laki rekisteröidystä parisuhteesta the Act on Registered Partnership (950/2011) on 1 March 2002.

<sup>28</sup> HE 309/1993, p.56.

is 1544 less than in 2010. According to the same report, 13 469 divorces were granted in 2011.<sup>29</sup>

- iii. The status of children has followed the improvement of the status of women in Finland's historical background, because child's status in society was very much dependent on the status of the mother.<sup>30</sup> The improvement of the status of the child started, when the government took legislative action to improve the status of children born outside of marriage. In 1922 legislation was introduced on the status of children born outside of marriage by enacting Laki aviottomista lapsista, the Act on adulterine children (173/1922). The act recognizes the child's right to financial support. A man could be obligated to support a child, whom he most likely had conceived. The main interest of the law was to secure a sufficient financial support to all children. However, the improvement was not very significant, because a child born outside of marriage did not either get the same financial support than a marital child or even the right to inherit.<sup>31</sup>

In 1921 Laki oppivelvollisuudesta, Act on compulsory education (101/1921) was accepted. According to the act, every child between the ages 7 and 13<sup>32</sup> was under compulsory education. However it is notable that in the Government Bill 13/1919 the child's right to education was not highlighted as much as the status of Finland as a civilized nation.<sup>33</sup>

In the 1970s, Finland finally took big legislative steps to improve the status of children.<sup>34</sup> The Government Bill 90/1974 contained many legislative proposals to improve children rights of which the two most important were the Paternity Act (700/1975) and the Act on Child's Financial Support (704/1975). Significant factor in the Government Bill 90/1974

<sup>29</sup> Suomen virallinen tilasto (SVT), Siviilisäädyn muutokset 2011, Tilastokeskus (Statistics Finland), Helsinki, 2012, description page.

<sup>30</sup> S. Ojala, 'Eurooppalaistuva oikeuskulttuuri ja suomalainen parisuhdeoikeus', 2001, Edita Publishing, p.18.

<sup>31</sup> Act on Adulterine Children (173/1922) s 4 and s 5 and S. Ojala 2001, p. 21.

<sup>32</sup> Apart from some exceptions such as mentally challenged children, look Act on Compulsory Education (101/1921) s 1(3), people living more than 5 kilometers from school and people living in a municipality, which has less than 3 person per square kilometer s1(2).

<sup>33</sup> HE 13/1919. Act on Compulsory Education (101/1921) was later on revoked, and the legislation concerning education was confirmed in the 1990s. In the Government bill 86/1997 it is said that it was time to reform the scattered laws concerning education. Present law concerning compulsory education is Perusopetuslaki, Basic Education Act (628/1998).

<sup>34</sup> In the Government Bill 90/1974 it is said that legislative improvements concerning children rights were made in the other Nordic Countries already in the 1960s, so it was about time Finland to notice the flaws in the legislation concerning children.

was that the parity of all children, regardless of their parentage, was highlighted.<sup>35</sup> A child's right to a childhood was mentioned and the child was recognized as an independent person. As a result, a new Paternity Act came into force in 1975. In the Paternity Act, child's right to a father and the importance of the father to child's mental development was recognized. In the same year also a new law on the Financial Support of the Child came into force.

Child Custody and Right to Access Act (361/1983) came into force on 1 January 1984. The law highlights the child's right to proper care and the child's best interest. The main objective of the act was to improve the legal protection of children and give the child a better opportunity to influence their own status.<sup>36</sup> The old Holhouslaki, Act on Guardianship of Children and Incompetent Persons (34/1898) regulated mostly financial relations between guardians and their ward.<sup>37</sup> The purpose of the new law was to start regulating the personal relations between the child and his or her custodian.<sup>38</sup> For example in Child Custody and Right to Access Act (361/1983) s 1(3) physical discipline was finally prohibited.

The Constitution (731/1999) recognizes the child as an independent person (s 6(3)) and acknowledges the child's vulnerable status and his or her right to wellbeing and personal development (s 19(3)).<sup>39</sup> The general approach to child-related issues is the child's best interest, which is highlighted in laws concerning children.<sup>40</sup>

There has been a general concern regarding disputes concerning the custody of a child, although most of the disputes end in agreement between the parents. According to the temporary report 2/2012 of the Ministry of Justice, about 90 % of the cases concerning the custody of children and the right to visit are settled in the social services department.<sup>41</sup> In

---

<sup>35</sup> Because of this development towards the parity of all children also adulterine children also got the right to inherit; Perintökaari, Inheritance act (710/1975) c 2 s 4 was removed and c 8 s 8 was changed.

<sup>36</sup> HE 224/1982, p. 4-5.

<sup>37</sup> HE 224/1982, p.3.

<sup>38</sup> HE 224/1982, p.4-5 and Child Custody and Right to Access Act (361/1983) s 1. The old Act on Guardianship of Children and Incompetent Person was not revoked. It continued to regulate the financial side, look HE 224/1982 p. 4. The law was reformed in 1999, when Holhoustoimilaki, the Guardianship Services Act (442/1999) came into force.

<sup>39</sup> See more Chapter II 1(i) of this report.

<sup>40</sup> For example Lastensuojelulaki, the Child Welfare Act (417/2007) s 4. Though there has been conversation about, how do Finnish procedural laws take the child's best interest into notice. See Chapter II 3(i) of this report.

<sup>41</sup> OM 2/2012, p.14.

2011 social services department confirmed 44 933 agreements on the custody of the child and right to visit.<sup>42</sup>

District courts handle on average 3600 cases concerning the custody of the child and the right to visit. In about 44 % of the cases child's custody and right to visit is discussed the first time.<sup>43</sup> According to the Act on the Custody of the Child and Right to Access (361/1983) it is also possible to change the verdict if the circumstances are changed.<sup>44</sup> About 44 % of the cases in district courts concern changing the given verdict based on a change of the circumstances. About 12 % of the cases concern changing the agreement on child's custody and right to visit.<sup>45</sup> Some of the conflicts become so called "custody dispute circles" in which the parents try to drag the case to court several times, in the worst case scenario till the child is 18-years old. According to a research made by Oikeuspoliittinen tutkimuslaitos, National Research Institute of Legal Policy, in 2006, about 25 % of the child custody cases handled in district courts are these kinds of "custody dispute circles".<sup>46</sup> The amount of these kinds of cases in Hovioikeudet, Courts of Appeal is about 34 % of all the child custody cases.<sup>47</sup>

The duration of a child custody hearing in district courts is on average 8 months, but almost half of the cases take over 9 months. Hearing times are longest in the biggest district courts such as Helsinki, Espoo and Oulu.<sup>48</sup>

Finnish government has noticed the issues concerning the disputes of child's custody and recognizes that a prolonged custody hearing can have a negative effect on a child's mental condition.<sup>49</sup> As a result, Finland has started testing the so called Follo –model. The aim was to test the model without any legislative changes, so the committee considering the testing

---

<sup>42</sup> A.Forss & S. Säkkinen, 'Lapsen elatus ja huolto 2011', Terveiden ja hyvinvoinninlaitos 12/2012, Suomen virallinen tilasto, 2012, p. 1.

<sup>43</sup> OM 2/2012, p. 16.

<sup>44</sup> Child Custody and Right to Access Act, (361/1983) s 12.

<sup>45</sup> OM 2/2012, p. 16.

<sup>46</sup> E. Valkama & A. Litmala, 'Lasten huoltoriidat käräjäoikeuksissa', Oikeuspoliittisentutkimuslaitoksen julkaisuja 224, (publication by the National Research Institute of Legal Policy), Porvoo, 2006, p.82.

<sup>47</sup> E. Valkama & A.Lasola, 'Lasten huoltoriidat hovioikeuksissa', Oikeuspoliittisentutkimuslaitoksen julkaisuja 234, (publication by National Research Institute of Legal Policy), Helsinki, 2008, p. 55.

<sup>48</sup> Valkama & Litmala, 2006, p. 53.

<sup>49</sup> OM 2/2012, p. 11.

of the Follo –model decided that the best way to organize the testing, was to apply only parts of the original model.<sup>50</sup>

In the Finnish Follo-model the main idea was to use professional assistants in the mediation process concerning the custody of the child in courts.<sup>51</sup> Professionals were decided to be hired for example from the social services and they were demanded to have special experience in the field of family couple and development psychology and especially working with families that have divorced.<sup>52</sup> The two year testing period started on the 1st of January 2011 in the district courts of Helsinki, Espoo, Oulu and Pohjois-Karjala.<sup>53</sup> The aim of the project was to shorten the time of the custody dispute process, achieve a sustainable agreement on child's custody, deal with the disagreements of the parents effectively and decrease the work load of courts and social services.<sup>54</sup> The testing was executed within the limits of the existing law called Laki riita-asioiden sovittelusta ja sovinnon vahvistamisesta yleisissä tuomioistuimissa, Act on mediation in civil matters and confirmation of settlement in general courts (394/2011).

Positive results have been achieved with the Follo –model. Till November 2011 district courts had had under way 234 issues of which 109 had ended in the mediation. Of those 109, 63 % had ended in agreement and 12 % in part-agreement. The average duration of the mediation was 1.5 months. This is much less than the average duration of a trial. Mediations have also decreased the number of reports asked from social services during a child custody trial. Because of the decrease, the waiting period for the report has shortened essentially.<sup>55</sup> The feedback given by the professionals and judges has mainly been positive. There has yet been no chance to collect and analyze the feedback given by the parties.<sup>56</sup> Because of the positive results the Ministry of Justice has decided to prolong the testing till the end of the year 2013 and widen the project to seven new district courts.<sup>57</sup> The Ministry of Justice has appointed a committee to research the possibility to make the use of professional assistant mandatory in child custody cases. The committee has proposed that the use of the

---

<sup>50</sup> OM 61/2010, description page.

<sup>51</sup> OM 61/2010, description page.

<sup>52</sup> OM 61/2010, p. 18.

<sup>53</sup> OM 1/31/2010, on 18 November 2010.

<sup>54</sup> OM 2/2012, p. 11.

<sup>55</sup> OM 2/2012, p.53-54.

<sup>56</sup> OM 2/2012, p. 47-49, p. 55.

<sup>57</sup> OM 1/31/2010, 1st March 2012.

professional assistants in child custody cases becomes one of municipality's statutory obligations.<sup>58</sup>

Media

There have been cases that have caught the eye of media in the past few years. Korkeimman oikeuden, The Supreme Court's, case 2005:93 aroused big media hype and affected the renewal of the definition of a sexual act in the Criminal Code. In the case, the father had repeatedly caressed and given long kisses during the years 1996-2001 to his underage children who were born in 1993 and 1995. The Supreme Court stated that the father had not committed a sexual act, because he did not try to achieve sexual satisfaction with the acts that was, at the time, an essential part of the definition of sexual act given in the Criminal Code (563/1998) c 20 s 10(2). The case got a lot of publicity and the public thought that the court had given a wrong verdict. The definition of the sexual act was finally changed in connection with the implementation of the Lanzarote convention.<sup>59</sup>

The Government Bill 282/2010 mentions also a case of the Court of Appeal. In the case a man, who pushed his finger several times to the anus of an 8-year-old boy in a swimming center was not convicted of a sexual abuse. According to the court the act was not considered sexual abuse, because the man did not try to achieve sexual satisfaction.<sup>60</sup> According to the present legislation penetration to one's anus is interpreted to be a sexual act but not sexual intercourse. There has been discussion of changing the definition of sexual intercourse so that it would cover penetration with finger. In the report 25/2012 of the Ministry of Justice, it is suggested that penetration to one's anus with an object or a finger would be interpreted as a sexual intercourse, which is at the moment defined in Criminal Code C 20 S 10(1).<sup>61</sup>

Family violence and family killings have been wildly presented in the media. One particular case which has been a topic of public discussion happened on the 13th of May 2012. The case has spread several investigations and heated a wider conversation on the state of the

---

<sup>58</sup> OM 36/2012, description page.

<sup>59</sup> In the Government bill 282/2010 the definition of the sexual act is discussed (p. 7-9). The new definition does not include the demand for sexual satisfaction, Criminal Code C 20 S 10(2).

<sup>60</sup> HE 282/2010, p. 8.

<sup>61</sup> OM 25/2012, description page.

child welfare. In the case, the father's and his girlfriend's abuse of an 8-year-old child led to the death of the child.<sup>62</sup> During the investigation older assaults and several child welfare declarations were also revealed from the background.<sup>63</sup> The child had already once been taken into custody, but had been returned back to her father.<sup>64</sup> Because of this the Police has started to investigate whether an offence has been committed in the office of the Helsinki Child Welfare Authority.<sup>65</sup> The child's father and his girlfriend are prosecuted for murder. Trial started in the district court of Helsinki on the 30th of August 2012.<sup>66</sup> The Government has decided that this case should be investigated thoroughly and thus has established an independent investigation group to do so. The investigation group is led by the Finnish Red Cross Secretary General. Also the Ministry of Social Affairs and Health has established a research group to clarify, how the Child Welfare Act (417/2007) and the child welfare practice work, and how the legislation should be changed.<sup>67</sup>

Child welfare's biggest problems are a great amount of clients and the incompetence of the staff. According to the report of Etelä-Suomen aluehallintovirasto, the Regional State Administrative agency of Southern Finland, published on the 28th of November 2011, there are on average 38.5 client families per social worker in the Social Services Open Welfare Department, when the recommendation of the Ministry of Social Affairs and Health would be average 25-30 client families per social worker.<sup>68</sup> The number of client families was over

---

<sup>62</sup> N. Ranta, 'Viihdetaiteilijaa ja naisystävää epäillään 8-vuotiaan tytön murhasta', in MTV3 28 August 2012, viewed on 19 September 2012, <<http://www.mtv3.fi/uutiset/rikos.shtml/viihdetaiteilijaa-ja-naisystavaa-epaillaan-8-vuotiaan-tyton-murhasta/2012/08/1605556>>.

<sup>63</sup> 'Surmatun tytön naapurit: kantelimme monta kertaa viranomaisille' in Helsingin Sanomat on 3 September 2012, viewed on 19 September 2012, <<http://www.hs.fi/kotimaa/Surmatun+tyt%C3%B6n+naapurit+Kantelimme+monta+kertaa+viranomaisille/a1305596933091>>.

<sup>64</sup> 'Kahdeksan vuotiaan tytön kuolema käynnisti selvitysten sarjan' in Helsingin Sanomat on 3 September 2012, viewed on 28 October 2012 <<http://www.hs.fi/kotimaa/Kahdeksanvuotiaan+kuolema+k%C3%A4ynnisti+selvitysten+sarjan++/a1305596926811>>.

<sup>65</sup> A. Blencowe, 'Lastensuojelun toimista tutkinta 8-vuotiaan tytön tapauksessa', in YLE on 3 September, viewed on 19 September, 2012, <http://yle.fi/uutiset/lastensuojelun\_toimista\_tutkinta\_8-vuotiaan\_tyton\_tapauksessa/6279539>.

<sup>66</sup> T. Hirsimäki, 'Syyttäjä vaatii elinkautista 8-vuotiaan tytön murhasta', in YLE on 30 August 2012, viewed on 18 September 2012, <http://yle.fi/uutiset/syyttaja\_vaatii\_elinkautisia\_8-vuotiaan\_murhasta/6275288>.

<sup>67</sup> 'SPR:stä johtaja 8-vuotiaan tytön kuoleman tutkintaan', in Helsingin Sanomat on 24 October 2012, viewed on 28 October 2012 <<http://www.hs.fi/kotimaa/SPRst%C3%A4+johtaja+8-vuotiaan+tyt%C3%B6n+kuoleman+tutkintaan/a1305609764232>>.

<sup>68</sup> M. Miettinen & M.-L. Steenroos, 'Lupaako laki liikaa', Etelä-Suomen aluehallintoviraston julkaisuja 15/2011, Hämeenlinna, 2011, p.45.

50 in eight municipalities.<sup>69</sup> According to the same report only 58% of the staff of the social services open welfare is qualified for the job.<sup>70</sup> Qualification requirements are in Laissa sosiaalihuollon ammatillisen henkilöstön kelpoisuusvaatimuksista, the Act on Qualification Requirements for Social Welfare Professionals, (272/2005).

- iv. The relevant sections on the implementation of international treaties can be found in Chapter 8 of the Constitution, which regulates competence in the area of foreign policy issues (s 93), acceptance of international obligations and their denouncement (s 94) and bringing into force of international obligations (s 95).

According to the section 95 of the Constitution, the relationship between national law and international treaties is dualistic, that is, the entry into force of an international obligation in the national legal system requires a separate introductory act or decree.

The date of ratification of the Convention on the Rights of the Child is 20th June 1991. Finland has made no reservations to the Convention.<sup>71</sup> The Committee on the Rights of the Child published its concluding observations on Finland's report on the implementation of the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the 17th of June 2011. In its remarks, the Committee welcomes a number of measures undertaken by the Finnish government in relation to the Convention. These include the National Action Plan to reduce the use of corporal punishments, the Development Programme on Child and Youth Policy, the Child Welfare Act of 2007 and amendments to it and the Act on Measures for Preventing the Distribution of Child Pornography. However, the Committee also expresses concern at several issues, including the continuing discrimination against children from ethnic minorities, the lack of measures to guarantee the rights of children seeking asylum, the lack of a coordination system that would oversee the full implementation of the Convention on all levels (national, municipal, regional), the long duration of custodial disputes, the high number of children living in families with substance abuse problems and in institutions, the lack of adequate mental health services for children and young people, the prevalence of

---

<sup>69</sup> Etelä-Suomen aluehallintovirasto, 15/2011, p. 45.

<sup>70</sup> Etelä-Suomen aluehallintovirasto, 15/2011, description page.

<sup>71</sup> Homepage of United Nations, Treaty Collection, viewed on 7 November, <<http://treaties.un.org/Home.aspx?lang=en>>.

bullying and of sexual and gender-based harassment of girls and the difficulties faced by certain groups of children in the education system.<sup>72</sup>

- v. According to the Ministry of Justice, it is currently being estimated whether the Directive will require any changes to the current legislation. After changes made with view to implementing the Lanzarote Convention, it seems that the Finnish legislation already quite extensively fulfils the requirements of the Directive. Any possible changes are likely to be of a minor character and related to extending the background checks for people working with children to volunteer workers.<sup>73</sup>

2 THE LANZAROTE CONVENTION

- i. Finland ratified the European Convention on Human Rights on 10 May 1990.<sup>74</sup>
- ii. Finland signed the Lanzarote Convention on the 25th of October 2007 and ratified it on the 9th of June 2011. Finland did not make such reservations to the Convention that would have required inclusion in the instrument of ratification.<sup>75</sup> However, Finland has made a reservation, which is allowed in subparagraph 2 of paragraph 3 of article 20 (pictures produced by children solely for their own private use).<sup>76</sup> Finland does not apply paragraph 2 of article 24, when it comes to the attempt of offences mentioned in articles 20(1)(e)(possessing child pornography), 20(1)(f)(knowingly obtaining access, through information and communication technologies, to child pornography), 23(solicitation of children for sexual purposes). Finland does not apply paragraph 2 of article 24, when it comes to 20(1)(d) procuring child pornography only for oneself.<sup>77</sup>
- v. The Convention as an entity has been implemented into the national legal order by the presidential decree 1037/2011. The legislative changes required have been made to the

<sup>72</sup> Committee on the Rights of the Child: Consideration of reports submitted by State parties under article 44 of the Convention. Concluding Observations: Finland, 2011.

<sup>73</sup> Phone conversation with Counsellor of Legislation of the Ministry of Justice Janne Kanerva on 24 August 2012.

<sup>74</sup> Homepage of Council of Europe, Treaty Office (Council of Europe Convention on the Protection of Children Against Sexual Exploitation and Sexual Abuse), viewed on 7 November 2012, <<http://conventions.coe.int/Treaty/Commun/ChercheSig.asp?NT=201&CM=8&DF=22/08/2012&CL=ENG>>.

<sup>75</sup> Homepage of Council of Europe, Treaty Office (Council of Europe Convention on the Protection of Children Against Sexual Exploitation and Sexual Abuse), viewed on 7 November 2012, <<http://conventions.coe.int/Treaty/Commun/ChercheSig.asp?NT=201&CM=8&DF=22/08/2012&CL=ENG>>.

<sup>76</sup> HE 282/2010, p. 56, see more about the reservation Chapter II 2(c)(xiii).

<sup>77</sup> HE 282/2010, p. 62-63.

relevant Acts, namely the Criminal Code (39/1889), Laki liiketoimintakiellosta, the Business Prohibition Act (1059/1985), the Child Welfare Act (417/2007) and Rikosrekisterilaki, the Criminal Records Act (770/1993).

- vi. There is no one piece of legislation which includes all the changes made with view to implementing the Convention; the necessary changes have been made to the relevant Acts (see above).

II NATIONAL LEGISLATION

1 GENERAL PRINCIPLES OF THE JURISDICTION

- xxvii. The Republic of Finland became independent on the 6th of December 1917 after a period of almost 100 years under the Russian rule as an autonomous Grand Duchy in the Russian Empire (1809-1917). Before Russian rule, Finland belonged to the Swedish Empire from the 13th century to the beginning of the 19th century. After gaining independence, Finland became a member of the United Nations in 1956, of the Council of Europe in 1989, and of the European Union in 1995.<sup>78</sup>

Finland has a central government, and the form of government is parliamentary democracy. The unicameral Parliament is the highest state organ and consists of 200 members who are elected by a direct, proportional and secret vote by the citizens of Finland for a term of four years. The legislative powers vest in the Parliament. Before the enactment of the 1906 Parliament Act, the people of Finland were presented by the Diet and four Estates - the nobles, clergy, burghers and the peasant. Before independence, the highest state organ in Finland was the Grand Prince (the King of Sweden and later the Russian Tsar).<sup>79</sup>

The President is the head of state and he is elected by the citizens of Finland in a direct and secret vote. The term for president is six years and maximum two terms consecutively. Originally, Finland was going to become a monarchy after gaining independence and a German prince was selected to become the King of Finland. However, after the First World War, the monarchy decision was discarded and Finland became a republic. The powers of the President have been diminished over time. Nowadays, one of the President's most important tasks is to lead foreign policy together with the Government.<sup>80</sup> Finland has had twelve different presidents since its independence.

---

<sup>78</sup> Decree 1/1956, Decree 21/1989 and Decree 103/1994.

<sup>79</sup> A. Jyränki & J. Husa, Valtiösääntöoikeus, Lakimiesliiton Kustannus, Hämeenlinna, 2012, p. 20-30.

The Government is comprised of the Prime Minister and Ministers. The Government has to enjoy the confidence of the Parliament. The President appoints the prime minister, whom the Parliament has elected, and the ministers, which the Prime Minister has proposed. Governmental powers belong to the Government and the President. Finland has had 72 Governments since its independence. The Governments have changed from being mostly minority and non-partisan caretaker governments to majority governments.<sup>81</sup> Before independence, when Finland was under Russian rule, the Senate of Finland exercised governmental powers together with the Tsar who was represented by the Governor-General of Finland.<sup>82</sup>

In addition to the Parliament, President and the Government, the current Finnish administrative structure consists of independent courts of justice that exercise judicial power, and of central administration and other public administration. The central administration consists of central, regional and local state administration. The central state administration consists of twelve ministries and their executive agencies and institutes. They have undergone many changes since 1980. Regional state administration consists of authorities through which the ministries carry out their responsibilities at regional and local level. A reform concerning regional state administration was done in 2010 and there are currently two important bodies: Aluehallintovirasto, the Regional State Administrative Agencies, and Elinkeino-, liikenne- ja ympäristökeskus, Centres for Economic Development, Transport and the Environment. Finally, local state administration is divided into state local districts.<sup>83</sup> The other public administration consists of a) local authorities i.e. the municipalities, and b) central government agencies such as the Bank of Finland, the Social Insurance Institution of Finland, and the Population Register Centre. According to the section 121 of the Constitution, the municipalities (in total 336) have self-government. This means that they are

---

<sup>80</sup> Jyränki & Husa, p. 39-41, 50, 58, 60, 170-171.

<sup>81</sup> Homepage of the Government of Finland, viewed on 4 September, 2012. <www.government.fi>, viewed on 25 August 2012, <<http://valtioneuvosto.fi/tietoa-valtioneuvostosta/hallitukset/en.jsp>>.

<sup>82</sup> Jyränki & Husa, p. 26-27, 30-31.

<sup>83</sup> The respective agencies that operate at state local district level are the local police, prosecutor, enforcement office, register offices, employment offices, tax offices, customs, and legal aid offices. For information about the central administration, see the Finnish public sector online services portal, viewed on 25 August 2012, <http://www.suomi.fi/suomifi/english/state\_and\_municipalities/index.html>.

entitled to take care and decide on their own local matters, but in addition, they are also obligated to provide certain statutory state administration services such as education, health care, and social welfare services including child welfare services.<sup>84</sup> The duties of the municipalities are mainly administrative; they do not have legislative or executive powers.<sup>85</sup> The Åland Islands province has provincial autonomy under which the Åland parliament has also legislative powers in certain matters.<sup>86</sup>

- xxviii. According to the section 1(2) of the Constitution of Finland, the Constitution “guarantees the inviolability of human dignity and the freedom and rights of the individual and promotes justice in society.” The Finnish “Basic rights and liberties” are included under the chapter two of the Constitution. The current Constitution came into force in 2000, after a reform which gathered the previous four constitution level statutes into one.<sup>87</sup> Even though the current Constitution is new, basic rights and liberties were acknowledged already in the 1870’s Diet, and in 1906, freedom of expression, assembly and association were confirmed to have the status of constitutional law. During the 1995 fundamental rights reform, the basic rights and liberties went through a comprehensive reform, and for example, economical, social and cultural rights were added to the Constitution. The current Constitution depicts the basic rights and freedoms as they were after the 1995 reform.<sup>88</sup>

The spectrum of rights guaranteed in the Constitution is broad and includes equality; the right to life, personal liberty, integrity and security; the principle of legality in criminal cases; freedom of movement; right to privacy; freedom of religion and conscience; freedom of expression and right of access to information; freedom of assembly and freedom of association; electoral and participatory rights; protection of property; educational rights; right to one’s language and culture; the right to work and the freedom to engage in

<sup>84</sup> The municipalities have the right to collect tax for their own matters and statutory services. In addition, the state gives funding for the municipalities to provide the statutory services. Jyränki & Husa, p. 213-215. See also Kuntalaki, the Local Government Act (365/1995).

<sup>85</sup> Jyränki & Husa, p. 213.

<sup>86</sup> About Åland, see Ahvenanmaan itsehallintolaki, the Act on the Autonomy of Åland (1144/1991) and Jyränki & Husa, p. 107-110, 221.

<sup>87</sup> Suomen hallitusmuoto, the Form of Government Act (94/1919), Valtiopäiväjärjestys, the Diet Act (7/1928), Laki valtakunnanoikeudesta, Act on the High Court of Impeachment (273/1922), Laki eduskunnan oikeudesta tarkastaa valtioneuvosten jäsenten ja oikeuskanslerin virkatointen lainmukaisuutta, Ministerial Responsibility Act (274/1922).

<sup>88</sup> P. Hallberg, H. Karapuu, T. Ojanen, M. Scheinin, K. Tuori, V-P. Viljanen, Perusoikeudet, WSOYpro, Helsinki, 2011, p. 31-35, and Jyränki & Husa, p. 33.

commercial activity; the right to social security; responsibility for the environment; and protection under law. The Finnish constitutional rights system protects the basic rights and freedoms to a high level as they can only be limited or restricted with an Act passed by the Parliament, or with an Act that has been enacted using the same order that is used to enact the Constitution.<sup>89</sup>

The Finnish constitutional rights apply for everyone within the jurisdiction of Finland, also to children.<sup>90</sup> In addition, there are some references directly to children and some of the constitutional rights can be considered mostly of importance to children. According to the section 6(2) (“Equality”), no one shall be treated differently on the ground of age, and according to the section 6(3) children should be treated equally and as individuals and they should be allowed to influence matters pertaining to themselves to a degree corresponding to their level of development.<sup>91</sup> The section 12(1) (“Freedom of Expression and right of access to information”) protects children against harmful programs, and the section 16 (“Educational rights”) states that everyone has the right to free basic education. In addition, the section 19(3) (“Right to social security”) stipulates that the public authorities have to support families and others responsible for providing for children so that they can ensure the wellbeing and personal development of the children.

Children’s rights are also protected in lower level statutes such as the Child Custody and Right of Access Act (361/1983), Child Welfare Act (417/2007), Basic Education Act (628/1998), and the Paternity Act (700/1975). For example, according to the Basic Education Act, children have the right and the obligation to complete free basic compulsory schooling (usually for nine years). Children also have the right to sufficient maintenance, the right to meet the parent with whom he or she does not reside with, the right of action for the establishment of paternity, and the right to present his or her view on a child welfare case that affects him or her.

---

<sup>89</sup> For more information about the other requirements on limitation and restriction of constitutional rights, see Hallberg et al., p. 139-170. See also section 80 of the Constitution.

<sup>90</sup> For an exception, see the section 14: “Electoral and participatory rights”.

<sup>91</sup> This implies that children might not be able to claim their rights independently but instead the child’s parent or custodian represents the rights of the child. As children grow, they are gradually given more power to influence matters pertaining to themselves.

The national constitutional rights framework is complemented by European Union law including the European Charter of Fundamental Rights<sup>92</sup>, as well as international human rights treaties and instruments.<sup>93</sup> The international human right treaties and instruments are binding on Finland under international law after Finland has ratified them. However, as Finland is a dualistic state, the international treaties and instruments need to be incorporated or transformed into domestic Finnish law with an Act or a Decree or both in order for them to become part of the domestic legal order.<sup>94</sup> The status of them in the Finnish domestic legal order depends on the nature of the statute that has been used to incorporate or transform them.<sup>95</sup> Some of the most important human rights instruments which Finland has ratified and which have been made part of the domestic Finnish law are the following (in brackets the year when the treaty came to force in Finland):

- The UN International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights (1976)<sup>96</sup>
- The UN International Covenant on Economical, Social, and Cultural Rights (1976)<sup>97</sup>
- The European Convention on Human Rights (1990)<sup>98</sup>
- The UN Convention on the Rights of the Child (1991)<sup>99</sup>.

xxix. Finland does not have a Constitutional Court. Instead, an essential part of monitoring constitutionality and hence the implementation and interpretation of constitutional rights in Finland, has been the prior control of statutes and other matters by the Finnish Parliament's Constitutional Law Committee. In brief, this means that the Committee drafts statements about the constitutionality and adherence to international human rights of statutes and other

---

<sup>92</sup> Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union (2000/C 364/01).

<sup>93</sup> Hallberg et al., p. 171.

<sup>94</sup> Jyräki & Husa, p. 293-294. See also section 94 ad 95 of the Constitution.

<sup>95</sup> Hallberg et al., p. 182, 815.

<sup>96</sup> Laki kansalaisoikeuksia ja poliittisia oikeuksia koskevan kansainvälisen yleissopimuksen eräiden määräysten hyväksymisestä, Act on some provisions of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights (107/1976) and Decree 108/1976.

<sup>97</sup> Decree 6/1976.

<sup>98</sup> Laki ihmisoikeuksien ja perusvapauksien suojaamiseksi tehdyn yleissopimuksen ja siihen liittyvien lisäpöytäkirjojen eräiden määräysten hyväksymisestä, Act on the European Convention on Human Rights (438/1990) and Decree 439/1990.

<sup>99</sup> Laki lapsen oikeuksia koskevan yleissopimuksen eräiden määräysten hyväksymisestä, Act on the Convention on the Rights of the Child (1129/1991) and Decree 60/1991.

matters before they are passed. The prior control has been exercised in Finland since the 1860's.<sup>100</sup>

Even though there is no Constitutional Court, individuals can rely on the other existing courts to claim their constitutional rights. The Finnish general judicial court system in civil and criminal matters consists of three instances: Käräjäoikeudet, District Courts (in total 27), Hovioikeudet, Courts of Appeal (in total 6) and Korkein oikeus, the Supreme Court. Administrative law matters (decisions made by authorities) are reviewed by Hallinto-oikeudet, the general Administrative Courts and Korkein hallinto-oikeus, the Supreme Administrative Court. In addition, there are special courts: Markkinaoikeus, the Market Court, Työtuomioistuin, the Labour Court, Vakuutusoikey, the Insurance Court and Valtakunnanoikeus, the High Court of Impeachment.<sup>101</sup>

Of the three criminal and civil law instances the two lower instances are in principle unrestricted. However, a leave for continued consideration is required for certain minor civil disputes and criminal offences for the Courts of Appeal.<sup>102</sup> The leave should nevertheless always be granted when there is a cause to doubt the correctness of the conclusion of the District Court or if there are some other important reasons.<sup>103</sup> A leave to appeal is always required for the Supreme Court, unless a Court of Appeal has been the first instance to examine a case.<sup>104</sup> The grounds on which the Supreme Court can grant a leave to appeal and how the request for appeal should be done are stated in the chapter 30 of Oikeudenkäymiskaari, the Code of Judicial Procedure (4/1734).<sup>105</sup> According to the chapter, a request for leave of appeal should be delivered to the Court of Appeal, addressed to the Supreme Court, within 60 days from the day the decision of the Court of Appeal was made

<sup>100</sup> Jyränki & Husa, p. 28-29, 83, 349-358. See also the Constitution of Finland, section 74.

<sup>101</sup> See The Constitution of Finland, chapter 9 - Administration of Justice, for powers granted to courts.

Provisions on special courts are given by separate acts: Markkinaoikeuslaki, the Market Court Act (1527/2001), Vakuutusoikeyslaki, the Insurance Court Act (132/2003), Laki työtuomioistuimesta, Act on the Labour Court (646/1974), as well as section 101 of the Constitution of Finland.

<sup>102</sup> The Code of Judicial Procedure, c 25a.

<sup>103</sup> The Code of Judicial Procedure, c 25a, s 11.

<sup>104</sup> The Code of Judicial Procedure, c 30, s 2.

<sup>105</sup> According to c 30, s 3: "Leave to appeal may be granted only if it is important to bring the case before the Supreme Court for a decision with regard to the application of the law in other, similar cases or because of the uniformity of legal practice; if there is a special reason for this because of a procedural or other error that has been made in the case on the basis of which the judgment is to be reversed or annulled; or if there is another important reason for granting leave to appeal."

available for the parties.<sup>106</sup> According to the chapter 2 section 9 of the Code of Judicial Procedure, the decision on admissibility is decided by two or three members of the Supreme Court. It is also possible to request a leave for a precedent from the Supreme Court after obtaining a decision from a District Court.<sup>107</sup> Administrative decisions made by the authorities can in turn be appealed to an Administrative Court and thereafter normally to the Supreme Administrative Court.<sup>108</sup> After all domestic legal remedies have been exhausted, it is usually possible for individuals to apply to the European Court of Human Rights or use the remedies available at European Union level.<sup>109</sup>

International human rights (after they have been incorporated or transformed into domestic law) and constitutional rights have direct effect in Finland: individuals can individually base their claim on them and the courts can base their judgements on them.<sup>110</sup> The courts even have to take them into account ex officio if individuals have not based their claim on them.<sup>111</sup> For example, in its decision KKO 2012:81 concerning secrecy of correspondence, the Supreme Court referred directly to the right to privacy as guaranteed by the section 10(2) of the Constitution and the article 8 of the European Convention on Human Rights.<sup>112</sup> Secondly, in addition to their direct effect and applicability, the courts should interpret statutes so that the interpretation is in conformity with constitutional rights and human rights i.e. interpret the statutes in a constitutional rights and human rights friendly way.<sup>113</sup>

<sup>106</sup> The appeal instructions are annexed to the decision of the Court of Appeal, see Code of Judicial Procedure, c 30, s 4.

<sup>107</sup> Both parties have to consent to the procedure. See Laki oikeudenkäynnistä rikosasioissa, the Criminal Procedure Act (689/1997), c 30a.

<sup>108</sup> See Hallintolainkäyttölaki, the Administrative Judicial Procedure Act (586/1996), and Hallintolaki, Administrative Procedure Act (434/2003).

<sup>109</sup> J. Virolainen, P. Pölönen, Rikosprosessioikeus. 1: Rikosprosessin perusteet, WSOY Lakitieto, Helsinki, 2003, p. 59. See also e.g. the article 26 of the European Convention on Human Rights.

<sup>110</sup> D. Frände, E. Havansi, D. Helenius, R. Koulou, J. Lappalainen, H. Lindfors, J. Niemi, J. Rautio, J. Virolainen, Prosessioikeus, Sanoma Pro, Helsinki, 2012, p. 92, 233, and Hallberg et al., p. 181-182, 869-873, and Jyränki & Husa, p. 83, 381. The direct effect of constitutional rights was one of the aims of the 1995 fundamental rights reform. Hallberg et al., p. 869.

<sup>111</sup> Hallberg et al., p. 872.

<sup>112</sup> In the decision, the court stated that the section 10(2) of the Constitution and the article 8 of the European Convention on Human Rights was breached when a prison guard had accidentally opened a letter that was intended for a remand prisoner. The court referred to the case law of the European Court of Human Rights as well as its own case law and stated that the effective realization of fundamental and human rights requires that damages are sometimes paid to a person whose fundamental or human rights have been severely breached by a public official. In the particular case, the court considered that the prisoner was not entitled to damages as the breach was such a minor one.

<sup>113</sup> Jyränki & Husa, p. 83, 381. Hallberg et al., p. 816, 864. The section 22 of the Constitution is the legal basis for constitutional rights and human rights friendly interpretation of statutes. Hallberg et al., p. 189.

This includes taking into account relevant human rights case law in interpretation<sup>114</sup> and interpreting also the constitutional rights in a human rights friendly way.<sup>115</sup> Also individuals can refer to international human rights and constitutional rights as an interpretation tool in the interpretation of statutes. Thirdly, if a conflict between the Constitution and an Act cannot be solved in an individual case by interpreting the Act in a constitutional rights friendly way, the courts must in that case ex officio give primacy to the provisions of the Constitution according to the section 106 of the Constitution. In addition, according to the section 107 of the Constitution, if a decree or another statute lower level than an act is in conflict with the Constitution or an act, the courts must not apply the decree or a statute lower level than an act.<sup>116</sup> Fourthly, human rights and related case law can be used to fulfil existing caps in domestic law.<sup>117</sup>

In addition to the courts, there are also other institutions which review constitutionality and human rights issues in Finland, and in fact, according to the section 22 of the Constitution, all public authorities shall guarantee “the observance of basic rights and liberties and human rights”<sup>118</sup>. For example, both valtioneuvoston oikeuskansleri, the Chancellor of Justice of the Government, and eduskunnan oikeusasiamies, the Parliamentary Ombudsman, monitor the implementation of international and national human rights, and anyone who believes that a constitutional or human right has not been fulfilled can file a complaint to the Chancellor or to the Ombudsman.<sup>119</sup> In addition, Finland has Ihmisoikeuskeskus, a Human Rights Centre, that promotes fundamental and human rights. The centre was established by an act in 2012 and is administratively part of the Office of the Parliamentary Ombudsman. The centre does not, however, handle individual complaints or cases.<sup>120</sup> An important addition regarding the

---

<sup>114</sup> Hallberg et al., p. 178. Jyränki & Husa, p. 380-382.

<sup>115</sup> Jyränki & Husa, p. 85, 87, 99, 380.

<sup>116</sup> Hallberg et al., p. 813. Jyränki & Husa, p. 358-360.

<sup>117</sup> Jyränki & Husa, p. 101, 381-382.

<sup>118</sup> See more about the duty of the public authorities to guarantee constitutional and human rights on Hallberg et al., p. 116-119. The section 22 of the Constitution is also the legal basis for constitutional rights and human rights friendly interpretation of statutes. Hallberg et al., p. 189.

<sup>119</sup> The Constitution of Finland, c 10, s 108 and 109. Laki valtioneuvoston oikeuskanslerista, Act on the Chancellor of Justice of the Government (193/2000). Laki eduskunnan oikeusasiamiehestä, The Parliamentary Ombudsman Act, c 3 (197/2002). See the homepage of the Office of the Chancellor of Justice on how to file a complaint, viewed on 19 August 2012, <<http://www.chancellorofjustice.fi/index.html>> and the homepage of the Parliamentary Ombudsman on how to file a complaint, viewed on 19 August 2012, <<http://www.oikeusasiamies.fi/Resource.php/ea/english/complaints/index.htm>>.

<sup>120</sup> The chapter 3 of the Parliamentary Ombudsman Act. See also the homepage of the Parliamentary Ombudsman about the Human Rights Centre, viewed on 19 August 2012,

implementation of children's rights is Lapsiasiainvaltuutettu, the Ombudsman for Children, who monitors the implementation of children's rights and gives annual reports concerning children and youth to the Finnish government. The Ombudsman for Children does not either handle individual complaints or cases.<sup>121</sup>

- xxx. There is no separate Criminal Supreme Court in Finland. Instead, according to the section 99 of the Constitution, the general Supreme Court has the power to examine both civil and criminal law cases. Also, the criminal procedure is in some parts similar to the civil procedure. For example, the due process and fair trial guarantees in the section 21 of the Constitution apply to all procedures.<sup>122</sup> In addition, the Code of Judicial Procedure contains provisions applicable both to civil and criminal law cases.<sup>123</sup> On the other hand, there are also laws that are intended specially for criminal procedure. These include, for example, Laki oikeudenkäynnistä rikosasioissa, the Criminal Procedure Act (689/1997), Laki syyttäjälaitoksesta, the Act on Prosecution Service (439/2011), Pakkokeinolaki, the Coercive Means Act (450/1987), Esitutkintalaki, the Criminal Investigation Act (449/1987), and Poliisilaki, the Police Act (493/1995).<sup>124</sup>

In addition to the due process requirements, there are several other principles that should be followed in criminal procedure and these include among other things those required by the European Convention on Human Rights and other international instruments.<sup>125</sup> The main procedural principles that are followed in the Finnish criminal procedure are the principle of immediacy, principle of orality, concentration of proceedings, publicity of the proceedings, and the contradictory principle.<sup>126</sup> Other important principles include, for example, that the suspect has the right not to contribute to the solving of the case or give any type of

---

<<http://www.oikeusasiamies.fi/Resource.phx/ea/english/hrc/general.htm>>.

<sup>121</sup> Laki lapsiasiainvaltuutetusta, Act on the Ombudsman for Children (1221/2004). See also the homepage of the Ombudsman for Children, viewed on 20 August 2012, <<http://www.lapsiasia.fi/en/frontpage>>.

<sup>122</sup> "Everyone has the right to have his or her case dealt with appropriately and without undue delay by a legally competent court of law or other authority, as well as to have a decision pertaining to his or her rights or obligations reviewed by a court of law or other independent organ for the administration of justice. Provisions concerning the publicity of proceedings, the right to be heard, the right to receive a reasoned decision and the right of appeal, as well as the other guarantees of a fair trial and good governance shall be laid down by an Act."

<sup>123</sup> See the c 12, s1 of the Criminal Procedure Act about the applicability of the Code of Judicial Procedure to criminal law cases.

<sup>124</sup> Note that the latter three acts have been annulled by new acts (806/2011, 805/2011, 872/2011,) which shall come into force on 1 January 2014.

<sup>125</sup> Frände et al., p. 92-99.

<sup>126</sup> For more information about the procedural principles see Frände et al, p. 119-234.

statements (the principle of self-incrimination)<sup>127</sup>, the presumption of innocence<sup>128</sup>, and the free evaluation of evidence.<sup>129</sup>

The Finnish criminal procedure can be divided into four main stages: 1) pre-trial investigation, 2) consideration of charges, 3) court trial, and 4) sentencing and enforcement. Normally, after an offence has been reported and there is a reason to suspect that a crime has been committed, the police starts a pre-trial investigation to find out whether a crime was committed.<sup>130</sup> In the investigation, information is collected about the circumstances of the crime and the identity of the parties concerned among other things.<sup>131</sup> The principle of impartiality has to be followed in the investigation which means that both pro and contra information about the suspect needs to be collected.<sup>132</sup> If there are no reasons to the contrary, the case is forwarded to prosecutor for consideration of charges.<sup>133</sup>

On the basis of the pre-trial investigation information, the public prosecutor determines whether to bring charges against the suspect or not. If the offence is subject to prosecution that rests with the injured party, the prosecutor is not entitled to bring charges unless it is the will of the injured party or unless there is a very important public interest to bring charges.<sup>134</sup> If the offence is subject to public prosecution and there is a prima facie case against the suspect, the prosecutor should bring charges unless there are reasons not to.<sup>135</sup> If the prosecutor does not bring charges, the injured party has a secondary right to bring charges against the suspect.<sup>136</sup> Charges are brought by making an application for a summons normally to a District Court.<sup>137</sup>

---

<sup>127</sup> The Criminal Procedure Act, c 4, s 3.

<sup>128</sup> The Criminal Procedure Act, c 4, s 2.

<sup>129</sup> The Code of Judicial Procedure, c 17, s 2: "After having carefully evaluated all the facts that have been presented, the court shall decide what is to be regarded as the truth in the case."

<sup>130</sup> Also the customs or border guard authorities can carry out pre-investigation in certain cases. The Criminal Investigation Act, s 2.

<sup>131</sup> The Criminal Investigation Act, s 5.

<sup>132</sup> The Criminal Investigation Act, s 7.

<sup>133</sup> The Criminal Investigation Act, s 43.

<sup>134</sup> The offences which are subject to prosecution that rests with the injured party are specified in the Criminal Code (39/1889). M. Vuorenpää, Prosessioikeuden perusteet: prosessioikeuden yleisiä lähtökohtia sekä menettely käyräjoikeuden tuomioon asti, WSOYpro, Helsinki, 2009, p. 143-144. See also the Criminal Investigation Act, s 3.

<sup>135</sup> The Criminal Procedure Act, c 1, s 6.

<sup>136</sup> Frände et al., p. 427.

<sup>137</sup> The Criminal Procedure Act, c 5, s 1.

If there are no reasons to the contrary, the District Court shall issue a summons.<sup>138</sup> After preparation, the case is transferred to the main hearing or simple cases can also be decided in a written procedure (summary trial).<sup>139</sup> The court may only give a judgement on an act which charges have been brought or for which the court can give a judgement on its own initiative.<sup>140</sup> If the injured party has also made a claim for compensation with regards to the offence, the court may also decide on that in the same procedure.<sup>141</sup> In the District Courts, cases are normally heard by one judge together with three lay judges. Simple cases can be heard by one judge only. In complex and large cases, three judges hear the case.<sup>142</sup> The judgement must be either conviction or acquittal.<sup>143</sup> After all appeal instances have been used, the judgement becomes final and it is enforced. Sentences are enforced by Rikosseuraamuslaitos, the Criminal Sanctions Agency.<sup>144</sup>

Criminal procedure in the Supreme Court

Regarding the application procedure to the Supreme Court, we refer to the question iii. of this report's section "General principles of the jurisdiction". If the Supreme Court has granted a leave for appeal, the court requests a response from the opposing party unless it has already been done in connection with the request for leave for appeal.<sup>145</sup> Cases are decided on the basis of written trial documents, unless it is necessary to hold an oral hearing of the case, and in which case also the documentation presented at the hearing is taken into account.<sup>146</sup> Normally a case is decided by five members of the Supreme Court. If the case is important in principle or if the court wants to change its previous precedent, a case is decided by eleven members of the court or all members of the court.<sup>147</sup> Precedents given by the Supreme Court are not considered directly binding under law but they guide the lower courts, and secure conformity and consistency of how laws are applied.<sup>148</sup>

<sup>138</sup> The Code of Judicial Procedure, c 5, s 8.

<sup>139</sup> The Criminal Procedure Act, c 5, s 12, and c 5a, s 1.

<sup>140</sup> The Criminal Procedure Act, c 11, s 3.

<sup>141</sup> Frände et al., p. 575.

<sup>142</sup> The Code of Judicial Procedure, c 2.

<sup>143</sup> The Criminal Procedure Act, c 11, s 4.

<sup>144</sup> Laki rikosseuraamuslaitoksesta, Act on the Criminal Sanctions Agency (953/2009), s 1.

<sup>145</sup> The Criminal Procedure Act, c 30, s 10.

<sup>146</sup> The Criminal Procedure Act, c 30, s 20 and 21a.

<sup>147</sup> Laki korkeimmasta oikeudesta, Act on the Supreme Court (665/2005), c 2, s 7.

<sup>148</sup> Jyränki & Husa, p. 327.

xxxi. According to the Criminal Code (39/1889), criminal liability starts after one has reached the age of fifteen. There are some special arrangements for persons below the age of 18 in the Criminal Code, and for those considered “young offenders” (15-20 years of age) in Laissa nuoren rikoksesta epäillyn tilanteen selvittämisestä, Act on Examining the Situation of a Young Offender Suspected of a Crime (633/2010). The section 6 of the Criminal Code states, for example, that if the offence was committed under the age of 18, a mitigated penal latitude is to be used, juvenile penalty can be used as a punishment, unconditional sentences (prison sentences) should not usually be imposed, and that in certain cases criminal punishments can also be waived completely. Therefore, the amount of child prisoners in Finland is already limited as unconditional sentences are not usually imposed on children in the first place, and if they are, the person might be over 18 years at the time of sentencing and hence not considered a child prisoner anymore.

Rikosseuraamuslaitos, The Criminal Sanctions Agency keeps a record and makes statistics of the child prisoner amounts. It announces the number of persons in prison twice every month (on the 1st and 16th day of each month), and can make and provide statistics by request if possible. According to the prison announcement on the 1st of September 2012, there were four child remand prisoners and two child convict prisoners (of which none were female) on the 1st of September 2012.<sup>149</sup> According to a yearly statistic made by the Criminal Sanctions Agency, there were two child convict prisoners (equivalent of 0,1 per cent of the total amount of prisoners) of which none were females, and in total two child remand prisoners (equivalent of 0,3 per cent of the total amount of remand prisoners) on the 1st of May 2012.<sup>150</sup> In addition, another yearly statistics made by the Criminal Sanctions Agency’s specifies that there were on average ten child prisoners (including both remand and convict child prisoners) every day in the year 2011, and that in total two child convict prisoners and 34 child remand prisoners entered a prison in 2011.<sup>151</sup>

---

<sup>149</sup> Phone interview with researcher Peter Blomster from the Criminal Sanctions Agency, 7 September 2012.

<sup>150</sup> Rikosseuraamuslaitos, Rikosseuraamuslaitoksen monisteita 4/2012: Rikosseuraamusasiakkaat 1.5.2012, viewed on 9 August 2012, <<http://www.rikosseuraamus.fi/uploads/17k65c6j.pdf>>. For similar statistics in 2011 see Rikosseuraamuslaitoksen monisteita 3/2011: Rikosseuraamusasiakkaat 1.5.2011, viewed on 9 August 2012, <<http://www.rikosseuraamus.fi/uploads/sc1y3cj.pdf>>.

<sup>151</sup> Rikosseuraamuslaitos: Rikosseuraamuslaitoksen tilastoja 2011, viewed on 9 August 2012, <<http://www.rikosseuraamus.fi/uploads/7b7wbut147l7k.pdf>>. See especially charts 3, 15, 24 and 25 for child prisoners and prisoners under 21-years-old.

2 SUBSTANTIVE CRIMINAL LAW

2.1 Sexual Abuse

- i. Sexual activities has a specific legal definition in the Criminal Code of Finland (39/1889, hereinafter the CC). Sexual activities has been defined with the terms sexual intercourse and sexual act. According to section 10(1) of chapter 20 of the Criminal Code sexual intercourse refers to the sexual penetration, by a sex organ or directed at a sex organ, of the body of another.<sup>152</sup> According to the CC, c 20, s 10(2) a sexual act refers to an act that, taking account to the offender and the victim as well as the circumstances, is sexually significant.<sup>153</sup>

It depends on the offence what kind of sexual activities are criminalized. As far as sexual abuse of a child is concerned, all sorts of sexual activities which are conducive to impairing a development of a child are criminalized. This means that the sexual act which is considered as forbidden can even be just sexually suggestive talk and does not need to include any touching of a child, for example.<sup>154</sup> Furthermore, sexual act can be photographing a child who is posing sexually, making a child to watch masturbation or sexual intercourse, touching a child on genital areas etc.<sup>155</sup> The definition of sexual act covers all sorts of conducts that can damage the health and the development of a child. The definition is applied broadly and the main concern is to examine whether an act is sexually significant in order to be conducive to impairing the development of a child.

Although it was nothing to do with the Lanzarote Convention, it is worth mentioning that the definitions of the sexual act were modified at the same time with the implementation of the Convention. It can be considered as a huge improvement for the protection of the victims of sex offences. Before the changes were made into the definition, the definition of sexual act was legislated as follows: when the offender committed a sexual act he or she needed to do it in purpose of getting sexual arousal or satisfaction – if there was not such purpose, the offender could not be held criminally liable. The Supreme Court stated in the case No. KKO 2005:93 that it could not be proved if a father of two children was seeking

---

<sup>152</sup> Criminal Code (39/1889), c 20, s 10(1).

<sup>153</sup> Criminal Code (39/1889), c 20, s 10(2).

<sup>154</sup> HE 282/2010 vp, p. 7. See also KKO 2005:93.

<sup>155</sup> T. Ojala, Lapsiin kohdistuvat seksuaalirikokset, Edita, Porvoo, 2012, p. 81-82.

sexual satisfaction while giving long kisses with his tongue to his children. The prerequisites of the sexual act were not fulfilled and the father was not found guilty to sexual abuse of a child. The precedent led to some other ambiguous judgements. In one of the cases, for example, the offender had put his finger ten times into the anus of a young boy in a public swimming pool. However, the Court of Appeal did not consider that the accused was guilty of a sexual abuse of a child because it could not be proved that he had had a purpose of getting sexual satisfaction. Nowadays the definition does not require that the perpetrator has been seeking sexual arousal or satisfaction while conducting the sexual act, which is a major improvement.

- ii. In the Criminal Code of Finland intent is prerequisite for criminal liability.<sup>156</sup> The Criminal Code, c 3, s 6 does define only seuraustahallisuus<sup>157</sup>, which means an intent to cause a certain consequence (consequence-intention). But in case of sexual crimes it is rather a question of the intention concerning the other circumstances which are written in the statutory definition of an offence.<sup>158</sup> So called olosuhdetahallisuus, circumstance-intention, is not defined in the law but left to be defined in legal praxis.<sup>159</sup>

When the Lakivaliokunta, Law Committee of the Finnish Parliament pronounced about the circumstance-intention, it adverted to the legal definition of the CC, c 4, s 1 Mistake as to the definitional elements of an offence<sup>160</sup>, according to which the offender has to be aware of the existence of all the factors required for the completion of the statutory definition of the offence in order to have criminal liability.<sup>161</sup> When it comes to sexual abuse of a child (the CC, c 20, s 6), the offender needs to be aware of that the victim is under 16 years old, for example. However, in this case it needs to be highlighted that the offender can be aware of the age of the victim even if the victim has lied that he or she is 16 years old if the offender

<sup>156</sup> Criminal Code (39/1889), c 3, s 5.

<sup>157</sup> Criminal Code (39/1889), c 3, s 6. The consequence-intention: "A perpetrator has intentionally caused the consequence described in the statutory definition if the causing of the consequence was the perpetrator's purpose or he or she had considered the consequence as a certain or quite probable result of his or her actions. A consequence has also been intentionally caused if the perpetrator has considered it as certainly connected with the consequence that he or she has aimed for."

<sup>158</sup> P. Koskinen, 'Rikosoikeuden yleiset opit ja rikosvastuun perusteet' in Rikosoikeus, T. Lappi-Seppälä et al. Juridiikkaonline, WSOYpro, 1 November 2008, viewed on 14 August 2012, chapter I.7.

<sup>159</sup> P. Koskinen, 'Rikosoikeuden yleiset opit ja rikosvastuun perusteet' in Rikosoikeus, T. Lappi-Seppälä et al. Juridiikkaonline, WSOYpro, 1 November 2008, viewed on 14 August 2012, chapter I.7.

<sup>160</sup> Criminal Code (39/1889), c 4, s 1.

<sup>161</sup> Criminal Code (89/1889), c 4, s 1.

has kept it possible that the child still might be under the age of 16. Circumstances during the sexual act as well as the stage of development of the victim have influence in the assessment of the awareness of the offender.

The Supreme Court has kept the same alignment when pronouncing that circumstance-intention demands the offender to be aware of all the essential elements of the offence in question. For example, in the case No. KKO 2012:66 the accused person had bought sexual services from the victim of pandering. The offence which were examined in the case was the CC, c 20, s 8 Abuse of a victim of prostitution, in which provision it is required that the victim is a victim of pandering or a victim of trafficking in human beings. The Supreme Court stated that the offender needs to be aware of that the victim is indeed a victim of pandering. The accused person was not found guilty in the offence because it could not be proved that he had been aware of that the victim was a victim of pandering.

According to the CC, c 20, s 6(1) Sexual abuse of a child, the sentence for sexual abuse of a child is imprisonment at least four months and at most four years. Furthermore, the sentence is imprisonment at least one year and at most ten years, according to the CC, c 20, s 7 Aggravated sexual abuse of a child. The latter provision is applied if there has been sexual intercourse, the offence has been committed in an especially humiliating manner or other circumstances mentioned in the aggravated provision (see also paragraph 2(g) of chapter II of this report) occurs and in addition the offence is aggravated when assessed as a whole.

- iii. The legal age for engaging in sexual activities is 16 years of age.<sup>162</sup> According to the CC, c 20, s 7a, sexual activities between minors are regulated in a manner that it is not a question of sexual abuse of a child if the act does not violate the sexual autonomy of the victim and there is not great difference in either the ages or the mental and psychical maturity of the couple.<sup>163</sup> For example, in cases where two young people are in a relationship and other person is 14 years old and the other is 16 years old the conduct is not regarded as sexual abuse of a child, if the persons are acting unanimously together.<sup>164</sup>

---

<sup>162</sup> Criminal Code (39/1889), c 20, s 6(1).

<sup>163</sup> Criminal Code (39/1889), c 20, s 7a.

<sup>164</sup>T. Ojala, p. 120.

In principle a minor can be sentenced for sexual abuse of a child.<sup>165</sup> This is possible for instance when the age of the victim is much under the age of 16. For example, if the victim is only 12 years old and the offender is 15 years old, the conduct might be regarded as sexual abuse of a child. It is considered that a 12-year-old or a younger child does not have competence to give his or her consent to engaging in sexual activities in any cases. The sexual act in these cases always automatically violates the sexual autonomy of a child.<sup>166</sup>

Furthermore, over five years difference between the ages of the couple is regarded as “great difference”, when it comes to provision of c 20, s 7a. For example if the victim is 15 years old and the offender is about 21 years old, sexual activities between the couple is more likely to be considered as forbidden.<sup>167</sup>

It is also good to highlight that the age difference alone does not make the conduct a crime. If the age difference is just about five years, other things as well have influence in the examination such as whether the couple is in a real relationship, what kind of activities they have done together and how often and so on.<sup>168</sup>

- iv. Firstly, using force, taking advantage of disability or threat and these kinds of circumstances can raise the level of seriousness in offences; for example in situations where there is a question of sexual abuse of a child.<sup>169</sup> If some of the aggravating factors of the offence mentioned in the CC, c 20, s 7 (the offence has been committed an especially humiliating manner, for example) have happened and the the offence is aggravated also when assessed as a whole, the offence is considered as aggravated sexual abuse of a child in place of sexual abuse of a child and the penal scale will be larger. See more about these aggravating factors in the paragraph 2(g) of chapter II of this report.

Secondly, those kind of circumstances can also have an effect upon the concurrence of offences; for example a person who is abusing a sleeping child can be sentenced for both sexual abuse of a child (c 20, s 6) and coercion into a sexual act (c 20, s 4) (or even rape if

---

<sup>165</sup> HE 282/2010, p. 48.

<sup>166</sup> T. Ojala, p.120.

<sup>167</sup> T. Ojala, p.118.

<sup>168</sup> T. Ojala, p.118.

<sup>169</sup> Criminal Code (39/1889), c 20, s 7.

the offender has penetrated into the body of the victim).<sup>170</sup> Forcing by the use or threat of violence and coercion are particularly mentioned in the provisions of the Rape (c 20, s 1) and the Coercion into sexual act (c 20, s 4) for example.

- v. Sexual intercourse between immediate family members is criminalized in Finland and regarded not as a sex offence but as an offence against public order.<sup>171</sup> According to the CC, c 17, s 22 Incest, sexual intercourse is criminalized between a parent and a child; between a grandparent and a grandchild; between a great-grandparent and a great-grandchild; and between siblings. The family relationship needs to be genetic, which means that the provision is not to be applied between half-siblings or between a stepfather and a stepchild.

If the person is under the age of 18 he or she will not be punished if he or she has been in sexual intercourse with his or her parent or grandparent. This means that only the parent or the grandparent will be sentenced for incest.

The provision is sexually neutral so it does not matter if those persons are same gender.

- vi. The CC, c 20, s 5 Sexual abuse is a specific provision which criminalizes those conducts where the offender has abused his or her authority or position. There are four subsections of the section 5(1) that criminalizes different types of conducts. First two subsections (s 5(1)(1) and s 5(1)(2)) are concerning the situations where the victim is under 18 years old. The other two subsections (s 5(1)(3) and s 5(1)(4)) can be applied regardless of the age of the victim.

The CC, c 20, s 5(1)(1) criminalize conducts where the offender is a teacher or such person, for example a supervisor at a summer camp, and this person abuses his or her position and seduces a minor to sexual intercourse or another sexual act.<sup>172</sup> C 20, s 5(1)(2) criminalize activities where the dependence is a result from a great difference of the ages between an offender and a minor and the offender takes advantage of immaturity of the victim.

---

<sup>170</sup> KKO 2010:52: in which case the offender had photographed genitals of a sleeping child. See also T. Ojala and HE 283/2010, p. 11.

<sup>171</sup> Criminal Code (39/1889), c 17, s 22.

<sup>172</sup> Criminal Code (89/1889) c 20, s 5. See also I. Rautio, 'RL 20: Seksuaalirikokset' in Rikosoikeus, T. Lappi-Seppälä et al. Juridikkonline, WSOYpro, 1 November 2008, viewed on 17 October 2012, chapter II.9.

The CC, c 20, s 5(1)(3) concerns the situations where the victim is a patient in a hospital or other institution and his or her capacity for defending himself or herself has been impaired. Those victims can be an old person who is living in a rest-home or a patient in a hospital, for example. The impaired capacity can be result from the medication or an illness or such.<sup>173</sup>

In the last subsection of the offence (s 5(1)(4)) it is criminalized situations where the victim is especially dependent on the offender and the offender takes advantage of this dependence. This dependence can be due to the membership of a religious community. Furthermore, the dependence can occur if the offender has an authority to make decisions concerning an accommodation, livelihood or medical treatment of the victim, for instance.<sup>174</sup> For example in the case No. KKO 2011:1 there was a situation where a doctor had abused his patient by groping and sucking the breasts of the patient. The doctor claimed that it was a regular treatment method which he was conducting. The victim gave her consent for the sucking and such because at first she thought that those measures were essential for medical examination. The Supreme Court stated that consent has no influence in these cases where a patient is significantly dependent on the treatment given by a doctor. The victim had gone to the doctor's practice because of the suspicion of a breast cancer. The offender was sentenced for a sexual abuse (c 20, s 5) and violation of official duty (c 40, s 9) to a fine (4800 euros). The offender was also liable for compensating the harm to the victim (1200 euros).

If a victim is under 16 years old the concurrence of offences has effect also in these situations. In these cases the conduct is considered as a sexual abuse (c 20, s 5) and additionally as a sexual abuse of a child (c 20, s 6) or aggravated sexual abuse of a child (c 20, s 7). It is good to notice that special dependence of the child on the offender is one of the aggravating elements mentioned in the c 20, s 7(1)(2)(c).

2.2 Child Prostitution

- vii. Finland is a party to the Council of Europe Convention on Action against Human Trafficking (CETS No. 197). Finland signed the Convention on 29th of August 2006 and it was ratified on 30th of May 2012. The Convention came into force on 1st of September 2012.<sup>175</sup>

---

<sup>173</sup> Rautio, 'RL 20: Seksuaalirikokset' in Rikosoikeus, viewed on 17 October 2012, chapter II.9.

<sup>174</sup> Rautio, 'RL 20: Seksuaalirikokset' in Rikosoikeus, viewed on 17 October 2012, chapter II.9.

- viii. In the CC there is not a specific definition of child prostitution. However, child prostitution can be defined using two provisions that criminalize purchase of sexual services from a young person and pandering. In these provisions child prostitution is defined in two different ways. First one can be found in the CC, c 20, s 8a Purchase of sexual services from a young person. In this norm the definition is “A person — by promising or giving remuneration, induces a person younger than 18 years of age to engage in sexual intercourse or to perform another sexual act.” The second definition is in the CC, c 20, s 9(1)(1) Pandering. In this section the child prostitution is defined as “sexual intercourse or a comparable sexual act or a manifestly sexually obscene act performed by a child younger than 18 years of age are offered for remuneration”<sup>176</sup> Despite of the different formulation, both have same meaning.

The Lanzarote Convention Article 19(2) defines child prostitution. In the Finnish legislation the definition of child prostitution includes also a given or a promised remuneration, as does the Article 19(2). In section 132 of the Explanatory Report of the Lanzarote Convention it is told that the remuneration does not have to be monetary payment.<sup>177</sup> Also according to the Government Bill (HE 34/2004) the remuneration can be other than a monetary payment. Actually the remuneration does not need to even be financial. This means for example that even approving an exam for a child can be regarded as remuneration. The Finnish definition is compatible with the definition in the Convention.<sup>178</sup>

The definition of sexual act (sexual activities) in the context of child prostitution means basically any type of sexual act performed by a child. Also making a child to participate in <sup>175</sup> More about it in HE 122/2011 vp, the Government Bill (draft law). The Convention (CETS No.197) did not make it necessary to make any major changes to the Finnish national legislation and no changes were made in to the Criminal Code of Finland. Finland was already obligated by many international instruments. Some examples of these instruments are the Palermo Convention and especially the Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children (A/RES/55/25), the Council of the EU Framework Decision on combating trafficking in human beings (2002/629/JHA ) and the Council of the EU Framework Decision on combating the sexual exploitation of children and child pornography (2004/68/JHA).

<sup>176</sup> Criminal Code (39/1889), c 20, s 9(1), HE 6/1997 vp, p.186 and HE 34/2004 vp, p.85. – This definition is used also in the criminalization of Trafficking in human beings (the CC, c 25, s 3 and c 25, s 3a.).

<sup>177</sup> Council of Europe, Explanatory Report of the Council of Europe Convention on the Protection of Children against Sexual Exploitation and Sexual Abuse, CETS No. 201, 2007, last viewed on 28 October 2012.

<sup>178</sup> HE 34/2004 vp, p.85. See also Council Framework Decision 2004/68/JHA.

pornographic performances is regarded as prostitution. These performances can be e.g. striptease shows, making a child to pose in pornographic pictures or making a child to be an actor in pornographic videos etc.<sup>179</sup>

- ix. Finnish legislation criminalizes both the user and the recruiter of prostitution. Using sexual services of a child is criminalized in the CC, c 20, section 8a Purchase of sexual services from a young person. Recruiting for prostitution is criminalized as follows: the CC, c 20, section 9 criminalizes Pandering; c 20, section 9a Aggravated pandering; c 25, section 3 Trafficking in human beings and c 25, section 3a Aggravated trafficking in human beings.<sup>180</sup> Selection between pandering and trafficking in human beings depends on the level of control the offender has over the victim. The greater the control over a person is the greater the chance is that the crime is regarded as trafficking in human beings in place of pandering.<sup>181</sup>

What is more, it is good to mention that if the victim is under 16 years of age, the conduct is also considered (in addition to the offences mentioned above) as a child abuse crime (c 20, s 6 Sexual abuse of a child or c 20, s 7 Aggravated sexual abuse of a child). Furthermore, depending on the circumstances the conduct can be regarded also as a crime mentioned in the CC, c 20, s 1 Rape; s 2 Aggravated rape; s 3 Coercion into sexual intercourse; s 4 Coercion into a sexual act; s 5 Sexual abuse.<sup>182</sup>

2.3 Child Pornography

Child Pornography in General:

- x. The Finnish Government signed the Council of Europe Convention on Cybercrime (CETS No. 185) on 23rd of November 2001. The ratification process was done on 24th of May 2007 at the same time with the implementation of the Council of the European Union

---

<sup>179</sup> HE 34/2004 vp, p85.

<sup>180</sup> Both of the crimes (pandering and trafficking in human beings) are supplemented by Chapter 20 Section 8b Solicitation of a child for sexual purposes. The subsection 2 of the norm criminalizes a solicitation for prostitution. This provision covers the cases which does not include coercion or the offender does not benefit from the conduct. Human trafficking crimes requires coercion of some kind and pandering crimes requires that the offender benefits from the conduct.

<sup>181</sup> HE 34/2004 vp, p.100.

<sup>182</sup> HE 282/2010 vp, p.50.

Framework Decision on attacks against information systems (2005/222/JHA). The Convention came into force on 1st of September 2007.<sup>183</sup>

- xi. Child pornography crimes are criminalized mainly<sup>184</sup> in chapter 17 of the Criminal Code. At first, the Finnish legislator has not used the word “child pornography” in the CC. The CC uses the concept of “sexually obscene pictures or visual recordings depicting children”.<sup>185</sup> Basically, what is considered as sexually obscene pictures (or visual recordings, here in after with a word picture is meant also any type of visual recordings unless otherwise mentioned) depicting children depends on the case. At least all the pictures which combine sexuality and a child are regarded as sexually obscene.<sup>186</sup> The last-mentioned means basically any type of pictures that represents a child in a sexual context. In this assessment (what is regarded as sexually obscene) the age of a child is relevant, how he or she is depicted, how the sexuality occurs and what is the overall impression of the image.<sup>187</sup> This definition covers at least all the acts mentioned in Explanatory Report, section 143<sup>188</sup>.

Child pornography is defined in Article 20(2) of the Convention. The definition includes “real” or “simulated” pictures. Also in the CC realistic (simulated) pictures are regarded as a forbidden material (as well as the real pictures of course). The criminalization is realised as follows:<sup>189</sup>

- i. If the picture was depicting a real situation, it does not matter either the picture has been taken by photographing or has been drawn or has been painted. So the material in this case is forbidden regardless of the technique how the picture is created.<sup>190</sup>
- ii. Realistic pictures are forbidden only if they confusingly remind photos, videos or such visual recordings. If the realistic pictures are drawn, painted or such, the pictures are not regarded

<sup>183</sup> See HE 153/2006 vp.

<sup>184</sup> Solicitation of a child for producing child pornography is criminalized in the CC, c 20, s 8b(1).

<sup>185</sup> Criminal Code, c 17, s 18, Distribution of sexually obscene pictures, c 17, s 18a Aggravated distribution of sexually obscene pictures depicting children and c 17, s 19 Possession of sexually obscene pictures depicting children.

<sup>186</sup> HE 6/1997, p.147-148.

<sup>187</sup> HE 6/1997, p.147-148.

<sup>188</sup> In section 143 of the Explanatory Report of the Lanzarote Convention: “a) sexual intercourse, including genital-genital, oral-genital, anal-genital or oral-anal, between children, or between an adult and a child, of the same or opposite sex; b) bestiality; c) masturbation; d) sadistic or masochistic abuse in a sexual context; or e) lascivious exhibition of the genitals or the pubic area of a child”

<sup>189</sup> LaVM 43/2010 vp; see also T. Ojala, p.170–171.

<sup>190</sup> It's good to mention that it is not criminalized if the depiction is deemed justifiable because of the informative nature or manifest artistic value of the film or recording (Criminal Code, c 17, s 18(3)).

as forbidden material. (The realistic situation means cases where there has not been a real child in those pictures. Those pictures are only depicting an imagined sex scene.)

Government Bill states that a word “simulated” has not been defined in the Convention and that is why the word does leave room for national interpretation. Finnish legislator’s interpretation is that with a word “simulated” is meant an imitation of reality.<sup>191</sup> The latter means that simulated pictures have to confusingly remind photos, videos or such visual recordings depicting reality. Pictures which are drawn, painted or such, does not fit in this definition. The definition is compatible with the definition in Article 20(2).

Finally it must be mentioned that the definition of “sexually obscene pictures” is quite old fashioned and should probably be replaced with some other formulation. In fact, this definition is quite widely criticised in Finland and something should be done to it in near future. As far as sexual crimes against children are concerned, a better formulation could be e.g. “child pornography”. It would be more present-day and also more compatible with the international obligations. In addition, the term would highlight the blameworthiness of that type of crimes. Moreover, it could be better if these offences were placed in the chapter 20<sup>192</sup> of the Criminal Code instead of keeping them in the chapter 17. This would lead to better consistency inside the Criminal Code, because the main purpose of criminalizing the child pornography is to protect the health and development of children rather than to protect the public order which, in turn, is the main purpose of the chapter 17 of the Criminal Code.

- xii. The CC covers comprehensively all sorts of perpetrators.<sup>193</sup> In c 17, s 18 the criminal liability is attributed to producers<sup>194</sup>, exporters and importers and additionally to all sorts of distributors regardless of whether the distributing is commercial or non-commercial. The possession of child pornographic materials is criminalized in c 17, s 19. The latter provision includes a criminalization of a person who knowingly obtains an access through information and communication technology to child pornographic materials.<sup>195</sup>

---

<sup>191</sup> HE 282/2010 vp, p.53.

<sup>192</sup> Main purpose of the chapter 20 is to protect the sexual autonomy of human beings.

<sup>193</sup> Criminal Code, c 17, s 18, s 18a and s 19; also see HE 282/2010 vp, p.51 – 56.

<sup>194</sup> If the child is under 16 years of age, the producer is perpetrated also either in c 20, s 6, Sexual abuse of a child or c 20, s 7, Aggravated sexual abuse of a child (T. Ojala, p.171).

<sup>195</sup> This is a new criminalization in Finland. The Finnish Government wanted to criminalize an act of obtaining an access to child pornographic materials despite of is it done through ICT or not. However, the Legal

The Finnish legislation is compatible with Article 20(1)(a) to (1)(f). All conducts mentioned in those paragraphs are criminalized either in c 17, s 18 Distribution of sexually obscene pictures (or in its aggravated version c 17, s 18a) or in c 17, s 19 Possession of sexually obscene pictures depicting children. When it comes to paragraph 1.d (procuring), the conduct is not particularly mentioned in the CC, but the Finnish legislator deems the word “possession” to cover procuring for oneself. Procuring for another is deemed to be distributing.<sup>196</sup>

- xiii. Pornographic materials in general are not forbidden in Finnish legislation. Only child pornography, bestiality and pornography depicting violence are criminalized. The latter two are criminalized only if they are produced, exported, imported or distributed in some manner. Possession of these kinds of pictures is not prohibited.<sup>197</sup>

It is also prohibited to deliver or market pornography (in purpose of gaining) by causing public offence. The latter means that it is prohibited to put pornography on public display, deliver pornography unsolicited to another and openly offer pornography for sale or advertise it.<sup>198</sup> It is relevant that the conduct is conducive to causing public offence.<sup>199</sup> In practice the marketing of pornographic materials has been done by placing magazines, videos etc. to some places in stores where they are not directly on sight, on top of the shelves for instance.

It is good to mention that according to Kuvaohjelmaki, the Act on Audiovisual Programmes (710/2011) section 6 it is prohibited to provide pornography to a person under 18 years of age due to the classification demands. Illegal exhibition or distribution of pornographic programmes to a person under 18 years of age is also criminalized in the CC, c 17, s 18b Illegal exhibition or distribution of audiovisual programmes to a minor. Mediakasvatus- ja kuvaohjelmakeskus, the Finnish Centre for Media Education & Audiovisual Media, which job is to supervise the compliance of the Act on Audiovisual Programmes has authority to make inspections to audiovisual programme providers' business premises. The Centre has also

---

Affairs Committee (of the Finnish Parliament) considered that the provision would be too open to various interpretations if the criminalization was not limited to using ICT (LaVM 43/2010 vp; see also T. Ojala, p.27.).

<sup>196</sup> HE 282/2010 vp, p.52.

<sup>197</sup> Criminal Code (39/1889), c 17, s 18; see also HE 6/1997 vp.

<sup>198</sup> Criminal Code (39/1889), c 17, s 20 Unlawful marketing of obscene material.

<sup>199</sup> M. Majanen, 'RL 17: Rikokset yleistä järjestystä vastaan' in Rikosoikeus, T. Lappi-Seppälä et al. Juridiikkaonline, WSOYpro, 1 November 2008, viewed on 22 August 2012, chapter II.7.

authority to impose a penalty payment to enforce its advice.<sup>200</sup> The supervision made by the Centre is primarily ex post control by nature. The classification and labelling of audiovisual materials are nowadays done mainly by the program providers themselves. The classification is made by a person called “classifier”.<sup>201</sup> Basically any person who is at least 18 years of age and is deemed suitable for the job can be trained to be a classifier.<sup>202</sup> Furthermore the Act regulates for example on what time is it appropriate to broadcast pornography in a TV (according to section 6 of the Act, at a time of day when under 18 years old children do not normally watch TV). Further, the Act regulates primarily about the classification and labelling of audiovisual programmes.

Finland did make one reservation provided by the Lanzarote Convention Article 20(3). Because of the reservation right the Finnish legislation does not prohibit pictures representing children who have reached 16 years of age but are under 18 years of age, if the pictures are produced and possessed with the consent of those children and solely for their own private use. This is not mentioned in the CC but the legislator considered it acceptable and left it to be regulated by the general principles of criminal law.<sup>203</sup>

The general principles of criminal law mentioned above means basically three different options. Firstly it is possible that the conduct is not regarded as a child pornography crime, because of the doctrine of consent – for example, if a child between the age of 16 and 18 years have voluntarily created pictures with his or her partner, it can be considered that the “victim” has given a consent to an act and the act therefore is legitimate. Secondly, court has an option to waive punishment because of the CC, c 6, s 12(2) Waiving of punishment in which provision there is mentioned following: “A court may waive punishment if the perpetrator has committed the offence under the age of 18 years and the act is deemed to be the result of lack of understanding or of imprudence”. And thirdly, the prosecutor have an option to decide not to prosecute due to c 1, s 7(2) of the Criminal Procedure Act (689/1997), if the offender is

---

<sup>200</sup> Act on Audiovisual Programmes (710/2011), section 19, section 24 and section 25.

<sup>201</sup> Section 13 of the Act.

<sup>202</sup> HE 190/2010 vp.

<sup>203</sup> HE 282/2010 vp, p.56; see also LaVM 4/2004 vp.

under 18 years of age and the act is deemed to be the result of the lack of understanding rather than heedlessness of the prohibitions of the law.<sup>204</sup>

Above there are only mentioned situations where the “victim” has reached the age of 16 and he or she has given consent to creating pictures from the common sexual act. However, it is also good to notice that in Finland the doctrine of consent can be used although the child is under 16 years old. In these cases the age of the “victim” cannot be much less than 16 years<sup>205</sup> and the picture need to be produced in circumstances which do not include any abuse of a child. Further, there must not be great difference in the ages of the couple. In order the consent to be valid, the consent must be given in advance, voluntarily and it has to be accurate enough.<sup>206</sup> In the case No. KKO 2001:7 it was pronounced that a 12 years old child cannot give a valid consent to the conducts which are damaging his or her health. Although the case was concerning the situation where the offender had provided strong alcohol to a child and the conduct were damaging the health of a child, it can be stated in general that if a child is young enough he or she is incompetent to give a valid consent to activities which are impairing his or her development. Sexual acts are these types of activities which are conducive to impairing the development of a child and therefore a young child is incompetent to give a valid consent to those kinds of acts.<sup>207</sup>

Participation of a Child in Pornographic Performances:

- xiv. At first, it is good to refer to the paragraph 2(b) of chapter II of this report (Child Prostitution), in which is mentioned provisions that criminalizes partly the conduct mentioned in Article 21(1)(a) to (1)(b). This is because making a child to participate in pornographic performances is regarded as prostitution.<sup>208</sup> That is why the recruiting and coercion is criminalized in c 20, s 9 Pandering, and s 9a Aggravated Pandering and in c 25, s 3 Trafficking in human beings and s 3a Aggravated trafficking in human beings. Above mentioned

<sup>204</sup> HE 282/2010 vp, p. 56.

<sup>205</sup> D.Frände, Yleinen rikosoikeus, translated into Finnish by M. Wahlberg, Edita Publishing Oy, Porvoo, 2012, p. 138. If the child is considered to be too young, he or she cannot give a valid consent regarding the doctrine of consent.

<sup>206</sup> See T. Ojala, p. 177.

<sup>207</sup> Frände, p.138; also see KKO 2001:7 which is concerning about the case where the perpetrator were held guilty of committing an assault (the CC, c 21, s 5(1)), because he or she had provided strong alcohol to the victim who was 12 years old. See also T. Ojala, p. 119-120, where is mentioned that the doctrine of consent cannot be used if the child is under 13 years of age.

<sup>208</sup> HE 34/2004 vp, p.85.

provisions do not, however, criminalize conduct which does not include coercion or from which the perpetrator does not benefit. These types of solicitation crimes are criminalized in c 20, s 8b(2) Solicitation of a child for sexual purposes. The Finnish legislation meets the requirements mentioned in Article 21(1)(a) to (1)(b) of the Lanzarote Convention.

As mentioned in paragraph 2(b) of chapter II of this report, the Finnish legislation does differentiate the recruitment and coercion. As mentioned earlier, the selection between these two offences (pandering and trafficking in human beings) depends on the level of control the offender has over the victim. The greater the control over a person is the greater the chance is that the crime is regarded as trafficking in human beings in place of pandering. Furthermore, the offence can also be regarded as Rape, Coercion into sexual intercourse or Sexual abuse, for example.<sup>209</sup>

A person attending pornographic performances that involve participation of children under 18 years of age is criminalized in the CC, c 20, s 8c. This is a new provision if compared to the time before the ratification of the Lanzarote Convention. Finland did not use the reservation right stated in Article 21(2) of the Lanzarote Convention.<sup>210</sup>

2.4 Corruption of Children

- xv. Intentional causing of a child to witness sexual abuse or sexual activities is criminalized as sexual abuse of a child (c 20, s 6 and s 7) (listed in the Government Bill as an example of other sort of sexual act on a child).<sup>211</sup> The section of the CC mentions some of the modus operandi and some more are listed in the Government Bill (e.g. inveiglement of a child to watch masturbation, sexual intercourse or pornographic movies).<sup>212</sup>

It is not specifically defined how the “causing” should happen. The definition of a sexual act<sup>213</sup> can be used as a starting point in this question; the main focus is laid on the question

---

<sup>209</sup> HE 282/2010 vp, p57; also see p.50.

<sup>210</sup> HE 282/2010 vp, p. 57–58.

<sup>211</sup> Criminal Code (39/1889), c 20, s 6(1). See also HE 6/1997 vp. p. 181/II.

<sup>212</sup> HE 282/2010 vp, p. 10–11.

<sup>213</sup> Criminal Code (39/1889), c 20, s 10(2).

whether the act the child is to be witnessed is sexually significant in order to be conducive to impair the child's development.<sup>214</sup>

No forcing, inducement or promise is needed for the criminal liability to exist.<sup>215</sup> Those kinds of circumstances can of course have an effect on the aggravation level of the offence.

It is also good to notice that the legislation on pornography offences in general is as well meant to provide security to children against sexual acts and activities. For example, c 17, s 18b Illegal exhibition or distribution of audiovisual programs to a minor criminalize distribution of pornography to a minor.

2.5 Solicitation of Children for Sexual Purposes

- xvi. One of the biggest novelties the Lanzarote Convention brought on in the Criminal Code of Finland was the criminalization of the so called grooming.<sup>216</sup> The crime has its own section in the CC and the punishment of the offence is from a fine to at most one year imprisonment (14 days being the overall minimum of imprisonment time).<sup>217</sup>

The use of information and communication technologies is not mentioned in the section, so the section does not outline any modus operandi.<sup>218</sup> In the Government Bill it is pronounced that grooming is an offence that precede attempt of other offences.<sup>219</sup> The Criminal Code of Finland does not require that the offender proposes a meeting. Proposing other sort of an intercourse is enough to fulfil the essential elements of the offence. This is because child pornography can be made also without actually meeting the child (with using a web camera as an example).<sup>220</sup>

Moreover, it does not matter if the initiative to intercourse comes from the child because adults do carry the final responsibility in these matters.<sup>221</sup> It is also mentioned in the Government Bill that if the child and the perpetrator actually meet or some other kind of

---

<sup>214</sup> HE 282/2010 vp, p. 104.

<sup>215</sup> KKO 2011:34.

<sup>216</sup> HE 282/2010 vp, p. 58.

<sup>217</sup> Criminal Code (39/1889), c 20, s 8b(1).

<sup>218</sup> Criminal Code (39/1889), c 20, s 8b.

<sup>219</sup> Attempt to distribute sexually obscene pictures or (more severely) sexually abuse a child (HE 282/2010 vp).

<sup>220</sup> Criminal Code (39/1889), c 20, s 8b(1). See also HE 282/2010 vp, p. 106.

<sup>221</sup> The adult can choose to not actively take the chance.

intercourse actually happen, the offence usually fulfils the essential elements of an attempted offence of a child pornography or sexual abuse of a child, which are both criminalized in their own sections.<sup>222</sup>

- xvii. In Finland abetting has a legal definition: “A person who, before or during the commission of an offence, intentionally furthers the commission by another of an intentional act or of its punishable attempt, through advice, action or otherwise, shall be sentenced for abetting on the basis of the same legal provision as the perpetrator. – “. <sup>223</sup> Abetting can be both physical and psychological. The borderline between abetting and being a perpetrator is not clear in Finland.<sup>224</sup>

Attempt is criminalized in Finland only if mentioned in the section at issue. Regarding sexual abuse of a child: yes<sup>225</sup>. Regarding child prostitution: yes, when it comes to trafficking in human beings<sup>226</sup>; yes, when it comes to pandering<sup>227</sup>; yes when it comes to purchase of sexual services from a young person<sup>228</sup>; and yes, when it comes to abuse of a victim of prostitution<sup>229</sup>. Regarding child pornography: yes, when it comes to distributing sexually obscene pictures and no, when it comes to possession of sexually obscene pictures.<sup>230</sup> Regarding corruption of children: yes, as an attempt to sexual abuse of a child.<sup>231</sup> When it comes to other sorts of corruptive offences: no, when it comes to illegal exhibition or distribution of audiovisual programmes to minor<sup>232</sup> and no, when it comes to unlawful marketing of obscene materials.<sup>233</sup> Regarding solicitation of children for sexual purposes: yes, but only when it comes to solicitation of a child for prostitution – an attempt regarding solicitation of a child for producing child pornography and solicitation of a child for committing sexual abuse crime against him or her are not criminalized.<sup>234</sup>

Finland used the reservation right provided by the Article 24(3) of the Lanzarote Convention in regard to Article 20(1)(e), 20(1)(f) and 23. The reservation right were also

<sup>222</sup> HE 282/2010 vp, p. 106.

<sup>223</sup> Criminal Code (39/1889), c 5, s 6.

<sup>224</sup> Koskinen, chapter I.7.

<sup>225</sup> Criminal Code (39/1889), c 20, s 6(3).

<sup>226</sup> Criminal Code (39/1889), c 25, s 3(3).

<sup>227</sup> Criminal Code (39/1889), c 20, s 9(2).

<sup>228</sup> Criminal Code (39/1889), c 20, s 8a(3).

<sup>229</sup> Criminal Code (39/1889), c 20, s 8(3).

<sup>230</sup> Criminal Code (39/1889), c 17, s 18(2), s18a(2) and s 19.

<sup>231</sup> Criminal Code (39/1889), c 20 s 6(3). See also HE 282/2010 vp, p. 64.

<sup>232</sup> Criminal Code (39/1889), c 17, s 18b.

<sup>233</sup> Criminal Code (39/1889), c 17, s 20. See also HE 282/2010 vp, p. 64.

<sup>234</sup> Criminal Code (39/1889), c 20, s 8b(3).

used partly in regard to Article 20(1)(d) and it was done as follows: an attempt concerning procuring child pornography to oneself is not criminalized. However, an attempt concerning procuring for another is criminalized due to the provisions of distributing sexually obscene pictures.

2.6 Corporate Liability

- xviii. Corporate criminal liability is regulated in Chapter 9 of the CC. Legal person is able to be held liable when an offence has been committed on the behalf or for the benefit of the corporation.<sup>235</sup> An instrument of punishment is Corporate fine which is at least 850 euros and at most 850,000 euros.<sup>236</sup> It is important to note that the Corporate fine has not been used very often in Finland and it has not been used in any cases regarding the sex offences.

There is a difference if the offence has been committed by a regular employee or by a person who is in a leading position of the company. If a leading person has committed or has been party in committing the crime, the prerequisites of the offence will be met more easily. Further, if a leading person has allowed the commission of the offence, the corporate can be held liable more easily. If an employee (or an agent) has committed the crime, it still requires some kind of negligence by the leading person.<sup>237</sup> It is also worth mentioning that the leadership does not need to be official. Also a person who exercises actual decision-making authority is regarded as a leading person, regardless of whether the person is part of the statutory organ of the corporation or not.

If an offence includes corporate liability, it needs to be regulated particularly and separately in the CC.<sup>238</sup> Below are listed the crimes that include Corporate fine as a sanction, when it comes to sexual crimes against children:

Child pornography<sup>239</sup>

---

<sup>235</sup> Criminal Code (39/1889), c 9, s 3(1) and HE 95/1993.

<sup>236</sup> Criminal Code (39/1889), c 9, s 5.

<sup>237</sup> H. Jaatinen, Oikeushenkilön rangaistusvastuu. Lakimiesliiton Kustannus, Jyväskylä, 2000, p. 68. – He is speaking about the doctrine of forbidden risk-taking, which means in this case that a leading person has neglected his or her supervisory duty and that is why he or she has taken a forbidden risk and the corporate shall be held liable because of the lack of supervision.

<sup>238</sup> Criminal Code (39/1889), c 9, s 1.

<sup>239</sup> Criminal Code (39/1889), c 17, s 24 and c 20, s 13.

c 17, s 18 Distribution of sexually obscene pictures

c 17, s 18a Aggravated distribution of sexually obscene pictures depicting children

c 17, s 19 Possession of sexually obscene pictures depicting children

c 20, s 8b(1) which is concerning about solicitation of a child for producing child pornography.

Child prostitution<sup>240</sup>

c 20, s 9 Pandering

c 20, s 9a Aggravated pandering

c 25, s 3 Trafficking in human beings

c 25, s 3a Aggravated trafficking in human beings

- xix. As mentioned, the liability is criminal by nature. The type of punishment is corporate fine. Additionally the liability may be civil if in the operations of the corporation has been caused injury (or harm). The liability may lead to indemnity for the sufferings of the victim. The latter is regulated in Vahingonkorvauslaki, Tort Liability Act (412/1974).
- xx. Only human beings can commit a crime. In Finland the criminal liability is separated and the corporate liability is not parallel to the criminal liability of a natural person.<sup>241</sup> Legislation does not exclude individual liability when there is a corporate liability. However, it is good to notice that a corporate can be held liable for the crime even if the offender cannot be identified<sup>242</sup> or otherwise is not punished.<sup>243</sup> By saying “otherwise is not punished” is meant following: the offender either disappears (escapes), dies or the offender cannot be punished because of the limitation of the prosecution by lapse of time, for example.

---

<sup>240</sup> Criminal Code (39/1889), c 20, s 13 and c 25, s 10(1).

<sup>241</sup> HE 282/2010 vp, p.67 in fine; also see Jaatinen, p.22. for example.

<sup>242</sup> This doctrine is so called anonymous guilt (the collective knowledge doctrine is equivalent to it in the USA). See Jaatinen, p.83. In this case the offender remains unknown, but the crime itself has been committed in operations of a corporation.

<sup>243</sup> Criminal Code (39/1889), c 9, s 2(2).

2.7 Aggravating Circumstances

xxi. In Finland there are at least three different situations where the level of a punishment can be raised, as far as the aggravated circumstances mentioned in Article 28 of the Lanzarote Convention are concerned.<sup>244</sup> First and the most common way is that there is a specific aggravated offence regulated in addition to the regular form of the offence<sup>245</sup>. Secondly, a person may be considered to be perpetrated several crimes at the same time and this may lead to a harder punishment. The latter is carried out by the chapter 7 – Joint punishment. Thirdly, the general provisions of determining the sentence may have an influence on the sentence in an aggravating manner; those rules are regulated in chapter 6 of the CC.

More about those three cases mentioned above:

a. Aggravated provisions

Examples about these provisions are:

c 17, s 18a Aggravated distribution of sexually obscene pictures depicting children. (Distribution of child pornography)

c 20, s 7 Aggravated sexual abuse of a child

c 20, s 9a Aggravated pandering

c 25, s 3a Aggravated trafficking in human beings.

In c 17, s 18a there is mentioned four aggravating circumstances. The first is that the child is particularly young.<sup>246</sup> Second circumstance is that the picture is depicting severe violence or particularly humiliating<sup>247</sup> treatment of the child. Third circumstance is that the offence is committed in a particularly methodical manner. And fourthly, the offence was committed within the framework of a criminal organization.

---

<sup>244</sup> HE 282/2010 vp, p.74.

<sup>245</sup> Rape (c 20, s 1) and Aggravated rape (c 20, s 2), for instance.

<sup>246</sup> The age is not defined specifically. However, at least under 10 years old child is considered as particularly young. (See T. Ojala, p.173.).

<sup>247</sup> This means for example that the offence was committed by several people abusing a child together or the picture is depicting a child and an animal. (See T. Ojala, p.174.).

In c 20, s 7 there is mentioned also four circumstances. To begin with, if the abuse includes sexual intercourse with a child, the sexual intercourse is considered as an aggravating element. The second circumstance is that the victim is particularly vulnerable because of his or her age or the stage of development of him or her. Thirdly, the crime maybe be regarded as aggravated if the offence is committed in an especially humiliating manner. Fourthly, if the offence is conducive to causing special injury to the child due to the special trust he or she has put in the offender or the special dependence of the child on the offender, the offence maybe aggravated.<sup>248</sup>

In c 20, s 9a there is also mentioned four circumstances. Firstly, the sought of considerable financial benefit. Secondly, committing the offence in a particularly methodical manner. Thirdly, there has been inflicted grievous bodily harm, a serious illness or a state of mortal danger to the victim. Fourthly, the object is a child younger than 18 years of age.

In c 25, s 3a there are mentioned four aggravating circumstances. Firstly, there has been used violence, threats or deceitfulness. The second one is equivalent to the third circumstance mentioned in c 20, s 9a. Thirdly, the offence has been committed against a child younger than 18 years of age or against a person whose capacity to defend himself or herself has been substantially diminished. Fourthly, the offence has been committed within the framework of a criminal organization.

It needs to be highlighted that the circumstances mentioned above does not automatically lead to a situation where the crime is considered aggravated. It is inevitable that the offence is aggravated also when assessed as a whole. For example in the case No. KKO 2011:102 a grandparent was kept as a near person comparable to a parent and it was seen to fulfil one of the aggravating elements of the offence c 20, s 7 Aggravated sexual abuse of a child. However, a grandparent was not convicted for aggravated sexual abuse of a child because of the overall assessment. This was because the conducts of the grandparent were occasional and the sexual act had included only touching and such.<sup>249</sup>

b. The Concurrence of offences

---

<sup>248</sup> These offenders with a special trust element can be parents, grandparents or may be a coach of a child, for instance.

<sup>249</sup> KKO 2011:102.

As mentioned in paragraph 2(a) of chapter II of this report, the sentence can have an effect upon concurrence of the offences. For example, when a person produces child pornography and therefore commits a crime mentioned in c 17, s 18 Distribution of sexually obscene pictures (or aggravated section 18a), the person can commit another several crimes at the same time. This means for instance that if the victim of the crime is under 16 years of age, the crime of producing child pornography, can be considered also as an offence mentioned in c 20, s 6 Sexual abuse of a child (or c 20, s 7 Aggravated sexual abuse of a child). Furthermore, if a child has been coerced into a sexual intercourse at the same time when producing a picture, the offence could be considered additionally as Rape or Aggravated rape (or Coercion into sexual intercourse).

c. The general provisions of determining the sentence

According to the CC, c 6, s 4, the sentence shall be determined in a way that it is in just proportion to the harmfulness and dangerousness of the offence.<sup>250</sup> In the Government Bill<sup>251</sup>, it is said that all the conducts mentioned in paragraphs (a) to (e)<sup>252</sup> of the Article 28 of the Lanzarote Convention are considered as particularly harmful and dangerous in the meaning of c 6, s 4. This means that those methods of committing the crime mentioned in those paragraphs have an aggravating effect on the sanction at the stage when the judge is determining the length of the sentence.

When it comes to paragraphs (f) and (g)<sup>253</sup> of the Article 28, in the CC, c 6, s 5(2)<sup>254</sup> it is said that if the perpetrator is a member of a group which is organized for committing serious crimes, it may increase the punishment. Furthermore, chapter 17, section 1a, of the CC (Participation in the activity of a criminal organisation), criminalizes a participation in the activity of the criminal organization of which is planning to commit serious crimes.<sup>255</sup> Previous

<sup>250</sup> Criminal Code (39/1889), c 6, s 4.

<sup>251</sup> HE 282/2010 vp, p.74.

<sup>252</sup> Paragraphs of the article 28 of the Lanzarote Convention: “(a) the offence seriously damaged the physical or mental health of the victim; (b) the offence was preceded or accompanied by acts of torture or serious violence; (c) the offence was committed against a particularly vulnerable victim; (d) the offence was committed by a member of the family, a person cohabiting with the child or a person having abused his or her authority; (e) the offence was committed by several people acting together.”

<sup>253</sup>“(f) the offence was committed within the framework of a criminal organisation; (g) the perpetrator has previously been convicted of offences of the same nature.”

<sup>254</sup> Grounds increasing the punishment.

<sup>255</sup> What is meant by “serious crime” in a context of sexual crimes against children, the maximum statutory offences of the perpetrator can be taken into consideration because of s 5(5), if the crime is similar to the earlier offences or the conduct otherwise indicates that the perpetrator is heedless of the prohibitions of the law. Also an earlier criminality which has been convicted abroad can have same kind of aggravating effect due to the last-mentioned subsection.<sup>256</sup>

2.8 Sanctions and Measures

xxii. Sexual abuse crimes:

Rape: imprisonment (1 year to 6 years).<sup>257</sup> Aggravated Rape: imprisonment (2 years to 10 years).<sup>258</sup> Coercion into a sexual intercourse: imprisonment (14 days to 3 years).<sup>259</sup> Coercion into a sexual act: fine or imprisonment (14 days to 3 years).<sup>260</sup> Sexual abuse: fine or imprisonment (14 days to 4 years). Sexual abuse of a child: imprisonment (4 months to 4 years). Aggravated sexual abuse of a child: imprisonment (1 year to 10 years).

Prostitution:

Purchase of sexual services from a young person: fine or imprisonment (14 days to 2 years). Trafficking in human beings: imprisonment (4 months to 6 years). Aggravated trafficking in human beings: imprisonment (2 years to 10 years). Pandering: fine or imprisonment (14 days to 3 years). Aggravated pandering: imprisonment (4 months to 6 years). Abuse of a victim of prostitution: fine or imprisonment (14 days to 6 months).

Child pornography:

Distribution of sexually obscene pictures: fine or imprisonment (14 days to 2 years). Aggravated distribution of sexually obscene pictures depicting children: imprisonment (4 months to 6 years). Possession of sexually obscene pictures depicting children: fine or imprisonment (14 days to 1 year).

New provisions after the ratification of the Lanzarote Convention:

---

sentence must be imprisonment for at least four years.

<sup>256</sup> HE 282/2010 vp, p.75.

<sup>257</sup> Criminal Code (39/1889),c 20, s 1(1).

<sup>258</sup> Criminal Code (39/1889),c 20, s 2(1).

<sup>259</sup> Criminal Code (39/1889),c 20, s 3(1).

<sup>260</sup> Criminal Code (39/1889),c 20, s 4(1).

Solicitation of a child for sexual purposes: fine or imprisonment (14 days to 1 year).
 Attending sexually obscene (pornographic) performances involving the participation of children: fine or imprisonment (14 days to 2 years).

Other:

Illegal exhibition or distribution of audiovisual programmes to minor: fine or imprisonment (14 days to 6 months). Unlawful marketing of obscene material: fine or imprisonment (14 days to 6 months).<sup>261</sup>

The Criminal Code of Finland has sections Deprivation of personal liberty (c 25, s 1) and Aggravated deprivation of personal liberty (c 25, s 2).<sup>262</sup> These sections are mainly meant to provide general protection to personal freedom of movement and against internment.<sup>263</sup> The penalty is fine or imprisonment (14 days to 2 years) regarding deprivation of personal liberty and imprisonment (4 months to 4 years) regarding aggravated deprivation of personal liberty.

Regarding extradition of evidence and other procedural help there is a law called Laki kansainvälisestä oikeusavusta rikosasioissa, Act on International Legal Assistance in Criminal Matters (4/1994).<sup>264</sup> More specific legislation about extradition is to be found in other laws.<sup>265</sup> Finland does also apply the Council Framework Decision regarding the European arrest warrant and the surrender procedures between Member States which regulates for example extradition of offenders.<sup>266</sup>

- xxiii. National Research Institute of Legal Policy published a survey about sex offences against children in year 2009.<sup>267</sup> The survey studied, amongst other things, the judicial practice in Finland regarding sex offences. According to the survey, in the 21st century, the highest increase in number has happened in conditional discharge for sexual abuse crimes against <sup>261</sup> Criminal Code (39/1889), c 20, s 5(1), s 6(1), s 7(1) and s 8(1); c 25, s 3(1) and s 3a(1); c 20, s 9(1) and s 9a(1); c 17, s 18(1), s 18a(1), s 18b(1), s 20(1); c 20, s 8b(1); c 20, s 8c.

<sup>262</sup> Criminal Code (39/1889), c 25, sections 1 and 2.

<sup>263</sup> HE 94/1993 vp. p. 158.

<sup>264</sup> Act on International Legal Assistance in Criminal Matters (4/1994).

<sup>265</sup> For example, Act on Extradition on the Basis of an Offence Between Finland and Other Member States of the European Union (1286/2003). And between the Nordic countries there is uniform legislation.

<sup>266</sup> 2002/584/JHA: Council Framework Decision of 13 June 2002 on the European arrest warrant and the surrender procedures between Member States. Official Journal L 190, 18/07/2002, p. 0001–0020.

<sup>267</sup> V. Hinkkanen, Lapsen seksuaalinen hyväksikäyttö - tutkimus rangaistuskäytännöstä ja seksuaalirikosten uusimisesta. Oikeuspoliittisen tutkimuslaitoksen tutkimustiedonantoja 92, National Research Institute of Legal Policy, Helsinki, 2009, viewed on 8 September 2012.

children. This could be explained by the increased number of reported offences as well as the strengthened authoritative control.<sup>268</sup> After year 1999, the lengths of unconditional imprisonments have also increased.<sup>269</sup>

It was also pronounced in the survey that recidivism is not common in sex criminality and that the risk for recidivism does not increase in process of time.<sup>270</sup> The biggest risk for recidivism is amongst those who have been convicted for an offence regarding sexually obscene pictures (a pornographic offence).<sup>271</sup> It was also mentioned in the survey that a conviction for a pornographic offence could be a notable risk to commit new another types of sex offences.<sup>272</sup>

But the main question remains: Are the sanctions effective, proportionate and dissuasive? To give a proper answer to the question is not an easy task. In the EU law effectiveness means that the sanction must achieve its desired purpose. Proportionate means basically two things. First, the sanction needs to be in just proportion to the harmfulness of the offence and the sanction must not exceed what is necessary to achieve the purpose of the sanction. Second, the sanction must be in line with the other offences in general. Dissuasive, which is the most hard to examine, requires that sanctions must be adequate to prevent future crimes.<sup>273</sup> Some thoughts about the issue will be followed, but wider examination is not possible within the limits of this report.

To begin with, it is important to note that the Finnish theory of sanctioning differs much from the same theory introduced by the EU. The dissuasive sanction, which is been promoted by the EU, refers to the legal theory of deterrence (prevention), which basically means that the sanction is seen to have a deterrent (fear) effect. The deterrent effect prevents the offender from committing a crime in the first place.<sup>274</sup> However, in the Nordic

---

<sup>268</sup> Hinkkanen, p. 35.

<sup>269</sup> Hinkkanen, p. 36.

<sup>270</sup> Hinkkanen, p. 81.

<sup>271</sup> Hinkkanen, p. 82.

<sup>272</sup> Hinkkanen, p. 84.

<sup>273</sup> COMMUNICATION FROM THE COMMISSION TO THE EUROPEAN PARLIAMENT, THE COUNCIL, THE EUROPEAN ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COMMITTEE AND THE COMMITTEE OF THE REGIONS ((COM 2011) 573 Final), Towards an EU Criminal Policy: Ensuring the effective implementation of EU policies through criminal law, 2011, viewed on 3 November 2012, p.9. See also S. Melander, Rikosoikeus 2010-luvulla, FORUM IURIS, Helsinki, 2010, p. 18, where is particularly mentioned that the offence needs to be in just proportion also to the other offences.

<sup>274</sup> S. Melander, Rikosoikeus 2010-luvulla, FORUM IURIS, Helsinki, 2010, p. 18.

countries there is a more diverse theory of prevention which is called the theory of indirect general prevention. According to the latter theory, the offender does not commit a crime, not because of the fear of the sanction, but because the crime has several other effects on the offender. The sanction has an effect on morality and values of individuals rather than a fear. People do not commit a crime because they share the same moral code with the legislator (see more about the theory in Lappi-Seppälä 2009, link in footnote 275). The maximum lengths of sentences in Finland are not as long as they are in the other countries of Europe and one reason to this is the above mentioned difference in the sentencing theories. According to the theory of indirect general prevention, the perpetrator shares the same moral code with the legislator more effectively, if the sentences are fair and just and, in addition, respects the rights of the individuals.<sup>275</sup>

When it comes to prevention (deterrence, which means a preventative effect on a single perpetrator), as mentioned earlier, as far as the sex offences and particularly sexual abuse offences against children are concerned, the risk for recidivism is not high. This review points out that the Finnish sanctions for sex offences are dissuasive enough to prevent perpetrators from committing similar crimes in future. However, when it comes to child pornography crimes, the risk for recidivism is much higher than the risk is among the sex offenders. One may consider this to mean that the sanctions for those crimes are not dissuasive enough, but equally good theory could be that these crimes are not so easy to monitor and the risk of getting caught is lower. Either way, the risk for recidivism is not so high if compared to some other common crimes, the traffic crimes for instance.<sup>276</sup>

As far as the general prevention (which means a preventative effect on society) is concerned, it is hard to make a generic conclusion because of the nature of these crimes. It is true that the number of sex offences against children has increased in recent years, but it is hard to tell if the increased number is actually due to more effective control mechanism and the increased number of the reports made of these offences rather than a real increase in the number of committed crimes. However, as we all know, a large number of these crimes still remain unreported. Thus, it is hard to tell if these crimes are actually increased or not, and further, it is hard to tell if the dissuasive effect on the society is effective enough or not. This would require a wider examination to be made in Finland.

---

<sup>275</sup> T. Lappi-Seppälä, 'Imprisonment and Penal Policy in Finland' in Scandinavian Studies in Law, Stockholm Institute for Scandinavian Law, vol. 54 Criminal Law, September 2009, viewed on 3 November 2012. <<http://www.scandinavianlaw.se/pdf/54-17.pdf>>

<sup>276</sup> Hinkkanen, p. 82 and 85 (The comparison).

When it comes to effectiveness and proportion, the blameworthiness of sex offences against children is quite high in Finland. The Criminal Code of Finland offers a wide scale of punishment, especially when the sexual abuse of a child is concerned (4 months to 4 years and 1 to 10 years if the crime is assessed as an aggravated sexual abuse of a child). It is also possible to convict a joint punishment due to the concurrence of the offences. Like mentioned in the report of the Law Committee of the Finnish Parliament, the minimum sentence of 4 months is rare when it comes to the general form of the offence.<sup>277</sup> The minimum sentence of 4 months imprisonment is normally used in the aggravated provisions of an offence rather than in the general provisions. This review shows that these crimes are taken seriously.

All in all, it is hard to make a generic conclusion on whether the sanctions are effective, proportionate and dissuasive or not. Also the different sanctioning theory may lead to a different result. However, if compared to other common crimes made in Finland, like an assault, theft or driving while intoxicated, the risk of recidivism is particularly low when it comes to sex offences. Everyone may draw their own conclusions regarding the issue.

- xxiv. As mentioned in chapter f, corporate criminal liability is regulated in chapter 9 in the Criminal Code of Finland.<sup>278</sup> It includes legislation about prerequisites for liability, waiving of punishment, corporate fine, waiving of the bringing of charges, joint corporate fine and enforcement of a corporate fine. Coercive Measures Act (450/1987) regulates for example prohibition of transfer and collateral confiscation, normal confiscation and search. Chapter 10 in the Criminal Code of Finland regulates forfeitures.

In Finland there is a detached law regarding business prohibition and this kind of prohibition reaches every area of business.<sup>279</sup> In Finland it is not possible to set a business prohibition to a corporate only because it has compromised a section in the Lanzarote

---

<sup>277</sup> LaVM 43/2010 vp.

<sup>278</sup> Legal person is held liable if an offence has been committed on the behalf or for the benefit of the corporation. For more information, see chapter f above.

<sup>279</sup> Business Prohibition Act (1059/1985). See also HE 282/2010 vp, p. 71.

Convention but when a corporate has committed other than a remote crime and when this action is regarded harmful as a whole to creditors, contracting parties, public finance or to the fair financial competition.<sup>280</sup>

- xxv. Chapter 10 of the Criminal Code legislates about forfeiture, and it concerns confiscation of materials, proceeds, an instrument of crime and other properties etc. The confiscation of proceeds is necessary due to the c 10, s 2. For example, in case No. KKO 2005:17 a landlord has been convicted to forfeiture the rental incomes of 146 440 euros to the State. In the case the landlord (who was a lawyer) was convicted to pandering because in the house called “red house” which he or she owned was used solely for pandering business. In addition to the confiscation of proceeds, the sentence was unconditional imprisonment for one year.

Pornographic pictures or other visual recordings depicting children are able to be confiscated due to c 10, s 5(1). An object that has been used in the commission of an intentional offence can be confiscated due to c 10, s 4(2c). The latter means for example, that if there has been used some item in a commission of sexual abuse of a child, the item can be ordered to be forfeited to the State.

It is good to mention that the provisions about confiscation do not make it possible to shut down websites that contain child pornographic materials. However, section 18 of the Laki sananvapauden käytämisestä joukkoviestinnässä, Act on the Exercise of Freedom of Expression in Mass Media (460/2003) makes it possible to the court to order website to be shut down. This order can be given to a keeper of the transmitter, server or other comparable device, for instance.<sup>281</sup>

In Finland there has not been taken any actions that the proceeds which are confiscated would be allocated directly to some special fund just because these proceeds have been confiscated due to a committed sexual crime against a child. Although, Raha-automaattiyhdistys, Finland's Slot Machine Association (RAY) is a public association which is funding the activity of several civic organizations<sup>282</sup> and such civic activity which is helping

<sup>280</sup> Business Prohibition Act (1059/1985), section 3. See also HE 282/2010 vp, p. 71.

<sup>281</sup> It is also good to notice that the implementation of the Directive on combating the sexual abuse and sexual exploitation of children and child pornography (2011/92/EU) is in progress. The Directive will provide better cooperation of the member states regarding the issue. (T. Ojala, p. 215-216).

<sup>282</sup> These kinds of associations are Victim support Finland (Rikosuhripäivystys), the Mannerheim League for the victims of offences. RAY is funding about a thousand health and social welfare organizations every year.<sup>283</sup> It is also good to mention the State Treasury which is a government agency that compensates injuries of victims of offences.

What comes to bona fide third parties, the demand of intention<sup>284</sup> means that bona fide third parties cannot be guilty of sex offences. There is, however, some borderline problematic regarding the level of knowledge. A landlord can for example be convicted for pandering if the rented flat is used for prostitution when prostitution is fairly probable (and the landlord is aware of this probability).<sup>285</sup>

- xxvi. Blameworthiness increases especially when the offender is a person to whom the child should be able to trust.<sup>286</sup> This has been taken into account so that the existence of a near relationship is included directly in the essential elements of the offences.<sup>287</sup> This means that if the offender is for example a family member or in a comparable position to a family member the offence title can be changed into the aggravated modus operandi.<sup>288</sup> According to the research made by the National Research Institute of Legal Policy, 45 % of the offences committed by a parent was regarded as an aggravated sexual abuse of a child.<sup>289</sup>

It is, however, important to keep in mind that in order the offender to be convicted for aggravated modus operandi, the offence has to have been aggravated also when assessed as a whole.<sup>290</sup> For example in case No. KKO 2011:102 a grandparent was regarded as a near person comparable to a parent and that was seen to fulfil one of the aggravating elements of the offence. However, a grandparent was not convicted for aggravated sexual abuse of a child because of the overall assessment. This was because the conducts of the grandparent were occasional and the sexual act had included only touching and such.

---

Child Welfare (Mannerheimin lastensuojeluliitto), Rape crisis centre (Tukinainen ry) just to mention few.

<sup>283</sup> HE 282/2010 vp, p. 39 and 41.

<sup>284</sup> Circumstance-intention.

<sup>285</sup> KKO 2005:17.

<sup>286</sup> See e.g. Hinkkanen, p. 38. See also HE 6/1997 vp and KKO 2011:102.

<sup>287</sup> To the aggravated modus operandi.

<sup>288</sup> See e.g. T. Ojala, p. 134. It is also good to notice that the age limit for sexual abuse is 18 if the offender is a close family member.(compared to the "normal" protection age which is 16 years of age. See Criminal Code, c 20, s 6.).

<sup>289</sup> Hinkkanen, p. 28.

<sup>290</sup> Criminal Code, c 20, s 7(1).

It is also good to notice that if the offence happens within a family, the offender can be guilty of several crimes with a quite similar description of the offence. For these kinds of situations the Criminal Code of Finland offers a general principle, according to which “the sentence shall be determined so that it is in just proportion to the harmfulness and dangerousness of the offence, the motives for the act and the other culpability of the perpetrator manifest in the offence.”<sup>291</sup> And as said in paragraph 2(g) of chapter II (subparagraph c) of this report, Article 28(d) “the offence was committed by a member of the family — ” is regarded as particularly harmful in the meaning of this principle. In these kinds of situations there can also actualize different kinds of child welfare measurements, for example custody.

3 CRIMINAL PROCEDURE

3.1 Investigation

- i. In Finland, the leading principle of child law is the principle of the best interest of a child. This interest must be met whenever enforcing the law or making decisions regarding a child. The principle itself has been adapted to the Finnish legal system from the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child, article 3 paragraph 1. It is specifically mentioned in the Child Custody and Right of Access Act<sup>292</sup> s 1 and in the Child Welfare Act<sup>293</sup> s 1.

It is noteworthy, that although the principle of the best interest of a child is not as itself included to the Finnish criminal procedural laws, it still has a considerable meaning. This results from the fact that Finland is a member state of the European Union and the Finnish judicial system is therefore strongly affected by the union based regulation and the binding preliminary rulings given by the European Court of Justice, where the principle of the best interest of a child has been emphasized. The Court of Justice has e.g. ruled that ‘the national court must be able to authorise young children, who, as in this case, claim to have been victims of maltreatment, to give their testimony in accordance with arrangements allowing those children to be guaranteed an appropriate level of protection, for example outside the trial and before it takes place’.<sup>294</sup> Thus, the principle of the best interest of a child must always be taken into consideration both during the preliminary investigation and during the

<sup>291</sup> Criminal Code (39/1889), c 6, s 4.

<sup>292</sup> Child Custody and Right of Access Act (361/1983).

<sup>293</sup> Child Welfare Act (417/2007).

<sup>294</sup> Case C-105/03 Criminal proceedings against Maria Pupino.

court procedure in a case involving a child. The aim is to ensure that no special damage is directed to the child due to the investigation or the court procedure and that the child is protected from becoming a secondary victim.<sup>295</sup>

The relevant national regulations are placed in the Criminal Investigations Act<sup>296</sup> s 39 a, and the Code of Judicial Procedure<sup>297</sup> c 17, s 11, where special measures have been ordered to be adapted, when a child is heard during the investigation process. According to the Criminal Investigations Act s 39 a, the hearing of the plaintiff or the witness must be video recorded or recorded with a similar voice- and image recorder during the pre-trial criminal investigations, if due to the young age or mental state of the person heard he or she cannot be heard personally in the court without causing him or her damage. Accordingly, the hearing methods must be adjusted to the level of development of the person heard, people participating to the hearing and other circumstances of the hearing. It should also be noted, that the head of investigation has the authority to decide that other person than an investigating authority can ask the questions from the person heard. This person could e.g. be a social worker with the experience of working with children. The defendant must, however, always be guaranteed a possibility to ask questions from the person heard, either directly or through another person.

Correspondingly, according to the Code of Judicial Procedure c 17, s 11 (2), the video or otherwise recorded statement given in a pre-trial criminal investigation by a person aged under fifteen or a person who is mentally incapacitated may be admitted as evidence in court. However, this can be done only provided that the defendant is ensured with an opportunity to present questions to the person heard. It is also noteworthy that the head of investigation can decide that the defendant's questions are asked by the authority conducting the hearing. This way the person heard does not have to face the defendant. Other ways to conduct the pre-trial hearing so that both the defendant's and the heard person's rights are assured are to let the defendant follow the hearing behind a tinted glass or to let him or her take part in the hearing via remote access. The recording of the hearing can also be delivered

---

<sup>295</sup> P Hirvelä, Rikosprosessi lapsiin kohdistuvissa seksuaalirikoksissa, WSOYPro, Helsinki, 2006, p. 233. See also United Nations Office for Drug Control and Crime Prevention, UN Handbook on Justice for Victims, Centre for International Crime Prevention, New York, 1999, p. 9-10.

<sup>296</sup> Criminal Investigations Act (449/1987).

<sup>297</sup> Code of Judicial Procedure 31.12.1734.

to the defendant afterwards. After having seen the recording, the defendant may compile questions that are later asked from the person heard. The hearing of a child is usually conducted as early in the process as possible and preferably only once. However, especially with small children, one hearing is not usually enough and thus there are generally 2 – 3 hearings conducted. The aim is still always to minimize the number of stressful situations for the child.<sup>298</sup>

There have been many cases regarding the hearings of minors before the Finnish Supreme Court. In the case No. KKO 2006:107, the court declared that a video recording of a 9-year-old child's hearing, which was conducted during the preliminary investigation, could be used as evidence in the court even though the defendant had not had the possibility to ask questions from the child during the hearing. This was deemed possible because the defendant could comment the video in court. Accordingly, in the case No. KKO 2008:68 the court declared that a psychologist's statement of the child could not be used as evidence, while it had not been recorded and the defendant had not had the possibility to ask questions from the child.

Personal hearing during the court process

If the personal hearing of the minor in the court process is deemed necessary, there is a special regulation governing the methods of this hearing. According to the Code of Judicial Procedure c 17, s 21, a person under the age of fifteen or a person who is mentally incapacitated may be heard as a witness or for probative purposes if the court deems it appropriate. However, it is also required that this personal hearing is of central significance to the clarification of the matter and that the hearing would probably not cause any suffering or other harm that can injure the person heard or his or her development. In the Supreme Court case No. KKO 2008:84, the court declared that a video hearing of a child could not be used as evidence in the court, because the child had reached the age of fifteen after the preliminary investigation. Hence, a personal hearing in the court was conducted.

When discussing the personal hearings of minors, noteworthy are also the sections of the Code of Judicial Procedure that regulate the special measures applied in order to protect any heard person during the court hearings. According to the c 17, s 34, a witness, another person heard for probative purposes and an injured party may be heard in the main hearing without the presence of a party or another person. This is possible provided that the court deems it is appropriate, such hearing is necessary and the other party is reserved an opportunity to put questions to the person being heard. According to the section, the necessity for special measures to be adapted may arise, first of all, from the need to protect the person being heard or a person related to him or her from a threat directed at life or health. Secondly, the special arrangement might be necessary if the person being heard would otherwise not reveal what he or she knows about the matter. Thirdly, it might be necessary to apply special measures if a person disturbs or attempts to mislead the person being heard during his or her testimony. It should also be noted that according to the section, a witness or other person may also be heard in a hearing closed to the public, as provided in Laki oikeudenkäynnin julkisuudesta yleisissä tuomioistuimissa, the Act on the Publicity of General Court Proceedings.<sup>299</sup>

---

<sup>298</sup> T. Ojala, Lapsiin kohdistuvat seksuaalirikokset, Edita Publishing Oy, Porvoo, 2012, p. 222.

According to the c 17, s 34 a, on the other hand, a witness, another person to be heard for probative purposes or a party may be heard in the main hearing without his or her appearance in person. This is made possible with the use of a video conference or other appropriate technical means of communication, meaning that the persons participating in the hearing have only an audio and video link with each other. According to the section, applying this measure is possible when the court deems it suitable, a party is reserved an opportunity to put questions to the person being heard and there is some special reason for applying this method. This kind of reason may be e.g. the necessity to protect the person to be heard or a person related to him or her from a threat directed at life or health. In addition, the method can be applied, if a person to be heard cannot, due to illness or another reason, appear in person in the main hearing, or his or her personal appearance in proportion to the significance of the testimony would cause unreasonable costs or unreasonable inconvenience. It might also be that the credibility of the statement of the person to be heard can be reliably assessed without his or her personal appearance in the main hearing. In the latter two cases the hearing can also be conducted via phone call. However, what is more relevant in this context, according to the section, the method can also be applied if the person to be heard has not reached the age of fifteen years or he or she is mentally incapacitated.

---

<sup>299</sup> Act on the Publicity of Court Proceedings in General Courts (370/2007).

Conducting the personal hearing of a child in the court

If a child, who has reached the age of fifteen, is heard personally in the court, the questioning is conducted by a member of the court provided that the court does not find a special reason to have the parties conduct the questioning themselves. At any rate, all the parties must be guaranteed a possibility to ask questions from the heard person either through the court or, when the court deems it appropriate, directly from the person. The hearing is attempted to carry out in one appointment so that the child's normal daily rhythm wouldn't be disturbed.<sup>300</sup> If necessary, the hearing can also be conducted in other room than the court room. This practice is often utilized when hearing small children. The hearing can take place e.g. in a more comfortable preparation facility or in the judge's office. The hearing can be conducted also completely out of the court, in a room specifically designed for hearing children e.g. in the social authorities premises. The choice of location aims to minimize the child's stress and anxiety level.<sup>301</sup>

When a minor is a party in a criminal procedure his or her legal representative and guardian is usually his or her custodian. In many cases this person is also the child's biological parent. When the child has reached the age of fifteen years she or he has the right to speak beside his or her legal representative in a matter that regards him- or herself personally or his or her interest and rights. When the child's interest is in conflict with that of his or her custodian, a separate legal guardian must be appointed. The appointment is given by a district court following an application by a social officer. According to Terveiden ja hyvinvoinninlaitos, STAKES's<sup>302</sup>, guide book, the need for a legal guardian should always be evaluated when the question is about sexual abuse or an assault within a family.<sup>303</sup> The legal guardian's appointment gives the guardian a right to make decisions about some matters specifically stated in the assignment. These rights can be e.g. the right to make a report of an offence,

<sup>300</sup> A.-K. Aaltonen, Lapsioikeus ja lapsen oikeus tuomioistuimissa, Edita Publishing Oy, Porvoo, 2009, p. 272.

<sup>301</sup> A.-K. Aaltonen, p. 272.

<sup>302</sup> STAKES (National Research and Development Centre for Welfare and Health) was an expert agency whose key functions were research, development and statistics. Since 2009 STAKES has been a part of the National Institute for Health and Welfare.

<sup>303</sup> S Taskinen, Lapsen seksuaalisen hyväksikäytön ja pahoinpitelyn selvittäminen. Asiantuntijaryhmän suositukset sosiaali- ja terveydenhuollon henkilöstölle. Stakes, Oppaita 55. STAKES, Helsinki, 2003, p. 121.

the right to request prosecution, the right to give permission to conduct a psychological or somatic examination of the child or the right to give a permission to interrogate the child.<sup>304</sup>

When dealing with sex offences the complainant always has a right to a legal counsel and to a support person. According to the Criminal Procedure Act c 2, s 1 a, the court may appoint a counsel for the injured party for criminal investigations and, in a case relating to a sexual offence against a child where the injured party has a claim in a case prosecuted by the public prosecutor, also for the trial unless this is for a special reason deemed unnecessary. According to the c 2, s 3, the support person, on the other hand, may be appointed to an injured party, who does not make a claim in the trial but who is being heard in person in order to resolve the case and is deemed to be in need of assistance during the criminal investigation or the trial. Where the legal assistant offers mainly legal aid to the complainant, the support person gives also moral support. This kind of support is especially important for a child. Many times, when a child has been appointed a legal guardian, the same person also acts as the child's legal assistance. These matters are further discussed below.

- ii. The report of a crime can be done in which ever police station, but the preliminary investigation is usually conducted by the police of the local area, where the crime has been committed. Helsingin poliisilaitos, The Helsinki Police Department, is the only police department in Finland where there is a special unit in operation that handles only sexual offences regulated in c 20 of the Criminal Code. The unit handles only local cases.<sup>305</sup> If the investigation of a suspected crime in a local police department is prolonged e.g. due to the complexity of the case or international connections, the local police department may ask the case handling to be transferred to Keskusrikospoliisin väkivaltayksikkö, the National Bureau of Investigation's Violence Unit.<sup>306</sup>

The preliminary investigation is conducted or at least led by the police. The police have educated some of their own personnel to interrogate and to hear a child, and these tasks are tried to be centralized to these officers in keeping with what is provided in Asetus

---

<sup>304</sup> P Hirvelä, Lapsen seksuaalisen hyväksikäytön selvittäminen, WSOYPro, Helsinki, 2007 p. 49 – 50.

<sup>305</sup> Phone interview with Detective Inspector Jyri Hiltunen from the Helsinki Police Department, 7 November 2012.

<sup>306</sup> Phone interview with Chief Inspector Jaakko Ridanpää from the National Bureau of Investigation, 7 November 2012.

esitutkinnasta ja pakkokeinoista, the Statute on Criminal Investigations and Coercive Measures<sup>307</sup> s 11. However, the police may also utilize the social- and healthcare workers during the preliminary investigations. This is regulated by Laki lapseen kohdistuneen seksuaalirikoksen selvittämisen järjestämisestä, Act Governing the Organizing of the Investigation of Sexual Offence Against a Child.<sup>308</sup> According to this act, a proper hospital district is obliged to organize services required by the police, the prosecutor and the court in order to investigate a sexual offence against a child and an assault relating thereto.

According to the Police Act<sup>309</sup> s 31 a, the police officers have the right to undertake undercover activities if they are necessary to prevent, detect or investigate criminal activities referred to in the Coercive Measures Act<sup>310</sup> c 5 a, s 2 or an offence referred to in the Criminal Code<sup>311</sup> c 17, s 18(1)(1) or a punishable attempt of such offence. However, the rule applies only when the persons, on whom information is gathered, behaviour or other circumstances give reasonable cause to suspect that they could commit the offence in question. According to the Coercive Measures Act, the undercover activities can be applied to crimes like e.g. aggravated sexual abuse of a child, trafficking in human beings, aggravated trafficking in human beings and aggravated distribution of sexually obscene pictures depicting children. Also according to the Criminal Code, the undercover activities can be applied to the aggravated distribution of sexually obscene pictures depicting children. Thus, when the conditions mentioned above are met, the police have the right to use covert operations. The covert operation is always governed by the National Bureau of Investigation or Suojelupoliisi, the Finnish Security Intelligence Service. The individual performing the covert operation must have completed the training approved by Poliisihallitus, the Police Board. He or she also has to be a volunteer and have both the personal qualities appropriate for the operation and the expertise on police work demanded by the operation.<sup>312</sup>

In Finland there is also in operation a special virtual community policing group located in Helsinki. The group patrols visibly in the internet and its goal is to pre-empt crimes, to lower

---

<sup>307</sup> The Statute on Criminal Investigations and Coercive Measures (5751988).

<sup>308</sup> Law governing the organizing of the investigation of sexual offence against a child 1009/2008.

<sup>309</sup> Police Act (493/1995).

<sup>310</sup> Coercive Measures Act (450/1987).

<sup>311</sup> Criminal Code 19.12.1889/39.

<sup>312</sup> Ministry of the Interior's degree on the organization of the data collection and supervision by the police (V: 1.4.2008 K, A: 25.3.2008, SK: 174/2008).

the threshold to contact the police and ultimately to intervene into the crimes committed online, sexual crimes against children among others. In June 2011 Helsingin nettipoliisi, the Helsinki Virtual Community Policing Group, and the Finnish organisation Pelastakaa lapset ry, Save the Children, conducted a survey to investigate child sexual abuse on the internet. The survey was carried out online in four popular Finnish online communities and it could be answered anonymously. Based on the survey, there was a report conducted that examined the replies by respondents under the age of sixteen. There were 2,283 of them of whom 62 % were girls and 38 % boys. 10 % of all respondents indicated that they were less than twelve years old. The results of the survey were worrying. According to the survey from the total of 2,267 respondents 46 % of the girls and 13 % of the boys had been contacted over the internet in form of sending sexually harassing messages, photos or videos by an adult or someone who was clearly older than the respondents. Of the total of 2,260 respondents, 52 % of the girls and 12 % of the boys had been asked to send photos of themselves scantily dressed or naked via the internet. In addition, of the total of 2,262 respondents, 48 % of the girls and 15 % of the boys had been propositioned online for sex by a stranger.<sup>313</sup> The results of the survey strongly suggest that the internet-related sexual abuse of children may be a much broader problem in Finland than previously realised.

In Finland there is also in force Laki lapsipornografian levittämisen estotoimista, the Act Regarding the Blocking of the Distribution of Child Pornography.<sup>314</sup> According to s 1 of the aforementioned act the purpose of the act is to protect children and their constitutional rights by promoting measures with which the access to foreign websites including child pornography can be blocked. According to s 4 of the act, the police have a right to compose, maintain and update a list of internet sites that include child pornography. In Finland the list is upheld by the National Bureau of Investigation and regularly delivered to over thirty big telecommunications operators that then may voluntarily restrict the access via their services to the websites in question. The measures applied in Finland are a part of

---

<sup>313</sup> The results of the survey can be accessed in full in the homepage of the Helsinki Police Department, viewed on 10 November 2012, <http://www.poliisi.fi/poliisi/helsinki/home.nsf/files/090BDA4507957157C22579A30035D002/\$file/Seksuaalinenh%C3%A4irint%C3%A4web2011\_eng.pdf>.

<sup>314</sup> The Act Regarding the Blocking of the Distribution of Child Pornography (1068/2006).

COSPOL Internet Related Child Abusive Material Project accepted by the European Police Chief Task Force in the fall of 2006.<sup>315</sup>

- iii. According to the Criminal Investigations Act s 2, the police or other investigation authority has to perform the preliminary investigation of a crime, when due to a report of a crime or otherwise there is a reason to suspect that a crime has been committed. When the question is about a sexual offence against a child, the police usually require information from the health- and child welfare officers in order to decide whether the statutory requirements for starting a criminal investigation are met. If, in the light of gathered information, the police have a justifiable reason to suspect that the crime has been committed, the preliminary investigation is started.<sup>316</sup>

In Finland all sex offences against a child are under public prosecution.<sup>317</sup> This means, that they are deemed so grave in their nature that the society has a special interest to prosecute the suspected offenders and a duty to insure that the best interest of a child is met. This being the case, it is not necessary that the suspected victim or his or her guardian reports the crime. Reporting is, however, always a primary right of the parties involved. Accordingly, it is without relevance if the report done by the suspected victim or his or her guardian is later withdrawn.

In Finland there is no general duty to report a committed crime. However, according to the Criminal Code c 15, s 10, a person who knows of e.g. rape, aggravated rape, aggravated sexual abuse of a child, trafficking in human beings or aggravated trafficking in human beings and fails to report it to the authorities or the endangered person when there is still time to prevent the offence, shall be sentenced, if the offence or a punishable attempt thereof is committed, to a fine or to imprisonment for at most six months. Penalty of perjury does not, however, apply to the close relatives of the perpetrator or persons living

---

<sup>315</sup> See also the homepage of the National Bureau of Investigation, viewed on 7 November 2012, <<http://www.poliisi.fi/poliisi/krp/home.nsf/pages/A12612E6A0B3A1EBC2257549003F446E>>.

<sup>316</sup> STM, (2009:30), Sosiaali- ja terveysministeriön selvityksiä, Lasten seksuaalisen hyväksikäytön selvittäminen. Työryhmän muistio. Helsinki, 2009, p 38. (Reports of the Ministry of Social Affairs and Health 2009:30, p. 38.)

<sup>317</sup> HE 282/2010 p. 86 – 87.

with him or her or a person who is close owing to another comparable personal relationship.

318

In addition, according to the Finnish Child Welfare Act s 25, certain persons have a specifically regulated duty to ‘notify the municipal body responsible for social services without delay and notwithstanding confidentiality regulations if, in the course of their work, they discover that there is a child for whom it is necessary to investigate the need for child welfare on account of the child’s need for care, circumstances endangering the child’s development, or the child’s behaviour’. According to the section, the duty applies to persons employed by, or in positions of trust for, social and health-care services; education services; youth services; the police service; Rikosseuraamuslaitos, the Criminal Sanctions Agency; fire and rescue services; social welfare and health care service providers; education or training provider; a parish or other religious community; a reception centre and organisation centre<sup>319</sup>; a group family home and other housing unit<sup>320</sup>; a unit engaged in emergency response centre activities or a unit engaged in morning and evening activities for schoolchildren as well as persons working in a principal or contractor relationship or as independent professionals, and to all health care professionals. However, also a person other than those referred to above may submit a notification, notwithstanding any confidentiality regulations that may apply. In addition, it is noteworthy, that according to the section, the specifically mentioned persons also have a duty, notwithstanding confidentiality provisions, to notify directly the police when they have cause to suspect on the basis of circumstances that have come to their knowledge that the child is a victim to a sex offence<sup>321</sup>.

- iv. According to the Criminal Code c 8, s 1, the statute of limitation starts to expire from the day the individual crime is committed. If the crime consists of maintaining the illegal state of affairs, the statute of limitation starts to expire when this state of affairs ends. According to the Criminal Code c 8, s 4, the statute of limitation can be continued by one year once by application if the preliminary investigation of the crime requires special and time-taking actions and hence the investigation would be incomplete by the expiration date. The same

<sup>318</sup> Hirvelä, Rikosprosessi lapsiin kohdistuvissa seksuaalirikoksissa, p. 41.

<sup>319</sup> Referred to in s 3 of laki kansainvälistä suojelua hakevan vastaanotosta, the Act on Reception of People Seeking International Protection (746/2011).

<sup>320</sup> Referred to in section 28 of laki kotoutumisen edistämisestä, the Act on the Promotion of Integration (1386/2010).

<sup>321</sup> Punishable under chapter 20 or chapter 21 of the Criminal Code.

applies, if the preliminary investigation has started exceptionally late or the defendant is on the run and very important public interest requires the continuation. These requirements are, however, seldom deemed to be met in regard of a sex offence against a child.

The general statutes of limitation are regulated in Criminal Code c 8, s 1. At the moment the general statutes of limitation apply also to the sex offences against children. Hence, in the situation where the most severe penalty provided for the offence is fixed-term imprisonment for over eight years, the right to bring charges is time-barred if charges have not been brought within twenty years. Accordingly, in the situation where the most severe penalty is imprisonment for more than two years and at most eight years, the right to bring charges is time-barred if charges have not been brought within ten years. Finally, in the situation where the most severe penalty is imprisonment for over a year and at most two years, the right to bring charges is time-barred if charges have not been brought within five years and, in the situation where the most severe penalty is imprisonment for at most a year or a fine, within two years.

However, in order to protect the realization of the best interest of a child, according to the Criminal Code c 8, s 1, the right to bring charges for sexual abuse of a child and aggravated sexual abuse of a child becomes time-barred at the earliest when the complainant reaches the age of twenty-eight years. The same applies to rape, aggravated rape, coercion into sexual intercourse and coercion into sexual act, sexual abuse, pandering, aggravated pandering, trafficking in human beings and aggravated trafficking in human beings directed at a person under the age of eighteen years. Also, the statute of limitation expires when the victim of the crime turns twenty-three years, if the crime in question has been solicitation of the child to sexual purposes.

- v. As mentioned above, according to the Criminal Investigations Act s 2 the police or other investigation authority has to perform the preliminary investigation of a crime, when due to a report of a crime or otherwise they have a justifiable reason to suspect that a crime has been committed. The section does not require that there is a certainty about the victim's age even when the age has significance on whether all the elements of the offence are met. The police is seen to have the required "reason to suspect" even when the age of the victim is not certain.

- vi. The data for convicted criminals is recorded in the criminal register and in the ticket register that are both held by Oikeusrekisterikeskus, the Legal Register Centre. The Legal Register Centre operates under the Ministry of Justice. According to the Criminal Records Act, s 3, the recorded data must be kept in secret. However, notwithstanding the secrecy, data about a person may be delivered from the criminal records to a court of law for the hearing of a pending case or to the public prosecutor for prosecution, consideration of charges or coercive measures. Accordingly the data may be delivered to the Criminal Sanctions Agency that takes care of the probation and the prison service, for the enforcement of a sentence and for the establishment of a person's aptitude. The data can also be delivered to the appropriate official in the Ministry of Justice for the presentation of matters of pardon and to oikeuskansleri, the Chancellor of Justice of the Government and eduskunnan oikeusasiamies, the Parliamentary Ombudsman for the performance of their duties as overseers of legality and to pre-trial investigation authorities for coercive measures.<sup>322</sup>

In addition, information from the criminal records shall be delivered to the authorities of a foreign state for dealing with criminal matters as provided in Article 13 of the European Convention on Mutual Assistance in Criminal Matters<sup>323</sup> or as separately agreed upon or provided.<sup>324</sup> Correspondingly, according to Criminal Code c 7, s 9, the unconditional imprisonment and community service sanctions and comparable consequence condemned in another member state of the European Union or in Iceland or Norway are taken into consideration in Finnish criminal procedure e.g. when assessing the length of the imprisonment.

3.2 Complaint Procedure

- vii. The criminal procedure can be divided to four main stages; investigation, consideration of charges, trial in court and execution of penalty. There are two general Procedural Acts in Finnish legislation that regulate the criminal procedure. The two general Acts are applied throughout the procedure but in addition there are specific acts that provide the rules for the specific questions (e.g. investigation, publicity etc.). The general Acts are the Code of Judicial

---

<sup>322</sup> Criminal Records Act s 4 (1).

<sup>323</sup> the European Convention on Mutual Assistance in Criminal Matters (TrS 30/1981).

<sup>324</sup> S 4 (2) of the Criminal Records Act.

Procedure and the Criminal Procedure Act. The latter applies only to criminal procedure, but the first applies also to civil procedure.

Most of the sex offences of the Criminal Code are subject to public prosecution. This means that the prosecutor has a right to bring charges at his or her own discretion even if the injured party would not have notified the crime to be prosecuted. However the decision of the prosecutor is not based solely on his or her free discretion, but the decision must meet certain criteria regulated in legislation. In cases of complainant offences the prosecutor can bring charges in a matter only if the injured party has notified the crime to be prosecuted. According to the Criminal Procedure Act c 1, s 14 (1), also the injured party of the matter in question also always has a reversionary right to bring a charge if the following circumstances apply: if the prosecutor decides not to prosecute in a specific matter, or if the prosecutor or the investigating authorities decide that the preliminary investigation will not be conducted or it is suspended or terminated.

A specialty in Finnish criminal process is the prosecutor's obligation to sue the injured party's claim for damages in connection with bringing charges.<sup>325</sup> According to the Criminal Procedure Act c 3, s 9, on a request by the injured party the injured party's claim can be dealt with in the same trial where the criminal matter is solved if this can be done without impeding the proceedings of the case and if the claim is not apparently unfounded. Claiming for damages within the same trial is not always possible, but for economical reasons it is preferable to do this. Claiming for damages by the prosecutor best serves in routine cases. However, in the most serious cases, such as sexual offence, the prosecutor normally does not do this, because the claims are often very complicated and require presentation of evidence by expert witnesses.<sup>326</sup> If the injured party's claim for damages will not be dealt alongside with the criminal matter, the injured party may bring a claim for damages later on in order to obtain compensation.

As mentioned above, most of the sex offences are subject to public prosecution. The remaining are complainant offences, but according to the Criminal Code c 20, s 11, in these cases also the prosecutor shall bring a charge without the notification of the injured party if a very important public interest requires the prosecution. In addition, concerning certain sexual offences the law still provides a special provision of waiving of measures. Waiving of measures means that if the injured party that has reached eighteen years of age regarding an offence referred to in c 20, s 1 of the Criminal Code on his or her own considered free will requests that charges are not brought, the prosecutor may, according to Criminal Code c 20, s 12, waive the bringing of charges, unless an important private or public interest requires that charges are brought.

---

<sup>325</sup> Criminal Procedure Act c 3, s 9.

<sup>326</sup> Hirvelä, Rikosprosessi lapsiin kohdistuvissa seksuaalirikoksissa, p. 146.

If certain circumstances occur, the prosecutor may prosecute a complainant offence even without the notification of bringing the charges by the injured party. According to the Criminal Procedure Act c 1, s 3 (2), if the custodian, guardian or other legal representative of a minor has directed an offence, for which the public prosecutor is not to bring a charge without a notification, at a minor or a person otherwise under trusteeship, the prosecutor may bring a charge. The provision is necessary so that the offender could not avoid the trial for the sole reason that only he or she is incapacitated to use the child's right of action and hence be the only person to notify the crime to be prosecuted. According to the Criminal Procedure Act, if an offence is directed at a person without full legal capacity (e.g. a minor) and the public prosecutor is not to bring a charge without a notification by the injured party (a complainant offence), the guardian or other legal representative of that person shall have a right to make the notification for bringing a charge. As regards an offence directed at the person of a minor, his or her custodian (the person responsible for care and custody) or other legal representative shall have the right to make the notification.<sup>327</sup>

There are some situations where children are allowed to present their individual complaint. A person without full legal capacity shall alone have the right to request that a charge is brought if an offence has been directed at a property which is under his or her sole administration or if it concerns a transaction which he or she has the eligibility to execute. According to the Criminal Procedure Act c 1, s 4 (2), a person without full legal capacity has the right also when an offence has been directed at his or her person and he or she is at least eighteen years of age and can obviously understand the significance of the matter. If a minor is at least fifteen years of age, he or she shall, according to the Criminal Procedure Act c 1, s

---

<sup>327</sup> Criminal Procedure Act c 1, s 4 (1).

4 (3) have a right parallel to the right of his or her custodian or other legal representative, to request that a charge is brought for an offence directed at his or her person.

The criminal case becomes pending when the application for a summons arrives at the registry of a district court or if the prosecutor summonses the defendant, when the summons is served on the defendant.<sup>328</sup> The prosecutor is to bring a charge by delivering a written application for a summons to the registry of a district court.<sup>329</sup> According to the Criminal Procedure Act c 5, s 1 (1) the court may order to the extent deemed necessary, that the prosecutor can bring a charge by self-summonsing the defendant.

The criteria for evidence to be accepted for examinations

There is no unambiguous determination on the quality of evidence accepted for examinations. Hence the accepted form of communication is not determined. In principle the evidence may be written as well as oral. However, it is provided in the Code of Judicial Procedure c 17, s 11 (1) that the following shall not be admitted as evidence in a court, unless otherwise provided: 1) A private written statement drawn up for the purpose of a pending or imminent trial, unless the court admits it for a special reason; and 2) An oral statement entered or otherwise stored in the record of a criminal investigation or another document.

According to the Code of Judicial Procedure c 17, s 8 a, evidence shall be admitted in the main hearing, unless it is to be admitted outside of a main hearing on the basis of some specified provisions provided either in the Code of Judicial Procedure or the Criminal Procedure Act.

In the cases where a child is to be heard in court some special provisions are applied. These provisions ensure that the best interest of a child is taken into consideration and that the child is not affected by the methods of examination. According to the Criminal Investigations Act s 39 (1), an examination report must be done in every preliminary hearing. The child's description can also be recorded in an audio or video recording. According to the Criminal Investigations Act s 39 a, the injured party and the witness examination shall be recorded on a video recording device or a comparable other video and audio recording if the examination report is intended to be used as evidence in legal proceedings and the injured party or the witness cannot be heard in trial in person without causing harm by courtesy of their young age or mental activity derangement.

---

<sup>328</sup> Criminal Procedure Act c 5, s 2.

<sup>329</sup> Criminal Procedure Act c 5, s 2.

It is provided in the Code of Judicial Procedure c 17, s 11 (2), that if the statement given in pre-trial investigation by a person who has not reached the age of fifteen years or a person who is mentally incapacitated has been recorded on a video recording device or on a comparable video and audio recording, the statement may nonetheless be admitted as evidence in court if the defendant is provided with an opportunity to present questions to the person being heard. C 17 s 21 of the Code of Judicial Procedure contains provisions on the hearing of such a person as a witness or for probative purposes. The defendant is not obliged to present the questions, and if he or she decides not to utilize the opportunity given, the recording can be used as evidence in proceedings.<sup>330</sup>

Due to the aforementioned we can reach a conclusion that as a rule the legislator has made a decision not to have children heard in the main hearing if possible. The provision of the Code of Judicial Procedure provides the circumstances that has to apply so that the hearing of a child can be replaced with a video recording recorded in a pre-trial hearing, whereas the mentioned provision in the Criminal Investigations Act provides the ways of executing the hearing and recording it.

According to the Criminal Investigations Act s 39 a, the age and the stage of development of the person to be heard shall be taken into consideration when choosing the method of hearing, the number of persons being involved in it and other significances of executing the hearing. As provided in the Statute on Criminal Investigations and Coercive Measures<sup>331</sup> s 11, the investigation focusing on a child should be executed, if possible, by police officers specialized in executing such task. According to the Criminal Investigations Act s 39 a, the officer in charge of the investigation may decide that someone outside the investigation authorities shall, under the supervision of the investigation authorities, execute the hearing and present the questions. Normally children under the age of 6 – 7 will be heard by a forensic psychologist, psychiatrist, pediatrician, or some other expert<sup>332</sup> and older by the investigation authorities, the police that is.<sup>333</sup> The aim is that the child will not be heard more than three times.<sup>334</sup>

---

<sup>330</sup> Hirvelä, Rikosprosessi lapsiin kohdistuvissa seksuaalirikoksissa, p. 197.

<sup>331</sup> Statute on Criminal Investigations and Coercive Measures (575/1988).

Executing a recorded pre-trial hearing in accordance with the aforementioned requirements is also in line with the child's best interests and makes it possible that the child will not be heard personally in court trial. There are no legislative barriers however, to do so.<sup>335</sup> In this arrangement the most significant aspect of protecting the child is that he or she does not have to deal with the criminal matter after the preliminary investigation has been executed. However, a child older than fifteen years of age cannot be heard in preliminary investigation, but will have to come before court to be heard.<sup>336</sup> At the moment this is considered as a clear flaw and thus there seems to be a general consensus that the situation should be changed in the near future.

What has been problematic for a long time is that contrary to the Criminal Investigations Act s 39 a, the defendant has not always been given an opportunity to present questions to the person being heard. In these cases the recording from the hearing cannot be used as evidence in the proceedings due to a procedural fault and hence in the worst case the sentence will not be given.

- viii. Normally the custodians (the persons responsible for care and custody) of a minor shall also act as their trustees and statutory representatives as provided in the Guardianship Services Act<sup>337</sup> c 2, s 4 (1). According to the Criminal Procedure Act c 1, s 4 (1), a custodian represents a minor also in the criminal cases related to the person of a minor unless otherwise provided. This means that the custodian or another legal representative exercises the rights of a minor and pleads for them, as provided in the Code of Judicial Procedure c 12, s 1. However, a minor who has attained fifteen years of age shall have an independent right to be heard in a matter concerning their person, parallel to that of the person responsible for their care and custody or their other legal representative. As mentioned

---

<sup>332</sup> Hirvelä, Rikosprosessi lapsiin kohdistuvissa seksuaalirikoksissa, p. 196 and 362, see also HE 52/2002, p. 47.

<sup>333</sup> Hirvelä, Rikosprosessi lapsiin kohdistuvissa seksuaalirikoksissa, p. 326.

<sup>334</sup> Taskinen, p. 76.

<sup>335</sup> HE 190/2002, p. 23.

<sup>336</sup> Provided e.g. in the Code of Judicial Procedure c 17, s 11 (2).

<sup>337</sup> Guardianship Services Act (442/1999).

above, the minor's parallel right of action, specifically the right to bring a charge, is noted in the Criminal Procedure Act, where in c 1, s 4 (3) it is provided that if a minor is at least fifteen years of age, he or she shall have a right parallel to that of the custodian or other legal representative to request that a charge is brought for an offence directed at their person.

If in a criminal case concerning the child's person there is a contradiction between the opinions and interests of a custodian and a child, the child can be appointed another person to plea for him or her (a guardian). As it is provided in c 2, s 10 (3) of Laki sosiaalihuollon asiakkaan asemasta ja oikeuksista, the Act of Position and Rights of a Social Welfare Client (812/2000), the guardianship authorities<sup>338</sup> have been given a right to act in such contradictory cases. According to the mentioned provision, if in a matter concerning the person of the child there is a reasonable doubt that the custodian cannot impartially guard the best interests of the child, the guardianship authorities shall file for a petition for the appointment of a guardian to a court<sup>339</sup> or notify the same to the guardianship authorities regardless of any duty of confidentiality<sup>340</sup>.

The Ministry of Social Affairs and Health has provided a guide book to guide the authorities with applying the provision in question. According to the guide book, a contradictory situation prevails when objectively assessed, there is a reason to assume, that the custodian cannot impartially supervise the best interests of the child.<sup>341</sup> The impartiality of a legal representative is endangered for example when the adverse party is the custodian himself or herself or their spouse or another person close to the family. There is a contradiction when the custodian or a person close to him or her is suspected of having maltreated or sexually abused the child.<sup>342</sup> The notification shall always be made if it turns out that the parents do not want to act in a matter or if the parents are blaming each other.<sup>343</sup> In a guide book provided by STAKES it is recommended to evaluate the need of a guardian in all cases of sexual abuse of a child that are suspected to have happened within his or her family.<sup>344</sup>

---

<sup>338</sup> In Finland maistraatit, the magistrates, practice the duties of the Guardianship Authorities.

<sup>339</sup> Referred to in the Guardianship Services Act c 8, s 72.

<sup>340</sup> Referred to in the Guardianship Services Act c 10, s 91.

<sup>341</sup> STM, (2001:11), Sosiaali- ja terveysministeriön oppaita 2001:11, Sosiaalihuollon asiakkaan asema ja oikeudet, Helsinki, 2001, p. 41.

<sup>342</sup> STM, (2001:11), p. 41.

<sup>343</sup> Hirvelä, Rikosprosessi lapsiin kohdistuvissa seksuaalirikoksissa, p. 332.

<sup>344</sup> Taskinen, p. 121.

The regulations concerning designation of a guardian are provided in the Child Welfare Act. According to the mentioned Act c 4, s 22, a guardian to deputize for a custodian in exercising the child's right of action in a child welfare case shall be designated if the following circumstances apply: 1) There is a reason to assume that the custodian is unable to supervise the child's interests in the case without prejudice; and 2) Designation of a guardian is necessary in order to investigate a case or otherwise to safeguard the interests of the child.

An application for designating a guardian may be submitted by a registry office functioning as guardianship authority as laid down in the Guardianship Services Act, or by a municipal body responsible for the social services, or by the custodian. The designation of a guardian can be made by a registry office functioning as the guardianship authority if the custodian and the municipal body responsible for the social services concur with the decision. The guardian shall otherwise be designated by a court of law. According to the Child Welfare Act c 4, s 22, the designation of a guardian is subject to the provisions concerning designation of a guardian's deputy laid down in the Guardianship Services Act or in another act.

The provisions on designation of a guardian are going to clear along with a new Criminal Investigations Act.<sup>345</sup> According to the new Act c 4 s 8, the court shall order a guardian for a party less than eighteen years of age for the investigation if there are reasonable grounds to believe that the custodial parent or other legal representative cannot impartially guard the best interests of the child in the case, and if the designation of a guardian is not clearly unnecessary. The officer in charge shall, where needed, submit the application for designating a guardian to the court. The application can also be submitted by the prosecutor, the guardianship authorities adverted to in the Guardianship Services Act (magistrate) or the Social Authorities referred to in Sosiaalihuoltolaki, the Social Welfare Act (710/1982) s 6 (1). According to the new Criminal Investigations Act, the court's designation of a guardian will be in effect until the end of the criminal proceedings for which preliminary investigation the designation was issued.<sup>346</sup>

The injured party has a right to have a counsel in sex offence cases. The right does not depend on the party's financial situation, but every injured party in specific cases has a right to get a counsel that is paid by the government. According to the Criminal Procedure Act c 2, s 1 a, a court may appoint a counsel for the injured party for the investigation and, where the injured party has a claim in a case prosecuted by the prosecutor, for the trial in a case relating to a sexual offence referred to in c 20 of the Criminal Code. The right is conditional, and presupposes that it is not deemed unnecessary for a special reason. Under conditions referred to in c 2, s 1 a of the Criminal Procedure Act, an adequately qualified support person may be appointed for the injured party if it is deemed that he or she needs assistance in the investigation or in the trial in an offence referred to in c 20 of the Criminal Code. According to the Criminal Procedure Act, c 2, s 3, the aforementioned applies when the injured party does not make a claim in the trial but is being heard in person in order to resolve the case.

---

<sup>345</sup> The Criminal Investigations Act (449/1987) was overruled by the new Criminal Investigations Act (805/2011). The new Act will come into effect in January 2014.

<sup>346</sup> Criminal Investigation Act (805/2011) c 4, s 8.

Before the amendment 243/2006 to the Criminal Procedure Act, attendants to help and support the complainant, counsels and support persons that is, were alternative, and the injured party could not have been appointed a support person if he or she was appointed a counsel for the trial.<sup>347</sup> The alternative nature of these different kinds of attendants was considered a clear deficiency, and thus got removed with the amendment in 2006. In addition to the aforementioned, the injured party's right to a support person is assured also in the Code of Judicial Procedure. According to the Code of Judicial Procedure c 17, s 21 (1), a person who has not reached the age of fifteen can be heard as a witness or for probative purposes if the court deems this appropriate and if hearing this person personally is of central significance to the clarification of the matter; and if hearing the person would probably not cause the said person suffering or other harm that can injure him or her or his or her development. The court shall, when necessary, appoint a support person for the person to be heard to whom the provisions in c 2 of the Criminal Procedure Act are applied to.<sup>348</sup> However, due to the amendments in the Criminal Procedure Act, this specific provision no longer brings any additional value to assisting a child during the procedure.

The task of the counsel is to take care of the judicial interests of the injured party. According to the Criminal Procedure Act, c 2, s 7, a counsel shall as soon as possible confer with the injured party and undertake the measures necessary for upholding the rights of the client - also on appeal in a higher court if needed. The support person is to provide personal support to the injured party in the investigation and in the trial and assist him or her in the matters arising from the resolution of the case, as it is provided in the Criminal Procedure Act, c 2, s 9. In sex offence cases the victim, a child especially, often needs mental support regardless of the requirements set out in the case. A support person is considered essential because the counsel cannot be expected to carry out to provide the needed mental support alongside taking care of the more concrete duties.<sup>349</sup>

---

<sup>347</sup> Hirvelä, Rikosprosessi lapsiin kohdistuvissa seksuaalirikoksissa, p. 335.

<sup>348</sup> Code of Judicial Procedure, c 17, s 21 (2).

According to the Criminal Procedure Act, c 2, s 1 a, the injured party's right to a counsel is dependent on the complainant's own claim in the case. There have been conflicting opinions in the Finnish forensic literature on whether the injured party is ineligible for a counsel if he or she only parallels to the prosecutor's prosecution.<sup>350</sup> Some authors state that a lack of an independent claim excludes the right to a counsel<sup>351</sup> whereas some think the phrasing of the provisions do not create barriers for appointing a counsel in such case<sup>352</sup>. The injured parties may want to self-monitor their own interests e.g. in hearing of the witnesses or to reserve the right to submit a claim for damages later on in the procedure.

Appointing of a counsel or a support person has been made as easy as possible. In principle, the authorities unprompted inform the injured party about the right to an attendant. According to the Investigations Act s 29 (3), the injured party must be informed prior to the hearing if he or she is ineligible for a counsel or a support person or for both. The authorities may also, according to the Investigation Act s 10 (2), act on their own initiative in appointing an attendant. The prosecutor or the officer in charge of the investigation can put out a motivation to a court of law for appointing an attendant. Also the court can appoint an attendant unprompted in the beginning of the court proceedings, although this is normally not necessary, for the injured party's need of an attendant has been met already earlier in the process.

Given the aforementioned, a child may at least in principle have several persons to support and assist him or her in the criminal procedure: own parent as a custodian; a guardian to

---

<sup>349</sup> Hirvelä, Rikosprosessi lapsiin kohdistuvissa seksuaalirikoksissa, p. 335.

<sup>350</sup> Hirvelä, Rikosprosessi lapsiin kohdistuvissa seksuaalirikoksissa, p. 336.

<sup>351</sup> J. Virolainen, Rikosprosessioikeus I, Pandecta Oy, Rovaniemi 1998, p. 206; D. Frände, Finsk straffprocessrätt I, Forum Iuris, Helsinki 1999, p. 307.

<sup>352</sup> Hirvelä, Rikosprosessi lapsiin kohdistuvissa seksuaalirikoksissa, p. 336.

exercise the child's right of action if the opinions and interests of a child and a parent are in collision; a support person to provide mental support and a counsel to take care of the child's judicial interests. Generally the roles combine and the same person acts as a guardian and as a counsel. In most of the cases the child's best interests are also the parent's best interests, hence there is no need for a guardian, and so a custodian acts as a mental supporter and pleads for the child.

Minors and publicity of a trial

When analyzing a trial there are several points regarding publicity that ought to be noticed. First of all there is the publicity of the basic information of the case e.g. the specified crime, the role of a prosecutor and the name of the parties. The basic information of a case is normally public, and some of the information cannot even be ordered to be kept secret. However, a court may order the identity of the injured party in a case prosecuted by a prosecutor to be kept secret. According to the Act on Publicity of Court Proceedings in General Courts c 2 s 6, (1) (1), rejecting the publicity of the identity of the injured party in a criminal case requires that the case concerns a particularly sensitive aspect of the private life of a party (as the case often is in sex crimes). According to a recently published research on publicity in court proceedings in general courts by Rebecca Kadoch, 56 % of all the crimes before the District Courts in which the identity of the injured party was kept secret were sex crimes where the victim was a child or a young adult under eighteen years of age.<sup>353</sup>

Secondly comes up the question about the publicity of the trial documents. The trial documents become public as provided in c 3, s 8 of the Act on Publicity of Court Proceedings in General Courts. A trial document shall be kept secret to the extent that it contains sensitive information regarding matters relating to the private life, health, disability or social welfare of a person.<sup>354</sup> The court may, on the request of a party or also for a special reason, decide that a trial document shall be kept secret to the extent necessary if it contains <sup>353</sup> R. Kadoch, Oikeudenkäynnin julkisuus yleisissä tuomioistuimissa, Oikeuspoliittisen tutkimuslaitoksen tutkimustiedonantoja 112, Hakapaino Oy, Helsinki 2012, p. 35. The study was executed by collecting information of cases closed in Finnish district courts from 1 November 2009 to 30 April 2010. The study was executed by National Research Institute of Legal Policy, which is an institute that produces independent research on crime, and justice, which supports planning and decision-making in criminal and legal policy. The academic framework is multidisciplinary, combining particularly the disciplines of law and social science.

---

<sup>354</sup> Act on Publicity of Court Proceedings in General Courts, c 3, s 9, subs 1 (2).

information which is to be kept secret on the basis of the provisions of another Act and revealing this information would probably cause significant detriment or harm to the interests that said secrecy obligation provisions are to protect.<sup>355</sup>

Oral proceedings in a trial are in principle public unless the court orders on the basis of c 4, s 15 of the Act on Publicity of Court Proceedings in General Courts that the oral proceedings shall be held without the presence of the public.<sup>356</sup> S 15 includes a list of 7 items and if any of them applies, the court may, on the request of a party of the case or also for a special reason, decide that oral proceedings shall be held in full or to the necessary extent without the presence of the public. According to the item 6, the trial might be imposed to be held closed, if a person below the age of fifteen years or a person whose legal capacity is limited is heard in the case. As mentioned earlier in this study report, in most of the cases the child is not heard anymore in the trial, but the decision about a closed proceedings can also be made based on the item 2, if sensitive information regarding matters relating to the private life, health, disability or social welfare of a person is presented in the case. The information to be revealed during the hearing in a sex crime usually is sensitive. Therefore, according to the study, slightly over 50 % of all the crimes before the District Courts whose oral proceedings were not public, were sex crimes where the victim had not reached the age of eighteen.<sup>357</sup>

Finally there is the question about the publicity of the court's ruling. According to the Act on Publicity of Court Proceedings in General Courts, c 5, s 22 (1), this information is public. However, the court may order the decision to be kept secret to the necessary extent if the ruling contains information which is to be kept secret in accordance with s 9 (secrecy of a trial document); information which has been ordered to be kept secret in accordance with s 10 (an order regarding secrecy); or secrecy of information that was protected by the holding of oral proceedings without the presence of the public.<sup>358</sup> The conclusions of the decision and the legal provisions applied are always public, even in such cases mentioned above, where the publicity of the decision has been limited. According to the Act on Publicity of Court Proceedings in General Courts, c 5, s 24 (2), the court may, however, order the

---

<sup>355</sup> Act on Publicity of Court Proceedings in General Courts c 3, s 10.

<sup>356</sup> Act on Publicity of Court Proceedings in General Courts, c 4, s 14.

<sup>357</sup> Kadoch, p. 104.

<sup>358</sup> Act on Publicity of Court Proceedings in General Courts, c 5, s 22 (1).

identity of the injured party in a criminal case, if said case concerns a particularly sensitive aspect of the victim's private life, to be kept secret unless the party in question requests otherwise.

Nonetheless, a public caption on the matter referred to in the Act on Publicity of Court Proceedings in General Courts c 5, s 25 shall be given at all times, if the matter is of social importance, or it has generated considerable interest in public also in the cases in which the decree itself is ordered to be kept secret. The caption includes an outline of the matter and of the justification. Nowadays, however, the court's decrees as a whole tend to be written in a way that the conclusions and the justification can become public without disclosing the identity of the injured party.

There are no specific provisions concerning the presence of the media in a trial, but the Act on Publicity of Court Proceedings in General Courts provides the rules for recording of the oral proceedings. Naturally recording of a trial is possible only if the trial in question is public, hence recording will not come in question if the trial is ordered to be kept secret. In public proceedings, someone other than the court may take a photograph, tape record or in comparable manner record and transfer video and audio signals outside the court room by technical means only with the permission of the chairperson and in accordance with their instructions as it is provided in the Act on Publicity of Court Proceedings in General Courts c 4, s 21 (1). However, according to c 4, s 21 (2) of the Act on the Publicity of Court Proceedings in General Courts, a permission for recording before the beginning of consideration of the case or when the decision of the court is pronounced shall not be granted if there is a cogent reason for dismissing it. In law drafting work, the age of the parties has been given as an example of a cogent reason.<sup>359</sup>

All the aforementioned provisions are to protect victims to whom the publicity of the proceedings or the trial can cause significant detriment or harm. These groups are either the victims of unusually unpleasant and humiliating crimes (e.g. sex crimes), or children. As expressed above, the statistics show that as for the secrecy, the objectives of the law have been achieved. The study by Rebecca Kadoch shows that regardless of the area of publicity, the majority of all the cases where the publicity had been limited were sex offences<sup>360</sup> where the victim was under eighteen years of age.

---

<sup>359</sup> HE 13/2006, p. 62.

4 COMPLEMENTARY MEASURES

Preventive Measures

- vii. Professionals such as personnel of public health, education, voluntary work and people working in criminal procedure must be educated to confront sexually abused children. Information and material should be spread effectively to professionals. There are guides and handbooks concerning sexual exploitation and abuse for diverse educational usage.<sup>361</sup>

In 2007, Ministry of Social Affairs and Health compiled a plan of action for years 2007-2011 to promote sexual and reproduction health. The aim of the plan of action is to improve preparedness of schools', public service of social welfare's and public health's personnel to identify diagnostics of children who have been victims of sexual violence. The plan of action requires that people working in field of social welfare and health care, teaching and education should be informed of sexual abuse as a part of their compulsory education.<sup>362</sup>

Personnel of public health are educated in many ways. In 2001, doctors received instructions on how to treat and examine sexually abused children. These instructions were published in a journal called Duodecim<sup>363</sup>. In 2006, the treatment recommendation was updated by a working group set by the Suomalainen Lääkäriseura Duodecim, Finnish Medical Society Duodecim and Suomen Lastenpsykiatriyhdistys, Finnish Society for Child and Adolescent Psychiatry. The aim of treatment recommendation is to improve and develop good practise in public health while investigating a suspicion of child's sexual abuse. The treatment recommendation is directed to professionals in public health but it also informs child welfare inspectors, police and judicial officers.<sup>364</sup>

---

<sup>360</sup> Kadoch, p. 28 – 29.

<sup>361</sup> HE 282/2010 p. 22.

<sup>362</sup> HE 282/2010 p. 23.

<sup>363</sup> Duodecim is a scientific society with almost 90% of Finnish doctors and medical students as members. Duodecim Medical Publications Ltd. carries out the Society's mission to publish medical information. Homepage of The Finnish Medical Society Duodecim. Viewed on 13 September 2012, <<http://www.duodecim.fi/web/english/home>>.

<sup>364</sup> HE 282/2010 p. 22.

In 2003, a working group set by Ministry of Social Affairs and Health finished a recommendation on how to detect children's assault and sexual abuse. Centre for Research and Development of Welfare and Health called STAKES<sup>365</sup> published the recommendations in a comprehensive guide. The specification describes how to make a child welfare notification, how to report an offence, how to examine acute situations in hospital emergency room, how to make a clearance requested by the police in hospitals and family clinics, how to perform a child's interview, how to rule a guardian to a child and how to petition a restraining order. There are also other guides published by STAKES and Västoliitto, The Family Federation<sup>366</sup>. Purpose of these guides is to offer tools for professional to confront sexually mistreated children. In 2004 and 2005, STAKES organised two long trainings to therapists and nursing personnel. In Finland, the obligations of continuing training are concerned in Laki terveydenhuollon ammattihenkilöistä, Act on Health Care Professionals (559/1994) and Social Welfare Act (710/1982).<sup>367</sup>

In school legislation, monitors of education have an obligation to devise a plan in pursuance of a syllabus. It must include a plan to protect students from violence, bullying and harassment. The plan must be implemented and its execution must be monitored. Measures and distributions to prevent crisis and problem situations must be described as a part of syllabus. The sexual harassment retains sexual exploitation and sexual abuse. The employer and the personnel itself are primary responsible for educating personnel.<sup>368</sup>

NGOs like Raiskauskriisikeskus Tukinainen, Rape crisis centre Tukinainen<sup>369</sup> educates and guides professionals who confront people that have experienced sexual violence.<sup>370</sup> The effects of sexual violence to individuals and guidance on judicial and psychological matters are discussed in Tukinainen's education. Rape crisis centre Tukinainen organizes also special

---

<sup>365</sup> STAKES (National Research and Development Centre for Welfare and Health) was an expert agency whose key functions were research, development and statistics. Since 2009 STAKES has been a part of the National Institute for Health and Welfare.

<sup>366</sup> The Family Federation is a social and health sector organization focusing on families. The Federation provides services, acts as an advocate and carries out research. Homepage of the Family Federation, viewed on 28 September 2012, <http://www.vaestoliitto.fi/in\_english/>.

<sup>367</sup> HE 282/2010 p. 22-23.

<sup>368</sup> HE 282/2010 p. 23.

<sup>369</sup> Rape crisis centre Tukinainen is for them, who have been sexually assaulted and also a national resource centre. Homepage of the Rape Crisis Centre Tukinainen. Viewed on 17 September 2012, <http://174.132.188.98/~tnainen/in\_english>.

<sup>370</sup> HE 282/2010 p. 23.

education to certain occupational groups such as teachers, public health nurses and personnel of public health. In addition to education, Tukinainen has a project that educates and counsels how to confront decorously and appreciatively customers who have experienced sexual violence.<sup>371</sup> Project is followed through with Police College of Finland and Finland's Slot Machine Association, called RAY<sup>372</sup> funds it.<sup>373</sup>

The Lanzarote convention article 36(1) obliges that education must be organised also to people involved in criminal procedure. In 2010, Ministry of Justice organised education in association with Rape crisis centre Tukinainen. The subject of the education was how to confront a victim of sexual abuse. It was organised for trial counsels and judges of general courts. Also in 2010, education about legal psychology and hearing of a child in court was organised.<sup>374</sup> Education and the updating of education should be organised regularly.<sup>375</sup>

The Lanzarote convention article 34(1) requires that personnel, units and facilities responsible for investigation are specialised and educated in prevention of children's sexual exploitation and abuse. One possible realisation of the Lanzarote convention article 34(1) in Finland is the so-called Lastentalo -malli, Child house model. It gathers all the service from different sectors in one place.<sup>376</sup> All the detection happens in one place and one educated professional makes the interview. The most important is the co-operation between different authorities.<sup>377</sup>

Decree on Preliminary Investigation and Coercive Measures (575/1988) legislates children's treatment in preliminary investigation. According to section 11 of the decree, investigation measures must be given to a policeman specialised in this assignment. The authority of preliminary investigation must consult a doctor or other expert if the investigation measures can be made. The police have educated its personnel to interview children and the hearing of children is centralised on certain policemen. Police College of Finland organises every

---

<sup>371</sup> HE 282/2010 p. 24.

<sup>372</sup> RAY grant funding is collected from slot machine and casino gaming operations, and it is channelled to health and social welfare organisations. Homepage of RAY. Viewed on 17 September 2012, <<https://www.ray.fi/en/beneficiaries/results/facts>>.

<sup>373</sup> HE 282/2010 p. 24.

<sup>374</sup> HE 282/2010 p. 94.

<sup>375</sup> HE 282/2010 p. 95.

<sup>376</sup> HE 282/2010 p. 89-90.

<sup>377</sup> HE 282/2010 p. 91, see more about the child house model Sosiaali- ja terveystieteiden ministeriön selvityksiä 2009:30 p. 48.

year education concerning preliminary investigation. Keskusrikospoliisi, National Bureau of Investigation has a unit specialised on child pornography crimes.<sup>378</sup> There are also key prosecutors that specialise on certain types of crimes e.g. sex offences. This group of prosecutors is educated regularly.<sup>379</sup>

In 2006 Päivi Hirvelä<sup>380</sup> published doctoral thesis called Rikosprosessi lapsiin kohdistuvissa seksuaalirikoksissa, Criminal procedure in sex offences against children. It is made especially for prosecutors, attorneys, judges, policemen and any professionals that work with sexually mistreated children.<sup>381</sup>

There are also some important quarters of organizational activities that educate voluntary workers. Suomen liikunta ja urheilu, Finnish sports federation, later SLU serves as an umbrella organisation for all of its member organisations. In 2004, SLU developed Reilun pelin periaatteet, Principles of fair play. These principles are compiled to protect children from sexual exploitation and abuse and these principles count among for example non-violence, prevention of sexual harassment and respect for other people. In 2002, SLU has compiled a guide called Lupa välittää- lupa puuttua. Sukupuolinen ja seksuaalinen häirintä liikunnassa ja urheilussa, Permit to care, permit to step in. Sexual harassment in physical education and sports. The guide contains information about sexual harassment and abuse and it also contains codes of conduct to prevent and solve sexual harassment and abuse. In education of sport instructors and coaches SLU strives to increase the awareness of the prevention of children's sexual abuse.<sup>382</sup>

The Lanzarote convention article 5(3) demands that each party shall take the necessary legislative or other measures, in conformity with its internal law, to ensure that the conditions to accede to those professions whose exercise implies regular contacts with children ensure that the candidates to these professions have not been convicted of acts of sexual exploitation or sexual abuse of children. The chapter concerns only professional activity not voluntary workers.<sup>383</sup> In Finland, there is Laki lasten kanssa työskentelevien

---

<sup>378</sup> HE 282/2010 p. 90.

<sup>379</sup> HE 282/2010 p. 91.

<sup>380</sup> Päivi Hirvelä is a Finnish Doctor of Jurisprudence.

<sup>381</sup> HE 282/2010 p. 23.

<sup>382</sup> HE 282/2010 p. 23.

<sup>383</sup> HE 282/2010 p. 24.

rikostaustan selvittämisestä, Act on Checking the Criminal Background of Persons Working with Children (504/2002). According to section 2 of the Act, it applies to work performed in employment and civil service relationships which involves, on a permanent basis and to a material degree and in the guardian's absence, raising, teaching or caring for or looking after a minor or other work performed in personal contact with a minor. According to section 3 of the Act, an employer must ask a person to produce an extract from the criminal record when the person is employed or appointed for the first time to such a position or when such work is assigned to that person for the first time. According to section 10 of the Act, anyone who wilfully or through gross negligence fails in his duty to obtain a person's criminal record shall be sentenced to pay a fine, unless more severe punishment is prescribed elsewhere in the law.

In Finland, neither the Act on Checking the Criminal Background of Persons Working with Children (504/2002) nor other legislation stipulate a prohibition to work with children if a person has been convicted of a sexual crime. However, procedure to check the criminal background strives to prevent sex offenders to work with children. The employers consider the suitability of each job applicant.<sup>384</sup> A criminal record extract costs 13.40 euros. It is free for students who need it for practical training period.<sup>385</sup>

In 2009, a member of the Finnish Parliament Antti Kaikkonen (the Centre Party) proposed kirjallinen kysymys, an interrogatory related to demanding criminal record extract from voluntary workers working with children. Kaikkonen said that demanding a criminal record would protect children and advance supervisions could pre-empt paedophilia cases. The Minister of Culture and Sport, Stefan Wallin (Swedish People's Party), answered that there are over half a million people in club activities and it is possible that people convicted of sex offences take part of voluntary work. Clubs and organisations are always responsible for supervision. Strict monitoring is foreign to Finnish voluntary work and it could lead to reduction of voluntary workers. In addition, demanding of criminal records could lead to a significant increase in the number of criminal record extracts being asked, and could therefore be hard to realise in practice. There could also arise some judicial issues. Wallin said that the most important thing is to develop preventive measures and operate openly.<sup>386</sup> It is possible that Finland will make some minor changes to legislation related to Act on Checking the Criminal Background of Persons Working with Children.<sup>387</sup>

---

<sup>384</sup> HE 282/2010 p. 25.

<sup>385</sup> The Legal Register Centre public portal. Viewed on 3 September 2012, <www.oikeus.fi/oikeusrekisterikeskus>.

- viii. The objectives of the Lanzarote convention article 6 are already secured in children's and the youth's education. National Board of Education has compiled a syllabus for every educational level. Pre-emptive education of sexual exploitation and abuse is part of sexual education, which in turn is part of health education.<sup>388</sup> In the Lanzarote convention article 6, school is not mentioned as specific provider of information. Although some children are in home schooling information can be provided also in other ways. Information about sexual exploitation and sexual abuse is best to affiliate with sexual education in common. Information must be given to children appropriate to their age and level of development. The information given to children should not diminish their trust to adults. The responsibility of giving information belongs primary to parents. However, in some situations when parents are part of sexual abuse or due to cultural differences open conversation is impossible. Sometimes children could be more responsive when a teacher, a doctor or a psychologist presents the information.<sup>389</sup>

Sexual education is wide-ranging and it should increase awareness and knowledge. Publication called WHO:n Seksuaalikasvatuksen standardit Euroopassa, Standards for Sexuality Education in Europe - A framework for policy makers, educational and health authorities and specialists serves as a guideline to sexual education in Finland. There are also other guides and material to educate children.<sup>390</sup> Ministry of Social Affairs and Health has published a guide for student health care. It is the first publication that gives directions nationwide and it includes central aims of student health care.<sup>391</sup> There are also other guides and instructions

---

<sup>386</sup> KK 1111/2009.

<sup>387</sup> See more on question Academic Framework- Questionnaire, International obligations, v.

<sup>388</sup> HE 282/2010 p. 27.

<sup>389</sup> HE 282/2010 p. 26.

<sup>390</sup> National Institute for Health and Welfare public portal. Viewed on 18 September 2012, <http://www.thl.fi/fi\_FI/web/fi/aiheet/tietopaketti/amis/seksuaaliterveys/seksuaalikasvatus>.

<sup>391</sup> Ministry of Social Affairs and Health public portal. Viewed on 18 September 2012, <http://www.stm.fi/julkaisut/nayta/-/\_julkaisu/1058703>.

given to school public health nurses and other professionals. These guides give tools to confront young people.<sup>392</sup>

In 2005 STAKES<sup>393</sup> published a guide called Turvataitoja lapsille, Protection skills for children. The guide can be used to educate children in secondary school and upper secondary school and it has instructions how to recognize and avoid threatening situations. Children should talk to a safe adult if they are worried. The aim of the guide is to encourage children to think themselves and to learn from their experiences.<sup>394</sup>

Viestintä- ja mediataito, Communicative and media skills is a syllabus for primary, secondary and upper secondary school. The subject gives young people tools to react critically to media and the central point is to teach students to look after their privacy, security and data protection while using the media. Ministry of Transport and Communications established Lasten ja nuorten mediafoorumi, Media forum for children and young people. Its aim is to decrease harmful contents of Internet and media, and also to decrease risks and harm that are caused to children.<sup>395</sup>

NGOs have also an important role in media education. For example Mannerheimin lastensuojeluliitto, the Mannerheim League for Child Welfare<sup>396</sup> has produced plenty of material for children's, and for parents to use in connection with upbringing. The organisation maintains an online service called Nuorten netti, Internet for young. Also Pelastakaa lapset, Safe the children Finland has published material to improve children's media skills and the safe use of communication and information technology.<sup>397</sup> Ihmisoikeudet.net<sup>398</sup> has published a campaign called Mun rajat!, My limits!. The campaign encourages teachers and children to

<sup>392</sup> National Institute for Health and Welfare public portal. Viewed on 18 September 2012, <http://www.thl.fi/fi\_FI/web/fi/aiheet/tietopaketti/amis/seksuaaliterveys/opiskeluterveydenhuolto>.

<sup>393</sup> STAKES (National Research and Development Centre for Welfare and Health) was an expert agency whose key functions were research, development and statistics. Since 2009 STAKES has been a part of the National Institute for Health and Welfare.

<sup>394</sup> HE 282/2010 p. 27.

<sup>395</sup> HE 282/2010 p. 27.

<sup>396</sup> The Mannerheim League for Child Welfare is the largest child welfare organization in Finland. It promotes the wellbeing of children and of families with children, increases respect for childhood and seeks to make it more visible, and sees that children's views are taken into account in public decision-making. Homepage of the Mannerheim League for Child Welfare. Viewed on 17 September 2012, <<http://www.mll.fi/en/>>.

<sup>397</sup> HE 282/2010 p. 27-28.

<sup>398</sup> Ihmisoikeudet.net is a website that is common project of Finnish section of Amnesty international, Finnish League for Human Rights, UN Association of Finland and OneWorld network. Homepage of Ihmisoikeudet.net. Viewed on 17 September 2012, <<http://www.ihmisoikeudet.net/>>.

create a safe environment together, and the message of the campaign is that sexual self-determination belongs to everyone as a human right.<sup>399</sup>

Ministry of Justice has set a working group to prepare a guide called Lapsi rikoksen uhrina, Child as a victim of a crime. It is directed to parents whose children have experienced sexual abuse. The aim is to provide information of central points of criminal procedure and improve the position of children. The guide will be published online in Spring 2013.<sup>400</sup>

- ix. In Finland, there are no specific intervention-programmes to prevent children's sexual abuse. People who fear that they might commit a sexual crime can seek help from a mental health clinic if the problem can be considered as mental. Special plans of action and individual therapy can be seen to be effective to prevent sex offences. The problem of these programmes is that they are usually realised in form of groups. Finland is a sparsely inhabited country so the programmes are hard to execute in real life. There are not so many therapists educated to prevent sex offences, and sometimes, if a person is afraid that he or she will commit a sex offence it can be difficult to get public mental health service.<sup>401</sup>

Nevertheless, there is an intervention programme that is organised to sex offenders convicted to unconditional imprisonment. STOP- programme (Sex Offender Treatment Programme) decreases recidivism of sex offences. Working in STOP-programme takes place in groups of 7 to 8 people. The main content of the programme is to become aware of scheme of things and operations model of sex offences. Prisoners also become aware of harm caused to victims and they practise skills of non-criminal life. Prisoners take part in groups sessions 3 to 5 times a week and they have in total 180 hours of group sessions. STOP-programme takes eight months and it is organised in Riihimäki prison. Convicts who apply to STOP programme must have over 8 months of imprisonment left so they can follow the programme through.<sup>402</sup> Within the limits of legislation, it is possible to organise programmes like STOP-programme outside prison and also before a person is convicted of

---

<sup>399</sup> Homepage of Ihmisoikeudet.net. Viewed on 18 September 2012, <<http://www.ihmisoikeudet.net/index.php?page=mista-on-kysymys>>

<sup>400</sup> Ministry of Justice public portal. Viewed on 18 September 2012, <<http://www.om.fi/Etusivu/Valmisteilla/Kehittamishankkeita/1330603625912>>.

<sup>401</sup> HE 282/2010 p. 28.

<sup>402</sup> The Criminal Sanctions Agency public portal. Viewed on 1 September 2012, <www.rikosseuraamus.fi/6349.htm>.

a sex offence. The main objective is to alleviate anxiety and to prevent criminal conduct. Medical attention to distress and psychosocial care is possible if the person is willing.<sup>403</sup>

The biggest single service provider in Finland, for programmes mentioned in the Lanzarote convention article 7, is Sexpo- foundation<sup>404</sup>. Sexpo organises a help line service, an Internet service and single therapy sessions for people who may commit a sex offence. These services are free of charge. Sexpo organises also short-term and long-term therapy and these services are subject to charge.<sup>405</sup> There are a few sexual therapists that work in Sexpo- foundation. All the therapists work in metropolitan area. Therefore the possibilities to seek treatment for people living in other parts of Finland are inadequate. Service is subject to a charge and that also limits possibilities to seek treatment.<sup>406</sup>

People who have taken part in STOP-programme in prison often continue therapy sessions in Sexpo- foundation. The problem is that people who seek treatment are often not that wealthy. Sexpo co-operates with Kriminaalihuollon tukisäätiö<sup>407</sup>, later Krits and together they strive to apply financial aid to offer therapy treatment to people who have been convicted to a short, suspended sentence or to people who fear they may commit a sex offence. So far Sexpo-foundation and Kriminaalihuollon tukisäätiö haven't got financial aid from Finland's Slot Machine Association RAY or other founders. In Sweden, there is an operations model working online called "www.preventell.se". Preventell.se is for those who feel they have lost control of their sexual behaviour, who are perhaps worried about their thoughts and actions, or who are afraid they might hurt themselves or someone else. Sexpo- foundation strives to offer similar sort of help line and treatment to people who fear they might commit a sex offence.<sup>408</sup>

---

<sup>403</sup> HE 282/2010 p. 28.

<sup>404</sup> Sexpo Foundation has been working to promote sexual wellbeing in Finland since 1969. Its functions include varied services such as counselling, therapy, consultation and education in matters of sexuality and relationships. Homepage of Sexpo Foundation. Viewed on 18 September 2012, <<http://www.sexpo.fi/sexpo-in-english/>>.

<sup>405</sup> Phone interview with the head of training division and a psychotherapist of Sexpo- foundation Jussi Nissinen on 9 October 2012.

<sup>406</sup> HE 282/2010 p. 28.

<sup>407</sup> Kriminaalihuollon tukisäätiö (NGO) is a non-profit after-care foundation for sentenced offenders and their families. The purpose of Krits is to improve the deprived status and living conditions of released prisoners and clients of community sanctions and their families in the society.

<sup>408</sup> Phone interview with the head of training division and a psychotherapist of Sexpo- foundation Jussi Nissinen on 9 October 2012.

“Probationary liberty under supervision” is enacted in Criminal Code c 2c s 8. According to the Government Bill 140/2012, sex offender’s commitment to medication would be a condition to probationary liberty under supervision. Medication is expected to prevent recidivism of sex offences.<sup>409</sup> Medication would be started in prison. Sex offender would be obligated to take part of the medication also in conditional release, after probationary liberty under supervision.<sup>410</sup> Sex offender must give a written consent to medication and a doctor must explain all the effects of the medication.<sup>411</sup> At the most 10 sex offenders would start the medication every year. Total expenses of medication and psychological treatment would be under 20 000 euros per one person per annum.<sup>412</sup>

According to Helsingin Sanomat<sup>413</sup>, Åbo Akademi University’s<sup>414</sup> court of inquiry aims to start a new sort of treatment to paedophiles. The treatment provides preventative therapy to men who belong to the risk group. The model for the treatment is from Germany and there the results have been encouraging.<sup>415</sup> The treatment would work in same cognitive-behaviouristic structure as STOP- programme and it would strive patients to identify their impulses and risk-situations. Treatment also contains a so-called good lives-model<sup>416</sup> where patients search for and focus on positive things in their lives. Treatment would also include sexological treatment, relationship behavioural models and other scheme of things. Also medication is possible if a person is willing. In beginning, there will be a group of 15 men. In the future, the aim is to organise treatment also for women and young people.<sup>417</sup> The therapy takes a year and it works on one's own initiative. Preventative measures would easily pay off

---

<sup>409</sup> HE 140/2012 p. 4.

<sup>410</sup> HE 140/2012 p. 24.

<sup>411</sup> HE 140/2012 p. 48.

<sup>412</sup> HE 140/2012 p. 18, see more about probationary liberty under supervision and medication OM, Työryhmämietintö, 2009:1. Seksuaalirikollisten hoito, Oikeusministeriö, 2009.

<sup>413</sup> Finnish newspaper.

<sup>414</sup> Åbo Akademi University is a Finnish University, which does research in all of its twelve departments.

Homepage of Åbo Akademi. Viewed on 17 September 2012, <<http://www.abo.fi/forskning/en>>.

<sup>415</sup> STT ‘Pedofiileille ehkä ennalta ehkäisevää hoitoa’ in homepage of Finland’s biggest newspaper, Helsingin Sanomat. Viewed on 24 August 2012.

<http://www.hs.fi/kotimaa/Pedofiileille+ehka%C3%A4+ennalta+ehka%C3%A4isev%C3%A4%C3%A4+hoitoa/a1305595140411>.

<sup>416</sup> See more www.goodlivesmodel.com.

<sup>417</sup> Phone interview with special researcher of Åbo Akademi Katarina Alanko on 9 October 2012.

because annual costs of prisoners and victims are high. Ministry of Justice could fund a part of the project and treatment could start in spring 2013 with psychological testing.<sup>418</sup>

Protective Measures and Assistance to Victims

- x. The Lanzarote convention article 11 is in most part on top of the Lanzarote convention article 14. Protective measures and assistance to victims are reviewed in the answer to question vi.<sup>419</sup>
- xi. In Finland, there are many help lines for victims and their family who have to take up with sexual exploitation and abuse. NGOs like the Mannerheim League of Child Welfare has organised help line services for children and young people since 1980. Help line is open for calls from Monday to Friday from 2 pm to 8 pm and on Saturday and Sunday from 5 pm to 8 pm. Calling is free of charge. Voluntary duty officers are educated and calls are confidential. MLL provides also Internet service where young people can write questions and duty officers answer them within two weeks. MLL organises help line and Internet services also for adults. Parents can ask questions on parenthood and children's upbringing. These calls and questions are anonymous and confidential.<sup>420</sup>

Victim support Finland is a national service that offers support to victims of a crime, their family and witnesses of a crime. Victim support Finland organises a helpline and it is open for calls from Monday to Tuesday from 1 pm to 9 pm and from Wednesday to Friday from 5 pm to 9 pm. Calls are anonymous. Victim support Finland provides also legal assistance and offers guidance in questions related individual's legal rights. Lawyers are on call from Monday to Thursday from 5 pm to 7 pm. Website www.rikunet.fi is a confidential and information secure Internet Service provider where you can present questions anonymously also in English. Crime victims, their close ones and witnesses may obtain a support person provided by Victim support Finland when necessary.<sup>421</sup>

---

<sup>418</sup>STT 'Pedofiileille ehkä ennalta ehkäisevää hoitoa' in homepage of Finland's biggest newspaper, Helsingin Sanomat. Viewed on 24 August 2012, <http://www.hs.fi/kotimaa/Pedofiileille+ehk%C3%A4+ennalta+ehk%C3%A4isev%C3%A4%C3%A4+hoitoa/a1305595140411>.

<sup>419</sup> HE 282/2010 p. 35.

<sup>420</sup> HE 282/2010 p. 39, see also www.mll.fi.

<sup>421</sup> Homepage of Victim Support Finland. Viewed on 11 October 2012,

There are also many other help lines and Internet help services. Rape crisis centre Tukinainen organises a free help line for conversations and information about sexual assault and abuse and Tukinainen offers also free legal consultation where a person can get information about sex offences, restraining orders, sexual molestation and harassment. There is opportunity for free legal assistance and support when reporting a sex offence to the police, during the preliminary investigation and during the trial. Person can agree on a personal appointment with the lawyer, who can also serve as a legal counsel in court.<sup>422</sup>

Naisten Linja, Women's line is a national, toll-free helpline for all women and girls who have experienced violence or threat of violence, and also for their friends and relatives. All calls are confidential and the calls can be made anonymously.<sup>423</sup> Naisten netti, Net aid for women is a service of Women's Line that provides free guidance and support for abused women and girls and their friends and family. A person can post a question or a message that will be answered by a Women's Line volunteer within 10 days.<sup>424</sup>

Helsinki mission organises Nuorten Kriisipiste, Crisis point to young people, which offers toll-free and confidential conversational therapy with a crisis worker. Service is for young people aged from 12 to 29 years and also for their family members.<sup>425</sup> The Evangelical Lutheran Church of Finland organises also help lines for conversation and Internet services where a person can send a question and it will be answered within 5 days. The Evangelical Lutheran Church has also an Internet priest. Personnel of church are aware of confidentiality and professional secrecy. Municipality and Finland's Slot Machine Association RAY fund help line services.<sup>426</sup>

---

<<http://www.riku.fi/fi/victim+support/>>.

<sup>422</sup> Homepage of Rape Crisis Centre Tukinainen. Viewed on 11 October 2012, <http://174.132.188.98/~tnainen/in\_english/>.

<sup>423</sup> Homepage of Women's Line. Viewed on 28 September 2012, <<https://www.naistenlinja.fi/en/public/how+can+we+help+you/>>.

<sup>424</sup> Homepage of Women's Line. Viewed on 28 September 2012, <<https://www.naistenlinja.fi/en/public/how+can+we+help+you/net+aid+for+women/>>.

<sup>425</sup> Homepage of Helsinkimissio. Viewed on 28 September 2012, <<http://www.helsinkimissio.fi/?sid=442>>.

<sup>426</sup> HE 282/2010 p. 39.

- xii. The starting point is that all damage that follows from sexual abuse is harmful and must be reacted. Help should be provided until victim is fully recovered. Support and help must be provided also to adults that have experienced sexual abuse when they were children.<sup>427</sup>

Municipalities hold the primary responsibility of physical and psychosocial treatment. Physical treatment relates to detecting the sexual abuse. Psychosocial treatment lasts for a long time and the need for treatment usually continues into adulthood. Guarantee for treatment<sup>428</sup> means that everyone should get treatment in certain time. Regardless of the guarantee for treatment, fulfilment of children's psychiatric treatment has been criticised. State funding is insufficient and there are regional differences in the availability of services. There are not enough educated psychotherapists for children and young people. Ministry of Social Affairs and Health has published a plan of action that aims to improve victim's gravitation to treatment. Families of limited means should also have access to treatment.<sup>429</sup>

The Lanzarote convention article 14(2) requires each Party to take measures, under the conditions provided for by its internal law, to co-operate with non-governmental organisations, other relevant organisations or other elements of civil society engaged in assistance to victims. In addition to The National Health Service there are several third sector quarters that provide support to victims.<sup>430</sup> Many different organisations and quarters of public health offer psychological help to victims and victim's near relatives and friends. Victim support Finland, Rape Crisis Centre Tukinainen and the Mannerheim League for Child Welfare offer peer support group, phone and Internet services. Also municipal mental health services are available.<sup>431</sup>

Lanzarote convention article 14(3) requires that there must be a possibility to remove the alleged perpetrator or the possibility to remove victim from his or her family environment if his or hers parents or persons who take care of him or her are involved in his or her sexual exploitation or sexual abuse. The Act on Restraining Orders (898/1998) was amended with intra family restraining order (711/2004) so that restraining orders can now be imposed

---

<sup>427</sup> HE 282/2010 p. 40.

<sup>428</sup> Ministry of Social Affairs and Health public portal. Viewed on 18 September 2012, <http://www.stm.fi/sosiaali\_ja\_terveyspalvelut/asiakkaanoikeudet/hoitoon\_paasy>.

<sup>429</sup> HE 282/2010 p. 41.

<sup>430</sup> HE 282/2010 p. 41.

<sup>431</sup> HE 282/2010 p. 42.

within a family. According to The Act on Restraining Orders ((898/1998 amendments up to 384/2010 included), later ARO) c 1, s 1(2), if the person who feels threatened and the person against whom the restraining order is applied for, live permanently in the same residence, a restraining order may be imposed to prevent an offence against life, health or liberty or a threat of such an offence. According to ARO c 1, s 3(2), the person on whom an intra family restraining order has been imposed must leave the residence where he or she and the person protected permanently live together, and he or she may not return there. Also police, prosecutor or social authority can petition intra –family-restraining order.<sup>432</sup> According to ARO c 1, s 7(2) restraining orders may be imposed for at most one year. However, an intra the family restraining order may only be imposed for at most three months. According to Child Welfare Act (683/1983) c 9, s 40 a child can be transferred out of family environment and taken to custody if measures of support of open welfare are not enough. Open welfare includes treatment, therapy and family work.

III NATIONAL POLICY REGARDING CHILDREN

- i. In 2011 LL.D. and researcher in the University of Helsinki Suvianna Hakalehto-Wainio wrote in newspaper Helsingin Sanomat about the notice Finland had gotten from the United Nation's Committee on Children rights. According to the notice, there are flaws in informing on children's rights and incoherence in supervision regarding children's rights. Hakalehto-Wainio claims that more assertive measures should be taken when it comes to the realisation on children's rights.<sup>433</sup> This year the editorial in Keskisuomalainen pronounced that there still exist some flaws even though children's position in Finland has gotten better in the long run.

Finnish NGOs also keep up the conversation regarding children's rights. For example Lastensuojelun keskusliitto, Finnish Central Union of Child Welfare, has participated in the discussion by telling its stands regarding the problems in the flow of information<sup>434</sup> and the

---

<sup>432</sup> HE 282/2010 p. 41.

<sup>433</sup> S. Hakalehto-Wainio, Helsingin Sanomat. 20.7.2011.

<sup>434</sup> A press release concerning the fact that in Finland the secrecy legislation is applied too easily 3.9.2012. Viewed on 7 November 2012, <http://www.lskl.fi/tiedotaa/tiedotusvalineille/tiedotteet/tiedonkulun\_ongelmat\_lastensuojelussa\_selvitettava.2640.news>.

proper terminology<sup>435</sup>. In 2011 even a research concerning sexual abuse of a child was published in Åbo Akademi.<sup>436</sup> There have also been plans to reconsider the legislative measurements against rape offences<sup>437</sup> which awoke conversation in the Finnish Parliament also on sex offences against children<sup>438</sup>. In Interrogatory KK 572/2012 a question was raised concerning the effectiveness of prevention of sexual offences towards children as well as prevention of recidivism of that sort of offences.

- ii. There are many organizations that take part in the fight for children's rights. They produce information material about sexual abuse<sup>439</sup>, arrange campaigns against sexual abuse<sup>440</sup> as well as for example training for private persons who are interested in the subject. It is also possible for NGOs to take part in public discussion with releasing for example press releases and taking part in different exhibitions. To mention one example, Pelastakaa Lapset Suomi, Save the Children Finland, has a stand in different exhibitions.<sup>441</sup> The Family Federation,<sup>442</sup> offers also a lot of information on its Internet page and National Research Institute of Legal Policy, as well as the Ministry of Justice, publish researches on many subjects - also on sexual abuse of children. National Research Institute of Legal Policy publishes also every year a publication on the criminality situation in Finland.<sup>443</sup>

Regarding sex tourism, the three biggest package trip providers have signed an international contract, according to which they inform their customers and partners in cooperation on sex tourism.<sup>444</sup>

<sup>435</sup> A press release concerning the need of changing the offence title for sexual abuse of a child 21.6.2012.

Viewed on 7 November 2012,

<http://www.lskl.fi/tiedottaa/tiedotusvalineille/tiedotteet/lapsen\_seksuaalinen\_hyvaksikaytto\_rikosnimike\_vanhentunut.2597.news>.

<sup>436</sup> The news archive for Åbo Akademi, viewed on 7 November 2012,

<<http://www.abo.fi/public/fi/News/Item/item/4484>>.

<sup>437</sup> Kanerva J. 2012, Raikausrikosten lainsäädännölliset muutostarpeet, Arviomuistio (writer's own translation: the Legislative Need for Change in Rape Offences, an estimate memorandum).

<sup>438</sup> KK 572/2012 vp.

<sup>439</sup> See e.g. Homepage of Suomen Delfins ry, Finnish Delfins ry. Viewed on 7 November 2012,

<http://www.suomendelfins.fi/index.php?option=com\_content&view=article&id=73&Itemid=57>.

<sup>440</sup> For example Save the Children Finland, has a campaign against sexual abuse of children on the Internet.

For more information, see <http://www.pelastakaalapset.fi/en/>.

<sup>441</sup> For example in Finland's biggest exhibition for Health and Welfare, TERVE-SOS, in May 2012

<sup>442</sup> A social and health sector organization focusing on families, see more

<http://www.vaestoliitto.fi/in\_english/>.

<sup>443</sup> The National Research Institute of Legal Policy public portal. Viewed on 7 November 2012, <<http://www.optula.om.fi/Etusivu/Julkaisut/Rikollisuustilanne>>.

<sup>444</sup> HE 282/2010 p. 47.

An official way of raising the awareness is to inform the changes in law, which is taken care for by the State and different organizations.

- iii. To police knowledge sex offences against children have come as follows: in year 2007 1025 cases (in which 376 an imputative judgement was given), in year 2008 1321 cases (in which 494 an imputative judgement was given), in year 2009 1068 cases (in which 484 an imputative judgement was given) and in year 2010 1102 cases, in year 2011 the situation was 640 cases in half a year<sup>445</sup>. In this context it is good to mention that the increase is explained by increase in effectiveness of authoritative control and the increase in the risk for apprehension.<sup>446</sup>
- iv. In Finland, there are promotional campaigns regarding these issues. Just to mention some, SROY<sup>447</sup> started 1.6.2012 a campaign supporting safe leisure activities and competitive sports and Amnesty has a campaign Mun rajat!<sup>448</sup> which promotes sexual independency as a human right<sup>449</sup>.

In Government Bill 282/2010 it was highlighted that campaigns that increase awareness must carry out in an appropriate way. So the matter must be regarded with seriousness without stirring up hysteria or reservations.<sup>450</sup>

- v. Different NGOs take care of the children's voice in the law making process. They are given possibility to for example express their literal opinions when the Government Bill is regarding a matter that concerns their work.<sup>451</sup>
- vi. The law does not specifically regulate the status of NGOs in law making process. In law making process, though, the Ministry of Justice sets a working group to study the need for <sup>445</sup> nine percents more than at the same time previous year.

---

<sup>446</sup> National Research Institute of Legal Policy. Researches 258. Crime and Criminal Justice in Finland 2010. Helsinki 2011. p. 105.

<sup>447</sup> Suomen Ratsastusopettajain yhdistys, Association for Finland's riding teachers

<sup>448</sup> My limits!

<sup>449</sup> Homepage of Ihmisoikeudet.net. Viewed on 7 November 2012, <<http://www.ihmisoikeudet.net/index.php?page=mista-on-kysymys>>.

<sup>450</sup> HE 282/2010 vp, p. 43.

<sup>451</sup> see the answer to the next question.

changes and the working group do ask opinions from different institutions. These opinions are included in the memorandum of the working group.<sup>452</sup>

This sort of working group was also set to study the need for changes regarding enforcement of Lanzarote Convention. The working group got a literal opinion from Lastensuojelun keskusliitto, Central Union for Child Welfare; Pelastakaa Lapset ry, Save the Children Finland; Mannerheimin lastensuojeluliitto, the Mannerheim League for Child Welfare; Lasten perusoikeudet ry, Children's Fundamental Rights ry; Oikeuspoliittinen tutkimuslaitos, Department of Criminal Policy for Ministry of Justice; Kuluttajavirasto, the Consumer Agency; Kriminaalihuollon tukisäätiö<sup>453</sup>; Opetus- ja kulttuuriministeriö, Ministry of Education and Culture; Suomen matkatoimistoalan liitto, The Association of Finnish Travel Agents; Kuljetus- ja viestintäministeriö, Ministry of Transport and Communications as well as from Sexpo-säätiö, Sexpo Foundation.<sup>454</sup>

IV OTHER

Finland is a constitutional state, thus individual issues are solved elsewhere than at the political level. Above all, being a constitutional state means executing the rule of law, as stated in the Constitution of Finland, c 1, s 2 (3): The exercise of public powers shall be based on an act and the law shall be strictly observed in all public activity. However, the political, economical and legal decision-making is intricately linked to each other in the society. The legislator may impose a norm, but the realization of it in accordance with the will of the legislator is not guaranteed. The position and the content of the Constitution are also affected by international politics, perceptions of the functions and roles of the state, as well as by the major social changes. Consequently, the Constitution seeks to reflect the existing state and the basic values of the society, and it is amended to reflect the changes as well as to usher the society to the desired path. Apulaisoikeuskansleri, the Deputy Chancellor of

---

<sup>452</sup> Kansanvalta.fi - the Democracy Data Bank public portal. Viewed on 7 November 2012, <<http://www.kansanvalta.fi/Etusivu/Kansalaisvaikuttaminen/Paatoksentekeonosalistuminen/Lainvalmisteluunosallistuminen>>

<sup>453</sup> a non-profit after-care foundation for sentenced offenders and their families

<sup>454</sup> OMML 67/2010, Lasten suojeleminen seksuaaliselta riistolta ja hyväksikäytöltä, lausuntotiivistelmä, p. 11.

Justice Mikko Puumalainen has stated that politics can be made within the fundamental rights, but not above them.<sup>455</sup>

Sexual violence against children was a hot topic in the public debate in the spring of 2010. One of the most controversial issues in this debate was the Confession secrecy in relation to the child welfare notification obligation of s 25 of the Child Welfare Act. The debate got political scopes, and finally some of the ministries participated in it. The minister responsible for child welfare matters, peruspalveluministeri, Minister of Health and Social Services at the time, held a discussion meeting in May 2010, which covered topics such as amending the legislation as well as changing the interpretation of Kirkkolaki, the Church Code<sup>456</sup> with compiling instructions. In addition to the officials from different ministries, present in the meeting was kulttuuri- ja urheiluministeri, Minister of Culture and Sports at the time, who is in charge of the church affairs, and bishops from both the Evangelical-Lutheran and the Orthodox Church.<sup>457</sup> It was decided in the negotiations that changing the legislation on professional confidentiality of the priests and the obligation to notify is not necessary, and thus the issue was left to be solved within the Church.

In December 2010 the aforementioned ministers and the Minister of Justice at the time met the bishop<sup>458</sup> of the city of Mikkeli. The premise of the discussion meeting was that the church shall, with the decision of the Bishops' Conference and by providing training, give a clear code of conduct on how and under what circumstances exceptions to confidentiality can be made without, however, changing the norms of confession or of pastoral counselling.<sup>459</sup> Lutheran Church had previously highlighted that the Confession secrecy is unconditional; hence the obligation of making a child welfare notification had received less attention. In this meeting, it was stated that by providing new guidelines, accentuating the

---

<sup>455</sup> M. Puumalainen XLIII Asianajajapäivät 14.1.2011: Oikeuspolitiikan foorumi: Suomalaisen oikeusvaltion kehittämisen haasteet ja mahdollisuudet, 2011, p. 1.

<sup>456</sup> The Church Code (1054/1993) is an act applied to the Evangelical-Lutheran Church of Finland. The Code is enacted by eduskunta, the Parliament of Finland based on a motion given by kirkolliskokous, the Church Assembly of the Evangelical-Lutheran Church.

<sup>457</sup> Both the bishops became later archbishops of their own Church. Sosiaali- ja terveysministeriön tiedote, STM (178/2010): Ministerit Risikko ja Wallin sekä kirkkojen edustajat keskustelivat rippisalaisuudesta ja lastensuojelusta, 27 May 2010, viewed on 25 October 2012, <<http://www.stm.fi/tiedotteet/tiedote/-/view/1510122>>.

<sup>458</sup> Bishop of the Evangelical-Lutheran Church.

<sup>459</sup> STM, (393/2010), Sosiaali- ja terveysministeriön tiedote, 393/2010: Lapsen etu aina ensisijainen ripissä ja sielunhoidossa - uusilla ohjeilla ilmoitusvelvollisuus selkiytty, 8 December 2010, viewed on 25 October 2012, <<http://www.stm.fi/tiedotteet/tiedote/-/view/1546003>>.

obligation to make a child welfare notification, and by providing training, the primary nature of child protection would improve in confession and in pastoral counselling.<sup>460</sup>

In January 2011 Suomen evankelis-luterilaisen kirkon Kirkkohallitus, the Church Administration of the Evangelical-Lutheran Church of Finland published a code of conduct called 'Aika puhua - aika vaieta - Rippisalaisuus ja vaitiolovelvollisuus kirkossa'<sup>461</sup> to clarify the Confession secrecy and the confidentiality obligations within the Church. It is stated in the code of conduct that according to the Church Code c 25, s 8 (1), within Church Administration shall apply what is provided in Laki viranomaisten toiminnan julkisuudesta, Act on the Openness of Government Activities. The applicability of the Act on the Openness of Government Activities is nevertheless restricted by c 5, s 2 (the Confession secrecy), c 6, s 3 (confidentiality in general); c 6, s 12 (confidentiality obligations of the lecturers) or c 24 (submission and appeal) of the Church Code. In addition, a document that refers to pastoral counselling or diaconal work concerning a private person shall be considered confidential.<sup>462</sup>

The Code of Judicial Procedure c 17, s 23 provides a list of those who cannot testify in court. However, it explicitly provides that rules concerning whether priests can testify are given separately. They are provided in c 5, s 2 (2) of the Church Code. According to the provision, when a priest is heard as a witness, he or she cannot disclose what has been entrusted to him or her in a private confession or pastoral counselling. The non-disclosure provisions apply both to the personality of the confessant and the content of the confession.<sup>463</sup> Even though on the basis of the phrasing of c 17, s 23 of the Code of Judicial Procedure the confidentiality obligations concern only a priest, according to the Church Code c 6, s 12, the mentioned provisions shall be applied to a lecturer also.<sup>464</sup>

In February 2011, the Bishops' Conference approved a report on consolidation of the Confession secrecy and child protection. The Bishops' message was that the preservation of absolute confidentiality of the Confession secrecy does not prevent interfering in child welfare matters. The report emphasises that the duty to notify and professional

<sup>460</sup> STM, (393/2010).

<sup>461</sup> Aika puhua - aika vaieta - Rippisalaisuus ja vaitiolovelvollisuus kirkossa, Suomen ev.lut. kirkon kirkkohallituksen julkaisuja 2011: 2, Hakapaino Oy, Helsinki, 2011, p. 49.

<sup>462</sup> The Church Code c 25, s 8 (1).

<sup>463</sup> See e.g. the Church Code c 5, s 2 (2).

<sup>464</sup> Aika puhua - aika vaieta - Rippisalaisuus ja vaitiolovelvollisuus kirkossa, Suomen ev.lut. kirkon kirkkohallituksen julkaisuja 2011: 2, p. 49.

confidentiality are not contradictory. Instead, the Confession secrecy and the promotion of child welfare can be part of the same process.<sup>465</sup> Furthermore, according to the report, child protection is an essential part of the vocation of a Christian.<sup>466</sup> The report also provides the practical guidelines for confession and pastoral counselling in accordance with the needs of child protection.

Priests and lectors are obliged to take action to prevent planned crimes and to protect possible victims, if they become aware of such matters in the course of a confession or pastoral counselling.<sup>467</sup> However, for the Confession secrecy, according to the Church Code c 5, s 2 (3), it is essential that the identity of the confessant will not be revealed if the crime is notified to authorities by the priest. The Confession secrecy, as described in the Church Code c 5, s 2, does not concern laymen or other church employee groups.<sup>468</sup> On the contrary, according to the present child welfare legislation, every employee and elected person in the parish is obliged, notwithstanding any confidentiality provisions, to notify the police when they have a reasonable reason to suspect on the basis of circumstances that have come to their knowledge an act punishable under Chapter 20 of the Criminal Code.<sup>469</sup> These acts include sexual crimes directed at children.

If a priest or a lector hears about a crime from the offender, it is their duty to try and help the offender to mend his or her life and to make sure the affair does not recur.<sup>470</sup> A priest has the option not to proclaim absolution to the offender until he or she has begun to settle and mend the damage he or she has caused.<sup>471</sup> If a priest, in a confession, hears about a sexual abuse of a child from the victim, he or she is obliged to help the victim in every possible way, and ensure that the victim is safe from further abuse. In order to protect the

---

<sup>465</sup> Piispainkokouksen selonteko rippisalaisuuden ja lastensuojelun yhteensovittamisesta, 9 February 2011, viewed on 25 October 2012, <http://sakasti.evli.fi/sakasti.nsf/0/F359F1ED9F897DD0C225770E0034026E/\$FILE/SELONTEKO-RIPPISALAIUUS-JA-%20LASTENSUOJELU.pdf>, p. 1.

<sup>466</sup> Piispainkokouksen selonteko rippisalaisuuden ja lastensuojelun yhteensovittamisesta, p. 1.

<sup>467</sup> Piispainkokouksen selonteko rippisalaisuuden ja lastensuojelun yhteensovittamisesta, p. 5.

<sup>468</sup> Piispainkokouksen selonteko rippisalaisuuden ja lastensuojelun yhteensovittamisesta, p. 1.

<sup>469</sup> Child Welfare Act, s 25, (3).

<sup>470</sup> Piispainkokouksen selonteko rippisalaisuuden ja lastensuojelun yhteensovittamisesta, p. 5.

<sup>471</sup> Piispainkokouksen selonteko rippisalaisuuden ja lastensuojelun yhteensovittamisesta, p. 2.

victim, the priest can, withstanding the Confessional secrecy, report both the crime and the culpable to the authorities as long as the identity of the confessant is not revealed.<sup>472</sup>

To conclude, the confidentiality obligations of priests and lecturers should be clearer now. As a rule, if a priest has a cause to suspect on the basis of circumstances that have come to his or her knowledge that the need of child welfare should be investigated, or that a child has been a victim of sexual abuse, the priest is, notwithstanding any confidentiality provisions, obliged to notify either the social authorities or the police.<sup>473</sup> However, if this information has come to his or her knowledge in a private confession or within pastoral counseling, the provisions of the Child Welfare Act are not applied. In these situations, a priest is bound by the provisions on Confessional secrecy of the Church Code. However, the debate continues and solutions are sought by emphasizing that the use of criminal justice and criminal legislation should be avoided to the last.<sup>474</sup>

V CONCLUSION

Substantive criminal law

Before the implementation of the Lanzarote Convention, Finland was already bound by several international instruments concerning sexual abuse of children and these kinds of crimes were already quite comprehensively criminalized in Finland.<sup>475</sup> However, the Convention introduced two wholly new crimes for the Finnish legislation. Attending pornographic performances involving the participation of children and so called “grooming” are now criminalized in Finland. Moreover, the Convention made it essential to make some minor changes into existing provisions of the Criminal Code. Obtaining an access to a website which contains child pornographic material is now more clearly

---

<sup>472</sup> Piispainkokouksen selonteko rippisalaisuuden ja lastensuojelun yhteensovittamisesta, p. 5.

<sup>473</sup> See the Child Welfare Act, s 25.

<sup>474</sup> J. Iljäs, Henriksson painottaa hyväksikäyttötapausten ehkäisemisessä uskonnollisten yhteisöjen vastuuta, homepage of K24, 22 October 2012, viewed on 25 October 2012, <<http://www.kotimaa24.fi/uutiset/politiikka/9444-henriksson-painottaa-hyvaksikayttotapausten-ehkaisuissa-myos-uskonnollisten-yhteisojen-vastuuta>>.

<sup>475</sup> For example, the Palermo Convention and especially the Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children (A/RES/55/25), the Council of Europe Convention on Cybercrime (CETS No. 185), the Council of the EU Framework Decision on combating trafficking in human beings (2002/629/JHA), the Council of the EU Framework Decision on combating the sexual exploitation of children and child pornography (2004/68/JHA), the Council of the EU Framework Decision on attacks against information systems (2005/222/JHA) etc.

criminalized in Finland. The Finnish legislation is now updated to meet the latest requirements of international obligations concerning the sexual abuse of children. It can be regarded as a reasonable response to the challenges brought by the information and communication technologies.

During the implementation a huge improvement was also made to the level of protection of the victims of sex offences, in spite of it was not one of the requirements of the Convention. In the Criminal Code of Finland the definition of sexual act was awfully outdated and a time for the reconstruction was essential. See more about the issue in paragraph 2(a)(i) of chapter II in this report.

During the last two decades several independent and separate changes have been made into the Criminal Code of Finland concerning sex offences and pornography offences. Therefore, at some point in near future it could be necessary to make a more comprehensive examination of the Criminal Code and examine if the provisions are consistent enough or not. Some terminology and provisions might need a little fix to achieve better consistency inside the Criminal Code and, in addition, to make the legislation more compatible with the international obligations. For example the concept of “sexually obscene pictures”<sup>476</sup> can be considered as outdated and could be replaced with some better formulation to be more present day. Furthermore, one may consider it to be rather odd to regulate child pornography crimes in chapter 17 of the Criminal Code which mainly criminalize conducts against public order. Main purpose of criminalizing child pornography crimes is to protect the health and development of children, therefore more appropriate could be if these provisions were placed in the chapter 20 of the Criminal Code which main purpose is to protect sexual autonomy of people.

All in all, it seems at this point that the legislation of substantive criminal law is in relatively good state and is updated to meet the latest requirements of international obligations concerning sexual abuse and sexual exploitation of children.

Criminal procedure

---

<sup>476</sup> The concept is used in the Criminal Code to mean child pornography, for example. For more information, see paragraph 2(c)(xi) of chapter II in this report. Also see the Criminal Code (39/1889) chapter 17, sections 18, 18a and 19.

All in all, the Lanzarote treaty did not have much effect on the Finnish procedural laws. The duty to ensure that the best interest and rights of a child are always respected during the investigations and criminal proceedings was already covered in the relevant Finnish acts before signing of the treaty. At the moment, in books, the rights of the victim and especially that of a child seem to be very well assured, although the principle of the best interest of a child is not written in the procedural laws. It seems, however, that in action those rights are not always secured in the way they should be according to the law.

According to the latest surveys, there are some disquieting problems relating to the implementation of the rights of the victims in criminal proceedings.<sup>477</sup> E.g. the victims might not be aware of their rights, there are too few educated professionals to conduct the hearings of children and the durations of the proceedings are often worryingly long.<sup>478</sup> The latest problem has also been observed by the European Court of Human Rights, which has given Finland numerous condemnatory decisions relating to the matter.<sup>479</sup> The oldest condemnations are from the time before the enactment of the Criminal Procedure Act in 1997, and from the perspective of the regulations the situation improved for as a rule, after the enactment, it was no longer possible to postpone the main hearing.<sup>480</sup> However, regardless of all the implemented measures, the duration of proceedings still stays a major problem. It has also been highlighted, that at the moment the quality and the result of the proceedings are much varied depending on what court handles the case.<sup>481</sup>

<sup>477</sup> P. Honkatukia, Uurit rikosprosessissa – Haavoittuvuus, palvelut ja kohtelu, Oikeuspoliittisen tutkimuslaitoksen tutkimuksia 252, p. 114, Hakapaino Oy, Helsinki, 2010.

<sup>478</sup> H. Alinen, 'Kuka kertoisi uhrille oikeudet', Lakimies Uutiset 6/2012, September 2012, p. 8-11.

<sup>479</sup> See e.g. Oikeusministeriön mietintöjä ja lausuntoja 87/2010 – Oikeusprosessin pitkittymisen estäminen, page 12, viewed on 7 November 2012, <http://www.om.fi/Satellite?blobtable=MungoBlobs&blobcol=urldata&SSURIdatatype=BlobServer&SSURIdcontainer=Default&SSURIsession=false&blobkey=id&blobheadervalue1=inline;%20filename=OMML\_87\_2010%20ty%F6gryhm%E4n%20mietint%F6%2052%20s%20.pdf&SSURIsscontext=Satellite%20Server&blobwhere=1290611429292&blobheadername1=Content-Disposition&ssbinary=true&blobheader=application/pdf>.

<sup>480</sup> The working group of Ministry of Justice states in its report (OM, Työryhmämietintö 2007:2. Oikeudenkäynnin kokonaiskeston lyhentäminen, Oikeusministeriö, 2007, page 26) that before the enactment postponement of main hearing in district court was considerably more conventional and delayed the proceedings.

<sup>481</sup> V. Hinkkanen: Oikeuspoliittisen tutkimuslaitoksen tutkimustiedonantoja 92, Lapsen seksuaalinen hyväksikäyttö, tutkimus rangaistuskäytännöstä ja seksuaalirikosten uusimisesta, viewed on 7 November 2012, <<http://www.optula.om.fi/Satellite?blobtable=MungoBlobs&blobcol=urldata&SSURIdatatype=BlobServe>>.

All in all, the fact that the aforementioned problems are now widely conversed both in the Finnish public and professional discussion suggests that they have been well acknowledged and the growing trend in Finland is to further improve the taking into consideration the victims and their rights, especially those of children, also in action.

ABBREVIATIONS

	English	Finnish
c	Chapter of an Act/Code	Luku
HE	Government Bill	Hallituksen esitys
KK	Interrogatory (to the Speaker of Parliament)	Kirjallinen kysymys
KKO	The Supreme Court	Korkein oikeus
KM	Committee report	Komiteanmietintö
LaVM	Report of the Legal Affairs Committee Parliament of Finland	Lakivaliokunnan mietintö of the
OMML	Report/Statement of the Ministry of Justice	Oikeusministeriön mietintö/lausunto
OM	Ministry of Justice	Oikeusministeriö
s	Section of an Act/Code	Pykälä
STM	Ministry of Social Affairs and Health	Sosiaali- ja terveysministeriö
The CC	The Criminal Code of Finland (39/1889)	Rikoslaki (39/1889)

LIST OF REFERENCES

Legal literature and other texts

Articles

Alinen, H. 'Kuka kertoisi uhrille oikeudet'. Lakimies Uutiset, 6/2012, September 2012.

Lappi-Seppälä, T. 'Imprisonment and Penal Policy in Finland' in Scandinavian Studies in Law, Stockholm Institute for Scandinavian Law, vol. 54 Criminal Law, September 2009, viewed on 3 November 2012. <<http://www.scandinavianlaw.se/pdf/54-17.pdf>>

Books / Online Books

Aaltonen, A.-K. Lapsioikeus ja lapsen oikeus tuomioistuimissa, Edita Publishing Oy, Porvoo, 2009.

Aaltonen, M.; Joronen, M. & Villa, S. Syrjintä Suomessa 2008, Ihmisoikeusliitto, 2009.

Forss, A. & Säkkinen, S. Lapsen elatus ja huolto 2011, Terveysten ja hyvinvoinninlaitos 12/2012, Suomen virallinen tilasto, 2012.

Frände, D. Finska straffprocessrätt I, Forum Iuris, Helsinki, 1999.

Frände, D. Yleinen rikosoikeus, translated into Finnish by M. Wahlberg, Edita Publishing, Porvoo, 2012.

Frände, D.; Havansi, E.; Helenius, D.; Koulu, R.; Lappalainen, J.; Lindfors, H.; Niemi, J.; Rautio, J.; Virolainen, J., Prosessioikeus. Sanoma Pro, Helsinki 2012.

Hallberg, P.; Karapuu, H.; Ojanen, T.; Scheinin, M.; Tuori, K.; Viljanen, V-P., Perusoikeudet. WSOYpro, Helsinki, 2011.

Hinkkanen, V. Lapsen seksuaalinen hyväksikäyttö - tutkimus rangaistuskäytännöstä ja seksuaalirikosten uusimisesta. Oikeuspoliittisen tutkimuslaitoksen tutkimustiedonantoja 92, National Research Institute of Legal Policy, Helsinki, 2009, last viewed on 7 November 2012. <<http://www.optula.om.fi/Satellite?blobtable=MungoBlobs&blobcol=urldata&SSURIapptype=BlobServer&SSURIcontainer=Default&SSURIsession=false&blobkey=id&blobheadervalue1=inline;%20filename=92%20lapsen%20seksuaalinen.pdf&SSURIsscontext=Satellite%20Server&blobwhere=124379>>

2841291&blobheadername1=Content-Disposition&ssbinary=true&blobheader=application/pdf>

- Hirvelä, P. Rikosprosessi lapsiin kohdistuvissa seksuaalirikoksissa, WSOYPro, Helsinki, 2006.
- Hirvelä, P. Lapsen seksuaalisen hyväksikäytön selvittäminen, WSOYPro, Helsinki, 2007.
- Honkatukia, P. Uhrit rikosprosessissa – Haavoittuvuus, palvelut ja kohtelu, Oikeuspoliittisen tutkimuslaitoksen tutkimuksia 252, Hakapaino Oy, Helsinki, 2010.
- Jaatinen, H. Oikeushenkilön rangaistusvastuu. Lakimiesliiton Kustannus, Jyväskylä, 2000.
- Jyränki, A. & Husa, J. Valtiosääntöoikeus. Lakimiesliiton Kustannus, Hämeenlinna, 2012.
- Kadoch, R. Oikeudenkäynnin julkisuus yleisissä tuomioistuimissa, Oikeuspoliittisen tutkimuslaitoksen tutkimustiedonantoja 112, Hakapaino Oy, Helsinki, 2012.
- Kanerva, J. Raiskausrikosten lainsäädännölliset muutostarpeet. Arviomuistio. Ministry of Justice. 05/2012.
- Koskinen, P. 'Rikosoikeuden yleiset opit ja rikosvastuun perusteet' in Rikosoikeus, (T. Lappi-Seppälä, K. Hakamies, P. Koskinen, M. Majanen, S. Melander, K. Nuotio, A-M. Nuutila, T. Ojala, I. Rautio). Juridiikkaonline, WSOYpro, 1 November 2008, viewed on 14 August 2012. <<http://onlinepalvelu.sanomapro.fi.libproxy.helsinki.fi/?navi=Onlinepalvelut&prevpos=ri&pos=ri&page=selain&ts=jo&openhaku=&gethere=>>
- Majanen, M. 'RL 17: Rikokset yleistä järjestystä vastaan' in Rikosoikeus, (T. Lappi-Seppälä, K. Hakamies, P. Koskinen, M. Majanen, S. Melander, K. Nuotio, A-M. Nuutila, T. Ojala, I. Rautio). Juridiikkaonline, WSOYpro, 1 November 2008, viewed on 22 August 2012. <<http://onlinepalvelu.sanomapro.fi.libproxy.helsinki.fi/?navi=Onlinepalvelut&prevpos=ri&pos=ri&page=selain&ts=jo&openhaku=&gethere=>>
- Miettinen, M. & Steenroos, M-L. Lupaako laki liikaa, Etelä-Suomen aluehallintoviraston julkaisuja 15/2011, (publication by the Regional State Administrative agency of Southern Finland), Hämeenlinna, 2011.
- Melander, S. Rikosoikeus 2010-luvulla, Forum Iuris, Helsinki, 2010.

- Niemi, J. Poliisin tietoon tullut viharikollisuus Suomessa 2010, Poliisiammattikorkeakoulun raportteja 95, (publication by the Finnish Police Academy), Tampere, 2011.
- Nuutila, A-M. & Majanen, M. 'RL 25: Vapauteen kohdistuvat rikokset' in Rikosoikeus, (T. Lappi-Seppälä, K. Hakamies, P. Koskinen, M. Majanen, S. Melander, K. Nuotio, A-M. Nuutila, T. Ojala, I. Rautio). Juridiikkaonline, WSOYpro, 1 November 2008, viewed on 17 August 2012. <<http://onlinepalvelu.sanomapro.fi.libproxy.helsinki.fi/?navi=Onlinepalvelu&tJuridiikkaonline&prevpos=ri&pos=ri&page=selain&ts=jo&openhaku=&gethere=>>>
- Ojala, S. Eurooppalaistuva oikeuskulttuuri ja suomalainen parisuhdeoikeus, Edita, 2001.
- Ojala, T. Lapsiin kohdistuvat seksuaalirikokset. Edita Publishing Oy, Porvoo, 2012.
- Puumalainen, M. Oikeuspolitiikan foorumi: Suomalaisen oikeusvaltion kehittämisen haasteet ja mahdollisuudet, XLIII Asianajajapäivät 14.1.2011, 1 January 2011, viewed on 25 October 2012. <http://www.okv.fi/43/asianajajapaivat%2014\_1\_2011.pdf>.
- Rautio, I. 'RL 20: Seksuaalirikokset' in Rikosoikeus, (T. Lappi-Seppälä, K. Hakamies, P. Koskinen, M. Majanen, S. Melander, K. Nuotio, A-M. Nuutila, T. Ojala, I. Rautio). Juridiikkaonline, WSOYpro, 1 November 2008, viewed on 17 August 2012. <<http://onlinepalvelu.sanomapro.fi.libproxy.helsinki.fi/?navi=Onlinepalvelu&tJuridiikkaonline&prevpos=ri&pos=ri&page=selain&ts=jo&openhaku=&gethere=>>>
- Taskinen, S. Lapsen seksuaalisen hyväksikäytön ja pahoinpitelyn selvittäminen. Asiantuntijaryhmän suositukset sosiaali- ja terveydenhuollon henkilöstölle. Stakes, Oppaita 55, STAKES, Helsinki, 2003.
- Valkama, E. & Litmala, A. Lasten huoltoriidat käräjäoikeuksissa, Oikeuspoliittisen tutkimuslaitoksen julkaisuja 224, (publication by the National Research Institute of Legal Policy), Porvoo, 2006.
- Valkama, E. & Lasola, A. Lasten huoltoriidat hovioikeuksissa, Oikeuspoliittisen tutkimuslaitoksen julkaisuja 234, (publication by the National Research Institute of Legal Policy), Helsinki, 2008.

Virolainen, J. Rikosprosessioikeus I, Pandecta Oy, Rovaniemi 1998.

Vuorenpää, M. Prosessioikeuden perusteet: prosessioikeuden yleisiä lähtökohtia sekä menettelykäräjäoikeuden tuomioon asti. WSOYpro, Helsinki 2009.

Statistics

Suomen virallinen tilasto (SVT), Siviilisäädyn muutokset 2011, Tilastokeskus (Statistics Finland), Helsinki, 2012.

Rikosseuraamuslaitos, Rikosseuraamuslaitoksen monisteita 3/2011: Rikosseuraamusasiakkaat 1.5.2011, viewed on 9 August 2012. <<http://www.rikosseuraamus.fi/uploads/sc1y3cj.pdf>>

Rikosseuraamuslaitos, Rikosseuraamuslaitoksen tilastoja 2011, viewed on 9 August 2012. <<http://www.rikosseuraamus.fi/uploads/7b7wbut147l7k.pdf>>

Rikosseuraamuslaitos, Rikosseuraamuslaitoksen monisteita 4/2012: Rikosseuraamusasiakkaat 1.5.2012, viewed on 9 August 2012. <<http://www.rikosseuraamus.fi/uploads/17k65c6j.pdf>>

Media

Blencowe, A. 'Lastensuojelun toimista tutkinta 8-vuotiaan tytön tapauksessa', in YLE on 3 September, viewed on 19 September, 2012. <http://yle.fi/uutiset/lastensuojelun\_toimista\_tutkinta\_8-vuotiaan\_tyton\_tapauksessa/6279539>

Hakalehto-Wainio, S. 'Vieraskynä. Lasten oikeuksissa on tekemistä Suomessakin', in Helsingin Sanomat on 20 July 2011, viewed on 7 November, 2012. <<http://www.hs.fi/paakirjoitus/artikkeli/Lasten+oikeuksissa+on+tekemist%C3%A4+Suomessakin/1135267901303>>

Hirsimäki, T. 'Syyttäjä vaatii elinkautista 8-vuotiaan tytön murhasta', in YLE on 30 August 2012, viewed on 18 September 2012. <http://yle.fi/uutiset/syyttaja\_vaatii\_elinkautisia\_8-vuotiaan\_murhasta/6275288>

Iljäs, J. 'Henriksson painottaa hyväksikäyttötapausten ehkäisemisessä uskonnollisten yhteisöjen vastuuta', 22 October 2012, homepage of K24, viewed on 25 October 2012, <<http://www.kotimaa24.fi/uutiset/politiikka/9444-> henriksson-painottaa-hyvaksikaytotapausten-ehkaisemisessa-myo-uskonnollisten-yhteisojen-vastuuta>

‘Kahdeksan vuotiaan kuolema käynnisti selvitysten sarjan’ in Helsingin Sanomat on 3
September 2012, viewed 28 October 2012.
<<http://www.hs.fi/kotimaa/Kahdeksanvuotiaan+kuolema+k%C3%A4ynni+sti+selvitysten+sarjan++/a1305596926811>>

Ranta, N. ‘Viihdetaiteilijaa ja naisystävää epäillään 8-vuotiaan tytön murhasta’, in MTV3 28
August 2012, viewed on 19 September 2012.
<<http://www.mtv3.fi/uutiset/rikos.shtml/viihdetaiteilijaa-ja-naisystavaa-epaillaan-8-vuotiaan-tyton-murhasta/2012/08/1605556>>

‘SPR:stä johtaja 8-vuotiaan tytön kuoleman tutkintaan’ in Helsingin Sanomat on 24 October 2012, viewed on 28 October 2012,
<<http://www.hs.fi/kotimaa/SPRst%C3%A4+johtaja+8-vuotiaan+tyt%C3%B6n+kuoleman+tutkintaan/a1305609764232>>

‘Surmatun tytön naapurit: kantelimme monta kertaa viranomaisille’ in Helsingin Sanomat on 3 September 2012, viewed on 19 September 2012.
<<http://www.hs.fi/kotimaa/Surmatun+tyt%C3%B6n+naapurit+Kantelimme+monta+kertaa+viranomaisille/a1305596933091>>

Other

Piispainkokouksen selonteko rippisalaisuuden ja lastensuojelun yhteensovittamisesta, 9
February 2011, viewed on 25 October 2012,
<http://sakasti.ev1.fi/sakasti.nsf/0/F359F1ED9F897DD0C225770E0034026E/\$FILE/SELONTEKO-RIPPISALAISSUUS-JA-%20LASTENSUOJELU.pdf>

Suomen ev.lut. kirkon kirkkohallituksen julkaisuja 2011:2 Aika puhua - aika vaieta - Rippisalaisuus ja vaitiolovelvollisuus kirkossa, Hakapaino Oy, Helsinki, 2011.

Official Documents

Government Bills

HE 13/1919 vp, Hallituksen esitys eduskunnalle laiksi oppivelvollisuudesta ja laiksi kansakoululaitoksen kustannuksista

HE 90/1974 vp, Hallituksen esitys eduskunnalle lapsen asemaa koskevan lainsäädännön uudistamisesta

HE 224/1982 vp, Hallituksen esitys eduskunnalle laeiksi lapsen huollosta ja tapaamisoikeudesta ja holhouslain muuttamisesta sekä niihin liittyvien lakien muuttamisesta

HE 94/1993 vp, Hallituksen esitys Eduskunnalle rikoslainsäädännön kokonaisuudistuksen toisen vaiheen käsittäviksi rikoslain ja eräiden muiden lakien muutoksiksi

HE 95/1993 vp, Hallituksen esitys Eduskunnalle oikeushenkilön rangaistusvastuuta koskevaksi lainsäädännöksi

HE 309/1993 vp, Hallituksen esitys eduskunnalle perustuslakien perusoikeussäntöjen muuttamisesta

HE 6/1997 vp, Hallituksen esitys Eduskunnalle oikeudenkäyttöä, viranomaisia ja yleistä järjestystä vastaan kohdistuvia rikoksia sekä seksuaalirikoksia koskevien säännösten uudistamiseksi.

HE 86/1997 vp, Hallituksen esitys eduskunnalle koulutusta koskevaksi lainsäädännöksi

HE 137/1999 vp, Hallituksen esitys Eduskunnalle laeiksi sosiaalihuollon asiakkaan asemasta ja oikeuksista sekä sosiaalihuoltolain muuttamisesta ja eräiksi niihin liittyviksi laeiksi

HE 200/2000 vp, Hallituksen esitys eduskunnalle laiksi virallistetusta parisuhteesta

HE 52/2002 vp, Hallituksen esitys Eduskunnalle laeiksi esitutkintalain ja pakkokeinolain sekä eräiden näihin liittyvien lakien muuttamisesta

HE 190/2002 vp, Hallituksen esitys Eduskunnalle laiksi oikeudenkäymiskaaren eräiden todistelua, kiireelliseksi julistamista ja ylimääräistä muutoksenhakua koskevien säännösten muuttamisesta

HE 144/2003 vp, Hallituksen esitys eduskunnalle laiksi lähestymiskiellosta annetun lain muuttamisesta ja laiksi rikoslain 21 luvun 17§:n kumoamisesta

HE 34/2004 vp, Hallituksen esitys Eduskunnalle laiksi rikoslain muuttamisesta ja eräiksi siihen liittyviksi laeiksi

HE 13/2006 vp, Hallituksen esitys Eduskunnalle laiksi oikeudenkäynnin julkisuudesta yleisissä tuomioistuimissa ja eräiksi siihen liittyviksi laeiksi

HE 153/2006 vp, Hallituksen esitys Eduskunnalle Euroopan neuvoston tietoverkkorikollisuutta koskevan yleissopimuksen hyväksymisestä, laiksi sen lainsäädännön alaan kuuluvien määräysten voimaansaattamisesta sekä laeiksi rikoslain, pakkokeinolain 4 luvun, esitutkintalain 27 ja 28 §:n ja kansainvälisestä oikeusavusta rikosasioissa annetun lain 15 ja 23 §:n muuttamisesta

HE 190/2010 vp, Hallituksen esitys Eduskunnalle kuvaohjelmalainsäädännön uudistamiseksi

HE 282/2010 vp, Hallituksen esitys Eduskunnalle lasten suojelemista seksuaalista riistoa ja seksuaalista hyväksikäyttöä vastaan koskevan Euroopan neuvoston yleissopimuksen hyväksymiseksi ja siihen liittyviksi laeiksi.

HE 283/2010 vp, Hallituksen esitys Eduskunnalle laiksi rikoslain 20 luvun muuttamisesta

HE 122/2011 vp, Hallituksen esitys Eduskunnalle ihmiskaupan vastaisesta toiminnasta tehdyn Euroopan neuvoston yleissopimuksen hyväksymisestä ja laeiksi yleissopimuksen lainsäädännön alaan kuuluvien määräysten voimaansaattamisesta sekä liiketoimintakiellosta annetun lain 3 §:n muuttamisesta

HE 140/2012 vp, Hallituksen esitys eduskunnalle valvottua koevapautta koskevaksi lainsäädännöksi

Committee Reports and Memorandums

KM 1992:12, Perheet ja laki, Perhetoimikunnan mietintö, 1992.

LaVM 4/2004 vp, Lakivaliokunnan mietintö hallituksen esityksestä laiksi rikoslain muuttamisesta ja eräiksi siihen liittyviksi laeiksi.

LaVM 43/2010 vp, Lakivaliokunnan mietintö hallituksen esityksestä Eduskunnalle lasten suojelemista seksuaalista riistoa ja seksuaalista hyväksikäyttöä vastaan koskevan Euroopan neuvoston yleissopimuksen hyväksymiseksi ja siihen liittyviksi laeiksi.

OM, Työryhmämietintö, 2007:2. Oikeudenkäynnin kokonaiskeston lyhentäminen, Oikeusministeriö, 2007.

OM, Työryhmämietintö, 2009:1. Seksuaalirikollisten hoito, Oikeusministeriö, 2009.

- OM 1/31/2010, Lapsiystävällinen oikeus – ns. Follo-mallin kokeilu käräjäoikeuksissa, Oikeusministeriön päätös ohjausryhmän asettamisesta, Oikeusministeriö, 18.11.2010.
- OM 1/31/2010, Työryhmän toimikauden jatkaminen, Oikeusministeriön päätös 20.3.2012.
- OM 61/2010, Asiantuntija-avustajan käyttö huoltoriitojen sovittelussa, Oikeusministeriö, 2010.
- OMML 67/2010, Lasten suojeleminen seksuaaliselta riistolta ja hyväksikäytöltä, Lausuntotiivistelmä, Oikeusministeriö, 2010.
- OM 87/2010, Oikeusministeriön mietintöjä ja lausuntoja, Oikeusprosessin pitkittymisen estäminen, Oikeusministeriö, 2010.
- OM 2/2012, Asiantuntija-avusteista huoltoriitojen sovittelua koskeva kokeilu käräjäoikeuksissa 1.1.2011 – 31.12.2012, väliraportti, Oikeusministeriö, 2012.
- OM 25/2012, Raiskausrikosten lainsäädännölliset muutostarpeet, arviomuistio, Oikeusministeriö, 2012.
- OM 36/2012, Asiantuntija-avusteisen huoltoriitojen sovittelun laajentaminen, Oikeusministeriö, 2012.
- STM, (1993:26), Perhekäsitetöryhmän muistio, 1993:26, Sosiaali- ja terveysministeriö, Helsinki, 1993.
- STM, (2001:11), Sosiaali- ja terveysministeriön oppaita, 2001:11, Sosiaalihuollon asiakkaan asema ja oikeudet, Helsinki, 2001.
- STM, (2009:30), Sosiaali- ja terveysministeriön selvityksiä, 2009:30, Lasten seksuaalisen hyväksikäytön selvittäminen. Työryhmän muistio. Helsinki, 2009.
- STM, (178/2010), Sosiaali- ja terveysministeriön tiedote, 178/2010, 'Ministerit Risikko ja Wallin sekä kirkkojen edustajat keskustelivat rippisalaisuudesta ja lastensuojelusta', 27 May 2010, viewed on 25 October 2012. <<http://www.stm.fi/tiedotteet/tiedote/-/view/1510122>>
- STM, (393/2010), Sosiaali- ja terveysministeriön tiedote, 393/2010, 'Lapsen etu aina ensisijainen ripissä ja sielunhoidossa - uusilla ohjeilla ilmoitusvelvollisuus selkiytyy, 8 December 2010, viewed on 25 October 2012, <<http://www.stm.fi/tiedotteet/tiedote/-/view/1546003>>.

Case Law of the Supreme Court

KKO 2001:7

KKO 2005:17

KKO 2005:93

KKO 2006:107

KKO 2008:68

KKO 2008:84

KKO 2010:52

KKO 2011:1

KKO 2011:34

KKO 2011:102

KKO 2012:66

KKO 2012:81

Interrogatories (to the Speaker of the Parliament of Finland)

KK 1111/2009 vp, Antti Kaikkonen, Rikosrekisteriotteen vaatiminen lasten ja nuorten parissa toimivilta vapaaehtoistyöntekijöiltä

KK 572/2012 vp, Katri Komi, Raiskausrikosten rangaistuskäytännöt

Old laws (repealed)

Holhouslaki, Act on Guardianship of Children and Incompetent Persons, (34/1898)

Laki aviottomista lapsista, Act on adulterine children (173/1922)

Laki eduskunnan oikeudesta tarkastaa valtioneuvosten jäsenten ja oikeuskanslerin virkatointen lainmukaisuutta, Ministerial Responsibility Act (274/1922)

Laki oppivelvollisuudesta, Act on compulsory education (101/1921)

Laki valtakunnanoikeudesta, Act on the High Court of Impeachment (273/1922)

Suomen hallitusmuoto, the Form of Government Act (94/1919)

Valtiopäiväjärjestys, the Diet Act (7/1928)

International Documents

Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women, Concluding observations of the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women: Finland, 2008

Committee on the Rights of the Child, Consideration of reports submitted by State parties under article 44 of the Convention, Concluding Observations: Finland, 2011

Council of Europe, Explanatory Report of the Council of Europe Convention on the Protection of Children against Sexual Exploitation and Sexual Abuse, CETS No. 201, 2007, last viewed on 28 October 2012.
<<http://conventions.coe.int/Treaty/EN/Reports/Html/201.htm>>

European Commission, Special Eurobarometer 296, Discrimination in the European Union: Perceptions, Experiences and Attitudes, 2008.

European Commission, Special Eurobarometer 317, Discrimination in the EU in 2009, 2009.

European Commission, Communication from the Commission to the European Parliament, the Council, the European Economic and Social Committee and the Committee of the Regions ((COM 2011) 573 Final), Towards an EU Criminal Policy: Ensuring the effective implementation of EU policies through criminal law, 2011, viewed on 3 November 2012.
<http://ec.europa.eu/justice/criminal/files/act\_en.pdf>

United Nations Office for Drug Control and Crime Prevention, UN Handbook on Justice for Victims, Centre for International Crime Prevention, New York, 1999.

Online Sources

Finnish public sector online services portal. Viewed on 4 September 2012. <www.suomi.fi>

Homepage of Central Union for Children Welfare. Viewed on 7 November 2012.
<http://www.lskl.fi/tiedotaa/tiedotusvalineille/tiedotteet/lapsen\_seksuaalinen\_hyvaksikaytto\_rikosnimike\_vanhentunut.2597.news>

Homepage of Central Union for Children Welfare. Viewed on 7 November 2012.
<http://www.lskl.fi/tiedotaa/tiedotusvalineille/tiedotteet/tiedonkulun\_ongelmat\_lastensuojelussa\_selvitettava.2640.news>

- Homepage of Helsinkimissio. Viewed on 28 September 2012.
<<http://www.helsinkimissio.fi/?sid=442>>
- Homepage of Ihmisoikeudet.net. Viewed on 17 September 2012.
<<http://www.ihmisoikeudet.net/>>
- Homepage of Ihmisoikeudet.net. Viewed on 18 September 2012.
<<http://www.ihmisoikeudet.net/index.php?page=mista-on-kysymys>>
- Homepage of Rape Crisis Centre Tukinainen. Last viewed on 17 September 2012.
<http://174.132.188.98/~tnainen/in\_english>
- Homepage of RAY. Viewed on 17 September 2012.
<<https://www.ray.fi/en/beneficiaries/results/facts>>
- Homepage of Sexpo Foundation. Viewed on 18 September 2012.
<<http://www.sexpo.fi/sexpo-in-english/>>
- Homepage of the Council of Europe, Treaty Office (Council of Europe Convention on the Protection of Children Against Sexual Exploitation and Sexual Abuse). Viewed on 7 November 2012.
<<http://conventions.coe.int/Treaty/Commun/ChercheSig.asp?NT=201&CM=8&DF=22/08/2012&CL=ENG>>
- Homepage of the Democracy Data Bank. Viewed on 7 November 2012.
<<http://www.kansanvalta.fi/Etusivu/Kansalaisvaikuttaminen/Paatoksentekeoonosallistuminen/Lainvalmisteluunosallistuminen>>
- Homepage of the Family Federation. Viewed on 28 September 2012.
<http://www.vaestoliitto.fi/in\_english/>
- Homepage of the Finland's biggest newspaper, Helsingin Sanomat. Viewed on 24 August, 2012.
<<http://www.hs.fi/kotimaa/Pedofiileille+ehk%C3%A4+ennalta+ehk%C3%A4isev%C3%A4%hoitoa/a1305595140411>>
- Homepage of Finland's Delfins Association. Viewed 7 November 2012.
<http://www.suomendelfins.fi/index.php?option=com\_content&view=article&id=73&Itemid=57>
- Homepage of the Finnish Medical Society Duodecim. Viewed on 13 September 2012.
<<http://www.duodecim.fi/web/english/home>>

Homepage of the Finnish Police. Viewed on 30 October 2012.
<<http://www.poliisi.fi/poliisi/home.nsf/pages/E23ED9E330FA6185C2256BBA0038694C?opendocument>>

Homepage of the group monitoring discrimination. Viewed on 7 November 2012.
<www.yhdenvertaisuus.fi>

Homepage of the Government of Finland. Viewed on 4 September 2012.
<www.government.fi>

Homepage of the Helsinki Police Department. Viewed on 10 November 2012.
<http://www.poliisi.fi/poliisi/helsinki/home.nsf/files/090BDA4507957157C22579A30035D002/\$file/Seksuaalinenh%C3%A4irint%C3%A4web2011\_eng.pdf>

Homepage of the Mannerheim League for Child Welfare. Viewed on 17 September 2012.
<<http://www.mll.fi/en/>>

Homepage of the National Bureau of Investigation. Viewed on 7 November 2012.
<<http://www.poliisi.fi/poliisi/krp/home.nsf/pages/A12612E6A0B3A1EB C2257549003F446E>>

Homepage of the Office of the Chancellor of Justice. Viewed on 19 August 2012.
<www.okv.fi>

Homepage of the Ombudsman for Children in Finland. Viewed on 20 August 2012.
<www.lapsiasia.fi>

Homepage of the Parliamentary Ombudsman. Viewed on 19 August 2012.
<www.oikeusasiamies.fi>

Homepage of United Nations, Treaty collection. Viewed on 7 November 2012.
<<http://treaties.un.org/Home.aspx?lang=en>>

Homepage of Victim Support Finland. Viewed on 11 October 2012.
<<http://www.riku.fi/fi/victim+support/>>

Homepage of Women's Line. Viewed on 28 September 2012.
<<https://www.naistenlinja.fi/en/public/how+can+we+help+you/>>

- Homepage of Women's Line. Viewed on 28 September 2012.
<<https://www.naistenlinja.fi/en/public/how+can+we+help+you/net+aid+for+women/>>
- Homepage of Åbo Akademi.. Viewed on 17 September 2012.
<<http://www.abo.fi/forskning/en>>
- Ministry of Justice public portal. Viewed on 18 September 2012.
<<http://www.om.fi/Etusivu/Valmisteilla/Kehittamishankkeita/1330603625912>>
- Ministry of Social Affairs and Health public portal. Viewed on 18 September 2012.
<http://www.stm.fi/sosiaali\_ja\_terveyspalvelut/asiakkaanoikeudet/hoitoon\_paasy>
- Ministry of Social Affairs and Health public portal. Viewed on 18 September 2012.
<http://www.stm.fi/julkaisut/nayta/-/\_julkaisu/1058703>
- National Institute for Health and Welfare public portal. Viewed on 18 September 2012.
<http://www.thl.fi/fi\_FI/web/fi/aiheet/tietopaketit/amis/seksuaaliterveys/opiskeluterveydenhuolto>
- National Institute for Health and Welfare public portal. Viewed on 18 September 2012.
<http://www.thl.fi/fi\_FI/web/fi/aiheet/tietopaketit/amis/seksuaaliterveys/seksuaalikasvatus>
- The Criminal Sanctions Agency public portal. Viewed on 1 September 2012.
<www.rikosseuraamus.fi/6349.htm>
- The Legal Register Centre public portal. Viewed on 3 September 2012.
<www.oikeus.fi/oikeusrekisterikeskus>
- The News Archive for Åbo Akademi. Viewed on 7 November 2012.
<www.abo.fi/public/fi/News/Item/item/4484>

Interviews

Phone interview with Chief Inspector Jaakko Ridanpää from the National Bureau of Investigation, 7 November 2012.

Phone interview with Detective Inspector Jyri Hiltunen from the Helsinki Police Department, 7 November 2012.

Phone interview with researcher Peter Blomster from the Criminal Sanctions Agency, 7 September 2012.

Phone interview with special researcher of Åbo Akademi Katarina Alanko, 9 October 2012.

Phone interview with the head of training division and a psychotherapist of Sexpo-foundation Jussi Nissinen, 9 October 2012.

Phone interview with Counsellor of Legislation of the Ministry of Justice Janne Kanerva, 24 August 2012.

ELSA GERMANY

I Introduction.....	401
1 General .....	401
2 The Lanzarote Convention.....	411
II National Legislation .....	412
1 General Principles Of The Jurisdiction .....	413
2 Substantive Criminal Law .....	416
2.1 Sexual Abuse.....	417
2.2 Child Prostitution .....	431
2.3 Child Pornography .....	434
2.4 Corruption of Children.....	441
2.5 Solicitation of Children for Sexual Purposes .....	443
2.6 Corporate Liability.....	448
2.7 Aggravating Circumstances .....	449
2.8 Sanctions and Measures .....	450
3 Criminal Procedure .....	452
3.1 Investigation .....	452
3.2 Complaint Procedure .....	459
4 Complementary Measures.....	460
III National Policy Regarding Children.....	462
IV Other.....	470
V Conclusion.....	470

National Researchers

Eva-Maria Bauer

Helena Krüger

Laura Jones

Maximilian Voigt

Karina Wagner

Timo Heller

Jannik Zerbst

Academic Adviser

Prof. Joachim Renzikowski

National Coordinator

Tino Boche

I INTRODUCTION

1 GENERAL

Equal Rights

- xiv. As in many countries, also in Germany discrimination in every day life is an issue.<sup>1</sup> Due to the fact that this general introduction is not meant to give a complete documentation of discrimination problems, only a few aspects will be highlighted.<sup>2</sup> Over the last years, several measures on an international and national level have been taken to avoid discrimination. One of them is the General Equal Treatment Act (Allgemeines Gleichbehandlungsgesetz) which was adopted in 2006 with the aim of avoiding discrimination on grounds of age, disability, ethnic origin, sex, religion and sexual identity in the areas of civil, tax, employment as well as procedural law.<sup>3</sup> After the law entered into force the so-called Federal Anti-discrimination Agency (Antidiskriminierungsstelle des Bundes) was established, an independent focal point to which persons affected by discrimination may turn.<sup>4</sup> Besides its advisory services the agency tries to encourage people to report discrimination.<sup>5</sup> The Federal Anti-

---

<sup>1</sup> Federal Anti-Discrimination Agency, Gemeinsamer Bericht der Antidiskriminierungsstelle des Bundes und der in ihrem Zuständigkeitsbereich betroffenen Beauftragten der Bundesregierung und des Deutschen Bundestage, Federal Anti-Discrimination Agency, December 2010, 17/09/2012, http://www.antidiskriminierungsstelle.de/SharedDocs/Downloads/DE/publikationen/gemeinsamer\_bericht\_ads\_.pdf?\_\_blob=publicationFile.

<sup>2</sup> For further and more detailed information see: European Union Agency for Fundamental Rights, The Annual Report 2011 – Fundamental rights: challenges and achievements in 2011, Publications Office of the European Union, 2012, 17/09/2012, http://fra.europa.eu/fraWebsite/attachments/FRA-2012\_Annual-Report-2011\_EN.pdf, p. 123ff.; ECPAT International, Global Monitoring report on the status of action against commercial sexual exploitation of children, ECPAT International, 2012, 17/09/2012, http://www.ecpat.de/uploads/media/Global\_Monitoring\_Report-GERMANY\_aktuell.pdf, p. 8ff.; Federal Anti-Discrimination Agency, Research Project – Discrimination in Everyday Life, Perceptions of Discrimination and Anti-Discrimination Policy in our Society, Federal Anti-Discrimination Agency, Heidelberg, July 2008, 18/09/2012, http://www.antidiskriminierungsstelle.de/SharedDocs/Downloads/DE/publikationen/forschungsprojekt\_diskriminierung\_im\_alltag.pdf?\_\_blob=publicationFile; European Union Agency for Fundamental Rights, Fundamental rights of migrants in an irregular situation in the European Union, Vienna, 2011, 18/09/2012, http://fra.europa.eu/fraWebsite/attachments/FRA\_2011\_Migrants\_in\_an\_irregular\_situation\_EN.pdf.

<sup>3</sup> General Equal Treatment Act (Allgemeines Gleichbehandlungsgesetz) of 14 August 2006, last amended by the Act of 5 February 2009 (Federal Law Gazette I p. 160).

<sup>4</sup> Federal Anti-Discrimination Agency, 2012, 17/09/2012, http://www.antidiskriminierungsstelle.de/EN/AboutUs/Tasks/Research/research\_node.html.

<sup>5</sup> Federal Anti-Discrimination Agency, 2012, 17/09/2012, http://www.antidiskriminierungsstelle.de/EN/AboutUs/Tasks/PublicRelationsWork/public\_relations\_work\_node.html.

Discrimination Agency uses the collected data to work out statistics on all grounds of discrimination and submits a detailed report to the German Bundestag every four years “detailing cases of discrimination and [making] recommendations on how to eliminate and prevent discrimination”<sup>6</sup>. In spite of these comprehensive measures discrimination problems still exist and are even caused by legislation and the authorities.<sup>7</sup> Like their parents who are often discriminated in various areas of social life, such as in jobs, shops, housing and healthcare,<sup>8</sup> especially children with a migrant background are being discriminated regarding their religion, ethnical origin and sex<sup>9</sup>. In particular, ethnic discrimination in education is a problem, as a survey from 2010 among 1,000 adults of Turkish origin living in North Rhine-Westphalia showed: 81 % of the respondents claimed to have been victims of ethnic discrimination, with rates of 60.3 % in schools and universities.<sup>10</sup> Also the situation of Roma minorities has caught the eye of legislation:<sup>11</sup> in a research on the educational situation of Roma in Germany that was conducted between 2007 and 2011 by the Centre for Culture, Education, and Antiziganism Research, 81.2 % of the 275 interviewed Roma reported personal experiences of discrimination<sup>12</sup>. These “experiences in school are to a great <sup>8</sup> Some victims with migrant background also reported they have been discriminated by German authorities such as employment agencies, job centres, foreigners’ registration offices and even police stations. - M. Schlaab, op. cit., p. 30.

---

<sup>6</sup> Federal Anti-Discrimination Agency, 2012, 17/09/2012, http://www.antidiskriminierungsstelle.de/EN/AboutUs/Tasks/Research/research\_node.html.

<sup>7</sup> M. Schlaab, ‘Realität der Diskriminierung in Deutschland - Vermutung und Fakten’, Rassismus & Diskriminierung in Deutschland - Dossier, Heinrich Böll Stiftung, Berlin, April 2010, 18/09/2012, http://www.migration-boell.de/downloads/diversity/Dossier\_Rassismus\_und\_Diskriminierung.pdf, p. 28ff.

<sup>9</sup> Federal Anti-Discrimination Agency, Gemeinsamer Bericht der Antidiskriminierungsstelle des Bundes und der in ihrem Zuständigkeitsbereich betroffenen Beauftragten der Bundesregierung und des Deutschen Bundestages, Federal Anti-Discrimination Agency, December 2010, 18/09/2012, http://www.antidiskriminierungsstelle.de/SharedDocs/Downloads/DE/publikationen/gemeinsamer\_bericht\_ads\_.pdf?\_\_blob=publicationFile, p. 63f.

<sup>10</sup> European Union Agency for Fundamental Rights, The Annual Report 2011 – Fundamental rights: challenges and achievements in 2011, Publications Office of the European Union, 2012, 17/09/2012, http://fra.europa.eu/fraWebsite/attachments/FRA-2012\_Annual-Report-2011\_EN.pdf, p. 164.; see also: M. Sauer, Teilhabe und Orientierungen türkeistämmiger Migrantinnen und Migranten in Nordrhein-Westfalen – Ergebnisse der zehnten Mehrthemenbefragung 2009, Stiftung Zentrum für Türkeistudien, Essen, 2009, <http://www.zfti.de>, p. 146ff.

<sup>11</sup> German Bundestag, Diskriminierung von Sinti und Roma entgegengetreten, 2011, 18/09/2012, http://www.bundestag.de/dokumente/textarchiv/2011/33855136\_kw12\_de\_sinti\_roma/index.html; Bundestag document No. 17/5191 of 21 March 2011, 21/03/2011, 18/09/2012, <http://dipbt.bundestag.de/dip21/btd/17/051/1705191.pdf>.

<sup>12</sup> D. Strauß [ed.], Study on the Current Educational Situation of German Sinti and Roma - Documentation and Research Report, RomnoKher - Centre for Culture, Education, and Antiziganism Research (RomnoKher - Ein Haus für Kultur, Bildung und Antiziganismusforschung) 2011, 18/09/2012, http://www.antiziganismus.de/resources/2011\_Strauss\_German\_SintiRoma\_Summary.pdf, p. 7.

extent affected by overt and covert discrimination in the form of everyday antiziganistic name-calling and prejudices on the part of individual pupils”<sup>13</sup>. Another discrimination problem concerning migrants is the situation of refugee children in Germany, especially the treatment of unaccompanied refugee children in asylum proceedings, as explained in more detail below (see Chapter I., 1., iv.). Apart from foreigners, children from German low-income families are affected by discrimination as well.<sup>14</sup> The chance of attending grammar school and therefore getting access to higher education depends, as a recent study has shown, less on the academic achievements of those children than on the socioeconomic background of their parents.<sup>15</sup> A positive development, however, is the general awareness of legislation regarding discrimination of homosexual youths,<sup>16</sup> which is - despite of a growing acceptance - still an issue within society.<sup>17</sup> Even though these examples cannot possibly represent all difficulties regarding discrimination, they nevertheless illustrate at least two important aspects: on one hand the fact that there are social groups affected by discrimination in Germany but also on the other hand the general awareness of this issue within society as well as Germany’s serious attempt not to turn a blind eye to those problems but to overcome them.

---

<sup>13</sup> ibid.

<sup>14</sup> German Children’s Fund (Deutsches Kinderhilfswerk e. V.), Für mehr Bildungsgerechtigkeit – Deutsches Kinderhilfswerk fordert Chancengleichheit im Bildungswesen und längeres gemeinsames Lernen in der Schule, Deutsches Kinderhilfswerk e. V., 2012, 18/09/2012, <http://www.dkhw.de/cms/themen-projekte/kinderpolitik/aktuelles-kinderpolitik/648-fuer-mehr-bildungsgerechtigkeit-deutsches-kinderhilfswerk-fordert-chancengleichheit-im-bildungswesen-und-laengeres-gemeinsames-lernen-in-der-schule>; UNICEF Germany (UNICEF Deutschland), UNICEF-Vergleichsstudie 2012: Reiche Länder - arme Kinder - Neuartige Analyse zu Kinderarmut - Ergebnis für Deutschland enttäuschend, UNICEF Deutschland, 29/05/2012, 18/09/2012, <http://www.unicef.de/presse/2012/vergleichsstudie-kinderarmut/>.

<sup>15</sup> J. Uhlig/ H. Solga/ J. Schupp, Ungleiche Bildungschancen: Welche Rolle spielen Underachievement und Persönlichkeitsstruktur dabei?, Social Science Research Center Berlin (Wissenschaftszentrum Berlin für Sozialforschung), April 2009, 18/09/2012, <http://bibliothek.wzb.eu/pdf/2009/i09-503.pdf>, p. 11f.

<sup>16</sup> German Bundestag, Im Bundestag notiert: Situation homosexueller Jugendlicher, 26/07/2010, 18/09/2012, http://www.bundestag.de/presse/hib/2010\_07/2010\_258/06.html; Bundestag document No. 17/2348 of 29 June 2010, 29/06/2010, 18/09/2012, <http://dip21.bundestag.de/dip21/btd/17/023/1702348.pdf>, p. 1.

<sup>17</sup> According to a study of the Federal Anti-Discrimination Agency a large number of children is affected by discrimination regarding their sexual orientation at school. - Federal Anti-Discrimination Agency, Gemeinsamer Bericht der Antidiskriminierungsstelle des Bundes und der in ihrem Zuständigkeitsbereich betroffenen Beauftragten der Bundesregierung und des Deutschen Bundestages, Federal Anti-Discrimination Agency, December 2010, 18/09/2012, http://www.antidiskriminierungsstelle.de/SharedDocs/Downloads/DE/publikationen/gemeinsamer\_bericht\_ads\_.pdf?\_\_blob=publicationFile, p. 63f.

Family Protection

- xv. According to Article 6(1) of the Basic Law for the Federal Republic of Germany (German Constitution) “marriage and the family shall enjoy the special protection of the state”<sup>18</sup>. The case-law of the Federal Constitutional Court of Germany has consistently defined the term family as “a community of parents with children. In this connection it is not significant whether the children are the children by birth of the parents and whether they are legitimate or illegitimate [...]. Family is the actual long-term and upbringing relationship between children and parents who are responsible for the children. If the child lives together with both parents, they form a family together. If this is not the case, but both parents in fact bear responsibility for the child, the child has two families [...]: the family with the mother and the family with the father [...]”<sup>19</sup>

The definition also covers the relationship between parents and their grownup children as well as relationships of homosexual parents, who live in a registered civil partnership, and their children.<sup>20</sup> In addition it must be said that, particularly with regard to the jurisdiction of the European Court of Human Rights, the term family may not be restricted to that of a nuclear family, even though the Federal Constitutional Court of Germany has constantly taken the opposite view.<sup>21</sup>

Regarding the constitutional right of marriage Article 6(1) protects “the union of a man and a woman meaning a long-term relationship formed by their free decision involving national authorities”<sup>22</sup>, particularly marriage registrars<sup>23</sup>. Marriages that are

---

<sup>18</sup> Basic Law for the Federal Republic of Germany (in the revised version published in the Federal Law Gazette Part III, classification number 100-1, as last amended by the Act of 21 July 2010 (Federal Law Gazette I p. 944)) translated by Professor Christian Tomuschat and Professor David P. Currie in cooperation with the Language Service of the German Bundestag, Juris GmBH, 2012, 12/09/2012, http://www.gesetze-iminternet.de/englisch\_gg/englisch\_gg.html.

<sup>19</sup> Federal Constitutional Court of Germany, Order of the First Senate of 9 April 2003, 12/09/2012: BVerfG, 1 BvR 1493/96 of 09/04/2003, paragraphs no. 90, http://www.bverfg.de/entscheidungen/rs20030409\_1bvr149396en.html.

<sup>20</sup> H. D. Jarass, GG - Grundgesetz für die Bundesrepublik Deutschland - Kommentar, C. H. Beck, München, 2012, p. 243, marginal no. 9.

<sup>21</sup> Jarass, op. cit., p. 243, marginal no. 10.

<sup>22</sup> cf., Federal Constitutional Court of Germany, Order of the First Senate of 6 December 2005, 13/09/2012: BVerfG, 1 BvL 3/03 of 06/12/2005, paragraphs no. 60, http://www.bverfg.de/entscheidungen/l20051206\_1bvl000303.html.

<sup>23</sup> Jarass, op. cit., p. 242, marginal no. 4.

celebrated abroad or under a foreign legal system are protected as well.<sup>24</sup> Same-sex unions, so-called registered partnerships, however, as well as cohabitations, are excluded from the protection provided by Article 6(1).<sup>25</sup> Besides, only monogamy is protected whereas polygamy is illegal.<sup>26</sup> According to the Federal Statistical Office of Germany in 2010 the average marital age of men is 33.2 years, of women 30.3 years.<sup>27</sup> Arising from its constitutional obligation to protect marriage and the family as anchored in Article 6(1) the state is obliged not only to take appropriate measures of protection but also measures of support.<sup>28</sup> Such measures are tax benefits, public provision of childcare, child benefit or orphans pension, to name just a few.<sup>29</sup> Besides there are other basic rights and state duties anchored in Article 6, such as the care and upbringing of children as a natural right and duty of parents, which is secured by the constitutional obligation of the state to “watch over them in the performance of [their] duty”,<sup>30</sup> or the right of every mother to protection and care of the community<sup>31</sup>. Furthermore, Article 6(4) states that children “may be separated from their families against the will of their parents or guardians only pursuant to a law and only if the parents or guardians fail in their duties or the children are otherwise in danger of serious neglect”<sup>32</sup>. The last paragraph of Article 6 contains the right of illegitimate children to be provided by legislation with the same opportunities for physical and mental development and position in society as enjoyed by those born within marriage.

Child Protection

---

<sup>24</sup> ibid.

<sup>25</sup> cf., Federal Constitutional Court of Germany, Order of the First Senate of 17 July 2002, 13/09/2012: BVerfG, 1 BvF 1/01 of 17/07/2002, paragraphs no. 20, http://www.bverfg.de/entscheidungen/fs20020717\_1bvf000101en.html; cf., Federal Constitutional Court of Germany, Order of the First Senate of 9 November 2004, 13/09/2012: BVerfG, 1 BvR 684/98 of 09/11/2004, paragraphs no. 48, http://www.bverfg.de/entscheidungen/rs20041109\_1bvr068498.html.

<sup>26</sup> cf., Federal Constitutional Court of Germany, Order of the First Senate of 30 November 1982, BVerfG, 1 BvR 818/81 of 30/11/1982, see BVerfGE 62, 323/330.

<sup>27</sup> The Federal Statistical Office, 2012, 12/09/2012, https://www.destatis.de/DE/ZahlenFakten/GesellschaftStaat/Bevoelkerung/Eheschliessungen/Tabellen/Ehe\_schliessungenScheidungen.html.

<sup>28</sup> cf., Federal Constitutional Court of Germany, Order of the First Senate of 17 July 2002, 13/09/2012: BVerfG, 1 BvF 1/01 of 17/07/2002, paragraphs no. 90, http://www.bverfg.de/entscheidungen/fs20020717\_1bvf000101en.html.

<sup>29</sup> Jarass, op. cit., p. 245f.

<sup>30</sup> Article 6(2) Basic Law for the Federal Republic of Germany.

<sup>31</sup> Article 6(4) Basic Law for the Federal Republic of Germany.

<sup>32</sup> Article 6(3) Basic Law for the Federal Republic of Germany.

xvi. Even though children's rights are not explicitly part of the German Constitution - a fact that is constantly criticised<sup>33</sup> - they are widely acknowledged in legislation and by the German authorities. The Federal Republic of Germany is a party to several international Conventions aiming to protect children's rights (see I. 1. iv./v. and I. 2.). Therefore many steps in national legislation have been taken to honour the international commitments, for example the so-called National Action Plan for a Germany fit for children 2005-2010 which includes numerous measures to secure e. g. a non-violent upbringing, equal opportunities through education, an adequate standard of living and healthy environmental conditions for all children.<sup>34</sup> In 2010 Germany was shocked by a scandal involving especially catholic institutions and private schools in cases of sexual abuse and violation of children which occurred primarily in the 1980s and 1990s, causing a huge public discussion throughout society, politics and the media about children's rights and their protection from sexual violence.<sup>35</sup> In consequence, the German Government instituted the Runden Tisch gegen Kindesmissbrauch (The round table against child abuse), a council consisting of three ministers, politicians, jurists, physicians, and representatives of the churches and other institutions, to improve the protection of children and teenagers from sexual violence.<sup>36</sup> The council's final statement<sup>37</sup> resulted in the Action Plan 2011 of the Federal Government on the protection of children<sup>38</sup> in which a general concept was developed, and

<sup>33</sup> Bundestag document No. 17/6920 of 6 September 2011, 06/09/2011, 16/09/2012, <http://dipbt.bundestag.de/dip21/btd/17/069/1706920.pdf>; Bundestag document No. 17/7644 of 9 November 2011, 09/11/2011, 16/09/2012, <http://dipbt.bundestag.de/dip21/btd/17/076/1707644.pdf>.

<sup>34</sup> Federal Government of Germany, National Action Plan for a Germany fit for children 2005-2010, Federal Ministry for Family Affairs, Senior Citizens, Women and Youth, January 2005, 16/09/2012, http://www.national-coalition.de/pdf/nap-Germany05\_englischpdf.pdf.

<sup>35</sup> T. Schultz, Sexueller Missbrauch an der Odenwaldschule - Hier war alles erlaubt, Süddeutsche.de, 27/09/2011, 16/09/2012, <http://www.sueddeutsche.de/kultur/sexueller-missbrauch-an-der-odenwaldschule-hier-war-alles-erlaubt-1.1149680>; M. Küpper/ M. K. Wagner, Vorwürfe gegen Jesuiten-Pater – Missbrauchsskandal weitet sich aus, Frankfurter Allgemeine Zeitung, 01/02/2010, 16/09/2012, <http://www.faz.net/aktuell/gesellschaft/kriminalitaet/vorwuerte-gegen-jesuiten-pater-missbrauchsskandal-weitet-sich-aus-1912846.html>.

<sup>36</sup> Federal Government of Germany, Runder Tisch Sexueller Kindesmissbrauch in Abhängigkeits- und Machtverhältnissen in privaten und öffentlichen Einrichtungen und im familiären Bereich, Federal Ministry for Family Affairs, Senior Citizens, Women and Youth, December 2011, 16/09/2012, <http://www.rundertisch-kindesmissbrauch.de/documents/111130AbschlussberichtRTKM111213.pdf>, p. 2ff.

<sup>37</sup> Bundestag document No. 17/8117 of 9 December 2011, 09/12/2011, 16/09/2012, <http://dip21.bundestag.de/dip21/btd/17/081/1708117.pdf>.

<sup>38</sup> Federal Government of Germany, Aktionsplan 2011 der Bundesregierung zum Schutz von Kindern und Jugendlichen vor sexueller Gewalt und Ausbeutung, Federal Ministry for Family Affairs, Senior Citizens, Women and Youth, September 2011, 16/09/2012, <http://www.bmfsfj.de/RedaktionBMFSFJ/Abteilung5/Pdf-Anlagen/aktionsplan-2011,property=pdf,bereich=bmfsfj,sprache=de,rwb=true.pdf>.

concrete actions were defined<sup>39</sup> focusing on the fields of prevention, intervention, communication, education and international cooperation<sup>40</sup>. In addition to that, a working group of experts was appointed to monitor implementation and correct undesirable developments.<sup>41</sup> Furthermore, a Federal Law on Child Protection (Bundeskinderschutzgesetz) was passed which came into effect on 1 January 2012.<sup>42</sup>

International Obligations

- xvii. Referring to Article 25 of the Basic Law, “the general rules of international law shall be an integral part of federal law. They shall take precedence over the laws and directly create rights and duties for the inhabitants of the federal territory”<sup>43</sup>. Even though it might seem as if the German legal system is monistic, the opposite is the case.<sup>44</sup> After a long academic discussion concerning the relationship between state law and international law the current prevailing view in German jurisdiction and experts’ literature distinguishes strictly between both legal systems, even though they overlap in many cases.<sup>45</sup> Therefore, it is spoken of a moderate dualism.<sup>46</sup> In consequence, an order is needed, which decrees that the international law should be applicable in domestic law.<sup>47</sup> Article 25 of the Basic Law, however, orders to apply to “general rules of international law”. According to the unanimous view of the judges of the Federal Constitutional Court of Germany, general rules of international law within the meaning of Article 25 are “rules of universally applicable customary international law, supplemented by the traditional general legal principles of national legal orders.”<sup>48</sup>

<sup>39</sup> Federal Government of Germany, Kinder und Jugendliche besser schützen, Federal Government of Germany, 27/09/2011, 16/09/2012, <http://www.bundesregierung.de/Content/DE/Artikel/2011/09/2011-09-27-kabinett-aktionsplan-2011.html>.

<sup>40</sup> Federal Government of Germany, Aktionsplan 2011 der Bundesregierung zum Schutz von Kindern und Jugendlichen vor sexueller Gewalt und Ausbeutung, Federal Ministry for Family Affairs, Senior Citizens, Women and Youth, September 2011, 16/09/2012, <http://www.bmfsfj.de/RedaktionBMFSFJ/Abteilung5/Pdf-Anlagen/aktionsplan-2011,property=pdf,bereich=bmfsfj,sprache=de,rwb=true.pdf>, p. 3.

<sup>41</sup> Federal Government of Germany, Kinder und Jugendliche besser schützen, Federal Government of Germany, 27/09/2011, 16/09/2012, <http://www.bundesregierung.de/Content/DE/Artikel/2011/09/2011-09-27-kabinett-aktionsplan-2011.html>.

<sup>42</sup> Federal Law Gazette Part I, classification number 70, as last amended by the Act of 22 December 2011 (Federal Law Gazette I p. 2975).

<sup>43</sup> Basic Law for the Federal Republic of Germany, op. cit., 13/09/2012, http://www.gesetze-im-internet.de/englisch\_gg/englisch\_gg.html.

<sup>44</sup> M. Herdegen, Völkerrecht, C. H. Beck, München, 2012, p. 164.

<sup>45</sup> ibid.

<sup>46</sup> ibid.

<sup>47</sup> M. Herdegen, op. cit., p. 165.

<sup>48</sup> Federal Constitutional Court of Germany, Order of the Second Senate of 8 May 2007, 13/09/2012:

According to the Court's decision such a rule is regarded as being general "if it is recognised by the vast majority of states"<sup>49</sup>. Those rules of international law covered by Article 25 are directly applicable. On the other hand, Article 25 "does not relate to provisions that are contained in international agreements."<sup>50</sup> For treaties under international law, Article 59(2) of the Basic Law is considered lex specialis in terms of implementation: international treaties must be transposed into the national law by an approval law or legal decree.<sup>51</sup> Following the dualistic approach described above, after its transposition an international treaty has the rank of its act of transposition, usually that of a national law under the German constitution (Basic Law), whereas the general rules of international law within the meaning of Article 25 take precedence over the national laws.<sup>52</sup> Even though international law in Germany does not have the same rank as the constitution, the Federal Constitutional Court of Germany has constantly emphasized the Basic Law's commitment to international law (Völkerrechtsfreundlichkeit):

"the Basic Law encourages both the exercise of state sovereignty through the law of international agreements and international cooperation, and the incorporation of the general rules of public international law, and therefore is, if possible, to be interpreted in such a way that no conflict arises with duties of the Federal Republic of Germany under public international law."<sup>53</sup>

---

BVerfG, 2 BvM 1/03 of 08/05/2007, paragraphs no. 34,
http://www.bverfg.de/entscheidungen/ms20070508\_2bvm000103en.html.

<sup>49</sup> Federal Constitutional Court of Germany, op. cit., paragraphs no. 34.

<sup>50</sup> ibid.

<sup>51</sup> "The law of international agreements applies on the domestic level only when it has been incorporated into the domestic legal system in the proper form and in conformity with substantive constitutional law." - Federal Constitutional Court of Germany, Order of the Second Senate of 14 October 2004, 14/09/2012: BVerfG, 2 BvR 1481/04 of 14/10/2004, paragraphs no. 36,
http://www.bverfg.de/entscheidungen/rs20041014\_2bvr148104.en.html.

<sup>52</sup> "The Basic Law has granted the general rules of public international law priority over ordinary statute law (Article 25 sentence 2 of the Basic Law) and has integrated the law of international agreements, by Article 59.2 of the Basic Law, into the system of the separation of powers." - Federal Constitutional Court of Germany, Order of the Second Senate of 14 October 2004, 14/09/2012: BVerfG, 2 BvR 1481/04 of 14/10/2004, paragraphs no. 33, http://www.bverfg.de/entscheidungen/rs20041014\_2bvr148104.en.html. M. Herdegen, op. cit., p. 168.

<sup>53</sup> ibid.; for further information see: Federal Constitutional Court - Press office, press release no. 92/2004 of 19. October 2004 on the order of 14. October 2004 - 2 BvR 1481/04, 14/09/2012, <http://www.bundesverfassungsgericht.net/en/press/bvg04-092en.html>.

On this theoretical basis it is therefore not surprising that the Federal Republic of Germany declared upon ratification of the United Nations Convention on Rights of the Child (UNCRC) on 6 March 1992<sup>54</sup> the following:

“The Federal Republic of Germany [...] declares that domestically the Convention does not apply directly. It establishes state obligations under international law that the Federal Republic of Germany fulfils in accordance with its national law, which conforms with the Convention.”<sup>55</sup>

Despite of this declaration the Federal Republic of Germany made another reservation to the UNCRC regarding its right “to pass laws and regulations concerning the entry of aliens and the conditions of their stay or to make a distinction between nationals and aliens.”<sup>56</sup> This reservation was widely criticised for its discriminatory effects especially on children of refugees and migrants.<sup>57</sup> However on 3 May 2010, the Government of the Federal Republic of Germany decided to withdraw its reservations made upon ratification,<sup>58</sup> and notified its decision to the United Nations on 15 July 2010<sup>59</sup>. Nevertheless, the unconditional recognition of the UNCRC itself does not mean its implementation is completed.<sup>60</sup> In particular the treatment of unaccompanied refugee children in Germany is still causing huge

---

<sup>54</sup> UN Treaty Collection, 14/09/2012, 14/09/2012, [http://treaties.un.org/Pages/ViewDetails.aspx?src=TREATY& mtdsg\_no=IV-11&chapter=4&lang=en](http://treaties.un.org/Pages/ViewDetails.aspx?src=TREATY& mtdsg_no=IV-11&chapter=4&lang=en).

<sup>55</sup> UN Treaty Collection, 14/09/2012, 14/09/2012, [http://treaties.un.org/Pages/ViewDetails.aspx?src=TREATY& mtdsg\_no=IV-11&chapter=4&lang=en#32](http://treaties.un.org/Pages/ViewDetails.aspx?src=TREATY& mtdsg_no=IV-11&chapter=4&lang=en#32).

<sup>56</sup> UN Treaty Collection, 14/09/2012, 14/09/2012, [http://treaties.un.org/Pages/ViewDetails.aspx?src=TREATY& mtdsg\_no=IV-11&chapter=4&lang=en#30](http://treaties.un.org/Pages/ViewDetails.aspx?src=TREATY& mtdsg_no=IV-11&chapter=4&lang=en#30).

<sup>57</sup> UNICEF Deutschland, Deutschland und die UN-Kinderrechtskonvention, UNICEF Deutschland, 2012, 14/09/2012, <http://www.unicef.de/aktionen/kinderrechte20/kinderrechte-in-deutschland/>.

<sup>58</sup> Press Office of the German Federal Ministry of Justice, Pressemitteilung: Großer Tag für Kinderrechte, German Federal Ministry of Justice, 03/05/2010, 11/09/2012, http://www.bmj.de/SharedDocs/Pressemitteilungen/DE/2010/20100503\_Großer\_Tag\_fuer\_die\_Kinderrechte.html.

<sup>59</sup> UN Treaty Collection, 12/09/2012, 12/09/2012, [http://treaties.un.org/Pages/ViewDetails.aspx?src=TREATY& mtdsg\_no=IV-11&chapter=4&lang=en#30](http://treaties.un.org/Pages/ViewDetails.aspx?src=TREATY& mtdsg_no=IV-11&chapter=4&lang=en#30); q. v. Press Office of the German Federal Ministry of Justice, Pressemitteilung: UN-Kinderrechtskonvention - Rücknahme des Vorbehalts rechtswirksam, 15/07/2010, 12/09/2012, http://www.bmj.de/SharedDocs/Pressemitteilungen/DE/2010/20100715\_UN\_Kinderrechtskonvention\_Ruecknahme\_des\_Vorbehalts\_rechtswirksam.html.

<sup>60</sup> German Bundestag - Committee on Human Rights and Hummanitarian Aid, Opposition: Rechtliche Konsequenzen aus Rücknahme des Vorbehalts zur Kinderrechtskonvention notwendig, German Bundestag, 02/12/2010, 14/12/2012, http://www.bundestag.de/presse/hib/2010\_12/2010\_401/02.html.

difficulties.<sup>61</sup> In opinion of the UN Committee on the Rights of the Child most of them are not awarded adequate protection especially in asylum proceedings and, moreover, have “insufficient access to specialised professionals, who can provide multidisciplinary assistance for their physical and psychological recovery and social reintegration in Germany.”<sup>62</sup> These conditions have been repeatedly and heavily criticised by opposition and human rights organisations.<sup>63</sup> On the other hand, there are many positive aspects regarding the implementation of the UNCRC in Germany which should be mentioned: as a result of the Second Special Session of the UN General Assembly on Children 2002 the German Government initiated the National Action Plan for a Germany fit for children 2005-2010 which should secure the implementation of the UNCRC by supporting the situation of children and their rights in all areas of life<sup>64</sup>. To monitor the implementation procedures an alliance was formed in May 1995, which followed the example of other states and consists of more than 110 organisations and associations at present.<sup>65</sup> This so-called National Coalition for Implementation of the UNCRC in Germany promotes the realisation of children’s rights, highlights the shortcomings in implementing the UNCRC and most importantly submits ‘shadow reports’ - a supplementary report on the reports of the Federal Republic of Germany to the United Nations<sup>66,67</sup>. As it seems there is also a

<sup>61</sup> German Bundestag - Committee on Family Affairs, Senior Citizens, Women and Youth, Kritik an mangelnder Umsetzung der UN-Kinderrechtskonvention in Deutschland, German Bundestag, 08/02/2012, 14/09/2012, http://www.bundestag.de/presse/hib/2012\_02/2012\_072/02.html.

<sup>62</sup> UN Committee on the Rights of the Child (CRC), Consideration of reports submitted by States parties under article 8 of the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the Involvement of Children in Armed Conflict : concluding observations : Germany, UN Committee on the Rights of the Child, 13/02/2008, 14/09/2012, <http://www.unhcr.org/refworld/publisher,CRC,CONC/OBSERVATIONS,DEU,47bc38a72,0.html>, p. 4.

<sup>63</sup> German Bundestag - Committee on Family Affairs, Senior Citizens, Women and Youth, Kritik an mangelnder Umsetzung der UN-Kinderrechtskonvention in Deutschland, German Bundestag, 08/02/2012, 14/09/2012, http://www.bundestag.de/presse/hib/2012\_02/2012\_072/02.html.

<sup>64</sup> Federal Government of Germany, National Action Plan for a Germany fit for children 2005-2010, Federal Ministry for Family Affairs, Senior Citizens, Women and Youth, January 2005, 16/09/2012, http://www.national-coalition.de/pdf/nap-Germany05\_englischpdf.pdf.

<sup>65</sup> J. Huland/C. Kittel/K. Schweder, National Coalition for Implementation of the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child in Germany, National Coalition for Implementation of the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child in Germany, Berlin 2012, 16/09/2012, http://www.national-coalition.de/pdf/Selbstdarstellung\_2012\_ENG.pdf, p. 5.

<sup>66</sup> National Coalition for Implementation of the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child in Germany, Supplementary Report of the National Coalition - On the Second Report of the Federal Republic of Germany to the United Nations in accordance with Article 44, paragraph 1, letter (b) of the Convention on the Rights of the Child, National Coalition, June 2002, 16/09/2012, <http://www.national-coalition.de/pdf/SuplReportNationalCoalitionGermany.pdf>.

<sup>67</sup> J. Huland/C. Kittel/K. Schweder, op. cit., p. 8.

new awareness of this matter in German Parliament: the Social Democratic Party of Germany recently presented a draft law amending German residence and asylum law.<sup>68</sup> In conclusion it can be said that although huge efforts have been made to fully implement the UNCRC it is most likely that it will still take some time until the implementation procedures are finally completed.

European Obligations

- xviii. As all members of the European Union the Federal Republic of Germany has to implement the Directive 2011/92/EU of the European Parliament and the European Council of 13 December 2011 on combating the sexual abuse and sexual exploitation of children and child pornography. The responsibility for the implementation is carried by the German Federal Ministry of Justice, which is currently involved in the internal coordination and preparation of the further process of implementation.<sup>69</sup> The Directive 2011/92/EU has to be implemented in national law until 18 December 2013.<sup>70</sup>

2 THE LANZAROTE CONVENTION

Apart from its commitment as a member of the European Union the Federal Republic of Germany also honours its obligations as a member of the Council of Europe.

- xix. Therefore, the Federal Republic of Germany signed the European Convention on Human Rights on 4 November 1950. Its ratification followed on 5 December 1952.<sup>71</sup>
- xx. Germany is also a party to the Council of Europe Convention on the Protection of Children against Sexual Exploitation and Sexual Abuse (Lanzarote Convention), which

---

<sup>68</sup> German Bundestag - Committee on Internal Affairs, SPD will Situation Minderjähriger im Aufenthalts- und Asylverfahren verbessern, German Bundestag, 18/04/2012, 14/09/2012, http://www.bundestag.de/presse/hib/2012\_04/2012\_187/01.html; Bundestag document No. 17/9187 of 28 May 2012, 28/03/2012, 14/09/2012, <http://dipbt.bundestag.de/dip21/btd/17/091/1709187.pdf>.

<sup>69</sup> According to information provided by email by the German Federal Ministry of Justice - EU coordination on 18 September 2012.

<sup>70</sup> ibid.

<sup>71</sup> European Court of Human Rights - Public Relation Unit, Country Fact Sheets 1959 – 2010, Council of Europe, 11/2011, 12/09/2012, http://human-rights-convention.org/wp-content/uploads/2011/09/Germany\_en.pdf.

was signed on 25 October 2007<sup>72</sup> without any reservations, declarations or objections made upon signature.<sup>73</sup>

- xxi. In contrast to 23 European signatory countries the Federal Republic of Germany has not ratified the Lanzarote Convention yet.<sup>74</sup> Even though the ratification can assuredly be expected, it is impossible to say when this process will be terminated. A petition of the Social Democratic Party,<sup>75</sup> which was submitted in November 2011 and requested the German Government to ratify the Lanzarote Convention, has probably failed:<sup>76</sup> the Bundestag referred the petition<sup>77</sup> to the Committee on Family Affairs, Senior Citizens, Women and Youth which recommended its rejection<sup>78</sup>. Although the Committee alternatively suggested an acceptance, no further information was given explaining its decision.<sup>79</sup> Therefore, it can hardly be foreseen how the German Parliament will finally decide. In case of rejection it is most likely that similar petitions will be submitted in future until the Parliament will finally decide to ratify the Lanzarote Convention.
- xxii. As explained in Chapter I, 1, iv. the rank of the Lanzarote Convention depends on the rank of its act of transposition. It is most likely the Convention will be transposed by approval law, therefore it would rank as a national law under German Constitution.

II NATIONAL LEGISLATION

---

<sup>72</sup> Council of Europe - Treaty Office, Council of Europe, 12/09/2012, 12/09/2012, <http://conventions.coe.int/Treaty/Commun/ChercheSig.asp?NT=201&CM=1&DF=&CL=ENG>.

<sup>73</sup> ibid.

<sup>74</sup> ibid.

<sup>75</sup> Bundestag document No. 17/7807 of 22 November 2011, 22/11/2011, 16/09/2012, <http://dipbt.bundestag.de/dip21/btd/17/078/1707807.pdf>.

<sup>76</sup> Bundestag document No. 17/8392 of 19 January 2012, 19/01/2012, 16/09/2012, <http://dipbt.bundestag.de/dip21/btd/17/083/1708392.pdf>.

<sup>77</sup> German Bundestag - Plenary protocol of the parliamentary session of 24 November 2011 No. 17/143, p. 17155(B) ff., 24/11/2011, 16/09/2012, <http://dipbt.bundestag.de/dip21/btp/17/17143.pdf#P.17155>.

<sup>78</sup> Bundestag document No. 17/8392, op. cit.

<sup>79</sup> ibid.

1 GENERAL PRINCIPLES OF THE JURISDICTION

- vi. After Germany had declared its surrender at the end of the Second World War, the Allied Forces decided to create occupational administrations for Germany at the Jalta Conference in February 1945.<sup>80</sup> At the beginning there were four occupational zones one each for France, Great Britain, USSR and the US. France, Great Britain and the US then decided to merge their zones into one. Shortly afterward Germany was split into an Eastern and Western zone. The western zone being controlled by the Western Allies and the eastern zone controlled by the USSR. From that point on there were two “Germanys” developing in opposite directions. The German Democratic Republic (GDR), which ultimately failed in 1990 stood under the strong influence of the USSR and thus developed into a communist state<sup>81</sup>. On the other hand the Federal Republic of Germany (FRG), which stood under the influence of the Western Allies, developed into a social market economy. Tensions between the two states built in the times of the Cold War but were reduced by Willy Brandt’s new politics, which aimed at cooperation between the two states.<sup>82</sup> During the whole time many eastern Germans tried to flee to Western Germany, which on the one hand led to the Building of the Berlin Wall and on the other hand led to the final downfall of the GDR. In 1990 the division was finally ended with the ‘Two plus Four Treaty’<sup>83</sup> and the subsequent reunification of Eastern and Western Germany. The German Democratic Republic joined the Federal Republic of Germany so that the constitution of the Federal Republic (Basic Law) is still in force. It forms Germany as a democratic republic (Article 20 of the Basic Law) and as a reaction to the experiences made in the twentieth century it gives the head of state a relatively weak position, limiting them to mostly representative activities. At the moment a coalition of the Christian Democratic Union and the Free Democratic Party rules Germany with Angela Merkel as Chancellor of Germany.

---

<sup>80</sup> R. Gmür/ A. Roth, Grundriss der deutschen Rechtsgeschichte, Carl Heymanns Verlag, Köln, 2008, p. 194, Annotation: 488.

<sup>81</sup> D. Willoweit, Deutsche Verfassungsgeschichte, Vom Frankenreich bis zur Wiedervereinigung Deutschlands, Verlag C.H. Beck München, 2009, p. 380.

<sup>82</sup> D. Willoweit, Deutsche Verfassungsgeschichte, Vom Frankenreich bis zur Wiedervereinigung Deutschlands, Verlag C.H. Beck München, 2009, p. 401.

<sup>83</sup> D. Willoweit, Deutsche Verfassungsgeschichte, Vom Frankenreich bis zur Wiedervereinigung Deutschlands, Verlag C.H. Beck München, 2009, p. 408.

vii. Generally human rights are found at the beginning of the Basic Law for the Federal Republic of Germany (German Constitution, so-called Grundgesetz) in the Articles 1 to 19 underlining their importance. Apart from the human rights laid out in the Articles 1 to 19, there are others scattered throughout the constitution (e.g. Articles 101, 103, 104). However Germany is also actively involved in international organisations concerned with human rights. This has led to many contracts binding Germany.<sup>84</sup> The importance of human rights is further enhanced by being part of the core of the constitution. They could only be eliminated in their core value if the German population voted for a new constitution.<sup>85</sup> The current German Constitution went into power on the 23.05.1949 for Western Germany. Eastern Germany followed suit after the Reunification and thus the Constitution went into power for the whole of Germany on the 03.10.1990. The original Constitution was drafted by the Parliamentary Council in the time between the 01.09.1948 and the 08.05.1949.<sup>86</sup>

At the beginning of the constitution in Article 6 certain principles regarding the treatment of families and children are laid out. Specifically it guarantees that children born out of wedlock are treated equally to other children.<sup>87</sup> Furthermore it sets certain conditions, which have to be met before a child can be separated from its family.<sup>88</sup> viii. There is the Federal Constitutional Court of Germany, situated in Karlsruhe. Furthermore nearly every “Land” (Germany is divided into sixteen so-called Länder) has another constitutional court guaranteeing the fundamental rights laid down in the constitution of every respective “Land” which often go further than the ones laid down in the constitution for the whole of Germany.

The Constitutional Court of Germany has as one of its main tasks to ensure the implementation of the national human rights laid out in the Basic Law.<sup>89</sup> Human

<sup>84</sup> e.g. International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, European Convention on Human Rights.

<sup>85</sup> H. D. Jarass/ B. Pieroth, Grundgesetz für die Bundesrepublik Deutschland Kommentar, Verlag C.H. Beck München, 2011, Art. 79, marginal no. 10.

<sup>86</sup> D. Willoweit, Deutsche Verfassungsgeschichte, Vom Frankenreich bis zur Wiedervereinigung Deutschlands, Verlag C.H. Beck Munich, 2009, p. 340 – 341.

<sup>87</sup> Article 6 (5) Basic Law.

<sup>88</sup> Article 6 (3) Basic Law.

<sup>89</sup> <http://www.bundesverfassungsgericht.de/organisation/aufgaben.html>, last visited on the 18.10.2012 at rights, laid down in international contracts, are ensured on the one hand by the European Court of Human Rights regarding the human rights laid down in the European Convention on Human Rights, and on the other hand by the Court of Justice of the European Union regarding the human rights laid down in the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union.

Individuals can claim their constitutional rights directly in front of the Federal Constitutional Court of Germany in the procedural context of a constitutional complaint (Verfassungsbeschwerde). Before applying though they need to have gone through the instances previously to avoid flooding the constitutional court with cases.

It is possible to apply individually. However certain requirements need to be fulfilled, for once one cannot go directly to the constitutional court, but rather has to have sought justice using “ordinary” courts.<sup>90</sup> To apply individually one further has to show that there is a possibility that one has been injured in one’s constitutional rights. Also it is necessary to be represented by a lawyer or equally qualified person.<sup>91</sup> Other possibilities include going to the European Court for human rights in Strasbourg or the European Court of Justice of the European Union in Luxembourg.

Regarding § 23 of the Federal Constitutional Court Act (Bundesverfassungsgerichtsgesetz – BVerfGG) the process starts with a written application containing the justification for the case. Then one judge (so-called Berichterstatter) prepares the case for decision and recommends a course of action. To be accepted for decision various criteria need to be fulfilled regarding the claimant, the subject of the case and so on. Depending on the case oral proceedings take place or not, a decision is made and the judgment pronounced.

- ix. There is a criminal supreme court in Germany called Bundesgerichtshof. In some cases the highest court for criminal affairs however is the Oberlandesgericht (Higher Regional Court). The criminal procedure in Germany is split into five procedures.<sup>92</sup> It begins

---

17:27.

<sup>90</sup> § 90 (2) 1 of the Federal Constitutional Court Act („Bundesverfassungsgerichtsgesetz“).

<sup>91</sup> § 22 (1) of the Federal Constitutional Court Act.

<sup>92</sup> W. Beulke, Strafprozessrecht, Heidelberg, 2010, p. 2, marginal no 2.

with the investigation proceedings (Ermittlungsverfahren) in which the prosecution with the help of the police investigates the crime. It should be emphasised though that the prosecution does not only collect evidence proving the guilt of the accused but also evidence that shows his innocence. After the investigation procedure is finished the interlocutory proceedings begin in which the court decides whether or not the main proceedings (Hauptverfahren) against the accused will take place. The main proceedings follow directly after the interlocutory proceedings and are there to decide on the actual case, so basically if the accused is guilty or not. After the main proceedings are finished, review proceedings can take place. When the accused is found guilty it continues with the enforcement procedure (Vollstreckungsverfahren), in which the punishment decided by the court is enforced.<sup>93</sup>

- x. The minimum age for criminal liability is 14 years as defined in § 19 of the German Criminal Code. For adolescents aged between 14 and 21 there are additional regulations in the Juvenile Court Act (Jugendgerichtsgesetz). The Federal Statistical Office of Germany (Statistisches Bundesamt) has published a statistic listing the number of prisoners categorized by age, sex and other criteria. After the statistic there were 587 prisoners aged between 14 and 18 years in Germany. Looking at the group of people aged between 18 and 21 there were 3110 prisoners.

2 SUBSTANTIVE CRIMINAL LAW

It is of fundamental relevance to get at least a detailed overview of how the different legal codes can and do play a role in cases of sexual abuse within the German Civil Law System. Certainly the most important legal code here is the German Criminal Code (Strafgesetzbuch - StGB). It contains all the substantive criminal law whereas the German Code of Criminal Procedure (Strafprozessordnung - StPO) determines formal standards concerning criminal cases. As the German Criminal Code plays the main role within cases of sexual abuse, it is necessary to first understand its structure before having an actual look at the relevant norms. It is divided into two parts: a general part consisting of five segments dealing with general requirements for culpability and legal consequences and a special part with thirty segments covering the different types of statutory offences.<sup>94</sup> As the fewest forms of sexual violence against children involve a manslaughter or homicide, segment thirteen of the German Criminal Code certainly covers the most important criminal offences here: the ones against the sexual self-determination.

---

<sup>93</sup> op. cit., p. 2, marginal no. 2.

2.1 Sexual Abuse

xxxii. The term “sexual activities” that is now playing the key role within segment thirteen of the Criminal Code, was first introduced with the fourth legislation governing the Criminal Code in 1973 (4. Gesetz zur Reform des Strafrechts = 4. StrRG). Back then it was felt that this neutral description was preferable to the terms “fornication” or “bawdy action”. What the German legislator however did not do is define the term within the Criminal Code itself.

Defining the term “sexual activities” in general is controversial. “Narrow” definitions subsume only such acts under the term, which involve clear sexual body contact between the victim and the perpetrator. “Wider” definitions on the other hand comprise any harmful sexual act forasmuch not only the ones with, but also such without or with only indirect body contact.<sup>95</sup> Those could be non-consensually penetration of the vulva or anus with the penis or forcing people to: bear lascivious glimpses and expressions, give tongue kisses, show their naked body and let the perpetrator grab them, see the offender naked and touch him, masturbate him, perform oral intercourse, watch pornography or participate in pornography.<sup>96</sup>

The definition underlying the Criminal Code contains any conduct (or omission by way of exemption) that, from an objective point of view, conduces the gratification of sexual needs.<sup>97</sup> The code therefore takes into account the activity’s outward

---

<sup>94</sup> V. Krey/ R. Esser, Deutsches Strafrecht Allgemeiner Teil, Verlag W. Kohlhammer, Stuttgart, 2011., marginal no. 32 ff.

<sup>95</sup> Federal Government of Germany, Final Report Federal Government of Germany, Runder Tisch Sexueller Kindesmissbrauch in Abhängigkeits- und Machtverhältnissen in privaten und öffentlichen Einrichtungen und im familiären Bereich, Federal Ministry for Family Affairs, Senior Citizens, Women and Youth, p. 11.

<sup>96</sup> G. Braun, Gegen sexuellen Mißbrauch an Mädchen und Jungen - Ein Ratgeber für Mütter und Väter, Hrsg. AJS NRW e.V., p. 8 f.

<sup>97</sup> M. Frommel, U. Kindhäuser/ U. Neumann/ H. Paeffgen (Hrsg.): Strafgesetzbuch, Kommentar, Band 2: §§ 146 - 358 StGB, Nomos Verlag, Heidelberg, 2010., § 184g, marginal no. 1; W. Perron/ J. Eisele, A. Schönte/ H.

appearance, which needs to show a sexual connection. The offender's perception remains irrelevant.<sup>98</sup> It may only play a role when it comes to his or her mens rea, not however concerning the actus reus of the crime, which the definition is a part of. Hence it is the "wide" definition that is applied within the German law as it can also be seen in the variety of criminal offences in segment thirteen. Whether with or without body contact, sexual activities with minors are penalised in different harshness in the §§ 174 to 184f of the German Criminal Code. Yet one cannot find this definition in the code itself; it is the result of supplementary interpretation and exercise by the jurisprudence and law academics.<sup>99</sup>

As a result of this basic principle of applying the wide definition the legislator however felt the need of narrowing down the applicability of the statements of facts in order to prevent an over-penalisation. § 184g no. 1 of the German Criminal Code states that for the purpose of the German Criminal Code sexual activities have to show a certain pertinence towards the legally protected good. Whether the level of materiality is exceeded is decided on the basis of the intensity, length and kind of sexual action as the relationship between the perpetrator and the victim. If according to these criteria the interference is unacceptable one can speak of a sexual activity for the purpose of the German Criminal Code.<sup>100</sup> That is always the case with actions that are capable of jeopardising the child's development.<sup>101</sup> xxxiii. But beside the level of materiality that needs to be reached in order to be liable under segment thirteen of the German Criminal Code, any act also needs to be committed intentionally. This is the result of one of the main ideas of the German criminal system: you can only be liable for the things you do on purpose, as clearly stated in § 15 of the German Criminal Code. Only when negligence is explicitly named in the Schröder, Strafgesetzbuch, Kommentar, Verlag C.H.Beck, Munich, 2010 (zit.: Bearbeiter, in: Schönke/Schröder), § 184g, marginal no. 6.

---

<sup>98</sup> K. Lackner/ K. Kühl, Strafgesetzbuch, Kommentar, Verlag C.H.Beck, Munich, 2011, § 184g, marginal no 2; Ziegler, Theo, in Beck'scher Online-Kommentar, hrsg. v. Bernd von Heintschel-Heinegg, Verlag C.H.Beck, Munich, 2012 (zit.: Bearbeiter, in: BeckOK), § 184g, marginal no 3.

<sup>99</sup> T. Hörnle, W. Joecks/ K. Miebach (Hrsg.): Münchener Kommentar zum Strafgesetzbuch, Band 3: §§ 80 - 184g of the German Criminal Code, Verlag C.H.Beck, Munich, 2012, § 184g, marginal no 2.

<sup>100</sup> Perron/Eisele, Schönke/Schröder, § 184g, marginal no. 15a; Ziegler, BeckOK StGB, § 184g, marginal no. 5.

<sup>101</sup> Ziegler, BeckOK StGB, § 176, marginal no. 10.

code criminal liability would be applicable.<sup>102</sup> Nevertheless the Criminal Code again, as with the term “sexual activities“, fails to define the word “intention“, thus leaving it to the jurisdiction and the law academics to create criteria for demarcation. They nowadays all agree on the short version of the definition, intention being the knowledge about and the volition of the realisation of all the elements of the offence.<sup>103</sup>

There are three acknowledged forms of intention where the intellectual and the volutative component emerge in different intensity: dolus directus first order (one acts with the intention of fulfilling the offence), dolus directus second order (one may not want the offence to happen but knows it is going to) and dolus eventualis (one does not want the offence to happen but approves of it eventually).<sup>104</sup> Generally the lowest form of intention is enough to fulfil § 15 of the German Criminal Code. Only in exceptional cases the Criminal Code states that a higher form is required.

When all the facts of an offence of sexual abuse have been realised intentionally one can have a closer look at the criminal liability of such cases. At this stage it is of major significance to understand the basic structure of the German Criminal Code. It lists all kinds of offences that are punished with the vigour of the law. Some of them however only constitute a qualification of others, meaning that they contain all the facts of the basic offence and add to that certain requirements such as different forms of violence used, the manner of commitment or certain intentions that justify a higher sentence as they implement a greater injustice.<sup>105</sup> If a qualification is fulfilled the basic offence is subsidiary and always stands back; the criminal liability is drawn upon the qualification.

There are also rules for aggravating the sentence in eminently more serious cases or mitigating in less strongly cases. Those rules however do not constitute qualifications but rather rules of assessment of punishment.<sup>106</sup>

---

<sup>102</sup> G. Duttge, W. Joecks/ K. Miebach (Hrsg.): Münchener Kommentar zum Strafgesetzbuch, Band 1: §§ 1 - 37, 2011, § 15, marginal no. 30.

<sup>103</sup> Federal Supreme Court of Germany concerning criminal affairs, volume 36, p. 1, p. 9f.; H. Kudich, BeckOK StGB, § 15, marginal no. 2 f.; Krey/Esser, Deutsches Strafrecht AT, marginal no 377.

<sup>104</sup> Krey/Esser, Deutsches Strafrecht AT, marginal no. 377 ff..

<sup>105</sup> Krey/Esser, Deutsches Strafrecht AT, marginal no. 232.

<sup>106</sup> Krey/Esser, Deutsches Strafrecht AT, marginal no. 235.

Furthermore there is a special form of qualifications, so called Erfolgsqualifikationen, qualifications that are tied to a special “success“, the result of the offence.<sup>107</sup> In those cases it is a certain danger that is linked to the basic offence that is realised, which justifies a higher sentence.<sup>108</sup> According to § 18 of the German Criminal Code the offender needs to at least act negligently concerning the occurrence of the severe consequence and intentionally regarding the basic offence.<sup>109</sup>

The most important “basic offence” within segment thirteen doubtlessly is § 176 (1) of the German Criminal Code. It criminalises the sexual abuse of children in general. Contrary to the perception of the United Nations that a child means “every human being below the age of eighteen years“<sup>110</sup>, this paragraph states that children within the German criminal law are considered being below the age of fourteen years. Furthermore the term “sexual activity” is narrowed down to only the ones with body contact (narrow definition) for the purpose of this section.<sup>111</sup> When all the facts of the offence are fulfilled intentionally by the defendant, the criminal liability amounts to a prison sentence from between 6 months and 10 years. This means that § 176 (1) of the German Criminal Code, the sexual abuse of a child, is not considered a felony in Germany, as felonies are only such crimes with a minimum sentence of 1 year (stated in § 12 (1) of the German Criminal Code). It is a delinquency. The status quo was created by the fourth legislation governing the Criminal Code from 1973 and is still contested today.<sup>112</sup> When the legislator reformed segment thirteen of the Criminal Code in 2003<sup>113</sup>, it was highly disputed whether or not to transform the offence into a felony again. The result was a balancing act: as an offset to the offence staying a delinquency the legislator introduced an elusive differentiation of the range of sentences.<sup>114</sup> Concerning the sexual abuse of a child in general, the sentence remained from between 6 months and 10 years of prison. Only in eminently more serious cases

---

<sup>107</sup> Krey/Esser, Deutsches Strafrecht AT, marginal no. 204.

<sup>108</sup> Krey/Esser, Deutsches Strafrecht AT, marginal no. 211.

<sup>109</sup> Duttge, MüKo, § 15, marginal no. 21.

<sup>110</sup> Article 1 of the Convention on the Rights of the Child.

<sup>111</sup> Perron/Eisele, Schönke/Schröder, § 176, marginal no. 2; Renzikowski, MüKo, § 176, marginal no. 23.

<sup>112</sup> Renzikowski, MüKo, § 176, marginal no. 12.

<sup>113</sup> “Gesetz zur Änderung der Vorschriften über die Straftaten gegen die sexuelle Selbstbestimmung“ - provision changing the regulations about offences against the sexual self-determination.

<sup>114</sup> Renzikowski, MüKo, § 176, marginal no. 16.

does the minimum sentence amount to 1 year, making the offence a felony (§ 176 (3) of the German Criminal Code). When to speak of such a case is decided by the judges in an ad hoc evaluation.<sup>115</sup> As § 176 (1) of the German Criminal Code means to protect the sexual development of children, an operative consent is not possible for this offence. There is no possibility of disposal of this legally protected good.<sup>116</sup>

The offender, as seen above, needs at least to consider it possible for the victim to be younger than 14 years.<sup>117</sup> When erroneously misjudging the age, he lacks of intention in pursuance of § 16 (1) 1 of the German Criminal Code. His factual mistake however does not necessarily mean he is not subject to prosecution. If he or she wrongly assumes circumstances fulfilling a milder offence, his or her culpability for this offence remains pristine.<sup>118</sup>

When he or she estimates the victim being older than thirteen but younger than 18 years, § 182 of the German Criminal Code comes to effect.<sup>119</sup> In cases of section 1, the offender needs to be at least of the age of criminal responsibility, which in Germany is 14 years as states § 19 of the German Criminal Code. He must use a predicament to perform sexual activities with body contact (no. 1) or determine the victim to do so with a third person (no. 2). Such a predicament exists when the victim finds him- or herself in a serious personal or economical affliction that precisely restricts the possibility to decide freely about his or her sexual attitude.<sup>120</sup> The provision especially embraces cases of adolescent drug addicts or adolescents that ran away from home.<sup>121</sup> When this section is intentionally fulfilled, the criminal liability amounts up to 5 years of prison or a fine. The same sentence range is provided by section 2 of the paragraph criminalising personal sexual activities with body contact by a person older than 17 years who abuses the victim by supplying compensation for it. The payment must be causal for the adolescent's decision.<sup>122</sup> Section 3 at last penalises sexual activities with body contact between an adolescent of less than 16 years and a person of 21 years or

---

<sup>115</sup> Lackner/Kühl, § 176, marginal no. 3.

<sup>116</sup> Renzikowski, Joachim in MüKo, § 176, marginal no. 3.

<sup>117</sup> Ziegler in BeckOK StGB, § 176, marginal no. 35.

<sup>118</sup> Renzikowski, MüKo, § 176, marginal no. 30.

<sup>119</sup> Federal Supreme Court of Germany concerning criminal affairs, volume 42, p. 51, p. 55; Lackner/Kühl, § 176, marginal no. 7; Ziegler in BeckOK, § 182, marginal no. 3.

<sup>120</sup> Ziegler in BeckOK, § 182, marginal no. 5 f.

<sup>121</sup> Federal Supreme Court of Germany concerning criminal affairs, volume 42, p. 399.

<sup>122</sup> Ziegler, BeckOK, § 182, marginal no. 8.

older (no. 1) or the determining to perform such activities with a third person by somebody who is 21 years old or older (no. 2). The adult must abuse the victim's missing ability to self-determine him- or herself sexually, meaning his or her age-related sexual immaturity.<sup>123</sup> Then the sentence range amounts up to 3 years of prison or a fine. An exemption from punishment is possible in all the cases according to § 182 (6) of the German Criminal Code if the injustice arising from the deed is small. This however is ruled by the court in an ad hoc decision.<sup>124</sup> xxxiv. As seen above the German Criminal Code does not facilitate the disposal of a child's sexual self-determination.<sup>125</sup> Quite the contrary: it criminalises any sexual activity with a person below the age of 14 years. The disparity of force in sexual contacts between minors and adults makes them despicable and unacceptable.<sup>126</sup> This imbalance of power as the reason for penalisation however declines more and more with the victim's growing age. From 14 years on the code supposes the ability to freely consent in sexual actions. Adolescents are not inferior to adults in a way where they could not express their own will.<sup>127</sup> Therefore the legal age for engaging in sexual activities is 14 years. Only when special circumstances join in or when there is no consent at all, the liability according to other paragraphs of segment thirteen of the Criminal Code such as § 182 or § 177 of the German Criminal Code remains.<sup>128</sup>

There is however a problem. The German legislator did not think of when creating the stiff and absolute age limit in segment thirteen of the Criminal Code. The disparity of force in relationships between children and their sex partners depends significantly on the age difference between them.<sup>129</sup> Acquiring sexual experiences with almost even-aged is part of a normal development every child passes through when growing up. Yet, § 176 of the German Criminal Code includes such sexual contacts. A 15 year old boy would hence be liable under § 176 of the German Criminal Code for petting, hugging and kissing a 13 year old girl. Even though the provision within § 176 of the

<sup>123</sup> Ziegler, BeckOK, § 182, marginal no. 9 ff..

<sup>124</sup> Ziegler, BeckOK, § 182, marginal no. 18.

<sup>125</sup> J. Renzikowski, MüKo, § 176, marginal no. 3.

<sup>126</sup> Renzikowski, MüKo, Vorb. §§ 174 ff., marginal no. 26.

<sup>127</sup> Renzikowski, MüKo, Vorb. §§ 174 ff., marginal no. 26.

<sup>128</sup> For those circumstances see remarks on §§ 177 and 182 of the criminal code.

<sup>129</sup> Renzikowski, MüKo, Vorb. §§ 174 ff., marginal no. 27.

German Criminal Code for less strongly cases has been abolished and replaced with the regulation concerning particularly hard cases in § 176 (3) of the German Criminal Code with the reform of 2003, one therefore still needs to take into consideration the lower degree of wrongdoing when it comes to the assessment of punishment in such cases.<sup>130</sup> Criminal liability however can only be avoided by means of provisions of the German Code of Criminal Procedure concerning the disregard of sentence by virtue of insignificance (§§ 153 ff. of the German Code of Criminal Procedure) or invoking the principle of proportionality.<sup>131</sup>

When it comes to consensual sexual activities between children, which in Germany are persons below the age of 14 years<sup>132</sup>, § 19 of the German Criminal Code takes effect on how to deal with those cases legally: children are doli incapax; even if committing a crime intentionally, there are no criminal consequences due to their lack of criminal capacity.<sup>133</sup> The paragraph establishes a bar of trial to their actions.<sup>134</sup> xxxv. After having had a closer look at the basic paragraph within segment thirteen of the Criminal Code, § 176 (1) of the German Criminal Code, one might go on contemplating its qualifications and other offences in this segment that regulate the use of force, taking advantage of disability or threat in regards to sexual crimes. Those are all elements that increase the range of sentences in Germany.

§ 176a of the German Criminal Code lists a variety of qualification that are all considered felonies, since the minimum sentence always exceeds one year.<sup>135</sup> When it comes to using force whilst sexually abusing a child, § 176a (2) no. 3 or (5) of the German Criminal Code might be applicable. § 176 (2) no. 3 of the German Criminal Code penalises the sexual abuse of a child that constitutes the danger of a major health damage or a substantial injury to the victim's physical or mental development with a custodial sentence of at least 2 years that can only be reduced to a minimum sentence of one year when a less strongly case has been proven according to § 176a (4) of the

---

<sup>130</sup> Lackner/Kühl, § 176, marginal no. 9.

<sup>131</sup> Frommel, Kindhäuser/Neumann/Paeffgen, § 176, marginal no. 29.

<sup>132</sup> See above.

<sup>133</sup> B von Heintschel-Heinegg, BeckOK StGB, § 19, marginal no. 13.

<sup>134</sup> Lackner/Kühl, § 19, marginal no. 2; Heintschel-Heinegg, BeckOK StGB, § 19, marginal no. 18.

<sup>135</sup> Lackner/Kühl, § 176a, marginal no. 1.

German Criminal Code.<sup>136</sup> A major health damage can be any physical or mental medical condition that incisively and lastingly impairs the victim's health, whereas a substantial injury to the victim's physical or mental development encompasses cases where the abuse creates the concrete danger of a considerable divergence of the child's expected normal development.<sup>137</sup> In none of these cases the health damage needs to actually arise, a concrete danger is sufficient.<sup>138</sup> The likeliness of a developmental disorder increases with the victim's declining age, the offender being a representative and the amount of force or threat used.<sup>139</sup> Of course some would argue that any sexual abuse results in mental and physical health problems and thereby the qualification needed to be reduced to only those cases where major traumatisation has been specifically proven.<sup>140</sup> This however contradicts the provision's spirit and purpose. If anything it is the basic offence (§ 176 (1) of the German Criminal Code) that serves as a catch-all element when for example the perpetrator is still a minor, the child being abused has almost reached the age limit or the actions are less aggravating and realised consensually.<sup>141</sup> Otherwise any perpetrator is able to assume that his actions create a concrete danger for the child's health, thus a restrictive statutory interpretation is not necessary. Yet the offender needs to act intentionally regarding all the elements that constitute the concrete danger.<sup>142</sup> When fulfilling § 176 (1), (2) or (3) of the German Criminal Code and thereby creating a mortal danger or severely abusing the victim physically, § 176a (5) of the German Criminal Code provides a minimum penalty of 5 years that cannot be reduced.<sup>143</sup> The mortal danger must be specific and caused by the deed. All attributable consequences that evoke such a danger - even if long-term - suffice.<sup>144</sup> A severe physical abuse on the other hand covers those cases where the perpetrator brings major or lengthy pains on the victim especially by fiercely hitting him or her or using harmful objects.<sup>145</sup> Crucial here is the physical mistreatment's

---

<sup>136</sup> Frommel, Kindhäuser/Neumann/Paeffgen, § 176a, marginal no. 17.

<sup>137</sup> Renzikowski, MüKo, § 176a, marginal no. 25, 26.

<sup>138</sup> Renzikowski, MüKo, § 176a, marginal no. 28.

<sup>139</sup> Frommel, Kindhäuser/Neumann/Paeffgen, § 176a, marginal no. 13.

<sup>140</sup> Renzikowski, MüKo, § 176a, marginal no. 25 ff.

<sup>141</sup> Frommel, Kindhäuser/Neumann/Paeffgen, § 176a, marginal no. 6, 8.

<sup>142</sup> Ziegler, BeckOK StGB, § 176a, marginal no. 21; Frommel, Kindhäuser/Neumann/Paeffgen, § 176a, marginal no. 16.

<sup>143</sup> Frommel, Kindhäuser/Neumann/Paeffgen, § 176a, marginal no. 17.

<sup>144</sup> Renzikowski, MüKo, § 176a, marginal no. 36; Ziegler, BeckOK StGB, § 176a, marginal no. 20.

<sup>145</sup> New Journal of Criminal Law (Neue Zeitschrift für Strafrecht, NSStZ), Verlag C.H.Beck, 1998, p. 461 =

severity, not the admission of severe health damages. The physical abuse needs to occur with the offence, either the sexual action itself or its enforcement, thus showing a straight spacio-temporal cohesion to the offence.<sup>146</sup> Furthermore the perpetrator's intention must bear upon all the elements establishing the mortal danger or severe physical abuse.<sup>147</sup> If the mortal danger is realised and the victim dies, § 176b of the German Criminal Code - sexual abuse resulting in death - is fulfilled and the penalty amounts to 10 years or life imprisonment.<sup>148</sup> As this offence however is an Erfolgsqualifikation, it suffices if the offender causes the child's death by recklessness according to §§ 18, 176b of the German Criminal Code.

Another important paragraph concerning the use of force, threat or taking advantage of disability is § 177 of the German Criminal Code, criminalising sexual assault and rape against all persons, whether children or adults. Section 1 of the paragraph cites the basic offence: sexual assault. It presumes that another person is coerced to tolerate or carry out sexual actions with the offender or a third person. The term "compulsion" presupposes the overcoming of the victim's opposing will with means of coercion that can be the use of violence, threat with a present danger for the victim's life or health or taking advantage of a situation where the victim is at the mercy of the perpetrator's actions.<sup>149</sup> For the purpose of this section, violence means physical operating coercion by the expansion of force or any other physical impact that may influence or suppress the freedom of exerting one's will.<sup>150</sup> When it comes to § 177 (1) of the German Criminal Code however, only violence against a person creates a mean of coercion.<sup>151</sup> Threat on the other hand means holding out the prospect of a delicate future evil where the offender attributes himself such influence growing into effect.<sup>152</sup> The future evil needs to be targeted towards the victim's health

---

Federal Supreme Court of Germany concerning criminal affairs, file reference 5 StR 216/98.

<sup>146</sup> Perron/Eisele, Schönke/Schröder, § 176a, marginal no. 14; Ziegler, BeckOK StGB, § 176a, marginal no. 19.

<sup>147</sup> Lackner/Kühl, § 176a, marginal no. 5, § 177, marginal no. 12; Ziegler, BeckOK StGB, § 176a, marginal no. 21.

<sup>148</sup> Ziegler, BeckOK StGB, § 176a, marginal no. 20.

<sup>149</sup> Perron/Eisele, Schönke/Schröder, § 177, marginal no. 4.

<sup>150</sup> W. Joecks, Strafgesetzbuch, Studienkommentar, Verlag C.H.Beck, München, 2009, § 240, marginal no. 12; T. Fischer, Strafgesetzbuch und Nebengesetze, Kommentar, Verlag C.H.Beck, München, 2012, § 240, marginal no. 8; F. Toepel, Kindhäuser/Neumann/Paeffgen, StGB, § 240, marginal no. 35f; J. Wessels/ M. Hettinger, Strafrecht Besonderer Teil/ 1, Straftaten gegen Persönlichkeits- und Gemeinschaftswerte, C.F.Müller Verlag, Heidelberg, 2011, marginal no. 383.

<sup>151</sup> Perron/Eisele, Schönke/Schröder, § 177, marginal no. 5.

<sup>152</sup> Joecks, § 240 marginal no. 21, 26; Fischer, § 240, marginal no. 31, 32a; W. Küper, Strafrecht Besonderer Teil, or life.<sup>153</sup> The third coercive named in § 177 (1) no. 3 of the German Criminal Code is the taking advantage of a defenceless situation where the victim is at the mercy of the perpetrator's actions. That is the case when the victim for example is substantially constrained in his or her defence and the perpetrator uses this situation to commit the sexual act.<sup>154</sup> The scope of § 177 (1) no. 3 of the German Criminal Code however is reduced by § 179 of the German Criminal Code (see below).<sup>155</sup>

Furthermore there needs to be a causal link between the compulsion and the sexual act.<sup>156</sup> The offender's intention must contain the application of the coercion to overcome any expected or actually offered resistance.<sup>157</sup> § 177 (1) of the German Criminal Code is then fulfilled and the minimum sentence amounts to one year. In eminently more serious cases it even amounts to a minimum sentence of two years as § 177 (2) of the German Criminal Code states. One example for such a case is rape, when the offender performs the copulation with the victim or other acts, that involve penetration (§ 177 (2) no. 1 of the German Criminal Code) or commits the offence with others collaboratively (§ 177 (2) no. 2 of the German Criminal Code).

When the sexual assault constitutes the danger of a major health damage or a substantial injury to the victim's physical or mental development (§ 177 (3) no. 3), as when the offender is armed while committing the deed to suppress any resistance (§ 177 (3) no. 1 and 2) the minimum sentence amounts to three years.<sup>158</sup>

An even higher qualification is constituted in § 177 (4) of the German Criminal Code: when using a weapon or dangerous tool (even if just to gain power over the victim by threatening him or her with it) (§ 177 (4) no. 1) or creating a mortal danger or severely abusing the victim physically (§ 177 (4) no. 2 a and b) during the sexual assault, the minimum sentence comes to 5 years of prison.<sup>159</sup>

If the mortal danger is realised and the victim dies, § 178 of the German Criminal Code - sexual assault and rape resulting in death - is fulfilled and the penalty is 10

---

Definitionen mit Erläuterungen, C.F.Müller Verlag, Heidelberg, 2007, S. 105.

<sup>153</sup> Perron/Eisele, Schönke/Schröder, § 177, marginal no. 7.

<sup>154</sup> Federal Supreme Court of Germany concerning criminal affairs, volume 51, p. 280; Lackner/Kühl, § 177, marginal no. 6.

<sup>155</sup> Perron/Eisele, Schönke/Schröder, § 177, marginal no. 8.

<sup>156</sup> Perron/Eisele, Schönke/Schröder, § 177, marginal no. 4.

<sup>157</sup> Lackner/Kühl, § 177, marginal no. 10.

<sup>158</sup> For special requirements concerning no. 3 see remarks on § 176a (2) no. 3.

<sup>159</sup> Frommel, Kindhäuser/Neumann/Paeffgen, § 177, marginal no. 73; for special requirements concerning no. 2a and b see remarks on § 176a (5) of the German Criminal Code.

years or life imprisonment. The death must be caused by the act of compulsion or the sexual act itself.<sup>160</sup> As this offence however is an Erfolgsqualifikation it suffices if the offender causes the child's death by recklessness according to §§ 18, 178 of the German Criminal Code. If unanimously the killing though enforced the sexual act, there can be coincidence with the §§ 211, 212 of the German Criminal Code, murder and manslaughter.<sup>161</sup>

When it comes to the offender taking advantage of disability in order to perform sexual actions, § 179 of the German Criminal Code comes to effect. It protects all persons with a mental or emotional disorder including addiction or a pervasive disturbance of consciousness (§ 179 (1) no. 1) or who are physically unable to offer resistance (§ 179 (1) no. 2). If the offender is taking advantage of the disability and this causally facilitates the sexual actions, he or she has to expect a sentence between 6 months and 10 years according to § 179 (1) of the German Criminal Code.<sup>162</sup> Section 2 treats the sexual contact between victim and perpetrator or a third person as equals when the perpetrator determined the victim for the sexual acts between him or her and a third person.<sup>163</sup> The minimum sentence amounts to 1 year in eminently more serious cases according to section 3 and to 2 years when the qualification of section 5 is fulfilled. The latter can be reduced to a sentence between 1 and 10 years when a less strongly case has been proven according to section 6. As the qualification of section 5 corresponds to § 176a (2) of the German Criminal Code, it is fulfilled when the sexual actions involve penetration (no. 1), are committed with others collaboratively (no. 2) or cause the danger of a major health damage or a substantial injury to the victim's physical or mental development (no. 3).<sup>164</sup> Section 7 points at §§ 177 (4) no. 2, 178 of the German Criminal Code that are applied respectively.<sup>165</sup>

In general there is the possibility of coincidence, meaning the commission of two or more offences in one act, between § 179 of the German Criminal Code and the §§ 173

---

<sup>160</sup> Frommel, Kindhäuser/Neumann/Paeffgen, § 178, marginal no. 1.

<sup>161</sup> Frommel, Kindhäuser/Neumann/Paeffgen, § 178, marginal no. 3.

<sup>162</sup> Lackner/Kühl, § 179, marginal no. 7; Frommel, Kindhäuser/Neumann/Paeffgen, § 179, marginal no. 28.

<sup>163</sup> Lackner/Kühl, § 179, marginal no. 9; Frommel, Kindhäuser/Neumann/Paeffgen, § 179, marginal no. 30.

<sup>164</sup> Renzikowski, MüKo, § 179, marginal no. 48ff.; Frommel, Kindhäuser/Neumann/Paeffgen, § 179, marginal no. 36.

<sup>165</sup> Frommel, Kindhäuser/Neumann/Paeffgen, § 179, marginal no. 37.

to 177 of the German Criminal Code.<sup>166</sup>

Admitting that all those paragraphs and sections might be confusing at first, the most important thing to realise is that within the German Criminal Code the use of force, taking advantage of disability or threat is always considered as aggravating circumstance. The general sentence range for the sexual abuse of a child rests with between 6 months and 10 years according to § 176 (1) of the German Criminal Code. Depending on the aggravating circumstances that of course have to be proven in court, it can increase up to 10 years as minimum sentences when the child (§ 176b of the German Criminal Code - or in cases of § 178 of the German Criminal Code the victim) dies as a result of the created danger or health damages while the sexual act or its enforcement.

- xxxvi. Up until here the sexual actions were never consensual. Those kinds however are not excluded from criminal liability in Germany. In segment 12 of the Criminal Code, which legally protects the marital status, matrimony and family, § 173 of the German Criminal Code penalises the copulation between biological relatives. Copulation signifies the female sexual organ's penetration with the penis suitable for conception. As soon as the penetration has started, one can accept criminal liability for the offence as stated in § 173 of the German Criminal Code.<sup>167</sup> When performing sexual intercourse with a biological descendant the criminal liability amounts up to 3 years or a fine (§ 173 (1) of the German Criminal Code); in such cases coincidence is possible especially with § 174 (1) no. 3 of the German Criminal Code as it criminalises sexual actions with biological or adopted minors, with §§ 176a (2) no. 1, 177 (2) of the German Criminal Code as they involve penetration and with § 182 of the German Criminal Code as it involves sexual abuse of minors below the age of 18 years.<sup>168</sup> When having copulation with a biological ascendant or sibling the sentence amounts up to 2 years or a fine (§ 173 (2) of the German Criminal Code). The Federal Constitutional Court dealt with this section's constitutionality in 2008 and declared the

---

<sup>166</sup> Renzikowski, MüKo, § 179, marginal no. 68ff.; Frommel, Kindhäuser/Neumann/Paeffgen, § 179, marginal no. 38.

<sup>167</sup> Lenckner/Bosch, Schönke/Schröder, § 173, marginal no. 3; Lackner/Kühl, § 173, marginal no. 3.

<sup>168</sup> Lackner/Kühl, § 173, marginal no. 8.

penalisation of sexual intercourse between siblings compatible with the German constitution, thus ending a long dispute about it.<sup>169</sup> According to its view a plausible family damaging impact arises due to those actions that comes within the ambit of section 12 of the Criminal Code.<sup>170</sup> In all the cases the intention must bear upon all the elements of the crime, including the biological relation.<sup>171</sup> Only descendants and siblings below the age of 18 years are exempted from criminal liability according to § 173 (3) of the German Criminal Code, which embodies a personal legal reason for exemption from punishment.<sup>172</sup>

- xxxvii. There are four other paragraphs that play an important role when it comes to the offender taking advantage of school and educational settings, care and justice institutions, the work-place and the community. Those are §§ 174, 174a, 174b and 174c of the German Criminal Code. They all target at keeping certain relationships of dependencies free from sexual motives and relations.

Concerning the sexual abuse of children, it certainly is § 174 of the German Criminal Code that plays the most important role out of those four paragraphs. It protects children and adolescents under 16, partially under 18 years.<sup>173</sup> Section 1 states that carrying out sexual activities with body contact with one's ward is punishable by imprisonment between 3 months and 5 years. A ward for the purpose of this section is a person below the age of 16 years that is in the offender's care (no. 1), a person below the age of 18 years that is in the offender's care or in the context of an employment relationship if the perpetrator abuses the dependency that comes with it (no. 2) or a biological or adopted child under 18 years (no. 3).

The delinquent's care can concern the upbringing, apprenticeship or the looking after the lifestyle.<sup>174</sup> In order to come under the section's number 2 he or she furthermore needs to abuse the dependency that comes with the victim being under his or her care or their employment relationship which is especially the case when the perpetrator

---

<sup>169</sup> BVerfG 2 BvR 392/07 = BVerfGE 120, 224.

<sup>170</sup> Lackner/Kühl, § 173, marginal no. 1; other opinion: Ritscher, MüKo, § 173, marginal no. 6.

<sup>171</sup> T. Lenckner/ N. Bosch, Schönke/Schröder, § 173, marginal no. 6.

<sup>172</sup> Lackner/Kühl, § 173, marginal no. 7; Ziegler, BeckOK StGB, § 173, marginal no. 4.

<sup>173</sup> Ziegler, BeckOK StGB, § 174, marginal no. 2, 3.

<sup>174</sup> Ziegler, BeckOK StGB, § 174, marginal no. 6.

uses pressure situations to bend the victim's will.<sup>175</sup>

Sexual activities without body contact in these kinds of relationships are also penalised in section 2 with an imprisonment up to 3 years or with a fine. The culprit needs to either perform sexual activities with his own body or a third person in front of the ward, or determine the ward to do so for sexual arousal.<sup>176</sup>

In all the cases the offender needs to act intentionally, particularly concerning the ward's age and their special relationship. For section 2 he or she furthermore needs to act with the intention (dolus directus first degree) of arousing sexually.<sup>177</sup>

An exemption from punishment is possible according to § 174 (4) of the German Criminal Code, but only in cases in accordance with § 174 (1) no. 1 of the German Criminal Code. The exemption therefore never comes into consideration when the offender abuses a dependency (no. 2) or his own child (no. 3), but for example in cases of real love affairs or when the ward starts the actions.<sup>178</sup>

The next paragraph, § 174a of the German Criminal Code, protects people in public or private institutions from indecencies with body contact of their guardians.<sup>179</sup> Section 1 concerns cases where prisoners or regulatory detained persons are sexually abused by persons to whom they are specifically confided - concerning the upbringing, apprenticeship, supervision or care. Those can be all kinds of persons who work within the institution: doctors, nurses, tutors, community workers etc.<sup>180</sup> When they abuse their position to undertake indecencies (which is fulfilled even if the position merely gives them the opportunity to do so) they are liable under § 174a (1) of the German Criminal Code.<sup>181</sup> Section 2 on the other hand protects people in need of care including invalids and objectively healthy people that are in a medical institution. As in section one, they need to be confided to the offender because of their need of care. He or she needs to take advantage of their weakened strength.<sup>182</sup> Both sections require intentional acting especially concerning the connection between the dependency and

<sup>175</sup> Federal Supreme Court of Germany concerning criminal affairs, volume 28, p. 365, p. 367; Ziegler, BeckOK StGB, § 174, marginal no. 8.

<sup>176</sup> Renzikowski, MüKo, § 174, marginal no. 36ff.; Ziegler, BeckOK StGB, § 174, marginal no. 10 ff.

<sup>177</sup> Frommel, Kindhäuser/Neumann/Paeffgen, § 174, marginal no. 23, 24; Ziegler, BeckOK StGB, § 174, marginal no. 13.

<sup>178</sup> Lackner/Kühl, § 174, marginal no. 16; Ziegler, BeckOK StGB, § 174, marginal no. 22.

<sup>179</sup> Ziegler, BeckOK, § 174a, marginal no. 3, 4.

<sup>180</sup> Ziegler, BeckOK, § 174a, marginal no. 6, 7.

<sup>181</sup> Renzikowski, MüKo, § 174a, marginal no. 15ff.; Ziegler, BeckOK, § 174a, marginal no. 8.

<sup>182</sup> Renzikowski, MüKo, § 174a, marginal no. 28; Ziegler, BeckOK, § 174a, marginal no. 9 ff.

the sexual activity.<sup>183</sup> When all elements of the offence have been proven the sentence ranges from 3 months to 5 years. Furthermore the ordinance of an employment ban according to § 70 of the German Criminal Code is possible.

When it comes to sexual abuse in judicial institutions, § 174b of the German Criminal Code is also applicable. It aims at offenders who are office holders in certain official proceedings (particularly police officers, prosecutors, judges, doctors that give medical opinions etc.) that can lead to the affected person's imprisonment or regulatory detention, who exploit their position and the victim's dependency on them in the specific proceeding to perform sexual activities with body contact.<sup>184</sup> Consensual activities do not necessarily preclude culpability, however the element of the "position's abuse" needs to be specifically examined in those cases. As with § 174 of the German Criminal Code, an abuse generally does not come to consideration in cases of real love affairs.<sup>185</sup> When all the elements of the offence have been fulfilled intentionally, the sentence range is between 3 months and 5 years and an ordinance of an employment ban according to § 70 of the German Criminal Code is possible.<sup>186</sup>

The same sentence range can be found within § 174c of the German Criminal Code that protects a certain group of people from sexual activities with body contact. This category of persons encompasses all mental or emotional invalids including addicts, all persons suffering from a physical illness or disability and all persons being in a psychotherapeutic treatment.<sup>187</sup> Here, too, the offender needs to take advantage of a relationship of dependency resulting from the specific illness in order to perform sexual activities.<sup>188</sup>

2.2 Child Prostitution

- xxxviii. Germany signed the Council of Europe Convention on Action against Trafficking in Human Beings on 17 November 2005. The Convention contains provisions in the

---

<sup>183</sup> Ziegler, BeckOK, § 174a, marginal no. 13.

<sup>184</sup> Perron/Eisele in Schönke/Schröder, § 174b, marginal no. 3f., 7; Ziegler, BeckOK, § 174b, marginal no. 3 ff.

<sup>185</sup> New Legal Weekly (Neue Juristische Wochenschrift - NJW), Verlag C.H.Beck, 2011, p. 1891, p. 1893; Ziegler, BeckOK, § 174b, marginal no. 7; see remarks on § 174 of the German Criminal Code.

<sup>186</sup> Ziegler, BeckOK, § 174b, marginal no. 13.

<sup>187</sup> Ziegler, BeckOK, § 174c, marginal no. 4 ff.

<sup>188</sup> Ziegler, BeckOK, § 174c, marginal no. 7, 8.

areas of victim support and protection, residence rights, criminal law and criminal procedure law, international cooperation and an independent surveillance mechanism. At present a draft treaty law, which is required for accession to the convention, is being coordinated in the Ministries.<sup>189</sup>

Germany has continued to make eminent efforts to improve its legislation against Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children, CSEC.<sup>190</sup> Apart from ratifying all the relevant international and regional instruments addressing those issues, a law was passed in November 2008<sup>191</sup> to impose the framework decision of the Council of the European Union on combating sexual exploitation of children and child pornography, which had been in effect since 2004.<sup>192</sup> Following the enactment of this law, a number of amendments to the German Criminal Code have been introduced that strengthen legislation on child trafficking and child pornography and raise the age of protection from sexual abuse and exploitation.<sup>193</sup> xxxix.

Article 19 (2) of the Lanzarote Convention:

"For the purpose of the present article, the term "child prostitution" shall mean the fact of using a child for sexual activities where money or any other form of remuneration or consideration is given or promised as payment, regardless if this payment, promise or consideration is made to the child or to a third person."<sup>194</sup>

Although German legislation does not explicitly define child prostitution, it punishes activities connected to child prostitution. Recent reforms of the German Criminal

<sup>189</sup> Accessed Sept. 2012: <http://conventions.coe.int/Treaty/Commun/ChercheSig.asp?NT=197&CM=1&DF=&CL=ENG>.

<sup>190</sup> CSEC = the commercial sexual exploitation of children consists of criminal practises that demean, degrade and threaten the physical and psychosocial integrity of children. There are three primary and interrelated forms of commercial sexual exploitation of children: prostitution, pornography and trafficking for sexual purposes. Commercial sexual exploitation of children comprises sexual abuse by the adult and remuneration in cash or in kind to the child or a third person or persons.

<sup>191</sup> Accessed in Sept. 2012: <http://dejure.org/gesetze/StGB/176.html>.

<sup>192</sup> Act amending the Provision on Criminal Offences against Sexual Self-Determination and amending other Provisions, which entered into force on 1 April 2004.

<sup>193</sup> Status Report on the Plan of Action of the Government of the Federal Republic of Germany for the Protection of Children and Young People from Sexual Violence and Exploitation. Federal Ministry for Family Affairs, Senior Citizens, Women and Youth, Berlin, November 2008, accessed Sept. 2012 from: http://www.bmfsfj.de/Redaktion BMFSFJ/Broschuerenstelle/PdfAnlagen/Sachstandsbericht-RIOenglisch.property=pdf,bereich=bmfsfj,sprache= de,rwb=true.pdf.

<sup>194</sup> See text of Lanzarote Convention: <http://conventions.coe.int/Treaty/EN/treaties/html/201.htm>.

Code have risen the age of protection for sexual abuse by making it punishable to abuse a person of less than 18 years of age by taking advantage of an exploitative situation.<sup>195</sup>

The German law prohibits actions related to the prostitution of children, as well as a number of general sexual offences. The Criminal Code prohibits inducing a person under 18 years of age to engage in sexual acts with or in the presence of a third person for financial reward or allow sexual acts to be committed on a person under 18 years of age by a third person.<sup>196</sup> However, this provision focuses on financial reward and does not cover other forms of consideration, such as in-kind reward. Violators may be punished with up to five years of imprisonment or a fine.<sup>197</sup>

The same punishment applies to inducing a child under 18 years of age in one's care for purposes of upbringing, education, or employment to commit sexual acts with or in the presence of a third person or allowing sexual acts to be committed upon the child.<sup>198</sup> Attempting these offences is also punishable.<sup>199</sup> With the amendment of the Criminal Code in 2008, Germany raised the age of protection for sexual abuse of young people from 16 to 18.<sup>200</sup>

Moreover, the Criminal Code criminalises several other sexual offence crimes including child sexual abuse, which applies to a variety of acts, such as engaging in sexual activity with someone below 14 years of age.<sup>201</sup> The Criminal Code also contains provisions prohibiting sexual assault crimes and rape.<sup>202</sup> In defining the term child, § 176 (1) of the Criminal Code<sup>203</sup> stipulates that the minimum age of sexual consent in Germany is 14 years<sup>204</sup>.

---

<sup>195</sup> <http://www.bmfsfj.de/RedaktionBMFSFJ/Broschuerenstelle/PdfAnlagen/Sachstandsbericht-RIO-englisch,property=pdf,bereich=bmfsfj,sprache=de,rwb=true.pdf>.

<sup>196</sup> German Criminal Code, § 180(2), translated, accessed Sept. 2012 from the Federal Ministry of Justice: http://www.gesetze-im-internet.de/englisch\_stgb/german\_criminal\_code.pdf.

<sup>197</sup> German Criminal Code, translated, accessed Sept. 2012 from the Federal Ministry of Justice: http://www.gesetze-im-internet.de/englisch\_stgb/german\_criminal\_code.pdf.

<sup>198</sup> § 180(3): http://www.gesetze-im-internet.de/englisch\_stgb/german\_criminal\_code.pdf.

<sup>199</sup> § 180(4): http://www.gesetze-im-internet.de/englisch\_stgb/german\_criminal\_code.pdf.

<sup>200</sup> <http://www.bmfsfj.de/RedaktionBMFSFJ/Broschuerenstelle/PdfAnlagen/Sachstandsbericht-RIO-englisch,property=pdf,bereich=bmfsfj,sprache=de,rwb=true.pdf>.

<sup>201</sup> §§ 176, 176a and 176b: http://www.gesetze-im-internet.de/englisch\_stgb/german\_criminal\_code.pdf.

<sup>202</sup> §§ 177, 178, 179: http://www.gesetze-im-internet.de/englisch\_stgb/german\_criminal\_code.pdf.

<sup>203</sup> ibid.

<sup>204</sup> § 176(1): http://www.gesetze-im-internet.de/englisch\_stgb/german\_criminal\_code.pdf.

To sum up, Germany has a strong national legal framework against child trafficking that incorporates all relevant international and regional legal instruments on child trafficking.

- xl. The current § 182 of the German Criminal Code prohibits abusing a person under 18 years through taking advantage of an exploitable situation by either engaging in sexual activity or inducing her or him to engage in sexual activity with a third party.<sup>205</sup> The punishment is imprisonment not exceeding five years.<sup>206</sup> Attempting this offence is also punishable.<sup>207</sup>

With respect to prostitution, the German Criminal Code criminalises: managing a prostitution business, where persons are held in personal or financial dependency; providing a place for a person below 18 years to conduct prostitution; and encouraging another person, for whom a place has been provided for prostitution, to engage in prostitution or exploiting that person for prostitution. Violators of these offences may be punished with up to three years of imprisonment or a fine.<sup>208</sup> The Criminal Code also bans pimping and makes it illegal to exploit another person engaged in prostitution or, for material gain, to supervise another person's prostitution, including preventing a person from leaving prostitution. Punishment for these offences may be between six months' and five years' imprisonment. This law also criminalises professionally promoting another person's prostitution by procuring clients; punishment may be up to three years' imprisonment or a fine.<sup>209</sup> Those who act as intermediaries are also punishable.<sup>210</sup>

2.3 Child Pornography

Child Pornography in General

---

<sup>205</sup> German Criminal Code, § 182: http://www.gesetze-im-internet.de/englisch\_stgb/german\_criminal\_code.pdf.

<sup>206</sup> ibid.

<sup>207</sup> ibid.

<sup>208</sup> German Criminal Code, § 180a: http://www.gesetze-im-internet.de/englisch\_stgb/german\_criminal\_code.pdf.

<sup>209</sup> § 181a: http://www.gesetze-im-internet.de/englisch\_stgb/german\_criminal\_code.pdf.

<sup>210</sup> ibid.

- xli. The Council of Europe Convention on Cybercrime of 23 November 2001 was signed by Germany on the day on which it was opened for signature. It was then ratified on 9 March 2009 and entered into effect on 1 July 2009.<sup>211</sup> The penal provisions regarding child pornography are now more severe so a more effective action can be taken against the increasing spread of child pornography particularly on the Internet.
- xlii. Article 20(2) of the Lanzarote Convention defines the term child pornography as "any material that visually depicts a child engaged in real or simulated sexually explicit conduct or any depiction of a child's sexual organs for primarily sexual purposes."<sup>212</sup> Although German law does not contain a distinct definition of child pornography, the Criminal Code does cover virtual child pornography.<sup>213</sup> With the recent introduction of the offences of "distribution, acquisition and possession" of juvenile pornography, Germany has extended protection from exploitation in pornography to all children under 18 years of age.<sup>214</sup>

With regard to pornographic materials § 11(3) of the Criminal Code reveals:

§ 11- Definitions

(3) Audiovisual media, data storage media, illustrations and other depictions shall be equivalent to written material in the provisions which refer to this subsection.<sup>215</sup>

The German jurisdiction defined the term pornography in the so-called "Fanny Hill-Decision" of the Federal Court of Justice (BGH, Bundesgerichtshof),<sup>216</sup> which refers to "obscene scriptures/material".<sup>217</sup> Pornographic are those scriptures and materials which "with disregard to other human references are sexual actions in a rough

<sup>211</sup> Accessed Sept. 2012: <http://conventions.coe.int/Treaty/Commun/ChercheSig.asp?NT=185&CM=&DF=&CL=ENG>.

<sup>212</sup> Text of Convention: <http://conventions.coe.int/Treaty/en/Treaties/Html/185.htm>.

<sup>213</sup> German Criminal Code, §§ 184b, 184c & 11(3); accessed in September 2012 from the Federal Ministry of Justice: http://www.gesetze-im-internet.de/englisch\_stgb/german\_criminal\_code.pdf.

<sup>214</sup> German Criminal Code, § 184b: http://www.gesetze-im-internet.de/englisch\_stgb/german\_criminal\_code.pdf.

<sup>215</sup> Accessed in Sept 2012: http://www.gesetze-im-internet.de/englisch\_stgb/englisch\_stgb.html#p0073.

<sup>216</sup> Decision of the German Federal Court of Justice, BGHSt 23, 40; see also: <http://www.whiteit.de/downloads/Studie020511.pdf>.

<sup>217</sup> Decision of the Higher Regional Court of Duesseldorf, OLG Düsseldorf NJW 1974, 1474 (1475).

intrusive, attention-grabbing manner which push to the foreground and exclusively or predominantly are targeted on the excitement of sexual impulses“.<sup>218</sup> To such a degree, nude images solely do neither constitute yet pornography, nor child pornography.<sup>219</sup> A significant<sup>220</sup> sexual connotation has to come along, whereas for sexual actions with children a lower level is to be determined than for sexual actions of adults.

- xliii. Germany has extended protection from exploitation in pornography to all children under 18, with the recent introduction of the offences of “distribution, acquisition and possession” of juvenile pornography<sup>221</sup>:

§ 184b - Distribution, acquisition and possession of child pornography

(1) Whosoever

1. disseminates;
2. publicly displays, presents, or otherwise makes accessible; or
3. produces, obtains, supplies, stocks, offers, announces, commends, or undertakes to import or export in order to use them or copies made from them within the meaning of No. 1 or 2 above or facilitates such use by another pornographic written materials (§ 11 (3)) related to sexual activities performed by, on or in the presence of children (§ 176 (1)) (child pornography) shall be liable to imprisonment from three months to five years.

(2) Whosoever undertakes to obtain possession for another of child pornography reproducing an actual or realistic activity shall incur the same penalty.

(3) In cases under subsection (1) or subsection (2) above the penalty shall be imprisonment of six months to ten years if the offender acts on a commercial basis or as a member of a gang whose purpose is the continued commission of such offences and the child pornography reproduces an actual or realistic activity.

<sup>218</sup> Decision of the Federal Court of Justice, Criminal Department, BGHSt 37, 55 (59f); see also decision of the Federal Administrative Court, BVerwG (NJW 2002, 2966).

<sup>219</sup> Differentiating: Higher Regional Court of Koblenz, OLG Koblenz NJW1979, 1467.

<sup>220</sup> See: MüKo-Hörnle § 184 German Criminal Code marginal no. 15 with further details.; also decision of the Federal Court of Justice, Criminal Department, BGHSt 43, 366 (368): „Spreizen der Beine, um die unbedeckten Genitalien offen zur Schau zu stellen.“

<sup>221</sup> German Criminal Code, § 184b: http://www.gesetze-im-internet.de/englisch\_stgb/german\_criminal\_code.pdf.

(4) Whosoever undertakes to obtain possession of child pornography reproducing an actual or realistic activity shall be liable to imprisonment not exceeding two years or a fine. Whosoever possesses the written materials set forth in the 1st sentence shall incur the same penalty.<sup>222</sup>

§§ 184b and 184c of the German Criminal Code criminalise the distribution, acquisition and possession of pornography involving children (under 14 years of age) and juveniles (between 14 and 18), respectively.<sup>223</sup> Although these paragraphs technically rank among “written materials”, the definition of written materials also encompasses audio-visual media, data storage media, illustrations and other depictions.<sup>224</sup> In addition it is worth pointing out that §§ 184b and 184c punish not only materials produced as a result of actual sexual abuse, but also realistic representations of sexual activities, such as virtual child pornography (see below).<sup>225 226</sup>

§ 184b is now to be interpreted to cover the provocative exhibition of children’s sexual organs, but it is unclear whether this interpretation is legally authoritative or discretionary.<sup>227</sup>

Under §§ 184b and 184c, it is punishable to, among other actions, disseminate, publicly display, produce, obtain, supply, offer, import or export, such material<sup>228</sup>; this is on the lines of Article 20(1.a) to (1.e) of the Lanzarote Convention. The punishment for these activities under the German Criminal Code is imprisonment for three months to five years for child pornography and up to three years or a fine for juvenile pornography. Possession of child pornography is also punishable,<sup>229</sup> while possession of juvenile pornography is punishable unless the materials were produced by persons below 18 years of age and with consent (see below).<sup>230</sup>

---

<sup>222</sup> http://www.gesetze-im-internet.de/englisch\_stgb/englisch\_stgb.html#p1620.

<sup>223</sup> German Criminal Code, §§ 184b and 184c: http://www.gesetze-im-internet.de/englisch\_stgb/german\_criminal\_code.pdf.

<sup>224</sup> ibid.

<sup>225</sup> German Criminal Code, §§ 184b and 184c: http://www.gesetze-im-internet.de/englisch\_stgb/german\_criminal\_code.pdf.

<sup>226</sup> Accessed Oct 2012: <http://www.mediendelikte.de/bt184b.htm>.

<sup>227</sup> Polizeiliche Kriminalprävention der Länder und des Bundes, 2012, 28/10/2012, <http://www.polizei-beratung.de/themen-und-tipps/sexualdelikte/kinderpornografie/rechtliche-grundlagen.html>.

<sup>228</sup> German Criminal Code, §§ 184b and 184c: http://www.gesetze-im-internet.de/englisch\_stgb/german\_criminal\_code.pdf.

<sup>229</sup> § 184b: http://www.gesetze-im-internet.de/englisch\_stgb/german\_criminal\_code.pdf.

<sup>230</sup> § 184c(4): http://www.gesetze-im-internet.de/englisch\_stgb/german\_criminal\_code.pdf.

Article 20(1.f) related to § 184b (1) no. 1-3 and § 11 (3) of the German Criminal Code plus § 184d which refers also to § 184b. According to § 184b any person is punished that distributes child pornographic material through the media, information and communication technologies.

Furthermore, if the offender acts on a commercial basis or as a member of a gang, punishment is increased from six months to 10 years' imprisonment for child pornography and three months to five years for juvenile pornography.<sup>231</sup>

- xliv. An advance control/check-up of pornographic Internet offerings can be conducted by the providers' youth protection officers to be appointed by law or by voluntary self-monitoring institutions.

In March 1999, the Central Office for Spontaneous Research in Data Networks (Zentralstelle fuer anlassunabhaengige Recherchen in Datennetzen - ZaRD)<sup>232</sup> has started its work. The ZaRD is part of the Technical Service Centre for Information and Communication Technology within the Federal Office for Criminal Investigation (Bundeskriminalamt - BKA), which especially provides technical support in criminal investigations on the Internet. Officers at the ZaRD search all services on the Internet, even at night and at weekends. The ZaRD has already been successful.<sup>233</sup>

Furthermore, the Federal Office for Criminal Investigation cooperates closely with the Länder within the context of the Central Office for Child Pornography there. Information is exchanged with the help of a computer-assisted evaluation system. The Federal Office for Criminal Investigation organises annual clerical conferences. Another measure is the Federal Office of Criminal Investigation's concept for combating the production of and trade in child pornography that entails a harmonised, strategic procedure by the Federal and the Länder police. In this connection, the Federal Office for Criminal Investigation organises an annual specialist seminar on child pornography.<sup>234</sup>

<sup>231</sup> § 184b(3) and 184c(3): http://www.gesetze-im-internet.de/englisch\_stgb/german\_criminal\_code.pdf.

<sup>232</sup> ZaRD, Bundeskriminalamt BKA= Federal Office for Criminal Investigation:

http://www.bka.de/nn\_206376/

DE/DasBKA/Aufgaben/Zentralstellen/ZaRD/zard__node.html?__nnn=true.

<sup>233</sup> Federal Office for Criminal Investigation, 2012, 29/10/2012,

http://www.bka.de/nn\_204456/DE/DasBKA/

Aufgaben/Zentralstellen/ZaRD/zard\_\_node.html?\_\_nnn=true#doc204436bodyText5.

<sup>234</sup> Federal Office for Criminal Investigation, 2012, 29/10/2012, http://www.bka.de/DE/ThemenABisZ/Deliktsbereiche/Kinderpornographie/kinderpornographie\_\_node.html?\_\_nnn=true.

Germany signed the Convention of the Council of Europe on the Protection of Children against Sexual Exploitation and Sexual Abuse on 25 October 2007 when it was opened for signature.<sup>235</sup> The Convention contains requirements for dealing with criminal offences, beyond the commercial sexual exploitation of children to sexual abuse without a commercial motive jurisdiction, the responsibility of legal entities, law on criminal proceedings, storage of data on sentenced sexual offenders, international cooperation and preventive measures.<sup>236</sup>

Depending on the extent to which use is made of the reservation options, this will call for legislative action in the area of criminal law. This has already been partly covered by the law transposing the framework decision of the Council of the European Union on combating the sexual exploitation of children and child pornography.

The ratification of the Council of Europe Convention is on its way.

Germany did not make use of the reservation right that was given in the Lanzarote Convention Article 20(3): §§ 184b and 184c of the German Criminal Code punish not only materials produced as a result of actual sexual abuse, but realistic representations of sexual activities, such as virtual child pornography, too.<sup>237</sup> Possession of child pornography is also punishable,<sup>238</sup> while possession of juvenile pornography is punishable unless the materials were produced by persons under 18 years and with consent.<sup>239</sup>

Regarding Article 20(4) of the Lanzarote Convention, § 184d of the German Criminal Code criminalises actions on the lines of Article 20(1.f) of the Lanzarote Convention, which are “knowingly obtaining access, through information and communication technologies, to child pornography”.<sup>240</sup> There is also no use of reservation right to be found here.

Participation of a Child in Pornographic Performances

xliv.

---

<sup>235</sup> Status as of Oct. 2012:

<http://conventions.coe.int/Treaty/Commun/ChercheSig.asp?NT=201&CM=8&DF=14/10/2012&CL=ENG>.

<sup>236</sup> ibid.

<sup>237</sup> §§ 184b and 184c: http://www.gesetze-im-internet.de/englisch\_stgb/englisch\_stgb.html#p1620.

<sup>238</sup> § 184b: http://www.gesetze-im-internet.de/englisch\_stgb/englisch\_stgb.html#p1620.

<sup>239</sup> § 184c(4): http://www.gesetze-im-internet.de/englisch\_stgb/englisch\_stgb.html#p1620.

<sup>240</sup> Text of the Lanzarote Convention: <http://conventions.coe.int/Treaty/EN/treaties/html/201.htm>.

Article 21 of the Lanzarote Convention – Offences concerning the participation of a child in pornographic performances

(1) Each Party shall take the necessary legislative or other measures to ensure that the following intentional conduct is criminalised:

- (a) recruiting a child into participating in pornographic performances or causing a child to participate in such performances
- (b) coercing a child into participating in pornographic performances or profiting from or otherwise exploiting a child for such purposes
- (c) knowingly attending pornographic performances involving the participation of children<sup>241</sup>

§ 184b of the German Criminal Code - Distribution, acquisition and possession of child pornography

(1) Whosoever

- 1. disseminates;
- 2. publicly displays, presents, or otherwise makes accessible; or
- 3. produces, obtains, supplies, stocks, offers, announces, commends, or undertakes to import or export in order to use them or copies made from them within the meaning of Nos 1 or 2 above or facilitates such use by another pornographic written materials (§ 11 (3)) related to sexual activities performed by, on or in the presence of children (§ 176 (1)) (child pornography)

shall be liable to imprisonment from three months to five years. ...<sup>242</sup>

The legal situation regarding “making a child participate in pornographic performances” and “recruiting” or “coercing” children in this area can be qualified as unclear and unsystematical: Partially, preliminary actions for the production of child pornography are covered by § 176(4) no. 3 of the German Criminal Code; actual actions of abuse for the purpose of the production of child pornographic material are not only covered by § 176a (3) but generally also by § 184b(1) no. 3 of the German Criminal Code.<sup>243</sup>

As every other offence, § 184 of the German Criminal Code requires intention. The offender has to act knowingly and deliberately in causing the result.<sup>244</sup>

<sup>241</sup> ibid.

<sup>242</sup> § 184b: http://www.gesetze-im-internet.de/englisch\_stgb/englisch\_stgb.html#p1620.

<sup>243</sup> Accessed in Oct 2012: <http://www.whiteit.de/downloads/Studie020511.pdf>.

<sup>244</sup> Accessed in Sept 2012: <http://www.gegen-missbrauch.de/gesetzeslage>.

Thus, German penal law makes it illegal for one or more persons to engage in sexual intercourse or other sexual acts with a child with the intent to produce pornographic material to be disseminated or publicly displayed.<sup>245</sup> Perpetrators of this crime face punishments of not less than two years' imprisonment.<sup>246</sup>

§§ 176, 176a, 177 and 180 of the Criminal Code must also be taken into consideration: As mentioned above § 176 covers the one part of the crime concerned with the abuse of a child; § 177 contains the offence of sexual assault by use of force or threats; in this way coercing a person to engage in sexual activity by force or threat.<sup>247</sup>

§ 180 furthermore criminalises causing minors to engage in sexual activity as well as inducing of children.<sup>248</sup> According to the German Criminal Code it is illegal to groom a child by using publications to influence the child to engage in sexual activities with an adult.<sup>249</sup> Grooming, describes the recruitment of children and tempering them onto sexual abuse for the purpose of producing child pornography.<sup>250</sup>

This provision also criminalises offering, demonstrating or promising a child to someone else for purposes of sexual abuse or conspiring with another person to sexually abuse a child.<sup>251</sup>

German legislation has not made use of the reservation right stated in Article 21(2) of the Lanzarote Convention.<sup>252</sup>

2.4 Corruption of Children

xlvi. When applying the wide definition of the term “sexual activities“ as it is the case within the German Criminal Code, there are statements of facts that concern sexual abuse with no body contact. There is however not one main paragraph penalising all

---

<sup>245</sup> Accessed Sept. 2012:

<http://conventions.coe.int/Treaty/Commun/ListeDeclarations.asp?NT=185&CM=&DF=&CL=ENG&VL=1>.

<sup>246</sup> ibid.

<sup>247</sup> § 177: http://www.gesetze-im-internet.de/englisch\_stgb/englisch\_stgb.html#p1517.

<sup>248</sup> § 180: http://www.gesetze-im-internet.de/englisch\_stgb/englisch\_stgb.html#p1552.

<sup>249</sup> § 176: http://www.gesetze-im-internet.de/englisch\_stgb/englisch\_stgb.html#p1493.

<sup>250</sup> Accessed Oct 2012: <http://www.whiteit.de/downloads/Studie020511.pdf>.

<sup>251</sup> http://www.gesetze-im-internet.de/englisch\_stgb/englisch\_stgb.html#p1620.

<sup>252</sup> List of declarations, reservations and other communications with regard to treaty No. 201:

<http://conventions.coe.int/Treaty/Commun/ListeDeclarations.asp?NT=201&CM=8&DF=14/10/2012&CL=ENG&VL=1>.

<http://conventions.coe.int/Treaty/Commun/ListeDeclarations.asp?NT=201&CM=8&DF=14/10/2012&CL=ENG&VL=1>.

the possible cases. One rather has to have a closer look at certain sections or subsections to find applicable provisions. § 183 of the German Criminal Code regulating exhibitionism is the only paragraph that solely deals with sexual activities without body contact. It criminalises the intentional causing of a person (in general a woman or minor) to witness exhibitionistic activities of a man and thus harassing him or her. Hence only men can be suitable offenders for section 1. “Exhibitionistic activities” for the purpose of this paragraph are all sorts of sexual activities with the meaning of § 184g no. 2 of the German Criminal Code that focus on showing the other person one’s genital for sexual arousal. The witnessing of these activities need to harass the victim, meaning that it is objectively suited to impair the victim’s psychic wellbeing and subjectively does so.<sup>253</sup> The exhibitionistic activity needs to occur intentionally (at least dolus directus second degree) whereas dolus eventualis suffices concerning the thereby induced harassment.<sup>254</sup> The sentence range then amounts up to 1 year of prison or a fine. As section 2 however states the deed is only pursued when somebody instituted criminal proceedings. The Prosecution only takes actions per curiam if it thinks them necessary for the public interest.<sup>255</sup>

Performing sexual activities in front of a child however may also fulfil § 176 (4) or § 174 (2) of the German Criminal Code. § 176 (4) of the German Criminal Code criminalises 4 different actions without body contact with a sentence from 3 months to 5 years. Those actions are: performing sexual activities in front of a child (no. 1) either alone or with a third person; determining a child to perform sexual activities that are not criminalised by section 1 or 2 of the paragraph, which especially targets at sexual posing (no. 2); or influencing a child by showing publications to achieve sexual actions (no. 3) or by showing pornographic devices (no. 4). The child needs to perceive the events, not however to understand the sexual context.<sup>256</sup>

§ 174 (2) of the German Criminal Code on the other hand has a sentence range up to 3 years of prison or a fine and penalises all sexual activities in front of one’s ward (no. 1) or the determining of one’s ward to perform such activities (no. 2). Determining for this purpose means any actual influence on the child that leads to the accomplishment

---

<sup>253</sup> Perron/Eisele in Schönke/Schröder, § 183, marginal no. 4; Lackner/Kühl, § 183, marginal no. 1a ff.

<sup>254</sup> Lackner/Kühl, § 183, marginal no. 4.

<sup>255</sup> Lackner/Kühl, § 183, marginal no. 6.

<sup>256</sup> Frommel in Kindhäuser/Neumann/Paeffgen, § 176, marginal no. 17 - 23.

of the deed.<sup>257</sup>

Sexual activities in front of someone always need to be spatially perceived by the other person according to § 184g no. 2 of the German Criminal Code. The victim however does not need to understand its sexual meaning.<sup>258</sup> The German Criminal Code does not define the term “causing“. If the offender intentionally fulfils the elements of a crime, here being the performance of sexual activities in front of a child for sexual arousal, he or she might be liable under § 174 (2) (if the child is his or her ward) or under § 176 (4) no. 1 of the German Criminal Code. As the child only needs to notice the actions there is no requirement for a constituent fact of “causing” the child to witness those actions.

2.5 Solicitation of Children for Sexual Purposes

xlvi. In general, the State criminalises the intentional sexual gratification through information and communication technologies. Especially mentionable are the legal norms paragraph 176 (sexual abuse) and 184b (pornographic content) of the German Criminal Code. In this passage a closer look will be taken at § 176 of the German Criminal Code.

In the last 10 years § 176 of the German Criminal Code experienced three changes. One, by the Sexual Offences Amendment Act (SexualdelÄndG) of December 2003, another by the law implementing European Council directive 2004/68/JI into national law<sup>259</sup> and the third one by the law transforming the framework decision of October 2008 by the EU-Council into German Law.

There is a distinction made by § 176 of the German Criminal Code between actions with and those without any physical contact. Section one is the statutory basis, on which those can be punished, who engage in any sexual activity with a child which includes closeness. Whether an action, for example grabbing a child between the legs, must be seen as such a sexual engagement, has to be considered individually in each case.<sup>260</sup> It is not required that the child recognises the sexuality of an act as such. It is also not required that the perpetrator (adult) takes the initiative to engage in sexual

---

<sup>257</sup> Frommel in Kindhäuser/Neumann/Paeffgen, § 174, marginal no. 21 f.

<sup>258</sup> Lackner/Kühl, § 184 g, marginal no. 8.

<sup>259</sup> Fischer, op. cit., p. 1140.

<sup>260</sup> Fischer, op. cit., p. 1141.

activity. An adult can also be punished if he simply does not stop any sexual behaviour subject to section one.

There is no liability according to § 176 (1) of the German Criminal Code when there is no physical contact between the perpetrator and the child. On the other hand it has been argued that even acts where there is no direct contact with a child can be harmful to the development of a child as it is growing up.

Therefore, § 176 (4) of the German Criminal Code protects children (under the age of 14) from sexual abuse even when the behaviour does not involve any physical contact: § 176 (4) no. 1 states: Liable to imprisonment from three months up to five years shall be "whosoever" engages in sexual activity in the presence of a child. It criminalises any sexual behaviour in front of a child. It is required that the child recognises the sexual behaviour, but it is not required that there is physical closeness. Therefore the conditions of no. 1 are met when a child witnesses such sexual behaviour instantaneously through a computer screen, according to a decision of the Federal Court of Justice (BGH) in 2009.<sup>261</sup> Hence it can be said that any case of live monitoring over the internet can be subject to § 176 (4) no. 1 if the witnessed act itself fits the other requirements for liability.

§ 176 (4) no. 2 opens the possibility for conviction of someone who induces the child to engage in sexual activity, unless the act is punishable under subsection 1 or subsection 2 above - This includes all kinds of sexual activity, for example when the perpetrator makes the child expose itself (including posing for pornographic images).<sup>262</sup> Here again, the child does not have to recognise the sexual character of its act. This passage is especially important in the context of sexual abuse through information and communication devices, because physical closeness is not required. Now anybody can be convicted who only gets notice of the sexual activity over a webcam or through acoustic devices. This wider range of liability (introduced by the German legislator in 2008) strengthens the protection of children. Because spatial closeness is not required, inducing a child subject to no. 2 can be punishable even when the actual behaviour of the child is not recognised right away.

---

<sup>261</sup> BGH 53, 283.

<sup>262</sup> Fischer, op. cit., p. 1142.

Besides no. 1 and 2, it is also punishable to present a child with written material to induce him to engage in sexual activity with or in the presence of the offender or a third person or allow the offender or a third person to engage in sexual activity with him. Different from the other numbers of section 4 no. 3 punishes actions, which do not already constitute an abuse as they are only acts of preparation.<sup>263</sup> That is rather unusual within German law, because preparation is very hard to prosecute and it is also difficult to say when such an action is made with malicious intent.

"Written material" in the German Criminal Code, means more than the ordinary understanding of the word. If writings only included those in written form on paper, mere Internet contact between the perpetrator and the potential child victim would not be illegal. § 11 (3) of the German Criminal Code - (referred to by § 176 (4) no. 3 of the German Criminal Code) says: Audio-visual media, data storage media, illustrations and other depictions shall be equivalent to written material. While it is accepted that § 11 (3) of the German Criminal Code includes in writings any e-mails or chat room messages, as long as they temporarily use computer memory, there is a non settled dispute whether real-time chat room broadcasting is also included in this definition. The problem is that most chat rooms do not use the temporary computer memory and it is said that it could technically not be seen as data and therefore not as "writings" in the sense of § 176 (4) no. 3 of the German Criminal Code, even though there are actual letters.<sup>264</sup>

Any verbal infringement for example over the phone does not fulfil the requirements of § 176 (4) no. 3 of the German Criminal Code.

Till today, the legal uncertainty about whether cases, in which the perpetrator tries to arrange a meeting with the child for sexual contact through internet forums, chat rooms or social networks, the so called grooming, can be prosecuted has not been dissolved by the legislator. The fact is, that the perpetrator does not have to meet with the child in order to be accused of sexual abuse. Also it is not stated that the writings themselves necessarily have to be sexual, only the perpetrator has to think of them as being qualified to influence the child in the intended way.

xlvi.

---

<sup>263</sup> Renzikowski, op. cit., p. 1321.

<sup>264</sup> Renzikowski, op. cit., p. 1321; see also: M. Gercke, EU: Verabschiedung der Richtlinie gegen Kinderpornographie.

Aiding and abetting

In the German Criminal Code the question of whether aiding and abetting to a special felony is criminalised, has to be decided in accordance with the general rules in the code. According to §§ 26 and 27 (1) of the German Criminal Code a person aiding and abetting any crime is always liable to prosecution when there is an intentional aided or abetted primary offence. Aiding and abetting / inciting always require an unlawful primary offence. Without a primary offence there can be no conviction for aiding and abetting.<sup>265</sup> The attempt to participate in the form of aiding or abetting / inciting also carries criminal liability.<sup>266</sup>

The German Criminal Code makes a clear distinction between perpetrator and participant. Participation would be participation to someone else's crime, whereas the offender commits his own crime. To understand the rules of aiding and abetting one has to know that the joint undertaking of a crime by people who see themselves and must be seen objectively as equal partners in the fulfilling of the crime are both principal offenders.<sup>267</sup> It can be difficult to make a difference between principal and participant. The question whether someone is perpetrator or participant is mainly a question of intent.

There are different theories as to the distinction between perpetrator and participant, but it can be said that basically the perpetrator sees the crime as his own, whereas the participant sees it as someone else's (see above). In addition the perpetrator is the person that has the power over the commission of the crime.

Inciting (in German: anstiften) requires two intentions: first the intent to “instigate someone else to commit an intentionally unlawful offence”.<sup>268</sup> Instigate in this context means to evoke in some other person the intent to commit the crime. Second an intent towards the fulfilling of the main offence.

Aiding is generally any physical and psychological support of the primary offence.<sup>269</sup> There is the question whether the aiding has to be causal to the primary offence in order to be prosecuted. The Federal Court of Justice's position is that no causality is

---

<sup>265</sup> N. Foster & S. Sule, op. cit., p. 375.

<sup>266</sup> § 30 of the German Criminal Code.

<sup>267</sup> Wessels/ Beulke, op. cit., p. 196.

<sup>268</sup> N. Foster, op. cit., p. 375 instigate (in German: bestimmen) cannot be precisely translated in this context.

<sup>269</sup> N. Forster, op. cit., p. 376.

needed for the participant to be guilty of participation in an offence. Aiding also requires the double intent - intent to aid and intent towards the fulfilling of the main offence.<sup>270</sup>

These rules of participation are generally applicable for any criminal offence. There can be a few exceptions.

Special rules apply for sexual abuse of a child, § 176 (4) no. 3 and (5) of the German Criminal Code. Both provisions state that liability already arises in a stadium that only constitutes preparation of the sexual abuse of a child. Examples are: making contact over the internet or trying to meet the child, acts that can't be seen as the actual attempt to sexually abuse the child. The act of preparing an offence is usually not punishable, because it is too early to speak of culpability (see above). Participation on the other hand can only be prosecuted if there is a primary offence. § 176 (4) no. 3 and (5) open a gate to prosecution of acts of preparation for sexual abuse. This early stadium of liability is very contradictory to the general legislation. Therefore it is said, that participation is illegal concerning those sections but for the said reasons should not be prosecuted.<sup>271</sup>

A strong opinion claims, that participants (as aiders or abettors) of the offence of publishing pornographic content of adults under 18 (§ 184 of the German Criminal Code) who logically are a necessary element of the offence, can't be liable to prosecution. It is said that consuming such content is not a strong enough offence. This can be understood up to the point where the participant actively takes a step further than just taking advantage of an opportunity.<sup>272</sup> In any case of possession or attempt to possess pornographic content featuring a child (under 14), § 184b of the German Criminal Code gives reason to prosecute according to the general rules of participation (see above).

Attempt

There are five different stages of a crime recognised by German criminal law:

1. The decision by the would-be-offender to commit a crime;
2. its preparation;

---

<sup>270</sup> Wessels/ Beulke, op. cit., 41st ed., p. 220 – 222.

<sup>271</sup> Renzikowski, op. cit., marginal no. 56-58.

<sup>272</sup> Hörnle, Münchener Kommentar zum StGB, Munich, 2012, marginal no. 103-104.

3. the beginning of the accomplishment;
4. the accomplishing the constituent elements of the act;
5. completion.<sup>273</sup>

The decision by the would-be-offender is no criminal attempt. For the different offences the point in time at which mere preparation turns into a criminal attempt varies.

Generally the law defines when an offence is already illegal when attempted. § 23 of the German Criminal Code defines: Any attempt to commit a felony entails criminal liability; this applies to attempted misdemeanours only if expressly provided by the law. § 12 of the German Criminal Code defines felonies (Verbrechen) and misdemeanours (Vergehen):

1. Felonies are unlawful acts punishable by a minimum sentence of one year's imprisonment,
2. misdemeanours are unlawful acts punishable by a lesser minimum term of imprisonment or by fine.

Attempting actual sexual abuse of a child is a criminal act. Sexual abuse is an offence and therefore the legal norms contain a clause that its attempt also entails criminal liability.

2.6 Corporate Liability

xlix. In Germany corporate liability, in the sense that corporations and companies can be held liable to prosecution for any action, does not exist.<sup>274</sup>

- i. The reason is that German Law considers that generally legal persons (juristische Personen) cannot act like natural persons (natürliche Personen), because they are no human beings. Organs of a company, like a manager or chief executive officer, can be held liable as individuals, but not the company itself.<sup>275</sup>
- li. Not having the possibility to punish corporations is certainly a topic of controversy.<sup>276</sup> There is a Commercial Criminal Law, but it doesn't include any regulation about the liability for actions like sexual abuse, beating, etc.

<sup>273</sup> N. Foster, op. cit., p. 366.

<sup>274</sup> K. Leipold, Strafbarkeit von Unternehmen, NJW Spezial 2008, p. 216.

<sup>275</sup> Gruhl, Juristische Personen als Strafbare Subjekte?

<sup>276</sup> K. Leipold, Strafbarkeit von Unternehmen, NJW Spezial 2008, p. 216.

2.7 Aggravating Circumstances

- lii. A crime of sexual abuse of a child is very harmful itself. Certain circumstances, like causing physical harm or death, can add to the wrong of the sexual abuse and the culpability of the perpetrator. The German Criminal Code accepts these aggravating circumstances and threatens an even greater punishment.

Aggravating circumstances that give reason for longer terms of imprisonment than simple sexual abuse, are:

- h. The offender by the offence places the child in danger of serious injury or substantial impairment of his physical or emotional development (§ 176a (2) no. 3 of the German Criminal Code)
- i. The offence is committed jointly by more than one person (§ 176a (2) no. 2 of the German Criminal Code)
- j. A person over eighteen years of age performs sexual intercourse or similar sexual acts with the child which include a penetration of the body, or allows them to be performed on himself by the child (§ 176a (2) no. 1 of the German Criminal Code)
- k. The crime is committed with the intent of making the act the object of a pornographic medium (§ 176a (3) of the German Criminal Code)

These are punishable with imprisonment of not less than two years. Who seriously physically abuses a child or places it in the danger of death is liable to imprisonment of not less than five years. The greatest aggravating circumstance, which makes the offender liable for at least ten years up to life-long imprisonment (which in Germany actually isn't necessarily life-long)<sup>277</sup> is causing the death of the abused child (§ 176b of the German Criminal Code). This liability may arise even though the death has been caused by negligence.

If the circumstances of the case do not already fulfil the element of aggravated sexual abuse, § 176 (3) of the German Criminal Code names “especially serious cases” which also open the possibility for stronger punishment. Such circumstances can be those, which are especially degrading or cases in which the perpetrator takes advantage of the child's fear or uses violence.<sup>278</sup>

---

<sup>277</sup> In German law the life long punishment actually means that after 15 years in prison the offender is set free on probation. see: Was bedeutet in Deutschland Lebenslänglich?, Hamburger Abendblatt, <http://www.abendblatt.de/politik/deutschland/article956833/Was-bedeutet-in-Deutschland-lebenslaenglich.html>, last visited october 25th 2012.

2.8 Sanctions and Measures

- liii. Sexual Abuse in general is regulated in the German Criminal Code in the §§ 174 to 184g. In there various sanctions for sexual abuse of children are laid out. The lowest sanction is a monetary fine, however only in very mild cases. Normally the sanction will consist in a deprivation of liberty, which ranges from three months to ten years. If the culprit however causes the death of its victim, then the sanction is either a life sentence or at least the deprivation of liberty for ten years.

The other crimes mentioned above fall into the German Category of sexual abuse and are as such regulated as part of these regulations. The sanctions vary depending on multiple factors some being: the age of the child, the intensity of the abuse, actual physical harm to the child and others. Apart from the fact that the production of Child Pornography is sanctioned under German law<sup>279</sup>, the possession and distribution of pornographic material involving children is as well.

Extradition is regulated partially in the Basic Law but mostly in the law for the international legal help in criminal affairs (Gesetz über die internationale Rechtshilfe in Strafsachen). This law however is only applicable when there are no bilateral or multilateral contracts between the involved countries. The constitution forbids extradition of German nationals only excepting the extradition to other member states of the European Union or to an international court.<sup>280</sup>

- liv. Evaluating sanction for crimes is always a very difficult project. Crimes against children and crimes involving sexual abuse are aside from murder or inflicting serious physical danger without question the worst crimes. As such it is necessary that the sanctions for these crimes reflect the seriousness of these crimes. However what is more difficult to ascertain is whether or not the punishment is too high. Many people when asked about sexual abuse especially sexual abuse involving children find that really no punishment exists that is harsh enough for what has been done. However when one looks at why certain behaviour needs to be punished in general, one has to take a different point of view. Sanctions in general do not only serve the purpose of retribution, although retribution is one of many criteria to be considered. They also aim to change the culprits' behaviour and reintegrate him or her into society. In that case a lower punishment, especially a sanction that doesn't involve removing the culprit from its social background can be more effective. On the other hand in some cases it is necessary to remove the culprit from its normal habitat to allow him to escape bad influences. Criminals committing crimes against children especially sexual abuse of children often suffer from a psychological condition and thus require special treatment. In these cases it can be quite practical to remove these for a longer period of time from society for a therapy. There the focus should be on the therapy though. To find a balance between these varying aspects is a difficult task. The sanctions laid out in the German Criminal Code seem to be a good solution to the problem. They allow enough room to differentiate between the various degrees of seriousness of a crime and thus ensure fair and just treatment of all parties involved.

<sup>278</sup> Fischer, op. cit., p. 1148, see also part II. 2. a above.

<sup>279</sup> §§ 184 b; 184 c of the German Criminal Code.

<sup>280</sup> Article 16 (2) Basic Law.

- lv. Legal persons are not sanctioned by the German Criminal Code. However the natural persons behind the legal persons are held accountable for their actions.
- lvi. The seizure and confiscation of materials and others is regulated in the German Code of Criminal Procedure in the paragraphs including following § 94 of the German Code of Criminal Procedure. It allows the seizure and confiscation of objects that could be relevant for the investigation of a crime that also includes objects belonging to other people and other objects that were gained from or used for a crime<sup>281</sup>.

Germany protects witnesses and other bona fide third parties using various measures. Depending on the seriousness of the threat, measures can include allowing witnesses to hide their address and instead only disclose their work address<sup>282</sup>. In more serious cases the witness can have the right not to have to disclose any information regarding his or her identity<sup>283</sup>. If necessary witnesses are taken into a witness protection program and get a different identity for a while.<sup>284</sup> No special fund exists for financing prevention or intervention programmes. Programmes like the Early Aid for Parents and

---

<sup>281</sup> § 111b of the German Code of Criminal Procedure, §§ 73, 74 of the German Criminal Code.

<sup>282</sup> § 68 (2) 1 of the German Code of Criminal Procedure.

<sup>283</sup> § 68 (3) 1 of the German Code of Criminal Procedure.

<sup>284</sup> § 5 Law on the Harmonisation of witness protection („Zeugenschutzharmonisierungsgesetz“).

Children and social early warning systems (Frühe Hilfen für Eltern und Kinder und soziale Frühwarnsysteme) are financed by the state<sup>285</sup>.

- lvii. In general the law for sexual abuse of children is stricter for people who have a special relation to a child. That means especially the parents or the legal guardians of a child are more likely to be punished. However in 2011 the German Government published a plan for the protection against sexual abuse and extortion of children and adolescents.<sup>286</sup> The plan is a reaction to various scandals of sexual abuse of children in institutions in the whole of Germany. It focuses on improving help for parents, supplying them with more information and enabling them to strengthen their children to react to sexual abuse. Furthermore an aim is to further educate the professional groups that mostly work with children.

Apart from the plan for the protection against sexual abuse of children in institutions for children and adolescents, the state reacts to sexual abuse depending on the gravity of the crime. In very mild cases the parents are simply supported and educated by the child protective services. However in more serious cases measures can include a “go-order” (the offender has to leave the common residence) or the withdrawal of the parental care.<sup>287</sup>

3 CRIMINAL PROCEDURE

3.1 Investigation

- ix. The investigation previous to the court proceedings usually starts with an interrogation of the victim.<sup>288</sup> The child has a right to bring a relative or a lawyer to the interrogation. In some cases, especially in cases of sexual abuse, the court can order a lawyer to come to the child’s aid. In such cases it even has the right to claim for lawyer support without further expenses.<sup>289</sup>

<sup>285</sup> <http://www.bmfsfj.de/BMFSFJ/kinder-und-jugend,did=119200.html>, last visited on the 19.10.2012 at 00:17.

<sup>286</sup> <http://www.bmfsfj.de/RedaktionBMFSFJ/Abteilung5/Pdf-Anlagen/aktionsplan-2011,property=pdf,bereich=bmfsfj,sprache=de,rwb=true.pdf>, last visited on the 18.10.2012 at 22:54.

<sup>287</sup> http://www.familienhandbuch.de/cms/Rechtsfragen\_Schweikert-Gewalt.pdf, last visited on the 18.10.2012 at 22:54; §§ 1666 ff. BGB.

<sup>288</sup> “What happens during the Investigation Procedure?“, 28/10/2012, 28/10/2012, <http://www.missbrauch-opfereratgeber.de/ermittlungsverfahren.html>.

<sup>289</sup> “What happens during the Investigation Pricedure?“, op. cit.

In court proceedings not only the offenders, but also the witnesses have to be questioned in order to detect the true events. For children who had to suffer sexual abuse it can be a psychological harmful experience to recall the events of the sexual abuse in front of the offender and others.

Therefore the literature on this topic highlights the significance of creating an atmosphere for the child in which it can feel comfortable. It must have to be given the possibility to freely speak about the offence.<sup>290</sup> In each individual case it can be considered that the child has a representative on his side, for example a parent or a professional victim lawyer. In some cases the attendance of relatives, (in most cases mothers), can make the situation worse.<sup>291</sup>

Generally the accused and his lawyer have a right not only to stay in the courtroom when the victim is being questioned but also to ask questions themselves (§ 168c II of the German Code of Criminal Procedure).<sup>292</sup> For psychological reasons, children (under 18) may only be questioned by the judge (§ 241a of the German Code of Criminal Procedure).<sup>293</sup> It is also possible that interrogation by the judge is done via picture-and-sound-technique (“audio-vision-interrogation“).<sup>294</sup> According to § 255a of the German Code of Criminal Procedure only audio-vision material may be used in the main trial, instead of the actual interrogation in the court room, which contains the interrogation by the judge, according to the rules of the Code of Criminal Procedure, and the accused and his defence lawyer had a chance to contribute to the interrogation as for example, to have certain questions asked.<sup>295</sup>

A representation of the principle of “the best interest of the child“ is laid down in § 168e of the German Code of Criminal Procedure which gives the judge the right to do any questioning necessary during the main trial, without the persons present, when their presence can cause danger to the wellbeing of the child.<sup>296</sup> The interrogation then

---

<sup>290</sup> Herrmann, in Roggenwallner/ Herrmann/ Jansen, Straftaten gegen die Sexuelle Selbstbestimmung, ZAP Verlag, Münster, 2011, p. 190.

<sup>291</sup> ibid.

<sup>292</sup> Herrmann, op. cit., p. 215.

<sup>293</sup> Meyer-Goßler, StPO, C.H. Beck, München, 2012, p. 980.

<sup>294</sup> Herrmann, op. cit., p. 215.

<sup>295</sup> Meyer-Goßler, op. cit., p. 1076.

<sup>296</sup> German Federal Ministry of Justice, “Bundeseinheitliche Handreichung zum Schutz kindlicher (Opfer) Zeugen im Strafverfahren“, 2012, 29/10/2012, http://www.bmj.de/SharedDocs/Downloads/DE/Fachuntersuchungen/Bundeseinheitliche\_Handreichung\_zum\_Schutz\_kindlicher\_Opfer\_Zeugen\_im\_Strafverfahren.pdf?\_\_blob=publicationFile.

takes place in a special interrogation room and is transmitted to the courtroom through one-way broadcasting.

Another possibility to find an equal solution of protection of the child from further traumatic experience and the punishment of the offender is the victim-offender-settlement (Täter-Opfer-Ausgleich). In this off-court procedure, both parties can come together at free will to settle the „dispute“. <sup>297</sup> One of the aims is that the offender takes responsibility for his action and confesses in court. He can in return be sentenced with a mitigated penalty. This is especially important for the child's benefit, because often a prompt confession can save it from further suffering due to long court procedures. <sup>298</sup>

In reliance on the principle of „the best interest of the child“, the Federal Ministry of Justice published in 2010 a paper, addressing organs of the justice, social groups, the police and others. It contains information and guidelines concerning matters of the protection of child (victim) witnesses in the Federal Republic of Germany. <sup>299</sup> The Federal Ministry of Justice warns not only to pay attention to punish the offender but to realise that in the foreground of any investigation stands the wellbeing of the child which suffered from the sexual abuse. It emphasises the importance not to expose the child to unnecessary often and long interviews. <sup>300</sup>

The round table on „Sexual abuse of children“ - „Runder Tisch, Sexueller Missbrauch von Kindern“ <sup>301</sup> agreed to develop better education for judges and members of the judiciary in matters of victim treatment. Also multiple interrogations should be avoided more strongly than before. All victims shall have a victim lawyer. The right to have information shall be enlarged. The stresses and strains of children and juveniles have

---

<sup>297</sup> Herrmann, op. cit., p. 230.

<sup>298</sup> Herrmann, op. cit., p. 231.

<sup>299</sup> German Federal Ministry of Justice, 2012, 28/10/2012, http://www.bmj.de/SharedDocs/Downloads/DE/Fachuntersuchungen/Bundeseinheitliche\_Handreichung\_zum\_Schutz\_kindlicher\_Opfer\_Zeugen\_im\_Strafverfahren.html.

<sup>300</sup> German Federal Ministry of Justice, „Bundeseinheitliche Handreichung zum Schutz kindlicher (Opfer) Zeugen im Strafverfahren“, op. cit.

<sup>301</sup> see Child Protection iii.; German Federal Ministry of Justice, 11/2011, 28/10/2012, http://www.bmj.de/SharedDocs/Downloads/DE/pdfs/Abschlussbericht\_RunderTisch.pdf?\_\_blob=publicationFile.

been taken into consideration more seriously, when deciding about excluding the public from the court procedure.<sup>302</sup>

- x. There can be special units investigating certain crimes within the police force or the public body of prosecution.<sup>303</sup> Methods of these task forces for example are, searching video material for pornographic images<sup>304</sup>, or executing search warrants<sup>305</sup>. Bigger operations to catch a great amount of suspects were for example operation “Mikado”<sup>306</sup> in 2003, operation “Marcy”<sup>307</sup> in 2007, which was one of the greatest preliminary proceeding in world history at that time, or operation “Himmel” (heaven) in year 2007.<sup>308</sup> The significance is that all of these operations work according to a similar pattern. When one suspect is caught, the investigation forces search their computers and data memories for names or faces of other possible offenders. This includes watching pornographic material. Then, house searches are done to safe evidence and arrest a large amount of suspects at one time. Those operations are done secretly, because when information goes public, offenders could hide evidence at the last moment and inform accomplices.<sup>309</sup>
- xi. It is not required that a crime as mentioned above is reported in order to be prosecuted, because the prosecution authorities have the obligation to prosecute any offence on their own motion.<sup>310</sup> They are obliged to investigate, as soon as they get notice of a suspicion. After investigation the prosecution authorities can decide

---

<sup>302</sup> German Federal Ministry of Justice, “Opferschutz im Ermittlungs- und Strafverfahren”, 11/2011, 28/10/2012, http://www.bmj.de/SharedDocs/Downloads/DE/pdfs/Abschlussbericht\_RunderTisch.pdf?\_\_blob=publicationFile.

<sup>303</sup> e. g.: department LKA 13 of the Land Office of Criminal Investigation, 2012, 28/10/2012, <https://www.berlin.de/polizei/kriminalitaet/sexualdelikte.html>.

<sup>304</sup> J. Schneider, “Fahndung am Bildschirm”, Süddeutsche Zeitung online, 28/10/2012, <http://www.sueddeutsche.de/panorama/kinderpornographie-fahndung-am-bildschirm-1.922770>.

<sup>305</sup> J. Todt, “Fahnder überprüfen erstmals alle deutschen Kreditkarten”, Spiegel online, 09/2012, 28/10/2012, <http://www.spiegel.de/panorama/justiz/kinderpornografie-im-internet-fahnder-ueberpruefen-erstmals-alle-deutschen-kreditkarten-a-457844.html>; (The house searches, including private houses and offices, were followed by a credit card check of every owner who had transferred a certain amount of money to a suspicious bank account).

<sup>306</sup> J. Todt, op. cit.

<sup>307</sup> Spiegel Online, “Polizei lässt Kinderporno-Ringe hochgehen”, Spiegel Online, 09/2003, 29/10/2012, <http://www.spiegel.de/netzwelt/web/operation-marcy-polizei-laesst-kinderporno-ringe-hochgehen-a-267225.html>.

<sup>308</sup> Focus Online, “Fahnder sorgen sich um Beweismaterial”, Focus online, 12/2007, 29/10/2012, http://www.focus.de/panorama/welt/kinderpornografie-skandal\_aid\_230672.html.

<sup>309</sup> see the case of operation “Himmel”: Spiegel Online, “Polizei lässt Kinderporno-Ringe hochgehen”, op. cit.

<sup>310</sup> Herrmann, op. cit., p. 155f; German Federal Ministry of Justice, 11/2011, 28/10/2012, http://www.bmj.de/SharedDocs/Downloads/DE/pdfs/RunderTisch\_Leitlinien\_zur\_Einschaltung\_der\_Strafverfolgungsbehoerden.pdf?\_\_blob=publicationFile.

whether suspicion is strong enough to bring an action against the suspect or to drop further investigation.

Besides investigation on own motion every victim of child abuse has the right to report any crime to the authorities (which can be police, prosecution or the court).<sup>311</sup> They have also the specific right to file a demand for prosecution on which behalf, the prosecution authorities have to validate if indication is given for suspicion. A criminal complaint can be made by anybody else as well.<sup>312</sup>

More importantly, there can be cases, in which children which suffered from sexual abuse does not want to have further investigation, because they are afraid of further suffering due to difficult criminal procedures or they are ashamed of what happened to them.<sup>313</sup> The question is: Can an investigation procedure by the prosecution authorities be stopped, once the authorities got notice?

There can be an exception of the duty on some authorities like social groups or doctors to refer cases of sexual abuse to the prosecution authorities, but once the prosecution started investigating, there is no possibility to bring the investigation to halt, even when the person reporting a crime withdraws from its statements.<sup>314</sup>

- xii. The limitation of sexual abuse of juveniles is five, in some exceptions three years. Sexual abuse of a child is limited to ten years, in especially serious cases twenty years or even thirty years. The limitation period starts when the abused victim turns to the age of eighteen. The only offence without a limitation is murder.<sup>315</sup> This limitation ruling has been strongly criticised, especially since the events in which priests sexually abused children and some of the offenders could not be punished because of the

---

<sup>311</sup> Unabhängiger Beauftragter für Fragen des sexuellen Kindesmissbrauchs (Independent commissioner for questions concerning sexual abuse of children), Opferrecht, 2012, 29/10/2012, <http://beauftragter-missbrauch.de/course/view.php?id=90>.

<sup>312</sup> Polizeiliche Kriminalprävention der Länder und des Bundes, 2012, 28/10/2012, http://www.polizei-beratung.de/opferinformationen/sexueller-missbrauch-von-kindern/ablauf-des-strafverfahrens.html#section\_2.

<sup>313</sup> C. Bergmann, “Abschlussbericht der unabhängigen Beauftragten zur Aufarbeitung des sexuellen Kindesmissbrauchs“, 04/2011, p. 187.

<sup>314</sup> Polizeiliche Kriminalprävention der Länder und des Bundes, 2012, 28/12/2012, http://www.polizei-beratung.de/opferinformationen/sexueller-missbrauch-von-kindern/ablauf-des-strafverfahrens.html#section\_2; German Federal Ministry of Justice, 11/2011, 28/10/2012, http://www.bmj.de/SharedDocs/Downloads/DE/pdfs/RunderTisch\_Leitlinien\_zur\_Einschaltung\_der\_Strafverfolgungsbehoerden.pdf?\_\_blob=publicationFile.

<sup>315</sup> C. Bergmann, op. cit., p. 164.

limitation.<sup>316</sup> In cases of sexual abuse of children, the victims very often need a long time and often therapy, until they talk about the abuse and an even longer time period until they feel ready to report the crime. Until then many cases are already protected from prosecution.<sup>317</sup> The legislator has not passed any legislation on this topic till today, but some change can be expected.

- xiii. During research no case could be found in which the age of the victim was not certain. Regarding § 176 (1) of the German Criminal Code child abuse requires an age of less than 14 years. Usually it is possible to determine the victim's identity and therefore its age. If this is not the case a first step would probably be to identify the victim. A different problem arises in cases in which the offender does not know that the victim is under the age of 14. As described earlier under the German Criminal Law an offender must act at least with indirect intent, meaning that - in the case of § 176 of the German Criminal Code - he or she must at least consider it possible that the victim is under 14 years of age and must approve it eventually.<sup>318</sup> If the offender does not even think about the age of the victim, he or she does not act with indirect intent and therefore is not liable to prosecution under § 176 (1).<sup>319</sup>
- xiv. Article 37 of the Lanzarote Convention stipulates that every state has to take legislative and other measures to record and store national data on convicted sexual offenders – data relating to the identity and the genetic profile (DNA) - for the purpose of prevention and prosecution of child exploitation and child abuse.<sup>320</sup> The §§ 81e to 81g of the German Code of Criminal Procedure have proved of value and are an effective measure to the clarification of facts and criminal offences. With the law to change the provisions on crimes against sexual self-determination and to change other provisions of 27th December 2003,<sup>321</sup> the offences under § 81g (1) of the

---

<sup>316</sup> C. Gesellensetter, “Zwischen Verjährung und Vergeltung“ (Between limitation and retaliation), Focus online, 2012, 29/10/2012, http://www.focus.de/panorama/welt/missbrauchsskandal/sexueller-missbrauch-zwischen-verjaehrung-und-vergeltung\_aid\_488404.html.

<sup>317</sup> C. Bergmann, op. cit., p.164.

<sup>318</sup> A. Schönke/ H. Schröder, Strafgesetzbuch: StGB, C. H. Beck, München, 2010, § 176, marginal no. 10.

<sup>319</sup> ibid.

<sup>320</sup> Art. 37 Lanzarote Convention, accessed from: <http://conventions.coe.int/Treaty/EN/treaties/html/201.htm>.

<sup>321</sup> Federal Law Gazette Part I, classification number 67 of 30 December 2003 (Federal Law Gazette I p. 3007), 2003, 28/10/2012, http://www.bgbl.de/Xaver/text.xav?bk=Bundesanzeiger\_BGBI&start=%2F%2F%5B%40attr\_id%3D%27bgl103s3007.pdf%5D&wc=1&skin=WC.

German Code of Criminal Procedure<sup>322</sup> allowing the collecting and storing of DNA identification samples of the accused when there is suspicion of a criminal act were extended to all crimes against sexual self-determination, so that the DNA analysis was made easier for the purposes of future criminal prosecution. Since then, criminal prosecutors no longer need to wait until a sexual offender has committed massive crimes in order to make a DNA analysis or storage.

Under § 81g (1) 2 of the German Code of Criminal Procedure the repeated committing of other wrongful acts can be seen to be equivalent to one criminal act of considerable significance and thereby permit the collection and storage of DNA identification samples. This also has an effect on the combating of offences against sexual self-determination.

Studies of the Federal Criminal Police Office<sup>323</sup> and of the central criminological unit show that there is already considerable police data against aggressive sexual offenders in other areas of offence, including crimes against property or physical integrity, which now make it possible to proceed to examine the ordering of a DNA analysis as a preventive measure (BT-Drs. 15/5674 p. 7).<sup>324</sup> Likewise the express legal provision of mass genetic tests in § 81h of the German Code of Criminal Procedure<sup>325</sup> contributes to a more effective prosecution of crimes against sexual self-determination.

According to § 483 of the German Code of Criminal Procedure<sup>326</sup>, personal data can be stored by courts, law enforcement authorities and agencies, public prosecution offices and other judicial authorities.

Furthermore Art. 38 of the Lanzarote Convention provides principles and measures for international co-operation in preventing and combating sexual exploitation and abuse of children and bringing investigations and proceedings concerning those offences. Countries shall ensure mutual legal assistance with regard to this kind of criminal matters and provide beneficiary information to third states. § 487 of the

---

<sup>322</sup> § 81 g of the German Code of Criminal Procedure, accessed from: http://www.gesetze-im-internet.de/englisch\_stpo/englisch\_stpo.html#p0364.

<sup>323</sup> Bundeskriminalamt (Federal Criminal Police Office), 2012, 29/10/2012, http://www.bka.de/EN/Home/homepage\_\_node.html?\_\_nnn=true.

<sup>324</sup> Bundestag document No. 15/5674 of 14 June 2005, 14/06/2005, 28/10/2012, <http://dip21.bundestag.de/dip21/btd/15/056/1505674.pdf>.

<sup>325</sup> § 81 h of the German Code of Criminal Procedure, 21/07/2012, 28/10/2012, http://www.gesetze-im-internet.de/englisch\_stpo/englisch\_stpo.html#p0380.

<sup>326</sup> § 483 of the German Code of Criminal Procedure, 21/07/2012, 28/10/2012, http://www.gesetze-im-internet.de/englisch\_stpo/englisch\_stpo.html#p2808.

limited possibilities of the criminal court to reject a decision on the right to compensation.

- xvi. The serious impact of domestic violence on the development of children up to adulthood is obvious. Offenders are often current or former partners of the women or male members of the family.<sup>332</sup>

Children who have been victims of sexual abuse are protected during court proceedings by having them questioned by the judge, without anybody else present. The child can have a victim lawyer or relative with it for support. The times of interrogation and number of questions are held as low as possible.<sup>333</sup>

4 COMPLEMENTARY MEASURES

Preventive Measures

- xiii. In Germany child protective services are only allowed to hire people working with children when they fulfil the requirements of § 72 of the German Social Code, Book VIII<sup>334</sup>. It requires that the person has a suitable personality and that has received adequate education for the given task. Alternatively a person can be qualified if specific experiences with social work exist that enable the person to complete the given tasks.

Additionally § 72a of the German Social Code, Book VIII<sup>335</sup> requires that a person has not been convicted for a number of specific crimes (§§ 171, 174 – 174c, 176 – 180a, 181a, 182 – 184f, 225, 232 – 233a, 234, 235, 236 of the German Criminal Code). All these crimes relate to the abuse of children in various forms.

Furthermore the child protective services have to ensure that its workers receive further training and counselling, § 72 (3) of the German Social Code, Book VIII<sup>336</sup>.

---

<sup>332</sup> Federal Ministry for Family Affairs, Senior Citizens, Woman and Youth, 2012, 29/10/2012, <http://www.bmfsfj.de/RedaktionBMFSFJ/Broschuerenstelle/Pdf-Anlagen/Sachstandsbericht-RIO-englisch,property=pdf,bereich=bmfsfj,sprache=de,rwb=true.pdf>.

<sup>333</sup> ibid.

<sup>334</sup> German Federal Ministry of Justice, 27/10/2012, 27/10/2012, http://www.gesetze-im-internet.de/sgb\_8/\_72.html.

<sup>335</sup> German Federal Ministry of Justice, 27/10/2012, 27/10/2012, http://www.gesetze-im-internet.de/sgb\_8/\_72a.html.

<sup>336</sup> German Federal Ministry of Justice, 27/10/2012, 27/10/2012, http://www.gesetze-im-internet.de/sgb\_8/\_72.html.

- xiv. At the beginning of 2013 a campaign called “Kein Raum für Missbrauch” (No space for abuse) starts which aims to inform the general public with regard to sexual abuse of children. It is originated to keep potential abusers away from facilities and to strengthen the position of people working with children.<sup>337</sup>
- xv. There is a programme called “Kein Täter werden” (Not becoming an offender),<sup>338</sup> which offers therapy in various locations all around Germany for paedophiles. The therapy is free and aims to prevent sexual abuse and other crimes. The programme guarantees absolute confidentiality to all participants and involves group therapy as well as individual counselling.<sup>339</sup>

Protective Measures and Assistance to Victims

- xvi. There is a programme called “Sprechen hilft”<sup>340</sup> (“Speaking helps”), which is an initiative by the “Unabhängiger Beauftragter für Fragen des sexuellen Kindesmissbrauchs” (Independent Agent for questions concerning the sexual abuse of children) and aims to encourage victims of sexual abuse to speak out and get help.<sup>341</sup> Financial compensation is also given in the scope of the Opferentschädigungsgesetz (Law on the compensation of victims).
- xvii. There are various service lines for victims. Most child protective services<sup>342</sup> offer one as well as the “Unabhängiger Beauftragter für Fragen des sexuellen Kindesmissbrauchs”.<sup>343</sup> The helplines are staffed with trained personal and act as first contact to victims as well as

<sup>337</sup> Geschäftsstelle des Unabhängigen Beauftragten für Fragen des sexuellen Kindesmissbrauchs (Office of the Independent Agent for questions concerning the sexual abuse of children), 2012, 27/10/2012, <http://beauftragter-missbrauch.de/course/view.php?id=188>.

<sup>338</sup> Institut für Sexualwissenschaft und Sexualmedizin am Universitätsklinikum Charité, Zentrum für Human- und Gesundheitswissenschaften Universitätsklinikum Charité Campus Mitte - Freie und Humboldt-Universität zu Berlin, 27/10/2012, 27/10/2012, <http://www.kein-taeter-werden.de/>.

<sup>339</sup> Institut für Sexualwissenschaft und Sexualmedizin am Universitätsklinikum Charité, Zentrum für Human- und Gesundheitswissenschaften Universitätsklinikum Charité Campus Mitte - Freie und Humboldt-Universität zu Berlin, 27/10/2012, 27/10/2012, <http://www.kein-taeter-werden.de/story/38/3838.html>.

<sup>340</sup> Geschäftsstelle des Unabhängigen Beauftragten für Fragen des sexuellen Kindesmissbrauchs (Office of the Independent Agent for questions concerning the sexual abuse of children), 2010, 27/10/2012, <http://www.sprechen-hilft.de/>.

<sup>341</sup> Geschäftsstelle des Unabhängigen Beauftragten für Fragen des sexuellen Kindesmissbrauchs (Office of the Independent Agent for questions concerning the sexual abuse of children), 2010, 27/10/2012, <http://www.sprechen-hilft.de/kampagne.html>.

<sup>342</sup> Further information: 27/10/2012, <http://www.hamburg.de/kinderschutz-hotline/>; <http://www.berlin.de/ba-mitte/org/jugendamt/kinderschutz.html>; <http://www.muenchen.de/rathaus/Stadtverwaltung/Sozialreferat/Jugendamt/Kinderschutz.html>.

<sup>343</sup> Geschäftsstelle des Unabhängigen Beauftragten für Fragen des sexuellen Kindesmissbrauchs (Office of the Independent Agent for questions concerning the sexual abuse of children), 2012, 27/10/2012, <http://beauftragter-missbrauch.de/course/view.php?id=35>.

relatives of victims. Callers receive information and support in finding a local therapist or help facilities. Confidentiality is guaranteed as well as anonymity.<sup>344</sup>

- xviii. As mentioned above there is a programme called “Sprechen hilft”, which tries to get victims to use the helpline of the Independent agent for questions of sexual abuse of children and to be directed towards receiving professional counselling. Extensive information is given regarding the various treatments to the victims, which can then decide whether they want to use the information and start a therapy or not. The intervention programme is coordinated by people experienced in the field of sexual abuse of children, which are aware of behavioural problems caused due to abuse.<sup>345</sup> Further the state offers financial support for victims as has been regulated in the Opferentschädigungsgesetz<sup>346</sup> (Law on the compensation for victims).

III NATIONAL POLICY REGARDING CHILDREN

- vii. In recent years, the debate on sexual child abuse has become omnipresent. An increased number of child pornography deliveries via internet has been noticed<sup>347</sup>. Moreover, cases of sexual child abuse committed by paedophile clerics hit the headlines in January 2010<sup>348</sup>. Numerous instances of sexual exploitation of school children between 1970 and 1980 at the Canisius-College of Jesuits in Berlin became public<sup>349</sup>. Furthermore, hundreds of cases of sexual child abuse of school children between 1960 and 2010 at the so-called Odenwaldschule - a country boarding school - came to light<sup>350</sup>. In response thereto, the German bishop’s conference established the new office of the nationwide responsible commissioner for cases of (sexual) abuse<sup>351</sup>.

<sup>344</sup> Geschäftsstelle des Unabhängigen Beauftragten für Fragen des sexuellen Kindesmissbrauchs (Office of the Independent Agent for questions concerning the sexual abuse of children), 2012, 27/10/2012, <http://beauftragter-missbrauch.de/course/view.php?id=35>.

<sup>345</sup> Geschäftsstelle des Unabhängigen Beauftragten für Fragen des sexuellen Kindesmissbrauchs (Office of the Independent Agent for questions concerning the sexual abuse of children), 2012, 27/10/2012, <http://beauftragter-missbrauch.de/course/view.php?id=35>.

<sup>346</sup> German Federal Ministry of Justice, 27/10/2012, 27/10/2012, <http://www.gesetze-im-internet.de/oeg/index.html>.

<sup>347</sup> http://www.focus.de/politik/deutschland/erschreckende-zahlen-sexueller-missbrauch-von-kindern-steigt-an\_aid\_752263.html.

<sup>348</sup> <http://www.gegen-missbrauch.de/kirche>.

<sup>349</sup> http://www.jesuiten.org/fileadmin/Redaktion/Downloads/Bericht\_27\_05\_2010\_aktuell.pdf.

<sup>350</sup> <http://www2.ibw.uni-heidelberg.de/~gerstner/120430-Odenwaldschule-Abschlussbericht.pdf>.

<sup>351</sup> <http://www.spiegel.de/panorama/gesellschaft/nach-dem-skandal-bischoefe-bestimmen-missbrauchsbeauftragten-a-680336.html>.

Many priests have been forced to leave their jobs<sup>352</sup>. The investigations have not yet been completed.

Due to the fact of separation of church and state in Germany, there is no obligation for the Catholic Church for cooperation with the state<sup>353</sup>. According to Article 140 of the Basic Law (German Constitution) and Article 137 (2) WRV (Weimar Constitution), the church regulates internal affairs independently. Therefore, resolving cases of sexual child abuse became problematic. It is very controversial whether canon law is an adequate base for an effective system of sanctioning such cases<sup>354</sup>. In response thereto, the Roman Congregation published new rules<sup>355</sup> on church penal law concerning serious criminal offences in July 2010<sup>356</sup>. Among other things, the limitation period has been extended to twenty years<sup>357</sup>. Moreover, the possession, delivery and distribution of child pornography by clerics became a specific offence<sup>358</sup>. In 2010, the German bishop's conference adopted and published a revised version of "Guiding principles for dealing with sexual child abuse"<sup>359</sup>. It is the central basis for all communities of the German Conference of Superiors of Religious Orders (DOK).<sup>360</sup> Furthermore, the German federal cabinet established the "round table sexual child abuse in relationship of dependency and power in private and public bodies and family environment" in 2010.<sup>361</sup> The round table was founded to ensure an effective preventative action against sexual abuse<sup>362</sup>.

Joint chairmen were the Federal Minister for Family Affairs Kristina Schröder, MP; Federal Minister of Justice Sabine Leutheusser-Schnarrenberger, MP; and Federal Education Minister Annette Schavan, MdB. Meetings of the round table were <sup>352</sup> <http://www.spiegel.de/panorama/gesellschaft/trier-bischof-ackermann-entlaesst-priester-wegen-sexuellen-missbrauchs-a-844315.html>.

---

<sup>353</sup> <http://www.lto.de/recht/hintergruende/h/sexueller-missbrauch-durch-kleriker-keine-pflicht-der-kirche-zur-zusammenarbeit-mit-dem-staat/>.

<sup>354</sup> <http://www.lto.de/recht/hintergruende/h/sexueller-missbrauch-durch-kleriker-das-kirchenrecht-als-taugliche-grundlage-angemessener-sanktionierung/>.

<sup>355</sup> <http://www.lto.de/recht/hintergruende/h/sexueller-missbrauch-durch-kleriker-neuregelungen-im-kirchlichen-strafrecht/>.

<sup>356</sup> http://www.dbk.de/fileadmin/redaktion/diverse\_downloads/Dossiers/2010-07-15\_VAT-dt\_Normae-de-gravioribus-delictis.pdf.

<sup>357</sup> <http://www.lto.de/recht/hintergruende/h/sexueller-missbrauch-durch-kleriker-neuregelungen-im-kirchlichen-strafrecht/>.

<sup>358</sup> http://www.orden.de/dokumente/2010.10.07\_leitlinien\_dok\_b.pdf.

<sup>359</sup> http://www.orden.de/dokumente/2010.10.07\_leitlinien\_dok\_b.pdf.

<sup>360</sup> http://www.orden.de/dokumente/2010.10.07\_leitlinien\_dok\_b.pdf.

<sup>361</sup> <http://www.rundertisch-kindesmissbrauch.de/>.

<sup>362</sup> <http://www.rundertisch-kindesmissbrauch.de/>.

attended by representatives of the politics, church, science, justice and child and victim protection NGOs<sup>363</sup>.

viii.

Commitment by NGOs

The awareness within the society regarding sexual child abuse and exploitation has been raised by committed NGOs by supporting the broadcasting of television reports and advertising campaigns pointing out that sexual abuse occurs in everyday life and is not only an exception. Moreover, counselling services provide information for abused victims and give advice to parents on how to protect children against sexual abuse in day-to-day life and the Internet.

Commitment by the State<sup>364</sup>

The commitment by the State is based on providing crucial information on sexual child abuse to the population. By this means, the society is encouraged to civil courage and to increase willingness to report cases of abuse to the police. The State initiates different reports with media campaigns by television broadcast focusing on the status quo of sexual abuse of children in Germany<sup>365</sup>. Furthermore, the federal government has established a national hotline for abused victims in 2010.<sup>366</sup> The “round table of sexual child abuse” has appointed an independent officer for cases of sexual child abuse.<sup>367</sup> This office is personally and financially linked to the German Ministry of Family Affairs.<sup>368</sup> The officer is the contact partner for abused victims; and his task also is to implement guidelines of the round table. Another obligation is to encourage the exchange of information and to increase public awareness of sexual child abuse by initiating media campaigns<sup>369</sup>.

The German Ministry of Education and Research established, in cooperation with NGOs<sup>370</sup>, an “Action Plan 2011 for the protection of children and juveniles against <sup>363</sup><http://www.rundertisch-kindesmissbrauch.de/mitglieder.htm>.

<sup>364</sup> http://www.ungift.org/doc/knowledgehub/resource-centre/Governments/Germany\_Plan\_of\_Action\_of\_the\_Federal\_Government\_for\_the\_protection\_of\_children.pdf.

<sup>365</sup> http://www.regenbogenwald.de/themen/misstand\_opferschutz/index.htm.

<sup>366</sup> <http://www.kathweb.at/content/site/nachrichten/database/32892.html>.

<sup>367</sup> http://www.rundertisch-kindesmissbrauch.de/ziele\_aufgaben.htm.

<sup>368</sup> http://www.rundertisch-kindesmissbrauch.de/ziele\_aufgaben.htm.

<sup>369</sup> <http://beauftragter-missbrauch.de/>.

<sup>370</sup> Federal Ministry for Family Affairs, Senior Citizens, Woman and Youth, 2012, 29/10/2012, <http://www.bmfsfj.de/RedaktionBMFSFJ/Abteilung5/Pdf-Anlagen/aktionsplan-2011,property=pdf,bereich=bmfsfj,sprache=de,rwb=true.pdf>.

sexual violence and exploitation”.<sup>371</sup> By using the contact network,<sup>372</sup> the plan provides the increase of public awareness by provision of training courses among parents and a wide range of professions in order to handle problems of sexual abuse.<sup>373</sup> In addition thereto, the State provides information brochures and established secure homepages<sup>374</sup> for children<sup>375</sup> and online platforms for parents as an indication for secure use of online media and services.<sup>376</sup>

- ix. In the following, the annual police crime statistics from 2008 to 2011 are presented. Only reported cases are displayed.

2008/2009

12052 cases of sexual child abuse were reported in 2008. In 2009 the number of cases was 11319<sup>377</sup>.

The clearance rate has increased from 82,1 % in 2008 to 83,5 % in 2009<sup>378</sup>.

There are 6707 reported cases of possession and delivery of child pornography in 2008.

In 2009, only 3823 cases were registered<sup>379</sup>. Furthermore, 2755 cases of distribution of child pornography were reported. The number has increased in 2009 to 3145 cases.<sup>380</sup>

2010/2011

11867 cases of sexual child abuse were reported in 2010 with a clearance rate of 83,9 %.

---

<sup>371</sup> http://www.ungift.org/doc/knowledgehub/resource-centre/Governments/Germany\_Plan\_of\_Action\_of\_the\_Federal\_Government\_for\_the\_protection\_of\_children.pdf.

<sup>372</sup> www.hinsehen-handeln-helfen.de.

<sup>373</sup> Federal Ministry for Family Affairs, Senior Citizens, Woman and Youth, 2012, 29/10/2012, <http://www.bmfsfj.de/RedaktionBMFSFJ/Abteilung5/Pdf-Anlagen/aktionsplan-2011,property=pdf,bereich=bmfsfj,sprache=de,rwb=true.pdf>, p. 24, 25.

<sup>374</sup> Federal Ministry for Family Affairs, Senior Citizens, Woman and Youth, 2012, 29/10/2012, <http://www.bmfsfj.de/RedaktionBMFSFJ/Abteilung5/Pdf-Anlagen/aktionsplan-2011,property=pdf,bereich=bmfsfj,sprache=de,rwb=true.pdf>, p. 85.

<sup>375</sup> www.surfen-ohne-risiko.net.

<sup>376</sup> www.schau-hin.info.

<sup>377</sup> <http://www.bmi.bund.de/cae/servlet/contentblob/1069004/publicationFile/65239/PKS2009.pdf>, p. 37.

<sup>378</sup> Federal Ministry of the Interior, 2012, 25/10/2012, <http://www.bmi.bund.de/cae/servlet/contentblob/1069004/publicationFile/65239/PKS2009.pdf>, p. 37.

<sup>379</sup> ibid., <http://www.bmi.bund.de/cae/servlet/contentblob/1069004/publicationFile/65239/PKS2009.pdf>, p. 38.

<sup>380</sup> ibid., <http://www.bmi.bund.de/cae/servlet/contentblob/1069004/publicationFile/65239/PKS2009.pdf>, p. 38.

However, in 2011 the police reported 12444 cases and the clearance rate increased to 85,1 %.

There are 2687 reported cases on distribution of child pornography in 2010. 2376 reported cases were registered in 2011.<sup>381</sup> In addition, 3160 cases of possession and delivery of child pornography were reported in 2010. In 2011, already 3896 cases were registered. This is an increase of 23,3 % compared to 2010.<sup>382</sup>

Overall, this statistics show that there is a huge increase in the number of reported cases of children's sexual exploitation from 2008 to 2011. On this background a much higher number of unreported cases has to be supposed that surpasses by far the 12444 registered cases in 2011.

- x. In Germany, many promotional campaigns are supported in order to increase the willingness of victims and witnesses to report abuse cases by providing information for parents and children about the threats on the internet and the dissemination of a code of conduct for children via internet and advertising. The following campaigns are used as examples:

NGOs such as Gegen Missbrauch e.V. (Against Abuse) offer lectures and workshops at schools for children, teachers, parents and educators about sexual abuse and the support for the realization of prevention measures. Moreover, assistance with visits to government offices are offered to victims.<sup>383</sup>

Innocence in danger e.V. initiated the campaign "finally protect our children"<sup>384</sup>, which informs about threats on the internet. Another campaign is "Smart User Peer 2 Peer Prevention"<sup>385</sup>.

Juveniles receive special training by association staff regarding the sexualized violence in the media, and how they can protect themselves against sexual contact with potential sex offenders by potential sex offenders.

---

<sup>381</sup> ibid.,

http://www.bmi.bund.de/SharedDocs/Downloads/DE/Broschueren/2012/PKS2011.pdf?\_\_blob=publication

File, p. 47.

<sup>382</sup> ibid., http://www.bmi.bund.de/SharedDocs/Downloads/DE/Broschueren/2012/PKS2011.pdf?\_\_blob=publicationFile, p. 48.

<sup>383</sup> <http://www.gegen-missbrauch.de/projektuebersicht>.

<sup>384</sup> <http://www.innocenceindanger.de/projekte/schuetzt-endlich-unsere-kinder/>.

<sup>385</sup> <http://www.innocenceindanger.de/projekte/smart-user-peer2peer-praevention/>.

Afterwards children under 18 may pass on this information and give advice in working groups or lectures to children held at their schools.

Another campaign is the research project for undetected offenders “Präventionsprojekt Dunkelfeld” (Prevention Project Dunkelfeld).<sup>386</sup> This project started in 2004 and was initiated by the Institute of Sexology and Sexual Medicine at the Charité University Clinic in Berlin. Since 2008, the project has been financed by Federal funds.<sup>387</sup>

The intent is the therapeutical prevention of sexual child abuse. Potential paedophile sex offenders, who are not known to the judicial authorities, get a preventive treatment, which is subject to medical confidentiality and free of charge, in order to avoid active sexual child abuse and the consumption of child pornography.<sup>388</sup>

By practicing this kind of preventive therapy, a reduction of the amount of cases of sexual abuse committed by undetected potential perpetrators may be possible.

Furthermore, the independent commissioner has launched the nationwide campaign “Das Schweigen brechen – Wer das Schweigen bricht, bricht die Macht der Täter” (Breaking the silence – Who breaks the silence, breaks the power of perpetrators) since 2010.<sup>389</sup>

It calls for victims of sexual abuse to stop breaking the silence because of fear of their perpetrators; and, instead, to talk about the incidents of the past<sup>390</sup>.

xi.

Criminal sanctions

In general, in German criminal law, according to §§ 176, 176a, 176b of the German Criminal Code), sexual child abuse is penalized by prison of up to ten years. At the initiative of the government’s working group of the “round table sexual child abuse”, the victim’s rights have been consolidated 2011 by facilitating criminal proceedings and investigation.<sup>391</sup> It is guaranteed that institutions may advice the authorities responsible immediately in case of suspected sexual abuse of children without taking

---

<sup>386</sup> <http://www.kein-taeter-werden.de/documents/000/000/021/projektdarstellung-und-e2009.pdf>, p. 6.

<sup>387</sup> <http://www.kein-taeter-werden.de/documents/000/000/021/projektdarstellung-und-e2009.pdf>, p. 6.

<sup>388</sup> <http://www.kein-taeter-werden.de/story/27/3827.html>.

<sup>389</sup> http://sprechen-hilft.de/kampagne\_visuelle\_umsetzung.html.

<sup>390</sup> <http://sprechen-hilft.de/kampagne.html>.

<sup>391</sup>

http://www.bundesregierung.de/statisch/jahresbericht2011/Webs/Breg/jahresbericht2011/DE/In\_\_Freiheit\_\_fuereinander\_\_einstehen/Rechtspolitik/rechtspolitik.html.

own vested interests into account<sup>392</sup>. Furthermore, it will ensure that the principles of the rule of law concerning the dealing with the defendant will not be violated. Moreover, by introducing official video recordings of the judge's cross-examination in the main trial, victims should not be interviewed several times anymore<sup>393</sup>. In addition, victims are eligible for legal advice free of charge<sup>394</sup>. Judges and prosecutors to receive better training on the victims' concrete needs<sup>395</sup>.

Moreover, victims get better information and advice on their rights. With regard to the principles of bringing a case to court, victims can bring a lawsuit to the district court<sup>396</sup>, so that they do not have to be interviewed several times.<sup>397</sup>

Civil consequences

So far it has been the case that victim's legal claims expired after a limitation period of three years. However, in most cases, victims of child sexual abuse do not immediately initiate legal proceedings against the suspect of the crime. Due to psychological reasons, it sometimes takes them several years.<sup>398</sup> Therefore, the limitation period has been extended up to thirty years so that victims may much easier assert claims for compensation and damages<sup>399</sup>.

Federal Act on Child Protection

---

<sup>392</sup> Federal Ministry for Family Affairs, Senior Citizens, Woman and Youth, 2012, 29/10/2012, http://www.bmj.de/SharedDocs/Pressemitteilungen/DE/2011/20110310\_Runder\_Tisch\_Leitlinien\_zur\_Einschaltung\_der\_Strafverfolgungsbehoerden.html?nn=1468700.

<sup>393</sup> ibid., http://www.bmj.de/SharedDocs/Pressemitteilungen/DE/2011/20110323\_Rechte\_von\_Opfer\_sexueller\_Gewalt\_werden\_gestaerkt.html?nn=1465600.

<sup>394</sup> ibid., http://www.bmj.de/SharedDocs/Pressemitteilungen/DE/2011/20110323\_Rechte\_von\_Opfer\_sexueller\_Gewalt\_werden\_gestaerkt.html?nn=1465600.

<sup>395</sup> ibid., http://www.bmj.de/SharedDocs/Pressemitteilungen/DE/2011/20110323\_Rechte\_von\_Opfer\_sexueller\_Gewalt\_werden\_gestaerkt.html?nn=1465600.

<sup>396</sup> ibid., http://www.bmj.de/SharedDocs/Pressemitteilungen/DE/2011/20110323\_Rechte\_von\_Opfer\_sexueller\_Gewalt\_werden\_gestaerkt.html?nn=1465600.

<sup>397</sup> ibid., http://www.bmj.de/SharedDocs/Pressemitteilungen/DE/2011/20110323\_Rechte\_von\_Opfer\_sexueller\_Gewalt\_werden\_gestaerkt.html?nn=1465600.

<sup>398</sup> ibid., http://www.bmj.de/SharedDocs/Pressemitteilungen/DE/2011/20110323\_Rechte\_von\_Opfer\_sexueller\_Gewalt\_werden\_gestaerkt.html?nn=1465600.

<sup>399</sup> <http://www.merkur-online.de/nachrichten/politik/laengere-verjaehrungsfrist-missbrauch-840985.html>.

On January 1st 2012, the new Federal Act on Child Protection<sup>400</sup> for the improvement of active protection of children by ensuring more legal certainty entered into force. As a consequence, all staff members of private and state youth welfare services are obliged to provide a criminal record document<sup>401</sup>. Furthermore, the new federal law provides regular checks in institutions of state and private youth welfare services to guarantee an effective protection against sexual child abuse<sup>402</sup>.

- xii. One of the main national Non-Governmental Organisations working on the topic of children's rights are the following: Gegen Missbrauch e.V.<sup>403</sup>; Kindernothilfe e.V.<sup>404</sup>; ECPAT Deutschland e.V.<sup>405</sup>; Deutsche Kinderhilfe e.V.<sup>406</sup>; Deutscher Kinderschutzbund e.V.<sup>407</sup>; Deutsches Kinderhilfswerk e.V.<sup>408</sup>; Innocence in danger e.V.<sup>409</sup>; Kinderschutzziftung Hansel+Grätel<sup>410,411</sup>; Verband Entwicklungspolitik deutscher Nichtregierungsorganisationen (VENRO) e.V.<sup>412</sup>. Due to the fact, that all laws are enacted in the Bundestag, the State does not officially regulate the involvement of NGOs in the law making process. By cooperating with different representatives of politics and justice, NGOs still have a possibility to ensure the involvement of their work indirectly in the law making process.

For example, the Ministry for Economic Cooperation and Development (BMZ) maintains regularly a dialogue with the most important representative of interests of all NGOs registered in Germany, VENRO e.V.<sup>413</sup>. Its mission is especially the full implementation of the rights of children and the improvement of participation and

---

<sup>400</sup> Federal Ministry for Family Affairs, Senior Citizens, Woman and Youth, 2012, 29/10/2012, <http://www.bmfsfj.de/BMFSFJ/kinder-und-jugend,did=119832.html>.

<sup>401</sup> ibid., <http://www.bmfsfj.de/RedaktionBMFSFJ/Abteilung5/Pdf-Anlagen/bundeskinderschutzgesetz-in-kuerze,property=pdf,bereich=bmfsfj,sprache=de,rwb=true.pdf>.

<sup>402</sup> ibid., <http://www.bmfsfj.de/RedaktionBMFSFJ/Abteilung5/Pdf-Anlagen/bundeskinderschutzgesetz-in-kuerze,property=pdf,bereich=bmfsfj,sprache=de,rwb=true.pdf>.

<sup>403</sup> <http://www.gegen-missbrauch.de>.

<sup>404</sup> <http://www.kindernothilfe.de>.

<sup>405</sup> <http://www.ecpat.de>.

<sup>406</sup> <https://www.kinderhilfe.de>.

<sup>407</sup> <http://www.dksb.de/content/start.aspx>.

<sup>408</sup> <http://www.dkhw.de>.

<sup>409</sup> <http://www.innocenceindanger.de>.

<sup>410</sup> <http://www.haensel-gretel.de>.

<sup>411</sup> <http://www.haensel-gretel.de>.

<sup>412</sup> Association of German Development Non-Governmental Organizations.

<sup>413</sup> Federal Ministry for Family Affairs, Senior Citizens, Woman and Youth, 2012, 29/10/2012, <http://www.bmfsfj.de/RedaktionBMFSFJ/Abteilung5/Pdf-Anlagen/aktionsplan-2011,property=pdf,bereich=bmfsfj,sprache=de,rwb=true.pdf>, p. 64.

support of young people in non-governmental development cooperation.<sup>414</sup> In 2007, VENRO has already taken decisive action, for example, the adoption of the “VENRO-Code of children rights<sup>415</sup>: protection of children from abuse and exploitation in development cooperation and humanitarian assistance”<sup>416</sup> in 2007. Finally, NGOs may also derive specific recommendations for action against sexual child abuse to the government by participating in working groups at the round table sexual child abuse.

IV OTHER

There are no other legal or political issues that might be relevant to mention, which are not already mentioned above.

V CONCLUSION

“How does legislation protect child victims from sexual violence in the national legal framework in Germany?” It is this question that underlies the previous essay. To sum up this very complex topic and have one last general look at the situation in Germany, a few things need to be stressed.

First of all it is necessary to admit that the problem of sexual abuse of children does exist in Germany. In the year of 2011 there were 47 078 cases of crimes against the sexual self-determination (chapter thirteen of the German Criminal Code), including attempts of such crimes, according to the police crime statistics.<sup>417</sup> Regarding offences against children, namely sexual violence (§§ 176, 176a, 176b of the German Criminal Code), the statistics enumerates 12 444 cases (including attempts of those offences).<sup>418</sup> Those statistics speak for themselves and with no doubt it is one of the great challenges for the German society and legislation to reduce this number of crimes as far as possible.

---

<sup>414</sup> <http://www.venro.org/kindesschutz0.html>.

<sup>415</sup> <http://www.venro.org/venro-kodizes.html?&L=0>.

<sup>416</sup> http://www.venro.org/fileadmin/redaktion/dokumente/Dokumente-2011/Januar\_2011/Kodex\_Kinderrechte\_v06.pdf.

<sup>417</sup> Federal Ministry of the Interior, 2012, 07/11/2012, http://www.bmi.bund.de/SharedDocs/Downloads/DE/Broschueren/2012/PKS2011.pdf?\_\_blob=publicationFile, p. 45.

<sup>418</sup> ibid.

This is what nowadays a lot of different, governmental and non-governmental organisations put themselves out for in Germany. Most importantly here (and therefore) needs to be named is the Round Table - Child abuse in relationships of dependency and power in private and public bodies and family environment, established in 2010 by the German Government after revelation of the scandals of cases of sexual abuse involving Catholic school institutions. Its aim is to effectively prevent cases of sexual violence against children. Furthermore it serves as a contact partner for victims and their families of such offences.

Furthermore there are several non-governmental organisations as well that play an important part when it comes to preventative measures in Germany. Besides, NGOs may derive specific recommendations for actions against sexual child abuse and exploitation to the government by participating in working groups at the round table for instance. They are thereby trying to influence the law making process within the German Parliament, the Bundestag. Their involvement however is not regulated by the State.

To include the children's perspective in the law making process, the new Federal Act on Child Protection entered into force in 2012, which is to improve the active protection of children by ensuring more legal certainty. As a consequence, all staff members of private and state youth welfare services are obliged to provide a criminal record document. Furthermore, the new federal law provides regular supervisions in these institutions to guarantee an effective protection against sexual child abuse.

When all preventative measures have failed and a child has been sexually abused, a criminal procedure according to the German Code of Criminal Procedure begins in which the German criminal law - as set in the German Criminal Code - is applied.

Children under the age of 14 years are not criminal liable.<sup>419</sup> For people aged above 14 years, the criminal procedure is divided into 5 parts, beginning with investigative proceedings, followed by interlocutory proceedings. Then the main proceedings take place in which the guilt is determined. These can be followed by review proceedings or if the accused is found guilty and does not appeal by the enforcement procedure.

---

<sup>419</sup> § 19 of the German Criminal Code.

Once a prosecution authority has got notice from a case of sexual abuse of a child, it has to investigate. The withdrawal from its statements by the victim cannot stop the investigation. To reduce the strains a trial and even the offender's prosecution can constitute for the victim there are several rules within the German Code of Criminal Procedure trying to make the procedure as easy as possible for the child. Examples are the supply of a child lawyer or the limitation of the times for interrogation. As in the past many offenders could not be prosecuted because victims of sexual abuse need a lot of time until they can open up and even tell about the sexual abuse, it is being discussed nowadays to pass different legislation concerning prescription. Today limitation can be between 3 years up to 20 or 30 years.

If the case has not prescribed, the perpetrator will be judged according to the German criminal law. In cases of sexual abuse it is chapter thirteen of the German Criminal Code that plays the most important role concerning cases of sexual abuse, as it is the segment about offences against the sexual self-determination.

The term sexual activities is not defined in the German Criminal Code; but after interpretation by the jurisprudence and law academics, the Code encompasses the wide definition and thus takes into consideration all acts with or even without body contact. The general sentence range for the sexual abuse of a child rests with between 6 months and 10 years according to § 176 (1) of the German Criminal Code. This paragraph of the Criminal Code further enumerates a lot of different aggravating circumstances such as the use of force, taking advantage of disability or threat. They (once proven in court) can increase the sentence range up to 10 years as minimum sentences when the child (§ 176b of the German Criminal Code - or in cases of § 178 of the German Criminal Code the victim) dies as a result of the created danger or health damages caused by the sexual act or its enforcement. There are also specific provisions regulating offenders that take advantage of school and educational settings, care and justice institutions, the work-place or the community as well, targeting at keeping certain relationships of dependencies free from sexual motives and relations.

When it comes to sexual gratification through information and communication technology, there is a very strict legislation to be found in chapter thirteen of the German Criminal Code. With respect to child prostitution, it criminalises actions such as managing a prostitution business, where persons are held in personal or financial dependency; or providing a place for a person below 18 years to conduct prostitution.

Moreover, the German Criminal Code criminalises the distribution, acquisition and possession of pornography involving children (under 14 years of age) and juveniles (between the age of 14 and 18 years).<sup>420</sup> Continuing efforts are made to improve the legislation against Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children. Only the question whether grooming is punishable in German criminal law, is still not clear, because there is no dissolving law given by the legislator yet.

Even the intentional causing of a child to witness sexual activities or sexual abuse without necessarily having to participate is criminalised within the German Criminal Code. There is however not one paragraph that deals with all the possible constellations. One rather has to have a closer look at certain sections or subsections to find applicable provisions. As the child only has to perceive the activity spatially but not to understand its sexual meaning according to § 184 g no. 2 of the German Criminal Code the German legislator did not see the need to define the term causing within the Code itself. Furthermore liability arises in most cases of attempting, aiding or abetting an offence of sexual abuse of a child, but there are different arrangements when exactly liability arises.

All the cases, whether with or without body contact, whether attempted or fulfilled, whether concerning prostitution, pornography, sexual abuse, corruption or solicitation of children, need to be committed intentionally. This is a fundamental principle to the German Criminal Law and stated in § 15 of the Code.

It thus can be seen that in Germany there is a strong national legal framework against child abuse that even incorporates relevant international and regional legal instruments on child trafficking and child prostitution. All those paragraphs, sections and subsections might seem confusing at first. They do however provide an effective legal system concerning the cases of sexual abuse. The defendants, that are always natural persons as there is no corporate liability in Germany, are faced with monetary fines in very mild cases up to life imprisonment in the harshest ones. The sanctions laid out in the German Criminal Code are efficient as they allow enough room to differentiate between the various degrees of seriousness of a crime and hence ensure a fair and equal treatment of all parties involved.

---

<sup>420</sup> German Criminal Code, § 184b and § 184c: http://www.gesetze-im-internet.de/englisch\_stgb/german\_criminal\_code.pdf.

However the civil law system does not only provide a broad protection regarding offences against children's sexual self-determination by supplying profound dispositions in the German Criminal Code and in the Code of Criminal Procedure. More globally everybody's fundamental rights are ensured as well. They are right at the beginning of the German Basic Law, Articles 1 to 19 and considered being part of the core of the constitution. After its experiences with fundamental rights' breach during the Third Reich, Germany has been actively involved in improving human rights around the globe and guaranteeing these. To ensure that they are guaranteed in Germany, the Federal Constitutional Court has been established, to which one might apply to as an individual if one's fundamental rights are affected.<sup>421</sup> Moreover, Germany participates in various international contracts guaranteeing human rights, for instance the European Convention of Human Rights, giving people the possibility to apply to the European Court of Human Rights in addition to the German Constitutional Court.<sup>422</sup> In general, as part of the Basic Law, the fundamental rights are at the top of the hierarchy of German law and as such they have to be considered by all national courts in their judgments.

Children's rights specifically however are not part of the German Basic Law. Therefore, several acts have been passed as international treaties signed to prevent discrimination, assure children's rights in general and more specifically to fight against sexual violence against minors. A few examples are the Child Protection Act (Kinderschutzgesetz), which came into force in 2012, or the General Equal Treatment Act with its Federal Anti-Discrimination Agency, established to overcome any discrimination problems in Germany.

In addition to the numerous conducts within national legislation, Germany is also a party to several European and international treaties such as the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child (UNCRC) or the Lanzarote Convention. As a member of the European Union it also has to implement the Directive 2011/92/EU.

---

<sup>421</sup> Article 92 of the Basic Law.

<sup>422</sup> Council of Europe - Treaty Office, <http://conventions.coe.int/Treaty/Commun/ListeTableauCourt.asp?MA=3&CM=16&CL=ENG>.

The UNCRC is fully recognised by Germany and its implementation to be expected, such as with the directive, where the implementation is in process. As to the Lanzarote Convention, its ratification can be expected as well. On this international scale too, Germany tries to combat the violation of children's rights and at the same time secure them.

All in all it seems that our country, with all possible means such as constantly developing national legislation on the subject, establishing governmental organisations or providing coherent dispositions in its codes, tries to protect society from offences of sexual abuse, prevents and punishes them to the best of its conscience. All the more is it burdening to notice that over the past few years the number of reported cases of sexual child abuse have slightly but steadily increased to 12 444 cases (including attempts) in 2011 (compared to 11 867 in 2010, which marks an increase of 4.9%).<sup>423</sup> However, the police crime statistics only provides an insight into the bright field of the cases, as it is based on the number of cases known to the police. The inclination towards an increase of those figures could thus also be interpreted in a way where society's awareness has successfully been raised over the past years, leading to more complains to the police. As a matter of fact, the Federal Ministry of Education and Research charged the Criminological Research Institution of Lower Saxony (Kriminologisches Forschungsinstitut Niedersachsen - KFN) with further investigations concerning the dark field. A sample, consisting of 11 428 persons and containing a face to face interview enquiring sociodemographic information and two extra-familial experiences of victimisation and a drop-off questionnaire on the very personal topic of intra-familial sexual and physical violence to be filled out alone, was accomplished.<sup>424</sup> A first interim report of October 2011 has supplied new numbers, showing that there has been a decline of sexual violence against children, especially within their families. This is in fact traced to the increasing willingness of reporting those crimes to the police. In the 1980s only one out of twelve perpetrators had to expect criminal procedures. Nowadays it is every third one, which seems to inhibit some of them.<sup>425</sup> This shows that society is an indispensable participant to the fight against sexual abuse of minors. As a result it remains ineffably important to continue raising awareness of the problem and putting effort in preventative measures. The German legal framework can be considered as sufficient, covering all possible cases and providing differentiable sentences. What now needs to be achieved is that this exact legal framework becomes more and more irrelevant as preventative operations show their success. Preventing cases of sexual abuse of minors however is a goal the legislation can impossibly reach on its own. It is of crucial importance to continue increasing social awareness regarding the problems of child abuse and discrimination and therefore start to act within society against those offences.

---

<sup>423</sup> Federal Ministry of the Interior, 2012, 07/11/2012, http://www.bmi.bund.de/SharedDocs/Downloads/DE/Broschueren/2012/PKS2011.pdf?\_\_blob=publicationFile, p. 45.

<sup>424</sup> Kriminologisches Forschungsinstitut Niedersachsen e. V., 2012, 08/11/2012, <http://www.kfn.de/versions/kfn/assets/fb1semisbr2011.pdf>.

We truly hope that by writing this report we could contribute to the raising of awareness of those specific problems in society and thus preventing them more efficiently in the future. Even in a country like Germany, that has a well working legal system and an intact legal framework, there are too many cases of sexual abuse annually and every single case needs to be inhibited at any price. Children are after all meekly exposed to many dangers and we as a society cannot sit back turning a blind eye to offences against them. Children are every society's future and need to be protected by all means. However, Germany operates effectively to prevent such cases and we take into positive consideration that many projects have been formed over the past few years to encounter sexual violence and discrimination against minors. We sincerely hope that all of them, as for the project One in Five as well, will bear fruit in the near future.

---

<sup>425</sup> ibid.

ELSA GREECE

I Introduction.....	480
1 General .....	480
2 The Lanzarote Convention.....	491
II National Legislation .....	495
1 General Principles Of The Jurisdiction .....	495
2 Substantive Criminal Law .....	502
2.1 Sexual Abuse.....	502
2.2 Child Prostitution .....	507
2.3 Child Pornography .....	509
2.4 Corruption of Children.....	512
2.5 Solicitation of Children for Sexual Purposes.....	512
2.6 Corporate Liability.....	514
2.7 Aggravating Circumstances .....	515
2.8 Sanctions and Measures .....	517
3 Criminal Procedure .....	519
3.1 Investigation .....	519
3.2 Complaint Procedure .....	522
4 Complementary Measures.....	523
III National Policy Regarding Children.....	528
IV Other.....	551
V Conclusion.....	553

National Researchers:

Kotsi Despoina

Mavromati Chrysoula

Panagos Konstantinos

Paschou Marianna

Skriapa Melpomeni

Stroungi Melina

Stoikou Stefania

Tritaki Anastasia

Tsouvali Maria

Chytiri Spyridoula

Academic Advisor:

Kioupis Dimitrios

National Coordinator:

Karachristou Eirini

“Here, then, is a great mystery. For you who also love the little prince, and for me, nothing in the universe can be the same if somewhere, we do not know where, a sheep that we never saw has-- yes or no?-- eaten a rose...

Look up at the sky. Ask yourselves: is it yes or no? Has the sheep eaten the flower? And you will see how everything changes...

And no grown-up will ever understand that this is a matter of so much importance!”

The little prince,— Antoine de Saint-Exupéry

I INTRODUCTION

1 GENERAL

i. The Greek Constitution contains a rich list of provisions devoted to the protection and respect of personal, social and political rights. More precisely, among others, the Constitution protects the value of human being (A. 2§1), equality (A. 4), the free development of the personality and the participation in the social, economic and political life of the country (A. 5§1), health and the genetic identity (A. 5§5), private and family life (A. 9§1), personal data (A. 9A), freedom of religious conscience (A. 13) as well as freedom of expression (A. 14). Furthermore, it provides for the protection of family, marriage, maternity, childhood and disabled persons (A. 21), the equality of all workers, irrespective of sex or other distinctions and their right to equal pay for work of equal value, while at the same time it demands the adoption of positive measures by the state for the elimination of any discriminatory treatment to the detriment of women. The constitutional principles and rights above form a protective net that covers conceptually all categories of vulnerable groups that are mentioned in the Directives 2000/43/EC and 2000/78/EC, providing a sufficient protection in case of absence of any special national legislation.<sup>1</sup>

However, it was only when the Law 3304/2005 was legislated that the principle of non-discrimination enjoyed a more substantial protection, with the incorporation of the above mentioned Directives, since the generality of the constitutional provisions and the absence of any relative executive laws deprived citizens of significant protection<sup>2</sup>. It also contributed to the establishment of special institutes, councils and committees that are entrusted with the advancement and monitoring of the compliance with the principle by the state and its citizens<sup>3</sup>. The legislative progress is certainly a positive step towards the fuller protection of human rights in national level. The Law 3304/2005 has undoubtedly equipped citizens with an efficient weapon in the battle against any discriminatory practices. However, these

---

<sup>1</sup> N.Sarris, "Research Project" Establishment of Anti-Discrimination Observatory "- The institutional discrimination» in Greek Social Data Bank of the National Centre for Social Research, viewed on 29 August 2012, http://www.gsdb.gr/ocd/resources/ekke/framework/Framework\_el.pdf p. 7-8.

<sup>2</sup> Ibid., p.8

<sup>3</sup> The article 19 of the Law 3304/2005 delegates the promotion of the non-discrimination principle to three specialized agencies a) the Ombudsman b) the Labour Inspectorate and c) the Committee for Equal Treatment. A significant role is also attributed by the Law to the Economic and Social Council (Economic and Social Committee).

initiatives do not necessarily reflect the tolerance and the openness of Greek society, but rather the result of the European obligations from which Greece cannot abstain.

The Greek society is moving in a very slow pace towards the adoption and full implementation of the principle of non-discrimination. This is because of its relatively conservative structure in comparison to its European counterparts, which is easily explained by its historical, religious, geographical, social and political background. Greece used to be since the middle of the 20th century a country that exported immigrants. However, in the early 90's it became an immigrants' host country. The immigration flow in Greece was initially a by-product of the developments in Eastern Europe and the overthrow of communist regimes. However, nowadays is largely associated with the poverty and the unstable political conditions or war conflicts that take place in countries relatively closer to Greece than to other European countries. Key feature of the modern phenomenon of immigration is that it is not as organized as it used to be in earlier times. In the meanwhile, the number of immigrants is increasing due to their illegal entry into the Greek territory. Greece owes this great immigration influx to the fact that it constitutes a geographical hub. The geographical position of Greece plays an important role in the choice of it as either the country of final destination, or as an intermediate - "transitive" - country.

The latest illegal migratory waves from Asian and African countries have rattled the foundations of Greek society, which has been proved to be unprepared both in terms of mentality and infrastructure to host these huge moving populations. Even in the 90's when the first economic refugees started to arrive from countries such as Albania and USSR the reaction was less excessive and more tolerance. The economic crisis has reduced people's tolerance and susceptibility dramatically.

The findings above are further bolstered by a number of surveys and official reports distributed by National or International Institutions and NGOs. It is also reflected in the daily news record. The indicative reference to the contained numbers and results verifies our suggestion. The Eurobarometer on Discrimination in European Union that was held in 2008 under the title "Perception and Experience of Discrimination" provides us with some very useful information<sup>4</sup>. A general overview of the collected data reveals that all types of discrimination are perceived as commonly-encountered by a higher share of Greeks than the Europeans. Moreover, the forms of discrimination that is considered to be the most widespread and regular are these on the basis of ethnic origin and sexual orientation. More precisely, over 3 out of 4 Greeks believe that discrimination on the basis of ethnic origin and sexual orientation is widespread in Greece. At least 8 out of 10 Greeks declare that they feel comfortable with having a disabled person, a person of different religion or belief or of a different ethnic origin as their neighbour, but the same doesn't apply to the case of having a homosexual neighbour, where the Greek respondents seem to be less tolerant than the average of the Europeans. Moreover, they are proved unfamiliar with the idea of having a homosexual or a person from a minority ethnic group in the highest elected political positions in relation to their European counterparts but also in absolute numbers too (5.5 and 4.7 out of 10 respectively). As far as the social circle of Greeks is concerned, this seems to be less diverse than the one of a typical European. With the exception of having a friend with a different ethnic origin, the results for Greece are significantly lower than the corresponding EU averages concerning the friendship with people of different religious beliefs, disabled, homosexual or Roma.

---

<sup>4</sup> "Discrimination in the European Union 2008, Results for Greece, in European Commission, viewed on 27 August 2012, <http://ec.europa.eu/public\_opinion/archives/ebs/ebs\_296\_sheet\_el.pdf>

It is necessary to refer to a special minority group that faces certain discrimination in the framework of the Greek society, the Roma. According to the results of the European Union Minorities and Discrimination Survey<sup>5</sup> which was released by the European Union Agency for Fundamental Rights in 2009 and in which seven member states were surveyed (Bulgaria, Czech Republic, Hungary, Greece, Poland, Romania, Slovakia) one in two of Roma interviewed in Greece reported that they were victims of discrimination based on their ethnicity during the last 12 months. This percentage in relative terms is situated somewhere in the middle. Furthermore, they also reported the highest levels of overall victimisation compared to the other surveyed countries. Greece also stands out as having a high percentage of Roma people who consider their encounters with the police to be discriminatory. What is even more concerning is the matter of Roma's education. More specifically, only 4% of them reported schooling with duration of at least ten years, i.e. primary education at most while, 35% of the respondent Roma were illiterate.

---

<sup>5</sup> "European Union Minorities and Discrimination Survey" held by European Union Agency for Fundamental Rights, released in 2009, viewed in 30 August 2012, http://fra.europa.eu/sites/default/files/fra\_uploads/413-EU-MIDIS\_ROMA\_EN.pdf

ii. Article 21§1 of the Greek Constitution sets the family under the protection of the state<sup>6</sup>. Emphasis should be given on the emotional words of the definition, according to which family is “the cornerstone of the reservation and the advancement of the Nation”<sup>7</sup>. Family was always considered as a fundamental element of the Greek society, this is why the Constitutional Legislator maintained the above mentioned wording. The definition of family under the Greek Constitution refers to the community of parents and their children, physical or adopted, independently on whether or not they are born in wedlock. Hence, it covers the family under a narrow definition, or, the so-called, “nuclear” family. Spouses without children are not considered as a family under the constitutional provision, since the marriage receives separate constitutional protection<sup>8</sup>.

The same provision also applies to the protection of the marriage. According to the Constitution’s definition, “marriage” is the permanent coexistence of two people, of different gender, that is covered by the freedom of contracting it, its recognition by the legal order and the equal position of the spouses. Both family and marriage are considered to be an “institutional guarantee” which has a double interpretation, negative and positive<sup>9</sup>; according to the negative aspect, the contracting of a marriage or the creation of a family cannot inflict negative legal consequences to those people and further, spouses and the other members of the family should not be prevented of being recognized legally as such and not be deprived of the right to cultivate interpersonal relations and familiarity inter se. For example, in the terms of fiscal law, it is prohibited for the Legislator to treat less favourably the married people vis-à-vis the non-married people. On the other hand, the positive aspect of this “institutional guarantee” defines that the Legislator is obliged to enact all the appropriate regulations for the preservation and enhancement of the family and marriage. Apart from the other conditions<sup>10</sup> that should be fulfilled for a valid marriage, the couple should be more than 18 years old. However, the Court is entitled to permit derogation from the legal marital age only after the audition of the couple and of the persons that exercise the

---

<sup>6</sup> L. Ganis, "Citizenship and the Constitution, Civil and Social Rights", Ant. N. Sakkoulas, Athens, 2004, p. 87

<sup>7</sup> K. Chrysogonos, "Individual and Social Rights", Law Library, Thessaloniki, Third Revised Edition, 2006, p.535

<sup>8</sup> Ibid. p.535

<sup>9</sup> Ibid. p.536

<sup>10</sup> We distinguish between positive and negative conditions: The positive conditions are: 1) Sex difference, 2) Legal marital age, 3) Legal capacity. The negative conditions are: 1) lack of another marriage, 2) lack of blood kinship, 3) lack of affinity 4) None of the spouses has been adopted by the other spouse.

minor's custody, and always under the condition that the contracting of marriage is due to a significant reason (A. 1350§2 Civil Code). This is how marriage is regulated since 1983, thanks to a new legislation that reformed the pre-existent anachronistic marital regime<sup>11</sup>.

A Report published in 2009 by the Demographic Laboratory and Social Analyses of University of Thessaly<sup>12</sup> that records women's trend in marriage provides us with accurate statistical data on the average marital age of women over the years as well as with consequent analysis of the impact of the marital age volatility on the typical form of the Greek family. More precisely, it is noted that the average age of marriage followed a downward trend for 20 years (women born in 1935 married on average for the first time at the age of 25, while those born in 1955 at the age of 22.5 years). However, over the years (i.e. the generations born between 1955 and 1970), the percentage of women who remain unmarried was decreasing more and more. This trend was also accompanied by the rise in the average age of the first marriage (about 25 years for those born in 1970). The marriage behaviour of Greek female population, therefore, started gradually to resemble women's marriage behaviour in Western Europe. At the same time, marriages started to decrease, the average marital age started to increase, marriages became even more fragile and out-of-wedlock births increased rapidly. It is obvious, that younger generations tend to adopt different behaviours from those of their parents. Consumer standards, as a result of globalization, have converged between Greek youth and that of the most developed countries of Europe, when at the same time the influence of the religion has slacked. Thus, the new social, cultural and institutional conditions have gradually led to the emergence of new types of family, while the advancing European integration provides a favourable framework for the convergence of positions, decisions, and behaviours in the countries of Unified Europe.

These changes are also reflected in the population of children. Demographic developments of the last 40 years have changed the profile of Greek society. Rising standards of living, improving the position of women and her integration into the labour market have led to less birth and hence the number of children, who is constantly decreasing since 1961, accounted for 1/3 of the total population is now at 17%. According to a report drafted by the National

---

<sup>11</sup> E. Kounougeri-Manoledaki, "Family Law", Issue Ia, Fourth Edition, Sakkoulas, Thessaloniki, 2009, p.62-63

<sup>12</sup> B. Kotzamanis Sofianopoulou K., "The marriage of women in Greece: the institution of marriage in crisis; Laboratory of Demographic and Social Analyses, 2010, viewed on 29 August 2012, <[http://www.demography-lab.prd.uth.gr / DemoNews% 20No3\_A4.pdf](http://www.demography-lab.prd.uth.gr / DemoNews% 20No3_A4.pdf)>

Greek Committee of UNICEF in 2012 under the title “Children in Greece”<sup>13</sup>, children (aged up to 18 years), according to the census of 2001 was 2,080,866 and accounted for 19% of the total population. From predictions for 2010 their number has decreased to 1,959,895 and account for 17.4% of the population.

iii. The protection of childhood is a well-recognized constitutional right in the Greek legal order. The aforementioned protection is specialized through a number of provisions of the domestic law such as the relationships between parents and children in the Civil Code, or the lenient treatment of juvenile perpetrators of criminal offenses in the Penal Code. This lenient treatment is a constitutional requirement, in contrast to the adoption of specific crimes against minors, where there is no constitutional basis, despite the multitude of articles in the Penal Code<sup>14</sup>. Furthermore, the legal framework of child protection is also reinforced by the implementation of international and European texts (usually conventions, treaties)<sup>15</sup>.

In Greece there are many institutions that are associated with implementing the rights of children. At parliamentary level the instrument is the Advanced Standing Commission for Gender, Youth and Human Rights as the material responsible UN body, the Greek National Committee for UNICEF, Children's Rights Ombudsman, and the NGO Network for Monitoring the Implementation of the International Convention for the Rights of the Child. However, as it is explained in the above-mentioned UNICEF Report<sup>16</sup>, all of these entities shall not be expected to operate autonomously in order to establish an efficient plan of action for the rights of child without the assistance of the state. The implementation of children's rights is matter of national policy and should be based on sound structures, which require centralized planning and state initiative. It is stressed out that it is important to ensure and promote the implementation of an integrated, systematic and horizontal National Action Plan on Children's Rights, which will cover the entire rights and all sectors of social life of the child. The formulation of a national policy shall be designed and implemented based on specific research data and evidence and after having previously ensured inter

---

<sup>13</sup> Bougioukos G., B. Fasoulis, "The situation of children in Greece," Greek National Committee for UNICEF, Athens, March 2012, viewed on 2 September 2012, http://unicef.gr/pdfs/Children\_in\_Greece\_2012.pdf

<sup>14</sup> Chrysogonos, op. cit., p. 547

<sup>15</sup> The Smile of the Child "Action Plan for horizontal networking and coordinating services and agencies social solidarity are reconciled to the child," Special Service Management OP "Health and Welfare», submitted on 24 February 2009, viewed on 19 August 2012, http://www.ygeia-pronoia.gr/uploads/meletes/meleti\_orizontia\_diadiktiosh.pdf

<sup>16</sup> Bougioukos-Fasoulis, op.cit

ministerial coordination and the relative budget. However, the lack of an integrated policy for the child is reflected to the impossibility of determining the exact amount spent in the state budget solely for political and related to the children actions. Under the new structure of local government and the allocation of responsibilities to local administrative entities there is a demand for specific budget for the child not only in a central government level but in the municipal level too. This is a major issue that should be taken seriously into account by the state.

Moreover, the Greek Helsinki Monitor and Minority Rights Group Report on Greece's compliance with the UN Convention on the Rights of Child<sup>17</sup> had pointed out that despite the existence of a sufficient legal framework, what undermines its efficiency is the lack of implementation and enforcement of these laws. Simultaneously, it was reported that there is a failure to comply with certain obligations contained in international conventions. It is significant that the Greek government submitted to the UN Committee on the Rights of the Child a report five years later after the original deadline that is envisaged in under Article 44 of the Convention.

Finally, this lack of enforcement and implementation of law is notably observed in the framework of the economic crisis. The consequential changes in the structure of the society have negatively affected the status quo of children in Greece. The data provided by the UNICEF Report is raising great concern regarding the actions undertaken by the state<sup>18</sup>. According to this data, children in Greece live in a more violent environment. From 2008 to 2010, the crime rate in the country increased by over 40%, while the bullying has increased 74% from 2002 to 2010. Simultaneously, there has been an increase in crime and delinquency.

Moreover, stress, is likely to lead to the manifestation of various psychosomatic symptoms, affecting the whole family. This consequential psychological instability in the family may lead to indifference, neglect or even more violent reactions from parents and psychosomatic cause harm to children and reactive behaviours. These conditions occur in poor households affected by unemployment and reduced incomes. Outbreaks of students fainting from malnutrition which led to free snacks in some schools, is a symptom of extreme poverty experienced by some children. Obviously, children belonging to the most vulnerable groups are more likely to experience extreme poverty. The psychological instability in the family directly also affects the psychology and behaviour of children in all social groups. The violation of children's rights rings the bell of the threat that is about to break.

---

<sup>17</sup> Greek Helsinki Monitor/Minority Rights Group-Greece (2001) Parallel Report on Greece's compliance with the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child, August 2001, Athens, viewed on 16 August 2012, http://www.law.yale.edu/rcw/rcw/jurisdictions/euros/greece/Greece\_Helsinki\_Monitor\_Report\_2001.pdf

<sup>18</sup> Bougioukos-Fasoulis, op.cit

iv. The cornerstone of national legislation regarding the implementation of international treaties is the article 28 par.1 of the Greek Constitution<sup>19</sup>, according to which the primacy of international law is recognized over national law, right after treaties' ratification by law. It is clear that not only international contract law, but also international customary law, as well supersedes over national law. In spite of this general hierarchical rule, international treaties can't override the Greek Constitution. In case of conflict between constitutional provision and provision of international treaty Greek Courts should apply the first provision sidetracking the second. This opinion is supported in the majority of case law of the Council of the State by its decisions, such as the decision 2960/1983 and by the Supreme Special Court, which has jurisdiction according to article 86 of the Greek Constitution, such as the decision 69/1992.

Two are the basic steps for the implementation of international treaties in Greece, ratification of the treaty and its publication on Official Government's Newspaper. The ratification system in Greece being into force is the mixed competence system, which means that the legislative body should give its consent for the treaty making power and the President of Greek Democracy should proceed with the ratification of international treaties. Ratification can take place by three ways, namely by law, ordinance or decision and that's depends on the object of the treaty and need of priorities of Greek Law. The first way is the most common. The President of Greek Democracy has responsibility to represent the State internationally regarding the signature of international treaties. According to article 35 par.1 of the Greek Constitution, there are two more preconditions for treaty's signature: the signature of the international treaty by the responsible minister and its publication in the official State Gazette. Under extraordinary circumstances of urgent and unforeseen need, the President has the right to conclude international treaties (namely to issue ordinances and go on with treaties' ratification) without Parliament's consent, but after the proposal of cabinet. This right is based on article 44 par.1 of the Greek Constitution<sup>20</sup>.

---

<sup>19</sup> <http://www.hri.org/docs/syntagma/>

Moreover it is crucial to describe the procedure of how we reach at the final ratifying law. Firstly, the responsible minister and the Ministry of Foreign Affair introduce the international treaty in a draft law. The approval of Report General Accounting for corresponding costs and credits is necessary, as well. Then, this draft law passes to the Secretariat of Cabinet and after that to the Central Legislative Committee which gives its opinion. On continue, it is sent to the Parliament.

International treaties after their ratification are an integral part of national law. International law and national law cannot be divided and examined apart one from another, as legal commitments of the state constitute a single process and the two different facets of the same function should not be divided.

As regards Greece's ratification of United Nations Convention on Rights of the Child<sup>21</sup> which has vested for the first time human rights and especially children's rights systematically and expressly, it took place in brief time after the signature of the Convention by law 2101/1992 (published in the Official State Gazette 192/2.12.1992)<sup>22</sup>. In the first article of law 2101/1992 the ratification and the put into force of United Nations Convention on Rights of the Child is noted. The procedure of put into force of a convention is described in article 28 par. 1 of the Greek Constitution. According to the second article of the law 2101/1992, the ratifying law of the considered treaty is in force after its publication in the Official State's Newspaper on 2.12.1992 right after the fulfilment of all the prerequisites of the article 49 of United Nations Convention on Rights of the Child<sup>23</sup>. It should be mentioned that United Nations Convention on Rights of the Child has a distinguished status in Greek law compared to treaties with other content, as international Conventions for human rights after their ratification by law and their put into force have a

---

<sup>20</sup> Chrysogonos K., "Constitutional Law II (Special Part), Sakkoulas 2008

<sup>21</sup> "Implementation Handbook for the Convention on the Rights of the Child", UNICEF (United Nations children's fund), 1998

<sup>22</sup> Pitsela A., "The UN Convention on the Rights of the Child and the Administration of Juvenile Justice," International Criminal Movement

<sup>23</sup> Naskou-Perraki P., K. Chrysogonos, Anthopoulos C. (preface, editor) "The International Convention on the Rights of the Child and the national legal order," Interpretation in article, Center for International Law and European Economic Law Ant. N. Sakkoulas, 2002 distinguished status. It is important to refer that Greek Government has expressed no reservation in the ratifying law.

This Convention is an integral part of Greek law and prevails over any contrary provision of national law. Therefore, in case that a subsequent law is contrary to the international Convention, it will not be applied by Greek courts. It should be mentioned that review of constitutionality of law is widespread and incidental and it should be done ex officio by judge, according to the general principle “iura novit curia”<sup>24</sup>. Furthermore, the United Nations Convention on Rights of the Child being a multilateral convention for the protection of human rights and as a result being ius cogens, which establishes erga omnes obligations has implementation for citizens of other countries sidetracking reciprocity condition described in article 18 par. 1 subpar. b of the Greek Constitution.

Although Greek Constitutional provisions are elliptical in contrast to the detailed ones of the United Nations Convention on Rights of the Child, they have a conceptual link, as the constitutional articles are in compliance with the requirements of the Convention. More specifically, the articles of the Greek Constitution, namely 2 par.1, 5 par.1, 21 par.3 and 3 and 96 par.3 are the most basic for the protection and the respect of human value, the right of free expression of personality and participation at the social, economic and political life of the country, the protection of family and childhood, the protection of children’s health care and provision for juvenile court. To conclude, Greece has fully and totally complied with its international commitments regarding United Nations’ Convention on Rights of the Child and implements it exactly as it is needed.

v. Greece as an EU member state has the obligation to implement the Directive 2011/92/EU of the European Parliament and the European Council. Every EU member state is obliged only to comply with the Directive’s aims and has discretion to decide by which national instruments it will incorporate the complying Act and which context and form this procedure will have<sup>25</sup>. The Directive 2011/92/EU of the European Parliament and the European Council of 13 December 2011 regarding combating sexual abuse and sexual exploitation of children and childhood pornography has replaced Framework Decision 2004/68/JHA of the Council. This Directive is recent and has stated 18.12.2013 as deadline of its incorporation to the national law of the member states<sup>26</sup>. Greece has not taken action yet. To be more specific, neither a Legislative Committee has been constituted, nor have any relevant procedures started. Most provisions of the Directive 2011/92/EU, which should be a part of national criminal law, already exist in our Penal Code and Code of Criminal Procedure and in many cases Greek Penal Law faces the crime stricter than the Directive requires<sup>27</sup>.

---

<sup>24</sup> Manitakis A., “Greek Constitutional Law”, Sakkoulas 2004

<sup>25</sup> Sahpekidou E. , «European Law”, Sakkoulas 2011

It is interesting to cite some examples, in which is clear that Greek Criminal System regarding children's protection against sexual abuse and sexual exploitation is very advanced. Although Framework Decision 2004/68/JHA has not a definition for age of sexual contest and Directive 2011/92/EU just states that this age should be defined by each member state, the Greek Penal Code describes under which circumstances a child can engage in sexual activities at article 339 par. 1. So that Greece has nothing to change about those provisions, as Greek Law has already cared for it. Furthermore, the Greek Penal Code has already included sexual crimes against children when the offence was committed by a member of the child's family, a person cohabiting with the child or a person who has abused a recognized position of trust or authority by articles 342, 345 and 346 of Greek Penal Code, long before the Directive was issued. Besides, Greek Criminal Law includes appropriate measures against advertising abuse opportunities and child sex tourism, namely in articles 323B and 348 of Greek Penal Code. Consequently, it is obvious that the Greek Criminal Law is complied with its European Obligations of the Directive mainly those regarding suppressive measures.

To conclude, Greece will incorporate adequately the crucial Directive on time. In any case, the goal is the protection of fundamental rights of children in national and supranational framework, while ensuring fundamental principles of criminal law and criminal procedure law of member states. Children are the future and we have to protect them by every possible way.

---

<sup>26</sup> <http://antiproedros.gov.gr/>

<sup>27</sup> Kaiafa-Gmbanti M., "European Penal Law & the Lisbon Treaty", Sakkoulas 2011

2 THE LANZAROTE CONVENTION

- i. Greece became member of the Council of Europe on 9 August 1949 and ratified the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms on 28 November 1974<sup>28</sup>.
- ii. The Greek state is a party to the Lanzarote Convention. The state, represented by the Minister of Justice Sotirios Hatzigakis, signed the Convention on 25 October 2007 and ratified it on 10 March 2009 without making any reservations or opts out of any part. On 24 June 2010 the Permanent Representative of Greece submitted a declaration at the Secretariat General, designating “The Ministry of Citizen Protection, Hellenic Police Headquarters, Forensic Science Division (F.S.D.)” as the National Authority referred to in Article 37 of the Convention.<sup>29</sup>
- v. The Lanzarote Convention was ratified by the Law 3727/2008 Government Gazette A 257/18.12.2008 and entered into force on 1 July 2010. Through this legislation it became an integral part of the domestic Greek law and gained supra-statutory force in accordance with Article 28(1) of the Constitution of Greece.<sup>30</sup> Therefore, the Lanzarote Convention occupies a position in Greece’s legal order above that of the laws adopted by the Greek Parliament and is subordinate only to the Constitution of Greece.

According to the first Article of the Law 3727/2008:

«The Council of Europe Convention on the Protection of Children against Sexual Exploitation and Sexual Abuse, which was adopted by the Committee of Ministers of the Council of Europe at its 1002nd meeting held at its Deputies’ level on 12 July 2007 and was

---

<sup>28</sup> Greece-Member State Data- Council of Europe:

<http://hub.coe.int/country/greece>

<sup>29</sup> Council of Europe, List of declarations made with respect to Treaty No. 201:

<http://conventions.coe.int/Treaty/Commun/ListeDeclarations.asp?NT=201&CM=1&DF=&CL=ENG&VL=1>

<sup>30</sup> Minors as Victims in the Age of Information and Communication Technologies: The Convention on the Protection of Children against Sexual Exploitation and Sexual Abuse and its Implementation in Greece, by Emmanouil Billis LL.M. and Panagiotis Gkaniatsos, LL.M., IV. Implementation of the Convention in Greece, Introduction to the special issue on European law and the most recent developments, The art of crime, Center for Penal and Criminological Research: <http://www.theartofcrime.gr/eng/printit.php?aid=1327849844&lang=gr> opened for signature in Lanzarote (Spain) on 25 October 2007, is being ratified and has the force that article 28 of the Constitution of Greece defines».<sup>31</sup>

According to Article 28(1), which belongs to “Part Three Organization and Functions of the State”, of the Constitution<sup>32</sup> of Greece:

« The generally recognized rules of international law, as well as international conventions as of the time they are ratified by statute and become operative according to their respective conditions, shall be an integral part of domestic Greek law and shall prevail over any contrary provision of the law. The rules of international law and of international conventions shall be applicable to aliens only under the condition of reciprocity.

** Interpretative clause:

Article 28 constitutes the foundation for the participation of the Country in the European Integration process. »

vi. The main purposes of the Lanzarote Convention are to prevent and combat sexual exploitation and sexual abuse of children, to protect the rights of child victims of such an exploitation or abuse and to promote national and international cooperation against these illegal acts.

The integration of these aims into the Greek legal order was fulfilled with the passing of the Law 3727/2008 from the Greek Parliament and specifically with its first eight articles. This implementation resulted to a number of important changes regarding the protection of the rights of children at different levels. According to the 21st National Report on the implementation of the European Social Charter submitted by the Government of Greece to the Council of Europe on 7 February 2011:

«This law enforced the provisions of the Penal Code on sexual exploitation and abuse of minors, minors pornography and on the care and assistance to minors who are victims of the above acts. All parameters regarding the use of new technologies and of communication in committing the illegal acts have also been taken into consideration».<sup>33</sup>

---

<sup>31</sup> Law 3727/2008 Government Gazette A 257/18.12.2008:

http://www.dsanet.gr/Epikairothta/Nomothesia/n3727\_08.htm

<sup>32</sup> Constitution of Greece, Hellenic Parliament : <http://www.hellenicparliament.gr/UserFiles/f3c70a23-7696-49db-9148-f24dce6a27c8/001-156%20aggliko.pdf>

<sup>33</sup> European Social Charter, 21st National Report on the implementation of the European Social Charter submitted by the Government of Greece, 07/02/2011, Council of Europe:

As far as the prevention of victimization is concerned, the Greek state integrated the provisions of the Lanzarote Convention within the first two articles of the ratifying law, succeeding to address the majority of the important issues within the Convention. More specifically, it prohibits adults who have been irrevocably convicted of or are being prosecuted for actions of sexual exploitation or child abuse to exercise any profession related to children, both in public and private sector.

In addition, the Law 3727/2008 provides for the possibility to design informational and educational programs of both public and private agents and associations, on the protection of children's rights aiming, on the one side, at the awareness-raising and the information of the children and of the people whose profession entails the contact with children. On the other side, these programs aim at the evaluation of the danger of victimization and at the immediate diagnosis of a sexual exploitation and abuse. According to Article 1(2d) of the Law 3727/2008, the support and the cooperation of the civil society, the media as well as of the private sector are of high importance to the development and implementation of these programs. At the same time, the Article 2(1) of the Law 3727/2008 introduces the implementation of educational programs to children at the level of primary and secondary education regarding sexual freedom and the danger of a sexual abuse.

Among the basic provisions of the law is the possibility of professionals such as doctors, nurses, psychologists and lawyers to report, despite their professional secrecy, to the services responsible for child protection, any situation where they have reasonable grounds for believing that a child is victim of sexual exploitation or sexual abuse. This is considered particularly important for Greece, especially for close societies in small cities, where cases of sexual exploitation or abuse are rarely reported and investigated effectively.

Furthermore, the Law 3727/2008 transferred into the Greek domestic law the advanced assistance offered to child victims, expanding the existing one. In line with Article 14 of the Lanzarote Convention, it introduced in Article 2(2) the assistance in both, long and short, term in their physical and psycho- social recovery.

It is worth mentioning the provision of Article 2(4c) of the Law 3727/2008 for the establishment of a mechanism for data collection, in order to observe and evaluate the phenomenon of sexual exploitation and abuse of children. The Greek state has also set up a helpline through telephone to provide advice and help for children, parents and professionals.

As far as the substantive criminal law is concerned, the ratification of the Lanzarote Convention resulted to a number of changes within the Greek criminal law, which led to an important expansion of the existing legislation on the protection of children against sexual exploitation and sexual abuse.

The 19th Chapter of the Greek Penal Code<sup>34</sup> entitled “Crimes against the sexual freedom, sexual exploitation and abuse, rape”, Articles 336- 353, regulates the crimes related to sexual exploitation and abuse, also for children.

The implementation of the Lanzarote Convention had as a result the imposition of heavier sentences, when the victim is a child, as well as the introduction of new articles in the Greek Penal Code. It imposed higher penalties for the crimes of sexual exploitation of children, insult of sexual dignity of minors, seduction of children, and abuse of minors in sexual indecent acts, child pornography and pandering.<sup>35 36</sup>

The Greek state set the age of fifteen (15) as the legal age for sexual activities, having as base the Article 18(2) of the Lanzarote Convention. More specifically, it introduced the imposition of the penalty of imprisonment for at least two years on adults who, with the use of internet or other communication means, gain contact to a child who has not completed the fifteenth year of age and who through lewd gestures insults the minor’s dignity within the context of his/her sexual life.

The ratification of the Lanzarote Convention affected also the procedural criminal law and a number of changes were introduced, in order to protect the children as victims. The most basic changes refer to the protection of the children as witnesses during penal procedures as

---

<sup>34</sup> Greek Penal Code, Ministry of Justice, Hellenic Republic :

<http://www.ministryofjustice.gr/site/kodikis/%CE%95%CF%85%CF%81%CE%B5%CF%84%CE%AE%CF%81%CE%B9%CE%BF/%CE%A0%CE%9F%CE%99%CE%9D%CE%99%CE%9A%CE%9F%CE%A3%CE%9A%CE%A9%CE%94%CE%99%CE%9A%CE%91%CE%A3/tabid/432/language/el-GR/Default.aspx>

<sup>35</sup> E-notes, European NGOs Observatory on Trafficking, Exploitation and Slavery, Legislation-Greece, Translation in English of main provisions of legislation on human trafficking and related crimes: <http://www.e-notes-observatory.org/legislation/greece/>

<sup>36</sup> Some provisions of the Greek Penal Code to be found in English at: «Sexual Exploitation of Children, Children’s rights-Greece, The Law Library of Congress», <http://www.loc.gov/law/help/child-rights/greece.php#SexualExploitationofChildren>

well as the acceleration of the procedure, in order to help the child with its psycho- social recovery.

Finally, the Law 3727/2008 foresees the presence of specialized professionals, doctors, psychologists and child psychiatrists during the procedures who will try to alleviate the hard situation which the children have to face.

Consequently, it is made clear that the Greek state with the ratification of the Lanzarote Convention improved its legislation on the protection of the rights of children and developed new policies for preventing the victimization and combating these crimes. It's the duty of the state, the civil society, the media and every specialized professional to implement all these provisions and raise the awareness regarding the great number of children that are victims of sexual exploitation and abuse and to promote the campaign against these crimes.

II NATIONAL LEGISLATION

1 GENERAL PRINCIPLES OF THE JURISDICTION

i. Greece declared independence from the Ottoman Empire in 1822 and the greek modern state was finally established in 1830, when Greece achieved independence, after the Greek War of Independence (1821-1829) and its sovereignty was recognised under the London Protocol. The first Governor was Ioannis Capodistrias, for a period of four years (1828-1832), who was chosen unanimously by the 3rd National Assembly in 1827. Although Capodistrias was assisted by a collective advisory body, he completely exercised governance, given that the nascent state was not stable yet. Many alternations concerning the governmental regimes, followed the next years, so as we could say that the modern Greek state has a short life, but a rich political history.

During the years 1832-1843 King Otto ruled Greece as an absolute monarchy. This period was followed by the Constitutional Monarchy between years 1843-1862. King Otto's absolutism fed an uprising social disappointment, which led into a revolt in 1862. Otto was obliged to leave Greece. The Glücksburg dynasty took his place and the crown. The Constitution of 1864 inaugurated the first period of Crowned Democracy (1864- 1909). It is noteworthy that during the transition period (October 1862- October 1863) the system of governance was that of a governing parliament, which was in operation for the first and the last time in the constitutional history of the country.<sup>37</sup> The Constitution of 1864 did not change until 1911. The 20th century brought significant socio political changes and from this agitated environment, Eleftherios Venizelos, a gifted political figure and the leader of the Liberal Party, emerged. During his premiership, the old Constitution of 1864 was revised by focusing on an enhanced protection of human rights, the reinforcement of the rule of law and on an institutional modernization. Nevertheless, a period of consecutive turbulences followed. Various reasons in a domestic and international level, such as the conflict between the crown and the political leadership, the Balkan Wars, the First World War, the catastrophic events in Asia Minor and the geopolitical transformation in South East Europe, provoked a revolt in 1922. That was the end of the second period of Crowned Democracy and a Republic Democracy was declared. During the transition period until the adoption of a new Constitution, the political situation was unstable again and two dictatorships followed during years 1925-1926. Eventually, after the fall of the dictatorship, the "Parliament of the First Term" was elected and the Constitution of 1927 was adopted.

This Constitution is of special importance both with regard to social rights provisions and with regard to the introduction of new political institutions. More specifically, the Constitution of 1927 guaranteed further protection of certain individual rights (e.g. the freedom of the press) while it consolidated certain social rights (protection of work, protection of the family, etc.). Under the pressure of an unsure social and economic environment, this Constitution lasted merely 8 years. Dictatorships, World War II, German Occupation and a protracted civil war retarded the progress of parliamentarianism. Only in 1952, a new Constitution was adopted, a conservative though. That was the beginning of the third period of Crowned Democracy (1952 – 1967). In 1967, a group of military officers seized power, establishing a military dictatorship for a period of seven years, when many political liberties were suspended. The king was forced to flee the country. In 1974, democratic elections and a referendum were held. The Constitution of 1975 (article 2) created a Presidential Parliamentary Republic and abolished the monarchy.

---

<sup>37</sup> The Parliament: The political System, "Constitutional History" in Hellenic Parliament website, viewed on 7 September 2012, <http://www.hellenicparliament.gr/en/Vouli-ton-Ellinon/To-Politevma/Syntagmatiki-Istoria/>

Since then, Greece is a Presidential Parliamentary Republic (Hellenic Republic). The president is elected by the Parliament for a five-year term and is the head of the state, but his role is formal without any significant powers. According to the Constitution (article 26) there is a separation of powers into executive, legislative and judicial branches. The executive power is exercised by the President of the Republic and the government whose head is the Prime Minister. Greece is unitary state. The administration of the state is exercised by a central government and by local government agencies, according to the principle of decentralization provided by article 101 of the Constitution. Specifically, according to article 101§3: “Regional State officers shall have general decisive authority on matters of their district, while the central services shall have, in addition to special powers, the general guidance, coordination and supervision of the regional officers, as specified by law”.

ii. The Constitution of 1975 is in force until today. In its second part (articles 4-25), it provides the protection of individual and social rights, which has been reinforced through the 1986's and 2001's revisions. One more revision, in 2008, was held, but it is not essential as far as concerns individual rights. The second one, in 2001, was the most extensive in an atmosphere of consensus. In addition, this revision was of great importance concerning individual rights. New individual rights, such as the protection of genetic identity and data were introduced.

Generally speaking, the reinforcement of fundamental rights with regard to their content as well as to their judicial protection, characterizes the Constitution of 1975 with its revisions. Articles 4-25 of the Constitution is the Greek “Bill of Rights”, we would say. As it is deduced, there is no special list of civil and political rights, but the fundamental rights are secured as fundamental principles, under the above mentioned provisions of the Constitution. Additionally, the articles safeguarding some fundamental rights, as well as the articles that determine the form of government as a Parliamentary Republic cannot be revised according to article 110§1, a fact that enriches their prestige and legal force.

Considering children rights, only article 21 protects childhood in a direct and specific way, as well as family, marriage and motherhood. A general protection can be provided of course, by the articles safeguarding the value of the human being (art.2§1), equality (art.4) and free development of personality (art.5). More specifically, regarding the protection of children against sexual exploitation and sexual abuse, article 7§2, that prohibits torture and general confiscation, would be regarded as of special interest. Last but not least, article 96§3, that provides juvenile courts, should be taken into account.

Furthermore, laws regulate fundamental rights in a more specific way, while the Constitution sets the context. The national legislation of human rights follows the normal legislative process (articles 84-88 of the Constitution and 93-107 of the Standing Orders of the Parliament). Legislative powers are exercised by a 300-member elective unicameral Parliament and the President of the Republic. The legislation initiative lies in the government and the Parliament. Laws are voted by the Parliament in a plenary session or by standing parliamentary committees. The competence between them is regulated by article 72 of the Constitution. Bills and law proposals regarding the protection of individual rights belong to the exclusive competence of the Plenum. Statutes passed by the Parliament are promulgated by the President of the Republic and become laws of the State.

Given the fact that the protection of human rights in international level is wide and always in progress, we should briefly refer to the status of international law and international conventions in the Greek rule of law. Article 28§1 of the Constitution is the gate for international law to enter into the Greek legal system. “The generally recognised rules of international law, as well as international conventions as of the time they are sanctioned by statute and become operative according to their respective conditions, shall be an integral part of domestic Greek law and shall prevail over any contrary provision of the law.”

iii. The above mentioned analysis indicates that in Greece, fundamental rights enjoy constitutional as well as domestic law’s force, including the international conventions that bind the Greek State. Their status points to their judicial protection.

Courts check the conformity or not of a legal provision with the Constitution. According to articles 87§2 and 93§4, every court is competent to ascertain the constitutionality or not of a statute. This judicial right constitutes the so- called “diffused” control of constitutionality. Therefore, it is evident that there is no “concentrated” control exercised by a Constitutional Court, although an ardent debate on the necessity of a Constitutional Court is taking place among legal society. As a consequence, after the constitutional amendment of 2011, Supreme Courts can decide on the constitutionality of a legal provision only in plenary session. A Special Highest Court established by the article 100 of the Constitution is competent to take an irrevocable decision, when contradictory decisions of the Supreme Courts, concerning the true meaning or the constitutionality of a legal provision, are issued. In addition, Law 3900/10 provides a process that resembles to the one in a Constitutional Court. The Council of the State which is the Supreme Administrative Court of Greece can decide upon an administrative’s court judgment in case of breach of the Constitution or any other superior legal provision, such as the European Convention on Human Rights, after an individual's complaint.

The Constitution secures the right to legal protection, in article 20 and entitles every person to receive legal protection by the courts where he can plead his views concerning his rights or interests specified by law. According to the Constitution (art.93), Courts are distinguished into administrative, civil and criminal. The supreme court of the civil and penal justice is the Court of Cassation, while the supreme court of the administrative justice is the Council of State.

Hence, there are two branches in the Greek Judicial System. There is also, a third Supreme Court, the Court of Auditors which is an administrative organ and a Supreme Court with special jurisdiction due to article 98 of the Constitution. Cases are judged at first and then at second instance. On the top of hierarchy of each branch, the Supreme Court judges on matters of legality of the case.

Individuals can claim their rights based on statutes and on the Constitution, before each of them depending on the nature of the case. At this point it should be clarified that not all of the constitutional rights have direct effect. The basic distinction is between individual and social rights. First ones can be presented directly before a court, whereas the others, as long as their scope refers to provisions on behalf of the State, need a statute to activate the constitutional provisions and to play the role of a conduit. Moreover, we should point out that first of all, constitutional rights oblige all agents of the State (legislative, executive and judicial agents).

Also, according to article 25§1 of the Constitution, these rights apply to the relations between individuals to which they are appropriate. This is the so-called theory of "Drittwirkung der Grundrechte", stemming from the German legal community and jurisprudence. As a result, not all individual rights can be claimed against individuals.

iv. Criminal Courts in Greece are organized due to the triple division of offences to Petty Offences Court, Misdemeanor Courts and Courts that handle serious crimes, which may be either Mixed Criminal Courts, composed of judges and jurors or Courts of Appeal hearing the case in first instance and composed of judges. Serious crimes such as rape and sexual abuse of children are heard by Mixed Criminal Courts. On the top of penal justice is Areios Pagos that hear appeals on points of law against final decisions of lower criminal courts.

The criminal procedure is based on the Greek Code of Criminal Procedure (GCCP) complemented by provisions of the Constitution, the European Convention on Human Rights and its Protocols and the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights. The Public Prosecutor at the court of misdemeanours, after receiving a notitia criminis initiates criminal proceedings. The Greek criminal procedure is governed by the principle of mandatory prosecution (or legality principle). Prosecution is carried out in rem. The role of the Public Prosecutor is crucial throughout the criminal proceedings since the Judicial Office executes the right to prosecute in the name of the State and no judgment is valid without prior hearing of the Public Prosecutor. The other important factors of the criminal procedure are the Judge and the defendant. The Greek Code of Criminal Procedure provides another important party, the civil claimant. A person can participate as a civil party if he has suffered material or moral damage resulting directly from the alleged criminal offence.

The criminal process comprises two basic stages: pre-trial and trial proceedings. Pre-trial stage is carried out due to the inquisitorial system and trial proceedings more due to the accusatorial system.

After receiving a “notitia criminis” the Public Prosecutor either orders a summary investigation either an ordinary investigation or refers the case directly to trial before the Court. Conduct a preliminary inquiry is obligatory for felonies. The pre-trial stage is shorter in misdemeanour cases. The aim of the investigation process is to collect all necessary evidence for the Judicial Council to decide if a person has to stand a trial. The Judicial Council’s process is the so- called “intermediary” process, intermediary because it takes place between pre-trial and trial proceedings. After, trial proceedings follow. The inquiry in Court is public, oral and moderately adversarial except when the Court decides that publicity would be detrimental to public morals or the personal or family life of the parties. In case of serious crimes, legal assistance is mandatory. The Greek Code of Criminal Procedure combined with the provisions of the Greek Constitution and the European Convention of Human Rights and its Protocols as well as the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights which provides a well developed system of defendant’s rights at the pre-trial as well as at the trial stage. The presumption of innocence is a fundamental principle. In the Greek system, the burden of proof lies with the prosecution and the defendant is not under an obligation to disclose his evidence before trial. Investigating authorities and Courts as well have a duty to search for the factual truth being entitled to initiate any investigating act with respect to any evidence considered necessary to reveal the truth. Procedural law does not entail rules concerning the probative value of the various means of proof and all lawfully acquired evidence is in principle subject to the Court's free evaluation.

The next stage comprises legal remedies. The defendant as well as the Prosecutor enjoys the right to exercise a legal remedy. There are legal remedies against the decisions of judicial councils as well as against decisions of lower penal courts. At second instance the Court of Appeal has the power to quash, amend or confirm the decision. An appeal in way of cassation is also provided before Areios Pagos (The Greek Court of Cassation). Areios Pagos decides upon only errors of law mentioned exclusively in the Greek Code of Criminal Procedure. Areios Pagos quashes the appealed decision and depending on the error of law will refer the case for a new trial before the competent Court, terminate the proceedings or acquit the appellant.

v. Within the Greek Penal Law, children enjoy a special status of protection. The Greek Penal Code, before the 2003 amendment, provided different age limits and consequently different penal treatment. According to the previous system, Penal Code distinguished between minors (7-12 years old) who are not criminally responsible and educational measures could be imposed upon them and adolescents (12-17 years old) who are considered as criminally responsible and may be sentenced to a special sanction. The Greek Penal Code, trying to keep up with the International Convention on the Rights of the Child and the legal status recognized in other EU states, repealed the above mentioned distinction and equated penal with civil liability. As a consequence, the age of criminal liability is 18 years. Specifically, article 121§1 of the penal code provides that persons between 8 and 18 years old are considered as minors. They are under the jurisdiction of juvenile courts, provided by article 96§3 of the Constitution. The behaviour of persons younger than 8 years is not assessed at all. It is noteworthy that according to article 133 of the penal code, despite the fact that young adults between 18 and 20 years old are subjected to adult criminal law, the courts are allowed discretion to impose a lenient sentence.

According to the statistics<sup>38</sup> of the Ministry of Justice, Transparency and Human Rights the number of the children prisoners is as follows:

---

<sup>38</sup> The Ministry of Justice, Penal System, General Board of Statistics concerning prisoners and penalties (2003-2010), viewed on 23 September 2012

2003	2004	2005	2006	2007	2008	2009	2010	2011	2012
449	543	445	420	376	446	520	510	568	587

The total population of Greece as of May 2011 is estimated by the National Statistical Service of Greece: 9.903.268. Data considering population aged over 10-14 and 15-19 years old from the most recent census (May 2011) are not published yet. Due to the previous census (2001), the above mentioned age groups were estimated 587.802 and 728.918 respectively, while the total population was estimated 10.964.020<sup>39</sup>.

2 SUBSTANTIVE CRIMINAL LAW

2.1 Sexual Abuse

i. As an outcome derived from the close approach to the letter of the law, the national penal legislator is defining the term of “sexual activities” in a broader sense including every integrated acting from the part of perpetrator efficient to provoke hedonism, while at the same time he is excluding sex – related actions not leading sufficiently to sexual violation of the child ( 342 § 2 PC ).

According to the Report on Draft for a Bill for “Confrontation of Domestic Violence” of the A’ Office of Scientific Studies Parliamentary Sector on Legal Vetting of Bills:

<http://www.ministryofjustice.gr/site/el/%CE%A3%CE%A9%CE%A6%CE%A1%CE%9F%CE%9D%CE%99%CE%A3%CE%A4%CE%99%CE%9A%CE%9F%CE%A3%CE%A5%CE%A3%CE%A4%CE%97%CE%9C%CE%91/%CE%A3%CE%84%CE%B1%CE%84%CE%B9%CE%83%CE%84%CE%B9%CE%BA%CE%AC%CE%83%CE%84%CE%BF%CE%B9%CE%87%CE%B5%CE%AF%CE%B1%CE%BA%CE%81%CE%B1%CE%84%CE%BF%CE%85%CE%BC%CE%AD%CE%BD%CE%89%CE%BD/%CE%93%CE%95%CE%9D%CE%99%CE%9A%CE%9F%CE%A3%CE%A3%CE%A4%CE%91%CE%A4%CE%99%CE%A3%CE%A4%CE%99%CE%9A%CE%9F%CE%A3%CE%A0%CE%99%CE%9D%CE%91%CE%9A%CE%91%CE%A3%CE%9A%CE%A1%CE%91%CE%A4%CE%9F%CE%A5%CE%9C%CE%95%CE%9D%CE%A9%CE%9D%CE%A0%CE%9F%CE%99%CE%9D%CE%A9%CE%9D.aspx>

<sup>39</sup> Hellenic Statistical Authority (EL.STAT.), Statistical Themes, Population, De Facto Population, Demographic Data, viewed on 23 September 2012, http://www.statistics.gr/portal/page/portal/ESYE/BUCKET/A1604/Other/A1604\_SAP03\_TB\_DC\_00\_2001\_01\_F\_GR.pdf

“The central evaluative notion, that the whole chapter of Crimes against Sexual Integrity was constructed on, is that of “sexual activity”, which includes different forms of behaviour of varying degree constituting all, as of their external attributes, expressions of sexual life. The latter are designed to hedonism and under specific circumstances, they also assault the sexual morality of the victim. On the contrary, simple recounting of acts relating to sexual life or displaying of photos picturing sexual activity do not constitute in their external nature expressions of sexual life and for that reason the above-mentioned types of comportment do not stand for the criminalized term of “sexual activity.”

Moreover, the meaning of a profligate action, as it is applied in the Penal Code (article 353, includes the activity through which the perpetrator pursued to signify something clearly connected to sexual living. The punishment of acts – like the recounting, presentation of actions regarding to sexual life and offending the decency of the underage – when committed by an adult to whom the supervision and the guarding on the minor have been confided is provided in Article 24, paragraph 3 of the under adoption Bill. Therefore, these forms of conduct do not reside in the conceptual core of (profligate) sexual activity.”

In addition, both articles 337 § 1 and 338 § 1 of the Penal Code offer an interpretative tool, so we can export meaningful conclusions for the range of legal district occupied by the criminalized concept of “sexual activities”. In fact, article 338 § 1 of the Penal Code dissociates fornication from other (profligate) sexual activity, which automatically means not only fornication makes up for sexual activity, but other forms as well. And this conclusion holds absolutely consequent upon the broad definition we gave to the term in the beginning. On the other hand, article 337 § 1 is making clear reference to “profligate gesticulation or suggestions concerning profligate sexual activities” and as a result we can assume that the objective elements of a “sexual activity” are being met in real time by the moment perpetrator invades child’s wide corporeal area.

ii. Interpretation or even citation of the word “intentionally” is detected within the Penal Code’s texts referring to the crime of “sexual abuse”. Absence means that criminal liability stands for the fulfilment of every sexual violation considered.

Therefore, criminal liability for the committed crimes of “sexual abuse”<sup>40</sup> is particularly structured as follows:

‘Seduction of minors’, Article 339 of the Greek Penal Code;

1. Whoever commits an indecent act with a person under fifteen (15) years of age, or causes this person to commit or undergo such an act through deception if no heavier punishment is provided under the article 351A<sup>41</sup>, is punished as follows:

- a) if the victim is under twelve (12) years of age, with at least ten years’ confinement.
- b) if the victim has completed twelve (12) years of age, but is under fourteen (14) years of age, with confinement of up to ten years.
- c) if the victim has completed fourteen (14) years of age and up to fifteen (15) years of age, with at least two years’ imprisonment.

2. If marriage was performed between the perpetrator and the victim, no criminal prosecution will be exercised and if such has been instituted, it is declared inadmissible.

‘Abuse of minors’, Article 342 of the Greek Penal Code;

1. The adult who commits an indecent<sup>42</sup> act upon a minor entrusted to his supervision or guardianship, even temporarily, is punished as follows:

- a) if the victim is under fourteen (14) years of age, with at least ten years’ confinement
- b) if the victim has completed fourteen (14) years of age, but is under eighteen (18) years of age, with confinement.

‘Insult of sexual dignity’, Article 337 of the Greek Penal Code;

1. One who insults gravely the dignity<sup>43</sup> of a person concerning his sexual life, with the perpetration of unchaste gravely or with proposals regarding unchaste acts, shall be punished with imprisonment of not more than one (1) year or with a fine.

---

<sup>40</sup> International Criminal Police Organization – INTERPOL, National Laws, Legislation of Interpol member states on sexual offences against children, Greece - Grèce – Grecia, Athens, <https://www.interpol.int/Public/Children/SexualAbuse/NationalLaws/CsaGreece.pdf>

<sup>41</sup> Global Resource of Information Directory, Greece – Country Profile, <http://www.fosigrid.org/europe/greece>

<sup>42</sup> Global Resource of Information Directory, Greece – Country Profile, <http://www.fosigrid.org/europe/greece>

<sup>43</sup> Global Resource of Information Directory, Greece – Country Profile,

2. The act described in the above-mentioned paragraph is punished with imprisonment from three (3) months to two (2) years if the victim is younger than twelve (12) years of age.

The article also states that any adult who, through the Internet or other means of communication, obtains contact with a minor under fifteen years of age and uses lewd gestures or suggestive behavior to offend the sexual dignity of the child, is liable to imprisonment for at least two years. Where the offensive act is committed habitually or repeatedly in subsequent meetings, the offender is liable to an increased sentence of at least three years' imprisonment. The article also states that where the adult offender obtains through the Internet or other means of communication contact with a person appearing to be less than fifteen years of age, the crime is punishable with at least one year's imprisonment and, in the case of habitual or repeat offenses, an increased minimum sentence of imprisonment of at least three years.

'Sodomy', Article 347 of the Greek Penal Code;

This provision defines the crime of committing sexual acts between males by abusing a relationship of dependency based upon employment. The offense is punishable by imprisonment for at least three months. The same penalty applies to any adult committing sodomy as the result of seducing a person under seventeen years of age, or if the act is committed for financial gain.

iii. As it gets clear from the article 339 § 2 in relation with § 1 , The legal age of consent for sexual activity is fifteen (15) years<sup>44</sup>.

Following the declaration of article 339§2 also , sexual activities between minors under the age of fifteen are not subject to any punishment , except for the fact of an existing age gap of three years , when only reformatory or curative measures are being imposed.

The national legislator does not refer in paragraph 2 of article 339 to sexual activities between minors under the accurate determination of "consensual".

iv. In article 338 § 1 as well as § 2, the abuse of insanity or incapability of any cause is being regulated. In paragraph 1 , where abuse leads to sexual intercourse with the victim or any other “ sexual activity ” – see definition above in a ) i - , the crime is punishable with at least ten years imprisonment. In paragraph 2, where abuse leads to the insult of sexual dignity, then there is an imprisonment up to ten years.

---

<http://www.fosigrid.org/europe/greece>

<sup>44</sup> International Criminal Police Organization – INTERPOL , National Laws , Legislation of Interpol member states on sexual offences against children , Greece - Grèce – Grecia , Athens , <https://www.interpol.int/Public/Children/SexualAbuse/NationalLaws/CsaGreece.pdf>

v. ‘Incest’, Article 345 of the Greek Penal Code

1. Sexual intercourse with blood-relatives of an ascendant is punished a) with confinement for at least ten (10) years if the descendant had not completed fifteen years of age , while with confinement of at least five years if the descendant had completed fifteen but not eighteen years of age b) with blood-relatives of a descendant, with imprisonment for up to two (2) years c) between brothers and sisters or half-brothers and half-sisters, sexual intercourse is punished with imprisonment for up to two (2) years.

2. Lineal blood descendants or siblings may be absolved from punishment if at the time of the commission of the act; they had not reached eighteen (18) years of age. The criminal prosecution is exercised ex officio.<sup>45</sup> vi. In article 342 § 2<sup>45</sup>, the criminal legislator introduces all the aggravating circumstances concerning the abuse of minors. In particular, paragraph 2 clearly refers to:

- a) members of the family
- b) a person of the minor’s domestic environment as well as one who is familiar with that
- c) teacher, educator, trainer or any kind of tutor that delivers lessons to the child
- d) person that is receiving child’s services
- e) cleric who is holding a spiritual relationship with the minor
- f) psychologist, doctor, nurse or any other relevant scientist, who is providing services to the minor

At the same time, article 343 provides imprisonment for at least one year for a) public servants who commit sexual abuse of dependents, as well as for b) the ones working in prison or other penitentiary establishment, schools, educational institutions, hospitals, clinics or other sanitariums and do perform sexual activities with persons being under their custody.

---

<sup>45</sup> Global Resource of Information Directory , Greece – Country Profile, <http://www.fosigrid.org/europe/greece>

2.2 Child Prostitution

vii. Greece has signed but has not yet ratified the 2005 Council of Europe Convention on Action against Trafficking in Human Beings. (Date of Signature : 17/11/2005 ) State is recently seriously oriented to a series of administrative reforms as well as it is highly concerned to meet up European standards of judicial operation. As a result, ratification of the Convention is on the top of the agenda.

viii. “Child prostitution” is basically interpreted in article 351 § 6 of the Greek Penal Code<sup>46</sup>. According to the grammatical definition, child prostitution is the “sexual exploitation consisting of attempting any lewd acts out of speculation or consisting of the out of profit utilization of the body, voice or image of the person aiming to real or pretended attempt of a lewd act, or even the provision of operation or services aiming to sexual stimulation”. As long as the criterion of profit is present within both Greek Penal Code and the Lanzarote Convention, we can assume with safety that national legislation is absolutely compatible with the legal wording of Convention - article 19.

ix. Operation of the recruiter is being criminalized as deduced from below:

Article 349, Penal Code. Pandering;

This section states that whoever induces, urges, procures or facilitates the prostitution or lewd<sup>47</sup> acts of minors with the intent to facilitate another’s debauchery, will be punished by confinement between five and ten years and fined between €10,000 and €50,000.

A penalty of confinement between five and twenty and a fine from €50,000 up to € 100.000 will be imposed where the offense is committed under one of the following circumstances:

a) where the victim is under fifteen years of age; b) by fraudulent means c) where the perpetrator is a relation (through blood or marriage) or a foster parent, spouse, guardian, or any other person to whom the minor is entrusted for rearing, education, supervision or custody, even temporarily; d) by servant , who commits or participates under any way to the above-mentioned activity taking benefit of his capacity or even during his duties e) where

---

<sup>46</sup> International Criminal Police Organization – INTERPOL , National Laws , Legislation of Interpol member states on sexual offences against children , Greece - Grèce – Grecia , Athens ,
<https://www.interpol.int/Public/Children/SexualAbuse/NationalLaws/CsaGreece.pdf>

<sup>47</sup> Global Resource of Information Directory , Greece – Country Profile, <http://www.fosigrid.org/europe/greece>

the offender used electronic media or f) where the offender offered or promised monetary or any other form of payment.

Article 348B, Penal Code. Attracting Children for Sexual Purposes;

Defines the crime<sup>48</sup> of an adult using information and communications technology to entice a child under fifteen years of age to meet in person in order to commit offenses as specified in Articles 339 and 348A. Where the initial proposal was followed by further similar acts which resulted in one of the offenses specified above, the offender is liable to imprisonment for at least two years and a fine of between €50,000 and €200,000.

Article 348 § 3, Penal Code. Facilitating Debauchery of Others;

Whoever attempts to facilitate either out of profession or out of profit, even when those acts are not conducted explicitly, actions of lewdness with an underage in the way of publishing advertisement, picture, phone number or transmitting electronic mails, or via any other means, is liable to imprisonment and a fine of between €10,000 and €100,000.

Article 351, Penal Code. Trafficking in Prostitution;

Defines the offense of engaging or influencing a person for the purpose of prostitution, even with consent, with a view to facilitate another's debauchery. The offense is punishable by confinement up to ten years, and a fine of between €10,000 and €50,000.

The offender is liable to an increased sentence of at least ten years' confinement where the offense is committed against minors (§4.a).

Actions committed by the offender are being criminalized as follows:

Article 351A, Penal Code. Lewd Acts against Minors;

States that adult who commit lewd acts against minors in exchange for money or other material exchange, or adults who cause lewd acts among minors committed before other people have committed a criminal offense under this section. The offense is punishable by imprisonment of at least ten years and a fine of between €100,000 and 500,000 where the victim is less than ten years old. The article also states that where the victim is between ten and fifteen years of age, the offender is liable to imprisonment for up to ten years and a fine

---

<sup>48</sup> Global Resource of Information Directory , Greece – Country Profile , <http://www.fosigrid.org/europe/greece>

of between €50,000 and 100,000. Where the victim is over fifteen years of age, the sentence is imprisonment for at least one year and a fine of between €10,000 and 50,000. The offense is punishable by imprisonment for life where it causes the death of the victim.

2.3 Child Pornography

x. Greece has signed but has not yet ratified the Council of Europe Convention on Cyber Crime. (Date of Signature : 23/11/2001)

State is recently seriously oriented to a series of administrative reforms as well as it is highly concerned to meet up European standards of judicial operation. As a result, ratification of the Convention is on the top of the agenda.

xi. According to the provisions of Article 348A<sup>49</sup> of the Greek Penal Code, Pornographic material constitutes every depiction, real or figurative imprinting, on electronic carrier or any material of a minor's body, intended for sexual excitement, as well as the recording or imprinting, on electronic carrier on any material, of a real, simulated or fictitious indecent assault acted for the same purpose by or with a minor. As a consequence, the compatibility of the national article with Lanzarote Convention's provision is more than obvious, if 348A<sup>50</sup> of Greek Penal Code is not wider. More precisely, while article 20§2 of the Lanzarote Convention is referring only to the depicting of genitals as punishable, national legislation criminalizes depicting of any part of the minor's body efficient to lead to sexual stimulation.

xii. Whoever<sup>51</sup> prepares, possesses, puts by any means into circulation pornographic material, coming under the definition of the preceding paragraph, is sentenced to at least one year imprisonment plus a monetary penalty, while pornographic material distribution associated with the exploitation of need, of mental or intellectual weakness, of corporeal incompetence of minors due to an organic disease or with the performance of physical violence against a minor, constitutes an aggravated circumstance punishable as a felony.

---

<sup>49</sup> Global Resource of Information Directory, Greece – Country Profile, <http://www.fosigrid.org/europe/greece>

<sup>50</sup> Global Resource of Information Directory, Greece – Country Profile, <http://www.fosigrid.org/europe/greece>

<sup>51</sup> International Criminal Police Organization – INTERPOL, National Laws, Legislation of Interpol member states on sexual offences against children, Greece - Grèce – Grecia, Athens,
<https://www.interpol.int/Public/Children/SexualAbuse/NationalLaws/CsaGreece.pdf>

Moreover, this article was amended in 2007 to include the use of the Internet or electronic means as a means to disseminate child pornography. The 2007 amendments and the inclusion of the Internet as a means to disseminate material led to the introduction of use of the Internet to commit a crime being deemed an aggravating form of the offense. This section states that pornographic material constitutes every depiction, real or simulated, in any format, of a minor's body, intended for sexual excitement, as well as the recording or imprinting, in any format, of a real, simulated or fictitious indecent assault acted for the same purpose by or with a minor. The article states that it is an offense to manufacture, offer, provide, possess, or sell such pornographic material for profit. As a result, article 348A<sup>52</sup> is fully compatible with provisions (20)1.a and 1.f as mentioned in text of the Convention. However, provision of article (20)1.f refers to the possession of access to pornographic material via technology, informatics or communication means. This is a citation differentiated from the possession of pornographic material itself through a computer system or use of the Internet, stated in article 348A<sup>53</sup> §2 of the Greek Penal Code.

xiii. Policing of the Internet as well as Control mechanism for pornographic materials is a difficult discussion, as it hits over issues of the constitutionally protected freedom of speech and the confidential character of communication. Hellenic Police has established the Sector for the Prosecution of Cybercrime in 2004 acknowledging the problem of security on the Internet. During the recent years, several cases of promoting illegal activities on the Internet have been unravelled by this Police Sector. This specific Office is co-operating with Europol, Interpol, FBI and the US department of homeland Security. In Greece, there is also Safeline, that is joining forces with other agencies of provision of Internet services, EDET (=National Net of Research & Technology) & PSD (=Panhellenic School Net), Institutions of Research & Culture, Unions of Consumers and Greek Police in order to limit flow of illegal content on the Internet. The program is being supported by the "Action Plan for Safer Use of the Internet", launched by the E.U. and is being operated by SAFENET, collective organization of Internet Services Providers in Greece. Operation of SafeLine is based upon articles 10 and 12 of Greek Constitution, which provide the right of reference to citizens and legitimization for them to establish unions and non – profit corporations aiming

---

<sup>52</sup> Global Resource of Information Directory, Greece – Country Profile, <http://www.fosigrid.org/europe/greece>

<sup>53</sup> Law Library of Congress, <http://www.loc.gov/law/help/child-rights/greece.php>

to protect individual and social rights in return. SafeLine is receiving complaints concerning Internet sites or newsgroups, where users have detected pictures of children being maltreated anywhere in the world. State being party to the Lanzarote Convention, didn't use the reservation right as mentioned in article 20§3 of the Convention, since all the forms of pornography cited are criminalized by the national legislator and included in the letter of law (article 348A). On the other hand, the State seems not to have penalized intentional access to porn material via technology as provided in paragraph 1.f of article 20. Therefore, we can maintain that it made use of its reservation right, as long as the national legislator still criminalizes only the "possession" (article<sup>54</sup> 348 A par.2 of the Greek Penal Code) of pornographic material but not the "possession of access" (article 20 par. 1 of the Lanzarote Convention) to it. As a result, simple on-line watching or surfing on pornographic material without the process of downloading from related websites does not constitute a crime according to national legislation. In this case, there is no stable incorporation of data into electronic or other carrier and subsequently no such real dominating over the pornographic material as to justify "possession".

xiv. Article 348B, Penal Code. Attracting Children for Sexual Purposes;

This article defines the crime of an adult using information and communications technology to entice a child under fifteen years of age to meet in person in order to commit offenses as specified in Articles 339 and 348A<sup>55</sup>. Where the initial proposal was followed by further similar acts which resulted in one of the offenses specified above, the offender is liable to imprisonment for at least two years and a fine of between €50,000 and €200,000.

As regards to the discrimination between "recruitment" and "coercion", the terminology used to describe the above – mentioned criminalized activity is that of "enticement", which apparently seems conceptually closer to the notion of "recruitment".

As it can be seen through the examination of Greek Penal Code, the national legislator does not criminalize the attendance of pornographic performances involving the participation of

---

<sup>54</sup> Global Resource of Information Directory, Greece – Country Profile, <http://www.fosigrid.org/europe/greece>

<sup>55</sup> Global Resource of Information Directory, Greece – Country Profile, <http://www.fosigrid.org/europe/greece>

children at all and as a consequence , national legislation ends up incompatible with provision in article 21 § 1.c of the Lanzarote Convention.<sup>56</sup>

2.4 Corruption of Children

xv. Article 339, Penal Code. Seduction of Minors § 4;

The article also states that it is an offense to entice a minor under fifteen years of age to participate in lewd acts, even if the offender does not participate himself. This offense is punishable by imprisonment for at least two years.

Also , article<sup>57</sup> 342 § 3 P.C. declares as offensive of minor's decency the gesticulation , suggestion or recounting , depicting or presentation of actions related to sexual life committed by an adult to whom the supervision and the guarding on the minor have been confided, even temporarily. As a result, the perpetrator is punished by imprisonment for at least six months, and if the activity is habitually being committed by imprisonment for at least two years.

2.5 Solicitation of Children for Sexual Purposes

xvi. The article 23 of the Council of Europe Convention on the Protection of Children against sexual violence and sexual abuse (the Convention) provides that:

“Each Party shall take the necessary legislative or other measures to criminalize the intentional proposal, through information and communication technologies, of an adult to meet a child who has not reached the age set in application of Article 18, paragraph 2, for the purpose of committing any of the offences established in accordance with Article 18, paragraph 1.a, or Article 20, paragraph 1.a, against him or her, where this proposal has been followed by material acts leading to such a meeting.”

---

<sup>56</sup> However, it should be noted that attendance of pornographic performances is a criminal act, according to a special law “about indecent publications” (Law 5060/1931)

<sup>57</sup> Global Resource of Information Directory , Greece – Country Profile , <http://www.fosigrid.org/europe/greece>

Article 4 of Law 3727/2008, under which Greece ratified the Convention, introduced a new article to Greek Penal Code in conformity with article 23 of the Convention. The article 348B provides that:

“Whoever intentionally proposes, through information and communication technologies, to an adult to meet a child who has not reached the age of 15, for the purpose of committing any of the offences established under paragraphs 1 and 2 of articles 339 [Sexual Abuse] and 348A [Child Pornography] , against him or her, where this proposal has been followed by material acts leading to the commitment of these offences, is subject to minimum two years imprisonment, as well as financial penalty waging from 50.000 € to 200.000 €”.

If read carefully, article 348B is differentiated from the respective article 23 of the Convention in two points: firstly, it criminalizes a diverse conduct and secondly, it requires additional material acts to those required by the text of the Convention.

According to the Convention, States shall criminalize the intentional sexual gratification of an adult towards a child through information and communication technologies. However, article 348B refers to the intentional proposal of an adult towards another adult to meet a child for the purpose of committing sexual abuse or child pornography acts; therefore, what is criminalized under article 348B, is the incitement to solicitation of children for sexual purposes, and not the main act of “grooming” itself! It may sound absurd, but this differentiation resulted from a translation error: the proposal “of” an adult was converted to the proposal “to” an adult<sup>58</sup>. This error has already been depicted by the Hellenic Parliament Scientific Service and reform of article 348B has already been suggested<sup>59</sup>.

Furthermore, the Convention requires that material acts leading to the meeting take place, while the Greek Penal Code refers to material acts leading to the commitment of sexual abuse or child pornography. Thus, Greek criminal legislation requires that the adult actually begins to commit the offences of sexual abuse or child pornography<sup>60</sup>, in order to criminalize his/her “proposal” and consider it as a “solicitation of children for sexual

---

<sup>58</sup> Sexual Offences, N. Paraskevopoulos- E. Fitrakis, Sakkoulas Editions 2011, p. 315.

<sup>59</sup> 59Hellenic Parliament Scientific Service Report (by Athanassia Dionissopoulou), as can be found in *PoinChr*2009, 94 forwards [95].

<sup>60</sup> Sexual Offences, N. Paraskevopoulos- E. Fitrakis, Sakkoulas Editions 2011, p. 317.

purposes". In this point, protection ascribed to the child victim is apparently weaker than the protection Convention meant to provide.

Solicitation of children for sexual purposes may finally be punished under article 337§3 of Greek Penal Code which provides for the criminalization of the adult, who gets in contact with a minor under fifteen years old, using the Internet or other means of communication and offends his/ her sexual dignity by gestures or improper proposals. Penalty provided is imprisonment up to two years. Compliance of this provision with article 23 of the Convention is pointed out by the Explanatory Report of Law 3727/2008<sup>61</sup>.

xvi. Attempting and aiding or abetting to the activities mentioned under a, b, c, d, and e (sexual abuse, child prostitution, child pornography, corruption of children and solicitation of children for sexual purposes) are criminalized under the general provisions of Greek Penal Code regulating attempt and aid or abet to offences (articles 42-44 and 45-49). Attempt crimes are generally subject to less severe penalties than the accomplished crimes. As regards aid or abet, Greek criminal legislation classifies as follows: if the defendant is an accessory, he/ she is subject to a lesser penalty than the main perpetrator. If the defendant is an accomplice (abettor), he/ she has the same degree of guilt as the person he/ she is assisting, is subject to prosecution for the same crime, and faces the same criminal penalties.

2.6 Corporate Liability

xviii. Would it be possible for legal/moral persons to be held liable for the offences provided by the Convention, when an action has been performed on their behalf by a person in a position at their entity. As an introductory remark, it should be mentioned that cases in which legal persons may take liability under Greek criminal legislation are very limited.

xix. The Greek legal system does not recognize criminal liability of legal persons as such. Therefore, corporate liability may only be administrative and/ or civil.

Child pornography, child prostitution and child trafficking are the offences provided by the Convention where administrative liability of legal persons may be held. A criminal conviction for any of these offences committed within an establishment is communicated within a month from its publication to the District General Secretary by the Prosecution

---

<sup>61</sup> Article 3 of Explanatory Report of Law 3727/2008.

Office. Then, the District General Secretary may order temporary closure (for a period between one and three years) of the establishment where the offences took place<sup>62</sup>; temporary closure may be ordered even at the beginning of the prosecution, under the same conditions and procedure. Considering all circumstances, the District General Secretary may also order permanent closure or permanent disqualification from the practice of commercial activities for the establishment<sup>63</sup>.

Companies and associations may also be liable from a civil standpoint for any offence when an action has been committed on their behalf by a person in a position at their entity. Under Greek criminal legislation, the victim of an offence is entitled to bring civil claims against the defendant (for restitution and moral harm) to the Criminal Court<sup>64</sup>. In the case of the defendant being a leading person or an employee in a legal person, these civil claims can be brought directly against the legal person. This option seems advantageous for the victim, since companies/ associations are more likely to possess sufficient funds. The procedure of bringing civil claims against a legal person is regulated by Greek Civil Code<sup>65</sup>, and applies at civil claims brought before Criminal Courts as well.

xx. Obviously, administrative and civil liabilities of legal persons do not exclude criminal proceedings against natural persons who are perpetrators, instigators or accessories in the offences. Corporate liability does not exclude personal criminal liability.

2.7 Aggravating Circumstances

xxi. Greek Criminal Code provides aggravating circumstances for some of the offences examined above. These aggravating circumstances vary depending on the offence:

Sexual abuse offences against children (a):

Article 336§1 of Penal Code criminalises the general conduct of forcing someone to engage in sexual activities by the use of physical force, coercion or threat. The penalty for the offence of article 336§1 is “imprisonment”, while article 336§2 provides that if offence was committed by two or more people acting together, the penalty imposed is imprisonment of

---

<sup>62</sup> Within a month from the acknowledgement of the appeal criminal conviction.

<sup>63</sup> Par. 6 of article 11, of Law 3064/2002.

<sup>64</sup> Articles 63-64 of Greek Criminal Procedure Code.

<sup>65</sup> Articles 71, 922, 927, 932 of Greek Civil Code.

minimum ten years. If sexual offence committed by use of force, coercion or threats resulted in the death of the victim, life imprisonment is imposed<sup>66</sup>.

Offenders of engaging in sexual activities with a child and offenders of sexual abuse against a particularly vulnerable child (due to its physical/ mental disability) are also subject to life imprisonment if actions resulted in the death of the victim<sup>67</sup>.

Offences concerning child prostitution:

Child prostitution is criminalised under article 351A of Greek Penal Code. Habitual offenders of this crime are treated more severely. Moreover, if child prostitution acts lead to the death of the child, life imprisonment is imposed. The latter applies for victims of child trafficking as well, according to the general provisions criminalising human trafficking<sup>68</sup>.

Offences concerning child pornography:

Committing child pornography offences habitually or by profession is considered as aggravating circumstance under Greek criminal legislation. Perpetrators of child pornography committed: a) by using force, coercion or threat, b) against a child younger than 15 years old, and finally c) against a particularly vulnerable child, by abuse of its situation of dependence or physical/ mental disability, are subject to more severe punishment. In these three cases, if acts resulted in serious physical damage or death of the victim, perpetrators face even more harsh penalties (imprisonment of minimum of ten years and financial penalty in case of serious physical damage and life imprisonment in case of death of the victim).

Offences concerning corruption of children

Paragraph 4 of article 339 criminalises intentional causing, for sexual purposes, of a minor under 15 years old, to witness sexual abuse or sexual activities, even without having to participate. If this conduct resulted in the death of the child, life imprisonment is imposed<sup>69</sup>.

Offences concerning solicitation of children for sexual purposes

---

<sup>66</sup> Article 340 of Greek Penal Code.

<sup>67</sup> Article 340 of Greek Penal Code.

<sup>68</sup> Article 351 of Greek Penal Code.

<sup>69</sup> Article 340 of Greek Penal Code.

In case of application of article 337§3<sup>70</sup>, and if the act is committed habitually or a subsequent meeting takes place, the perpetrator is subject to a minimum of three years imprisonment.

2.8 Sanctions and Measures

xxii. Sanctions for the offences under a, b, c, d, e include mainly deprivation of liberty and in some cases additional financial penalties.

The State has also instituted additional measures due to the particularity of sexual offences against children. First of all, anyone prosecuted or convicted for crimes against sexual freedom of children and the economic exploitation of sexual life of children is not allowed to exercise a profession involving contact with children in the public or private sector. Anyone convicted for these offences, may also be subject to obligatory psychological treatment, taking place during the imprisonment or at any other time<sup>71</sup>. For child prostitution and child trafficking offenders, the court may order mandatory community service, residence prohibition or extradition (under the aliens' legislation) as well<sup>72</sup>.

Extradition issues between Greece and other EU Member States are regulated by the European Arrest Warrant mechanism<sup>73</sup>. As regards surrender procedures with the member states of the Council of Europe, the European Convention on Extradition (1957) applies<sup>74</sup>. Finally, bilateral extradition treaties between Greece and other states may be relevant.

xxiii. Latest reforms in criminal legislation regarding sexual offences against children aimed at meeting the standards of protection ascribed by the Council of Europe and EU legislation. Even if the goal was not achieved completely yet, penalties introduced are considered proportionate, effective and dissuasive. What should be enforced is the application of psychotherapeutic measures provided for sexual offenders, since they hold a key role in their rehabilitation.

xxiv. As it was already mentioned [under (f)] sanctions for legal persons/moral entities include mainly administrative penalties, such as temporary closure, or even permanent

---

<sup>70</sup> See above under (e).

<sup>71</sup> Par. 2 of article 352A of the Greek Penal Code.

<sup>72</sup> Articles 352, 72 and 75 of the Greek Penal Code.

<sup>73</sup> Council Framework Decisions 2002/584/JHA. Incorporated under Law 3251/2004.

<sup>74</sup> As ratified by Law 4165/1961.

closure and permanent disqualification from the practice of commercial activities. These penalties are imposed by the General Secretary of the District of the establishment, not by the Criminal Court.

xxv. Materials and instruments used in order to commit sexual offences against children are confiscated under the general rules of Greek Penal Code. According to article 76, objects that are products of an intended felony or misdemeanor, their fruits, and those acquired through them, as well as articles used or assigned to the performance of such an act, may be confiscated if they belong to the perpetrator or to any of the accomplices/ accessories. If these items present a danger to public order, confiscation takes place against whoever possesses them, even before or without the court sentencing decision for the offence committed. Therefore, confiscation may be imposed as an complementary penalty or as a safety measure.

xxvi. In the special case of products of human trafficking (incl. child trafficking), confiscation of materials and instruments is obligatory and is ordered by the court convicting decision<sup>75</sup>. In this case, confiscation is ordered even if the property belongs to a third party, under the condition that he/she was aware of the criminal activity at the time of acquisition of the property<sup>76</sup>. If this property no longer exists or is yet to be found, a financial penalty compensating the value of the property is imposed.

There is currently no legislative regulation for creating a special fund using the properties confiscated for sexual offences against children in the scope of financing relevant prevention or intervention programs.

xxvi. When sexual abuse or sexual violence against a child is committed within the family, the Law 3500/2006 for Domestic Violence applies<sup>77</sup>. Prosecution in cases of domestic sexual abuse and sexual violence takes place ex officio. In these cases, the defendant may be ordered to quit the family house or his/her relocation; moreover, he/she may be not be allowed to approach the victim's place of residence or work, the close relative's house and children's schools and guesthouses in order to protect the physical and mental health of the victim. These security measures may be ordered by the competent criminal court or the competent <sup>77</sup> Articles 1 and 8 of Law 3500/2006 establish explicitly sexual abuse or rape within a family as forms of domestic violence.

---

<sup>75</sup> Law 3691/2008

<sup>76</sup> Article 46 of Law 3691/2008

magistrate or a judicial council and for as long as is necessary. They remain valid until the finals' court judgment or the order of the public prosecutor filing the case due to criminal mediation<sup>78</sup>.

3 CRIMINAL PROCEDURE

3.1 Investigation

i. According to the Greek Code of Criminal Procedure (article 329), each hearing is public. However, the following article (330) introduces an exception from the aforementioned rule and provides the judges the chance to exclude from public hearing the cases of sexual crimes, mainly where the victim is a minor. Furthermore, in 2002, Greece adopted the first Anti-trafficking Law (Law 3064 of 2002), which amended the Criminal Code and provided for the punishment of the criminal acts of trafficking, as defined in international and regional instruments protecting human rights. In December of 2007 Greece also ratified the Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography amending accordingly the provisions of the national legislation. As a result, the treatment of trafficked children by the national courts fulfils the standards set by the international texts. Later, in 2003, Greece has adopted the legislative framework that ensures to the victims of trafficking protection and assistance and, in 2005 transposed the Directive for the issuance of residence permits to the victims of trafficking. The Greek legislation (Law 3064/2002 as amended, and Presidential Decree 233/2005) provides the protection and safeguards of victims of child trafficking, such as accommodation, medical and psychological support, interpretation services as well as free access to the legal aid system. The anti-trafficking legislation provides explicitly for a reflection period of at least thirty (30) days for all victims of trafficking, and permits for a one-month extension in cases of trafficked children. Moreover, the legislation guarantees the right of trafficked children to be granted a residence permit in cases where they cooperate with the police and prosecuting authorities. Trafficked children who do not complain about the offenders are entitled to residence permit on humanitarian grounds, only when they are accommodated in protection centers by order of the Prosecutor.

---

<sup>78</sup> Article 18 of Law 3500/2006. Criminal litigation for domestic violence offences is also provided by Law 3500/2006.

In 2006, the Greek Parliament voted the Law 3500 for combating the phenomenon of domestic violence. According to its 18th article, the investigator, the judicial council, and the court may impose the restrictive condition of removal of the offender from the house where he lives with his relatives. Furthermore, the victims receive material and psychological support by public social agencies (article 22). The child victims have also the right not to testify in the court, except of the cases that their testimony is extremely necessary for the elucidation of the case. Subsequently, the Law 3625 of 2007 introduced the article 226 A in the Greek Code of Criminal Procedure. The latter permits the videotaping of the minor's testimony at the stage of preliminary procedure (pre-trial) in cases related to sexual victimization of children, such as rape, sexual trafficking, incest, and child pornography. According to the aforementioned article, a psychologist specialized in children is appointed by the Public Prosecutor, in order to provide support to the victim for the witnessing procedure, and also accompanies him/her during the procedure. In the following, the child is not obliged to attend the hearing as a witness, since the videotaped material is considered as main evidence. Finally, according to Law 3727 of 2008 (article 226 A par. 2 of the Code of Criminal Procedure), the minor may be accompanied by his/her legal representative during the pre-trial proceeding, except of the cases that the latter has participated in commission of the investigated criminal offense.

ii. Within the frame of the Greek Police, there is the Directorate against the Organized Crime, under the authorization of which operates a special Department on human trafficking cases. In the same frame, operates a specialized Department on cybercrime, which investigates and analyzes child pornography material. Furthermore, in big urban areas, such as Athens and Thessaloniki, a specialized Prosecutor is responsible for cases of children's victimization, as well as human trafficking.

iii. As a rule, according to the Greek Code of Criminal Procedure, the Public Prosecutor presses charges "ex officio". In other words, the Public Prosecutor must press charges whenever he/she believes that the commission of a criminal offence has taken place, regardless of the statements of the victims and the participants in the offence in general. However, there are some exceptions to the aforementioned rule. As far as the sexual abuse of children is concerned in particular, according to the article 344 of the Greek Criminal Code, the prosecutor has the possibility to refrain from pressing charges in cases that the victim of rape or his/her relatives declare that the hearing will lead to his/her psychological damage.

iv. The Law 3625 of 2007 introduced some important changes in the article 113 of the Greek Penal Code in relation to the statute of limitation and its suspension. In cases of sexual crimes against children, the statute of limitation is suspended until the victim becomes an adult and the suspension lasts till after one year in cases of misdemeanours and after three years in cases of felonies.

v. An unaccompanied child in the Greek territory is registered as a minor or an adult according to his/her declaration on the age without any further investigation. In case an age assessment is needed or there are doubts about the age, there are not specific provisions regulating the implementation of a certain age assessment procedure. In the context of the Memorandum of cooperation for combating trafficking in human beings and providing support to victims between the Special anti-trafficking committee, the Secretaries General of twelve NGOs and the Office of IOM in Athens (November 29th, 2005)<sup>79</sup> it is declared that in case a person claims that he/she is a minor and there are serious doubts about the age, while the precise age is not possible to be identified, the person should be considered and treated as a minor and be entitled to special protection (benefit of a doubt). Though, this provision is not enshrined on legislative level. Provisions for medical examinations to determine age are included only in the context of the examination of the asylum applications of unaccompanied minors. The use of the examinations should be in line with the respect of certain guidelines provided in law, and safeguarding the best interests of the child, such as the requirement for the child's consent, the provision of information to the minor prior to examination, as well as the treatment of the person as a minor until the completion of the examination<sup>80</sup>.

vi. In Greece, police authorities are responsible for collecting data of people who have been arrested by policemen, and prosecuting authorities are responsible for collecting data of convicted offenders. Convictions are regarded by the Greek legislation as 'sensitive data', and for this reason are specially protected (Law 3625/2007). Prosecutions and convictions in the case of child sexual abuse are still considered as "sensitive", but they may be published after a special permission by the Public Prosecutor. This law has been implemented in

---

<sup>79</sup> http://www.arsis.gr/traf\_eng\_4.pdf

<sup>80</sup> Article 12 of the Presidential Decree 90/2008 transposing Council Directive 2005/85/EC on minimum standards on procedures in Member States for granting and withdrawing refugee status.

Greece for mainly child pornography offenders, and poses a lot of serious legal questions, such as the protection of the presumption of innocence.

3.2 Complaint Procedure

vii. The automatic of pressing charges by each Public Prosecutor constitutes the general rule in the Greek Criminal Procedure. Each child has the possibility to propose informally his/her complaints to the Prosecutor directly or through the police, that has then the opportunity to investigate the case, and press charges. Additionally, each citizen has the right to file a complaint against any other citizen in front of the police authorities or the Prosecutor. The legal representatives of children have the right to do the aforementioned act on behalf of them.

viii. According to the Greek Code of Criminal Procedure, children are able to participate in the criminal procedure accompanied by their legal representatives, asking for compensation for the harm caused by the crime and the defendant's conviction. The aforementioned Code refers to the Code of Civil Procedure for more details. According to the latter, each child aged more than sixteen year old has the possibility to participate in the civil procedure related to his personal status. In these cases, the Court has to invite also his/her legal representative (article 742). There is not any specific provision for the case that a child complaints against his/her parents for sexual abuse, even in the special Law for the confrontation of domestic violence (3500 of 2006). However, this Law allows the appointment of a legal guardian in cases of corporal violence against children (article 4).

According to the Greek Code of Deontology for Reporters (article 2), each reporter has to keep the personal data of rape survivals secret from the public. Furthermore, the National and Kapodistrian University of Athens (Department of Communication and Media) has adopted a deontological Code for the protection of children from their exposure to the Media. The aforementioned Code prohibits the revealing of minor victims' identity by reporters. As far as the Greek legal order is concerned, the Act 3625 of 2007 introduced the article 352 B in the Greek Penal Code, entitled "Protection of private life of minor victim". The publication of the personal data of the victim constitutes a punishable act, as well as any data which is possible to reveal the identity of the latter. According to this article, the publication of the personal data of the victim, or any data which may reveal the identity of the victim, constitutes a misdemeanour.

4 COMPLEMENTARY MEASURES

i. One of the main educational instruments in Greece, as far as sexual abuse is concerned, is an academic program titled “Sociology of both Genders” and “Sexual Education”, that is being taught to students at the Education Faculties. Also the Greek Institute of Sexology in cooperation with the Ministry of Education in Greece provides several times a year on the grounds of the Institute professional courses from 8 to 30 hours with Sexual education and participation of teachers, doctors, psychologists and sociologists, as well as smaller seminars based on this issue.

Also seminars are organized in other cities with the cooperation of local authorities and other local agencies. Furthermore, the State informs school teachers about these seminars during the year through newsletters, which are being sent by the Greek Ministry of Education.

There are also some sporadic sessions organized by the Regional Training Centers and some two-day seminars for the professors.

ii. Greece is one of the few European countries that do not have a specific policy on sexual abuse. The Course of Sexual Education is not part of the schools' schedule. On the outskirts of some courses (Biology, Anthropology, Religion) there is some hints at the topic. Occasionally, informational brochures are published about these issues by the Ministry of Education.

Moreover, some courses based on Sexual Education (and abuse) may be provided by professionals from the field of health sector. The number of children involved is limited because of the financial difficulties of the Greek State. Hence, the training of the staff to carry out these programs is also limited.

Some support is also offered through seminars based on Sexual Health and Education. These seminars involve not only teachers but also postgraduate students and social workers and are organized by the “Institute of Psychosocial health of Children and Teenagers”. The seminars in general aim to educate health professionals on mental health over the processes of patients and their impact on the family. By attending the seminar these participants have the opportunity to gain skills in how to interfere through a psycho dynamic approach and treatment of clinical cases and the clinical experience of the trainer.

In Greece parents are involved in the educational process through their Associations that exist in every school in Greece. Furthermore, these associations organize courses and seminars for parents in order to educate them and inform them about sexual abuse and how to protect their children. These associations consist of parents and they work together with the teachers and every school administration in order to achieve a better school education for themselves and their children. For example, a Municipality in Athens (Municipality of Marousi) is organizing for the fourth year seminars of seven classes titled "Parental Guidance" and "School-Family Relations". These programs aim to inform parents about sexual education of their children- together with other important issues that are being discussed- in order to inform them also in the same framework about sexual exploitation and how to protect their children from that hateful social phenomenon.

iii. The Greek State does not provide intervention programs for people, who are afraid that they may commit a crime. However these people can find support and help from professional psychologists and social workers.

iv. The need of reintegration of the child victim in Greek society is a very sensitive issue that has to be treated specially in the case of sexual exploitation. Minor who are victims of sexual exploitation are subjected to special examination of their mental and physical condition (Article 352A of the Penal Code), and it provides protection of life, health and sexual freedom to victims of crimes such as trafficking and sexual abuse.

Moreover for as long as it is necessary, the assistance that is offered from the State has to do with housing, food, living, health care, psychological support as well as providing legal counsel and interpreter (in some cases).

Protection is provided for as long as there is a risk to victim's life, health, personal and sexual freedom and the assistance that is necessary, is offered by the Services and Units of protection and assistance of the Greek State, which are complemented by non-profit NGOs. At the legislative level adequate measures have been taken to protect children from child abuse and to reintegrate them as victims. This fact is recognized by the Committee of the Rights of the Child since 2002, which expressed its concern regarding the limitation of the social, medical and other services mainly to Athens and Thessaloniki and the insufficient financial resources.

One of the main social programs working in Greece is since 1977 is organized by the Department of Mental Health and Social Welfare (former Department of Family Relations of Greece) and concerns research, research-action and education professionals providing specialized services to the study of domestic violence (active and passive) in relation to children and the prevention of victimization. Due to its specialty, this Directorate operates since 1988 as a Center for the Study and Prevention of Abuse and Neglect of Children under the No 2350/14-11-88 Decision of Deputy Minister of Health and Welfare. The Division focuses on children, who suffer from violent behaviors in their family environment and conducts quantitative and qualitative research with emphasis on primary, secondary and tertiary prevention. Programs of primary, secondary and tertiary prevention. Education and awareness-raising professionals in the 'frontline'. It also develops a program - framework for the promotion of children's rights in Greece and Europe, including many actions by Greece, in collaboration with primary level teachers and European collaborations involving mobilization through political lobby in order to strengthen the position of children. Finally, the main task of the Institute is diagnosis, treatment and rehabilitation of all forms of child abuse and neglect. Entity acting in this field is "The Ombudsman of Children". The Ombudsman is following reports, mediates society in specific cases of violation of children's rights, and is also seeking to protect and restore these rights. When necessary, in cases of serious violations, it is acting ex officio. It also undertakes initiatives to monitor and promote the implementation of international conventions and the rest of the national legislation on children's rights, public information. It exchanges views with representatives of bodies, puts forward proposals to the state. The Ombudsman investigates incidents which are reported and, if it finds that a violation of children's rights from public service has occurred, and suggests ways to stop this violation and solve the problems.

When the petition is directed against private persons or private companies it takes all appropriate action and proposes, if necessary, actions to protect the rights of the child. To investigate and resolve identified problems and protect children's rights, the Ombudsman may request the cooperation of public authorities or other bodies (welfare, mental health institutions etc.) or the intervention of a competent judicial authority. For the protection of children's rights, the Ombudsman may request a specific document mentioned in the petition or other documents in the case. The characterization of these data as confidential cannot be enforced against the Ombudsman. The Ombudsman is obliged in this case to guarantee the personal and professional secrets of individuals and not to publish evidence which make it possible to identify them. If an individual refuses to provide the above information, the Ombudsman may ask the public services, professional associations or organizations and the prosecutor for their assistance. Finally, in Greece there is "The Daphne III" program, which aims to contribute to the protection of children, young people and women against all forms of violence and attain a high level of health protection, well-being and social cohesion. Its specific objective is to contribute to the prevention of, and the fight against all forms of violence occurring in the public or the private domain, including sexual exploitation and trafficking of human beings. It aims to take preventive measures and provide support and protection for victims and groups at risk.

The European Parliament and the Council adopted a Decision establishing the specific programme Daphne III as part of the General Programme "Fundamental Rights and Justice" and Greece adopted it as well.

v. There are many services aware of these issues which keep the privacy and confidentiality as required in these situations. The helplines that exist are:

- SERVICES curators underage NS
- Protection Company underage N Athens (CPC)
- Athens Police underage N S
- PROSECUTORS underage Athens

Municipal Social Services:

- These services operate the most of the Greek territory
- Services: Counseling families and children, referrals to specialist services and professionals
- Services and offices PIKPA
- Addresses Social Welfare in each District
- National Welfare (FBS)
- Family Cares Centers and Child
- Underwriting services- Residential Care
- Services and offices AOC operate in Greece

In those telephone help-lines the persons answering are psychologists, social workers and volunteers. They listen to the concerns of children on a 24 hours a day basis and receive complaints of child abuse or exploitation.

We have to add in this point, that confidentiality is one of the main issues that these help-lines want to achieve together with the help that has been provided to the victims. For example, the most known help line is the one provided by "The Smile of the Child". It exists since 1997 and has developed a wide range of activities for children and their families to protect and uphold the rights of children in all areas, including the protection of sexual abused children. The social services and counseling provided by social workers and psychologists aims to decisive contribution to the support and encouragement of the child and family in order to solve the problems that might arise. Their target is the mobilization and sensitization of the public and stakeholders in order to mitigate the problems of children but with confidentiality kept. This means those names, age, or other facts of the victims case is not being revealed in public. Social and counseling support from those help-lines is provided centrally and in other parts of Greece (but not in every part of the country), such as Athens Thessaloniki, Patras, Pyrgos, Tripoli Corinth, Corfu and Chalkida.

vi. It must be added, that the intervention programs, are aware of the possibility that these children-victims could have difficulties in their sexual behavior in the future. This is a further aspect of the fact that they have been abused. In most of the cases, children who are abused suffer more psychologically than physically. A child, who is abused, can become depressed, suicidal or violent. An older child may use narcotics or alcohol, or express tendencies to molest others. As an adult, he may develop interpersonal and sexual difficulties, depression or suicidal behavior. These problems are dealt with by psychologists that the State provides to the victims during their stay to the hospitals. Such an example is that of the biggest Greek hospital for Children "Saint Sofia". It provides the children with protection through psychologists and social workers, who work together with them. Psychologists working in this hospital (and in most of the children's hospitals) belong to the scientific personnel of the University Clinic of Child Psychiatry and they actively participate as members of the interdisciplinary team in the entire network of clinical services in the country. The duties and responsibilities of the work of psychologists expressly defined by the existing legal framework (Law 991/1979, "for the profession of psychology in Greece") and are as follows: "The psychologist in the practice is evaluating the personality and human behavior and works with established principles and methods of his science with the aim of exploiting and improving them, so that problems in the sexual behavior are avoided in the future. Because of the current financial problems all those programs and the psychological support that is offered by the State to the victims attracts little publicity and is not widely known.”

(Bibliography:

http://www.sexmedic.gr/synerg\_analytika.asp, <http://users.sch.gr/spangs/arthra/Arthro.htm>,
<http://users.sch.gr/spangs/arthra/Arthro.htm> http://www.epsype.gr/files/entupo\_seminariwn2011.pdf, <http://www.maroussi.gr/frontoffice/portal.asp?cpage=node&cnode=263>,
http://www.unicef.gr/pdfs/Children\_in\_Greece\_2012.pdf, <http://www.ich.gr/el/%CE%B4%CE%B9%CE%B5%CF%8D%CE%B8-%CF%88%CF%85%CF%87-%CF%85%CE%B3%CE%B5%CE%AF%CE%B1%CF%82-%CE%BA%CE%B1%CE%B9-%CE%BA%CE%BF%CE%B9%CE%BD-%CF%80%CF%81%CF%8C%CE%BD%CE%BF%CE%B9%CE%B1%CF%82.html>, <http://www.0-18.gr/gia-megaloyis/anafora-proagogi-dikaionaton-toy-paidioy>,
http://ec.europa.eu/justice/grants/programmes/daphne/index\_en.htm, <http://www.europarl.europa.eu/sides/getDoc.do?pubRef=-//EP//TEXT+TA+P7-TA-2012-0027+0+DOC+XML+V0//EL>, http://www.psychognosia.gr/Links\_Help/telephones.htm
<http://www.hamogelo.gr/7-1/767/Koinonikh-koi-psychologikh-sthrixh-poidion>
<http://www.stirizo.gr/articles/scientific-articles/69-pediki-kakopoiisi.html>, <http://www.fora.gr/gr/info/drugs/kratfor.html> )

III NATIONAL POLICY REGARDING CHILDREN

i. The issue that has been currently under political consideration in Greece is the phenomenon of “bullying” in schools, which has also been a current issue within the EU. The Network against Violence in School<sup>81</sup> has defined bullying as “a situation during which intentional, unprovoked, systematic and repeated violence and aggressive behavior take place aiming at enforcement, oppression and causing bodily and mental pain to students from fellow students in and out of school”<sup>82</sup>.

<sup>81</sup> The Network against Violence in School is a group governmental and non-governmental institutions and institutes aiming to prevent and face violence in school <http://www.antibullyingnetwork.gr/>

<sup>82</sup> Available at http://www.antibullyingnetwork.gr/page.aspx?id=104&footer\_menu=297&parent\_id=268 (last visited 21/9/2012) Translation by the author

According to a research conducted by VPRC during 13-29 February 2012 among 700 students in primary and junior high schools in Greece, bullying is mainly verbal. 88% is expressed by insults, 67% by spread of negative comments or rumors, but only 11% of children admitted that they have been involved in bullying as victimizers<sup>83</sup>.

Several initiatives have been launched for the solution of this problem either by governmental or non-governmental and independent institutes. The Ombudsman of the Child after a series of discussions with teachers and students aiming at collecting good practices from primary and junior high schools on the prevention and facing of bullying has suggested to the Ministry of Education relevant measures. Acting upon to these suggestions the Ministry of Government issued a circular in February 2011 addressing units of secondary education.

In this circular the Ministry of Education presented the factors that can contribute to the reduction of school violence and asked school authorities to abide by them. Good school communication environment of dialogue and trust between parents and children, development of schools council as a means for students to be heard, monitoring and protection of school community from any threat of violence/ or acts of violence, informing students about school community's rights are indicated as effective measures against bullying. In addition, establishment of hearing procedures when violence incidents occur and appointment of teachers-counselors, sanctions after hearing, enforcement of students' role in conflicts resolution process and organization of team activities between students are also recommended as good practices against school violence. Finally, periodical communication with parents aiming at their awareness and cooperation among the school community can bear fruits in the battle against school violence<sup>84</sup>.

The Ministry of Education is also planning the establishment of Observatory of School violence whose goals will be to accept reports and record incidents of school violence, enabling this way the coordination of education institutions regarding the confrontation of bullying<sup>85</sup>.

---

<sup>83</sup> "7 out of 10 students have experienced phenomena of violence" available at <http://www.newsbeast.gr/greece/arthro/314035/fainomena-vias-ehoun-vioseis-7-stous-10-mathites/> (last visited 21/9/2012)

<sup>84</sup> Ministry of Education, Circular ΑΔΑ:4ΑΛΘ9-5Ζ, 14/2/2011, Marousi

<sup>85</sup> "The Ministry of Education prepares an Observatory for School violence", Kathimerini, 21/9/2012

Finally, the Network against Violence in School should be particularly mentioned in this section. It was founded in 2010 by state and non-governmental institutions. To name but a few, the Association for the Psychosocial Health of Children and Adolescents, the Ministry of Education, the General Secretariat, the Ombudsman of the Child, the Marangopoulos Foundation of Human Rights, the University of Athens Primary Education Faculty and others. The Network seeks, among other goals, to prevent and confront school violence, to promote scientific research on this topic, to inform children, parents and the whole society on bullying and to educate teachers and other professionals that are involved with children and adolescents<sup>86</sup>.

ii. Non-governmental organizations and the State have tried to raise public's awareness of children's sexual abuse and exploitation using several methods. Campaigns, which are mostly used by NGOs, and seminars addressing mainly the school society are some of the awareness tools.

As for the State, its campaign is either launched by ministries or by the local authorities. Greece participates in the Parliamentary dimension of the campaign of the Council of Europe (CoE) titled "ONE in FIVE", which aims at the strengthening of the cooperation between national parliaments and the Parliamentary Assembly of the CoE in their battle against children's sexual violence.

For instance, the municipality of Heraklion in Crete organized in September, 5th 2012 a day-conference to inform teachers and officers of civil services about these issues. In particular participants had the opportunity to learn practices about how to raise sensitivity on these issues and how to deal with them<sup>87</sup>.

Another state body, the National Secretariat of Youth, founded in 2001 the National Observatory for Child's Rights whose field of act is quite wide as it concerns in general the protection of the child. The National Observatory, which now has suspended its function, visited schools in 2008 in order to inform children about sexual education.

---

available at http://www.kathimerini.gr/4dcgi/\_w\_articles\_kathremote\_1\_17/09/2012\_461644 (last visited 21/9/2012)

<sup>86</sup> http://www.antibullyingnetwork.gr/page.aspx?id=97&main\_menu=289&parent\_id=161

<sup>87</sup> Greek Republic, Heraklion, Municipality of Heraklion, Deputy Mayor for Social Welfare Policy and Solidarity, Serial No.: 135009 / 12.08.22, Heraklion, 08.20.2012

To sum up, in the process of raising public's awareness state and non-state institutions are involved but non-governmental institutions seem to be more active addressing a wider public. Not only do they seek to inform the public in general but their actions are especially targeted to the school society in order to be more efficient.

iii. Statistics on sexual exploitation of children would be very enlightening on the situation in Greece, if they were available. Unfortunately, as Greece admitted in its 2nd and 3rd reports submitted combined to the Committee on the Rights of Child in 2009 "there are no reliable statistical data regarding the percentage of cases of abuse-neglect of children in the Greek family" due to the lack of a national report system<sup>88</sup>. Law n. 2909/2001 created the National Observatory on the Rights of Children, which was supposed among others to collect data about issues concerning children and their rights<sup>89</sup>. Its implementation law was issued in 2005 and it took some action in 2008. Nevertheless, its function stagnated and efforts for the Observatory to be reactivated were taken no earlier than May 2012<sup>90</sup>.

Stefanos Alevizos, a psychologist working for the NGO the Child's Smile has elaborated on the reasons why sexual abuse is not being reported<sup>91</sup>. According to him, children's sexual abuse has been a taboo issue and the offender usually belongs to the close family of the victim and therefore the incident is not being reported. The family also chooses not to report sexual abuse so as the child not be stigmatized. Another reason for sexual abuse not being reported is that the family prefers to forget the incident considering it as a therapy method. Only extreme incidents and those that end up in hospitals are being reported, as Mr. Alevizos mentioned.

However, statistics gathered by The Child's Smile can give the reader a hint but hardly can they be considered as indicative of the situation in Greece<sup>92</sup>. These data have been collected by the several services that the Child's Smile provides.

---

<sup>88</sup> CRC/C/GRC/2-3, Second and third periodic reports of State parties due in 2000, Greece, §234

<sup>89</sup> Law 2909/2001 art.4 §1a

<sup>90</sup> <http://www.e-dimosio.gr/agora-ergasias/%CF%83%CF%84%CE%B5%CE%BB%CE%AD%CF%87%CF%89%CF%83%CE%B7-%CF%84%CE%BF%CF%85-%CE%B5%CE%B8%CE%BD%CE%B9%CE%BA%CE%BF%CF%8D-%CF%80%CE%B1%CF%81%CE%B1%CF%84%CE%B7%CF%81%CE%B7%CF%84%CE%B7%CF%81%CE%AF/> (Last visited 10/9/2012)

<sup>91</sup> Information taken after interview with the psychologist in September 2012, 3rd

<sup>92</sup> These statistics were provided by the Child's Smile after interview with the psychologist Stefanos Alevizos. However some of them can be found on the internet and footnotes have been inserted to point out so.

The Child's Smile has been operating since 1997 a telephone helpline (1056), which receives reports of children's abuse and provides counseling to children, parents and teenagers.

2007

According to the statistics gathered by this service, in 2007 there were abuse reports concerning 1380 children. 32 concerned sexual abuse of children (2%), out of which 23 girls and 9 boys were specified as victims.

Table 1

Kind of Abuse	Boys	Girls	Unidentified Sex	Total
Body abuse	234	189	91	494(36%)
Sexual abuse	9	23		32(2%)
Neglect/abandonment	298	275	155	728(53%)
Coercion to begging	13	19	12	44(3%)
Coercion to prostitution (people under 18 years old)		16		16(1%)
Psychological/Sentimental abuse	29	31	6	66(5%)
Total	538(42%)	553(40%)	244(18%)	1337 (100%)

Figure 1

2008

In 2008 there was a small increase in reports of sexual abuse. In fact the total of children's sexual abuse was doubled to 4%, out of which 11 children were boys, 41 girls, while there were 5 incidents reported where child's sex was not specified.

Table 2

Kind of Abuse	Boys	Girls	Unidentified Sex	Total
Body Abuse	292	211	75	578(43%)
Sexual Abuse	11	41	5	57(4%)
Neglect/Abandonment	261	224	108	593(44%)
Coercion to begging	13	22		35(3%)
Coercion to prostitution (people under 18 years old)		25	3	28(2%)
Psychological/Sentimental abuse	23	21	2	46(4%)
Total	600(45%)	544(40%)	193(18%)	1337(100%)

Figure 2

2009

In 2009 the total of children's sexual abuse dropped to 2007 level, namely to 2%. 8 boys and 17 girls were sexually abused in 2009.

Table 3<sup>93</sup>

Kind of Abuse	Boys	Girls	Unidentified Sex	Total
Body abuse	245	208	74	527(43%)
Sexual Abuse	8	17		25 (2%)
Neglect/Abandonment	255	214	141	610(50%)

<sup>93</sup> http://www.hamogelo.gr/files/PDF/statistika\_2009/kataggelies2009.pdf , p.2 (last visited 8/9/2012)

Coercion to begging	5	2	8	15(1%)
Coercion to prostitution (people under 18 years old)	1	15	5	21(2%)
Psychological/Sentimental abuse	1	16	4	21(2%)
Total	515(42%)	472 (39%)	232(19%)	1219(100%)

Figure 3

2010

In 2010 the telephone helpline received calls about 912 children reporting their abuse, of which 31 related to sexual abuse, representing 3% in total.

Table 4<sup>94</sup>

Kind of Abuse	Boys	Girls	Unidentified Sex	Total
Body abuse	200	146	43	389(43%)
Sexual abuse	15	16		31 (3%)
Neglect/Abandonment	187	163	95	445(49%)
Coercion to begging	8	8	11	27(3%)
Coercion to prostitution (people under 18 years old)		3		3(0%)

<sup>94</sup> http://www.hamogelo.gr/files/PDF/statistika\_2011/kataggelies2011.pdf , p.3 (last visited 8/9/2012)

Psychological/ Sentimental abuse	7	10		17(2%)
Total	417(46%)	346(38%)	149(16%)	912(100%)

Figure 4

2011

In 2011 the total of children's sexual abuse was decreased in half reaching 1,5%. 4 boys and 11 girls were victims of sexual abuse that year.

Table 5<sup>95</sup>

Kind of Abuse	Boys	Girls	Unidentified Sex	Total
Body abuse	185	183	63	431(51%)
Sexual abuse	4	11		15 (1.5%)
Neglect/Abandonment	145	135	74	354(42%)
Coercion to begging	11	14	1	26(3%)
Coercion to prostitution (people under 18 years old)		2		2(0.5%)
Psychological/ Sentimental abuse	7	9		16(2%)
Total	352(42%)	354(42%)	138(16%)	844(100%)

Figure 5

---

<sup>95</sup> In 2011 the total of children's sexual abuse was decreased in half reaching 1,5%. 4 boys and 11 girls were victims of sexual abuse that year.

2012

As for 2012 statistics are available only for the first half of the year, namely from 1/1/2012 to 30/6/2012. Reports made to the telephone helpline of the NGO concerned 362 children, of which 3 were sexually abused.

Table 6<sup>96</sup>

Kind of Abuse	Boys	Girls	Unidentified Sex	Total
Body Abuse	65	55	19	139(38%)
Sexual Abuse		3		3(1%)
Neglect/ Abandonment	83	69	37	189(52%)
Coercion to begging	2	6	5	13(4%)
Coercion to prostitution (people under 18 years old)		2		2(0.5%)
Psychological/ Sentimental abuse	3	13		16(4.5%)
Total	153(42%)	148(41%)	61(17%)	362(100%)

Figure 6

The Child's Smile also operates a counseling service which supports, kids, parents and teachers in crucial periods of their lifetime. According to the problems for which people have addressed the counseling service the follow data have been collected.

2007

---

<sup>96</sup> http://www.hamogelo.gr/files/PDF/statistika\_2012/kataggelies2012a.pdf , p.3 (last visited 8/9/2012)

In 2007 1836 people addressed the counseling service and the problems they faced are as presented in the following table. Among the incidents reported only 5%, namely 92 incidents, had to do with sexual harassment or abuse of people aged less than 18 years old.

Problems	Incidents
Relations in the family	377 (21%)
Relations in peers	123 (7%)
Death in the family	72 (4%)
Divorce in the family	86 (5%)
School problems/school adaptation	115 (6%)
Behavioral problems	471 (26%)
Problems of sexual harassment-abuse of people aged less than 18 years old	92 (5%)
Raise problems	45 (2%)
Health problems	40 (2%)
Psychological problems	45 (2%)
Other	370 (20%)
Total	1836

2008

In 2008 the percentage of incidents related to sexual harassment remained stable.

Problem	Incidents
Relations in the family	571 (29%)
Relations with peers	133 (7%)
Death in the family	114 (6%)

Divorce in the family	115 (6%)
School problems/ School adaptation	115 (6%)
Behavioral problems	421 (21%)
Problems of sexual harassment-abuse of people aged less than 18 years old	94 (5%)
Suicidal Ideation	8 (1%)
Disorders	59 (3%)
Internet use	15 (1%)
Other	321 (15%)
Total	1966

2009

The percentage remained the same for 2009 as well (5%), but the number of victims in absolute number increased.

Table 9<sup>97</sup>

Problem	Incidents
Relations in the family	1327(40%)
Relations with peers	217 (7%)
Death in the family	166 (5%)
Divorce in the family	336 (10%)
School problems/ School adaptation	192 (6%)
Behavioral problems	396 (12%)
Problems of sexual harassment-abuse of people aged less than 18 years old	164 (5%)

<sup>97</sup> http://www.hamogelo.gr/files/PDF/statistika\_2009/symvouleftiki2009.pdf (last visited 10/9/2012)

Suicidal Ideation	29 (1%)
Disorders	89 (3%)
Internet use	223 (7%)
Other	139 (4%)
Total	3278

2010

Incidents of sexual harassment/abuse were slightly increased by 2% reaching 7% of the incidents reported.

Table 10<sup>98</sup>

Problems	Incidents
Relations in the family	1286 (42%)
Relations with peers	169 (5%)
Death in the family	199 (6%)
Divorce in the family	372 (12%)
School problems/School adaptation	91 (3%)
Behavioral problems	190 (6%)
Problems of sexual harassment-abuse of people aged less than 18 years old	270 (7%)
Suicidal Ideation	23 (1%)
Disorders	163 (3%)

<sup>98</sup> http://www.hamogelo.gr/files/PDF/statistika\_2010/symvouleftiki2010.pdf (last visited 10/9/2012)

Internet use	33 (1%)
Other	316 (11%)
Total	3112

2011

In 2011 the number of incidents related to sexual harassment/ abuse was doubled to 10%.

Table 11<sup>99</sup>

Problem	Incidents
Relations in the family	845 (32%)
Relations with peers	179 (7%)
Dealing with loss (death-divorce in the family)	412 (15%)
School adaptation	107 (4%)
Behavioral problems	460 (17%)
Problems of sexual harassment-abuse of people aged less than 18 years old	261 (10%)
Suicidal Ideation	33 (1%)
Disorders	148 (6%)
Internet use	43 (1%)
Other	192 (7%)
Total	2680

2012

---

<sup>99</sup> http://www.hamogelo.gr/files/PDF/statistika\_2011/symvouleftiki2011.pdf (last visited 10/9/2012)

In 2012 8,5% of incidents reported concerned sexual harassment/abuse but it should be borne in mind that this percentage refers only to the first half of 2012.

Table 12<sup>100</sup>

Problem	Incidents
Relations in the family	431 (37%)
Relations with peers	120 (10%)
Dealing with loss (death-divorce in the family)	154 (13%)
School adaptation	26 (2%)
Behavioral problems	112 (9,5%)
Problems of sexual harassment-abuse of people aged less than 18 years old	102 (8,5%)
Suicidal Ideation	45 (4%)
Disorders	81 (7%)
Internet use	30 (2,5%)
Other	75 (6,5%)
Total	1176

Finally, the NGO The Child's Smile has shelters where children whose family environment has been considered by the authorities inappropriate to be raised in, are accommodated. Sexual abuse is one reason for which children have been taken away from their families.

2007

In 2007 there were 220 children hosted in the NGO's shelters and only 1% of them were hosted for reasons of sexual abuse. In absolute numbers only one boy was victim of sexual abuse and for this reason taken away from his family. It should be mentioned that 3% (6 children) of the children hosted in the shelters aged more than 18 years old, but the age of the victim of sexual abuse cannot be specified by the data provided.

---

<sup>100</sup> http://www.hamogelo.gr/files/PDF/statistika\_2012/symvouleftiki2012a.pdf (last visited 10/9/2012)

Table 13

Reasons for children being hosted	Boys	Girls	Total
Child's Body abuse	10	12	22(10%)
Child's sexual abuse	1		1 (1%)
Neglect/ Abandonment	64	43	107(49%)
Social reasons	43	29	72(32%)
Other	10	8	18(8%)
Total	128(58%)	92(42%)	220

Figure 7

2008

In 2008 270 children in total were accommodated at the NGO's shelters. 4% of them aged more than 18 years old. The number of children victims of sexual abuse was doubled to 2%. 5 children, one boy and 4 girls faced sexual abuse.

Table 14

Reasons for children being hosted	Boys	Girls	Total
Child's body abuse	16	14	30(11%)
Child's sexual abuse	1	4	5(2%)
Neglect/ Abandonment	109	76	185(68%)

Social Reasons	18	13	31(11%)
Trafficking	1	1	2(1%)
Other	11	6	17(7%)
Total	156(58%)	114(42%)	270

Figure 8

2009

In 2009 the percentage of children victims of sexual abuse was the same as in 2008, 2%. In absolute numbers 6 children (all of them girls) out of 299 hosted in the shelters were sexually abused. 5%, namely 16, of the children hosted aged more than 18 years old.

Table 15<sup>101</sup>

Reasons for children being hosted	Boys	Girls	Total
Child's body abuse	16	14	30(10%)
Child's sexual abuse		6	6 (2%)
Neglect/ Abandonment	112	80	192(64%)
Social Reasons	29	22	51(17%)
Other	12	8	20(7%)
Total	169(57%)	130(43%)	299

Figure 9

---

<sup>101</sup> http://www.hamogelo.gr/files/PDF/statistika\_2009/filoksenia2009.pdf , p.2-3(last visited 10/9/2012)

2010

During 2010 there were 267 children being hosted in the shelters, out of which 16 aged more than 18 years old. The percentage of children-victims of sexual abuse remained stable at 2%. 6 children in total, 1 boy and 5 girls were sexually abused.

Table 16<sup>102</sup>

Reasons for children being hosted	Boys	Girls	Total
Child's body abuse	19	10	29(11%)
Child's sexual abuse	1	5	6(2%)
Neglect/ Abandonment	99	76	175(66%)
Social Reasons	24	17	41(15%)
Other	7	9	16(6%)
Total	150(56%)	117(44%)	267

Figure 10

2011

In 2011 the number of children hosted in the shelters of the Child's Smile was slightly decreased to 261. 7% of them aged more than 18 years old, while the percentage of children victims of sexual abuse rose slightly up to 3%.

Table 17<sup>103</sup>

<sup>102</sup> http://www.hamogelo.gr/files/PDF/statistika\_2010/filoksenia2010.pdf , p.2-3(last visited 10/9/2012)

<sup>103</sup> http://www.hamogelo.gr/files/PDF/statistika\_2011/filoksenia2011.pdf , p.2(last visited 10/9/2012)

Reasons for children being hosted	Boys	Girls	Total
Child's body abuse	15	12	27(10%)
Child's sexual abuse		6	6 (3%)
Neglect/ Abandonment	109	79	118(72%)
Social Reasons	10	11	21(8%)
Other	12	7	19(7%)
Total	146(56%)	115(44%)	261

Figure 11

2012

The data about 2012 refer only to the first half of the year (1/1/2012-30/6/2012). During this period 263 children were accommodated in the shelters, out of which 24 aged above 18 years old. Among them there were only 6 girls-victims of sexual abuse.

Table 18<sup>104</sup>

Reasons for children being hosted	Boys	Girls	Total
Child's body	17	11	28(11%)

<sup>104</sup> http://www.hamogelo.gr/files/PDF/statistika\_2012/filoksenia2012a.pdf , p.2(last visited 10/9/2012)

abuse
Child's sexual abuse		6	6 (2%)
Neglect/ Abandonment	102	80	182(69%)
Social Reasons	19	10	29(11%)
Other	11	7	18(7%)
Total	149(57%)	114(43%)	263

Figure 12

The following figure depicts the fluctuation of sexual abuse from 2007 until the first half of 2012 as a reason for children being hosted in the shelters of the Child's Smile. As it can be seen this reason fluctuates between 1% in 2007 and 3% in 2011, when it reached its peak. A stable increase of sexual abuse by 1% percent per year can also be noticed.

Figure 13

There are also data about children's sexual abuse gathered by the Institute of Child's Health<sup>105</sup> for a research project titled Balkan Epidemiological Study on Child Abuse and Neglect (B.E.C.A.N). This project, funded by the European Union, seeks to collect information and data about issues concerning violence within the family and abuse and neglect of children in the Balkans. The data collected so far were presented in a colloquium in Athens in September, 13-14th 2012. As far as Greece is concerned, researchers gathered data from children in the last grade of primary school, in the first class of junior high school and high schools and from their parents. The research concerned schools in Attica, Thessaloniki and Crete. Children's participation reached 67%, 71% and 79%, while parents' participation reached 79%, 66% and 52% in every class respectively. 1 out of 10 children has

---

<sup>105</sup> The Institute of Child's Health was founded in 1965 and provides specialized prevention and public health action. It also conducts research and organizes educational events concerning children's health. For more information visit <http://www.ich.gr/el/> been victim of sexual abuse during the last year, while this percentage increases during their whole childhood. It should be mentioned that the research confirmed once again the low rate of reports to the authorities of incidents of sexual or body abuse against children<sup>106</sup>.

iv. Private companies have taken several initiatives but NGOs are the main actor in the awareness campaign. In 2008 the NGO Umbrella participated in the campaign “Stop sex trafficking of children and young people” launched by the network ECPAT (End Child Prostitution, Child Pornography and the Trafficking of Children for Sexual Purposes) in 2008. The campaign was sponsored by the Body Shop. On the occasion of this campaign The Body Shop in Greece organized in 2010 an event where lectures on the confrontation of children’s sexual abuse were given.

The Institute of Child’s Health has been quite active both researching issues regarding children and organizing seminars and other events to sensitize people about children’s problems. In January 12, 2012 it organized with an association from the countryside a day-conference whose topic was “Children’s Protection from Sexual Abuse and Exploitation”. This event was organized on the occasion of the CoE’s campaign ONE in FIVE.

Moreover, the Institute has been conducting a research about children’s sexual abuse in Balkans (Balkan Epidemiological Study on Child Abuse and Neglect -B.E.C.A.N) since 2009. The project is funded by the European Union and concerns violence within the family and abuse and neglect of children in the Balkans. Some results of this research were presented in an international colloquium organized by the Institute in September 13-14, 2012 in Athens. The exact title of the colloquium was “Inquiring child abuse and neglect in the Balkan and the world during crisis” Evidence-based Practice and Practice-based Evidence”.

Finally, the NGO The Child’s Smile take actions to raise people’s awareness of children’s sexual abuse but it addresses mainly the school society. In 2009 it established the Department of Information of Children, Parents and Teachers which organizes speeches to students, parents and teachers. Speeches, which involve interaction, take place in collaboration with the Ministry of Education and after invitation from the school society.

---

<sup>106</sup> <http://ygeia.tanea.gr/default.asp?pid=8&ct=85&articleID=15512&la=1> (last visited 20/9/2012)

The range of topics is quite wide and as for abuse it covers not only sexual abuse but every kind of it.

v. Children can be represented in the law making process through several ways, either direct or indirect. Children are represented indirectly through NGOs, independent authorities or social services.

The Ombudsman of the Child<sup>107</sup> was created in 2003 as a special department of the Ombudsman of the Citizen, originally founded in 1998. The Ombudsman of the Child has set as goals the promotion and protection of children's rights. In this context it intervenes, most of the times after reports about children's rights violation, to protect children and restore the former situation. It monitors the application of international and national legislation regarding children, it informs people and discuss with other institutions. It also submits reports and suggestions related to children issues to state authorities.

It is through these reports that children are represented in the law making process. The Ombudsman of the Child after having discussed with children, received reports on their rights' violation and conducted research on these topics submits reports to the authorities suggesting changes or improvements in the national legislation and measures to confront risen problems. Sometimes, the Ombudsman is even invited to the incumbent commission of the Parliament in order to state their opinion on legislative issues about children.

For instance, in 2010 the Ombudsman of the Child handed to the Ministry of Education a report suggesting good practices for the confrontation of school violence, which were further incorporated in a circular of the Ministry to schools addressing secondary schools.

Additionally, the Ombudsman of the Child in an effort to approach children even more established in 2008 the Adolescent Consultants Team of the Ombudsman of the Child. It consists of 30 adolescents aged between 13 and 17 years and coming from all around Greece with 2-years tenure. There is also the Society of Adolescent Consultants consisting of the Team and other children that could not participate in the Team.

Another way via which children can express themselves in the law-making process is the notes that NGOs submit to the Parliament. NGOs also present their opinions to the responsible legislative committee after invitation. In 2010 the Network of the Child's Rights and Parental Equality submitted to the Parliamentary Committee for Equality and Rights a memorandum about violence against children<sup>108</sup>. The memorandum pointed out deficiencies and gaps in the existent legislation about violence against children and therefore suggested measures so as violence within the family be combatted.

---

<sup>107</sup> More info can be found at <http://www.0-18.gr/>

However, children can directly express themselves through two ways. The first one is the Adolescents Parliament and the other one the open government procedures. With regard to the first one, it is an educational program of the Parliament organized once a year since 1995. Students in the second class of the secondary education up to 20 years old from schools in Greece, Cyprus and Greek schools around the world are qualified as participants. The number of participants is 300 people, which equals the number of deputies in the National Parliament. Even though its main objective is the initiation and awareness of children with parliamentary and democratic principles, children can present both problems that their fellows face and problems in their prefectures.

Lastly, open government procedures have recently entered Greek political life and gave citizens the opportunity to state their opinions on legislative drafts and other policy initiatives as well as on assignments of public servants. Almost all draft legislative pieces are entered into an online platform prior to their submission in the Parliament and thus citizens have the opportunity to comment on them, suggest or even criticize them.

vi. The last few years active citizenship and NGOs have experienced a rapid growth in Greek society. A considerable number of NGOs is committed to children rights, the most important among them being: The Child's Smile, Umbrella, The Foundation for the Child and Family, the Network for Children's Rights and the NGOs Network for monitoring the application of the International Convention on the Child Rights. The action of most of them is not limited to issues related to children's sexual abuse and violation. It is also extended to other fields such as children's education and development, disappearances, poverty and health.

The Child's Smile (<http://www.hamogelo.gr/>), founded in 1995, has developed so far a wide network of actions to protect children. It provides shelter to children whose families have considered inappropriate by the state for any reason to raise them and it supports materially and psychologically families who suffer from social and financial problems. It also acts in the health sector, helping children with health problems, while it has created mobile health units. Furthermore, it operates several helplines, one of them for disappeared children and another one for reporting incidents of violence against children. As for the disappeared children and children-victims of exploitation, the Child's Smile has created a specialized centre which cooperates with the authorities investigating disappearances and it offers psychological support to both parents and children.

---

<sup>108</sup> The full text of the memorandum can be read in Greek here

http://gonis.gr/index.php?pN=%CE%95%CE%BD%CE%B4%CE%BF%CE%BF%CE%B9%CE%BA%CE%BF%CE%B3%CE%B5%CE%BD%CE%B9%CE%B1%CE%BA%CE%AE\_%CE%B2%CE%AF%CE%B1&txtWebPageID=51

Umbrella (<http://obrela.gr/>) is another NGO which specializes in issues of sexual abuse in general not only of children. Psychiatrists, psychologists, sociologists, legal practitioners and other scientists research and organize seminars on sexual abuse and mental problems.

The Foundation for the Child and Family (<http://www.childfamily.gr/en/>) was founded in 1997 by Marianna Vardinoyannis. It is an NGO with a Special Consultative Status at the Economic and Social Council of the United Nations. It acts exclusively to protect children's rights. More specifically, its activities are focused on a) the gradual reduction of the number of children-victims of abuse, deprivation, injustice, b) the development and strengthening of the family and social bonds aiming at the prosperity of children and families and c) the creation of ever-increasing opportunities for the multifaceted development of children and youth in the contemporary world<sup>109</sup>.

It also fights to combat human trafficking and illiteracy as well as it pursues to spread the culture of peace.

The Network for Children's Rights (<http://www.ddp.org.gr/>) was founded in 2004 having as its primordial object to promote children's rights both in Greece and in Europe. In particular, it pursues to spread the UN Convention for the Child's Rights and struggles for its implementation. It fights against children's discrimination and seeks to inform children for their rights and to raise society's awareness of these issues. Finally, it promotes access to education of ethnically or socially marginalized groups<sup>110</sup>.

---

<sup>109</sup> http://www.childfamily.gr/en/who\_we\_are.cfm

<sup>110</sup> <http://www.ddp.org.gr/%CF%80%CE%BF%CE%B9%CE%BF%CE%B9-%CE%B5%CE%B9%CE%BC%CE%B1%CF%83%CF%84%CE%B5/%CF%80%CE%BF%CE%B9%CE%BF%CE%B9-%CE%B5%CE%AF%CE%BC%CE%B1%CF%83%CF%84%CE%B5/>

Finally, the NGOs Network for monitoring the application of the International Convention on the Child Rights was founded in 2009 to monitor the application of the CRC in Greece. As for instruments of national legislation on children's rights, the Network also monitors whether they have been put into force and suggests measures to the State for a more effective application of the relevant legislation<sup>111</sup>.

IV OTHER

Two are the main issues that currently torment Greece: the renowned economic crisis and the illegal immigrants pouring into the borders. These issues not only have social and economic impacts, but also legal and political ones, sometimes deterring the implementation of a legal framework which could effectively protect children against sexual abuse.

Although one might argue with the view that economic crisis has actually played a role in the production of sufficient legislative work - thus blocking the effective protection of sensitive groups of population, as are the unemployed mothers, elder people and minors -, one would eventually be surprised to see how the crisis has started to destroy the social fabric.

Greece has been hit by the economic crisis in a really harsh way. The damage which has been caused, and which is about to be caused, has irreversible consequences. One of the social groups which are in the forefront is the youngsters. Young people may seek other ways to express their rage for the situation, using drugs, pick pocking, or even getting drunk and committing violent crimes.

Families which have been hit by the crisis are no longer in position of providing a safe environment for the proper raise of a child, not mentioning that sometimes it is the family itself which pushes its children to find financial solutions of a dubious nature; even if this means that the latter have to sexually dispose their bodies for a few Euros.

In some countries, like India, trafficking is initiated by the parents themselves (especially the father, who may act as a pimp for his own daughter). This phenomenon, unfortunately, although not so common in Greece, it has nevertheless started to rise in some degraded areas and has worsened due to the crisis.

---

<sup>111</sup> NGOs network for children's rights, Eleftherotypia (Greek newspaper), 5/11/2009, <http://www.enet.gr/?i=news.el.article&id=98762>

Economic problems may also result in the increase of domestic violence.

As the standard of living gets worse, families belonging to the lower social layers will deal with problems of drugs, alcoholism, and lack of education. They may sometimes misbehave and abuse their children physically, or even sexually.

The other main issue which troubles Greek society, and is also related to the economic crisis, is the problem of illegal immigration. This problem has taken huge dimensions in Greece. Leaking borders give access to hordes of desperate immigrants, who seek either a better future, or a way to resort to illegal activities which will bring them money.

Again the problem of trafficking arises, this time in combination with prostitution and fake passports and/or identities for minors.

Depending on the goal he wants to achieve an illegal immigrant will enter the country appearing to be older or younger than he actually is. In the case of the pimp who wants to import young girls in the country, he will make sure to equip them with forged passports in which they will appear over 18 years old, when they actually are around 16 or even 14-15. On the contrary, in the case of the delinquent who wants to engage in illegal activities, the latter will try to appear younger to his documentation, in order to be tried –if ever arrested – at the juvenile criminal courts.

An interesting observation regarding the relation between illegal immigration and criminality is the following:

In the past, the majority of rape incidents, promoting prostitution incidents, and human trafficking incidents, were attributable to foreigners, and mostly illegal immigrants. Nowadays, it seems that an important number of Greeks involved in such activities has started to make its appearance.

Furthermore, economic crisis has so much affected the social fabric that criminality has also changed form. Most illegal immigrants will not rape a girl, they would rather rob her. It is not longer a matter of sexual pleasure; it is a matter of pure survival. The form of abuse has slightly changed, and the criminal focus has moved from the sex industry to the drug and weapons industry (people do not have money to buy sexual pleasure). On the contrary pornography industry flourishes, and many children have been abused and depicted in sexual and violent scenes.

Internet is free and this allows to the industry to earn a lot of money with a minimum cost.

Last but not least, economic crisis along with the illegal immigration phenomenon and the general increase of criminality has resulted in a rising number of children been kidnapped, mostly for organ or human trafficking.

All the aforementioned issues are in fact a matter of national policy and have both legal and political aspects. Being focused on the economic side of things Greece is still trying to set its priorities. With people dying and a clear threat of bankruptcy to deal with, the matter of children's abuse appears to have moved to the background. Nevertheless, that does not mean that the problem of minors been abused is ignored or neglected. As it has already been elaborated, Greece has taken important steps towards the improvement of the legal protection of children against sexual abuse. It has still; however, a mountain to climb and the present political background does not make this work easy.

V CONCLUSION

It has become clear that Greece is definitely among the Council of Europe members who are trying to comply with the European directives and international regulations - even if not always successfully. It also happens to have a self-standing national legislation which sometimes appears to provide children with an even broader protection.

We saw how the system of legal protection is structured. Briefly reminding:

There are some European obligations deriving from certain European Directives that Greece needs to respect, like the Directive 2011/92/EU which combats sexual abuse; then there are the Constitutional provisions which protect childhood in general (article 21, 96 §3); international obligations arising from international conventions come next (see Lanzarote Convention).

National laws are the last piece of the puzzle which completes the overall legal protection of minors. In specific, as far as the substantive law is concerned, the Greek Penal Code includes a series of provisions that in some cases protect children from sexual abuse even more effectively than the international conventions do. E.g the article 348A of the Penal Code offers a wider protection, i.e. a wider scope, than the Lanzarote Convention.

Regarding the procedural law, the system of criminal procedure in Greece appears particularly favorable for minors. We saw through several examples (eg. exception from public hearing for minors, benefit of doubt, experts accompanying the child, prosecutor's choice not to press charges in case this is to the detriment of the child, etc.) that the whole system of justice takes into very serious account child's sensitive psychology.

It is true that Greece has still a long way to go, since it has not ratified all the international conventions and has not conformed completely to some of its European obligations. But, this is hopefully not at the expense of the child, since its national laws may protect even under stricter terms children against sexual exploitation (systematic interpretation of the articles 339,342, 337, 347, 345, 351§ 6, 349, 348 B, 351§ 4, 348A of the Greek Penal Code).

Last, but not least, and rather the most important of all, Greece may appear slower than other countries regarding procedural matters, but makes important efforts to ameliorate its present system, and usually implements soon enough most of the international and European directions. Additionally, its national policy takes even a step further, by promoting campaigns in order to raise public awareness. An utmost relevant example is the active participation of Greece to the Council of Europe "ONE IN FIVE" campaign. Nongovernmental organizations are, also, there to support the overall efforts, visiting schools and trying to fight against sexual abuse.

One factor that sadly gets in the way of the effective protection of children is the fact that sexual abuse in Greece is a taboo issue. Therefore, as it has already been explained, there are not a lot of recorded incidents and this does not help the fight against these detestable crimes. The real number of children's sexual abuse is unknown, and this becomes apparent if someone resorts to the Help Lines' records or the internet forums. There we will come across a lot of unrecorded and "buried" incidents, the majority of which, unfortunately, are incidents of sexual abuse inside the family (a drunken uncle, a family's friend, someone who has destroyed once and for all the childhood innocence, and has not been punished for his actions).

We have to overcome this taboo if we want to build a safe future for children. We have to be firm; crimes against children have always a double cost, because they occur at the point where the child shapes its character, and for this reason they have a traumatic effect in child's sensitive psychology, which in most cases will never go away.

European countries should gather their forces towards this important mission, and bear always in mind that the enemy is common; only with concerted and long-term efforts we will stand a chance to defeat this enemy, only with patience and persistence we will have the chance to give children a better future.

ELSA IRELAND

I Introduction.....	557
1 General .....	557
2 The Lanzarote Convention.....	576
II National Legislation .....	577
1 General Principles Of The Jurisdiction .....	577
2 Substantive Criminal Law .....	584
2.1 Sexual Abuse.....	584
2.2 Child Prostitution .....	592
2.3 Child Pornography .....	597
2.4 Corruption of Children.....	600
2.5 Solicitation of Children for Sexual Purposes .....	603
2.6 Corporate Liability.....	604
2.7 Aggravating Circumstances .....	607
2.8 Sanctions and Measures .....	607
3 Criminal Procedure .....	612
3.1 Investigation .....	612
3.2 Complaint Procedure .....	622
4 Complementary Measures.....	629
III National Policy Regarding Children.....	633
IV Other.....	636
V Conclusion.....	638

National Researchers:

Theodora Castan

Niamh Collins

Niamh Cross

Miranda Egan Langley

Claire Finnegan

Christina O'Byrne

Katharina O'Cathaoir

Niamh O'Connell

National Advisers:

Catherine McGauran

Saoirse Molloy

National Academic Adviser:

Patricia Brazil

National Coordinator:

Áine Groogan

I INTRODUCTION

1 GENERAL

Equal Rights

i. Article 40.1 of the Irish Constitution provides for equality before the law. It states that, “All citizens shall, as human persons, be held equal before the law.” After this main equality provision, there are two distinct pieces of legislation in place in Ireland that specifically prohibit discrimination when it occurs. These are the Employment Equality Acts 1998-2011<sup>1</sup> and the Equal Status Acts 2000-2011<sup>2</sup>, which outlaw discrimination in employment, vocational training, advertising, collective agreements, and the provision of goods and services. Under the equality legislation discrimination based on any one of 9 grounds is unlawful, which are as follows:

- Gender
- Civil status
- Family status
- Sexual orientation
- Religion
- Age (does not apply to a person under 16)
- Disability
- Race
- Membership of the Traveller community.<sup>3</sup>

Analysis of the QNHs Equality Module entitled ‘The Experience of Discrimination in Ireland’ states that ‘discrimination takes place when one person or a group of persons are treated less favourably than others because of their gender, marital status, family status, age, disability, ‘race’ – skin colour or ethnic group, sexual orientation, religious belief, and/or membership of the Traveller community.’<sup>4</sup> In examining the presence of discrimination in

---

<sup>1</sup> <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/1998/en/act/pub/0021/index.html>, accessed on the 07/July 2012

<sup>2</sup> <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/2000/en/act/pub/0008/index.html>, accessed on the 07/July/2012

<sup>3</sup> <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie>, retrieved on the 07/July 2012

<sup>4</sup> HELEN RUSSELL, EMMA QUINN, REBECCA KING O’RIAIN and FRANCES MCGINNITY, 2008

Ireland, it is necessary to assess the current position of individuals being treated less favourably due to their association with each of these groups.

Gender

In Ireland, according to recent research,<sup>5</sup> women are more likely than men to feel they have been discriminated against at work. These results are consistent with analyses of working conditions and labour market experiences which show that women are disadvantaged relative to men in relation to pay<sup>6</sup> and occupational positions.<sup>7</sup>

While overall, there is no difference in the proportion of women and men reporting discrimination, women were much more likely to report discrimination on marital and family status grounds and, to a lesser extent, on the gender ground. In general, women will be more likely to say they have experienced work-related discrimination than men.<sup>8</sup>

Civil status

Research shows that the highly educated are more likely to report experiencing discrimination.<sup>9</sup> In terms of looking for work, it is the low educated who have the highest raw rate of discrimination, at 8.5 per cent, in accordance with the fact that those with a low education will have greater difficulties in accessing employment and therefore, a higher unemployment rate.<sup>10</sup>

---

Analysis of the QNHS Equality Module carried out by, entitled 'The Experience of Discrimination in Ireland' Copyright is jointly held by The Equality Authority and The Economic and Social Research Institute, Dublin ISBN: 0 7070 0264 8

<sup>5</sup> O'CONNOR, P., 1996. "Organisational Culture as a Barrier to Women's Promotion", The Economic and Social Review, Vol. 27, No. 3; FAHEY, T., H. RUSSELL and E. SMYTH, 2000. "Gender Equality, Fertility Decline and Labour Market Patterns among Women in Ireland" in B. Nolan, P.J. O'Connell and C.T. Whelan (eds.), From Bust to Boom?: The Irish Experience of Growth and Inequality, Dublin: IPA/ESRI.

<sup>6</sup> BARRETT, A., T. CALLAN, A. DORIS, D. O'NEILL, H. RUSSELL, O. SWEETMAN and J. McBRIDE, 2000. How Unequal? Men and Women in the Irish Labour Market, Dublin: Oaktree Press in association with The Economic and Social Research Institute.

RUSSELL, H. and B. GANNON, 2002. "The Gender Wage Gap in Ireland", Impact Evaluation of the European Employment Strategy in Ireland, Dublin: Department of Enterprise, Trade and Employment.

<sup>7</sup> O'CONNOR, P., 1996. "Organisational Culture as a Barrier to Women's Promotion", The Economic and Social Review, Vol. 27, No. 3; FAHEY, T., H. RUSSELL and E. SMYTH, 2000. "Gender Equality, Fertility Decline and Labour Market Patterns among Women in Ireland" in B. Nolan, P.J. O'Connell and C.T. Whelan (eds.), From Bust to Boom?: The Irish Experience of Growth and Inequality, Dublin: IPA/ESRI.

<sup>8</sup> 'The Experience of Discrimination in Ireland' et al, 2008

<sup>9</sup> IBID

<sup>10</sup> O'CONNELL, P.J. and H. RUSSELL, 2005. Equality at Work? Workplace Equality Policies, Flexible Working Arrangements and the Quality of Work, Equality Research Series, Dublin: The Equality Authority.

The Unemployed

The unemployed are not currently covered by equality legislation but they emerge clearly from a 2008 study, as a group particularly vulnerable to discrimination, showing that 29 per cent had experienced some form of discrimination in the previous two years.<sup>11</sup>

Family status

Lone parents face a risk of discrimination which is particularly concentrated within the services domain, with housing/accommodation, transport and other public services standing out as contexts in which lone parents are most likely to experience discrimination.<sup>12</sup>

Separated people perceive the highest raw risk of any discrimination among the marital status group. Almost one-third of those who experienced discrimination among this group reported that the experience had a serious impact on them. Married people are less likely to experience discrimination in shops/pubs/restaurants, financial services and housing than single people.<sup>13</sup>

Sexual orientation

Same-sex sexual activity was decriminalised in 1993.<sup>14</sup> Discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation is outlawed by the Employment Equality Act, 1999, and the Equal Status Act, 2000. The Prohibition of Incitement to Hatred Act, 1989<sup>15</sup> outlaws incitement to hatred based on sexual orientation. Section 37 of the Employment Equality Act, does however allow religious organisations, medical institutions or educational institutions an exemption

---

<sup>11</sup> RUSSEL et al, 2008, 'The Experience of Discrimination in Ireland'.

<sup>12</sup> IBID

<sup>13</sup> IBID

<sup>14</sup> This was the result of a campaign by Senator David Norris and the Campaign for Homosexual Law Reform which led to a ruling in 1988 that Irish laws prohibiting homosexual activities were in contravention of the European Convention on Human Rights. In 1983 David Norris took a case to the Supreme Court seeking to challenge the constitutionality of these laws but was unsuccessful. In its judgement (delivered by a 3–2 majority) the court referred to the "Christian and democratic nature of the Irish State" and argued that criminalisation served public health and the institution of marriage. In 1988 Norris took a case to the European Court of Human Rights to argue that Irish law was incompatible with the European Convention on Human Rights. The court, in the case of Norris v. Ireland,<sup>14</sup> ruled that the criminalisation of homosexuality in the Republic violated Article 8 of the Convention, which guarantees the right to privacy in personal affairs. The Oireachtas (Irish parliament) decriminalised homosexuality five years later.

<sup>15</sup> "Prohibition of Incitement to Hatred Act, 1989". Irishstatutebook.ie, accessed on the 07/July 2012

on employment grounds.<sup>16</sup> Groups such as the Irish Congress of Trade Unions, the Irish National Teachers Organisation and the Irish Labour Party want to abolish section 37.

Ireland does not allow same-sex marriage. Marriage in Ireland is currently regulated by the Civil Registration Act 2004.<sup>17</sup> Section 2 restates the Common Law definition of marriage and according to section 2(2)(e) a marriage would be invalid if both parties to a marriage are of the same sex. However, a 2012 survey showed that 73% of Irish people agreed that "same sex marriage should be allowed in the Constitution".<sup>18</sup>

In July 2010, the Civil Partnership and Certain Rights and Obligations of Cohabitants Act 2010<sup>19</sup>, was passed, recognising civil partnerships between same-sex couples. One major criticism states that the legislation effectively enshrines discrimination in law.<sup>20</sup> In particular, the denial of the right to apply to adopt a child has been cited as particularly discriminatory.<sup>21</sup> Furthermore, the Act of 2010 essentially makes no provision for civil partners who have had a child, whether through Assisted Human Reproduction, foreign adoption or otherwise. A civil partner who is not the biological parent of the child does not exercise parental rights, as guardianship rights have not been extended to civil partners. Furthermore, in the event of relationship break down between civil partners there is no legal requirement placed on the courts to take the needs of dependent children into account.<sup>22</sup>

Religion

Religion is also associated with the perception of discrimination in the workplace. Recent statistics evidence that there are 3,525,573 Roman Catholics living in Ireland today. Whereas, the second most common religion in Ireland, followers of the Church of Ireland, account

---

<sup>16</sup> <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/1998/en/act/pub/0021/sec0037.html>, accessed on the 07/July 2012

<sup>17</sup> "ACTS04$$U3" (PDF). Retrieved 06 July 2012

<sup>18</sup> McEnroe, Juno (23 February 2012). "Poll: 73% of public back allowing same-sex marriage in Constitution". Irish Examiner. accessed 14 March 2012.

<sup>19</sup> <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/2010/en/act/pub/0024/index.html>, retrieved on the 07/July 2012

<sup>20</sup> Marriage Equality "Missing Pieces: A comparison of the rights and responsibilities gained from civil partnership compared to the rights and responsibilities gained through civil marriage in Ireland" (2011) available at <http://www.marriagequality.ie/getinformed/justlove/missingpieces.html>

<sup>21</sup> "Civil partnership expected to fail lesbian and gay community » News » Marriage quality – Civil Marriage for Gay and Lesbian People in Ireland". Marriagequality.ie. 24 June 2008. Retrieved 07 July 2012

<sup>22</sup> Marriage Equality "Missing Pieces: A comparison of the rights and responsibilities gained from civil partnership compared to the rights and responsibilities gained through civil marriage in Ireland" (2011) available at <http://www.marriagequality.ie/getinformed/justlove/missingpieces.html>

for only 93,056 of the population. Muslims account for just 18, 223 of the total population and the rest of the population is comprised of other minority religions.<sup>23</sup>

While Church of Ireland followers do not differ from the majority (Catholics), research shows that followers of “other Christian”, ‘other’ religion and no religion were all significantly more likely than Roman Catholics to report experience of discrimination at work.<sup>24</sup> According to research, those of no religion emerged as more likely to perceive discrimination in shops and pubs, financial and housing sectors.<sup>25</sup>

Age

Age was the one most frequently reported for discrimination in 2008, accounting for 19 per cent of all grounds reported.<sup>26</sup> Ageism is frequently cited as a problem in the labour market. This may partly stem from their relatively low level of knowledge about their rights under Irish equality law compared to younger age groups.

Claims of discrimination on the grounds of age more commonly come from respondent’s aged under 25 years than those aged over 65. Indeed young people account for the majority of age-related discrimination in the survey. Young people are particularly likely to have experienced discrimination while using services such as pubs/clubs/restaurants/shops, banks/insurance and housing, but are no more likely than other age groups to report work-related discrimination.<sup>27</sup>

Disability

Disabled people are much more likely to report work-related discrimination than nondisabled people. This is consistent with previous Irish research, which found that people with disabilities are significantly disadvantaged in the labour market. Gannon and Nolan (2004) found that people with disabilities were more likely to be unemployed or outside the

---

<sup>23</sup> Central Statistics Office, “This is Ireland- Highlights from Census 2011 Part 1” available at <http://www.cso.ie/en/media/csoie/census/documents/census2011pdr/Census%202011%20Highlights%20Part%201%20web%2072dpi.pdf>

<sup>24</sup> RUSSEL et al, 2008, ‘The Experience of Discrimination in Ireland’.

<sup>25</sup> IBID

<sup>26</sup> RUSSEL et al, 2008, ‘The Experience of Discrimination in Ireland’.

<sup>27</sup> IBID

labour market.<sup>28</sup> Disability has the strongest effect in the health domain and in transport services, where disabled respondents are over five times more likely to perceive problems of discrimination. In shops/pubs, financial services, housing and other public services this group are over twice as likely to perceive discrimination as people without disabilities.<sup>29</sup>

Race

Analysis of the QNHS Equality Module<sup>30</sup> showed that non-Irish nationals are more than twice as likely as Irish respondents to report discrimination in the work place. The fact that non-Irish nationals experience more discrimination than Irish nationals is not accounted for by socio-demographic or job characteristics. This is broadly in line with the findings of McGinnity et al. (2006), in their study of racism and discrimination among recent migrants, who found that over 30 per cent of the sample experienced insults or other forms of harassment at work.<sup>31</sup>

In 2008, 24 per cent one non Irish nationals reported being discriminated against just over twice the rate for Irish nationals.<sup>32</sup> The higher likelihood of discrimination among non-Irish nationals persists in both of the work and four of the service domains (housing, shops/pubs/restaurants, financial services and transport), but are particularly pronounced in relation to job search, where immigrants are two and a half times more likely to report discrimination than Irish job seekers, even when ethnicity and religion are already taken into account. Those of Black ethnicity have the highest “raw” risk of discrimination among the ethnic groups with 40 per cent of those surveyed having experienced discrimination. This compares to 12 per cent of White respondents and 25 per cent of the Asian group.<sup>33</sup>

Membership of the Traveller community.

The Traveller community in Ireland experiences social exclusion and discrimination at all levels of society. The government does not currently recognise Irish Travellers as a distinct

---

<sup>28</sup> GANNON, B. and B. NOLAN, 2004. “Inter-industry Wage Differentials in Ireland, The Economic and Social Review, Vol. 35, No. 2.

<sup>29</sup> RUSSEL et al, 2008, ‘The Experience of Discrimination in Ireland’.

<sup>30</sup> Ibid.

<sup>31</sup> MCGINNITY, F., P. O’CONNELL, E. QUINN and J. WILLIAMS, 2006.

Migrants’ Experience of Racism and Discrimination in Ireland. Dublin: Economic and Social Research Institute.

<sup>32</sup> RUSSEL et al, 2008, ‘The Experience of Discrimination in Ireland’.

<sup>33</sup> IBID

ethnic minority in Irish society. At Irelands hearing for the UN Universal Periodic Review of Human Rights on 7 October, however, the Minister for Justice, Equality and Law Reform announced that the Government was ‘seriously considering’ conferring recognition of Irish Travellers as an ethnic minority group. As this is recognition that many Travellers have called upon for some time, this would be a much welcomed decision.<sup>34</sup>

According to reports such as the Commission on Itinerancy 1963, Travellers were equated with vagrants, social misfits and deviant or saw them as an impoverished underclass in need of rehabilitation.<sup>35</sup> More recent reports such as the Task Force Report on the Travelling Community (1995)<sup>36</sup> seek to acknowledge Traveller culture and identity in a positive light and to address Traveller issues from a human rights perspective. The casework of the Equality Authority also demonstrates the high level of discrimination against members of the Traveller community. Refusal of service in licensed premises accounts for a large proportion of the Equal Status cases on the Traveller ground.<sup>37</sup> In 2003 the Equality Authority dealt with 9 employment equality cases on the Traveller ground, while there were 327 cases under the equal status casework activity.<sup>38</sup> In a public attitudes survey published by the governments 'Know Racism' campaign in February 2004, 72% of respondents agreed that the settled community do not want members of the Traveller community living amongst them, while 48% disagreed that Travellers make a positive contribution to Irish society.<sup>39</sup>

Family Protection

ii. The definition of family is contained in the Irish Constitution – Article 41:

41. 1.1°: The State recognises the Family as the natural primary and fundamental unit group of Society, and as a moral institution possessing inalienable and imprescriptible rights, antecedent and superior to all positive law.

---

<sup>34</sup> Pavee Point Travellers Centre, “Why recognise Travellers as an ethnic group?” Available at <http://paveepoint.ie/2011/10/briefing-why-recognise-travellers-as-an-ethnic-group/>.

<sup>35</sup> O’ CONNELL, JOHN, ‘Policy issues in Ireland’, <http://www.ucc.ie/publications/heeu/Minority/oconnell.htm>, accessed 07/July/2012

<sup>36</sup> ‘Case Study: The task forces on the Travelling Community’, NCCR1/Equality Authority, Ireland NFP, April 2003. http://www.nccri.ie/pdf/ireland\_case\_study2.pdf accessed 07/July 2012.

<sup>37</sup> The Equality Tribunal, Legal Review 2003.

<sup>38</sup> Equality Authority, Annual Report 2003.

<sup>39</sup> Pavee Point fact sheets on the Traveller community, available on www.paveepoint.ie and the Citizens Information Database on www.cidb.ie, accessed 07/July 2012

41. 1.2°: The State, therefore, guarantees to protect the Family in its constitution and authority, as the necessary basis of social order and as indispensable to the welfare of the Nation and the State.

This definition of Marriage was inserted into the Irish Constitution in 1937; the definition is largely influenced by the Roman Catholic ethos in Ireland. Since 1937, the Roman Catholic influence of Society has been diluted somewhat due to a wide variety of circumstances including the acceptance of contraceptives, divorce, same-sex couples, different nationalities and the numbers of females working in the workplace.

In the case of The State (Nicolaou) v An Bord Uchtála, the Supreme Court reinforced the idea that “family” is based upon marriage. Walsh J stated, “that the family referred to in [Article 41] is the family which is founded on the institution of marriage and, in the context of the Article, marriage means valid marriage under the laws for the time being in force in the State.”

Article 41.3.1° supports this view, as the State pledges to guard the institution of marriage with a special level of care and to protect the institution of family from attack. It is for this reason that divorce was not permitted in Ireland until 1995. This definition excluded single-parent families and co-habiting couples. However, since the case of G v An Bord Uchtála<sup>40</sup>, Article 42 of the Constitution has extended the rights of an unmarried mother and of children of unmarried parents; such rights are to be considered personal rights which stem from the family relationships and therefore the State is obliged to protect under Article 40.3. However, unmarried fathers are considered to not have any personal rights in relation to his children. The Law Reform Commission has recommended that changes be introduced in order to achieve equality between parents regardless of marital status or gender. The Law Reform Commission have looked towards the European Convention of Human Rights and the European Court of Human Rights to extend the alter the definition of “family” within the meaning of Article 8 to be based more on close personal ties as opposed to marriage. In its 2010 Report on the Legal Aspects of Family Relationships it recommended that legislation be enacted that provides automatic joint parental responsibility of both the mother and father of any child.<sup>41</sup>

---

<sup>40</sup> In this case, an unmarried father sought to challenge provisions of the Adoption Act 1952 which allowed his child to be adopted without his permission.

The family unit in Ireland is in a constant state of change. Statistics from the CSO evidence that of the 1.18 million families living in Ireland in 2011, 143,600 were comprised of cohabiting couples. Moreover, there were 215,300 families headed by lone parents with children, 87 percent of which were lone mothers.<sup>42</sup> The family unit has developed from one being based purely on marriage to include cohabitating couples, lone parents and same-sex couples. Marriage rates in Ireland have been declining with more families choosing to cohabit and rear children outside of marriage. Sexual relationships, child-bearing and cohabitation outside of marriage have become the norm in Ireland. The importance of marriage has somewhat declined due to a multitude of factors including : increased women in the workplace, changing sexual relations, single parenthood and social acceptance of cohabitating and same-sex couples. The Civil Partnership and Certain Rights and Obligations of Cohabitants Act 2010 highlights Ireland's acceptance of different types of family units. Under this provision, certain rights that have previously only belonged to married couples have been extended to same sex couples who enter civil partnership but their status still remains below that of marriage, something that is necessitated by Articles 41 and 42 of the Constitution. However, the Constitution and Legislation in Ireland is not adopting at a quick enough pace to deal with the changes in Society. The Law Reform Commission has highlighted eleven areas which need to be addressed; most notably the need to strengthen the rights of unmarried fathers. Irish law does not afford automatic guardianship rights to unmarried fathers, who can be appointed as guardian only with the consent of the child's mother or by court order. This has led some groups to complain that fathers are disadvantaged, for example in the context of custody disputes<sup>43</sup>

Divorce in Ireland was introduced in 1996 by the Fifteenth Amendment of the Constitution Act, 1995<sup>44</sup>. Recent statistics published by the Central Statistics Office show that there were 87, 800 divorced people living in Ireland in 2011. This figure evidences a sharp increase

---

<sup>41</sup> Law Reform Commission, "The Legal Aspects of Family Relationships" (2010) available at <http://www.lawreform.ie>

<sup>42</sup> Central Statistics Office, "This is Ireland- Highlights from Census 2011 Part 1" (2011) available at www.cso.ie

<sup>43</sup> Law Reform Commission, "The Legal Aspects of Family Relationships" (2010) available at <http://www.lawreform.ie>

<sup>44</sup> FAMILY LAW (DIVORCE) ACT, 1996

from the figure of 35,100 divorced individuals living in Ireland in 2002.<sup>45</sup> The number of divorces in has continually increased since the introduction of divorce in Ireland.

The Irish Courts offer a variety of legal resolutions for marital breakdown which can be used by Irish Couples including mediation, divorce and nullity. These services are relatively new to Ireland and as a result may be inadequate to deal with the multitude of problems which occur. Another striking feature of the changing Irish family is the changing family sizes. In the present society, Irish families are more likely to have one or two children today than in the past where families contained large numbers of children.

The average marital age in Ireland has increased dramatically throughout the generations. The increasing marital age can be attributed to the social acceptance of non-marital parents rearing children. The average age of grooms rose from 30.2 years in 1996 to 33.4 years in 2007. Similarly, brides are also marrying at a later stage in their lives. The average age increased to 31.7 years in 2008 from 28.4 years in 1996.

Child Protection

iii. The cultural and legal status of children in the Republic of Ireland has been traditionally viewed in light of the Irish Constitution, Bunreacht na hÉireann. The evolution of the legal status of the child from property of the father, to property of the marital family, to the modern concept of the child as an individual in their own right, possessing unique and peculiar rights of their own, has been slow and still poses “a challenge to the legal systems of many societies.”<sup>46</sup> The Irish Republic is no different. “Both historically and constitutionally,”<sup>47</sup> <sup>48</sup> the family has been afforded a pre-eminent position in Ireland’s legal framework and social hierarchy; recognised by the State as “the primary and fundamental unit group of Society... possessing inalienable and imprescriptible rights, antecedent and superior to all positive law.”<sup>49</sup> Children had previously been viewed “only within this perimeter,”<sup>50</sup> as a member and product of the family unit, rather than as an individual. There

---

<sup>45</sup> Central Statistics Office, “This is Ireland- Highlights from Census 2011 Part 1” (2011) available at www.cso.ie

<sup>46</sup> Blake, Teresa, “The United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child,” Irish Law Times. 9 ILT 114 (1991).

<sup>47</sup> Horgan, Rosemary N., “The United Nations Convention On The Rights of The Child and Irish Family Law,” Irish Law Times. 9 ILT 161 (1991).

<sup>48</sup> See also Ireland’s First Report to the UN Committee on the Rights of the Child (1996)

<sup>49</sup> Art. 41.1.1°, Bunreacht na hÉireann - Constitution of Ireland.

<sup>50</sup> Horgan, Rosemary N., “The United Nations Convention On The Rights of The Child and Irish Family Law,” Irish Law Times. 9 ILT 161 (1991).

is no recognition of the child “as a ‘person’ with individual rights to which separate consideration must be given.”<sup>51</sup> This view has been perpetuated not only by the pre-eminent position occupied by the Family in the Irish Constitution, but by the context in which that document was written. As Senator Jillian van Turnhout of the Irish Senate notes, “the Constitution largely reflects the time it was first written in 1937, when children were seen and not heard.”<sup>52</sup> As the Law Society notes, the relative invisibility of children remains “a notable feature of the Irish family law system.”<sup>53</sup>

This Constitutional arrangement has resulted in a number of legal anomalies that have prevented the growth of a child-friendly culture in Ireland.<sup>54</sup> “The silence of Article 41 in relation to children”<sup>55</sup> has fostered a protectionist culture towards the issue of children and children’s rights. Without explicit recognition of their own rights, children’s interests are vested in another party, thereby failing to empower children “to be active participants and decision-makers in their own lives, communities and society at large.”<sup>56</sup> Without a mechanism to participate in the processes that affect them, or an ability to effectively exercise their rights, children are placed in a uniquely vulnerable position;<sup>57</sup> bereft of adequate Constitutional protection.

Just as the child has been historically and culturally viewed in light of his/her position within the family; the issue of children’s rights has been similarly viewed within this limited context. Though children are afforded unique and unenumerated rights by Articles 41 and 42 of the Constitution,<sup>58</sup> these rights are gifted to them by virtue of their place within the family unit; not to the child as an independent entity.<sup>59</sup> However, that is not to say that children do not

---

<sup>51</sup> Ibid.

<sup>52</sup> Jewell, Lisa “Children's Rights - Interview with Jillian van Turnhout,” Woman's Way, November 21, 2011 - p. 30.

<sup>53</sup> Tenth Progress Report: The Family, The All-Party Oireachtas Committee on the Constitution, Dublin, Stationery Office, 2006 - p. 91.

<sup>54</sup> See Carolan, Eoin, “The Constitutional Consequences of Reform,” Children's Rights and the Constitution, A Conference on Recent Developments and Future Reforms, Wednesday 21 February 2007 at p. 1 - “The Constitution’s traditional approach has led to decisions which arguably did not best serve the welfare of the child.”

<sup>55</sup> Tenth Progress Report: The Family, The All-Party Oireachtas Committee on the Constitution, Dublin, Stationery Office, 2006 - p. 88.

<sup>56</sup> Children Rights Alliance, “From Rhetoric to Rights,” Children’s Rights Alliance, Dublin (2006) - p. 5.

<sup>57</sup> Tenth Progress Report: The Family, The All-Party Oireachtas Committee on the Constitution, Dublin, Stationery Office, 2006 - p. 91.

<sup>58</sup> Art. 41.1.1° of Bunreacht na hÉireann refers to the “inalienable and imprescriptible” rights of the family. Art. 42.5 refers to the “natural and imprescriptible rights of the child.”

<sup>59</sup> See Murray v Ireland [1985] IR 532, particularly the judgment of Costello J.: “The rights in Article 41.1.1° are those which can properly be said to belong to the institution [of the family] itself, as distinct from the possess any rights of their own under the Irish Constitution. The Irish judiciary has contributed significantly to the development of children's rights within the Republic by 'uncovering' unenumerated rights within the broadly worded text of the Irish Constitution. As natural and legal persons within the State, the Courts have held that children are afforded the same set of personal and unenumerated rights as all citizens, under Art. 40.<sup>60</sup> <sup>61</sup> Children also possess certain natural rights as human beings. These natural rights include "a constitutional right to bodily integrity," and "an unenumerated right to an opportunity to be reared with due regard to her religious, moral, intellectual, physical and social welfare."<sup>62</sup>

Though the judiciary's application of the doctrine of unenumerated rights has paved the way "for the development of constitutional jurisprudence on the rights of the child,"<sup>63</sup> such a radical judicial movement has not yet taken place. In fact, such a development remains very unlikely, due in no small part to the Constitutional supremacy afforded to the Family unit. The State's explicit acknowledgement of the family as a unit "antecedent and superior to all positive law," coupled with the absence of a similar statement in relation to children, effectively subordinates the rights of children to those of the marital family unit.<sup>64</sup>

This arrangement has significant repercussions for children in cases where their welfare is at the heart of the matter.<sup>65</sup> The antecedent legal position of the family "may allow a child to be exposed to harmful conduct on the part of its parents where that behaviour is not so damaging as to justify its removal from the family entirely,"<sup>66</sup> and has thus made it very difficult for the State to intervene in cases where the child is being abused within his or her own family.<sup>67</sup> Moreover, 'the Constitutional supremacy of the family inadvertently curtails personal rights which each individual member might enjoy by virtue of membership of the family."

---

<sup>60</sup> Department of Children and Youth Affairs, "Briefing Note on Proposed Amendment to the Constitution in Relation to the Rights of Children."

<sup>61</sup> See Re: Article 26 and the Adoption (No 2) Bill 1987 [1989] IR 656: "the rights of a child who is a member of a family are rights referred to in Articles 40, 43 and 44 in addition to Articles 41 and 42."

<sup>62</sup> G. v. An Bord Uchtála [1980] IR 32 at 44.

<sup>63</sup> Kilkelly, Ursula, & O'Mahony, Connor, "The Proposed Children's Rights Amendment: Running to Stand Still?", Irish Journal of Family Law 10(2) 19, (2007).

<sup>64</sup> See Tenth Progress Report: The Family, The All-Party Oireachtas Committee on the Constitution, Dublin, Stationery Office, 2006 at p. 88: "The silence of Article 41 in relation to children means that the rights of the family are effectively exercised by the parents and that the rights of children may not be given due weight within the family."

<sup>65</sup> See Re: J.H., an infant [1985] IR 375 and North Western Health Board v. H.W. [2001] 3 IR 622.

<sup>66</sup> Eoin Carolan, "The Constitutional Consequences of Reform," Children's Rights and the Constitution, A Conference on Recent Developments and Future Reforms, Wednesday 21 February 2007 - p. 5.

<sup>67</sup> O'Brien, Carl, "Minister insists children's rights referendum to go ahead next year," The Irish Times - Monday, December 19, 2011

the scope of child-friendly law,<sup>68</sup> while rendering progressive judicial judgments ineffective (as discussed above). These legal anomalies have led to consensus “that the current system offers inadequate protection to the position of children,”<sup>69 70</sup> and calls for a Constitutional Amendment on the Rights of the Child.

On November 10th the people of Ireland were asked to vote on a proposal to change the Constitution of Ireland. The proposed changes to the Constitution were to insert the new Article 42A to the Constitution and delete the existing Article 42.5. The new Article 42A under the heading Children will be the thirty-first amendment to the Irish Constitution and will be the first time that children’s rights are enumerated in the Irish Constitution in a standalone provision. It seeks to protect children, support families, remove inequalities in adoption and recognize children in their own right.

The bolstering of rights and welfare-based approaches to child protection within the Irish legal system has been further prioritised by the increase in high profile instances of child abuse in recent years.<sup>71</sup> The Ferns (2005), Ryan (2009), Murphy (2009) and Cloyne (2011) Reports were perhaps the most notable efforts by the Irish Government to investigate serious abuses of children’s rights by members of the Catholic Church. The Reports “were the result of inquiries into the abuse of children who resided in residential institutions managed by religious orders on behalf of the State,”<sup>72</sup> and revealed a significant failure in Government systems of oversight and governance;<sup>73</sup> as well as numerous “shortcomings in relevant laws and regulations” that allowed abuse to go unpunished. Each report concluded with recommendations as to how these shortcomings could be remedied.<sup>74</sup> Indeed, the Criminal Justice (Withholding of Information on Offences Against Children and Vulnerable

---

<sup>68</sup> Children Rights Alliance, “From Rhetoric to Rights,” Children’s Rights Alliance, Dublin (2006) - p. 7.

<sup>69</sup> Eoin Carolan, “The Constitutional Consequences of Reform,” Children’s Rights and the Constitution, A Conference on Recent Developments and Future Reforms, Wednesday 21 February 2007 - p. 1.

<sup>70</sup> Amnesty International Ireland, “Children’s Rights and the Constitution - Piece by Emily Logan for In Plain Sight.” Available online at: <http://www.oco.ie/assets/files/publications/ChildrensRightsandtheConstitution.pdf>. Retrieved 16th July 2012.

<sup>71</sup> Jewell, Lisa “Children’s Rights - Interview with Jillian van Turnhout,” Woman’s Way, November 21, 2011.

<sup>72</sup> Holohan, Carole, “In Plain Sight - Responding to the Ferns, Ryan, Murphy and Cloyne Reports,” Amnesty International Ireland, September 2011 - p. 17.

<sup>73</sup> See Chapter 6 of the Ryan Report, at 6.06; (“The system of inspection by the Department of Education was fundamentally flawed and incapable of being effective”), and 6.13: “Complaints by parents and others made to the Department were not properly investigated. Punishments outside the permitted guidelines were ignored and even condoned by the Department of Education.”

<sup>74</sup> Holohan, Carole, “In Plain Sight - Responding to the Ferns, Ryan, Murphy and Cloyne Reports,” Amnesty International Ireland, September 2011 - p. 17.

Persons) Act is perhaps the most notable product of the Reports' recommendations.<sup>75</sup> The Act, which came into effect on 1st August 2012<sup>76</sup>, makes it an offence to withhold information that could result in an arrest for a serious offence committed against a child. From an NGO perspective, Amnesty International Ireland's "In Plain Sight" examined the systemic failures within the Irish political system, and indeed, Irish society, that enabled the abuses detailed in the Government reports; cataloguing "a history of unspeakable abuse against the most vulnerable in our society."<sup>77</sup> Colm O'Gorman (Executive Director of Amnesty International Ireland) maintained that the abuse represented "the greatest human rights failure in the history of the state," and claimed that "much of the abuse described in the Ryan Report meets the legal definition of torture under international human rights law."<sup>78</sup> O'Gorman's comments, together with An Taoiseach Enda Kenny's remarks following the publication of the Cloyne report,<sup>79</sup> remain the more significant responses to violations of children's rights that have attracted media attention.<sup>80</sup>

iv. The Republic of Ireland is a dualist State. The Irish Constitution, Bunreacht na hÉireann, governs the implementation of international treaties into State law. The Constitution states that 'no international agreement shall be part of the domestic law of the State save as may be determined by the Oireachtas'<sup>81</sup>.<sup>82</sup> Also, Article 29.5.1<sup>o</sup> of the Constitution states that 'every international agreement to which the State becomes a party shall be laid before Dáil Éireann'.<sup>83</sup>

In order to be effective, provisions of international treaties and Conventions must be introduced into national legislation. In order to draft legislation in Ireland permission must

---

<sup>75</sup> Minister for Children & Youth Affairs Frances Fitzgerald TD, Launch of 'In Plain Sight' - Report by Amnesty International Ireland, Monday 26 September, 2011.

<sup>76</sup> 'Legislation recently enacted: Criminal Law 2012', The Department of Justice and Equality. http://www.justice.ie/en/JELR/Pages/Criminal\_law (accessed 05/11/12).

<sup>77</sup> Minister for Children & Youth Affairs Frances Fitzgerald TD, Launch of 'In Plain Sight' - Report by Amnesty International Ireland, Monday 26 September, 2011.

<sup>78</sup> "Abuse of Children in Irish Institutions Amounted to Torture," Amnesty International Ireland, 26 September 2011. Available online: <http://www.amnesty.ie/news/abuse-children-irish-institutions-amounted-torture>. Retrieved 26 September 2011.

<sup>79</sup> Motion on the Commission of Investigation Report in the Catholic Diocese of Cloyne, Dáil Éireann, 20 July 2011.

<sup>80</sup> See Patsy McGarry, "Abuse was 'human rights failure,'" The Irish Times, September 26, 2011, and Patsy McGarry, "Abuse in institutions amounted to 'torture,'" The Irish Times, September 27, 2011.

<sup>81</sup> The Oireachtas (National Parliament) consists of the President and two Houses: Dáil Éireann (the House of Representatives) and Seanad Éireann (the Senate).

<sup>82</sup> Article 29.6 of Bunreacht na hÉireann.

<sup>83</sup> Article 29.5.1<sup>o</sup> of Bunreacht na hÉireann.

be sought by a Minister in either House of the Oireachtas to introduce the Bill. If granted, the Bill is printed and circulated to members. An Order is made by the Dáil for its second reading. At the second stage a debate is held where the general principles of the Bill are considered. This may result in amendments or improvements. When these are agreed an Order is made for the Bill to be considered in committee (third) stage. During the committee stage the Bill is considered in great detail. The fourth stage (report stage) consists of a review of changes made at the committee stage. The Bill is finally considered before it is passed. A Bill amended by the Seanad is sent back to the Dáil for its agreement. Finally when the Bill is passed by both Houses, it goes to the President for her/his signature and is declared law. A Bill becomes law on the day it is signed by the President and, unless the contrary intention appears, comes into operation on that day.

Alternatively, international agreements may be inserted into the Constitution. This has been done with the treaties of the European Union, such as the Maastricht Treaty. This process involves inserting a section into the Constitution which formally ratifies the treaty in question. This method was considered when Ireland was ratifying the European Convention on Human Rights, however, it was decided that an Act of the Oireachtas was more appropriate. The European Convention was given effect to in Irish law by the European Convention on Human Rights Act 2003.

Ireland ratified the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child, without reservation, on the 21st of September 1992. However, Ireland has not fully incorporated the Convention into domestic law, as required by the Constitution, if it is to have domestic effect. After its first observation for Ireland in 1998, the UN Committee on the Rights of the Child suggested that the Irish Government take all measures necessary to ... take further steps to ensure that the Convention is fully incorporated as part of the domestic law, taking due account of its general principles as defined in Article 2 (non-discrimination), Article 3 (best interests of the child), Article 6 (right to life, survival and development) and Article 12 (respect for the views of the child).<sup>84</sup>

---

<sup>84</sup> UN Committee on the Rights of the Child (CRC), UN Committee on the Rights of the Child: Concluding Observations: Ireland, 4 February 1998, CRC/C/15/Add.85, available at: <http://www.unhcr.org/refworld/docid/3ae6aec924.html> [accessed 9 July 2012]

Once again, in 2006, the UN Committee advised the Irish Government to take measures to ensure that the best interests' principle is 'applied in all political, judicial and administrative decisions'<sup>85</sup> and that it

... strengthens its efforts to ensure, including through Constitutional provisions, that children have the right to express their views in all matters affecting them and to have those views given due weight in particular in families, schools and other educational institutions, the health sector and in communities.<sup>86</sup>

The Constitution of Ireland and much of the legislation regarding children in Ireland makes reference to the 'welfare' of the child, as opposed to the 'best interests' of the child. The welfare of the child is defined as the moral, intellectual, physical, religious and social wellbeing of the child.<sup>87</sup> However, in Southern Health Board v CH<sup>88</sup> the terms 'welfare' and 'best interests' were used interchangeably. The best interests of the child is clearly enshrined in the Child Care Act 1991<sup>89</sup> which places a statutory duty on Health Boards to promote the welfare of children who are not receiving adequate care and protection. Also, all court proceedings which involve the custody of a child are governed by the Guardianship of Infants Act 1964 where the best interests principle is the paramount consideration in deciding matters of this nature.<sup>90</sup>

In January 2006, the need for Constitutional change was recognised by the All Party Oireachtas Committee on the Constitution. It recommended that a new section be inserted into Article 41 of the Constitution as follows; "In the resolution of all disputes concerning the guardianship, adoption, custody, care or upbringing of a child, the welfare and best interests of the child shall be first and paramount consideration."<sup>91</sup> The final report of the Joint Committee on the Constitutional Amendment on Children was issued in 2010, which makes 5 key recommendations, as follows;<sup>92</sup>

---

<sup>85</sup>UN Committee on the Rights of the Child (CRC), UN Committee on the Rights of the Child: Concluding Observations, Ireland, 29 September 2006, CRC/C/IRL/CO/2, available at: <http://www.unhcr.org/refworld/docid/45c30bd80.html> [accessed 9 July 2012]

<sup>86</sup> ibid

<sup>87</sup> <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/1964/en/act/pub/0007/index.html> [accessed 11th July 2012]

<sup>88</sup> [1996] 1 IR 219

<sup>89</sup> <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/2001/en/act/pub/0024/index.html> [accessed 11th July 2012]

<sup>90</sup> <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/1964/en/act/pub/0007/index.html> [accessed 11th July 2012]

<sup>91</sup> All-Party Oireachtas Committee on the Constitution, 10th Progress Report: 2006, available at: <http://www.constitution.ie/reports/10th-Report-Family.pdf> [accessed 9th July 2012]

<sup>92</sup> Joint Committee on the Constitutional Amendment on Children, Third Report on the Twenty-eighth

- Amending the Constitution to enshrine and enhance the protection of the rights of children.
- Specifically acknowledging the child's welfare and best interests as a natural and imprescriptible right of paramount consideration.
- Include the child's right to be heard, subject to age and maturity, in cases involving their welfare.
- Bringing laws and services for children in line with the State's obligations under the Convention on the Rights of the Child.
- Amend Article 42 of the Constitution in order to implement these recommendations.

There are no plans at the time of writing to incorporate the Convention on the Rights of the Child, as a whole, into Irish law.

v. Nature of Directives

The directive lays down an implementation deadline of the 18th of December 2013 which applies to all member states including Ireland<sup>93</sup>. The Minister for Justice and Equality, Deputy Alan Shatter, has said, when called upon to implement this directive, that it is the opinion of the Government that much of the Directive 2011/93/EU is already covered by domestic legislation but that it is the intention of his Department to put forward new legislation this year on Sexual Offences that will include some of the provisions that will come under the scope of this Directive, such as increasing the maximum penalties for child pornography offences.<sup>94</sup> Despite statements of his commitment to these issues in this debate, no such legislative proposals have been brought forward as of November 2012. It is clear from Article 249 EC that national authorities have autonomy over the 'choice of form and methods' invoked to achieve the result sought by a directive within their member state. However, member states have strictly been forced to implement directives in a manner

---

Amendment of the Constitution Bill 2007, February 2010, available at http://www.oireachtas.ie/documents/committees30thdail/j-conamendchildren/reports\_2008/FinalReport2010.pdf [accessed 9th July 2012] which gives effect to the result sought. Thus, the principle of national procedural autonomy has been limited by the twin duties of effectiveness and equivalence<sup>95</sup>. As laid down in Article 27 of the directive member states must communicate to the Commission the provisions they shall use to transpose the directive into national law<sup>96</sup>. Equally, Member states must reference the directive when they implement it<sup>97</sup>.

<sup>93</sup> <http://eur-lex.europa.eu/LexUriServ/LexUriServ.do?uri=OJ:L:2011:335:0001:0014:EN:PDF> accessed on the 12/July 2012

<sup>94</sup> Speech by Alan Shatter, T.D., Minister for Justice and Equality at the Seanad Private Member Motion on Child Abuse Material on the Internet- Wednesday 29 February 2012. <http://debates.oireachtas.ie/seanad/2012/02/29/00009.asp>.

The process of implementation of Directive 2011/93/EU is aided by the doctrines of direct effect, consistent interpretation and the principle of state liability. Such doctrines enhance the authority and binding nature of directives. This binding nature will allow directive 2011/93/EU to effectively protect children's rights against sexual abuse and sexual exploitation.

The principle of direct effect was established in Van Gend En Loos v Nederlandse Administratie der Belastingen<sup>98</sup>. In this case the European Court of Justice defined direct effect as the ability of nationals of member states to lay claim to rights laid out in EU law which national courts must protect<sup>99</sup>. Van Duyn v Home Office was a case concerning an EU national who was refused entry into the UK on the basis on her personal conduct<sup>100</sup>. In this case the Court of Justice ruled that in certain circumstances directives can have direct effect. However, this case only grants directives vertical direct effect<sup>101</sup>. In Marshall v Southampton and South West Hampshire Area Health Authority, a case of sex discrimination against a woman by a British health authority, the European Court of Justice confirmed that directives do not have horizontal direct effect<sup>102</sup>. This principle limits the effectiveness of Directive 2011/93/EU and emphasises the need for member states substantive implementation of the sought results of the directive. However, this principle also generates an incentive for member state governments to fully implement this directive. The convergence in the legal position of directives regarding vertical and horizontal direct effect has generated a 'two-tier legal system' which offers greater protection for individuals against public bodies as opposed to

---

<sup>95</sup> Damian Chalmers and others, European Union Law: Text and Materials (Cambridge University Press 2006) p.391

<sup>96</sup> European Parliament and European Council directive 2011/93/EU of 13 December 2011 Article 27

<sup>97</sup> Ibid (n 4)

<sup>98</sup> Case 26/62 Van Gend en Loos v Nederlandse Administratie der Belastingen [1963] ECR 1

<sup>99</sup> Ibid (n 8)

<sup>100</sup> Case 41/74 Van Duyn v Home Office [1974] ECR 1

<sup>101</sup> Ibid (n 58)

<sup>102</sup> Case C-271/91 Marshall v Southampton and South West Hampshire Area Health Authority [1993] ECR I-4367

private bodies<sup>103</sup>. However, directives can have ‘incidental horizontal direct effect’, allowing there invocation by private parties’ to a dispute as a shield, under the law laid down in Unilever Italia PsA v Central Food SpA<sup>104</sup>. In practical terms the effect ‘incidental horizontal direct effect’ will have on the implementation of Directive 2011/93 will be extremely limited and in Unilever the court restated that Directives do not have horizontal direct effect<sup>105</sup>.

In keeping with the Court of Justice’s development of the principle of effectiveness of judicial protection the duty of consistent interpretation has been established<sup>106</sup>. Since Marleasing SA v Las Commercial Internacional de Alimentacion SA it is clear that this principle applies to all areas of EU law and thus, will be used by national courts against national governments, promoting the correct implementation of Directive 2011/93<sup>107</sup>. Indeed, the case of Marleasing concerned two private parties and so it seems that directives can create a horizontal duty of consistent interpretation. However, in Marleasing the directive was used a shield as opposed to a sword and this duty does not extend horizontally indefinitely<sup>108</sup>. However, the Court of Justice has been slow to allow the use on the duty of consistent interpretation in the context of criminal trials, such trials will be the main case law of this directive. Therefore, the duty of consistent interpretation may not play a significant role in encouraging member states to implement directive 2011/93.

State liability may be the most important incentive for member states to implement Directive 2011/93. It is clear that this directive fulfils the conditions for state liability required by the Francovich and Bonifaci v Italy ruling concerning Italy’s failure to implement a Directive aimed at guaranteeing employees protection in the event of insolvency of their employer<sup>109</sup>. First, Directive 2011/93 grants rights upon individuals in that it lays down that sexual abuse and the sexual exploitation of children constitutes serious violations of fundamental rights<sup>110</sup>. Second, the context of these rights is clear from the directive, it formalises EU policy to the standard of the Lanzarote Convention of October 2007 as it introduces specific provisions to protect children such as those aimed at combating child sex

---

<sup>103</sup> Ibid (n 3) p.375

<sup>104</sup> Case C-443/98 Unilever Italia PsA v Central Food SpA [2000] ECR I-2201

<sup>105</sup> Ibid (n 13)

<sup>106</sup> Ibid (n 3) p.383

<sup>107</sup> Case C-106/89 Marleasing SA v Las Commercial Internacional de Alimentacion SA [1990]

<sup>108</sup> Ibid (n 17)

<sup>109</sup> Joined Cases C-6 and 9/90 Francovich and Bonifaci v Italy [1991] ECR I-5357

<sup>110</sup> Ibid (n 4)

tourism<sup>111</sup>. The causal link between the State's breach of their duty and the damage suffered by the injured party may be the most difficult condition to prove<sup>112</sup>. However, the directive is highly specific, such as Article 25 measures against websites containing child abuse<sup>113</sup>. Such specificity enhances the causative link between the Directive and damage suffered.

Directive 2011/93 enhances basic protection for children from sexual abuse and sexual exploitation; this is a necessary step for Ireland and so should be fully implemented. However, Ireland's record of implementing directives combined with a number of failed attempts to enhance protection for children casts doubt on the impact this Directive may have on children's rights in Ireland. Ireland has an average transposition delay of below thirty weeks<sup>114</sup>. Moreover, while the government has taken initiatives to improve protection offered to children, such as the Ryan Report, in practise little substantive improvement has been made.

2 THE LANZAROTE CONVENTION

- i. Ireland ratified the European Convention on Human Rights on February 25 1953.
- ii. Ireland signed the Lanzarote Convention on October 25 2007 but has not yet ratified the treaty.
- iii. Ireland has no immediate plans to ratify the convention. A motion on child abuse was heard in Seanad Éireann (The Senate) on February 29 2012 and Senator Jillian van Turnhout called on the Minister for Justice and Equality, Alan Shatter, to commit to bring forward a proposal to Government to ratify the Lanzarote Convention.<sup>115</sup> The Minister informed the Seanad that he expected to bring legislative proposals to the Government within the coming months in the form of a Sexual Offences Bill. He said "these will include measures to enhance the protection of children against sexual abuse and sexual exploitation, including exploitation through prostitution and child pornography."<sup>116</sup> The Minister seemed to hint towards there being no need for a ratification of the Convention when he stressed that "many of the criminal law provisions of... the Lanzarote Convention are already

---

<sup>111</sup> Ibid (n 4) Article 17 and 21

<sup>112</sup> Ibid (n 19)

<sup>113</sup> Ibid (n 4) Article 25

<sup>114</sup> http://www.eipa.eu/files/repository/eipascope/20080313162050\_MKA\_SCOPE2007-3\_Internet-4.pdf accessed on July 12/2012

<sup>115</sup> Speech by Alan Shatter, T.D., Minister for Justice and Equality, note 92.

<sup>116</sup> Ibid.

covered by the Child Trafficking and Pornography Act 1998 and the Criminal Law (Sexual Offences) Act 2006.”

iv. As the Lanzarote Convention was adopted by the Council of Europe, it’s ranking in the national legal system would be similar to that of normal legislation if, as the Irish Constitution dictates, it was implemented by Dáil Eireann by an Act, or alternatively it would take on constitutionally-protected status if it was implemented by an amendment to Bunreacht na hEireann.<sup>117</sup>

II NATIONAL LEGISLATION

1 GENERAL PRINCIPLES OF THE JURISDICTION

i. The Republic of Ireland is a liberal-democratic society, founded as a Constitutional republic by the Constitution of Ireland, Bunreacht na hÉireann, in 1937. It is governed as a bicameral, parliamentary democracy with a President as head of State; though the President has no executive power and operates in a largely ceremonial role.

For much of its history, the island of Ireland had been ruled by monarchs and the successive governments of Great Britain. In 1922, following the Irish War of Independence (or the Anglo-Irish War) and the signing of the Anglo-Irish Treaty, the Irish Free State was established and Ireland became a constitutional monarchy that remained a dominion of the British Commonwealth, and over which the British monarch still reigned. It was from this dominion status that the outline of the contemporary Irish State began to emerge.

On December 8th 1922, the province of Northern Ireland<sup>118</sup> exercised its right to leave the Irish Free State area and remain in the United Kingdom. This partition remains in effect to this day. Furthermore, the Constitution of the Irish Free State gave effect to a bicameral parliament, the Oireachtas, which is comprised of Dáil Éireann (House of Representatives, the lower house) and Seanad Éireann (the Senate, the upper house). This original bicameral structure resembles the bicameral parliament present in the modern Republic. Today, the

---

<sup>117</sup> Infra at 15-17.

<sup>118</sup> The Northern Irish State was envisioned as a solution to the tensions between those with nationalist aspirations (who were in the majority in the other regions of Ireland) and those who wished to remain in the United Kingdom (who were in the majority in Northern Ireland). Ireland was partitioned by the Government of Ireland Act, 1920, thereby giving effect to Northern Ireland as an entity distinct from ‘Ireland,’ but in union with the United Kingdom.

Oireachtas bears the sole and exclusive power to legislate (subject to the Republic's obligations to obey and adopt laws legislated by the European Community), a power which remained limited under the Irish Free State.

Following the ratification of the Statute of Westminster in 1931,<sup>119</sup> the government of the Irish Free State made several unfettered amendments to the original Constitution of the Free State. These amendments necessitated its replacement in 1937 by the Constitution of Ireland, Bunreacht na hÉireann, which established the office of the President, the central legislative, executive and judicial organs of the contemporary Republic, and replaced the head of Government with a more powerful Taoiseach, or Prime Minister. The new Constitution also provided for the position of Tánaiste, the second-most senior position in the Irish Government. Though Bunreacht na hÉireann is today the nation's "supreme legal authority,"<sup>120</sup> the newly-christened Ireland, or Éire,<sup>121</sup> did not officially become a Republic until 1949, with the passing of the Republic of Ireland Act. Following the Act, the Irish Republic became the independent State that it remains to this day.

ii. Though Irish citizens are afforded Human Rights through instruments of European and International Law (e.g., the European Convention on Human Rights and the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights), the Irish Constitution is the principal vehicle through which rights are domestically legislated. The Irish Republic does not guarantee a 'Bill of Rights' as such. Instead, Articles 40 - 44 of Bunreacht na hÉireann (inclusive) set out the 'Fundamental Rights' of citizens. These include the right to equality before the law (Art. 40.1), the right to life (Art. 40.3), the right to liberty (Art. 40.4), the sanctity of the household (Art. 40.5) and the right to freedom of expression, assembly and association (Art. 40.6.1). Art. 43 acknowledges the citizen's right to the ownership of private property, while Art. 44.2 guarantees freedom of profession and practice of religion. Art. 41 recognises the Family as 'a fundamental unit group of society,' 'antecedent and superior to all positive law,' possessing inalienable and imprescriptible rights.' Similarly, Art. 42.5 acknowledges 'the natural and imprescriptible rights of the child.' While, Art. 40.3.1 provides that the State has a positive

---

<sup>119</sup> Under the Statute of Westminster, States holding dominion status within the British Empire were granted legislative equality with Great Britain.

<sup>120</sup> Furlong, John, "Ireland - the Name of the State," Legal Information Management, Vol. 6, (2006), pp. 297 - 301 - p. 298.

<sup>121</sup> The Irish Constitution of 1937 changed the name of the country from the Irish Free State to Ireland. As per Art. 4; "The name of the State is Éire, or, in the English language, Ireland."

obligation ‘to respect and, as far as practicable, ... defend and vindicate the rights of the citizen,’ Art. 43.2.2 provides that the State may ‘delimit by law the exercise of the said rights’ in accordance with the common good.

Over the course of the Republic’s short history, the Irish Judiciary have interpreted the provisions of Bunreacht na hÉireann as including other human rights that are not explicitly stated within the text of the Constitution,<sup>122</sup> thereby expanding upon the range of rights afforded to citizens. In doing so, the judiciary have relied on a varied range of sources, such as; “...natural law; the Christian and democratic nature of the State; the Preamble, in particular, references to prudence, justice and charity, the dignity and freedom of the individual and the common good.”<sup>123</sup> The judiciary have found “as many as twenty ‘unenumerated’ personal rights” implicit in these features of Irish society,<sup>124</sup> including the right to bodily integrity,<sup>125</sup> the right to be reared with due regard to religious, moral, intellectual and physical welfare,<sup>126</sup> the right to marital privacy<sup>127</sup> and the right to earn a living,<sup>128</sup> among others. The novel application of the doctrine of unenumerated rights by the Irish judiciary remains “one of the most innovative features” of Irish Constitutional law.<sup>129</sup>

Bunreacht na hÉireann was created in 1937 and largely reflects the time and social context in which it was written. For example, Art. 42.1 acknowledges the “life of the women within the home.” The same can be said of the provisions regarding Children’s rights, which largely reflect a time “when children were seen and not heard.”<sup>130</sup> Indeed, while Art. 42.5 refers to the “natural and imprescriptible rights of the child,” Art. 41, which pertains to the family, contains no explicit reference to the child. The Irish Constitutional Review Group has interpreted this silence as meaning “that the rights of the family are effectively exercised by the parents and that the rights of children may not be given due weight within the family.”<sup>131</sup>

<sup>122</sup> See Brian Doolan, “Constitutional Law and Constitutional Right in Ireland,” Gill & MacMillan (Dublin, 1994), p. 156 - “[t]he courts have been inventive and flexible by interpreting the Constitution in such a way as to acknowledge the existence of other constitutional rights which are not expressly enumerated.”

<sup>123</sup> Mullally, Siobhán, “Searching for Foundations in Irish Constitutional Law,” The Irish Jurist, (1998) Vol. 33 Issue 1, p. 333.

<sup>124</sup> Ibid.

<sup>125</sup> See Ryan v. Attorney General [1965] I.R. 294.

<sup>126</sup> See G. v An Bord Uchtála [1980] IR 32.

<sup>127</sup> See McGee v Attorney General [1974] IR 284.

<sup>128</sup> See Murphy v Stewart [1973] IR 97.

<sup>129</sup> Brian Doolan, “Constitutional Law and Constitutional Right in Ireland,” Gill & MacMillan (Dublin, 1994), p. 156.

<sup>130</sup> Jewell, Lisa “Children's Rights - Interview with Jillian van Turnhout,” Woman's Way, November 21, 2011 - p. 30.

<sup>131</sup> Tenth Progress Report: The Family, The All-Party Oireachtas Committee on the Constitution, Dublin, Stationery Office, 2006 - p. 88

The child is, however, afforded the Fundamental Rights bestowed unto all citizens under the Constitution (Articles 40-44),<sup>132</sup> as well as those rights which have been unenumerated by the judiciary.<sup>133</sup> The child is gifted further fundamental rights by virtue of the right to life that every human being enjoys.<sup>134</sup> Nevertheless, there appears to be a consensus that the absence of an explicit provision on the rights that are unique and peculiar to a child's vulnerable status and way of life is having a negative effect on their welfare.<sup>135</sup> This has led to demands for the provision of a 'Bill of Rights' for children, within the Constitution.<sup>136 137</sup> This demand was addressed on Saturday, 10th November with the Children's Referendum, which inserted an amendment to the Constitution to provide legal protection for the natural and imprescriptible rights of all children.<sup>138</sup>

iii. Though the Irish judiciary has been labeled "unreceptive" in its efforts to implement international human rights instruments in the past,<sup>139</sup> Ireland's Higher and Supreme Court are Constitutionally-enabled to monitor the implementation of national and international human rights instruments. The High Court has full jurisdiction in all matters of law or fact; in both civil and criminal proceedings.<sup>140</sup> Its jurisdiction also extends to the question of the validity of any domestic law having regard to the Constitution and the international

<sup>132</sup> See The Constitution Review Group, "Report of the Constitution Review Group," Dublin, Stationery Office, 1996 - "A child is, of course, a person, and therefore the general constitutional rights shared by adults, such as the right to bodily integrity, will be protected elsewhere in the Constitution."

<sup>133</sup> See Re: Article 26 and the Adoption (No 2) Bill 1987 [1989] IR 656.

<sup>134</sup> See the judgment of Walsh J. in G. v. An Bord Uchtála [1980] IR 32. At p. 44; "The child's natural rights spring primarily from the natural right of every individual to life, to be reared and educated, to liberty, to work, to rest and recreation, to the practice of religion, and to follow his or her conscience. The right to life necessarily implies the right to be born, the right to preserve and defend (and have preserved and defended) that life, and the right to maintain that life at a proper human standard in matters of food, clothing and habitation."

<sup>135</sup> O'Brien, Carl, "Minister insists children's rights referendum to go ahead next year," The Irish Times - Monday, December 19, 2011.

<sup>136</sup> The Constitution Review Group, "Report of the Constitution Review Group," Dublin, Stationery Office, 1996 - "Article 41 should contain an express guarantee of those rights of a child which are not guaranteed elsewhere and are peculiar to children, such as the right to be reared with due regard for his or her welfare."

<sup>137</sup> The All-Party Oireachtas Committee on the Constitution, "Tenth Progress Report: The Family," Dublin, Stationery Office, (2006).

<sup>138</sup> www.childrensreferendum.ie 5th Nov 2012

<sup>139</sup> See Egan, Suzanne, "The European Convention on Human Rights Act 2003: A Missed Opportunity for Domestic Human Rights Litigation," Dublin University Law Journal (2003) 10(1) 230 - "For many years, the Irish courts were equally unreceptive to attempts by litigants to rely on the [ECHR] Convention's provisions in domestic proceedings."

<sup>140</sup> See Art. 34.3.1 of Bunreacht na hÉireann. "The Courts of First Instance shall include a High Court invested with full original jurisdiction in and power to determine all matters and questions whether of law or fact, civil or criminal."

agreements to which the State is a party.<sup>141</sup> Further, Art. 34.4.4 of Bunreacht na hÉireann provides that: “No law shall be enacted excepting from the appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court cases which involved questions as to the validity of any law having regard to the provisions of this Constitution.” This provision establishes the Supreme Court as the State’s Constitutional Court, as well as the “final and conclusive” arbiter in interpretation of the Irish Constitution.<sup>142</sup> Under Art. 34.4.4, the Higher and Supreme Courts are equipped with “a system of judicial review of legislation which confers on them far-reaching powers of review.”<sup>143</sup> Thus, if a citizen believes that an act of the legislature infringes upon the rights bestowed unto him/her by the Constitution (or an international human rights instrument), or is repugnant to the principles of the Constitution, that citizen may invoke his/her right directly before the Courts. If the Court is satisfied that the law in question infringes upon said right, the High and Supreme Courts have the power, under Art. 34.4.4, to declare that law invalid. Rights enshrined within national and international instruments are thereby buttressed by this “robust power” of the Irish Courts.<sup>144</sup>

Where a right has been violated or infringed upon, citizens are entitled to apply individually for relief from the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court can only hear appeals, however, as it does not have original jurisdiction the applicant must demonstrate that they have the sufficient legal standing, or locus standi, to bring proceedings before the Court. There must be evidence that the applicant will be directly affected/harmed by the law in question. The applicant may then contact a Solicitor who, in turn, will brief a Barrister who will prepare the relevant documents for the proceedings, though it is possible for a litigant to represent themselves in court. The State’s Attorney General must then be served notice of the intended proceedings. Under Art. 26.2.1, it is the Attorney General who will argue that the legislation in question does not infringe upon the principles of the Constitution. Finally, though the Supreme Court is the final authority on the Constitution under Art. 34.4.4, proceedings must be brought before the High Court in the first instance. Upon the High

---

<sup>141</sup> See Art. 34.3.2 of Bunreacht na hÉireann: “The jurisdiction of the High Court shall extend to the question of the validity of any law having regard to the provisions of this Constitution.”

<sup>142</sup> See Art. 34.4.6 of Bunreacht na hÉireann.

<sup>143</sup> McDermott, Paul A., & Murphy Mark W., “No Revolution: The Impact of the ECHR Act 2003 on Irish Criminal Law,” Dublin University Law Journal, Vol. 15, Issue 1, (2008) 1.

<sup>144</sup> See Egan, Suzanne, “The European Convention on Human Rights Act 2003: A Missed Opportunity for Domestic Human Rights Litigation,” Dublin University Law Journal (2003) 10(1) 230.

Court's judgment, an appeal may be lodged with the Supreme Court, whose decision is 'final and conclusive.'

iv. Criminal offences in Ireland are divided into two categories; summary offences and indictable offences. Summary offences are heard before the regional District Court; where the maximum sentence may not exceed 12 months. Indictable offences may also be brought before the District Court subject to the same stipulation. For the most part, however, indictable offences are heard before the Circuit Criminal Court, although some more serious criminal cases (like those involving murder, manslaughter and rape) are heard by the Central Criminal Court. There is also a Special Criminal Court, though this is usually only used for cases involving terrorism and major drug crimes. An appeal of the decision of these courts may be sought from the Court of Criminal Appeal, which is comprised of a Judge from the Supreme Court and two Judges from the High Court.<sup>145</sup>

No general right exists by which the decision of the Court of Criminal Appeal may be appealed to the Supreme Court. However, the Supreme Court may act as the Criminal Court of final appeal where the Attorney-General, or the Court of Criminal Appeal itself, determines that the case in question involves a point of law of exceptional public importance.<sup>146</sup> This provision is on certificate from the Attorney General or the CCA only and it may then be deemed necessary in the public interest to grant an appeal to the Supreme Court.

Criminal procedure in Ireland is governed by the presumption that the accused is innocent until proven guilty. Upon arrest, the suspect must be informed of the crime for which they are being arrested, unless the individual is arrested under sec. 30 of the Offences Against the State Act, 1939. While being detained by An Garda Síochána (the Irish police force), the suspect must be informed of their right to consult a Solicitor. When a suspect is charged with an offence, they first must make an appearance in the District Court, where they can make an application for bail unless the prosecution can show a reason as to why bail should be refused, e.g. if there's a risk of interference with evidence or witnesses, a risk of absconding or a risk of re-offending. There is a right to appeal if bail is refused. Under the

---

<sup>145</sup> Courts Service Website-
<http://www.courts.ie/courts.ie/Library3.nsf/pagecurrent/10646F81427562D480256DA9004139B7>
(Accessed 05/11/2012).

<sup>146</sup> S29 Courts of Justice act 1924

Criminal Justice (Legal Aid) Act, 1962, the accused is also entitled to free legal aid on the State's behalf where the means of the accused "are insufficient to enable him to obtain legal aid," or where "by reason of the gravity of the charge or of exceptional circumstances it is essential in the interests of justice that he should have legal aid in the preparation and conduct of his defence."<sup>147</sup> If a summary offence, it will proceed to the District Court or if indictable, to the Circuit Court.

v. Section 52 of the Children Act, 2001, as amended by s.129 of the Criminal Justice Act 2006, provides that the age of criminal responsibility is 12 years of age. Further, where a child under the age of 14 is charged with an offence, no proceedings may be initiated without the prior consent of the Director of Public Prosecutions (DPP). However, the age of criminal responsibility may be lowered to 10 years of age where the child has committed an act of murder, manslaughter, rape or aggravated sexual assault.

Statistics regarding the detention of children in Ireland are available from the Irish Youth Justice Service, the Irish Prisons Service and the Central Statistics Office. Sec. 3 of the Children's Act, 2001 defines a child as a person under the age of 18 years. While under the age of 18 years, there are two principal institutions in which a child may be detained: children detention schools and places of detention. Only boys under the age of 16 and girls under the age of 18 at the time of being committed by the Courts may be remanded in children's detention schools. As of 2007, "the proportion of children given detention as an outcome by the Courts has not shown any increase since 2004," when the child was detained in 18% of cases brought before the Courts.<sup>148</sup> In 2006, this figure dropped to 16.7%.<sup>149</sup> Furthermore, a downward trend in the number of children being detained at any one time emerged in 2007, "The average number detained fell from 134 in 2004 to 116 in 2007. The maximum of 154 children detained in 2004 has not been exceeded since."<sup>150</sup> Children between the ages of 16 and 18 are sent to places of detention instead of prison. There are two principal places of detention in Ireland; St. Patrick's Institution and the Children Detention Schools at Oberstown, Lusk, Co. Dublin. In April 2002 the Minister for Children and Youth Affairs, Ms. Frances Fitzgerald T.D., announced that they would be

---

<sup>147</sup> Criminal Justice (Legal Aid) Act, 1962, sec. 2.

<sup>148</sup> Irish Youth Justice Service, "Expert Group on Children Detention Schools - Final Report," December 2007 - p. 7.

<sup>149</sup> Ibid.

<sup>150</sup> Ibid.

ending the practice of detaining 16 and 17 year old boys in St. Patrick's Institution within a timeframe of 2 years by improving the facilities at Oberstown.<sup>151</sup> In 2011, 231 children were under the remit of the Irish Prisons Service, accounting for 1.6% of the imprisoned population.<sup>152</sup> This is a decrease from the 247 (2.5%) children under the remit of the Prisons Service in 2007 and the 242 (2.2%) in 2008.<sup>153</sup>

2 SUBSTANTIVE CRIMINAL LAW

2.1 Sexual Abuse

- i. Ireland ratified the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child in 1992,<sup>154</sup> hence under Article 19, engaging itself to protect children from sexual abuse., however, as the Convention has yet to be incorporated into domestic law, it cannot be relied upon in Irish law. Furthermore, under Directive 2011/93/EU, Ireland is committed to implement at least the minimum standard required by the European legislation. Article 3 of the instrument criminalises engaging in sexual activities with a child not having reached the age of sexual consent and causing it to witness sexual abuse and sexual activities. It also condemns certain behavior which causes a child to engage into sexual activities with a third party.<sup>155</sup> Finally, the Lanzarote Convention demands special protection for children who have not reached the legal age of sexual consent by criminalising those who enter into sexual activities with them,<sup>156</sup> although as already noted Ireland has not ratified this as of yet. Although the international instruments specify the minimum standard of behavior which should be criminalised, it is up to the States to define what constitutes sexual activities.

The Criminal Law (Sexual Offences) Act 2006 <sup>157</sup> is one of the major legal instrument specifying what constitutes sexual activities involving children under Irish Law. The 2006 Act deals with the sexual offences of defilement of a child under 15 years of age, and of

---

<sup>151</sup> Department of Children and Youth Affairs, "Child Detention Schools."- <http://www.dcy.gov.ie/viewdoc.asp?fn=/documents/YouthJustice/detentionmenu.htm&mn=irik&nID=6> (Accessed 05/11/12).

<sup>152</sup> Irish Prisons Service, "Age and Gender of persons committed to prison by year from 2007 to 2011." Available online at <http://www.irishprisons.ie/images/pdf/yearagegender.pdf>. Retrieved 7 August 2012.

<sup>153</sup> Ibid.

<sup>154</sup> <http://www2.ohchr.org/english/law/crc.htm> accessed 10 August 2012.

<sup>155</sup> <http://eur-lex.europa.eu/LexUriServ/LexUriServ.do?uri=CELEX:32001L0093:EN:HTML> accessed 10 August 2012.

<sup>156</sup> <http://conventions.coe.int/Treaty/EN/treaties/Html/201.htm> accessed 10 August 2012.

<sup>157</sup> <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/pdf/2006/en.act.2006.0015.pdf> accessed 10 August 2012. Hereafter referred to as 2006 Act.

defilement of a child under 17 years of age. Hence, it is one of the fundamental pieces of Irish legislation intended to protect children from sexual abuse. For the purposes of the Act, s.1 specifies that sexual activities are considered to be sexual intercourse or buggery between persons who are not married to each other and acts described in s.3(1) and s.4(1) of the Criminal Law (Rape) (Amendment) Act 1990.<sup>158</sup> The latter are respectively the offences of aggravated sexual assault, that is, a sexual assault involving serious violence or threat of it or is such as to cause injury, humiliation, degradation of a grave nature to the person assaulted, and rape. Although the 2006 Act distinguishes between categories of age, it makes no distinction as to whether the sexual offence is committed against a boy or a girl, thus according them equal protection.

Apart from the 2006 Act, there are further statutory instruments which render illicit certain sexual activities against children. More specifically, sexual assault against children under 15, that is, any form of sexual touching, is governed by the Criminal Law (Amendment) Act 1935<sup>159</sup> and the Criminal Law (Rape) (Amendment) Act 1990.<sup>160</sup>

Leahy<sup>161</sup> has criticised the fact that the definition of sexual activities under Irish legislation is not broad enough as it does not include for instance the act of inciting or forcing a child to arouse someone else. This is a major flaw in the legislation because causing a child to arouse another person may amount to a substantial proportion of the cases of sexual abuse as the SAVI Report suggests.<sup>162</sup> In fact, such complaint is not new. The Law Reform Commission Report on Child Sexual Abuse had proposed in 1990 to create an offence of child sexual abuse to replace the present offence of indecent assault. This new offence would have criminalised the touching of the body of a child for sexual gratification, the intentional masturbation in the presence of a child, the intentional exposure of sexual organs or performance of a sexual act in front of a child for the purpose of sexual gratification, and requiring, allowing or permitting a child to engage in prostitution or any other sexual act.<sup>163</sup> Unfortunately, this broader offence of child sexual abuse was not adopted by Irish

---

<sup>158</sup> <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/1990/en/act/pub/0032/index.html> accessed 10 August 2012.

<sup>159</sup> <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/1935/en/act/pub/0006/index.html> accessed 10 August 2012.

<sup>160</sup> Criminal Law (Rape) (Amendment) Act 1990, note 6.

<sup>161</sup> S Leahy, 'Hard Cases and Bad Law: An Overview of the Criminal Law (Sexual Offences) Act 2006' (2008) 26 ILT 38-45.

<sup>162</sup> H McGee and others, note 4.

<sup>163</sup> Law Reform Commission, 'Report on Child Sexual Abuse' (1990).

legislation. Despite this, in the Minister for Justice and Equality v Liam Dominic Adams,<sup>164</sup> the Court stated that even though s.246 of the Children Act 2001 concerning cruelty toward children did not apply in this case, it had the potential to encompass in subsequent cases behavior constituting sexual abuse. It further remarked that inducing a child to touch the offender for sexual gratification was included in the concept of sexual abuse, even if the offender did not use force or threats against the child. Thus, the offence of sexual abuse, although not expressly codified, is present in an implicit form under other statutory instruments. The Heads of the Children First Bill,<sup>165</sup> has adopted a broad definition of child sexual abuse in which the concept includes, among others, using a child for sexual gratification. This can encompass a broader range of sexual conduct than the expressly codified and it evidences the general consensus that the statutory considerations of what constitutes sexual activities are not exclusive. This Bill, concerning the duty to report child sexual abuse, however, is still only at the drafting stage but is expected over the coming months.<sup>166</sup>

- ii. Intention is a major component of the concept of mens rea, which determines whether a person is guilty of a crime by looking at his state of mind at the time of the offence. However, Irish law has only limitedly elaborated what is meant by intention. In fact, the word “intentional” is neither used in the 2006 Act, nor in the 1935 Act, nor in the Children First Bill 2012. The major Irish cases which have attempted to define the concept of intention deal with murder and capital murder. In both cases, that is People v Murray<sup>167</sup> and People v Douglas and Hayes,<sup>168</sup> the consensus is that intention is to mean willing the consequences of one's act, foresight of them not being enough to establish intention.

Although the word intention is not expressly used, intention to defile a child operates in the defence against the charge in the form of honest mistake as to age. If the offender can prove that he/she honestly mistook the age of the victim, then intention operates in the defence because it shows that the accused did not will to commit the sexual offence against a child. The 2006 Act codifies this defence and specifies that the Court shall consider the absence or

<sup>164</sup> The Minister for Justice and Equality v Liam Dominic Adams [2011] IEHC 366.

<sup>165</sup> http://www.dcy.gov.ie/documents/publications/CF\_Heads\_and\_General\_Scheme.pdf accessed 10 August 2012.

<sup>166</sup> Ibid.

<sup>167</sup> People v Murray [1997] IR 360.

<sup>168</sup> People v Douglas and Hayes [1985] ILRM 25.

presence of reasonable grounds for the defendant so believing.<sup>169</sup> Hence, because the defence contains the subjective element of honest mistake and the objective element of reasonable grounds for so holding, it can be argued that intention to defile a child comes halfway between willing the consequences of one's act, that is, to perform a sexual activity with a child, and foresight of the possibility that the partner may be a child. In the event that it is found that the defendant did not honestly mistake the age of the victim, the liability of his/her actions may be the full penalty for his/her offence.

- iii. In Ireland, the age of consent for penetrative sexual activities is placed at 17 years and for sexual activities which would constitute sexual assault at 15 years. Recently, there have been some parliamentary discussions on lowering the age of consent for penetrative sexual activities to 16.<sup>170</sup>

There are two provisions in the 2006 Act which intend to regulate consensual activities between minors and distinguish them from abusive sexual activities. Under s.3(9), no proceedings for the offence of defilement of a child under 17 but over 15 shall be brought against a child under 17 years except by, or with the consent of the Director of Public Prosecutions.<sup>171</sup> Furthermore, under s.3(10), a person who is convicted of an offence of defilement of a child under 17 but over 15 and who is not more 24 months older than the child under 17 with whom he/she attempted to engage in a sexual act with, shall not be subject to the provisions of the Sex Offenders Act 2001.<sup>172</sup> The two latter provisions are only available for the offence of defilement of a child under 17 but over 15, and not for defilement of a child under 15. There is a final provision, s.5 of the 2006 Act, which further regulates activities between minors. It holds that a girl under 17 will not be guilty of an offence under this Act by reason only of her engaging in an act of sexual intercourse.<sup>173</sup> This latter provision was adopted to avoid criminalising young girls who become pregnant as a result of the sexual intercourse. Despite this laudable aim, this section has generated a lot of controversy due to the difference in treatment it establishes between boys and girls, resulting in more protection from liability for girls. In fact, under the 2006 Act, a boy under 15 who engages in sexual intercourse with a girl under 15 could be found liable of the offence of

---

<sup>169</sup> Criminal Law (Sexual Offences) Act 2006, note 5.

<sup>170</sup> G Carbery, 'Proposals soon on age of consent', in Irish Times. 2012, viewed on 10 August 2012, <http://www.irishtimes.com/newspaper/ireland/2012/0601/1224317059529.html>.

<sup>171</sup> Criminal Law (Sexual Offences) 2006 Act, note 5.

<sup>172</sup> Ibid.

<sup>173</sup> Ibid.

defilement, while the girl would not face any charges, regardless of her part of responsibility in the commission of the act. Although s.5 of the 2006 Act has been challenged in M.D. (Minor) v Ireland AG & DPP<sup>174</sup> on the grounds that it breached Article 40.1 of the Constitution, the Supreme Court has preferred to uphold the High Court judgment, reasoning that a difference in treatment was justifiable here because girls were subject to more risks than boys when they engaged in sexual intercourse. Nonetheless, the Irish regulations of consensual activities between minors are still strongly criticised because teenagers exploring their sexuality can be as liable as paedophiles under the 2006 Act of an offence as the distinction between consensual and exploitative sexual activities is weak and depends in a large part on the discretion of the DPP.<sup>175</sup> To remedy these inadequacies, Leahy has, among others, proposed for a proximity provision according to which there should be a rebuttable presumption of innocence for under age sexual activities where there is no more than two years difference between the parties.<sup>176</sup> However, the former Director of Public Prosecutions, James Hamilton, has manifested his reticence for this type of measures as defilement can be used to prosecute cases involving rape and sexual assault,<sup>177</sup> which can happen between minors. In fact, the SAVI Report survey indicated that a quarter of the sexual abusers were 17 or younger.<sup>178</sup> Thus, given the widespread nature of the offence perpetrated by a minor and its seriousness, caution must be expressed in regards to provisions which could have the effect of weakening the protection afforded to children by making these offences harder to prosecute.

- iv. The Lanzarote Convention makes clear that States party to it should penalise sexual activities with a child where use is made of force, coercion, or threats, or where abuse is made of a particularly vulnerable position of the child, like a mental or physical disability or a situation of dependence.<sup>179</sup> Directive 2011/93/EU establishes a similar standard, and stresses at paragraph 22 that incapacities to not be taken advantage of include the influence of alcohol or drugs.<sup>180</sup> It further indicates that the protection from being taken advantage of,

---

<sup>174</sup> M.D. (Minor) v Ireland AG & DPP [2012] IESC 10.

<sup>175</sup> S Leahy, note 9.

<sup>176</sup> S Leahy, note 9.

<sup>177</sup> J Hamilton (DPP), 'Prosecutions under the Criminal Law (Sexual Offences) Act 2006' (2009).

<sup>178</sup> H McGee and others, note 4.

<sup>179</sup> Lanzarote Convention, note 3.

<sup>180</sup> Directive 2011/93/EU, note 2.

or having forced used upon, or being threatened, should apply to all children under 18 regardless of the age of consent, although the sanctions may vary relative to age.<sup>181</sup>

Section 3(1) of the Criminal Law (Rape) (Amendment) Act 1990<sup>182</sup> codifies the offence of aggravated sexual assault, which is an assault using force or threats. Furthermore, s.246 of the Children Act 2001<sup>183</sup> which deals with the offence of cruelty toward children, includes situations where a child would have force used upon or be threatened by any person who has custody, charge, or care of the child. In any event, the use of force or threats in sexual offences will be taken as an aggravating factor by the Courts.

It is to be remarked that although s.246 of the Children Act 2001 and s.176(2) of the Criminal Justice Act 2006 protect children under 18, s.3(1) of the Criminal Law (Rape) (Amendment) Act 1990 as referenced in the 2006 Act contains no express provision for children which are above the age of consent, but are not yet adults. This legal lacuna has the potential to provide less protection to children in that year gap because they will not be considered children for the purposes of that offence. Thus, the standard is lower than the one required by the European Directive.

Section 5 of the Criminal Law (Sexual Offences) Act 1993<sup>184</sup> establishes the offence of attempting/having sexual intercourse/buggery with a person who is mentally impaired and condemns gross indecency between males when one of them has a mental disability. For the purpose of this provision, mentally impaired is to mean suffering from a disorder of the mind, whether a handicap or an illness, which renders a person incapable of living an independent life or being able to protect itself from exploitation.<sup>185</sup> More specifically, the criminal provisions regarding sexual offences which involve taking advantage of a disability only concern disabilities of the mind. There is no codification for sexual offences involving taking advantage of a physical disability or a situation of dependence. Equally, there are no specific provisions concerning taking advantage from a child under the influence of alcohol or drugs. Thus, the Irish legal standard is lower than the one established by the international obligations. Nonetheless, the Criminal Justice (Withholding of Information on Offences

---

<sup>181</sup> Ibid.

<sup>182</sup> Criminal Law (Rape) (Amendment) Act 1990, note 6.

<sup>183</sup> <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/2001/en/act/pub/0024/index.html> accessed 10 August 2012.

<sup>184</sup> <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/1993/en/act/pub/0020/index.html> accessed 10 August 2012.

<sup>185</sup> Ibid.

Against Children and Vulnerable Persons) Act 2012<sup>186</sup> includes in disabilities enduring physical impairment, indicating that the general consensus is that disabilities can be both mental and physical. This may lead to some new provisions further protecting individuals with a physical disability from sexual offences.

Finally, it is to be remarked that the provisions concerning sexual activities with people with a disability only encompass a minimal range of sexual acts. For instance, there are no specific provisions dealing with sexual assault against a person with a disability. This substantially diminishes the protection of the vulnerable.

- v. The Punishment of Incest Act 1908<sup>187</sup> defines the concept of incest as a sexual intercourse between two close relatives, that is, between the person's grandparent, parent, or sibling and that said person. Although sexual assault and other types of sexual abuse by relatives are not included in the concept of incest, they can nonetheless be sanctioned through the sections concerning sexual activities between children and persons in authority. Similarly, stepparents and foster care parents are not encompassed by the term close relatives. Nonetheless, they face liability through the provisions on sexual activities between children and persons in authority.

Males can be found guilty of the crime of incest from the time they have reached the age of criminal responsibility, that is, under s.129 of the Criminal Justice Act 2006,<sup>188</sup> 12, and in cases of rape and aggravated sexual assault, 10 or 11. On the other hand, females cannot be guilty of the crime of incest till they have reached 16.<sup>189</sup> This means that in cases of incest between minors under 16, only the male will be found guilty of this offence, thus providing more security from liability for a female.

- vi. Although Ireland is not yet bound by the section of The Lanzarote Convention that mentions that there should be adequate provisions to protect children from sexual abuse by persons in authority, trust, or influence,<sup>190</sup> it is bound by a similar provision in Directive 2011/93/EU, which sets the minimum standard to penalise persons in authority, trust, or <sup>186</sup> <http://www.oireachtas.ie/documents/bills28/bills/2012/3212/b3212s.pdf> accessed 10 August 2012.

---

<sup>187</sup> Punishment of Incest Act 1908, section 1.

<sup>188</sup> Criminal Justice Act 2006, note 32.

<sup>189</sup> Punishment of Incest Act 1908, note 36.

<sup>190</sup> Lanzarote Convention, note 3.

influence who engage in sexual activities with a child under the age of consent and over in Article 3(5)(i).<sup>191</sup>

The SAVI Report outlined that of the persons who were asked in the national survey, 22,1% of males and 16,3 % of females had suffered from sexual abuse committed by a person in authority not belonging to the family, which includes babysitters, religious ministers, teachers, coaches and other figures, and 7,3% of males and 20,7% of females had been sexually abused by a figure of authority within the family, that is, biological parents, stepparents, grandparents, uncles, and brothers).<sup>192</sup>

The 2006 Act defines person in authority as a parent, stepparent, guardian, uncle, aunt, or grandparent of the victim, or any person who is for the time being in loco parentis to the victim, or any person who is for the time being responsible for the education, supervision, or welfare of the victim.<sup>193</sup> However, this provision only applies to children under 17, leaving children between 17 and 18 without special protection.

On the other hand, s.246 of the Children Act 2001, which creates the offence of cruelty toward children under 18, criminalises persons in care, custody or charge of the child who assault or ill-treat the child.<sup>194</sup> Consequently, the child is specially protected from persons in authority for sexual activities such as inciting the child to arouse someone or acts which amount to sexual assault, thus meeting the standard imposed by the Directive. Notwithstanding this substantial protection, s.249 of the Children Act 2001 will only condemn those persons having the custody, charge or care of the child who cause or encourage sexual intercourse, buggery or sexual assault on a child if it is under 17.<sup>195</sup> However, it is to be considered whether this provision should not apply to all children till 18 given the substantial influence that a person in custody of a child has over it, vitiating the consent of the child in respect of the sexual activity. In fact, the Directive provides for a penalty for a person who can cause through threats, force, or coercion sexual activities between a child and a third party, regardless of the age of consent of the child. Nonetheless, the potential negative impacts of s.249 of the Children Act 2001 may be contained by s.176 of the Criminal Justice Act 2006 whereby a person can be found guilty of reckless

---

<sup>191</sup> Directive 2011/93/EU, note 2.

<sup>192</sup> H McGee and others, note 4.

<sup>193</sup> Criminal Law (Sexual Offences) Act 2006, note 5.

<sup>194</sup> Children Act 2001, note 31.

<sup>195</sup> Ibid.

endangerment of a child under 18 if he/she has caused any child to be placed or left in a situation involving a substantial risk of sexual abuse for the child, or if he/she has not taken reasonable steps to protect the child from that risk.<sup>196</sup>

There are two further upcoming sets of regulations, relevant under this section, which relate to the obligations of organisations where children attend without their parents and clarify the responsibilities of the community at large. These provisions will create new offences for persons involved in educational settings, care and justice institutions, and in the workplace and the community and who fail to disclose information related to child abuse. More specifically, under the Children First Bill 2012,<sup>197</sup> any organisation where children under 18 attend without their parents will have to report any concerns on child abuse. This duty is extended to the community at large with the Criminal Justice (Withholding Information Against Children and Vulnerable Adults) Act 2012 whereby a person can be guilty of an offence if he/she fails to disclose to the Garda his/her knowledge or belief about a sexual offence committed against a child under 18 and does not provide information which may be important to the apprehension, prosecution, and conviction of the perpetrator.<sup>198</sup> Since children are much less likely to report that they have been sexually abused than adults,<sup>199</sup> both the Bill and the Act are expected to reinforce the protection of children against sexual offences and to ameliorate the apprehension and prosecution of sexual abusers.

2.2 Child Prostitution

- vii. Ireland signed the Convention on Action against Human Trafficking (the Warsaw Convention) on the 13th of April 2007, ratified the Convention on the 13th of July 2010 and entered it into force on the 1st of November 2010. This was done by enacting the Criminal Law (Human Trafficking) Act 2008.<sup>200</sup> This Act ensures the complete transposition of the Convention into domestic Irish law.

- viii. Child prostitution is defined in Article 19(2) of the Lanzarote Convention as:

---

<sup>196</sup> Criminal Justice Act 2006, note 32.

<sup>197</sup> Children First Bill 2012, note 14.

<sup>198</sup> Criminal Justice (Withholding of Information Against Children and Vulnerable Adults) Bill 2012, note 35.

<sup>199</sup> H McGee and others, note 4.

<sup>200</sup> <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/2008/en/act/pub/0008/index.html> [accessed 19/07/12]

the fact of using a child for sexual activities where money or any other form of remuneration or consideration is given or promised as payment, regardless if this payment, promise or consideration is made to the child or to a third person.<sup>201</sup>

The Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography to the Convention on the Rights of the Child<sup>202</sup> states that child prostitution is the practice whereby a child sells his or her body for sexual activities in return for remuneration or any other form of consideration. The remuneration or other consideration could be provided to the prostitute or to another person. The countries who are parties to the Optional Protocol undertake to prohibit child prostitution.

In Ireland it is not an offence to sell sex and there is no legal definition for ‘prostitution’, although related behaviour such as soliciting and loitering are criminalised.<sup>203</sup> The rationale regarding criminal legislation and prostitution in Ireland is the protection of society from a nuisance and to protect prostitutes from exploitation.<sup>204</sup> It was not until 1997 that legislation was produced to criminalise prostitution, specifically child prostitution.<sup>205</sup> The Children Act 1997 was amended by the Criminal Law (Sexual Offences) (Amendment) Act 2007<sup>206</sup> which was put in place to specifically address the issue of child prostitution. However, neither Act offers a definition for ‘prostitution’. The offence of prostitution is also mentioned amid the definition of sexual exploitation contained in the Child Trafficking and Pornography Act 1998<sup>207</sup> and in the Criminal Law (Human Trafficking) Act 2008<sup>208</sup>, yet not defined.

The definition of ‘prostitution’ in Ireland is not compatible with the definition provided by the Lanzarote Convention, in fact, Ireland does not define ‘prostitution’. The author notes that Ireland, when ratifying the Warsaw Convention, completed the legislative process within 12 months. The legislation was entered into force within 3 years from the time of

---

<sup>201</sup> <http://conventions.coe.int/Treaty/EN/treaties/Html/201.htm> [accessed 19/07/12]

<sup>202</sup> <http://www2.ohchr.org/english/law/crc-sale.htm> [accessed 19/07/12]

<sup>203</sup> The Criminal Law (Sexual Offences) Act 1993

<sup>204</sup> <http://cdn.thejournal.ie/media/2012/06/Discussion-Document-on-Future-Direction-of-Prostitution-Legislation.pdf> [accessed 17/07/12]

<sup>205</sup> Children Act 1997 available at:

<http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/1997/en/act/pub/0040/index.html> [accessed 19/07/12]

<sup>206</sup> <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/2007/en/act/pub/0006/index.html> [accessed 19/07/12]

<sup>207</sup> <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/1998/en/act/pub/0022/index.html> [accessed 24/07/12]

<sup>208</sup> <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/2008/en/act/pub/0008/index.html> [accessed 19/07/12]

signature. One must, therefore, question Ireland's inability to ratify other Conventions, most notably the Lanzarote Convention, which was signed in the same year.

The UN Committee on the Rights of the Child expressed concerns at the lack of information concerning child victims of prostitution and child pornography in Ireland.<sup>209</sup> However, a 2007 study found that half of the 22 Dublin women interviewed were less than 18 years of age when they first became involved in prostitution<sup>210</sup>. There are a handful of legislative provisions regarding child prostitution in the Irish statute books however there is no legislative definition of the term 'prostitution'.

ix. The Child Trafficking and Pornography Act 1998 is the earliest Act to include the offence of child prostitution in Ireland. However, the offence falls under the heading of sexual exploitation as opposed to an act in itself. Section 3(3) of the Act defines sexual exploitation as:

- a) Inducing or coercing a child to engage in prostitution or the production of child pornography
- b) Using the child for prostitution or the production of child pornography
- c) Inducing or coercing the child to participate in any sexual activity which is an offence under any enactment
- d) The commission of any such offence against the child<sup>211</sup>

This Act (amended by the Criminal Law (Human Trafficking) Act 2008<sup>212</sup>) creates two offences relating to child sexual exploitation in section 3. The first offence is that of knowingly facilitating the trafficking of a child or housing a trafficked child for the purpose of sexual exploitation. We can see that this offence places liability on the recruiter.

The second offence under this Act criminalises, among other offences, the use of a trafficked child for the purpose of sexual exploitation. This offence places liability on the user of the service. A person who causes either of these offences will also be liable under the Act.

---

<sup>209</sup> UN Committee on the Rights of the Child (CRC), UN Committee on the Rights of the Child: Concluding Observations: Ireland, 4 February 1998, CRC/C/15/Add.85, available at: <http://www.unhcr.org/refworld/docid/3ae6aec924.html> [accessed 09/07/12]

<sup>210</sup> Quinlan Cooke, Siobhan (2007) Prostitution in Dublin, presentation at Children's Acts Advisory Board conference 23rd October 2007

<sup>211</sup> <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/1998/en/act/pub/0022/index.html> [accessed 19/07/12]

<sup>212</sup> <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/2008/en/act/pub/0008/index.html> [accessed 24/07/12]

The UN Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Prostitution and Child Pornography 2000 was signed by Ireland in the same year. This Protocol obliges the State to criminalise the ‘offering, obtaining, procuring or providing a child for child prostitution.’<sup>213</sup> Prostitution is defined by the Protocol as the ‘use of a child in a sexual activity for remuneration or any other form of consideration’.<sup>214</sup> Ireland has not, at the time of writing, ratified this Protocol.

Section 249(1) of the Childrens Act 2001 creates an offence of causing or encouraging unlawful sexual intercourse or buggery with the child or the sexual seduction or prostitution of or sexual assault on the child by a person who has custody, charge or care of the child.<sup>215</sup> For the purposes of this Act any person who is the parent or guardian of a child shall be presumed to have the custody of the child, any person to whose charge a child is committed by any person who has the custody of the child shall be presumed to have charge of the child, and any person exercising authority over or having actual control of a child shall be presumed to have care of the child

The 2001 Act also creates the offence of soliciting a minor, whether or not for the purpose of prostitution.<sup>216</sup> The offence of solicitation is defined under the Criminal Law (Sexual Offences) Act 1993<sup>217</sup> as:

- a) Offering his or her services as a prostitute to another person,
- b) Soliciting or importuning another person for the purpose of obtaining that other person’s services as a prostitute, or
- c) Soliciting or importuning another person on behalf of a person for the purposes of prostitution.

All parties to the offence of prostitution may be found guilty of an offence under this section. This may be the prostitute themselves the recruiter for sole use (user) or the recruiter for a third party (recruiter).

Until a Supreme Court judgment in 2006, the issue of child prostitution (specifically of girls under 15) was also legislated against, though not expressly, under the umbrella of statutory rape. Statutory rape was an offence under s1(1) of the Criminal Law (Amendment) Act

---

<sup>213</sup> <http://www2.ohchr.org/english/law/crc-sale.htm> [accessed 19/07/12]

<sup>214</sup> <http://www2.ohchr.org/english/law/crc-sale.htm> [accessed 19/07/12]

<sup>215</sup> <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/2001/en/act/pub/0024/index.html> [accessed 19/07/12]

<sup>216</sup> <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/2001/en/act/pub/0024/index.html> [accessed 19/07/12]

<sup>217</sup> <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/1993/en/act/pub/0020/index.html> [accessed 23/07/12]

1935. The terms of s.1(1) of the 1935 Act were as follows, “Any person who unlawfully and carnally knows any girl under the age of fifteen years shall be guilty of a felony”.<sup>218</sup> The rationale behind this was the idea that a girl under the age of 15 did not have the capacity to consent to this act. However, in the case of CC v Ireland & Others<sup>219</sup>, C.C. (‘the applicant’) was charged with four offences under s1 of the Act 1935. He admitted having consensual intercourse with the person named in the charges. However, she had told him that she was sixteen years of age and initiated the contact. The applicant sought relief by way of judicial review. CC argued that:

- a) A declaration that a reasonable belief on the part of a defendant that the alleged injured party was over the statutory age constituted a defence to a charge under s.1(1) of the Act.
- b) A declaration, in the alternative, that the exclusion of the defence of mistake as to age is repugnant to the Constitution and that if the offence created by s.1(1) of the Act of 1935 is an offence of strict liability, that provision is inconsistent with the Constitution.

The Supreme Court allowed the appeal and granted a declaration that s.1(1) of the Criminal Law (Amendment) Act 1935 was inconsistent with the provisions of the Constitution. Thus, the Supreme Court abolished the strict liability offence of statutory rape. As a result of this judgment the Joint Oireachtas Committee on Child Protection was set up to review the law surrounding the case. The result of this was the Criminal Law (Sexual Offences) Act 2006 which creates a new defence of reasonable belief to the offence of defilement of a child under 15 as follows:

It shall be a defence to proceedings for an offence under this section for the defendant to prove that he or she honestly believed that, at the time of the alleged commission of the offence, the child against whom the offence is alleged to have been committed had attained the age of 15 years ... the court shall have regard to the presence or absence of reasonable grounds for the defendant's so believing and all other relevant circumstances.<sup>220</sup>

---

<sup>218</sup> <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/1935/en/act/pub/0006/index.html> [accessed 23/07/12] The distinction between felonies and other crimes has been abolished by s.3(1) of the Criminal Law Act, 1997, which can be found at <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/1997/en/act/pub/0014/index.html> [accessed 23/07/12]

<sup>219</sup> [2006] IESC 33

The 2006 Act creates two offences relating to the act of sexual intercourse or buggery to children. First, it is an offence to engage or attempt to engage in a sexual act with a child under 15 years of age. As discussed above, the defence of reasonable belief applies to this offence. This offence places criminal liability on the user of the service, not the recruiter.

The second offence created by this section applies to those who engage or attempt to engage in a sexual act with a child under 17 years of age. This offence again criminalises the user of the service and not the recruiter. The severity of the liability is dependent on whether the person merely attempted the sexual act or actually committed the sexual act. It should be noted that a female under the age of 17 will not be found guilty under this Act for engaging in an act of sexual intercourse only.

Section 176 of the Criminal Justice Act 2006<sup>221</sup> also creates an offence to cause or permit any child to be placed or left in a situation which creates a substantial risk to the child of being a victim of serious harm or sexual abuse, or to fail to take reasonable steps to protect the child from such a risk while knowing that the child is in such a situation. This offence places liability on the recruiter. The Criminal Law (Sexual Offences) (Amendment) Act 2007<sup>222</sup> also creates the offence of meeting a child for the purpose of sexual exploitation.

2.3 Child Pornography

Child Pornography in General:

- x. Ireland signed the Budapest Treaty on the 28th of February 2002, but has yet to ratify it.<sup>223</sup> As of the 24-9-12 Ireland has not ratified the convention, Irish computer law is being updated with the suggestion by Paul C Dwyer that the convention being close to ratification.<sup>224</sup>

---

<sup>220</sup> <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/2006/en/act/pub/0015/print.html> [accessed 19/07/12]

<sup>221</sup> <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/2006/en/act/pub/0026/index.html> [accessed 24/07/12]

<sup>222</sup> <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/2007/en/act/pub/0006/sec0006.html#sec6> [accessed 24/07/12]

<sup>223</sup> <http://conventions.coe.int/Treaty/Commun/ChercheSig.asp?NT=185&CL=ENG> Accessed on 24-09-2012

<sup>224</sup> <http://www.icctf.org/blogs/2/6/computer-crime-legislation-in-ir?PHPSESSID=28ac8f6e095115194efa2e590f3c4c28>

xi. Article 20(2) of the Lanzarote Convention defines “child pornography” as any material depicting children in real or simulated explicit sexual conduct, or any depiction of sexual organs for sexual purposes. The Child Trafficking and Pornography Act, 1998, Section 2 defines the child as any person under the age of 17. This is compatible with Article 18 (2) of the Convention. Child Pornography is defined in Section 2 (a)(1) of the Act as any visual representation of a child engaged in explicit sexual activity and (a)(2) any depiction of the genital or anal region of the child for sexual purposes. Section 2 (b) includes audio representation as child pornography, while section 2 (d) also accounts for any representation, description or information produced by computer-graphics or electronic or mechanical means which imply a child is available for the purpose of sexual exploitation.<sup>225</sup> Therefore, the national legislation is compatible with the Lanzarote Convention as it clearly prohibits all forms of Child Pornography as indicated in the Convention.

xii. The Lanzarote Convention Article 20(1.a) to (1.f) requires the state to criminalize, the production, offer, distribution and transmission, procuring of child pornography and the knowledgeable access to child pornography.

The Child Trafficking and Pornography Act, 1998 criminalises the organisation and facilitation of sexual exploitation of children, which Section 3 (a-b) includes the production of child pornography. Section 5 of the act criminalizes any person who knowingly engages in the production, distribution, publication, import or export, advertisement or possession of child pornography.

Therefore, it is concluded that the national legislation is sufficiently thorough and is compatible with the level of criminalization required by the convention.

xiii. Ireland signed the convention on the 25th of October 2007, but to date has not ratified the convention.<sup>226</sup> Therefore as the state has not ratified the convention no known reservations are yet to be made. However, given the extent of the protection in The Child Trafficking and Pornography Act, 1998, it would seem unlikely for such reservations to be made to the production and possession of pornographic material, Article 20(3) or knowingly accessing child porn, Article 20(4).

---

<sup>225</sup> <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/1998/en/act/pub/0022/print.html#sec1>

<sup>226</sup> <http://conventions.coe.int/Treaty/Commun/ChercheSig.asp?NT=201&CM=1&DF=&CL=ENG>

The Act, however in Section 6(2)(a) allows for the possession of child pornography for the censorship of films, publications and video recordings. Section 6(2)(b) allows for the possession of child pornography for the prevention, investigation and prosecution of offenses under the Act. Section 6(3) allows for the possession of child pornography for bona fide research.<sup>227</sup> Therefore, it could be predicted that such reservations may be made upon ratification of the Convention.

The control mechanisms for pornographic material are largely a self-regulating framework where internet service providers operating within the state are obliged to remove pornographic materials. Any user may report such content to Garda Síochána via their hotline address<sup>228</sup>. If the material is outside the jurisdiction it is notified to the hotline in that jurisdiction or their relevant enforcement agencies, which aims to remove all illegal content.<sup>229</sup>

Participation of a Child in Pornographic Performances:

- xiv. The Child Trafficking and Pornography Act, 1998, Section 4 (1) criminalizes any person who has custody, care or charge of a child and allows the child be used for pornographic purposes. Therefore, the participation of children in pornography is criminalized.

Section 3 (3) defines sexual exploitation as inducing or coercing the child to engage in the prohibited activity, there is no differentiation between coercing and recruitment. “Recruitment” is not explicably mentioned in the Act.

The attendance of pornographic performances involving children is prohibited, Section 2 (a)(2) defines child pornography as to include, “a person who is depicted as being a child and who is or is depicted as witnessing any such activity.”

The State is not a party to the convention, it would be predicted no reservation would be made to limit the application of Article 21 1.c.

---

<sup>227</sup> <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/1998/en/act/pub/0022/print.html#sec1>

<sup>228</sup> www.hotline.ie

<sup>229</sup> Speech by Alan Shatter, T.D., Minister for Justice, Equality and Defence at the Seanad Private Members Motion On Child Abuse Material on the Internet - Wednesday 29 February 2012
<http://www.justice.ie/en/JELR/Pages/SP12000038>

2.4 Corruption of Children

- xv. The definition from the Lanzarote Convention states under Article 22, which deals with corruption of children, that each Party shall take the necessary legislative or other measures to criminalise the intentional causing, for sexual purposes, of a child who has not reached the age set in application of Article 18, paragraph 2, to witness sexual abuse or sexual activities, even without having to participate.

There is no specific offence in law of child sex abuse, particularly in relation to the intentional causing of a child to witness sexual abuse or sexual activities. However a person may be charged with rape, sexual assault, aggravated sexual assault or with one of the specific offences relating to children. There are specific statutory instruments which deal with issue of protection of children in relation to sexual abuse, such as the Children's Act 2001,<sup>230</sup> Criminal Law (Sex Offences) Act 2006,<sup>231</sup> Criminal Justice Act 2006,<sup>232</sup> and the Child Trafficking and Pornography Act 1998.<sup>233</sup>

The first question which inquires as to whether the State criminalizes the intentional causing of a child to witness sexual abuse or sexual activities, without necessarily having to participate, can be dealt with in the provisions surrounding reckless endangerment and also having a child in a brothel.

The Criminal Justice Act 2006 provides for a new offence of reckless endangerment of children. This came into effect on 1 August 2006. Section 176 (2) states that 'a person, having authority or control over a child or abuser, who intentionally or recklessly endangers a child by:

- (a) causing or permitting any child to be placed or left in a situation which creates a substantial risk to the child of being a victim of serious harm or sexual abuse, or
- (b) failing to take reasonable steps to protect a child from such a risk while knowing that the child is in such a situation is guilty of an offence.<sup>234</sup>

---

<sup>230</sup> <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/2001/en/act/pub/0024/index.html> accessed 23/07/2012

<sup>231</sup> <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/2006/en/act/pub/0015/index.html> accessed 23/07/2012

<sup>232</sup> <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/2006/en/act/pub/0026/index.html> accessed 23/07/2012

<sup>233</sup> <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/1998/en/act/pub/0022/index.html> accessed 23/07/2012

<sup>234</sup> <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/2006/en/act/pub/0026/sec0176.html> accessed 23/07/12

This offence may be committed by a person who has authority or control over a child or an abuser and who intentionally or recklessly endangers a child by:

- Causing or permitting any child to be placed or left in a situation which creates a substantial risk to the child of being a victim of serious harm or sexual abuse or
- Failing to take reasonable steps to protect a child from such a risk while knowing that the child is in such a situation.<sup>235</sup>
- The Children's Act 2001 deals with the offence of causing or encouraging a sexual offence upon a child. Section 249 states that 'A person is guilty of an offence if, having the custody, charge or care of a child, he or she causes or encourages unlawful sexual intercourse or buggery with the child or causes or encourages the seduction or prostitution of, or a sexual assault on, the child.'<sup>236</sup>
- The legislation clarifies that a person shall be deemed to have caused or encouraged, unlawful sexual intercourse or buggery with any child, or the seduction or prostitution of a child who has been seduced or become a prostitute or a sexual assault on a child who has been sexually assaulted, if the person has knowingly allowed the child to consort with, or to enter or continue in the employment of, any prostitute or keeper of a brothel. It is ambiguous as to whether in knowingly allowing the child to be sexually assaulted or consorting with the sex trade, specifically involves forcing, inducement, and promise, however it is clear that the key element in causing is the knowledge.

Section 248 of the Children Act 2001 deals with the issue of allowing a child (under 18 years of age) to be in a brothel. This legislation is not gender specific. The power of Arrest is under Section 254 Children Act 2001 (also includes power of search of premises for purpose of arrest); however there is no power of detention for proper investigation of offence.<sup>237</sup>

The definition of 'causing' seems to have a wider scope than just child sex abuse legislation alone and can be predominantly identified in criminal legislation. Causing or encouraging sexual offence upon child (less than 17 years of age) is governed by Section 249 of the Children Act 2001. It states that a person having custody, charge, care of a child causes or

---

<sup>235</sup> ibid

<sup>236</sup> <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/2001/en/act/pub/0024/sec0249.html> accessed 23/07/12

<sup>237</sup> Garda Síochána Policy on the Investigation of Sexual Crimes against Children Child Welfare 2010

encourages sexual intercourse or buggery, seduction of a child, prostitution of a child, or sexual Assault on a child, is deemed to be causing or encouraging where sexual intercourse, buggery, seduction, prostitution or sexual assault has taken place and offender knowingly allows child to consort with or enter/continue employment with a prostitute or keeper of a brothel. This offence is not gender specific (except for sexual intercourse – female victim).<sup>238</sup> Section 249 of the Children Act 2001 deems it to be an offence for a person in a position of authority to a child to knowingly cause or encourage that child to engage in sexual activities. Ireland therefore, has taken the necessary legislative or other measures to criminalise the intentional causing, for sexual purposes, of a child who has not reached the age set in application of Article 18, paragraph 2, to witness sexual abuse or sexual activities. However there may be discrepancies in this legislation with Article 22 which also includes measures to protect those who have only witnessed these events.

Similar discrepancies require clarification as to what is meant by; Procuring Defilement by Threats, Intimidation or False Pretences as governed by Section 3 Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885 as amended (sub-section (3) repealed by section 31 Non-Fatal Offences Against the Person Act from 19th August, 1997). This entails procuring a woman or girl for unlawful carnal connection by threats, intimidation or false pretences.<sup>239</sup>

Soliciting or Importuning for Purpose of Committing a Sexual Offence is governed by Section 6, Criminal Law (Sexual Offences) Act, 1993 as amended. It states that it is an offence to solicit or importune persons for purpose of committing sexual offences below:

- Buggery with persons under 17 years
- Gross Indecency with male under 17 years
- Defilement of girl under 15 years
- Defilement of girl under age of 17 years
- Defilement of child under 17 years
- Defilement of child under 15 years
- Sexual Assault of child (under 17 years of age)
- Person who is mentally impaired for purpose of sexual intercourse, buggery, gross indecency (with male)

---

<sup>238</sup> Garda Síochána Policy on the Investigation of Sexual Crimes against Children Child Welfare 2010

<sup>239</sup> Garda Síochána Policy on the Investigation of Sexual Crimes against Children Child Welfare 2010

This offence is not gender specific as it depends on the intended offence. It is unclear as to how these offences might be caused and whether causing is inclusive of forcing, inducement and promise.

All of the above legislation indicates that the State does criminalize the intentional causing of a child to witness sexual abuse or sexual activities however there is no specific offence that involves the sexual abuse of a child without that child necessarily having to participate. The reckless endangerment offence indicates that there is an attempt to protect children in situations where they themselves may not actually be involved however this is somewhat ambiguous.

2.5 Solicitation of Children for Sexual Purposes

- xvi. The digital age has presented a huge danger to the protection of the children from sexual violence. According to Barnardos, 1 in 10 children who met up with someone they had met online have been abused by that person, who were all adults that portrayed themselves as a child in their previous communications on the internet.<sup>240</sup>

The Criminal Law (Sexual Offences) (Amendment) Act 2007, section 6 makes it an offence to intentionally meet or to travel to meet a child for the purpose of sexually exploiting them after “having met or communicated with that child on 2 or more previous occasions”.<sup>241</sup> To date, however, there is no specific offence of grooming in Irish law, taking into consideration the new communication technologies that often facilitate such actions.<sup>242</sup>

- xvii. The Criminal Law (Sexual Offences) Act 2006 criminalises attempting to commit a sexual offence with a minor, as well as committing the act itself.<sup>243</sup> A distinct offence of aiding and abetting is not specified in Irish legislation, however, a number of other provisions do exist on the statute book that criminalise offences akin to aiding and abetting. The Criminal Justice (Withholding of Information on Offences against Children and Vulnerable Persons) Act 2012 creates an offence if:

<sup>240</sup> Barnardos, “Children and Homelessness: Information Sheet,” February 2008, p2. Available at: http://www.barnardos.ie/assets/files/publications/free/ADVO\_homelessness.pdf.

<sup>241</sup> The Criminal Law (Sexual Offences) (Amendment) Act 2007, section 6.

<sup>242</sup> Barnardos, “Paper on Child Prostitution,” July 2010. Available at: <http://www.google.ie/url?sa=t&rct=j&q=&esrc=s&source=web&cd=5&ved=0CDgQFjAE&url=http%3A%2F%2Fwww.barnardos.ie%2Fassets%2Ffiles%2Fcampaigns%2Fchild-abuse%2FBarnardos%2520paper%2520on%2520child%2520prostitution.doc&ei=NtmbUKDwL8-ThgfdS4HQA&usg=AFQjCNGxTtPIdycdf2wrkqwZXnDOPympEQ>.

<sup>243</sup> Criminal Law Sexual Offences) Act 2006, section 2(2).

(a) He or she knows or believes that an offence, that is an arrestable offence, has been committed by another person against a child, and

(b) he or she has information which he or she knows or believes might be of material assistance in securing the apprehension, prosecution or conviction of that other person for that offence, and fails without reasonable excuse to disclose that information as soon as it is practicable to do so to a member of the Garda Síochána.<sup>244</sup>

It is hoped that this procedure will help the Gardaí and HSE with the investigation and prosecution of child sexual abuse and promote the welfare of the child.

Similarly, s.176(2) of the Criminal Justice Act 2006<sup>245</sup> creates the offence of reckless endangerment of a child whereby a person in authority or control of a child can be found guilty of an offence if he/she causes or permits the child to be in a situation with a risk of serious harm or sexual abuse or fails to take steps to protect the child from this situation he/she knows the child is in.

2.6 Corporate Liability

xviii. The area of corporate liability is complex and multi-faceted. Broadly speaking Irish law can hold moral and legal persons or entities such as commercial companies and associations liable when an action has been performed on their behalf by a person in a position in their entity. Leading persons in certain circumstances are held liable for general acts of the company or association while regular employees are liable for their individual acts that breach their duty of care.

In relation to child abuse the most likely institutions to be involved in cases of corporate liability are schools, hospitals and churches as within these institutions employees are in positions of authority over children.<sup>246</sup> It is these institutions that owe children a duty of care, breach of such a duty is the foundation of a cause of action for corporate liability.<sup>247</sup>

---

<sup>244</sup> The Criminal Justice (Withholding of Information on Offences against Children and Vulnerable Persons) Bill 2012, available at <http://www.oireachtas.ie/documents/bills28/bills/2012/3212/b3212s.pdf> [accessed 03/08/12]

<sup>245</sup> <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/2006/en/act/pub/0026/index.html> accessed 10 August 2012.

<sup>246</sup> Jessica Lynch 1992, A Matter of Trust: Institutional Employer Liability for Acts of Child Abuse by Employee, p.4

<sup>247</sup> Ibid, p.7

Corporate liability in this context can take the form of vicarious liability. Vicarious liability is defined as ‘the legal liability of one person for the actions of another’.<sup>248</sup> The rationale behind the imposition of vicarious liability was explained in Majrowski -v- Guy’s and St Thomas’ NHS Trust [2006] as follows:<sup>249</sup>

- The employer is in control of the employee’s actions
- The employee would not have been in a position to commit the wrongdoing but for the fact that s/he was carrying out the employer’s activities
- The employer is usually in a better position to absorb the financial loss of a civil claim (e.g. liability insurance, ability to increase prices to absorb loss)
- Vicarious liability ensures that employers promote good practice and train employees properly in terms of working practices and health and safety.

The basic components of vicarious liability are as follows:

- Agent of the corporation commits a crime
- Crime is committed while the individual is acting within the scope of their employment
- Crime is committed with intent to benefit the corporation

Thus, the imposition of vicarious liability is limited as an employer is only liable for the wrongdoings of an employee where it is established that such wrong doings were carried out in the course of employment. The case of Delahunty -v- S.E Health Board was one in which an employee of an industrial school had assaulted a boy who was visiting a friend at the school. In Delahunty the Irish High Court held that the school was not liable as the employee had no duty to this boy.<sup>250</sup> This case was followed by O’Keeffe v Hickey [2008] IEHC 72, currently before the European Convention of Human Rights.<sup>251</sup>

The imposition of vicarious liability in cases of child abuse is particularly topical in Ireland in relation to allegations of such abuse by members of the dominant churches. The question has arisen as to whether senior members of such organisations can be held vicariously liable for acts of child abuse by their junior colleagues. In the case of JGE -v- Trustees of Portsmouth Roman Catholic Diocesan Trust (July 2012) an English court decided the relationship between a

---

<sup>248</sup> Conor Hanly, An Introduction to Irish Criminal Law (Gill and MacMillan 1999) p. 73

<sup>249</sup> Majrowski -v- Guy’s and St Thomas’ NHS Trust [2006] U.K.H.L. 34, [2006] I.R.L.R. 695

<sup>250</sup> Delahunty -v- S.E Health Board [2003] 4 IR 361

<sup>251</sup> O’Keeffe v. Ireland (application no. 35810/09)

Bishop and a Priest is sufficiently close to that of an employer-employee to render the Bishop vicariously liable for that Priest's actions.<sup>252</sup> In his judgment, Lord Justice Ward made clear that the law relating to vicarious liability has moved on from that pertaining to a contract of service.<sup>253</sup>

- xix. In addition, to corporate liability in Ireland taking the form of vicarious liability criminal liability may be imposed on the corporation. Corporate criminal liability in Ireland follows the Anglo-Australian approach and relies on the identification doctrine.<sup>254</sup> Through this approach Irish corporations can bear criminal liability under a system of 'derivative' corporate liability.<sup>255</sup> However, in cases of corporate criminal liability there is a clear distinction between leading persons and regular employees. Through 'derivative' corporate liability it is directors and senior managers who are the corporations 'directing mind and will', as such only their conduct and state of mind is the conduct and state of mind of the corporation itself.<sup>256</sup>

Thus, Irish law allows for the imposition of corporate liability in the form of administrative, civil or criminal liability. This form is dependent on the duty of care which is breached as well as the distinction between leading persons and regular employees. Importantly, the imposition of criminal liability on the corporation itself as opposed to the regular employee whose actions have breached the company's duty of care is more difficult to establish than civil or administrative liability. This follows the rules regarding the burden of proof in criminal proceedings as guilt must be proved beyond reasonable doubt. Irish law does not prevent the imposition of individual liability when corporate liability has been established. Thus, children may be offered a double protection. Notwithstanding the theoretical existence of corporate liability in Ireland, evidence of enforcement in the Irish courts is sparse. Corporate liability is difficult to establish in both forms of vicarious liability and the 'identification approach'. Vicarious liability is enveloped by the vagueness of concepts such as 'in the scope of employment'. Meanwhile, criminal liability poses greater problems, which is reflected in calls for a new corporate manslaughter bill. The 'identification' approach to corporate criminal liability in Ireland is often criticised as contrary to the principle of legality

---

<sup>252</sup> JGE -v- Trustees of Portsmouth Roman Catholic Diocesan Trust (EWCA Civ 938)

<sup>253</sup> Ibid

<sup>254</sup> <http://198.170.85.29/Allens-Arthur-Robinson-Corporate-Culture-paper-for-Ruggie-Feb-2008.pdf> accessed on August 9th

<sup>255</sup> Ibid, p.6

<sup>256</sup> Ibid

enshrined in the Constitution due to its unpredictability.<sup>257</sup> Perhaps, the English court's decision in the Trustees of Portsmouth Roman Catholic Diocesan Trust case may encourage Irish courts to enhance the law of vicarious liability, amidst public outrage at a wave of child abuse claims by church figures. Such a development is to be encouraged and welcomed as a means through which children's rights against child abuse are vindicated.

- xx. Irish law does not always exclude the possibility of individual liability when corporate liability is imposed. Only leading persons may be held vicariously liable for acts of employees under Irish law and either civil or administrative liability may be imposed. However, as the institution may be found civically liable for its breach of the duty of care while the employee is held criminally liable for their abusive action,<sup>258</sup> Irish law does not exclude individual liability when corporate liability is imposed.

2.7 Aggravating Circumstances

- xxi. Legislation makes no specific reference to aggravating circumstances which may be applicable in cases of this nature. However, the Criminal Law (Sexual Offences) Act 2006 states in sections 3(3) and 3(4) that if a person has previously been convicted under 3(1) or 3(2) – whereby the person had engaged, or attempted to engage, in a sexual act with a child who is under the age of 17 – and reoffends under the same section, the subsequent sanction will increase.

2.8 Sanctions and Measures

- xxii. Deprivation of liberty tends to be the most common sanction for the above mentioned crimes. In cases of statutory rape under the Criminal Law (Amendment) Act 1935, the defendant “shall be liable on conviction thereof to penal servitude for life or for any term not less than three years or to imprisonment for any term not exceeding two years.”<sup>259</sup> Following the CC Case, the Criminal Law (Sexual Offences) Act 2006 made it an offence to engage or to attempt to engage in a sexual act with an under 15 with life imprisonment being set as the maximum punishment.<sup>260</sup> A person who is found guilty of committing the same act but with a child under 17 may be imprisoned for a term not exceeding 5 years, or for a

---

<sup>257</sup> Ibid (n 9) p.54

<sup>258</sup> Ibid (n 1) p.10

<sup>259</sup> The Criminal Law (Amendment) Act 1935.

<sup>260</sup> The Criminal Law (Sexual Offences) Act 2006, section 2(1).

person in authority a term not exceeding 10 years. A person found guilty of attempting to commit the same offence may be imprisoned for a term not exceeding 2 years, or for a person in authority a term not exceeding 4 years.<sup>261</sup> In the event that a defendant claiming honest mistake of the age of the victim, has falsely claimed this, the liability of his/her actions may be the full penalty for his/her offence.<sup>262</sup>

Although someone who is a maximum of 24 months older may be found guilty of defilement of a child between the ages of 15 and 17, consideration is given to these circumstances in sanctioning the crime in the way that he/she does not have to be registered as a sex offender.<sup>263</sup>

While men face life imprisonment under the Criminal Law (Incest Proceedings) Act 1995,<sup>264</sup> the sanction for women for the same offence is a maximum of 7 years.<sup>265</sup> This discrepancy is however to be eliminated in the years to come with the Criminal Law (Incest) (Amendment) Bill 2012.<sup>266</sup> It will provide the same penalty for men and women which can amount to life imprisonment.

Contrary to Directive 2011/93/EU, there is no mention of a higher penalty for those who commit sexual abuse while they are in a position of authority. Thus, the standard provided by Irish law in this respect is lower than the one required by the Directive.<sup>267</sup>

If found guilty of the offence of causing, permitting or failing to protect a child to be in a situation where they are in danger of being subject to serious harm or sexual abuse, a defendant is liable for a fine and/or imprisonment for no more than 10 years.<sup>268</sup>

A person with control or authority over a child who is found guilty of causing or encouraging sexual intercourse, buggery, seduction, prostitution or sexual assault or knowingly allows the child to be involved with prostitution is subject to a penalty of 10 years Imprisonment.<sup>269</sup>

---

<sup>261</sup> Ibid, at section 3.

<sup>262</sup> The Criminal Law (Sexual Offences) Act 2006.

<sup>263</sup> Ibid.

<sup>264</sup> <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/1995/en/act/pub/0012/print.html> accessed 10 August 2012.

<sup>265</sup> Punishment of Incest Act 1908, section 2.

<sup>266</sup> <http://www.oireachtas.ie/viewdoc.asp?DocID=21074&&CatID=59> accessed 10 August 2012.

<sup>267</sup> Ibid.

<sup>268</sup> The Criminal Justice Act 2006, section 176.

<sup>269</sup> The Children Act 2001, section 249.

Anyone in a position of authority or control over a child who is convicted of causing or encouraging sexual assault or prostitution of a child is subject to a fine and/or imprisonment for up to 10 years.<sup>270</sup> Whereas someone convicted under the Criminal Law (Sexual Offences) Act 1993 for offences related to prostitution- soliciting, or even the prostitute themselves, can face a fine and/or imprisonment of up to 12 months.<sup>271</sup>

A fine up to £25,000 or imprisonment for up to 14 years is the penalty for being convicted of allowing a child in your care to be used in the production of child pornography.<sup>272</sup> For a summary conviction for publishing, importing, distributing, exporting, printing, selling, showing or possessing pornography for these purposes the sanction is a fine up to £1500 and/or imprisonment up to 12 months. For a conviction on indictment for these offences, the sanction is a fine and/or imprisonment for up to 14 years.<sup>273</sup> A conviction for possession of pornography is sanctionable by a fine up to £1500 and/or imprisonment up to 12 months on a summary conviction, or a fine up to £5000 and/or imprisonment up to 5 years on indictment.<sup>274</sup>

Life imprisonment is also the sanction for child trafficking for both the user and the recruiter.<sup>275</sup>

A person found guilty of the offence of meeting a child to sexually exploit them will be sentenced to imprisonment for no longer than 14 years.<sup>276</sup>

In Ireland extradition is governed by the Extradition Act 1965. Extradition between Ireland and EU Member States is governed by the European Arrest Warrant which replaces extradition procedures between the EU Member States. Instead, any national judicial authority can issue an arrest warrant for any offence which carries a penalty of four months or greater. <sup>277</sup> It is important to note that the European Arrest Warrant can only be used when a person is being charged with an offence and not merely being investigated in

---

<sup>270</sup> The Childrens Act 2001, section 249 (1).

<sup>271</sup> The Criminal Law (Sexual Offences) Act 1992.

<sup>272</sup> The Child Trafficking and Pornography Act 1998 (as amended by the Criminal Law (Human Trafficking) Act 2008), section 4(1).

<sup>273</sup> Ibid at section 5.

<sup>274</sup> Ibid at section 6.

<sup>275</sup> Ibid at section 3.

<sup>276</sup> The Criminal Law (Sexual Offences) (Amendment) Act 2007, section 6.

<sup>277</sup>

connection with an offence. <sup>278</sup>Furthermore, ‘dual criminality’ is not a required element for a number of offences which include child pornography and the sexual exploitation of children. <sup>279</sup> Part 2 of the Extradition Act 1965<sup>280</sup> provides for extradition between Ireland and countries other than the UK. Dual Criminality is required in cases of extradition between Ireland and non-EU Member States. Dual Criminality means that the offence must exist in Ireland as well as the country seeking the extradition of a person from Ireland.

- xxiii. Aside from custodial sentences and the Sex Offenders Register; there are no other sanctions available in Ireland. In other countries such as the UK, there are options for paedophiles to undergo voluntary sterilisation. In relation to the Sex Offenders ‘register’, this does not actual exists in Ireland. Rather, those who have been convicted are obliged to inform Garda of their address and other essential pieces of information on their whereabouts. However, this does not provide any safety net for children. For example, parents cannot see if there is a convicted sex offender living in their area.

There are often stories in the news that highlight the disproportionate sentences that convicted sex offenders have received and this is simply not acceptable. In Ireland, the reconviction by sex offenders is lower than for most criminal offenders, “in conformity with the international picture sex offenders released from Irish prisons were significantly less likely to be re-imprisoned than other types of offenders at least in the short term.”<sup>281</sup> However, as noted in the 2009 report from the Department of Justice regarding the management of sex offenders, it was emphasised that approximately 100 out of 300 sex offenders in prison in Ireland are over 50 years of age and they have been prosecuted for a number of offences that usually occurred in past decades. These offenders are also less likely to re-offend on release because of their age. <sup>282</sup>

- xxiv. As discussed in Chapter 2, section 1(f), the state can impose administrative, civil and criminal liability on legal persons/moral entities, as well as on natural persons, and as such they are subject to the same sanctions. This is of particular significance in Ireland with the

<sup>278</sup> Extradition Act, 1965, Part 2 S 10 (2) (1)

<sup>279</sup> European Arrest Warrant Act 2003, Article 2 (2)

<sup>280</sup> Extradition Act, 1965, Part 2, S 8 (1)

<sup>281</sup> O'Donnell, I., E.P. Bauer and N. Hughes (2008) ‘Recidivism in the Republic of Ireland’ Criminology and Criminal Justice 2008: 8:123) (18% of sex offenders imprisoned within 3 years of release compared to 45% of persons who committed a violent or property offence).

<sup>282</sup> Justice.ie (2009) The management of Sex Offenders, A Discussion Document. Available at : <http://www.justice.ie/en/JELR/FINAL%20REPORT.pdf/Files/FINAL%20REPORT.pdf>

incidents of child sexual abuse in institutions and at the hands of the religious orders. The Criminal Justice (Withholding of Information on Offences Against Children and Vulnerable Persons) Act 2012 was introduced largely in response to a number of inquiries and allegations of child sex abuse in these circumstances,<sup>283</sup> and sets out that anyone summarily convicted under the legislation is liable to a class A fine and/or imprisonment up to 12 months or, if convicted on indictment, imprisonment of up to 10 years and a minimum of 3 years, depending on the severity of the crime that information was withheld about.<sup>284</sup> The Irish state also has tried to impose 50/50 liability between them and the Church authorities for the compensation to be paid to victims of child abuse, although they have had difficulties in recovering this, it shows that the state has taken steps to impose both financial and penal sanctions on legal persons/moral entities.<sup>285</sup>

- xxv. In order to seize property deemed evidence in any crime in Ireland, the Gardaí can do so at the time of arrest or on foot of a valid search warrant.<sup>286</sup> This applies equally in cases of sexual assault or sexual violence against children. Computers, pornographic material etc. can be seized and kept as evidence. The accused can however, enjoy the constitutional right to privacy and inviolability of their dwelling and evidence obtained in breach of these rights can be excluded as inadmissible.<sup>287</sup> The State provides protection for bone fide third parties in the form of the Protections for Persons Reporting child Abuse Act 1998.<sup>288</sup> The State also provides funding for crime prevention in the form of Garda Sexual assault Units and education programs.<sup>289</sup>
- xxvi. In Ireland, the Children's First Bill has been introduced in response to the abuse scandals in the Catholic Church and many State run child care homes in the past. The Children First Bill states that all staff – who work in any institution or organisation that children frequently attend- must be educated about child abuse and child protection.

---

<sup>283</sup> Ursula Kilkelly, "Learning Lessons from the Past: Legal Issues Arising from Ireland's Child Abuse Reports," [2012] 12(1) Irish Journal of Applied Social Studies 7.

<sup>284</sup> The Criminal Justice (Withholding of Information on Offences Against Children and Vulnerable Persons) Act 2012, section 7.

<sup>285</sup> Carl O'Brien, "Cost of State redress for abused up to nearly €1.5bn," 04/05/12. Available at: <http://www.irishtimes.com/newspaper/ireland/2012/0504/1224315592539.html>.

<sup>286</sup> http://www.citizensinformation.ie/en/justice/evidence/evidence\_introduction.html (accessed 10/11/12)

<sup>287</sup> Charlton.P McDermott P.A. and Bolger M. (1999) reprinted 2008. Criminal Law. Tottle Publishing Dublin 2. at 140

<sup>288</sup> <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/1998/en/act/pub/0049/index.html> (accessed 10/11/12)

<sup>289</sup> <http://www.garda.ie/Controller.aspx?Page=8000&Lang=1> (accessed 10/11/12)

Once a crime has been committed within the family or the child environment; there are a number of procedures that can be invoked. Section 3 of the Criminal Law (Sex Offences) Act 2006 as amended by Section 5 of the Criminal Law (Sexual Offences) (Amendment) Act 2007 makes it a criminal offence to engage or attempt to engage in a sexual act with a child less than 17 years. The maximum sentence is five years, ten years if the accused is a person in authority.

When a crime against a child has been committed within the family, the State has the power to remove the child from the home under Section 12 of the Child Care Act<sup>290</sup>. Any member of the Gardaí may remove the child when there is a risk to the child with or without a warrant. The child or children should then be placed in the care of the HSE who should apply to the District Court for an emergency care order.

Furthermore, Ireland has passed a referendum that increases the powers of the State and increases the Rights of the Child in Ireland. The 31st Amendment of the Constitution (Children's Rights) Bill repeals Article 42.5 of the Constitution and inserts a replacement that expressly recognises children in their own right. It also strengthens protection of children in the Constitution.

The introduction of this amendment means that the Constitution recognises and affirms that children have natural and imprescriptible rights and emphasises that the State has an obligation to ensure that those rights are being vindicated. Where a child is subjected to abuse in the home; the state now has the power to take 'proportionate means'.

3 CRIMINAL PROCEDURE

3.1 Investigation

- i. It is noted in a report by An Garda Síochána Inspectorate that, in Ireland, the focus at all times when dealing with child sexual abuse is on the child's welfare and protection, not the number of prosecutions which are made.<sup>291</sup> There is no statute of limitations in Ireland for cases involving child sexual offences. It is noted by the Inspectorate that allegations of abuse

---

<sup>290</sup> Child Care Act, 1991

<sup>291</sup> Garda Inspectorate Report on Responding to Child Sexual Abuse, available at <http://www.inis.gov.ie/en/JELR/Garda%20Inspectorate%20Report%20-%20Responding%20to%20child%20sexual%20abuse.pdf/Files/Garda%20Inspectorate%20Report%20-%20Responding%20to%20child%20sexual%20abuse.pdf> [accessed 03/08/12]

come to An Garda Síochána (Gardaí) in three ways; a report from the victim or a relative/friend of the victim, a report from a victims' organisation and lastly a report from church delegates. The Gardaí have also set up a telephone helpline for the reporting of child sexual abuse. Provisions for the investigation of such offences in Ireland include a sexual crime management unit<sup>292</sup>. Special training is given to Gardaí for interviewing victims and also a special relationship between the Gardaí and the Health Service Executive (HSE) has been created.<sup>293</sup>

The Children First National Guidelines for the Protection and Welfare of Children were first published in 1999 and revised in 2009.<sup>294</sup> At the time the Guidelines were the first comprehensive public document addressing the issue of the investigation of child sexual abuse in Ireland. These guidelines have been adopted as Garda policy for the welfare and protection of children, though the guidelines have no statutory footing. The primary aim of the Guidelines is to ensure healthy communication between the HSE and the Gardaí as the two key agencies empowered to investigate suspected child abuse. According to the Guidelines the HSE and Gardaí should co-ordinate in order to ensure the welfare of the child is protected. In order to achieve this it is required that where either party has concerns about a child but is unable to establish sufficient grounds for formal notification they should consult informally in order to protect the welfare of the child.

As part of An Garda Síochána response capability to deal with victims of serious crime a number of selected Garda personnel have undergone intensive training and are deemed competent to deal with all victims of serious crime occurrences including under 14 year olds and persons with intellectual disabilities. According to the Children First Guidelines and the policy of An Garda Síochána while interviewing a child the Gardaí should ensure that the statement is obtained in a manner least likely to cause stress to the child. Furthermore, the Criminal Evidence Act 1992 states that a video recording of statements by a child under the age of 14 shall be admissible as evidence in court.<sup>295</sup> In the case of a video recording of a

---

<sup>292</sup> www.justice.ie/en/jelr/response20%20of%20Sexual%20Crime%20Crimes%20Against%20Children%20Children%20Welfare.pdf [accessed 05/11/12] statement, the person who made it must be available for cross-examination at the trial, and in all cases the court retains the discretion to exclude the evidence where it is of the opinion that, in the interests of justice, the recording should not be admitted.<sup>296</sup>

<sup>293</sup> <http://www.hse.ie/eng/services/News/newsarchive/2011archive/sept2011/childprotectionandwelfarepracticehandbooklaunched.html> [accessed 06/11/12]

<sup>294</sup> Childrens First Guidelines, available at <http://www.dcy.gov.ie/documents/childcare/ChildrenFirst.pdf> [accessed 03/08/12]

<sup>295</sup> Garda Protocol on the Investigation of Sexual Crime Against Children, available at <http://www.garda.ie/Documents/User/WEB%20Investigation%20of%20Sexual%20Crime%20Crimes%20Against%20Children%20Children%20Welfare.pdf> [accessed 03/08/12]

In 2006 the Joint Oireachtas Committee for the Protection of Children recommended the development, as an urgent priority, of a Child Witness Support Service.<sup>297</sup> The Committee recommended that the research necessary to design and implement such a service be carried out as soon as possible and that whatever resources are necessary be made available.

In July 2012 the Minister for Children and Youth Affairs announced that she had received Government approval for the drafting of Heads and a General Scheme of a Bill to establish the Child and Family Support Agency. The General Scheme of a Bill will now be drafted by her officials.<sup>298</sup> The Minister said:

The development of the Heads and General Scheme of a Bill to establish a Child and Family Support Agency will provide for the implementation of the commitment in the Programme for Government to fundamentally reform the delivery of child protection services by removing child welfare and protection from the HSE and creating a dedicated Child Welfare and Support Agency.<sup>299</sup>

It is settled jurisprudence in Ireland to refer to the welfare of the child rather than the best interests of the child, however some judges have used these terms interchangeably.<sup>300</sup> The welfare principle, as contained in the Guardianship of Infants Act 1964<sup>301</sup>, includes the child's physical, intellectual, moral religious and social welfare<sup>302</sup>. This Act states that the welfare of the child should be the first and paramount consideration of the court in cases concerning the custody, guardianship or upbringing of a child. The Convention on the Rights of the Child, which Ireland has signed but not incorporated into domestic law, also makes

---

<sup>296</sup> Joint Oireachtas Committee Report on Child Protection, available at http://www.oireachtas.ie/documents/committees29thdail/committeereport2006/Child\_Protection\_Report.pdf [accessed 03/08/12]

<sup>297</sup> Joint Oireachtas Committee Report on Child Protection, available at http://www.oireachtas.ie/documents/committees29thdail/committeereport2006/Child\_Protection\_Report.pdf [accessed 03/08/12]

<sup>298</sup> <http://www.dcy.gov.ie/viewdoc.asp?fn=/documents/press/20120717.htm> [accessed 03/08/12]

<sup>299</sup> <http://www.dcy.gov.ie/viewdoc.asp?fn=/documents/press/20120717.htm> [accessed 03/08/12]

<sup>300</sup> Southern Health Board v CH [1996] 1 IR 219

<sup>301</sup> Guardianship of Infants Act 1964, available at <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/1964/en/act/pub/0007/index.html> [accessed 03/08/12]

<sup>302</sup> ibid

provisions for the best interests of the child as a primary consideration in all proceedings concerning children. Procedure in Ireland has made attempts to apply this principle during the investigation of crimes and through to court proceedings.

The Irish Constitution allows, in ‘special and limited cases’ a private sitting of the court.<sup>303</sup> The term for such procedure is the ‘in camera rule’. The Criminal Law (Rape) (Amendment) Act 1990<sup>304</sup> makes provisions for the exclusion of the public from hearing regarding sexual offences. Emily Logan, the Ombudsman for Children has raised issues with the in camera rule in child abuse cases, stating that it enables such issues to remain invisible. She said that the application of the rule “remains problematic”, adding that for as long as this is permitted the childcare system “will remain as invisible” as it is now.<sup>305</sup>

The report of the Law Reform Commission on Child Sexual Abuse made extensive recommendations for the purpose of “Making It Easier for Children to Give Evidence”.<sup>306</sup> These recommendations substantially formed the basis the Criminal Evidence Act 1992<sup>307</sup> which makes special provisions in relation to the use of an audio-visual link in the case of sexual offences. These special provisions include:

- Permitting the giving of evidence by live television link by a witness under the age of 17 unless the court sees good reason to the contrary and, in any other case, with the leave of the court. Where the television link is used, wigs and gowns are not permitted to be worn.
- Where a person under 17 is giving evidence by television link, permitting the court to direct that the witness be questioned through an intermediary, if satisfied that, having regard to the age or mental condition of the witness, the interests of justice require that any questions to be put to the witness be put in that way..

---

<sup>303</sup> Bunreacht na hEireann

<sup>304</sup> Criminal Law (Rape) (Amendment) Act 1990, available at <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/1990/en/act/pub/0032/index.html> [accessed 03/08/12]

<sup>305</sup> <http://www.thejournal.ie/children-care-deaths-emily-logan-childrens-ombudsman-health-hse-498144-Jun2012/> [accessed 03/08/12]

<sup>306</sup> Law Reform Commission Report on Child Sex Abuse, available at http://www.lawreform.ie/\_fileupload/Reports/rChildSexAbuse.pdf [accessed 03/08/12]

<sup>307</sup> Criminal Evidence Act 1992, available at <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/1992/en/act/pub/0012/index.html> [accessed 03/08/12]

- Permitting the admission in evidence of a video recording made of any evidence given on deposition by a person under the age of 17 through a live television link

A guardian ad litem may be appointed in Ireland in private or public law proceedings, although currently only the public provisions dealing with instances in respect of alleged child sex abuse where the child is in the care of the State. Under s26 of the Child Care Act 1991<sup>308</sup> the court may appoint a guardian ad litem if it is in the interests of the child and in the interests of justice to do so. The primary function of a guardian ad litem is to make recommendations in relation to a child's best interests which may differ from the wishes of the child.<sup>309</sup> Guardians are expected to meet regularly with the child, inquire into all aspects of the child's life, liaise with legal representatives and at the end of the case produce a written report for the court which will contain recommendations to any unresolved difficulties.<sup>310</sup>

Research has found that approximately 60% of children who may require the services of a guardian ad litem were unlikely to have one appointed.<sup>311</sup> In Ireland, guardians ad litem may be employed by non-statutory agencies or be self-employed. There are no provisions in Ireland for a national guardian service.

- ii. The Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault Investigation Unit (DVSAIU) is the national unit providing expertise to other Garda units in the investigation of crimes of a sexual nature, including child abuse and exploitation, and domestic violence. It must be noted that this unit merely provides support and expertise to the regional Garda services throughout Ireland.

The DVSAIU has the following responsibilities:

- Coordinating and providing assistance in the investigation of sexual crimes which are of a particularly serious, complex and/or sensitive nature.
- Providing assistance in the areas of training and policy implementation
- Promotion of best practice within An Garda Síochána in the investigation of sexual crime.

---

<sup>308</sup> Childcare Act 1991, available at <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/1991/en/act/pub/0017/index.html> [accessed 03/08/12]

<sup>309</sup> McWilliams and Hamilton, 'There isn't Anything like a GAL': The Guardian ad litem Service in Ireland [1998] 10(1) Irish Journal of Applied Social Studies 5

<sup>310</sup> ibid

<sup>311</sup> Kilkelly, Children's Rights in Ireland (2008, Tottel; Dublin)

- Providing advice and assistance to other Garda units.
- Liaison with governmental and non-governmental agencies involved in this area of work
- Acting as a central point of contact for religious orders and the Health Service Executive.<sup>312</sup>

The function of the Sexual Crime Management Unit within the DVSAIU is to evaluate and monitor, in conjunction with the investigating member and senior management, a number of investigations each year of child sexual abuse, child neglect and other selected sexual offences. The Joint Oireachtas Committee on the Protection of Children recommend the establishment of regional specialist units within the Gardaí which should take responsibility for the investigation from the outset.<sup>313</sup>

The Criminal Justice (Surveillance) Act 2009<sup>314</sup> applies to surveillance carried out by An Garda Síochána, the Defence Forces and officers of the Revenue Commissioners. In the case of An Garda Síochána the surveillance powers relate to the investigation of arrestable offences, which are offences for which a person can be punished by imprisonment for a term of five years or more (including most sexual offences against children on the Irish statute books). Under the Act a superior officer of An Garda Síochána may apply to a judge for an authorisation where he or she has reasonable grounds for believing that:

- (a) as part of an operation or investigation being conducted by the Garda Síochána concerning an arrestable offence, the surveillance being sought to be authorised is necessary for the purposes of obtaining information as to whether the offence has been committed or as to the circumstances relating to the commission of the offence, or obtaining evidence for the purposes of proceedings in relation to the offence,
- (b) the surveillance being sought to be authorised is necessary for the purpose of preventing the commission of arrestable offences, or

---

<sup>312</sup> Garda Protocol on the Investigation of Sexual Crime Against Children, available at <http://www.garda.ie/Documents/User/WEB%20Investigation%20of%20Sexual%20Crime%20Crimes%20Against%20Children%20Children%20Welfare.pdf> [accessed 03/08/12]

<sup>313</sup> Joint Oireachtas Committee Report on Child Protection, available at http://www.oireachtas.ie/documents/committees29thdail/committeereport2006/Child\_Protection\_Report.pdf [accessed 03/08/12]

<sup>314</sup> Criminal Justice (Surveillance) Act 2009, available at <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/2009/en/act/pub/0019/index.html> [accessed 03/08/12]

(c) the surveillance being sought to be authorised is necessary for the purpose of maintaining the security of the State.

In urgent circumstances a superior officer of An Garda Síochána may approve the carrying out of surveillance without the authorisation of a judge. A superior officer must be satisfied that there are reasonable grounds for believing that a judge would issue authorisation but a condition of urgency exists. A written record must be prepared for approval no later than 8 hours after the surveillance has been approved.<sup>315</sup> Any decisions regarding the investigation of complaints of child sexual abuse such as a decision to maintain surveillance on a suspected perpetrator is a matter for the officer in charge of each investigation who is usually the local District Officer. There is no generally applicable rule and each case should be judged on its own merits by the local investigation team who are most suitably placed to make decisions regarding the investigation.<sup>316</sup> It is noted by the Children First Guidelines that the investigation of organised abuse may involve a higher degree of secrecy and surveillance work than normally expected.<sup>317</sup>

iii. In Ireland, 32% of cases of child sexual abuse were found to have involved the withdrawal of a formal complaint.<sup>318</sup> It is common practice that where a case is withdrawn and there is no obvious child protection issue the Gardaí often close the file and refer the case to the HSE.

In all cases where a complainant has made a written statement of complaint regarding a crime of a sexual nature and subsequently withdraws the complaint, while still maintaining that the conduct complained of in fact took place, a file on the matter should be forwarded to the Director of Public Prosecutions (DPP) for directions. Where a complaint is withdrawn, the DPP has advised as follows on the question as to whether or not any suspected offender should be interviewed prior to submitting a file for directions:

---

<sup>315</sup> Criminal Justice (Surveillance) Act 2009, available at <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/2009/en/act/pub/0019/index.html> [accessed 03/08/12]

<sup>316</sup> Garda Protocol on the Investigation of Sexual Crimes Against Children, available at <http://www.garda.ie/Documents/User/WEB%20Investigation%20of%20Sexual%20Crime%20Crimes%20Against%20Children%20Children%20Welfare.pdf> [accessed 03/08/12]

<sup>317</sup> Children's First Guidelines, available at <http://www.dcy.gov.ie/documents/childcare/ChildrenFirst.pdf> [accessed 03/08/12]

<sup>318</sup> Garda Inspectorate Report on Responding to Child Sexual Abuse, available at <http://www.inis.gov.ie/en/JELR/Garda%20Inspectorate%20Report%20-%20Responding%20to%20child%20sexual%20abuse.pdf/Files/Garda%20Inspectorate%20Report%20-%20Responding%20to%20child%20sexual%20abuse.pdf> [accessed 03/08/12]

It is difficult to give a general answer to the question as to whether the suspect should be interviewed, where the complainant withdraws her/his complaint before such interview takes place. Perhaps the Gardaí should postpone any attempt to interview the (suspected offender), where the withdrawal of the complaint is clear and of the complainant's own free will, until a file is submitted to this office for directions.<sup>319</sup>

- iv. The current Irish law on limitations is embodied in the Statute of Limitations, 1957, as amended by the Statute of Limitations (Amendment) Act, 1991 and the Statute of Limitations (Amendment) Act, 2000.<sup>320</sup> Cases of child abuse constitute cases under tort. The law at present under the 1957 Act provides that normal limitation rules are postponed during a person's minority so that in effect time does not run until a person has attained their majority (i.e. reached 18 years of age).<sup>321</sup> Thus, Irish law allows for the suspension of the statute of limitations in child abuse cases. Yet, despite this, victims of child abuse can find themselves statute barred. This problem is particularly relevant for cases of sexual abuse as the individual may suffer from conditions such as post-traumatic stress disorder, repressed memory syndrome or psychological incapacity.<sup>322</sup> The Law Reform Commission have recommended the abolition of statute of limitations for cases of non-sexual abuse of children.<sup>323</sup>
- v. As under the statute of limitations time does not start running until the child reaches the age of majority it is clear that Irish law proceeds as normal when the age of the child is uncertain.
- vi. The Council of Europe Convention on the Protection of Children against Sexual Exploitation and Sexual Abuse in force from 1 July 2010 lays down procedure for the recording and storing of data on convicted sex offenders.<sup>324</sup> The Irish Data Protection Acts

---

<sup>319</sup> Garda Protocol on the Investigation of Sexual Crimes Against Children, available at <http://www.garda.ie/Documents/User/WEB%20Investigation%20of%20Sexual%20Crime%20Crimes%20Against%20Children%20Children%20Welfare.pdf> [accessed 03/08/12]

<sup>320</sup> http://www.lawreform.ie/\_fileupload/consultation%20papers/cpNonSexAbuse.htm

<sup>321</sup> Age of Majority Act, 1985, s.2.

<sup>322</sup> http://www.lawreform.ie/\_fileupload/consultation%20papers/cpNonSexAbuse.htm

<sup>323</sup> Ibid

<sup>324</sup>

http://eurojust.europa.eu/doclibrary/corporate/newsletter/Eurojust%20News%20Issue%205%20\(December%202011\)%20on%20the%20fight%20against%20child%20abuse/EurojustNews\_Issue5\_2011-12-EN.pdf%20on%20the%20fight%20against%20child%20abuse/EurojustNews_Issue5_2011-12-EN.pdf)

1988 and 2000 confer rights on individuals as well as responsibilities on those persons handling, processing, managing and controlling personal data.<sup>325</sup> A Data Processor is a person who processes personal information on behalf of a data. The Data Controller for the purpose of these Acts is the Commissioner of An Garda Síochána.<sup>326</sup> An Garda Síochána is legally entitled to obtain and process personal data, without the consent of the data subject in circumstances where personal data is obtained or kept for the purposes of preventing, detecting, or investigating offences, or apprehending or prosecuting offenders, where the seeking of such consent would be likely to prejudice these purposes.<sup>327</sup>

The Sexual Offenders Act 2001 stipulates the provision of the offender to An Garda Síochána of their name and address and whereabouts of the offender and this information is forwarded to the Garda Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault Unit.<sup>328</sup>

In certain circumstances the Irish authorities may transmit data to other competent authorities within the state and beyond Irish borders. Information held by An Garda Síochána may be disclosed to Law Officers and other Law Enforcement Agencies for the investigation, prevention and detection of offences, on the basis of Mutual Assistance Agreements, Interpol, and Europol. Data may be disclosed to the Health Service Executive in respect of Child Welfare issues or to the Courts Service and other agencies with a statutory investigative or enforcement role.<sup>329</sup> Disclosure of personal data outside the EU is more restricted. One of the following conditions must be met when transferring data outside the EU to a country that does not have an EU approved level of data protection law:

330

- Consented to by the data subject
- Required or authorised under an enactment, convention or other instrument imposing an international obligation on this State, examples: Europol Act 1997, Schengen Agreement 1999 and the European Convention for Mutual Assistance in Criminal Matters 1959, as amended
- Necessary for the purpose of obtaining legal advice
- Necessary to urgently prevent injury or damage to the health of a data subject

---

<sup>325</sup> <http://www.garda.ie/Controller.aspx?Page=136&Lang=1>

<sup>326</sup> Ibid

<sup>327</sup> Ibid

<sup>328</sup> http://www.citizensinformation.ie/en/justice/criminal\_law/criminal\_trial/sex\_offenders\_register.html

<sup>329</sup> Ibid

<sup>330</sup> Ibid

- Part of the personal data held on a public register
- Authorised by the Data Protection Commissioner, which is normally the approval of a contract which is based on an EU model
- Transfer is necessary for reasons of substantial Public Interest

In Ireland regulations are in place to ensure that the authorities respect protection of personal data rules. In all cases the identity of the recipient of the disclosure should be established along with the specific purpose of the disclosure and the legal basis/power to disclose the relevant data. A record of all disclosures should be maintained. In cases where there is any doubt as to disclosure, or the status of the data concerned, a file should be submitted to Assistant Commissioner, Crime and Security for directions.<sup>331</sup> The standard of security expected of all employees of An Garda Síochána includes the following:<sup>332</sup>

- Access to the information restricted to authorised staff on a "need-to- know" basis in accordance with a defined policy
- Computer systems password protected
- Information on computer screens and manual files kept hidden from callers to offices
- Back-up procedures in operation for computer held data, including off-site back-up
- All waste papers, printouts, etc. disposed of carefully by shredding
- All employees must log off from PULSE and other computers on each occasion when they leave the workstation
- Personal security passwords must not be disclosed to any other employee of An Garda Síochána
- All Garda premises to be secure when unoccupied
- A designated person will be responsible for all the above within An Garda Síochána with periodic reviews of the measures and practices in place

Employees found in breach of the Data Protection Rules may be found to be committing an offence under the Data Protection Acts 1988 and 2003; the Garda Síochána Act 2005; the Garda Complaints Act 1986 and An Garda Síochána Discipline Regulations. Furthermore such members may be exposing themselves and the organisation to litigation from an injured party.<sup>333</sup> The Act establishes the independent office of Data Protection Commissioner. The Data Protection Commissioner is appointed by Government and is independent in the performance of his functions. The Data Protection Commissioner's function is to ensure that those who keep personal data in respect of individuals comply with the provisions of the Data Protection Acts.<sup>334</sup> The Data Protection Commissioner has a wide range of enforcement powers to assist him in ensuring that the principles of Data Protection are being observed. These powers include the serving of legal notices compelling a data controller to provide information needed to assist his enquiries, or compelling a data controller to implement a provision of the Act.<sup>335</sup>

---

<sup>331</sup> Ibid

<sup>332</sup> Ibid

3.2 Complaint Procedure

vii. Reports of crimes of a sexual nature and suspected child abuse should be investigated promptly.<sup>336</sup> Investigations are conducted under the supervision of the District Officer by a member(s) experienced in the investigation of such crimes.<sup>337</sup> The Garda Síochána Policy on the Investigation of Sexual Crimes against Children Child Welfare, states that the attitude of the interviewers should always be one of sympathy and understanding; however, the importance of obtaining a full and consistent statement must be pointed out to the victim. To this end, the first member to respond and investigating members should take note of the following:

- Time and date of complaint.
- Full particulars of the complaint.
- The general state of the victim - signs of mental shock or distress, state of hair, etc.
- Any evidence of injury or marks, intoxication or drugs.
- The state of clothing - torn or disarranged; buttons or jewellery missing; stains of mud, earth, blood or semen on clothing.

---

<sup>333</sup> Ibid

<sup>334</sup> Ibid

<sup>335</sup> Ibid

<sup>336</sup> <http://www.childwelfare.gov/responding/reporting.cfm>

<sup>337</sup> Garda Síochána Policy on the Investigation of Sexual Crimes against Children Child Welfare 2010 viewed at <http://www.garda.ie/Documents/User/web%20investigation%20of%20sexual%20crime%20crimes%20against%20children%20children%20welfare.pdf> on 14/08/12

- Detailed description of the scene.<sup>338</sup>

It is Garda Policy that the member dealing with the victim should not have physical contact with any suspect prior to forensic samples, clothing and any other items being taken from the victim or suspect for fear of cross contamination of vital forensic evidence.<sup>339</sup>

If a complaint is made to the Gardai that identifies the child or young person as a victim of, or witness to, a crime the officer then interviews the child. Children under 14 years of age and persons with an intellectual disability who have been the subject of a sexual offence, an offence involving violence or the threat of violence to a person or an offence consisting of attempting or conspiring to commit or of aiding, abetting, counselling, procuring or inciting the commission of any of these offences will be interviewed by trained Specialist Victim Interviewers.<sup>340</sup> From the beginning, the investigating member will keep in mind the emotional and physical pain the victim may be suffering, while ensuring that all available evidence regarding any reported offence is obtained. Members should be mindful at an early stage of our obligations outlined in the Children First Guidelines which state:

the welfare of children is of paramount importance;

- a proper balance must be struck between protecting children and respecting the rights and needs of parents/carers and families; but where there is conflict, the child's welfare must come first;
- children have a right to be heard and taken seriously. Taking account of their age and level of understanding, they should be consulted and involved in relation to all matters and decisions that affect their lives;
- early intervention and support should be available to promote the welfare of children and families, particularly where they are vulnerable or at risk of not receiving adequate care or protection;

---

<sup>338</sup> Garda Sióchana Policy on the Investigation of Sexual Crimes against Children Child Welfare 2010 viewed at

<http://www.garda.ie/Documents/User/web%20investigation%20of%20sexual%20crime%20crimes%20against%20children%20children%20welfare.pdf> on 14/08/12

<sup>339</sup> Garda Sióchana Policy on the Investigation of Sexual Crimes against Children Child Welfare 2010 viewed at <http://www.garda.ie/Documents/User/web%20investigation%20of%20sexual%20crime%20crimes%20against%20children%20children%20welfare.pdf> on 14/08/12

<sup>340</sup> Garda Sióchana Policy on the Investigation of Sexual Crimes against Children Child Welfare 2010 viewed at <http://www.garda.ie/Documents/User/web%20investigation%20of%20sexual%20crime%20crimes%20against%20children%20children%20welfare.pdf> on 14/08/12

- parents/carers have a right to respect and should be consulted and involved in matters which concern their family;
- actions taken to protect a child, including assessment, should not in themselves be abusive or cause the child unnecessary distress. Every action and procedure should consider the overall needs of the child;
- intervention should not deal with the child in isolation; the child must be seen in a family setting;
- the criminal dimension of any action cannot be ignored;
- children should only be separated from parents/carers when all alternative means of protecting them have been exhausted. Re-union should always be considered;
- agencies or individuals taking protective action should consider factors such as the child's gender, age, stage of development, religion, culture or race;
- effective prevention, detection and treatment of child abuse require a co-ordinated multi-disciplinary approach to child care work and effective inter-agency management of individual cases. All agencies and disciplines concerned with the protection and welfare of children must work cooperatively in the best interests of children and their families;
- in practice, effective child protection requires compulsory training and clarity of responsibility for personnel involved in organisations working with children.<sup>341</sup>

Garda policy outlines that the investigating/interviewing Gardaí must explain to the complainant, in positive language and at an early stage before the making of any statements, the necessity to give a full and frank account of what happened.<sup>342</sup> A detailed record should be made of anything said by the complainant. Where they arise, the necessity to address any omissions or inconsistencies must be explained to the complainant in positive language before continuing to ask further questions.<sup>343</sup>

---

<sup>341</sup> Children First Summary, National Guidelines for the Protection and Welfare of Children, Department of Health and Children, 2004, Viewed at http://www.dohc.ie/publications/pdf/children\_sum.pdf?direct=1 on 14/08/12.

<sup>342</sup> Garda Síochána Policy on the Investigation of Sexual Crimes against Children Child Welfare 2010 viewed at <http://www.garda.ie/Documents/User/web%20investigation%20of%20sexual%20crime%20crimes%20against%20children%20children%20welfare.pdf> on 14/08/12

<sup>343</sup> Garda Síochána Policy on the Investigation of Sexual Crimes against Children Child Welfare 2010 viewed at

The victim's statement is the most important evidence in every investigation as it decides the extent of the crime and the gravity of the suspected offence. The fullest and most detailed statement that the victim is capable of making should always be obtained even if this has to be done over a long period of time or several periods of time.<sup>344</sup> A full description should also be taken of the perpetrator, if not identified by the victim, and this description should immediately be circulated as deemed appropriate.<sup>345</sup> Complainants of rape or sexual assault should be interviewed as soon as possible after the occurrence. Whether the interviewers are male or female should be decided by the victim unless, in the circumstances, this is not practicable. It is important that the victim should not be interviewed in the company of any potential witnesses.

As well as taking note of the above, the investigating member will also seize and retain any physical evidence, which could be used to support a prosecution. Members should arrange for the provision of immediate medical attention where required and the victims removal to hospital if deemed necessary.<sup>346</sup>

In the investigation of crimes of a sexual nature and suspected child abuse members of the Garda Síochána should be aware of the powers available under section 5 of the Criminal Justice Act 2006 that provides for the designation of a crime scene by a Superintendent, which automatically authorises members of the Garda Síochána to search for and collect evidence at the crime scene.<sup>347</sup>

- viii. Representation by a guardian ad litem and by a solicitor is the two most commonly recognised forms of representation for children. In addition, children's interests may be represented by social reports and expert evidence. Usually trained in social work or child development, a guardian ad litem must not only represent the child's wishes, but also take a

<http://www.garda.ie/Documents/User/web%20investigation%20of%20sexual%20crime%20crimes%20against%20children%20children%20welfare.pdf> on 14/08/12

<sup>344</sup> Garda Síochána Policy on the Investigation of Sexual Crimes against Children Child Welfare 2010 viewed at <http://www.garda.ie/Documents/User/web%20investigation%20of%20sexual%20crime%20crimes%20against%20children%20children%20welfare.pdf> on 14/08/12

<sup>345</sup> Garda Síochána Policy on the Investigation of Sexual Crimes against Children Child Welfare 2010 viewed at <http://www.garda.ie/Documents/User/web%20investigation%20of%20sexual%20crime%20crimes%20against%20children%20children%20welfare.pdf> on 14/08/12

<sup>346</sup> Complainants of rape or sexual assault should be interviewed as soon as possible after the occurrence. Whether the interviewers are male or female should be decided by the victim unless, in the circumstances, this is not practicable. It is important that the victim should not be interviewed in the company of any potential witnesses.

<sup>347</sup> <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/2006/en/act/pub/0026/index.html> Viewed on 14/08/12.

view as to the child's best interests, and advise the court accordingly, particularly in cases where the complaint by the child incriminates their parents. In contrast, a solicitor must explain his appointment, his duties and the procedure of the case to his client, taking into account the client's age and understanding. A solicitor must follow his client's instructions and work towards his clients best interests, regardless of age.<sup>348</sup>

Solicitors recognise the limited nature of the representation they can offer in cases where the wishes of the child client do not coincide with the child's best interests. Among non-lawyers there is a common perception that one kind of representation for a child is as good as another, equating legal representation with representation by a guardian ad litem. This perception is reinforced by a statutory provision which dispenses with a guardian ad litem in the event that a child is joined as a party to proceedings.<sup>349</sup> The Child Care Act 1991<sup>350</sup> lays down no criteria governing the type of person who may be appointed as a guardian ad litem. However it is usually expected that the guardian ad litem should be a social worker, or some other child care professional with expertise in dealing with children. In the criminal context, An Garda Síochána has published a comprehensive policy on the investigation of sexual crime.<sup>351</sup> In the contest of child complainants, special training has been given to all Gardaí in the taking of complaints and statements.<sup>352</sup> The Sexual Crime Management unit is equipped to address the particular concerns for child victims of sexual crime.<sup>353</sup>

The lawyer who represents the child directly has a task which is quite different to the guardian ad litem. The lawyer is obliged to follow the instructions of his or her client, even against what the lawyer may perceive to be his or her client's better interests. The lawyer has a duty to advise the child client that the courts' paramount consideration will be the welfare of the child.<sup>354</sup>

---

<sup>348</sup> A Guide to Professional Conduct of Solicitors in Ireland, <http://www.liamog.com/PDF%20Downloads/Professional%20Conduct%20of%20Solicitors%20in%20Ireland%20A.pdf> Viewed on 18/08/12

<sup>349</sup> Fortin, Children's Rights and the Developing Law, (Lexis Nexis UK 2003), p. 233. See also Murch & Keehan, The Voice of the Child in Private Family Law Proceedings, Cardiff Law School, Nov 2002.

<sup>350</sup> <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/1991/en/act/pub/0017/index.html> Viewed on 18/08/12

<sup>351</sup> http://www.garda.ie/Documents/User/2copy%20of%20garda\_english\_2010\_fl\_lowres.pdf

<sup>352</sup> <http://www.justice.ie/en/JELR/Response%20to%20Garda%20Inspectorate%20Report%20-%201%20Feb%202012.pdf/Files/Response%20to%20Garda%20Inspectorate%20Report%20-%201%20Feb%202012.pdf> (accessed 08/11/2012)

<sup>353</sup> Ibid

<sup>354</sup> The Solicitors Family Law Association in England and Wales in its Guide to Good Practice provides that the

It is important for the lawyer to ascertain whether the child client is capable of giving instructions. If the child is severely emotionally disturbed he or she may not be capable of giving instructions.<sup>355</sup> If there are already child mental health professionals involved the lawyer may consult them. The direction of the court can be sought in such circumstances. It is important to explain to the young client the nature of the proceedings in question in simple and straightforward terms.<sup>356</sup> The client should be made aware of the fact that the court will make decisions about his or her future and that, by law; it must consider his or her views and wishes.<sup>357</sup>

The child has the same right to be kept informed about the progress of the proceedings as an adult client. The direction of the court may be obtained where the child client wishes to access a confidential report which may be inappropriate for the child client to see or have a copy of.<sup>358</sup> In practice it can arise that solicitors are expected to assume the role of guardian's ad litem, and there can be a lack of clarity about what the role of the solicitor representing a young client should be.<sup>359</sup>

Cases at which children and young people can give evidence can be heard in the District Court, the Circuit Court or the Central Criminal Court. If a witness is 14 years of age or over, he/she will be required to give evidence on oath or affirmation. Children under 14 years are not required to swear an oath or make an affirmation before giving evidence. Until very recently the Irish courts were not permitted to accept the unsworn testimony of children in civil cases. This was the conclusion in Mapp v. Gilbooley.<sup>360</sup> Now s. 28 of the Children Act 1997,<sup>361</sup> provides that the trial judge 'may' accept the unsworn testimony of children under 14 in any civil proceedings, where the judge is satisfied that the child provide solicitor should not normally delegate the preparation, supervision, conduct or presentation of the case, but should deal with it personally. In each case the solicitor must consider whether it is in the best interests of the child to instruct another advocate and then advice on whom should be instructed.

---

<sup>355</sup> See Re H. (A Minor) (Care Proceedings: Child's Wishes) [1993] 1 F.L.R. 440 where Thorpe J. pointed out that a child had to have sufficient understanding and must be rational. This may not be so where the child is severely emotionally disturbed. If there is any doubt on this matter, expert opinion must be obtained.

<sup>356</sup> The Lord Chancellors Department Leaflet No. 2, available at www.offsol.demon.co.uk/leaf2tfr.htm, can be very usefully adapted for this purpose.

<sup>357</sup> See s. 24 of the Child Care Act 1991 and s. 25 of the Guardianship of Infants Act 1964.

<sup>358</sup> See Re C (Expert Evidence: disclosure practice) [1995] 1 F.L.R. 204; Re M (Minors) (Care Proceedings: child's wishes) [1994] 1 F.L.R. 794; Re T and E (Proceedings: conflicting interests) [1995] 1 F.L.R. 581.

<sup>359</sup> Rights-based Child Law: The case for reform, A report by the Law Society's Law Reform Committee, March 2006 Viewed at <http://www.lawsociety.ie/documents/committees/lawreform/childreport06.pdf> on 14/08/12

<sup>360</sup> Unreported, Supreme Court, 23 April 1991.

<sup>361</sup> <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/pdf/1997/en.act.1997.0040.pdf> Viewed 20/08/12

the court with an accurate account. Where the child is very young the trial judge will normally be required to conduct a specific enquiry into their competence under voir dire.

The prosecution can apply to the court for the witness to give evidence from a separate room using a video link. This means that the witness does not have to go into the courtroom or see the defendant, particularly in cases involving a sexual offence or an offence involving violence. In cases such as these the judge can also decide that members of the public should not be allowed in court.<sup>362</sup>

The Child Care Act 1991, S. 31 states that no matter that is likely to lead members of the public to identify a child who is or has been the subject of proceedings under Part III, IV or VI shall be published in a written publication available to the public or be broadcast:<sup>363</sup>

(2) Without prejudice to subsection (1), the court may, in any case if satisfied that it is appropriate to do so in the interests of the child, by order dispense with the prohibitions of that subsection in relation to him to such extent as may be specified in the order.

(3) If any matter is published or broadcast in contravention of subsection (1), each of the following persons, namely-

(a) In the case of publication in a newspaper or periodical, any proprietor, any editor and any publisher of the newspaper or periodical,

(b) In the case of any other publication, the person who publishes it, and

(c) in the case of a broadcast, anybody corporate who transmits or provides the programme in which the broadcast is made and any person having functions in relation to the programme corresponding to those of an editor of a newspaper, shall be guilty of an offence and shall be liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding £1,000 or to imprisonment for a term not exceeding 12 months or both.<sup>364</sup>

---

<sup>362</sup> http://www.citizensinformation.ie/en/justice/witnesses/witnesses\_under\_17\_years.html Viewed on 17/08/12

<sup>363</sup> <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/1991/en/act/pub/0017/index.html> Viewed on 18/08/12

<sup>364</sup> <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/1991/en/act/pub/0017/index.html> Viewed on 18/08/12

4 COMPLEMENTARY MEASURES

Preventive Measures

- i. In 1999 the Office of the Minister for Children published Children First: the National Guidelines for the Protection and Welfare of Children as an aid to identifying and reporting child abuse and neglect. Following this the Health Service Executive (HSE) established a network of personnel to provide training, information and advice on how best to implement Children First. In 2011, the Health Service Executive (HSE) released Children First: National Guidance for the Protection and Welfare of Children, providing greater clarity and guidance.

Section 10 of the Children First guidelines is of great importance as it focuses on the necessity of training in child protection and welfare. It dictates that all relevant staff and organizations should be trained in the recognition of signs of abuse and what immediate action to take.

The Children First Guidelines states that child protection training aims to promote the effective interventions in the care and protection of children. It provides that effective child protection depends on the skills, knowledge and values of personnel working with children and families as well as inter agency and intra agency co-operation. Importantly, for the purposes of this section it states that “relevant training and education is an essential pre-requisite to achieving this.”<sup>365</sup> Furthermore, it states that agencies involved with children should ensure that such training is available on an on-going basis. The Children First Guidelines details the training and education necessary from agencies working with children.

Currently, the government is committed to introducing legislation which will place the Children First Guidelines on a statutory basis. The draft heads of the Children First Bill provides that organizations whose employees or volunteers have access to children, or work directly with children, and where a child can attend without a parent or guardian<sup>366</sup> come within the ambit of this Bill.

The draft heads of the Bill provides that an organisation is required to provide training for employees and volunteers who have access to children in accordance with guidance and standards set down by the HSE under the Safeguarding Guidance for Organisations from which the organisation is required to develop its own Keeping Children Safe Plan, appropriate to the services provided by that organisation.

---

<sup>365</sup> Children First 14.1.2

<sup>366</sup> Children First Bill 2012, Heads and General Scheme (DRAFT)

Head 7 of the Bill places an onus on organizations that come within the ambit of the Bill to provide training to employees or volunteers.<sup>367</sup>

- ii. The draft heads of this Bill also places an obligation on organizations which come within the ambit of the Bill to “actively promote to parents and children awareness of, and best practice in, child welfare and protection, including making available to parents and children information on the procedure for reporting a concern or allegation of child abuse to the Designated Officer, or to the HSE which comes to a parent’s or a child’s attention in the course of availing of services provided by the organization.”<sup>368</sup>

Thus, the proposed legislation is very positive from a child protection standpoint in so far as it sets out clear child protection obligations on all those working with children, including the training and education of those working with children. Moreover, the legislation if implemented would place a statutory obligation on organizations to educate children and their parents on the process.

- iii. There does not appear to be a system for preventative intervention for child sexual abuse in Ireland for those who have at present not committed the crime, however fear that they may be at risk of committing the crime in the future. There are, however, a number of interventions currently in place for sentenced sex offenders whilst they are in prison.

The Department of Justice in their 2009 Management of Sex Offenders: A Discussion Document highlighted the potential of intervention to prevent re-offending. The Discussion Documents provides that it is the objective of the Irish Prison Service to ensure that all appropriate efforts are made to work with sex offenders while in prison to bring about changes in their lives that reduce the risk of re-<sup>369</sup>offending and enhance public protection to the greatest extent possible.

Protective Measures and Assistance to Victims

---

<sup>367</sup> Head 7 (11).

<sup>368</sup> Head 7 (10.)

<sup>369</sup>

iv. There is no available data on “social programmes” provided by the State. Currently this service is offered through non-Government Organisations such as “One in Four”<sup>370</sup> and CARI<sup>371</sup>.

v. There is no helpline provided by the State specifically for child victims of sexual abuse or exploitation. However, a number of voluntary non-governmental organisations run help lines for children and victims of sexual abuse or exploitation.

The national rape crisis centre runs a 24-hour helpline geared towards victims of sexual abuse aged over 14 years.<sup>372</sup> The Irish Society for the Prevention of Cruelty of Children (ISPCC), under the auspices of Childline, operates a 24-hour helpline for children.<sup>373</sup> Both services are confidential: they do not ask names or keep caller ID.

For those caring for victims of child sex abuse, either in a professional or guardianship capacity, separate advice and help is available through CARI who also provide a helpline.<sup>374</sup>

vi. The Health Service Executive (HSE) and An Garda Síochána (the police force) have the statutory responsibility for the protection of children.<sup>375</sup> The Health Service Executive (HSE) recommends referrals to Children and Family Services where there are fears of child abuse.<sup>376</sup> The HSE operates a helpline and standard form that can be used to report concerns regarding a child.<sup>377</sup>

The Children’s Act 2001 introduces family welfare conferences. These conferences “offer families and professionals the opportunity to meet together in an equitable manner, sharing responsibility in planning and decision-making in the best interest of the welfare and protection of children and in support of families in need.”<sup>378</sup>

---

<sup>370</sup> www.oneinfour.ie

<sup>371</sup> www.cari.ie

<sup>372</sup> Rape Crisis Network Ireland, available at: www.rcni.ie/child-sexual-abuse.aspx (accessed August 2012).

<sup>373</sup> Childline, available at: www.childline.ie

<sup>374</sup> www.cari.ie

<sup>375</sup> The Department of Children and Youth Affairs, ‘Children First: National Guidance for the Protection and Welfare of Children’, 2009.

<sup>376</sup> The Health Service Executive, National Review of Sexual Abuse Services for Children and Young People Final Report, June 2011, p.30.

<sup>377</sup> The Health Service Executive, available at: www.hse.ie/go/childrenfirst (accessed August 2012).

<sup>378</sup> P. 21.

The (HSE) provides certain “Family Supports” with specialised services for child abuse victims. They offer services such as therapeutic work, parent education programmes, and home-based parent and family support programmes.<sup>379</sup>

Another family support initiative is Springboard whose functions include “provid[ing] a direct service through a structured package of care, intervention, support and counselling to the targeted families and children, and to families within the wider community.”

Children First guidelines recommend a multiagency strategy meeting be convened by the social work team at any point in the process when it is most appropriate. The suggested functions are:

- Share available information;
- Consider whether immediate action should be taken to protect the child and other children in the same situation;
- Consider available legal options;
- Plan early intervention;
- Identify possible sources of protection and support for the child;
- Identify sources of further information to facilitate the enquiry and assessment;
- Allocate responsibility for further enquiry; and
- Agree with An Garda Síochána how the remainder of the enquiry will be conducted.<sup>380</sup>

St. Clare’s and St. Louise’s units in Dublin offer specialised regionalised treatment to children of the area. They are the only centres of this type in the country that combine therapy and examination.<sup>381</sup> Under Irish law the parents and guardians give consent on behalf of their children aged under 16 years.<sup>382</sup> Where a child is subject to a care order the Health Service Executive can consent.

---

<sup>379</sup> The Health Service Executive, ‘Family Support’, www.hse.ie/eng/services/Find\_a\_Service/Children\_and\_Family\_Services/Family\_Support (accessed August 2012).P.22

<sup>380</sup> The Health Service Executive, Child Protection and Welfare Practice Handbook, 2011.

<sup>381</sup> The Health Service Executive, National Review of Sexual Abuse Services for Children and Young People Final Report, June 2011, p.22.

<sup>382</sup> Section 16 of the Non-Fatal Offences against the Person Act 1997.

The North side Inter-Agency Project (NIAP) seeks to provide treatment for individuals aged 12 to 18 years who have sexually abused. They acknowledge that there is a lack of treatment to child offender's at this point due to an absence of resources. They contacted St. Clare's Assessment and Treatment Service for information on cases of sexual behaviour but did not receive a response.<sup>383</sup>

III NATIONAL POLICY REGARDING CHILDREN

- i. On November 10th the Children's Referendum took place in Ireland, the referendum has been described as a "once in a generation opportunity" to strengthen protections for children in Ireland.<sup>384</sup> There was a national "Yes for Children" campaign being promoted by Barnardos, the Children's Rights Alliance, the ISPCC and Campaign for Children.<sup>385</sup> The referendum sought to make fundamental changes to the Irish Constitution regarding the position of the child in Irish Law.
- ii. NGO's use a range of mediums to promote awareness of child exploitation and abuse, public awareness campaigns using billboards, surveys and websites calling for public support are widely used. The media, meetings with political parties and government committees are also used to help influence policies for the benefit and protection of children.<sup>386</sup>

The Commission to inquire into Child Abuse submitted its final report, "The Ryan Report," on the 20th of May 2009,<sup>387</sup> which reported on the extensive child abuse committed in state institutions from before the 1940's to present day, covering physical, sexual and emotional abuse and neglect.<sup>388</sup>

The Report by Commission of Investigation into Catholic Diocese of Cloyne, reported on the handling by the church and state of allegations and suspicions of child sex abuse in the

---

<sup>383</sup> Northside Inter-Agency Project, Annual Report 2009.

<sup>384</sup> <http://www.barnardos.ie/what-we-do/campaign-and-lobby/referendum-on-childrens-rights-10-nov-2012.html>

<sup>385</sup> <http://www.barnardos.ie/what-we-do/campaign-and-lobby/referendum-on-childrens-rights-10-nov-2012.html>

<sup>386</sup> <http://www.barnardos.ie/what-we-do/campaign-and-lobby/how-we-do-our-work.html?gclid=CP6V086l6LICFVRc4QodOi4A6A>

<sup>387</sup> <http://www.childabusecommission.ie/publications/index.html>

<sup>388</sup> <http://www.childabusecommission.ie/about/index.html>

Diocese,<sup>389</sup> in the period of January 1996 to February 2009.<sup>390</sup> The report revealed that child protection practices were inadequate and at times dangerous.<sup>391</sup>

The publication of these long awaited reports has heightened public awareness of child sexual abuse in Ireland, and has prompted the current move to enhance children's rights on a Constitutional footing.

- iii. There has been limited statistics and reports done by state and regulatory bodies in Ireland, and have been taking place in an ad-hoc and irregular manner, greater consolidation and consistency is needed in reports and publications on children's sexual exploitation in the State.

Certain NGO's conduct their own research and offer a slight insight to the current extent of sexual exploitation of children in Ireland. The Children at risk in Ireland Foundation, CARI, in 2011 reports that there was a 1% increase in calls to its helpline from 2010, the primary concerns of sexualised behaviour in children had a 57% increase on 2010, while rape and sexual assault had a 20% decrease.<sup>392</sup> CARI's 2010 report showed a 17% increase in rape/sexual assault concerns on 2009 figures, also that sexualised behaviour concerns rose by 38% on the previous year.<sup>393</sup> The 2009 report showed also that rape/sexual assault concerns rose from 98 in 2008 to 103, while sexualised behaviour rose from 50 the previous year to 76.<sup>394</sup> The foundation's report indicates a steady increase in sexual exploitation concerns in Ireland year on year.

- iv. In August 2012 a billboard campaign was launched urging the criminalisation of prostitution. It centres of the trafficking and prostitution of a 14 year old girl.<sup>395</sup>

The Dublin Archdiocese Commission of Investigation was commissioned by the Irish government to examine the handling of allegations of child sexual abuse at the hands of Catholic priests between 1975 and 2004. As part of the Cloyne investigation:

Advertisements were placed in many local newspapers and a number of national papers together with many local radio stations and RTE Radio 1. Information was

<sup>389</sup> http://www.justice.ie/en/JELR/Pages/Cloyne\_Rpt

<sup>390</sup> http://www.justice.ie/en/JELR/Cloyne\_Rpt.pdf/Files/Cloyne\_Rpt.pdf

<sup>391</sup> <http://www.rte.ie/news/2011/0713/cloynetracker.html>

<sup>392</sup> <http://www.cari.ie/images/uploads/pictures/CARI-Annual-Report-2011-lo-res.pdf>

<sup>393</sup> http://www.cari.ie/images/uploads/pictures/CARI\_Annual\_Report\_2010.pdf

<sup>394</sup> <http://www.cari.ie/images/uploads/pictures/CARI-Annual-Report-2008-2009.pdf>

<sup>395</sup> Evening Echo, 'Anti-Prostitution Billboard Campaign launched', available at: www.eveningecho.ie/2012/08/17/anti-prostitution-billboard-campaign-launched.

also circulated through churches, doctors' surgeries and information centres in order to encourage complainants and those who had relevant information to come forward to assist the Commission.<sup>396</sup>

- v. Generally there is a consultation process prior to the contents of a Bill being approved by the government. This may involve NGOs, lobby groups and members of the public.<sup>397</sup> This is one stage of the process of law making and does not guarantee the child's perspective. However, it can allow for the inclusion of the children's perspective. On the other hand, presentations to the Dáil are by invitation only and not guaranteed.

The Department of Children and Youth Affairs conducts consultations with young people in an attempt to include their views in its policies and relevant legislation. It released 'Life as a Child and Young Person in Ireland: Report of a National Consultation' in November 2012. This incorporated a consultation with almost 67,000 young people in Ireland. Young people aged between seven and 17 in every school and youth centre in Ireland were offered the opportunity to complete a short questionnaire on "what's good, what's not good and what should be changed to improve the lives of children and young people in Ireland". The Minister for Children and Youth Affairs stated that she planned to use their views when compiling the Children and Young People's Policy Framework.<sup>398</sup>

Further consultations conducted by the Department with young people include: 'Listen to our voices! - Hearing children and young people living in the care of the state' (2011), 'Consultations with children and young people for the Forum on Patronage and Pluralism in Primary Schools' (2011), 'Consultations with children and young people on the new National Children's Strategy 2012-2017' (2011), 'Consultations with young people on reform of Junior Cycle in second-level schools' (Nov 2010), 'Consultation with young people on the White Paper on Crime' (2010), 'Consultations with children and young people in the care of the state' (2010), 'Consultations on the National Paediatric Hospital' (2009), 'Mental health consultations with teenagers' (2008), 'The misuse of alcohol among young people' (2007),

---

<sup>396</sup> Commission of Investigation, "Report into the Catholic Diocese of Cloyne December 2010" p. 28.

<sup>397</sup> Page updated: 8 December 2012, viewed November 2012, available at: www.citizensinformation.ie/en/government\_in\_ireland/national\_government/houses\_of\_the\_oireachtas/legislation.html.

<sup>398</sup> The Department of Children and Youth Affairs, 'Life as a Child and Young Person in Ireland: Report of a National Consultation' www.dcy.gov.ie/documents/chilyouthparticipation/life\_a\_child\_in\_ireland/Life-as-a-child-in-ireland.pdf.

‘The development of the Irish Youth Justice Strategy’ (2007), ‘The age of consent for sexual activity’ (2006), ‘The development of the Taskforce on Active Citizenship’ (2006), ‘Development of a national set of child wellbeing indicators’ (2005), ‘The development of the National Recreation Policy’ (2005) and ‘The development of the Children’s Code of Advertising’ (2004).<sup>399</sup>

Furthermore, the National Children's Advisory Council advises the Department of Children and Youth Affairs. It is made up of representatives of the statutory agencies, voluntary sector, research community, parents and young people.<sup>400</sup>

- vi. Barnardos, the Cari Foundation, The Children’s Rights Alliance and The Irish Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children (ISPCC).<sup>401</sup> Before a Bill is introduced, there will be consultation meetings and discussions with the Government Departments and groups likely to be affected by the Bill. Sometimes the Government will publish a Green Paper. This is a discussion document which sets out the Government’s ideas and invites comment and views from individuals and relevant organisations.<sup>402</sup>

IV OTHER

As has been mentioned throughout this report, Ireland voted on an amendment to the Constitution on 10/11/12. It was passed with a majority of 58% to 42%, though there was a very low turnout of 33.53%.<sup>403</sup> It will have a significant effect on the status of children under Irish law. The new Article 42A reads:

1 The State recognises and affirms the natural and imprescriptible rights of all children and shall, as far as practicable, by its laws protect and vindicate those rights.

<sup>399</sup> The Department of Children and Youth Affairs, viewed November 2012, available at: www.dcy.gov.ie/viewdoc.asp?fn=%2Fdocuments%2FChildYouthParticipation%2FNational\_Consultation.s.htm&mn=chic&nID=4.

<sup>400</sup> The Department of Children and Youth Affairs, viewed November 2012, available at: www.dcy.gov.ie/viewdoc.asp?fn=%2Fdocuments%2FNational\_Childrens\_Advisory\_Council\_.htm&mn=polz&nID=4.

<sup>401</sup> Office for the Promotion of Migrant Integration, www.integration.ie/website/omi/omiwebv6.nsf/page/usefullinks-irish-NonGovernmentalOrganisations-en

<sup>402</sup> Houses of the Oireachtas, ‘A Brief Guide to How your Parliament Works’, p. 17.

<sup>403</sup> RTÉ, ‘Children’s Referendum amendment passed by 58% of voters,’ 11/11/12. Available at: <http://www.rte.ie/news/2012/1111/counting-of-childrens-referendum-votes-begins.html>.

2 1°In exceptional cases, where the parents, regardless of their marital status, fail in their duty towards their children to such extent that the safety or welfare of any of their children is likely to be prejudicially affected, the State as guardian of the common good shall, by proportionate means as provided by law, endeavour to supply the place of the parents, but always with due regard for the natural and imprescriptible rights of the child.

2°Provision shall be made by law for the adoption of any child where the parents have failed for such a period of time as may be prescribed by law in their duty towards the child and where the best interests of the child so require.

3 Provision shall be made by law for the voluntary placement for adoption and the adoption of any child.

4 1 Provision shall be made by law that in the resolution of all proceedings – brought by the State, as guardian of the common good, for the purpose of preventing the safety and welfare of any child from being prejudicially affected, or concerning the adoption, guardianship or custody of, or access to, any child, the best interests of the child shall be the paramount consideration.

2° Provision shall be made by law for securing, as far as practicable, that in all proceedings referred to in subsection 1° of this section in respect of any child who is capable of forming his or her own views, the views of the child shall be ascertained and given due weight having regard to the age and maturity of the child.<sup>404</sup>

It will also delete the current Article 42.5, which states:

In exceptional cases, where the parents for physical or moral reasons fail in their duty towards their children, the State as guardian of the common good, by appropriate means shall endeavour to supply the place of the parents, but always with due regard for the natural and imprescriptible rights of the child.<sup>405</sup>

The referendum has received cross-party political support and was backed by many of the major NGOs<sup>406</sup>, with only a small and disorganised ‘No’ campaign. It is hoped that

---

<sup>404</sup> The Referendum Commission’s Independent Guide 2012, “Proposed Changes”.
<http://www.referendum2012.ie/proposed-article/>

<sup>405</sup> Article 42.5, Bunreacht na hÉireann-Constitution of Ireland, 1937.

<sup>406</sup> RTE, “Children’s Referendum a Chance to leave behind ‘legacy of failure,’” 20/09/12. Available at:

the referendum, although falls short of full implementation of the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child, will ensure that children have separate and concrete rights, will remove the current anomaly between the ability of children to be fostered with married or unmarried parents, that children's best interests are taken into proper consideration in judicial and administrative proceedings and that they are listened to and that the state will be in a position to take appropriate actions to vindicate the rights of the child.<sup>407</sup>

V CONCLUSION

Sexual violence against children is a repugnant and unacceptable crime. The vulnerability of the child and their inability to express or understand the nature of this abuse results in deep psychological scarring that has far reaching consequences for the resulting adult, their family and society. The nature of the abuse suffered by Irish victims has been described as meeting the legal definition of torture under European and International Law.<sup>408</sup>

We have seen the difficulties faced by the brave who challenge the perpetrator and those who claimed to have a responsibility as the ill equipped legal system fumbles on issues of statute of limitation,<sup>409</sup> vicarious liability, remoteness, and the duty of care.<sup>410</sup>

These laws pre-date laws that have addressed issues such as; rape within marriage,<sup>411</sup> divorce,<sup>412</sup> the introduction of barring orders against a spouse,<sup>413</sup> contraception, and data protection to name but a few. The trend suggests that the original belief in the institution of marriage as a safe environment to be protected for the betterment of society has exceptions that the very laws made to protect it render it impermeable especially to children. The status of children has progressed from being the property of the father, to property of the marital family to the child as an individual in their own right and we have now passed a referendum to give legal status to these rights in the Irish Constitution.

---

<http://www.rte.ie/news/2012/0919/wording-children-referendum.html>.

<sup>407</sup> Ombudsman for Children, Emily Logan, "Opinion Piece: Ombudsman for Children Emily Logan on the upcoming Referendum," 18/09/12. Available at: <http://www.oco.ie/whats-new/media/statements-and-articles/opinion-piece-ombudsman-for-children-emily-logan-on-the-upcoming-referendum.html>.

<sup>408</sup> "Abuse of Children in Irish Institutions Amounted to Torture," Amnesty International Ireland, 26 September 2011. <http://www.amnesty.ie/news/abuse-children-irish-institutions-amounted-torture>. (accessed 26/09/2011)

<sup>409</sup> O'Keeffe v Hickey [2008] IESC 72

<sup>410</sup> Ibid

<sup>411</sup> Criminal Law (Rape) Act 1981

<sup>412</sup> Family Law (Divorce) Act 1986

<sup>413</sup> Domestic Violence Act 1996

Children have historically been exempt from the protection offered by Irish law because of their legal status within the family. The Equal Status Acts of 2000-2011<sup>414</sup> expressly exclude under 16year olds from discrimination based on age. This leaves children particularly vulnerable in the eyes of the law as childhood does not feature as a potential factor for discrimination.

Children are not invisible but are powerless without equal status and protection under the Constitution. The superior status of the family with the assumption that the family unit is in the best interest of the child provides a legal loophole that many children have fallen into.

The ratification of the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child in Ireland on 21st September 1992 did little to change the status of children in Ireland or to put to put the welfare of the child on an equal legal footing with the family as the Constitution remains superior law in Ireland. The most effective way to ensure that children in Ireland enjoy the right to equality, welfare and the right to expressing their views is to enshrine these rights within the Constitution.

Sexual violence thrives on ignorance, subordination and the fear or knowledge of the victim that they will not be heard and even if they were, they would not be understood. The knowledge that they are powerless within their own family perpetuates the abuse and creates an environment that favours the abuser.

Government and non-Government agencies have been working together to address the outlined issues but legal recognition of the rights to the tools of empowerment will create an environment of transparency to give foundation to a system that puts child welfare first.

On 10th November 2012 a referendum was held to give Constitutional protection to the rights of the child with consideration to the natural and imprescriptible rights of all children. The child will be heard, the child will be understood and the child will be equal.

---

<sup>414</sup> <http://www.irishstatutebook.ie/2000/en/act/pub/0008/index.html>. (accessed 08/11/2012)

ELSA ITALY

I Introduction.....	644
1 General .....	644
2 The Lanzarote Convention.....	655
II National Legislation .....	659
1 General Principles Of The Jurisdiction .....	659
2 Substantive Criminal Law .....	666
2.1 Sexual Abuse.....	666
2.2 Child Prostitution .....	673
2.3 Child Pornography .....	675
2.4 Corruption of Children.....	678
2.5 Solicitation of Children for Sexual Purposes.....	679
2.6 Corporate Liability.....	680
2.7 Aggravating Circumstances .....	681
2.8 Sanctions and Measures .....	682
3 Criminal Procedure .....	688
3.1 Investigation .....	688
3.2 Complaint Procedure .....	694
4 Complementary Measures.....	698
III National Policy Regarding Children.....	705
IV Other.....	711
V Conclusion.....	711

National Researchers:

Beatrice La Porta

Cristina Maggioni

Silvia Piccione

Michele Sessa

Laura Stefani

Lorena Suster

National Academic Advisors:

Prof. Giuseppe Di Chiara

Gabriella Rappa

National Coordinator:

Marzia Carla Iosini

List of Abbreviations:

Cass.	Cassazione (Supreme Court)
Cass. Civ.	Cassazione civile (Civil section of the Supreme Court)
Cass. Pen.	Cassazione penale (Criminal section of the Supreme Court)
c.c.	Codice civile (Civil code)
c.p.	Codice penale (Criminal code)
c.p.c.	Code of civil procedure
c.p.p.	Code of Criminal procedure
D.lgs.	Decreto legislativo (once converted, it has the same power as an act of law)
G.U.	Gazzetta Ufficiale (Italian acts of law are officially published here)
Legge	Legge (act of law)
R.D.	Regio Decreto (act of law entered into force when Italy was a monarchy)
par.	Paragraph (comma)

I INTRODUCTION

1 GENERAL

i. Italian social and legal system rests on the foundations of the principle of equality. In order to locate the exact notion of this term, one has to bear in mind that the concept of non-discrimination shall not be confused with the principle of equal treatment, of which the first one can be considered a method of implementation: reference legislation in this matter, in fact, defines the principle of equal treatment as "treatment without any discrimination". More specifically, it is stated by art. 3 par. 1 of the Italian Constitution that all citizens have equal social dignity and are equal before the law, without any distinctions regarding sex, race, language, religion, political views, personal and social conditions. However, looking back at the reality, it has to be noticed that discriminating episodes take place every day and most at any level of the society. Discriminations regarding sex, race, color, language, religion, political opinions, national or social origin, sexual orientation, state of health and disability or other status of men and women are unfortunately part of the ordinary life of many people: as an example, though Italian Labour Law provides many guarantees, Italian working women suffer from a silent discrimination, once they decide to build a family of their own and they quit temporarily their job.

The discriminating episodes which generally catch the attention of the media are those related to immigration: one of the main reason is perhaps that this issue is quite new to the Italian society and therefore able to generate interest, curiosity or fear. In this regard, sometimes episodes of intolerance culminate in events shown by the media, as recently happened in Rome, where a Bengali Muslim person was attacked during the Ramadan by a group of persons<sup>1</sup>. In the background of such kind of events there could be frequently found racist reasons and, more in general, the difficulty of persons coming from other countries to integrate themselves in the country of destination and to be considered "equal" as those already living there. Moreover, apart from specific episodes of racism, as the one mentioned above, it has to be noticed that Italian country itself has been dealing with immigration in a very peculiar way: differently from countries that already experienced the immigration in the past, Italy used to be a country of emigration and just in the last decades turned out to be a country of immigration<sup>2</sup>. This big social change has not been accompanied by adequate social and economic instruments and therefore immigrants are very vulnerable individuals that sometimes end up experiencing emargination and exploitation. In this regard, a painful case that has caught the media attention was the one concerning South-Africa immigrants forced to work under unacceptable conditions in agricultural areas nearby the city of Rosarno, who then revolted against the whole population of the city in 2010. This episode showed how dangerous race discrimination could be, since exasperated immigrants, forced because of their status to work under unacceptable working conditions by few persons, revolted against the inhabitants of the whole city, with the dangerous effect of generating other racism intolerance against themselves.

---

<sup>1</sup> "Repubblica Roma", 26th July 2012.

Furthermore, it has to be noticed that in the last years it has become not rare hearing some political speeches referring to individuals living and working in Italy differently according to their country of origin: this kind of speeches, that normally reflects discussions can generate other racism and intolerance, since they are performed through mass media and therefore can reach quickly people direct inside their houses, making them feeling upset, scared and alone. In particular, the work of eight Italian associations<sup>3</sup> has highlighted very alarming data on the rise of such incitement to racial rate in the country. In this respect, according to the UNAR (the National Office for Anti-discrimination), in 2010 the cases encountered were 96, whereas in 2009 they were 56 (it should be reflected on the fact that such cases have duplicated within one year). Other data to be reckoned with are those related to the xenophobia on Internet, and particularly in the use social networks and blogs: the UNAR, in collaboration with the postal police, has succeeded in closing about 200 among Internet sites and blogs pushing racial hate and homophobia, as well as more than 90 Facebook pages having the same goal. This numbers reflect the last tendency that sees especially social networks, with Facebook in the lead, as the most widely used vehicles for transmitting racial hate, from which the most affected individuals are Jews and Muslims. On the other hand, positive data come from the schools, where the number of racial episodes went down from 5.3 cases in 2009 to 3.3 cases in 2010. This means that children are being educated in an environment that seeks mutual respect of diversity more and more.

---

<sup>2</sup> However, emigration still exists in Italy, especially that of young graduates.

<sup>3</sup> “Archivio delle Memorie Migranti”; “Osservatorio sulle discriminazioni”; “Associazione Studi Giuridici sull’ Immigrazione”; “Associazione 21 Luglio”; “Associazione Carta di Roma”; “Borderline Sicilia Onlus”; “Lunaria”; “Unione forense per la tutela dei diritti umani”.

Considering discriminatory treatments taking place at workplace, it has to be said that this issue is set to grow further as a result of Legge n. 92/2012: a worker fired for discriminatory reasons is now protected with the strongest form of protection, namely with reintegration in the workplace and full compensation of the damage. For this reason, it will be increasingly important to ensure that behind a formal notice of dismissal for objective reasons given by the worker are not hidden discriminatory reasons. As an example of this kind of situations, it shall be reported that with an Order of 3th March 2012, a Judge of the Court of Milan declared the discriminatory nature of the conduct held by Extrabanca Ltd., a bank specifically created for migrant citizens in Italy, in relation to acts undertaken by its Chairman and other executives against one of their employees, which have been recognized by the Court as forms of harassment with ethnic-racial background and therefore sanctioned by the d. Lgs. n. 215/2003 (the act of law that implemented in Italy the European directive no. 2000/43 against ethno-racial discrimination). In the course of the investigations that led to the Ordinance, the Court considered satisfactory the evidence made by the applicant according to which the President of the Bank branch and other executives had used offensive expressions against the appellant and another employee referring to skin color and African origin of both, with the objective consequence of having created an offensive and humiliating climate in the workplace. The order of the Court of Milan is particularly important and innovative, not only because it constitutes one of the first judicial pronouncements that sanctions cases of racial harassment, but also because it is one of the few decisions that recognizes the principle of compensation for non patrimonial damages from objective facts of discrimination in itself, as a violation of personal dignity.

More in general as regards the work conditions, the Italian labour market, in such a rapidly evolving times and in such a big economic crisis, can sometimes ending up being quite a "lack of civility" environment, especially for the relationships between employer and employee, as well as among employees themselves, often accompanied by forms of underhand and terrible discrimination that are detrimental to the dignity of the whole working community.

As concerns equality between men and women, the Italian performance is not positive. Having regard to the Global Gender Gap Index of the World Economic Forum, a study based on four dimensions, namely the labour market (employment, remuneration, career), education, health and politics which annually measures the levels of participation in social life of men and women in their countries, Italy is at the 74th place in the world among 134 countries taken into consideration. The most striking indicator of this situation is represented by the female employment rate, stuck at 46.1.

In conclusion, despite the noble words of art. 3 par. 1 of the Italian Constitution, episodes of discrimination are still quite frequent: sometimes they have a big impact on the population, since they reach the attention of mass media, and these are mainly the cases of racial discriminations, but sometimes they are frequent and silent episodes that end up being considered as usual, like the discriminations at the workplace, among which the one between men and women still cover an important role. A positive signal comes from the young generations: the relationships among Italian teenagers and peers of foreign origins living in Italy are oft close and direct: they are companions in sport or recreation and, what is most important, they are friends. This happens because Italian teenagers usually consider peers with an immigration background as an integral part of society, even though they oft live in situations of hardship.

It is obvious that something needs to be changed within our everyday system and the hope is that a "wind of change" is apparently finally blowing.

ii. The definition of the term "family" is changing within the time. In fact, in the past the core of the family was the figure of the father-husband and only to legitimate sons could be transmitted last name and heritage, since all children born outside of marriage were excluded from the notion of family. This interpretation has now been modified and adapted to modern society. Nowadays, family is no more considered as a group of persons of common ancestry, as it was the parental family. Instead, the modern idea of family is provided by articles 29, 30 and 31 of the Italian Constitution. In particular, art. 29 states that "The Republic recognizes the rights of the family as a natural society founded on marriage"<sup>4</sup>: the role of the modern family is inherited from natural law and according to some Scholars, this definition is the result of the fusion of the catholic with the communist ideology.<sup>5</sup> Whereas it is by few commentators claimed that a legal structure is granted by the State only to legitimate families, namely those founded on marriage<sup>6</sup>, according to other authors this rule does not express a static definition of the family, being this one a definition that needs to be tailored into the historical moment in which the rule itself is intended to operate (this is the so-called “rule blank”)<sup>7</sup>. In fact, nowadays it is emerging the tendency to emphasize the union of a family, regardless of the existence of the marriage<sup>8</sup>: the main idea this tendency is built on is to be found in art. 2 of the Constitution, according to which “the Republic recognizes and guarantees the inviolable rights of man, as an individual, and in the social groups where human personality”<sup>9</sup>.

---

<sup>4</sup> BIFULCO R., CELOTTO A., OLIVETTI M., Commentario sulla costituzione, Utet giuridica, Torino, 2008, 611ss.

<sup>5</sup> ASPREA S., La famiglia di fatto in Italia e in Europa, Giuffrè, Milano, 2003, 12-15.

The second paragraph of the above mentioned art. 29 foresees an equal role of the spouses within their family, which is also known as the equal status of marriage: “Marriage is based on the moral and legal equality of spouses within the limits established by law to guarantee the unity of the family”<sup>10</sup>. This modern provision is due to the fact that the figure of the father has lost his centrality and supremacy, with the consequence that now the relationship between him and her spouse is based on moral and legal equality. This new interpretation is confirmed by art. 30 of the Constitution, according to which “It is the duty and right of parents to support and educate their children, even if born outside marriage”<sup>11</sup>. Not only this rule assigns the same rights and obligations to both parents, but it also equalises the legal position of children born inside and outside marriage: since the new definition of family is built on the central role of the children, the child is valued and the parental obligations are provided also in regard to children born outside marriage. Moreover, the third paragraph of the same article establishes that the law ensures to children born outside marriage every legal and social protection compatible with the rights of the members of the legitimate family. In the view of a part of the doctrine, it is here implicitly accepted the notion of family that can be deduced by the Civil Code and special laws<sup>12</sup>, namely that of an entity based on the

---

<sup>6</sup> TRABUCCHI A., Natura, diritto, famiglia, in Riv. dir. civ., 1977; STELLA RICHTER G., Aspetti di diritto civile sul concubinato in Riv. trim. dir. proc. civ., 1975, 1123; GIACOBBE G., Che famiglia?, in Iustitia, 2006; RESCIGNO P., Famiglia e diritto a vent'anni dalla riforma, in Riv. dir. civ., 1998.

<sup>7</sup> MANCINI D., Uguaglianza tra coniugi e società naturale nell'art. 29 della Costituzione, in Riv. dir. civ., 1963, 225.

<sup>8</sup> FERRANDO G., Convivere senza matrimonio, Rapporti personali e patrimoniali nella famiglia di fatto, Milano, in Fam.dir, 1998, 183; DOGLIOTTI M., Famiglia di fatto, in Dig. disc. priv., sez. civ., VIII, Torino, 1992, 189.

<sup>9</sup> CRISAFULLI V., PALADIN L., Breve commentario sulla Costituzione, Padova, Cedam, 1990, 9.

<sup>10</sup> BIFULCO R., CELOTTO A., OLIVETTI M., cit., 611 ss.

<sup>11</sup> BIFULCO R., CELOTTO A., OLIVETTI M., cit., 622.

<sup>12</sup> BARCELLONA P., Famiglia (Diritto Privato), in Enc. Dir., XVI, Milano, 1967, 778.

parental relationship aiming at the protection and development of the children born by those persons: “depending on the needs and interests taken into consideration by the law in the individual rules, the scope of family relationships that are important extends or narrows, resulting in a variety of figures or meanings”.<sup>13</sup> Indeed, art. 31 of the Constitution confirms the importance of the family institution by showing the so called “favor familiae”<sup>14</sup>, as well as by providing economic supports for the aim of family creation.

In order to discover the most common characteristics among people marrying in Italy, it is worth reading the ISTAT annual recognition on marriages<sup>15</sup>. This survey relates to all marriages celebrated in a specific year in the Country and analyzes the phenomenon of marriage in relation to socio-demographic characteristics of the couple. According to this survey, starting from the beginning of the seventies the number of marriages celebrated in Italy has seen a continuous decrease that lead from a number of 420,000 marriages celebrated in 1972 to less than 218,000 celebrated in 2010<sup>16</sup>. In specific regard to the marital age of the population, whereas in 2004 the average age of men contracting marriage amounted to 32.2 years and that of women to 29.5 years<sup>17</sup>, in 2005 they increased to 32.6 years for the men and 29.8 years for the women<sup>18</sup>; in 2006 to 32.6 years and to 29.4 years<sup>19</sup>; in 2007 to 32.8 years and to 29.7 years<sup>20</sup>; in 2008 to 33.0 years and to 29.9 years<sup>21</sup>; in 2009 to 33.1 years and to 30.1 years<sup>22</sup>. Finally, in 2010 the average age of men contracting marriage amounted to 33.4 years, whereas that of women to 30.4 years<sup>23</sup>.

In conclusion, the average age of men and women marrying in Italy has been constantly increasing and this phenomenon is mainly due to the big difficulties encountered by young generations in leaving the parental house for creating their own families: despite the words contained in the Constitutional provisions, Italian young generations have not been provided by the Country with enough social and economic instruments able to facilitating

---

<sup>13</sup> BARCELLONA P., cit., 780.

<sup>14</sup> BIFULCO R., CELOTTO A., OLIVETTI M., cit., 640.

<sup>15</sup> The ISTAT Rilevazione sui matrimoni di fonte Stato Civile (i.e. recognition on marriages) was established in 1926.

<sup>16</sup> Istat, Rilevazione cit., in <http://www.demo.istat.it/altridati/matrimoni/>

<sup>17</sup> Istat, Rilevazione cit., Statistical Tables 2004, in <http://www.demo.istat.it/altridati/matrimoni/>

<sup>18</sup> Istat, Rilevazione cit., Statistical Tables 2005, in <http://www.demo.istat.it/altridati/matrimoni/>

<sup>19</sup> Istat, Rilevazione cit., Statistical Tables 2006, in <http://www.demo.istat.it/altridati/matrimoni/>

<sup>20</sup> Istat, Rilevazione cit., Statistical Tables 2007, in <http://www.demo.istat.it/altridati/matrimoni/>

<sup>21</sup> Istat, Rilevazione cit., Statistical Tables 2008, in <http://www.demo.istat.it/altridati/matrimoni/>

<sup>22</sup> Istat, Rilevazione cit., Statistical Tables 2009, in <http://www.demo.istat.it/altridati/matrimoni/>

<sup>23</sup> Istat, Rilevazione cit., Statistical Tables 2010, in <http://www.demo.istat.it/altridati/matrimoni/>

the building of new families. Moreover, in the very last years the average age of marring is increasing also because of the economic and social consequences of the economic crisis.

iii. The general status of children has changed a lot during the centuries, since there has been a deep evolution starting from the idea of children as parents' property until the idea of children as worthless values for the whole society. For this reason, during the twentieth century, child issues has been highly tackled in many fields, such as juridical, psychological, pedagogical, social, and others, in order to assure them more protection than the one provided in the past. As concerns Italian development of the general status of children, Italian legislation contains numerous provisions related to children and adolescents' protection. According to Italian Civil Code, whose fundamental principles are now enshrined also by Italian Constitution (art. 29-34), children have to be at the centre of parents' attention, who have the duty to maintain, form and educate their children taking into consideration their capacities, natural inclination and aspirations (art. 147 c.c.). From the point of view of the parents, the subsequent art. 148 c.c. states that each parent has to economically maintain the children, proportionally to his/her respective income; in case both parents are not economically able to afford this commitment, closer relatives have the duty to intervene in their aid, relieving this burden.

Moreover, in order to pursue child welfare, several civil legal institutes have been predisposed in relation to different aspects or decisions that can have any kind of consequences on children's life. Examples of institutes dealing with economic aspects on children's life are provided: the legal usufruct on children's goods (art. 324 c.c.); the possibility to constitute a kind of trust ("fondo patrimoniale") for the satisfaction of family needs (art. 167 c.c.). Examples of provisions ensuring children assistance are the legal guardianship (see chapter X of this report, infra); the decadence of patria potestas when parents commit serious in-observances of their duties, so that they put in danger children's education (art. 324 c.c.) or the removal of the parent convicted of familiar abuses (art. 342 bis, c.c. introduced by Italian Legge n. 154/2001); the judge's intervention when there are big discordances between parents in relation to the exercise of their potestas (art. 145 c.c.). Moreover, the consideration of children's point of view when dealing with important decisions to be taken, especially in case of dissolution of the marriage of the parents, has achieved a central role thanks to several law reforms. In fact, a child older than 12 years old or younger than that age but with a discreet capacity of discernment, can be heard by the judge to make observations and express his/her preferences related to his/her custody (art. 155 sexies c.c.).

In this field, a strong innovation was brought with Legge n. 54/2006, which has profoundly changed the discipline of parents' divorce. In fact, it has introduced the so called “affido condiviso” (Italian definition that can be translated as “shared custody”) which has replaced as preferential regime for handling children in case of dissolution of marriage, yet not eliminated, the “affido congiunto”, (expression that can be rendered as “combined custody”)<sup>24</sup>. According to the affido congiunto, children are assigned to one parent, while the other parent has the right to visit them, and the potestas (i.e. the right to take decision upon children life and education) is exercised in necessary collaboration between both parents, ending up in conflicts in case of diverging opinions. Differently, according to the current legislation, children are mainly assigned to both parents, but for different periods of time, during which each of them can exercise his/her full potestas, independently from the other one. The main reason behind this law innovation is to privilege children's interest and wellness: in fact, according to art. 155 bis c.c., children have the right to maintain an equilibrate and continuative relation with both parents and to receive cure, education, formation from both of them. Moreover, the familiar habitation is assigned to the one who will live with them, in order to respect children's affections and habits (art.155 quater c.c.).

Among the most important juridical intervention about children protection in Italian legislations, it has to be mentioned the Law n. 151/1975, which has completely equalized legitimate sons (born inside a marriage) and natural ones (born outside a marriage, or from an adultery or an incest): the latter ones, now, have same rights towards their parents, such as economical attributions, education, formation, inheritance rights, regardless the factual relation between their parents<sup>25</sup>. In the field of Criminal law, the most important innovation regarding children protection has been achieved with Leggi n. 66/1996 and n. 269/1998

---

<sup>24</sup> The affido congiunto regime, in turn, has replaced the “affido esclusivo”, the exclusive custody according to which only one parent could have the custody of his/her child and exercise the potestas upon him/her (except for important decisions in child's interest), while the other one could have only the right/duty to visit him/her in predetermined times.

<sup>25</sup> Only one difference remains: incestuous sons cannot be recognized by parents when they are both in mala fides (art. 251 c.c.).

which introduced a whole body of dispositions regarding criminal offenses against of children<sup>26</sup>.

Putting aside the discussion on Italian legislation, it can be underlined that many public and private entities act everyday for the protection of children and children rights issues. Within the Government, the Ministry of Youth is responsible for juvenile politics and projects and encourages the participation of young people in civil society. Legge n. 451/1997 instituted the Parliamentary Commission for Childhood and Adolescence, which aims to write proper legislation draft to be enacted by the Parliament, and the National Observatory for Childhood<sup>27</sup>, which constantly monitors children status and prepares official documents containing empirical results. Many NGOs promote children protection, in primis Italian sections of UNICEF and Save the Children which, in order to pursue their purposes, collaborate continuously with many subjects (as national and local institutions and associations, Governments, researches institutes, and the civil society as a whole).

In general, it can be said that in Italy the prevalent concern regarding children is to create a social and cultural order in which they can properly and safely grow and realize themselves and their personality in every field or aspect of their life, rather than having more laws, since the level of law protection is quite satisfactory. For this reason, media and legislators are not concentrated on specific violations but generally keep an eye open to the general situation of children, their issues and their protection. A recent case that caught the attention of the media is related to presumed abuses perpetrated during the school year 2005/2006 in a kindergarten by teachers against children they had to care about. The fact received a great attention by the general public, because the public opinion was forced to face the problem of the level of security of places where children (especially those born from working mothers) stay during the first years of their lives. The first instance decision issued in May 2012 stated the innocence of the teachers accused.<sup>28</sup>

iv. It can be said that Italy usually accepts internationality with favor and, consequently, accepts the process of international renovation and the approval of international reforms

---

<sup>26</sup> A deeper analyses will be offered in Chapter II, part II concerning “substantive criminal law”.

<sup>27</sup> Disciplined by DPR n. 103/2007; chaired by Ministry for Labour and Social Politics and by the Under-Secretary of the State; composed by representatives of national/local public administrations, entities and associations, organization of volunteering, experts in the field of childhood and adolescence.

<sup>28</sup> Those facts are known as the presumed abuses occurred in the kindergarten “Olga Rovere” in Rignano Flaminio.

with the purpose of spreading a culture of respect for human beings and human rights; furthermore it fosters relations and collaboration within States, with the aim of increasing the quality of citizens' life.

The process of implementation of international treaties is not homogeneous: certain treaties are implemented more than others. This difference may depend on several factors, such as the specific object of the treaty, the age of the legislation on it, the necessity of updating it in relation to internal current events and affairs, the diverging awareness of civil society, higher or lower pressure coming from international community, difference of opinions inside public entities responsible for its implementation, etc. Here, we can say that international treaties related to children and children rights issues are generally taken into great consideration; in fact, Italian legislation on this topic is well-advanced if compared to other States of the world, also European ones.

The relationship between Italian law and international customary law is based on a monistic approach. In fact, art. 10 co. 1 of Italian Constitution states that the Italian legal system conforms to the generally recognized rules of international law. This constitutional norm sets an automatic and permanent reference to: customary norms, imperative norms of international general law, general principles of international law. Consequently, these dispositions, if self-executing, can be directly applied by Italian public administration and Italian courts. In this way, international customary norms are awarded constitutional ground and so they can prevail on ordinary Italian laws in case of conflict.

The Constitution does not mention about the relation between Italian law and international treaty law. Doctrine and jurisprudence, which recognize that art. 10 par. 1 is not applicable, talk about an “improper monistic approach”<sup>29</sup>: international legislation is not directly applied inside national territory, but national legislation has to be compatible with international dispositions. Therefore, in order to have an international treaty applicable inside Italian territory, it is necessary to emanate an internal act which prescribes the execution of the treaty inside Italian legal order: this act is called “order of execution” and is given before the ratification of the treaty, and so, before its entrance into force. For special treaties, as indicated in art. 80 of the Constitution<sup>30</sup>, this order has to be contained in an ordinary law. The treaty is applicable inside Italian legal order when it enters into force at international level (not when the order is emanated) and its application stands until it is in force at international level. According to this situation, it could have been said that Italian law followed the dualistic approach when dealing with international treaty law, but this kind of statement has to be put in a different perspective considered the latest development of Italian legislation.

---

<sup>29</sup> Legal Doctrine: CONFORTI B., Diritto internazionale, Editoriale Scientifica, 2010. Jurisprudence: Constitutional Court, decisions n. 348/2007 and n. 349/2007.

Before the entrance in force of Legge n. 3/2001<sup>31</sup>, doctrine and jurisprudence agreed that Italian law and international conventional norms had the same rank (equal-ordinated); as a consequence, according to the normal criteria for the resolution of conflict of law, the subsequent law would have abrogated the previous one and the special law (ratione personarum or ratione materiae) would have made an exception to the more general one. Art. 3 par. 1 of the indicated law has changed this relation between Italian law and international treaty, since currently, ex art. 117 par. 1 of Italian Constitution, national legislation has to be exercised in respect to all the international obligations; that is to say that is enshrined in Constitution that international law is superior to national law and, so, treaties' norms prevail on Italian ordinary law<sup>32</sup>. As consequence, an ordinary law that does not respect international treaties' norms is un-constitutional and, for that, can be abolished by Italian Constitutional Court<sup>33</sup>.

Italy signed the United Nations Convention on Rights of the Child on the 26th of January 1990; the order of execution was contained in Legge n. 176/1991; the ratification took place on the 5th September 1993, without any declaration and reservation. Moreover, Italy has continued to implement this Convention. In fact, the Optional Protocol on the Involvement of Children in armed conflict was signed on the 6th September 2000 and ratified on the 9th May 2002; also the Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography was signed on 6th September 2000 and ratified on 9th May 2002. In the end, on <sup>30</sup> Art. 80: the Houses authorize by law the ratification of international treaties which are of a political nature, or which call for arbitration or legal settlements, or which entail changes to the national territory or financial burdens or changes to legislation.

---

<sup>31</sup> Which changed the asset of relations between public entities inside Italian territory (in particular, Chapter V, part II of the Constitution).

<sup>32</sup> Before this reform, the Constitutional Court arrived to affirm that, in front of an ordinary law, the norm of the treaty prevails only in the subjects indicated in articles 10 co. 2 and 11 of the Constitution (decision n. 120 of the 23rd of November 1967).

<sup>33</sup> Italian Constitutional Court, decision n. 397/2007.

28th February 2012, Italy also signed the Optional Protocol on a communications procedure, which now has to receive the order of execution.

v. Every European State is free to choose the most appropriate form for implementing a directive, since States are only bound to a result and not also to the kind of mean through which this result can be obtained. In regard to the Directive 2011/95/EU, its ratification has been expressly foreseen in the draft text of an act of law (called draft of the Legge Comunitaria 2012) that has currently been examined by the Parliament in order to enter into force (the draft has been approved on 3rd October 2012 by the Camera and now has to be examined by the Senato): on the one hand, this act of law includes changes into the national legislation law aiming to allow an easy process of adaptation of the domestic law to the European one and, on the other hand, it foresees the ratification of few recent European directives, such as the one mentioned above. The adaptation of this directive shall be made through a Decreto legislativo, meaning an act adopted by the Government upon a mandate from the Parliament, which have the same force as an act of law: this instrument allows a quicker entrance into force of the act compared to the longer process required by an act of law.

2 THE LANZAROTE CONVENTION

i. The European Convention on Human Rights (CEDU<sup>34</sup> is the Italian acronym) was ratified and came into force in Italy with Law n. 848/1955 enacted on 26th October 1955.

ii. Italy is a State party of the Lanzarote Convention, since the sign on 7th November 2007 that was made without any declarations of reservation. As a consequence, on March 23rd 2009, under the initiative of the Italian Government, the bill concerning the ratification and enforcement of Lanzarote Convention and the provisions for the adjustment of the domestic law<sup>35</sup> was brought to the Camera dei Deputati (i.e. Chamber of Deputies, one of the branches of Italian Parliament, together with the Senate). In accordance with the principle of perfect bicameralism, the text of the bill was intended to move from one Chamber to another, until reaching conform decision on the same text both in the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate. This occurred on 19th September 2012, after three years of discussions, voting and transferring of the bill from one Chamber to another, when the Senate in the last resort unanimously approved the ratification of the Convention, that became law to all intents and purposes. That law is named “Legge di Ratifica ed Esecuzione della Convenzione di Lanzarote nonché norme di adeguamento dell’ ordinamento interno” (i.e. Law of Ratification and Implementation of the Lanzarote Convention as well as provisions for the adjustment of the domestic law), also known as Legge n. 172/2012, and entered into force on 23rd October 2012. Starting from this date, the Lanzarote Convention is granted with full execution in Italy.<sup>36</sup>

---

<sup>34</sup> I. e., “Convenzione Europea dei Diritti dell’Uomo”.

<sup>35</sup> Bill C.2326, when analyzed by the Chamber of Deputies; S.1969, when analyzed by the Senate.

iii. - iv. Not applicable.

v. Firstly, it has to be considered that the issue regarding the status of international law in respect to national law is an extremely complex one and has been developed by legal scholars and courts decisions throughout the last decades. Generally, international treaties are provided with the same rank as well as the acts of law enacting those treaties into national law and in case of conflict of laws, rules concerning the hierarchy among sources of law apply. More specifically, art. 117 of the Italian Constitution – that was innovated by the constitutional Legge n. 3/2001 - establishes that the State law must be exercised in accordance with the international obligations, thus being enshrined the pre-eminence of international obligations, and therefore also of the obligations arising from treaties, on ordinary legislation. In this way, even if the adaptation of the international treaty into national law has been realized through ratification by an act of law– which happens in the cases specified by art. 80 of the Constitution - if the act of law does not meet the content of the treaty, it shall be deemed vitiated for constitutional illegitimacy, following to an indirect violation of the Constitution that can lead to a declaration of abolition by the national Constitutional Court.<sup>37</sup>

The Lanzarote Convention falls in one of the cases specified by Article 80 of the Italian Constitution, namely the case in which an international treaty has to be ratified by an act of law (see also part 1. General, par. iv. of the report), and therefore the ratification and execution order were made through the ordinary adaptation process by Legge n. 172/2012, published in GU n. 235 of 8th October 2012.<sup>38</sup>

---

<sup>36</sup> Art. 2 of Legge 172/2012: “piena ed intera esecuzione è data alla Convenzione, a decorrere dalla data della sua entrata in vigore, in conformità a quanto disposto dall’articolo 45 della Convenzione stessa”.

<sup>37</sup> Cass. 24.10.2007 n. 348 and n. 349; CONFORTI B., Diritto internazionale, editoriale Scientifica, Torino, 2012.

vi. As already mentioned in the previous paragraphs (ii. and v.), the Lanzarote Convention is fully entered into force into the Italian legal system through an ordinary procedure of adaptation and without any reservations: this implies that in order to describe how Italy has implemented the Convention, reference is to be made to an ordinary act of law, namely Legge n. 172/2012, which reproduces the content, the principles and the terminology used in the Convention, adapting it to the national law system. Furthermore, it has to be underlined that the act of law ratifying the Convention does not take into consideration the whole content of the “Lanzarote”, since the ratification law covers only the aspects mentioned in the Convention not yet covered by domestic law. The Italian adhesion to the Convention is only a small part of a bigger process that has led Italy to raise the attention for children protection in every single field of law. Before the beginning of negotiations leading to the adoption of the text of the Lanzarote Convention, the Italian legal system was certainly well equipped with an effective and cutting-edge system to protect minors.<sup>39</sup>

The original text of Article 519 of the Italian criminal code<sup>40</sup> punished the criminal offense of “violenza sessuale” (i.e. sexual assault), providing a specific example in case of sexual abuse on minors in paragraph 2. This discipline was totally reformed and expanded with the “Rules against sexual violence” law (n. 66 of 15th February 1996); further and most prominent innovations were achieved by Legge n. 269/1998 (and its subsequent modification made by Legge n. 38/2006), regarding provisions against the exploitation of prostitution, pornography, sexual tourism involving children, such as new forms of slavery which introduced into the criminal code the new offenses of exploitation of child prostitution, child pornography, possession of pornographical material, child sex tourism.

The new Legge n. 172/2012, which has finally ratified the Lanzarote Convention, is divided into two parts:

---

<sup>38</sup> Text is available on: <http://www.normattiva.it/uri-res/N2Ls?urn:nir:stato:Legge:2012-10-01;172>. An English translation is not available.

<sup>39</sup> “Minor” without any indication of age is intended to be an individual younger than 18 years old, as stated both by the national legislation and the Lanzarote Convention.

<sup>40</sup> R.D. 19 ottobre 1930, n. 1398 or Codice Penale

- Chapter I (artt. 1-3): it contains the Ratification and the Execution Order of the Convention and entitles the Ministero dell'Interno (i.e. Home Office) as the authority responsible at a national level for collecting and storing empirical data on convicted sexual offenses, in respect to the content of the Treaty of Prum (ratified by Italy with the Legge n. 85/2009);
- Chapter II (artt. 4-9): it contains specific provisions which amend the criminal code, the code of criminal procedure and the penitentiary order and aim to make them compatible with new provisions deriving from the Lanzarote Convention.<sup>41</sup>

There many reasons why Italy has not been ratifying the Lanzarote Convention during last three years, which are mainly related to the absence of an immediate necessity to introduce the instruments of protection sanctioned under the Convention, since, as previously mentioned, the Italian legal system prior 2007 already provided institutions able to guarantee protection against sexual offences on children.

Furthermore, the late ratification of the Convention by Italy is related to the issue of the adaptation of the provisions of the Treaty to Italian national law, which has represented a main problem, finally resolved with the ratification of the Convention. Examples of the main point of the law on which the two branches of Italian Parliament have developed an animated debate are: (a) questions concerned prerequisites for application of the personal security measures; (b) questions directed to rationalize the activities of the prosecutors (especially it is ordered that the competence in this area is attributed not to the ordinary public Prosecutors, but to the anti-mafia district Prosecutors). Therefore, it should be clear that the Italian late ratification is not related to a different vision on the noble principles contained in the text prepared by the Council of Europe, being only due to the necessity to develop the best path to let international legislation come into Italian law system.

In any case, the ratification of the Lanzarote Convention has driven into the Italian law system many aspects of substantial innovation of the criminal justice system, aiming at building up a most effective legal system committed to the protection of children. In fact, beyond some minor adjustments to the discipline of the offences already covered by the

---

<sup>41</sup> See also, Servizio Studi -Dipartimento Giustizia - Camera Dei Deputati, Dossier di documentazione, Ratifica della Convenzione di Lanzarote per la protezione dei minori contro lo sfruttamento e l'abuso sessuale, nonché norme di adeguamento interno, Serie: Progetti di Legge, Numero: 198, Progressivo: 1-2-3-4-5.

Italian criminal code (such as the confiscation of good related to the commission of the crime against children, the increased punishments for the offenders, the aggravating and additional circumstances), four types of new offences have been explicitly criminalized for the first time, even though they were already prosecuted in the past through an extensive interpretations of the existing provisions:

- letter b) of art. 4 of Legge n. 172/2012 introduces a new criminal offense, called istigazione a pratiche di pedofilia e pedopornografia (art. 414-bis c.p.) which prosecutes the person who makes incitement to pedophilia and child pornography practices;
- letter h) of art. 4 of Legge n. 172/2012 introduces a new criminal offense, which is added to the existing art. 600-ter c.p., dealing with child pornography; according to this provision, anyone who attends pornographic shows or performances where minors are involved is prosecuted and the expression “child pornography” is delineated;
- letter s) of article 4 of Legge n. 172/2012 widens the scope of art. 609 quinquies c.p., dealing with the crime of corruzione di minorenne (i. e corruption of children), which takes place when anyone makes a minor younger than 14 years old assisting to the commission of any kind of sexual acts or looking at pornographic show material in order to induce her/him to do or to suffer sexual offences; punishment is increased if the offender is a person which is closed to the child (e. g. parents, teachers, mentors, etc.);
- letter z) of art. 4 of Legge n. 172/2012 introduces the new crime of adescamento di minori (art.609-undecies c.p.), defining the conduct of a person who uses Internet or other media instruments in order to enter in contact with minors.

vii- viii. Not applicable

II NATIONAL LEGISLATION

1 GENERAL PRINCIPLES OF THE JURISDICTION

i. From an institutional point of view, the Italian State was born in 1861, year in which the King of Sardegna, Vittorio Emanuele II acquired the title of King Of Italy. Moreover the Albertine Statute (conceded by Carlo Alberto of Savoia in 1948 came along as inheritance of the Sardinian realm), which resulted in becoming the first form of “Constitutional Chart” of the Kingdom of Italy. Even though initially the Statute outlined a Constitutional Monarchy as form of government, its flexibility made it possible to introduce a Parliament-based monarchy.

With the rise of Fascism, as an extreme consequence of the Statute flexibility, the Kingdom of Italy was diverted in an authoritarian regime: this entailed a disruption not only at an institutional level (e.g.: elimination of the Deputy Chamber with the creation of Camera dei Fasci e delle Corporazioni) but also for the recognition of forms of public liberties. (e.g.: cancelation of the right to vote, suppression of rights such as press rights, assembly rights etc.). The liberties were restored following the end of the Second World War and the loss of power by Benito Mussolini. At the conclusion of 5 years of “transitory regime”, on June 2nd 1946, a referendum was announced in order to choose between the Monarchy and the Republic, where the latter gained the upper hand. Furthermore the vote occurred for the first time with a suffrage extended to women for the election of the members of Constituent Assembly. Following two years of intense work, on 1st January 1948, the Constitution of the Republic of Italy was introduced in substitution of the Albertine Statute.

In Italy, the existing form of government corresponds to a Parliamentary Republic. According to the Constitution, the Parliament is the institution which represents people’s voice: it is composed of two chambers (Deputy Chamber and Senate), and its members are elected every 5 years by people (art 55 ss.). The Parliament detains the power to nominate the President of the Republic (art 83), and the power of concession and repeal of the vote of confidence (art 94).

The political orientation of Italy is determined by both the Government and the Parliament.

The Government is composed by the President of the Ministers’ Council and the Ministers (art 92). The President of the Ministers’ Council, even if formally nominated by the President of the Republic (art. 92 par. 2), needs to present himself at the Chambers in order to receive their fiduciary vote (“voto di fiducia”): this means that politically the government becomes responsible of its actions in front of the Parliament, the only political body that has the power to provoke the obligatory resignation of the Government. The Parliament in every single moment can decide on a demotion of the Government.

The President of the Republic, which is the Commander in chief and represents the national unity (art. 87), is elected by the Parliament in a common hearing (art. 83) and holds his office for seven years (art. 85). He has the power to nominate the Government and to dismiss the Chambers (art. 88).

ii. The Italian Constitution was approved by the Constituent Assembly on 22nd December 1947, and entered in the force on 1st January 1948. The “Constituent fathers” beard the idea of fundamental human rights as a body of rights which pre-exists and is independent from the existence of the State, being this one the institution that simply recognizes those rights (but does not “assign” them) and has the duty to guarantee them in every possible way. In this context art. 2 of the Constitution states that the Republic recognizes and guarantees inviolable human rights, both as an individual, and in a social formation where personality is developed, and it requires the fulfilment of mandatory duties of political, social and economical solidarity. The Constituent Assembly decided to include in the text of the Constitution an ensemble of disposition able to guarantee the protection of human rights, being the Constitution the most important juridical tool of the Italian system of Law. This allows human rights to have pervading strength, thus penetrating every single corner of the legal order. This pre-eminence of the Constitution in front of ordinary law enacted by the Parliament entails that every Judge has the duty to apply the law, but has to keep always into deep consideration the ethical principles enshrined in the Constitution, which acquire a higher value in respect of general principle of the legal order. Everything revolves around the supreme value of human dignity: in the Italian legal order human rights are the limit and justification of every single aspect of the Italian regulations (whatever subject treated).<sup>42</sup>

It is important to underline the fact that in the Italian legal order a “Bill of rights” does not exist, but rather, in line with the choices of the constituent fathers, it is possible to identify rules spread in the Constitutional Chart, which protect inviolable human rights. Furthermore, there is no a numerus clauses list of such principles: this shows that the category handled is open to the acquisition of other rights, as society progressively recognizes them. Examples of dispositions that embody the rights protected by art. 2 of the Constitution are provided in articles 13, 16, 21, regarding, respectively, personal liberty, freedom of movement and mobility rights, liberty of expression etc. It is important to add that the first twelve articles of the Italian Constitution are considered “fundamental principles” of the legal order, and differently from the other constitutional rules, they are not modifiable, not even with a constitutional revision law.

---

<sup>42</sup> MADDALENA P., La Dichiarazione Universale dei Diritti dell’ Uomo e la Costituzione della Repubblica Italiana; giudizio di equità ed identità tra equità e diritto, Riv. It. Scienze Pol., LXXIV, 3.

Italian Constitution contains many specific provisions regarding the protection of children. The first two have a general scope, therefore is possible to consider them also as a reference to the figure of the minor: art.2; art. 3 (see chapter 1: Introduction; part. 1: General, par. i.). The remaining rules address in a more specific way the figure of the “child”, considering him as weak subject to be granted with protection; the Constitution, anyway, does not take into consideration the point of view of “rights of the child”, but prefers to focus much more on those subjects who are bound to “duties to be fulfilled towards the child.” Specific articles may be provided:

- art. 30, according which it is at the same time a duty and right of parents to support, raise and educate their children, even if born out of wedlock. In case of incapacity of the parents, the State provides for the fulfilment of their duties. The law ensures to children born out of wedlock every form of legal and social protection that is compatible with the rights of members of the legitimate family. The law lays down the rules and limitations for the determination of paternity;
- art. 31, according to which the Italian Republic gives assistance to the formation of the family and the fulfilment of its duties, with particular consideration for large families, through economic measures and other benefits. The Republic protects mothers, children and the young by adopting the necessary provisions;
- art. 34, according to which schools are open to everyone and primary education, which is imparted for at least eight years, is compulsory and free. Capable and deserving pupils, including those without adequate finances, have the right to attain the highest levels of education. The Republic renders this right effective through scholarships, allowances to families and other benefits, which shall be assigned through competitive examinations;
- art. 37, according to which working women have the same rights and are entitled to equal pay for equal work. Working conditions must allow women to fulfil their essential role in the family and ensure special appropriate protection for the mother and child. The law establishes the minimum age for paid work and the Republic protects the work of minors by means of special provisions and guarantees them the right to equal pay for equal work.

iii. Within the Italian judicial system, there are judicial bodies organs that specifically control the implementation of national and international instruments aimed at the protection of human rights. Nonetheless, there is a significant number of organizations who have the task of keeping constantly under control the actual adoption of those provisions and that, either on the initiative of the State itself or on the initiative of International Organizations, help to ensure human rights protection.

Regarding the Protection of Children topic, for example, Legge n. 451/1997 has established the Osservatorio per l'infanzia e l'adolescenza, (i.e. Observatory for children and adolescents) and the Commissione Parlamentare per l'infanzia e l'adolescenza, (i. e. Parliamentary Commission for Children and the teens) who have the task of drawing up reports and official documents in the matter for which they were created. Another example is the Autorità per l'infanzia e l'adolescenza (i. e. Authority of children and adolescence ) whose powers are embodied by an Ombudsman that encourages the Government, Regions and other local authorities to take appropriate actions to promote and protect the rights of individuals under age. The Ombudsman formulates proposals and observations and express opinions on draft laws and normative acts of the Government in the field of children protection. The task of the Ombudsman is not only to promote the respect of international treaty law and European law, but also to spread best practices and agreements protocols.

The Italian Constitution is made up of provisions that have a different nature; as a matter of fact, it is possible to distinguish two main categories: “programmatic norms” and “perceptive norms”. The first ones are rules having political nature and whose provisions are addressed to the State body as a whole, and especially to the legislator which has to give them practical implementation. Programmatic norms have no direct effect, but prescribe wide objectives that the legislator has to pursue, and may at least be challenged in front of the courts whenever the State obstacles their achievements rather than promoting it. On the other hand, perceptive norms are addressed to all the subjects of State order, and directly entitle the citizens with full rights that are to be protected without waiting concrete tools provided by the legislator.<sup>43</sup> If it's true that there is a Constitutional Court in Italy, nonetheless individuals cannot apply to it directly for the protection of their rights: even if dealing with an assault to a Constitutional right, this protection will be granted necessarily by ordinary Judges. The Constitutional Court's task, in fact, is limited to the verification of laws' compatibility with Constitutional provisions and only when a judge has raised the question of unconstitutionality in a proceeding brought to his attention.

---

<sup>43</sup> An example of the latter can be individuated in art. 21 of the Constitution which states that everyone has the right to freely express their thoughts through speech, writing or any other means of communication.

iv. The Suprema Corte di Cassazione is at the top of the Italian jurisdictional system and it's competent for both civil and criminal law. Art. 65 of the Rules on Judiciary system (Legge n. 12, enacted on 30th January 1941) establishes one of its main functions, i. e. to ensure the observance and the uniform interpretation of the Italian law, the unity of the national law, and supervises the respect of the limits of the various jurisdictions. One of the key features of its mission is the issue of a third degree judgment, following the decision of a Tribunal and the decision of a Court of Appeal; it has to be stressed, however, that according to Italian Law, our Supreme Court is not allowed to reconsider the facts underlying a previous decision, unless their knowledge is necessary in order to better evaluate the remedies available for the complainant.<sup>44</sup>

According to art. 111 of the Constitution, the appeal to the Supreme Court in criminal matters is always allowed against decisions and measures that restrict personal freedom and are issued by ordinary or special courts. The convicted person is allowed to apply to the Supreme Court against a decision of a Court of Appeal, only for reasons of legitimacy that are set by art. 606 c.p.p.: e.g. the appeal judge has failed or misunderstood the application of Criminal law, he did not comply with criminal procedural law, he failed to take decisive evidence for the decision on the trial, or has shown a manifest lack of logical reasoning in the decision.

When the Court finds one of the defects above mentioned, it has the power and the duty not only to set aside the decision of the Judge in the lower grade, but also to include the principle of law that the contested Judge must observe when reviewing the facts of the case. The principles laid down by the Supreme Court are not, however, binding for judges and do not constitute a binding precedent, but only a source of persuasive authority for future decisions on the same topic. In the law in action, however, reality, the judges of lower courts comply with decisions of the Supreme Court in the most cases.

The Supreme Court has also the task of solving conflicts of jurisdiction and conflicts in competence: in the first case, the Court has to indicate, when a conflict occurs between the ordinary courts and the special, Italian or foreign, who has the power to treat the proceeding; in the second case, the Court has to resolve a conflict between two lower courts.

---

<sup>44</sup> Art. 360 c.p.c.; art. 606 c.p.p.

v. Art. 85 c.p. sets out the requirements that must be fulfilled to assess someone's criminal liability, namely in his capacity of discernment to fully understand and will the crime. Many provisions set out also the cases that excluded criminal liability: artt. 87 - 88 describe the concept of a minor age. As already explained in the previous chapters, in the Italian system a "minor" is considered to be a person who is under eighteen years of age. From the point of view of criminal liability of the minor it is necessary to distinguish, however, two different levels:

- art. 97, according to which, criminal liability cannot be attributed, when at the time he/she committed the crime, he/she had not completed their fourteenth years of age;
- art. 98 according to which the minor is liable, if at the time he committed the crime, he/she was at least fourteen years old, but not yet eighteen, and if he/she had the will and the ability to understand the consequences of his crime; in this case, the punishment set by the law of the crime is reduced"

From these two provisions the discipline of juvenile criminal responsibility can be easily deduced: in the first case (art. 97 c.p.) there is an absolute presumption of lack of ability or will of the minor of 14 years. The child who had committed the crime, not being liable, will be acquitted and is not subject to penalty. The second case, however, provides two different scenarios: if the child had an age between fourteen and eighteen, the judge will have to determine in each case whether the person who committed the crime is capable or not to understand and take action, and thus being liable. If the judge considers non-existent the capacity of understanding and taking action, the minor will be acquitted, if, instead, the judge assesses the existent capacity of understanding and taking action the child, who has reached the age of fourteen, will be considered liable and penalties would be reduced.

Statistics on children prisoners are available, and these are constantly updated thanks to the work of the Dipartimento di Giustizia Minorile, i.e. the Department of Juvenile Justice, which is an agency of the Ministry of Justice. The last update refers to the 15th December 2011 and the statistics cover the period from 12/01/2010 to 30/11/2011. The statistics mention a high percentage of children held for crimes against for robbery, assaults, and crimes related to drug dealing. Most of the minors in Juvenile Jails are male (94%) and Italian (67%)<sup>45</sup>.

2 SUBSTANTIVE CRIMINAL LAW

2.1 Sexual Abuse

i. After twenty years of parliamentary debates, the discipline of sexual crimes was changed with Legge n. 66/1996, which introduced a new general category of crime, namely the sexual violence, and collocated it not anymore in the part of the Italian criminal code concerning crimes against public morality and good behaviour, but in the chapter related to crimes against personal freedom. The intent was to consider sexuality not anymore as an indecorous and immoral way to give vent to luxuries (negative meaning), which offends common sense and morality, but as a free choice, a way to express individuality and personality (positive meaning).

For this reason, the offences of carnal conjunction and indecent violent acts were abrogated (former art. 519 and 521 c.p.) and substituted with the new crime of sexual violence (art. 609 bis c.p.). Carnal conjunction was violence or a threat through which an agent constrained someone to have a sexual intercourse with him/her (with penetration); indecent violent act was a violence or a threat through which an agent constrained someone to have a physical contact with him/her (not necessary with penetration). Now, sexual violence occurs when someone with violence [material or potential, able to coerce someone's will] or threat [psychical coercion] or abuse of authority [particular relation between the agent and the victim, e.g. kinship, employment, education,...] constricts another person to commit or be subjected to sexual acts or induces another person to commit or to be subjected to sexual acts. The concept of sexual act includes all the attitudes which, according to common sense and jurisprudence, express a sexual impulse of an agent that, through a violence, threat, abuse, deception or others, leads to a corresponding invasion of the sexual sphere of the passive subject<sup>46</sup>. Because of the fact that sexuality is a dynamic and complex reality which expresses itself at different levels (physical, psychological, moral, cultural), there is still an ongoing debate on it.

---

<sup>45</sup> Dipartimento Giustizia Minorile, Ufficio I del Capo Dipartimento, Servizio Statistica: Istituti penali per i minorenni, anno 2011.

<sup>46</sup> Cassazione Penale, section III, n. 35118/2004.

In doctrine, different trends wonder about the extent of this new concept that could be intended as wider, smaller or equal to the two previous ones:

- equal, in continuity with the previous, therefore as a synthesis of carnal conjunction and indecent violent act;<sup>47</sup>
- wider, because sexual activity is every conduct which has an erotic significance in the subjective sphere of the author or victim. It is a subjective notion which, therefore, does not necessary require the physical contact element (it can be, for example, be exhibitionism, voyeurism, self-erotism).<sup>48</sup>
- smaller, because it refers only to a physical act, according to the definition given by science and medicine. It is an objective notion which, therefore, excludes the cases of “bad touch”, “footie”, “pinch”, “cheek kiss”.<sup>49</sup>

Also in jurisprudence there is not a common vision:

- before 1966, every act of violation of someone's body was considered an indecent violent act if it was able to excite the agent, also in a non-complete or in a short way,

---

<sup>47</sup> BELTRANI S. –MARINO R. , Le nuove norme sulla violenza sessuale, Esselibri-Simone, Milano, 1996.
BORGOGNO R., Il delitto di violenza sessuale, in AA. VV., I reati sessuali, a cura di COPPI, Giappichelli, Torino, 2007. DEL CORSO, Commento agli articoli 3 e 4 della Legge 15.2.1996, in Legislazione Penale, 1996.

NAPPI A., Commento alle nuove norme contro la violenza sessuale, in Gazzetta Giuridica, n. 8, 1996.

PISA P., Commento alle nuove norme contro la violenza sessuale, in Diritto Penale e Processo, 1996.

ROMANO B., Delitti contro la sfera sessuale della persona, Giuffrè, Milano, 2007.

<sup>48</sup> AMBROSINI G., Le nuove norme sulla violenza sessuale, Utet, Torino, 1997.

ANTOLISEI F., Manuale di diritto penale, parte speciale, Giuffrè, Milano, 2007.

MARINI G., Delitti contro la persona, Giappichelli, Torino, 1996.

MULLIRI G., La “nuova” fattispecie di violenza sessuale messa alla prova da un caso piuttosto singolare, in Giurisprudenza di Merito, 2004, n. 2.

PECORARO ALBANI A., Violenza sessuale e arbitrio del legislatore, Jovene, Napoli, 1997.

VESSICHELLI M., Con l'aumento del minimo edittale a cinque anni ora è più difficile il patteggiamento, in Guida al Diritto, 1996, n. 9.

<sup>49</sup> BALBI G., voce Violenza sessuale, Enciclopedia Giuridica Treccani VII, Roma, 1999.

CADOPPI A., Commento art. 609 bis c.p., in Commentario delle norme contro la violenza sessuale e contro la pedofilia, a cura di CADOPPI A., Cedam, Padova, 2006.

DAMINI P., Sulla nozione di “atti sessuali” ex art. 609 bis c.p.: nuova Legge, vecchia giurisprudenza?, in Indice Penale, 1998.

PALUMBIERI S. R. , Introduzione e violenza sessuale, in CADOPPI-CANESTRARI-PAPA, I reati contro la persona, Utet, Torino, 2006.

because it was irrelevant the real erotic satisfaction<sup>50</sup>. In this case, the kiss could have had criminal relevance;

- after 1966, it was valorised the subjective component of the sexual act, which necessary had to involve physical parts of the body able to excite the other, regardless of the concrete sexual satisfaction, considering the intent of the author<sup>51</sup>. In any case, the only sexual impulse was not sufficient to determine a crime<sup>52</sup>, because it was necessary to focus on the act itself and to value its ability to injure someone's sexual freedom;
- recently, the attention has been focused on the objective component of the sexual act, which necessary affects a zone of the body considered erogenous by medicine, science, psychology and, therefore, compromises someone's sexual determination<sup>53</sup>. In this case, exhibitionism, voyeurism and self-erotism are not considered sexual acts anymore, but a “cheek kiss” can still be (differently from what said by the doctrine).

Concluding, there is not a common opinion about the concept of sexual act. Notwithstanding, we can say that the attention is now focused on the act itself, which has to be invasive of someone's body and, therefore, personality. But, still, there is not a general definition of erogenous zone. For this reason, the judgment must necessary be relative, depending on the case analyzed and considering people involved, situation and social-cultural context<sup>54</sup>. Therefore, a “cheek kiss” could be considered a sexual act or not.

ii. According to art. 85 c.p., nobody can be punished for a fact set forth by law if, at the moment of the commission, he/she was not indictable. Someone is indictable if he/she is in full possession of his/her faculties (mentally capable). This is called imputability that is being psychologically mature and mentally sane (not deviated by other circumstances such as childhood, alcohol, drugs, etc).

According to art. 42 c.p., nobody can be punished for an action or an omission set forth by law as a crime, if he/she has not committed it with conscience and will. This is called

---

<sup>50</sup> Cass. Pen., section III, 29/09/1986.

<sup>51</sup> Cass. Pen., section III, n. 1040/1996; Cass. Pen., section III, n. 1193/1997; Cass. Pen., section III, n. 34128/2006;

Cass. Pen., section V, 24/11/2000.

<sup>52</sup> Cass. Pen., section III, n. 37395/2004; Cass. Pen., section III, n. 15464/2004.

<sup>53</sup> Cass. Pen., section III, n. 21167/2006.

<sup>54</sup> Cass. Pen., section III, n. 28815/2008.

voluntariness or culpability, that is understanding the meaning of the committing/committed fact, being conscious of its possible verification<sup>55</sup>. Inside the psychological element of the crime, we can distinguish: intent, big negligence, involuntariness and objective liability. A crime is committed with intent, or according to intent, when the harmful or dangerous event, which is the result of the action or omission and at the same time the cause of the existence of the crime, is foreseen and wanted by the agent as consequence of his/her action or omission” (art. 43 co. 1 c.p.). When the agent has acted with intent, he/she has foreseen the event (in all its elements), has developed a judgement and then has acted according to it. Depending on its intensity<sup>56</sup>, we can distinguish among different situations:

- premeditated intent, when there is a lapse of time between the conception and the enactment of the crime, in which there can be a reinforcement of the criminal intent and a preparation of crime's modalities;
- direct intent, when the agent is aware of each element that constitutes the crime and foresees as sure and highly probable that his/her conduct will include them;
- wilful intent, when the agent is aware of the event which constitutes the crime and takes it as purpose of his/her action;
- indirect intent, when the agent acts knowing that the event is a sure consequence of his/her action or is highly probable and accepts this risk;
- eventual intent, when the agent is aware of the fact that his/her conduct might produce certain unlawful consequences and therefore acts accepting this risk.<sup>57</sup>

In the majority of the offences against children, they are sufficient a generic intent (the agent is conscious that his/her act is invasive and harmful of the other's sexual freedom) and an eventual intent.<sup>58</sup> Regarding international liability, art. 604 c.p. states<sup>59</sup> that the dispositions

---

<sup>55</sup> Actually, the concepts just indicated are deeply and widely debated among doctrine and jurisprudence. There are entire manuals just on them so, this is not the right place to go inside their meaning, but it is sufficient to mention them.

<sup>56</sup> Basing on other criteria, we can distinguish it in: alternative/cumulative, of damage/of danger, generic/specific, concomitant/antecedent/subsequent.

<sup>57</sup> There is a wide jurisprudence and doctrine on the subtle difference between eventual intent and recklessness. We have the first when the agent, thus acting for another purpose, has accepted the risk that from his/her conduct can derive a criminal event, as consequence of it. We have the latter when the agent, thus foreseeing that the event could be a possible consequence of his/her conduct, acts hoping that it will not happen, so he/she does not accept the risk.

<sup>58</sup> Artt. 600 bis, ter, quater, quater.1, quinquies, art. 609 bis, ter, quarter c.p. with the exclusion of art. 609 quinquies

related to the offences against children are applied also when the fact is committed in a foreign country by an Italian citizen, or against an Italian citizen, or by a foreigner and an Italian citizen together.

iii. The legal age for engaging in sexual activities is 14 years old, as it can be understood by reading the dispositions regarding the protection of minors' sexuality, introduced by Legge n. 66/1996 (which have then been recently modified by the act of law ratifying the Lanzarote Convention): art. 609 quater c.p. (sexual activities with minors)<sup>60</sup>, 609 quinquies c.p. (child corruption), 609 sexies c.p. (ignorance of the age of the offended). At this time, a person acquires sexual freedom “in positive”, intended as freedom of having sexual activities with third parties; under this threshold, having sexual activities is forbidden, even if the minor is consenting, but the criminal sanction affects only the partner of the minor, as indicated in artt. 609 quater and 609 quinquies c.p. The ratio of these norms is to protect a regular process of evolution and development of the minor, who is intended to be under danger when a sexual intercourse intervenes if this process is not completed<sup>61</sup>. It could be assumed that there is here a sort of sexual intangibility, since the disvalue of the criminal conduct does not lie on the non-consensuality of the sexual act, but on its precocity itself<sup>62</sup>.

There are two exceptions for this threshold: art. 609 quater par. 1, n. 2 c.p. and art. 609 quater par. 3 c.p.. The first refers to the situation in which an agent, who is in a particular relation with a minor younger than 16 but older than 14, has a sexual act with him/her: in this case, the disvalue of the conduct lies on the particular relation between the parties. The second refers to the case of consensual sexual activities between minors: it is not punishable the minor who, except for the cases covered by art. 609 bis c.p., commits sexual activities with another minor who is yet thirteen, if the difference between the two is not more than three years.. It is a special cause of non-criminality<sup>63</sup> which recognises the legitimacy of affective relationships between coetaneous as long as both of them are older than 13 years old, with the older one being no more than three years older than the younger one<sup>64</sup>.

---

c.p.

<sup>59</sup> Recently changed with Legge n. 172/2012.

<sup>60</sup> This article was reformed by Legge n. 38/2006.

<sup>61</sup> FIANDACA G. – MUSCO E., Diritto penale, Parte speciale, Zanichelli editore, Bologna, 2010.

<sup>62</sup> MANTOVANI F., Diritto penale, Cedam, Padova, 2011.

<sup>63</sup> Even if there are different opinions on the nature of this provision: cause of non-criminality, cause of justification, cause of liability's exclusion?

<sup>64</sup> This disposition partially differs from the Lanzarote Convention, which does not punish minors responsible

iv. Artt. 609 bis and 609 quater c.p. regulate abuses on minors and their sanctions; they need to be read in correlation within each others because they contemplate different situations: the first refers to the cases in which there is not the consensus of the minor, while the second implicitly requires it. In fact, art. 609 bis par. 1 c.p. contemplates the cases of abuse through coercion, for example with violence, material (use of force) or potential, while art. 609 bis par. 2 c.p. contemplates the cases of violence through induction, in which the agent: (1) abuses (takes advantages, exploits, uses) of physical or psychological inferiority (dependence) of the minor at the moment of the fact<sup>65</sup> or (2) deceives the minor by standing for someone else<sup>66</sup>. Therefore, there is a sort of co-participation of the victim which, for his/her particular vulnerability, is not able to resist to the induction or understand it (the capacity to consent is invalid)<sup>67</sup>.

v. According to art. 564 c.p., it is punished who commits incest in a way that generates public scandal with a descendent or forefather, a sister/brother or someone else closely related to him/her (the last one also known as “relative in direct line<sup>68</sup>”). The sanction is increased in the case of incestuous relationship, that is a continuous relationship of incest, and in case of incest/incestuous relationship committed by an adult on a minor. If the convicted is the father/mother, he/she is deprived of parental authority. Indeed, among family offences, there can be a formal concurrence of offences between the crime of incest and the one of sexual abuse. More in detail, public scandal, which is required by art. 564 c.p. for the perfection of the offence<sup>69</sup>, is a profound sense of perturbation/upset and disgust concerning the fact, spread among an undetermined number of persons external to the for sexual offences, because it retains that there may be more appropriate methods of dealing with them and that criminal prosecution should be a last resort.

---

<sup>65</sup> This inferiority can be also connected to pathologies, permanent or temporary, organic or functional or even due to ambient factors which can weigh on mental/physical capacity: Cass. Pen., section III, n. 15910/2009. With Legge n. 66/1996 there was a change of prospective, because it was eliminated the absolute presumption of invalidity of the consensus given by a person with a physical or psychical disability, in order to protect the right to sexual relationships also of persons with disabilities: Cass. Penale, section III, n. 12110/1999.

<sup>66</sup> We can have this hypothesis when the victim falls in error on the agent's identity (rare) or when the agent uses false name/status/qualification.

<sup>67</sup> Moreover, also in the cases sub 600 ter c.p. (child pornography), the sanction is increased if the fact is committed on a minor in state of infirmity or psychic disability, natural or induced.

<sup>68</sup> Kinship (forefathers-descendants): father/mother - son/daughter, grandfather/grandmother - nephew/niece. Relative in the so called “direct line” father in law - daughter in law, mother in law - son in law.

<sup>69</sup> The nature of the public incest is still discussed. Sometimes it is considered as an objective condition of punishment, independent from the agents' will (Cass. Pen., section I, n. 102756/1966), whereas sometimes it is considered as the event itself of the conduct.

parental group<sup>70</sup>. It is necessary linked to the behaviour of the lovers: it is not required that they directly manifest in public their relationship, but it is sufficient that they behave publicly or manifestly or incautiously<sup>71</sup>. However, public scandal does not need to be proved, because it is a normal effect in the case of incest<sup>72</sup>. Clearly, the norm aims to safeguard the sexual morality of the family, an institution that is deeply protected by Italian legislation<sup>73</sup>.

vi. According to art. 602 ter c.p., in the cases related both to child prostitution (art. 600 bis par.1) and to child pornography (art. 600 ter c.p. ), sanctions are increased if the fact is committed by a forefather, a parent (also adoptive), a person living together with the parent, a spouse, a relative closed to the minor, a guardian or any other person that for reasons of cure, education, instruction, vigilance, custody, health, labour or public office, such as a person with public mansions in the exercise of these functions, has to take care of or live with the minor. Therefore, in these cases, being in a particular relation or position with the minor, identifies an aggravating circumstance.<sup>74</sup>

Art. 609 quater c.p. extends to the cases of sexual abuses the punishments provided by art. 609 bis c.p. for the cases of sexual violence; this extension occurs when:

1) the minor is already 14 years old but younger than 16 and the offender is a forefather, parent (also adoptive), person who lives with the parent, guardian, any other person that for reasons of cure, education, instruction, vigilance, custody, health, has to take care of or live with the minor<sup>75</sup> (art. 609 quater par. 1 n. 2);

2) the minor is already 16 years old and the offender is in one of the particular relations just mentioned, and committed the crime abusing of the authority related to his/her position (art. 609 quater par. 2).<sup>76</sup>

Therefore, in these cases, we do not have an aggravating circumstance but an autonomous figure of crime.

---

<sup>70</sup> Cass. Pen., section III, n. 2639/1976.

<sup>71</sup> Cass. Pen., section III, n. 2639/1976; Cass. Pen., section I, n. 102756/1966; Cass. Pen., section I, n. 101347/1966.

<sup>72</sup> Cass. Pen., section I, n. 105973/1967.

<sup>73</sup> In fact, marriage between consanguineous is forbidden and children born from an incest cannot be recognised if both the parents were in mala fide (art. 251 c.c.).

<sup>74</sup> This article has been recently introduced with Legge n. 172/2012.

<sup>75</sup> If there is not one of these kinds of relation between the agent and the minor, the offence is not configured (Cass. Pen., section III, n. 4761/1997).

<sup>76</sup> This par. has been partially modified by Legge n. 172/2012.

Art. 609 quinquies c.p., regarding child corruption, provides an increased sanction when the fact is committed by a forefather, parent (also adoptive), person who lives with the parent, guardian, any other person that for reasons of cure, education, instruction, vigilance, custody, health, has to take care of or live with the minor. Here, the fact of being in a particular relation or position with the minor identifies aggravating circumstances.<sup>77</sup>

2.2 Child Prostitution

vii. The Convention on Action against Human Trafficking was signed by Italy on 8th June 2005, without any reservations; it was then ratified on 29th January 2010 and made effective on 1st March 2011.

viii. According to art. 600 bis c.p.<sup>78</sup>, it is punishable for child prostitution who:

- recruits for prostitution someone younger than 18 years old (par. 1, n. 1)<sup>79</sup>;
- induces to prostitution someone younger than 18 years old (par. 1, n. 1);
- encourages the prostitution of someone younger than 18 years old (par. 1, n. 2);
- exploits the prostitution of someone younger than 18 years old (par. 1, n. 2);
- manages the prostitution of someone younger than 18 years old (par. 1, n. 2)<sup>80</sup>;
- organizes the prostitution of someone younger than 18 years old (par. 1, n. 2)<sup>81</sup>;
- controls the prostitution of someone younger than 18 years old (par. 1, n. 2);
- profits from prostitution of someone younger than 18 years old (par. 1, n. 2);
- commits sexual activities, for money or other economic utility, even if just promised, with a minor being already 14 years old (par. 2).

In order to allow an easy understanding of the legal provision, definitions of the terms used above are provided here:

- to recruit: to call upon minors in order to induce/encourage/exploit them;

---

<sup>77</sup> Moreover, there is another disposition which is relevant, namely art. 572 c.p., which punishes abuses/mistreatment inside the family.

<sup>78</sup> Art. introduced by Legge n. 269/1998 and modified by Legge n. 38/2006. Also articles 600 ter, quater, quater.1, quinquies c.p. were introduced by this same act of law.

<sup>79</sup> This is a new hypothesis of child prostitution introduced with Legge n. 172/2012.

<sup>80</sup> This is a new hypothesis of child prostitution introduced with Legge n. 172/2012.

<sup>81</sup> This is a new hypothesis of child prostitution introduced with Legge n. 172/2012.

- to induce: to create in someone a will of self-prostituting, to make stronger an existing intention of self-prostituting, to make someone to desist from the idea of stopping this activity<sup>82</sup>. The crime is realised when the minor has been convinced and has concretely started the activity<sup>83</sup>;
- to encourage: to determine more favoured conditions for the exercise of child prostitution<sup>84</sup>;
- to exploit: to receive benefits from child prostitution;
- to manage: to coordinate the normal functioning of a group of child prostitution;
- to organize: to set up/to establish a group of child prostitution;
- to control: to have a general vision of the function/organization/etc of a group of child prostitution;
- to profit: to receive any utility derived from child prostitution.

The definition of child prostitution is compatible with the one in art. 19.2 of the Lanzarote Convention. Indeed, it has to be clarified that Italian criminal code punishes a wider range of circumstances. As an example, art. 600 quinquies c.p. concerning sexual tourism, punishes whoever organises or promote travels finalized to the fruition of prostitution activities damaging minors. In this case, it is required neither the concrete fruition of child sexual activities nor the concrete accomplishment of the travel: it is a so called crime of abstract or presumed danger.

ix. Italian law system protects the free psycho-physical development of the minor, which can be under danger with any commercialization of his/her body; for this reason, both the recruiter and the user are criminalized. Since it is sufficient just a generic intent, meaning that the agent has to have the representation of the typical elements of the fact (among those, the age under 18 of the person he/she is dealing with), the offender cannot use as an excuse the fact that he/she did not know that the victim was younger than a certain age. Before September 2012, according to art. 609 sexies c.p., the awareness of the age of the offended/victim was relevant only in the cases sub art. 609 bis, ter, quater, octies c.p. if the

---

<sup>82</sup> Cass. Pen., section III, n. 7608/1998.

<sup>83</sup> If only the first condition is realised, we have just the attempt of the crime: Cass. Pen., section III, n. 42371/2007; Cass. Pen., section III, n. 21181/2009.

<sup>84</sup> Cass. Pen., section III, n. 10938/2001; Cass. Pen., section III, n. 7734/2000.

victim was younger than 14 years old. This provision has then been modified by Legge n. 152/2012: currently, the awareness of the age is relevant also: (1) in the case sub the new art. 609 undecies c.p.; (2) in all the mentioned cases if the victim is younger than 18 years old (not 14), except if the ignorance is unavoidable.<sup>85</sup> Moreover, another disposition has been introduced, art. 602 quater c.p. which is identical to art. 609 sexies, but refers to the crimes covered by artt. 600 bis, ter, quater, quater.1, quinquies, and 602 ter c.p.

2.3 Child Pornography

x. The Convention on Cybercrime was signed by Italy on the 23rd November 2001 (date of the opening of the signature), without any reservations; it was then ratified on 5th June 2008 and made effective on 1st October 2008<sup>86</sup>.

xi. The concept of pornography is still nebulous. In fact, even Legge n. 38/2006, which introduced the corresponding crime, does not give a definition, because it is difficult to define it without taking into consideration the single and specific context in which it can be found. For this reason, it is preferable to maintain it as an elastic element, adaptable from case to case.<sup>87</sup> Within the Italian legal order, it can be found a concept closed, but not coincident, to the one of pornography, namely that of obscene act: according to art. 529 c.p. this is an act or object which, in line with common sense, offends decencies, with the exclusion of what is considered an art or medical or science or similar work, unless it is offered on sale, sold, or procured for a minor, for purposes different from studies (that is, for primarily sexual purposes). A part of doctrine links pornography to the realization of sexual acts by/on a minor<sup>88</sup>. Another part, in accordance to jurisprudence, retains that pornography is every show/part of it consisting essentially in manifesting or soliciting the sexual instinct, through reproduction/representation/exhibition of genitals<sup>89</sup>. In any case, thank to the recent Legge n. 172/2012, art. 600 ter par. 6 c.p. provides now a legal definition of child pornography, which is any kind of representation, made through any kind of mean,

---

<sup>85</sup> This is different from what provided by the Lanzarote Convention, which does not contain provisions regarding awareness or ignorance of the victim's age, in regard to the alleged perpetrator of the offence.

<sup>86</sup> Italy has also authority (A) on it.

<sup>87</sup> So it has a value of an extra-juridical concept, even if can raise difficulties in relation to the definition of the element of the crime itself.

<sup>88</sup> FIANDACA G. – MUSCO E., Diritto penale, Parte speciale, Zanichelli editore, Bologna, 2010; MANTOVANI F., Diritto penale, Cedam, Padova, 2011.

<sup>89</sup> ROMANO B., Delitti contro la sfera sessuale della persona, Giuffrè, Milano, 2007; Cass. Pen., section III, n. 25464/2004; Cass. Pen., section III, n. 5397/2001; Cass. Pen., section III, n. 10981/2010.

that visually depicts a minor engaged in a real or simulated sexually explicit conduct or any depiction of a child's sexual organs for primarily sexual purposes. Clearly, this definition corresponds to the one given by art. 20 (2) of the Lanzarote Convention.

xii. The dispositions of the criminal code related to child pornography have been deeply changed by Legge n. 172/2012. For example, according to art. 600 ter c.p., it is punishable for child pornography who:

- realises pornographic exhibitions using minors (par. 1 n. 1), that is realizing private or public show, on air, for a plurality of audience (even if, by fact, there is only one person)<sup>90</sup>;
- produces pornographic materials using minors (par. 1), that is producing graphic/magnetic/electronic/visual supports which consent the indirect vision of pornographic exhibition, without requiring a lucrative purpose<sup>91</sup> (par. 1 n. 1);
- recruits minors for child pornography minors (par. 1 n. 2)<sup>92</sup>;
- induces minors to participate in pornographic exhibitions (par. 1 n. 2), that is to create in the minors the will of participate, with the concrete exhibition and production;
- profits from child pornography of minors, that is receiving any kind of utility (par. 1, n. 2)<sup>93</sup>;
- commercializes these pornographic materials (par. 2); this is different from the provision contained in par.. 1 because, in this case, there is an entrepreneurial activity (organization + lucrative purpose + destination for a plurality of consumers);
- distributes or divulges or spreads or publicizes these pornographic materials (par. 3), called pornographic proselytism; this is different from par. 2 and 4, because it is required neither the lucrative purpose nor a significant number of addressees (just three persons);
- distributes or divulges information (these information have to be neither new nor real, but they have to be specific)<sup>94</sup> finalized to sexual soliciting or exploitation of

<sup>90</sup> Cass. Pen., united section, n. 13/2000.

<sup>91</sup> With the concrete danger of diffusion: Cass. Pen., section III, n. 1814/2008.

<sup>92</sup> This is a new hypothesis of child pornography introduced by Legge n. 172/2012.

<sup>93</sup> This is a new hypothesis of child pornography introduced by Legge n. 172/2012.

<sup>94</sup> Cass. Pen., section III, n. 15927/2009.

minors, and this can be made by using any kind of means, i.e. through a chat line or a downloader software<sup>95</sup> (par. 3);

- offers or gives, also for free and also for just one occasion, these pornographic materials to a private and single person, i.e. through e-mail<sup>96</sup> (par. 4);
- attends to pornographic exhibitions in which minors are involved (par. 5).<sup>97</sup>

Moreover, article 600 quater c.p. punishes also the detention of child pornography material, since this provision aims at sanctioning the person who procures child pornography for himself/herself or another person or who possesses it, without requiring the effective use<sup>98</sup>. In this case is included also the conduct of downloading pornographic materials from a pay-website and saving it on a personal computer.<sup>99</sup>

In the end, article 600 quater.1, concerning virtual pornography, states that: the sanctions foreseen in artt. 600 ter and quater c.p. are applied also when pornographic materials represent virtual images realized using images or parts of images of minors (in this case the sanction is reduced of 1/3). Virtual images are images that are not associated, totally or partially, to a real situation, but that seem real thank to a graphic elaboration.

In conclusion, nowadays the attribution of criminal liability is fully compatible with the one contained in the Lanzarote Convention: artt. 600 ter and quater.1 c.p. reflect art. 20 (1) lett. a, b and c and this is made even in a more specific way; art. 600 quater and quater.1 reflect art. 20 (1) lett. d and e. A little difference can be found regarding art. 20 (1) lett. f. In fact, art. 600 ter criminalizes directly the conduct of the offer, not of the receiver, but then it is with an extensive interpretation of the article that the receiver is punished too; finally, art. 600 quater c.p. criminalizes the conduct of procuring and possessing pornographic materials and not the conduct of just obtaining access to it, which is not sanctioned (differently from the Lanzarote Convention).

xiii. Regarding artt. 20 (3) and 20 (4) of the Lanzarote Convention, we can notice that:

---

<sup>95</sup> Cass. Pen., section III, n. 2842/2000; Cass. Pen., section III, n. 11169/2009; Cass. Pen., section III, n. 28524/2009. The crime is concrete when the material is on-line, without requiring a consequent download:

Cass. Pen., section III, n. 25232/2005.

<sup>96</sup> Cass. Pen., section III, n. 2421/2000; Cass. Pen., section III, n. 5397/2002.

<sup>97</sup> This is an important introduction that was deeply debated in the Parliament and which was the most controversial point of the ratification act of law. Before this, the mere attendance to child pornography was not punished.

<sup>98</sup> Cass. Pen., section V, n. 36094/2006.

<sup>99</sup> Cass. Pen., section III, n. 41570/2007; Cass. Pen., section III, n. 42100/2007.

- art. 600 quater.1 c.p. does criminalize virtual pornography;
- art. 600 ter c.p. does not criminalize the conduct of realizing or producing or inducing pornography when this happens for affective or libidinous reasons, only for a private use, without any cession or commercialization or diffusion or exhibition to a third person<sup>100</sup>.
- art. 600 quater c.p. sanctions whoever procures or is in possess of pornographic materials for a period of time, also if it is just for personal utilization, even if he/she does not actually use it; however, just consulting or watching the material online is not sanctioned.

xiv. As mentioned above, art. 600 ter par. 1 c.p. criminalizes also whoever (even a minor) induces minors to participate in pornographic exhibitions. It does not highlight any difference between recruitment and coercion, but art. 602 ter c.p. indicates as aggravating circumstance the fact of inducing the minor to prostitution/pornography with violence or threat (coercion) or abusing of his/her state of necessity. The mere attendance is now criminalized (art. 600 ter par. 5), without using the reservation right stated in art. 21(2) of the Lanzarote Convention.

2.4 Corruption of Children

xv. Art. 609 quinquies<sup>101</sup> c.p. punishes whoever:

- commits sexual acts in presence of a minor younger than 14 years old, in order to make him/her witness it (par. 1);
- makes a minor younger than 14 years old witness sexual acts, in order to induce him/her to commit or be subjected to sexual acts (par. 2)<sup>102</sup>;
- shows a minor pornographic materials, in order to induce him/her to commit or be subjected to sexual acts (par. 2)<sup>103</sup>.

The purpose of the norm is to condemn deliberate exhibitionism. The agent does not have to commit sexual acts with the minor, but just to make them in front of him/her, alone or with another partner, or show to the minor pornographic material. The norm, before its modification, required the finalization of an act, so it was not sufficient just to show to the

<sup>100</sup> Cass. Pen., united section, n. 13/2000.

<sup>101</sup> Introduced by Legge n. 66/1996.

<sup>102</sup> This is a new hypothesis of child corruption introduced by Legge n. 172/2012.

<sup>103</sup> This is a new hypothesis of child corruption introduced by Legge n. 172/2012.

minor sexual images<sup>104</sup>. Currently, also this conduct is condemned: therefore, a strip-tease show in front of a minor can be punished. The presence of the minor is essential, also if only temporary<sup>105</sup>. The purpose of causing him/her to watch the act (that indicates a wilful and specific intent), brings the consequence that the minor has to be conscious of these acts (not sleeping or with closed eyes)<sup>106</sup>; in any case, this does not mean that he/she has to understand them or their meaning. It is indifferent the fact that the minor witnesses the acts after a constriction through violence, threat, abuse of authority or after an induction through abuse or deceive (differently from art. 609 bis c.p.).

2.5 Solicitation of Children for Sexual Purposes

xvi. Italian criminal juridical order, as recently modified, directly criminalizes sexual gratification through information and communication technologies. The new art. 609 undecies c.p. foresees the crime of grooming, or solicitation of minors, which punishes whoever, for the purpose of committing any of the offences sub artt. 600, 600 bis, 600 ter, 600 quater, 600 quater.1, 600 quinquies, 609 bis, 609 quater, 609 quinquies, 609 octies c.p., solicits a minor younger than 16 years old. Solicitation is any act directed to steal the confidence of the minor with tricks, flatteries, threats, also through internet or other networks or means of communication. The article does not specify that the perpetrator should also propose a meeting and come to the meeting place.

xvii. The new art. 414 bis c.p. provides the crime of aiding and abetting (with the title of paedophilia and cultural child pornography) which punishes: (1) whoever, with any mean, also telematic, and with any form of expression, commits publicly aiding of the commission of one or more offences sub artt. 600 bis, 600 ter, 600 quater, 600 quater.1, 600 quinquies, 609 bis, 609 quater, 609 quinquies c.p.; (2) whoever commits public abetting of one of more of the same offences. In this regard, it is not possible to use as an excuse reasons or purposed of art, literature, history, customs.

The attempt is configurable in regard to the following provisions:

- 600 bis, if there is not the concrete exercise of the prostitution activity;

<sup>104</sup> FIANDACA G. - MUSCO E., Diritto penale, Parte speciale, Zanichelli editore, Bologna, 2010. But if the adult shows videos or pictures and makes self-erotism or exhibitionism in presence of the minor, then we have the crime: Cass. Pen., section III, n. 15053/2009.

<sup>105</sup> Cass. Pen., section III, n. 9111/2008.

<sup>106</sup> Cass. Pen., section III, n. 15633/2008.

- 600 ter par. 1 n. 1, if there is not the concrete exhibition/production of the material;
- 600 ter par.. 3, if there is only the offer on sale;
- 600 ter par. 4, if the addressee does not receive the material;
- 609 bis c.p. depending on the thesis: if the consumption of the offence is realised with the sexual act, therefore the attempt is possible; if the consumption of the offence is realised when there is a potential invasion on the other's sphere, therefore the attempt is difficult;
- 609 quater c.p., if there is not the consensus of the minor<sup>107</sup>;
- 609 quinquies c.p., if the minor is not conscious.

2.6 Corporate Liability

xviii.- ix.- xx. Art. 27 of Italian Constitution states that criminal liability is personal; on the other hand, according to general criminal law, the purpose of the penalty is to re-educate the guilty. The sum of these two principles leads to a third principle: societas delinquere non potest. That is why, for many years, only physical persons could be indicted for criminal offences. As consequence, if someone in a position at one legal person or entity performed actions set by law as criminal offences on behalf of their company, only he/she could be punished. However, the increased number of such cases registered in the last years brought the Italian Legislator to introduce a new institute inside Italian juridical order, with the D.lgs. 231/2001: the administrative-criminal liability of legal entities for the crimes committed by subjects which operate inside them. It is not just an administrative liability, but it cannot be only a criminal liability, so individual liability cannot be excluded when there is a corporate liability. According to this act of law, for the commission of certain offences, respond: (1) the physical person who has concretely acted for the total or partial benefit or interest of the company and has committed an offence indicated by law, and (2) the company itself, that is liable also when the physical person is not recognised or imputable (art. 5 of the D.lgs.)<sup>108</sup>.

The physical person can be whoever is in a so called “organic relation” with the company:

---

<sup>107</sup> However, in this case, it will be an attempt of sexual abuse, though sub art. 609 bis c.p.

<sup>108</sup> The company does not respond if the person has acted for his/her own interest or for that of third parties.

- a leading person, that has functions of representation, administration, direction of the company or of its organizational unit (with financial and functional autonomy) or that exercises, also by fact, management and control of it (art. 5 lett. a)<sup>109</sup>;
- a subordinated person, that is under direction or vigilance of a leading person (art. 5 lett. b)<sup>110</sup>.

The legal entity has to be: a private recognised legal person (foundation, association), an unincorporated partnership, a corporation, a public economic body, a not recognised association (art. 1). The sanctions can be: interdictive, pecuniary, a confiscation. The offences incriminated are: artt. 316 bis, 316 ter, 640 co. 2, 640 bis, 640 ter, 317, 318, 319, 319 ter, 320, 322 c.p.; the one sub art. 25 bis, the A-I sub art. 25 ter d.lgs 231/2001.

2.7 Aggravating Circumstances

xxi. First of all, it has to be born in mind that art. 61 c.p. lists a series of common aggravating circumstances that are applicable to every offence (under the condition that they are not already essential elements of the crime). Apart from these, there can also be special circumstances, applicable only to specific offences<sup>111</sup>. As concerns crimes against children, aggravating circumstances can be listed as it follows.

Art. 600, 600 bis co. 1 c.p., 600 ter c.p.: when the victim is a minor, the sanction is increased if the fact is committed by a forefather, a parent (also adoptive), a person who lives with the parent, a spouse, a relative closed to the minor, a guardian or any other person that for reasons of cure, education, instruction, vigilance, custody, health, labour or for being a public officer or a person with public mansions in the exercise of the functions, has to take care of or live with the minor<sup>112</sup> (according to art. 602 ter c.p.).

---

<sup>109</sup> The company does not respond if it proves one of the hypothesis indicated in art. 6 par. 1 of the D.lgs. 231/2001.

<sup>110</sup> In this case, the company responds only in the hypothesis indicated in art. 7 of the D.lgs. 231/2001.

<sup>111</sup> Art. 600 sexies c.p., containing a series of special circumstances, has been abrogated with the ratification law of Lanzarote Convention. Its dispositions has been inserted in the different articles mentioned so far.

<sup>112</sup> Art. 28(d) Lanzarote Convention.

Art. 600 bis co. 1 c.p., 600 ter c.p.: the sanction is increased when the fact is committed (1) taking advantages of the minor's psycho-physical disabilities<sup>113</sup>; (2) with constriction through violence or threat<sup>114</sup>.

Art. 609 bis: the sanction is increased when the fact is committed (1) on a minor younger than 14 years old; (2) with weapons, alcoholics, narcotics, drugs or any other means or substances gravely harmful for the health of the minor<sup>115</sup>; (3) by a disguised person or by a person who simulates the quality of public officer or in charge of a public office; (4) on a minor already under personal freedom limitations; (5) on a minor younger than 16 years old by his/her forefather, parent, guardian; (6) on a minor younger than 10 years old (according to art. 609 ter).

Art. 609 quinquies c.p.: the sanction is increased when the fact is committed by a forefather, a parent (also adoptive), a person who lives with the parent, a guardian, any other person that for reasons of cure, education, instruction, vigilance, custody, health, has to take care of or live with the minor.

Artt. 600 bis, ter, quater, quater.1, quinquies, 609 bis c.p. (on a minor), 609 quater, 609 quinquies, 609 octies c.p. (on a minor), 609 undecies c.p.: the sanction is increased when a criminal organization is direct to commit one of these crimes (according to art. 416 c.p.).

Differently from the Lanzarote Convention, the fact that one of these offences has been committed by several people acting together, is not an aggravating circumstance, but an autonomous criminal offence disciplined by art. 609 octies c.p.

2.8 Sanctions and Measures

xxii. The Italian criminal code pursues sexual offences against children in artt. from 600-bis to 600-octies, introduced by Legge n. 269/1998, and from art. 609-bis to art. 609-decies, introduced by Legge n. 66/1996. Now the ratification of the Lanzarote Convention, implemented in Italy on the 19 September 2012, has deeply modified the general status of the protection of children in Italian legal system.<sup>116</sup> The sanctions foreseen by artt. 600 bis, <sup>113</sup> Art. 28(c) Lanzarote Convention.

<sup>114</sup> Art. 28(b) Lanzarote Convention.

<sup>115</sup> Art. 28(a) Lanzarote Convention.

<sup>116</sup> DDL - Ratifica della Convenzione per la protezione dei minori contro lo sfruttamento sessuale, Lanzarote il 25/10/2007, Relazione sito del Ministero della Giustizia 600-ter, 600-quarter, 600-quarter bis, are imprisonment from six to twelve years for crimes of child prostitution, child pornography, possession of pornographic material and virtual pornography, and the application of fines sanctions varying according to the age of the victim. Unless the fact constitutes a more serious offense, everyone who attends exhibitions or pornographic performances where minors are involved is punished with the imprisonment up to three years and with economic sanctions from 1.500 up to 6.000 Euro<sup>117</sup>.

Moreover, there are aggravating circumstances that need to be analyzed. Art. 600-ter c.p. establishes that penalties are increased by a third to an half in the following hypothesis of crimes: for the crimes under artt. 600, 601, 602 c.p. if those crimes have been committed against someone under the age of eighteen; if the facts are aimed to the exploitation of prostitution, or to subject the victim to organ transplantation, in case from this facts a serious danger to the physical or psychological integrity of the victim arises; if the facts provided by the criminal code in Titolo VII, Capo III, Libro II, are committed to realize or to facilitate the crimes of artt. 600, 601 and 602 c.p.; according to articles 600-bis, par.1 and 600-ter c.p., if the fact is committed with violence or threats; if the fact is committed taking advantage of a minor's necessity according to the provisions of artt. 600-bis, par. 1 and 2, 600-ter, par.1, and 600-quinquies c.p.. Moreover, the article 602 ter, par.5 c.p. establishes that in the cases provided by artt. 600-bis, par. 1 and 2, 600-ter and 600-quinquies, as well as by artt. 600, 601 and 602, the penalty is increased by an half to two third if the crime is committed to harm a minor of sixteen year, or by subministration of alcohol, narcotics, drugs or substances otherwise harmful to the physical or mental health of the child, or if it is committed against three or more people.

On the other hand, art. 600-septies, par. 1 c.p. identifies a mitigating circumstance, which is a penalty diminution, for the crimes disciplined in the second section. The penalty is reduced by a third to an half if the accused tries to prevent the criminal activity avoiding further negative consequences for the victim, by concretely helping the police or the judicial authority to gather decisive evidence for the reconstruction of the facts or to capture other offenders.

---

<sup>117</sup> New parts and modification of Italian criminal code by the ratification of the Lanzarote Convention are based on a study to be referred to the Tribunal of Milano "Convenzione di Lanzarote e modifiche dell'ordinamento", by Andrea Conti starting by Italian Parliament law project number 1969.

With the ratification of the Lanzarote Convention, art. 414 bis c.p. was introduced (solicitation of children for sexual purposes): this provision sanctions with an imprisonment lasting from 18 months up to five years everyone who forces a child to prostitution or child pornography through any kind of means, also telematic, as well as who possesses paedopornographic material with the aim to commit sexual abuse or child corruption. The same sanction is provided also for those who praise such crimes in public.

To achieve a better understanding of the Italian legislation on this theme, our attention has to be focused on the combined provisions of artt. 600-septies, par. 2 and 609-nonies c.p., establishing accessory penalties and others related criminal effects: in particular, the conviction for any of the crimes provided by artt. 609-bis, 609-ter, 609-quater, 609-quinquies, 609-octies and 609-undecies c.p. and the offense referred to in art. 414-bis c.p. involve:

- loss of the parental power when the fact of being a parent is as a constitutive element of the crime or of its aggravating circumstance<sup>118</sup>;
- permanent exclusion from any office related to the protection, guardianship and administrative support;
- loss of the right to maintenance of the minor and exclusion from inheritance of the victim;
- temporary disqualification from public offices, meaning the disqualification from public offices for a period of five years following a sentence to imprisonment for three to five years;
- suspension of the exercise of a profession or an art;
- in any case the permanent exclusion from any activity related to the school, as well as from any kind of office or service in institutions or in other places having either private or public nature if they are mainly attended by children.

Furthermore, the sanctions for the crimes foreseen by artt. 600-bis, par.2, 609-bis c.p., in the aggravating hypothesis of artt. 609-ter, 609-quater, 609-quinquies and 609-octies, par. 3 c.p. establish the application of personal safety measures lasting at least for one year after executing the sentence. Such personal safety measures are:

---

<sup>118</sup> With the expression “constitutive element”, we meant that in case of its absence, the crime or the aggravating circumstance do not exist.

- movements and circulation restriction, as well as no entry in the places where minors are used to go;
- prohibition to do a job that usually requires contact with children;
- duty to inform the police about own residence and its eventually change.

Everyone, who violates those law dispositions, is punished with the imprisonment up to three years.

Indeed, according to the last paragraph of the new art. 600-septies. 2 c.p., it shall be stopped any commercial activity aiming at the commission of crimes against minors, whereas licenses and broadcasting authorizations used for the same scope shall be revoked.

Finally, as already explained in chapter 2, part 2, letter e, par. xvi., within the ratification of the Lanzarote Convention it was introduced art. 609-undecies c.p. regarding child grooming: this could be considered as a closing rule, since it provides that everyone who grooms a minor younger than sixteen years old, is sanctioned with the imprisonment lasting from one to three years, under the condition that the crime itself has not to be treated as a more serious offense or made in order to commit other crimes, namely those covered by artt. 600, 600-bis, 600-ter, 600-quater, 600-quater.1, 600-quinquies, 609-bis, 609-quater, 609-quinquies and 609-octies c.p.

The regulation of extradition can be found in art. 112 of the Constitution, in art. 13 c.p., as well as in artt. 697 ff. c.p.p. The main principles in the application of extradition are the following ones: prevalence of international or conventional law rules on the national ones, that can be applied in subsidiary way; the “double criminality” principle, according to which if the fact the extradition is requested for is not foreseen as an offense by both the Italian and the foreign law, extradition is not permitted; “speciality” principle, according to which the extradition cannot operate for different reasons than those for which it has been granted; ne bis in idem principle, according to which who has already been tried in Italy cannot be tried again in another Country for the same fact. Furthermore, extradition can be active or passive: from our point of view, it is active when the Italian State requests it, passive when another State requests it from Italy. While the first one is regulated by the law of the State receiving the claim, the passive one is related to a particular process: the foreign Country asks the Italian Justice Minister for extradition; he/she can either reject the claim giving reasons for the denial, or forward the request to the General Attorney of the Court of Appeal that orders the appearance of the accused for identification (art. 703. par. 2 c.p.p.). If the accused accepts the extradition, there is no need for a trial and the Minister can either accept the request within forty-five days (art. 708., par. 4 c.p.p.) or reject it or also remain silent (art. 708, par. 2 and 3 c.p.p.) revoking the provisional measure. On the other hand, if the accused does not accept the extradition, the Minister has to adopt the same decision within the same terms; then, after more investigations, the General Attorney issues an indictment within three months. After that, the President of the Court of Appeal fixes the date of the audience and informs the defender and the Authorities of the foreign country. Ten days later, the audience in full discussion with the parties takes place (art. 704 c.p.p.). In this situation, are taken in consideration any evidence showing any kind of guilt or respect for fundamental rights in the foreign country, as well as the absence of any persecution. The decision of the Court of Appeal can be brought before the Supreme Court, that can accept the request, with the consequence that provisional measures are ordered to apply.<sup>119</sup> xxiii. As a saying coming from the ancient Greek tradition quote, it is believable that human law may be hardly sufficient to punish who violates natural law. Since also within the animal world the protection of "puppies" is a rule, the protection of human minors can be considered as a rule of natural law. The difficulty to punish crimes against minors, here therefore intended as crimes against the rules of natural law, lays not on the sanctions themselves, but on their effects. In fact, however our domestic law provides many provisions in this regard, still it seems that they are not able to fully punish those crimes, not because they are not strong enough, but because crimes against children are never fully punishable, since they disrupt the marvellous world of innocence of children or the natural process of growing up of teenagers, two categories of individuals that shall be mostly protected by each community, also just because of a matter of natural law. Having considered that, it is however possible to say that the ratification of the Lanzarote Convention has introduced significant progress and should therefore be considered an achievement, but not a final point, in regard to the protection of child victims against sexual abuse.<sup>120</sup>

---

<sup>119</sup> TONINI P., Lineamenti di diritto processuale penale, 2009, Giuffrè Editore.

<sup>120</sup> LA MARCA S., "Abuso sessuale e maltrattamenti su minori", <http://www.centrostudiperizie.com/>.

xxiv. Criminal liability of legal persons was introduced by D.lgs. n. 231/2001, with the express prevision of sanctions and disqualifications for the crimes of sexual abuse, child prostitution, child pornography, making children participating in pornographic performances, corruption of children, solicitation of children for sexual purposes. Moreover, Italian system has adopted the provision of art. 26 of the Lanzarote Convention, which increases and specifies the concept of criminal liability of legal persons, considering liable who commit the crime to an own benefit, acting individually or like a part of an organ of a legal person, as well as covering a leading position within the legal person. Leading position is intended as power of representation of the legal person or authority to take decisions on behalf of the legal person or authority to exercise control within the legal person.

xxv. Confiscation is regulated by art. 600-septies c.p.: when condemning for crimes against children (artt. 600-bis – 600-octies c.p.), it can also be ordered by the Judge the confiscation of goods, of documents and of other instrumentalities used to offend, as well as of products, profits or prices originating from the crime. When this is not possible, the Judge orders the confiscation of goods of equivalent value to those being product, profit or price of the crime, upon the condition that the guilty has, directly or indirectly or through an intermediary, availability.

In regard to the bona fide third parties, it is protected by art. 600-septies c.p., that protects rights to refunds and compensation for damages from mandatory confiscation.

Art. 12-sexies of D.L. 306/1992, converted and amended by Legge n. 356/1992, provides special cases of confiscation: if it is pronounced the conviction for any of the crimes foreseen by artt. 600, 600-bis, par.1, 600-ter, par. 1 and 2, 600-quater.1, 600-quinquies, 601, 602 c.p., is always ordered the confiscation of money, goods and other benefits the offender cannot justify the origin of, despite the fact that he/she appears to be the owner or to have the availability in a measure that exceeds his level of income or his economic activity, as declared for income taxes purposes.

Moreover, art. 17, par. 2 of Legge n. 269/1998 institutes a special fund to be entered in the estimates of the Presidency of the Council of Ministers. This fund is originated from fines imposed, plus the amount of money confiscated and values arising from the sale of confiscated property pursuant to the same law. Principal destination of the fund is, in the measure of two thirds, the specific funding of preventive programs, assistance and recovery psychotherapy of children under the age of eighteen, victims of the crimes referred to artt. 600-bis to 600-quinquies c.p.; the remaining part of the fund is intended, within limits of available resources, to the recovery of those who recognize themselves liable for the crimes referred to in artt. 600-bis, par.2, 600-ter and 600-quater c.p., if they make appropriate request.

xxvi. If the crime has been committed within the family or within any other close environment of the child, special forms of protection are provided. In particular, art. 602-ter, par. 6 c.p. refers to aggravating circumstances: the sanction is increased by an half to two third, if the crime is committed by an ancestor, by the adoptive parent, or their spouse or partner, spouse or relatives up to the second degree, relatives to the fourth degree collateral, by a guardian or other person whom the child is entrusted for reasons of care, upbringing, education, security, housing, work, or by public officials or public servants in the performance of their duties or even if it is committed against a child in a state of illness or mental handicap, natural or induced.

The punishment is increased by art. 609-ter c.p. that, considering the prevision of art. 609-bis c.p. on sexual abuse, prescribes the sanction of imprisonment between six and twelve years, in two cases: the first one occurs if the guilty for those crimes is an ancestor, a parent, also adoptive, or the guardian and if the facts is committed against somebody younger than 16 years old; the second one if the crime is consumed inside or in the immediate vicinity of educational or training institution attended by the victim. This last hypothesis was regulated after the Legge n. 94/2009 was enacted.

Art. 609-quater c.p. - sexual offences against children – states that beyond the hypothesis regulated by art. 609-bis c.p., every ancestor, parent, also adoptive and also his/her partner, or a guardian or another person whom a minor younger than 16 years old is entrusted for reasons of care, upbringing, education, security, housing, or everyone living with the minor, commits sexual acts exploiting his/her particular position with this minor is punished with imprisonment by five to ten years (three to six years if the minor is already 16). Furthermore if the relationship between victim and abuser is stable coexistence, the penalty is increased up of an half, as provided by art. 609 quinquies, par. 3 c.p.

3 CRIMINAL PROCEDURE

3.1 Investigation

i. For the time of the investigations concerning crimes involving children as victims, Italian law prescribes the application of certain rules that are meant to protect children, indeed pursuing their “best interest”.

According to art. 609- decies c.p., first introduced by Legge n. 66/1996 and then recently modified by the ratification of the Lanzarote Convention, Minors courts have to be informed by State prosecutors whenever a person is prosecuted because of a crime against a minor.<sup>121</sup> In particular, this provision applies whenever it takes place a proceed of the crime of making or keeping an individual in slavery status (art. 600 c.p.) if the individual is a minor; of the crime of minor prostitution (art. 600 bis); of crimes involving pornographic shows and material (art. 600- ter c.p.); of crimes related to organization and promotion of sexual tourism (art. 600- quinqüies c.p.); of crimes related to transferring minors from a country to another in order to commit one of the crimes against children (art. 601 c.p.); of crimes related to buying and selling minors reduced in slavery condition (art. 602 c.p.); of sexual abuse (art. 609- bis c.p.), indeed when committed under aggravating circumstances (609- ter c.p.); of committing sexual acts with minors younger than 16 years old in the cases foreseen by art. 609- quater c.p.; of minors corruption (art. 609- quinqüies); of sexual violence committed in damage of a minor by a group of persons (art. 609- octies); and of the new crime of grooming (introduced by Legge 172/2012 within the new art. 609- undecies c.p.)<sup>122</sup>

Furthermore, when proceeding for one the above mentioned crimes, the pursuing of the best interest of the minor is concretely realized through measures of affective and psychological assistance, namely the possibility that the minor is assisted in every stage and grade of the procedure by his/her parents and/or other persons indicated by the minor, as well as by experts of well known associations dealing with victims of crimes against minors. Indeed, according to art. 609- decies, par. 3 and 4 c.p., child victims are in any case granted the assistance of Juvenile services of the Justice Administration and local institutions<sup>123</sup>. As a consequence, it can be said that, on the one hand, Social services assist victims in their everyday life and, on the other hand, they are equal partners of the judicial proceeding (criminal and/or civil), so as that they are involved in every stage and level of the judicial procedure.

In regard to procedural aspects, Italian criminal procedure code also provides several rules with the aim to prevent children from having to give evidence in Court at the presence of

---

<sup>121</sup> CRESPI A., ZUCCALA' G., FORTI G., Commentario breve al Codice Penale, Cedam, 2011, 2310.

<sup>122</sup> Already explained in Chapter II, part 2, lett. e, par. Xvi.

<sup>123</sup> CRESPI A., ZUCCALA' G., FORTI G., cit.

strangers and of the offender: In fact, making the children remembering facts related to the crime among strangers and offenders could hurt their psychological sphere.

More specifically, according to art. 398 par. 5-bis c.p.p.<sup>124</sup>, as modified by art. 14 of Legge n. 66/96 and also recently by Legge n. 172/2012, when a child has to give evidence during preliminary investigations, that is during the first part of a criminal procedure<sup>125</sup> concerning crimes against children, this shall be made in a way that does not hurt the psychology of the child. For example, he/she can be asked about the facts in a different place than the Court-even at his/her own home. Furthermore, answers given by children shall be recorded through audiovisual means, in order to be reproducible: important information can be delivered also by facial expressions and behaviours of children (silence, tears, nervous signs and drawings) when asked about facts, and therefore these registrations shall be analyzed by psychologists and other experts of child behaviours.

At this point, it is interesting considering the concrete meaning of the above mentioned provision. In this regard, a series of operations that shall be used during auditions of children has been identified by few commentators:

- Special setting: a room with one-way mirror and/or audiovisual loop connected to another room where there are lawyers, parents of the child and prosecutor. The environment should be friendly and should contain some toys according to the children's age;
- Times and methods of the interview: build a relationship with the child (create a friendly atmosphere); allow the child to stay with an adult at the beginning of the interview; ask the child to narrate the fact (during this step, the interviewer respects the narrative pauses); ask specific questions to the child (these questions are clear, simple, short and don't start with "who", "where" and "when")<sup>126</sup>.

<sup>124</sup> Art. 398, par. 5- bis c.p.p.: "In the case of investigations concerning offenses referred to in articles 600, 600-bis, 600-ter, 600-quater, 600-quinquies, 601, 602, 609-bis, 609-ter, 609-quater, 609-octies and 612-bis of Criminal code, the judge, if one of the people interested are child assumption of the test, with the ordinance referred to in paragraph 2, determine the place, time and detailed through which probative accident procedure, when the requirements for protection of people make it necessary or appropriate. The hearing can be held in a place other than the court, using the judge, if any, in special structures or, failing that, at the residence of the person concerned assumption the test. The witness statements must be fully documented by means of phonogram or audiovisual work. When there is a lack of recording equipment or technical staff, the judge use the expert report or technical advice", in GATTI G., MARINO R., PETRUCCI R., Codice Penale e Codice di Procedura Penale Simone, 2009, 398. It has to be added that with the ratification of the Lanzarote Convention these measures apply also in regard to the new crime of grooming, foreseen in the new art. 609- undecies c.p.

<sup>125</sup> The word "procedure" refers to what happens after a notice of crime is given until a judicial decision is taken, i.e. it refers also to the preliminary investigations phase, whereas the words "process" and "trial" (synonyms) refer only to what happens after closing the preliminary investigations, that is after the moment the Public Prosecutor exercises the so called "azione penale".

Furthermore, the Charter of Noto – created in 1996 by judges, lawyers, psychologists, psychiatrists, child psychiatrists and criminologists of I.S.I.S.C. (Superior Institute of International Criminal Sciences) and updated in 2011 – identifies the means of taking child's testimony (art. 7)<sup>127</sup>, attributes significance to video recording (art. 10)<sup>128</sup>, provides that in case of intrafamilial abuse the investigations must be extended to family members (art. 10)<sup>129</sup>, provides that just symptoms of discomfort manifested by children cannot be considered as indicators of specific sexual abuses (art. 13)<sup>130</sup>, attributes importance to probative accident (art. 15)<sup>131</sup> and provides that psychological assistance to the child shall be entrusted to a specialist (art. 18)<sup>132</sup>. Moreover, the Venice's protocol created in 2007 by lawyers, psychologists, psychiatrists and child psychiatrists identifies the guidelines that should be used by experts in cases of collective sexual abuses, and recognizes the fundamental importance of acting in the best interest of the child during the judicial procedure (art. 4)<sup>133</sup>, as well as of protecting child's dignity and privacy in all the phases of the criminal proceeding (art. 7).<sup>134</sup>

<sup>126</sup> DE CATALDO NEUBURGER L., La testimonianza del minore, Cedam, 2005, 309 ss.

<sup>127</sup> Art. 7: "Interview procedures must conform, in the form and articulation of the questions to cognitive skills, in the ability to comprehend language, in the ability to identify the context in which the autobiographical event may have occurred, in the ability to discriminate between internal and external events and the level of psycho-affective maturity of the child", in The Charter of Noto 2011, in <http://www.psicologiagiuridica.eu/>

<sup>128</sup> Art. 10: "Acquisition activities of the statements and behavior of the child must be video recorded because the non-verbal aspects are important for the correct evaluation. Video recording reduces the auditions of the child. All video-recorded, in domestic and daily contexts on listening to children by significant caregivers, should be placed on the file", in The Charter of Noto 2011, in <http://www.psicologiagiuridica.eu/>

<sup>129</sup> Art. 10: "In case of intrafamily abuse the investigations must be extended to family members, including the person is attributed the factual and child's social context", in The Charter of Noto 2011, in <http://www.psicologiagiuridica.eu/>

<sup>130</sup> Art. 13 "Symptoms of discomfort that the child manifests cannot be considered as "indicators" of specific sexual abuse since they derive from family conflict or other causes, but their absence does not exclude the abuse", in The Charter of Noto 2011, in <http://www.psicologiagiuridica.eu/>

<sup>131</sup> Art. 15: "The probative accident is the privileged place of acquisition the declarations of the child during the proceedings. Should be conducted in order to ensure, in accordance with the evolving personality of the child, the right to evidence", in The Charter of Noto 2011, in <http://www.psicologiagiuridica.eu/>

<sup>132</sup> Art. 18: "Psychological assistance to the child shall be entrusted to a specialist who maintains the engagement in every stage and level of the Criminal proceedings", in The Charter of Noto 2011, in <http://www.psicologiagiuridica.eu/>

<sup>133</sup> Art. 4: "Lawyers and experts should follow the principles of the Strasbourg Convention. Intervention and

ii. In Italy the action against paedophilia is assigned to the Dipartimento di Pubblica Sicurezza (i.e. Department of Public Safety) that operates through the Minor-specialized sections of each police station<sup>135</sup> (set up under art. 17 of Legge n. 269/98), as well as through the Postal police which carries out an intensive investigation to fight against online paedophilia<sup>136</sup>. The Postal police analyzes children pornography episodes, is authorized to carry out covert operations, and seeks to identify abused children in collaboration with INTERPOL (International Criminal Police Organization); moreover, it also cooperates with the NGO “Save the Children”, with the aim to put an end to violence and to provide therapeutic assistance to the victims<sup>137</sup>.

iii. The judicial process is activated either by the communication to the Public prosecutor of the crime - notitia criminis -, or by a complaint to the Ordinary court (made for example from non-abuser parent), or also by a report to the Minors court, implemented by territorial services, or also by the school where the child is studying. Furthermore, artt. 361, 362 e 365 c.p.<sup>138</sup> and artt. 331 and 334 c.p.<sup>139</sup> include the obligation to report offenses that are prosecuted ex officio by public officials, civil servants and professionals performing health functions, when becoming aware of them while during their job. In those cases, operators must immediately inform the Public prosecutor sitting at the Ordinary court and/or at the Minors court. Art. 609-septies c.p. provides that the offenses referred to in artt. 609-bis, 609-ter and 609-quater c.p. are punishable on complaint of the victim, states that the period for bringing the complaint is six months, and identifies a series of cases in which it has to be proceeded ex officio<sup>140</sup>.

---

treatment of the child by judicial system should not be manifestly contrary to the best interests of the child, with particular attention to effects on mental and physical health of completion and the continuation auditions”, in Venice’s Protocol 2007, in <http://www.psicologiagiuridica.eu/>

<sup>134</sup> Art. 7: “In all phases of the criminal proceedings must be protected and guaranteed the right of children to respect for their dignity and privacy in accordance with the Convention of New York”, in Venice’s Protocol 2007, <http://www.psicologiagiuridica.eu/>

<sup>135</sup> Art. 14 of Legge n. 269/98 established the specialized sections of the judicial police in the activity of contrast and prosecution of sexual crimes against children, in <http://www.camera.it/>

<sup>136</sup> Pedophilia and child abuse, in <http://www.interno.gov.it/>

<sup>137</sup> A Convention between the NGO “Save the Children” and the Postal police was signed, with the aim to implement their collaboration for the identification of victims of online pedophilia, in <http://www.savethechildren.it/>

<sup>138</sup> CRESPI A., ZUCCALA’ G., FORTI G., cit., 1438-1444.

<sup>139</sup> GATTI G., MARINO R., PETRUCCI R., cit., 613-615.

<sup>140</sup> Art. 609-septies c.p.: “The offenses referred to in articles 609-bis, 609-ter and 609-quater of Criminal code are punishable on complaint of the victim. Except as provided in article 597, third paragraph, of Criminal code, the period for bringing the complaint is six months. The complaint proposal is irrevocable. We

iv. As concerns the statute of limitation, art. 157 c.p. fixes the time that has to pass by in order for the offence to be prescribed<sup>141</sup>: in particular, it states that in general the limitation expires after a time corresponding to the maximum penalty established by the law for that particular crime; however, this period can never be less than six years in the case of main offense and less than four years in the case of a less serious offence, even if this is punished only with a pecuniary penalty<sup>142</sup>. As to the effect of the limitation, art. 158 c.p. distinguishes among completed offense, attempted offense, permanent or continuous offense and offenses punishable with complaint, petition or request<sup>143</sup>. As to the prescription's suspension, art. 159 c.p. indicates a series of cases where the prescription is suspended<sup>144</sup> and provides also that "the prescription starts from the day that is when the cause of the suspension".<sup>145</sup> proceed ex officio: 1) if the offense referred to in article 609-bis of Criminal code is committed against a person who at the time of the events has not reached the age of eighteen ; 2) if the offense is committed by the parent, also adoptive, or his partner, tutor or other person from whom the child, or by another person where the child is given for reason of care, education, supervision or custody or that has it with a cohabiting; 3) if the offense is committed by a public official or a person responsible for a public service in the exercise of its functions; 4) if the offense is connected with another offense for which you must proceed ex officio; 5) if the offense is committed in the case referred to in article 609-quater, final paragraph, of Criminal code", in CRESPI A., ZUCCALA' G., FORTI G., cit., 2304-2307.

---

<sup>141</sup> Art. 157 c.p.: "To determine the time required about the penalty prescribed by law for the completed or attempted offense, without taking into account the decrease of the mitigating circumstances and the increase for aggravating circumstances, except for the aggravating circumstances for which the law provides for a penalty of a different species from the ordinary and for those having a special effect, in which case we consider the maximum penalty provided for aggravating", in CRESPI A., ZUCCALA' G., FORTI G., cit., 769 ss.

<sup>142</sup> CRESPI A., ZUCCALA' G., FORTI G., cit., 769 ss.

<sup>143</sup> Art. 158 c.p.: "The term of prescription begins, for the completed offense, the date of consummation; for the offense attempted, the date on which it ceased operation of the offender, for the offense permanent or continued, the day on which it ceased the permanence or continuation. When the law does depend on the punishment of an offense by the occurrence of a condition, the end of the prescription begins from the date on which the condition occurred. However, in the offenses punishable with complaint, petition or request the end of prescription begins from the day the offense was committed", in CRESPI A., ZUCCALA' G., FORTI G., cit., 788 ss.

<sup>144</sup> Art. 159 c.p.: "The course of prescription is suspended in any case where a stay of proceedings or criminal proceedings or the terms of custody is imposed by a particular provision of the law, as well as in cases of: 1. authorization to proceed; 2. submission of the matter to other judgment; 3. suspension of proceedings or criminal proceedings for reasons of impediment of the parties and of the defenders or at the request of accused or his defenders. In case of suspension of the trial for obstruction of the parties or of the defenders, the hearing cannot be deferred beyond the sixtieth day after the expected removal of the cause, having regard, otherwise, at the time of the impediment increased by sixty days. In the case of authorization to proceed, the suspension of the prescription happens from the moment the public prosecutor submits the request and the prescription resumes the day on which the competent authority receives the request", in CRESPI A., ZUCCALA' G., FORTI G., cit., 800 ss.

<sup>145</sup> CRESPI A., ZUCCALA' G., FORTI G., cit., 800 ss.

v. When the age of the victim is not certain, the Judge – pursuant to art. 220 c.p.p. – allows the advice of an expert. This is admitted when it is necessary to investigate or acquire data or valuate special technical, scientific or artistic skills.<sup>146</sup>

vi. In Italy there is a database called “Protocollo Sistema di Indagine” (SDI)<sup>147</sup>, a survey system available in every office of the Public prosecutors in which are recorded facts and measures emitted by competent authorities against persons or objects involved in a particular crime or event. Individuals can be registered into the database as complainants, crime victims, offenders or persons suspected of having committed crimes together with their criminal records, reports and measures emitted by the competent authorities. The information contained in SID are available to all police forces and can be transmitted to other competent authorities in other States. However, in Italy it does not exist a public register containing the names of persons convicted for offenses against children, since the currently existing system is subject to the application of the Italian provisions regarding the privacy protection.

3.2 Complaint Procedure

vii. As a general rule, the complaint by a private citizen is optional: a person who assists in the commission of a crime does not have a legal obligation to submit a complaint (art. 333, par. 1 c.p.p.), except for few cases foreseen by the criminal code in which private citizens have the obligation to complain. On the other hand, both public officials (defined in art. 357 c.p.) and public service officers (defined in art. 358 c.p.) are bound to art. 331 c.p.p., according to which they are obliged to submit complaints regarding offences they become aware of, either during the performance of their duties/services or because of their duties/services. As an example, if a public school teacher becomes aware of crimes that were committed against his/her own pupils, either within the school context (that is, during the performance of his/her services), or even outside the school context in the cases he/she becomes aware of those crimes because of the fact that he/she is the teacher (that is, because of his/her services), he/she has an obligation to report them. On the contrary, if he/she becomes aware of crimes against his/her own pupils neither in the school nor for being the teacher – for example, he/she is talked about that by a friend of him/her not aware of the fact that he/she is the teacher of those pupils– then, he/she is considered as a private individual and therefore is not obliged to present a complaint.

<sup>146</sup> GATTI G., MARINO R., PETRUCCI R., cit., 535.

<sup>147</sup> Crimes report, in <http://www.interno.gov.it/>

In regard to the form of the complaint, public officials and public service officers present the complaint under the form of a written denuncia (art. 331 c.p.p.).<sup>148</sup> This kind of complaint – denuncia - can be used also by private individuals, but they are free to make it in an oral or written form (art. 333 c.p.p.). The complaint has to be made either to the Public prosecutor or to the Judicial policy, so that a criminal procedure can start (in some cases the procedure starts without a complaint, namely when a Public prosecutor or the Judicial policy become themselves aware of a crime). In all cases – complaint made by a public official or public service officer or also a private person/ in written or oral form/ to a Public prosecutor or to Judicial policy – the complaint shall indicate the most relevant information concerning the crime, the date in which the complainer became aware of it and sources of evidence already available. It can also eventually indicate who the person is thought to be responsible, who is the victim and who can give more information. However, the complaint cannot be based on acts of investigation or inquiry, which could result in a so called “pollution evidence”, since the acquisition and evaluation of the reliability of sources of information is an exclusive competence of the Judicial authority.

Besides the above described denuncia, another form of complaint is the one named querela, which can be made only by victims of crimes punishable upon the condition that this complaint is made. That is, if one of those crimes occurs but the victim does not present the complaint in the form of a querela, that crime is not punishable. This happens because the querela is not only a communication to Authorities that a crime occurred – as the denuncia – but it is also the expression of the wish of the victim that the offender is prosecuted and punished. The content of the querela is like the one foreseen for the denuncia and also the querela can be made both in oral and written form. Even though normally the querela can be withdrawn, this cannot happen in the case of a sexual crime against a minor, with the consequence that even if the minor wishes to withdraw the querela, the judicial procedure has to continue.

---

<sup>148</sup> A medical doctor being a public service officer – that is a doctor working in a public hospital – becoming aware of a crime while performing his/her duties – for example, by visiting an individual - is also obliged to report the crime within the form of a referto (art. 334 c.p.p.).

While few crimes against minors can be prosecuted without a querela of the victim (that is, only with a denuncia or even without it, if the Authorities become in other way aware of those crimes), others can be prosecuted only if the victim presents a querela. According to art. 609-septies c.p., examples of the first group are the followings ones:

- sexual violence (art. 609- bis c.p.) against minors;
- sexual violence or sexual abuse committed by a person closed to the minor or who has to care about the minor;
- sexual violence or sexual abuse committed by a public official or public services officer while performing his/her duties or services;
- sexual violence or sexual abuse committed together with another crime that has to be prosecuted without a querela;
- sexual acts with a minor younger than 10 years old (art. 609- quarter, last par.).

For the second group of cases, an individual complaint can be presented by minors older than 14 years old. If the victim is a minor younger than this, the lawsuit can be filed either by the parent exercising the parental rights or by a guardian. If there is a conflict of interests between parental rights and the minor who is not yet 14 years old, then the complaint may be filed by a special custodian. The appointment of this special custodian shall be made by the Judge for preliminary investigations upon request by the Public prosecutor and can be promoted by institutions that care, educate, house or assist minors. Moreover, the appointment request can be made also by the local Social services.

viii. The participation of the child, as injured party, to the trial in which he/she is involved must be done in accordance with the instruments of procedural representation (the applicable rules) entrusted to the holders of parental responsibility, that usually are his/her parents.

However, this rule cannot be applied whenever there is a conflict of interests between the minor and his/her legal representative: conventional law, and in particular the Strasbourg Convention, provides that where a conflict arises between the minor and the holders of parental responsibility, these are deprived of the right to represent the child and, if so, the child has the right to request and the Judge has the right to appoint a special representative in the proceedings concerning him/her (artt. 3 and 9).

Here reference to the conflict of interests must be understood in its broadest sense and not only as limited to purely financial issues, as would have meant by those believing that the general rule on the appointment of a special curator of art. 78 c.p.c. is applicable only when the representative relationship is jeopardized by a conflict of interests due to financial issues.

Furthermore, the Constitutional Court has declared the doubts relating to legitimacy stated in art. 336 c.c. as inadmissible in so far as it does not provide for the appointment of a special custodian to take over the management of the case when a conflict between the minor and both his/her parents occurs: according to the Court, the Judge shall interpret the law in a manner that will protect the law itself from being contested or declared unconstitutional and it is the Court that sets out in art. 78 c.p.c. the norm to refer to.

However, not all doubts are removed and the norms allowing the minor to participate as the injured party in de potestate cases and expressly providing that he/she is present in court with legal assistance, are rather reticent in regulating the legal representation of minors who are unfit to plead for themselves.

Therefore, this leads to a certain confusion in the jurisprudence in the Minors courts: according to a recent survey, the appointment of a legal guardian de potestate in reviews takes place, usually, when the conflict is against both parents. However, a legal guardian can be appointed even when the abuse is consumed by only one parent, whereas in some cases there is only the appointment of legal representation and no legal guardian (and sometimes neither one): it should be pointed out that, almost always, the legal guardian is also a lawyer, often chosen, in the absence of other more specific lists, from the Legal Aid lists. Still, the legal guardian appointment rarely takes place automatically, which is possible under the Strasbourg Convention: in practice, it takes place at the request of the Public prosecutor.

Regarding the protection of children's privacy, any information concerning the participation of minors in legal proceedings shall be protected.

The dissemination of information, especially by the media, regarding minors being either victims or witnesses, can have dramatic effects on them. First, it can endanger their safety and may also provoke deep shame and humiliation, can discourage them from telling what happened and cause a severe emotional damage. The dissemination of information about minors who are either victims or witnesses can create tensions in their relationships with their family, their peers and the community, particularly in the cases of sexual abuse. In some cases, it may also lead to stigmatization by the community, thus exacerbating the secondary victimization of the child.

The first measure to protect the privacy of children who are victims or witnesses is to limit the disclosure of information that could lead to their identification in a judicial proceeding: preventing public disclosure of information regarding minors is guaranteed by provisions which prohibit both publication and radio or television broadcasting.

This ban may also derive from a specific order of the Court, which is obliged, upon application, to place a ban on the publication of information that might identify the minor victims or witnesses, in proceedings relating to specific sexual offences and violent crimes. However, the first option, the automatic ban, is more protective.

Finally, according to art. 472 c.p.p., the public is not allowed to assist at hearings – so called hearings behind door closed<sup>149</sup> – when proceeding for crimes foreseen in artt. 600 (making or keeping an individual in slavery status), 600- bis (crime of minor prostitution); 600- ter (crimes involving pornographic shows and material), 600- quinqüies (crimes related to organization and promotion of sexual tourism), 601 (crimes related to transferring minors from a country to another in order to commit one of the crimes against children), 602 (crimes related to buying and selling minors reduced in slavery condition), art. 609- bis (sexual abuse), 609- ter (the previous ones indeed when committed under aggravating circumstances), 609- octies c.p. (sexual violence committed in damage of a minor by a group of persons). It has to be noticed that art. 472 c.p.p. has not been modified by the ratification of the Lanzarote Convention and therefore the new crime of grooming is not in this list.

4 COMPLEMENTARY MEASURES

i. According to art. 5 of the Lanzarote Convention, each Party shall take the necessary legislative or other measures in order to pursue the following goals: to encourage awareness on the protection and rights of children among persons who have regular contacts with them in the education, health, social protection, judicial and law-enforcement sectors, as well as in areas related to sport, culture and leisure activities; to ensure that those persons have an adequate knowledge of sexual exploitation and sexual abuse of children, as well as of the means to identify them; to ensure that in order to accede to the professions whose exercise implies regular contacts with children, candidates have not been convicted of acts of sexual exploitation or sexual abuse against children.

---

<sup>149</sup> The Italian expression is dibattimenti a porte chiuse.

Within the national legislation, art. 600-septies, par. 2 c.p and the new art. 609-nonies, par. 3 n. 2 c.p.<sup>150</sup>, establish permanent exclusion of persons convicted for sexual crimes against children from any school positions and from any office or service in institutions or in other public or private centers mainly attended by children.

ii. Despite the provision contained in art. 6 of the Lanzarote Convention, in Italy there is not yet any national compulsory program of education about sexual crimes dedicated to scholars. As a consequence, only few schools are currently providing courses regarding sexual crimes. In general, it can be said that the lack of information regarding sexual crimes in the schools is due to another lack, namely that of a proper education suited to minors about sexuality. As a consequence, children are aware about sexuality and sexual crimes only as long as these concepts are explained to them within the family.

Nevertheless, initiatives of information and education aimed at the prevention of all forms of sexual abuse of minors are constantly promoted by the Observatory for the contrast of pedophilia and child pornography, with the support of the Fund for Family Policies (Italian Finance Act 2008, article 2, paragraph 462). Among the existing programs, it should be interesting selecting those constituting best practices, so that a path would be tracked in order to succeed in the prevention of sexual crimes against minors: in this regard, it is interesting reading the provision contained in art. 4 of Sicilian regional law, Law Project number 371/2009 then converted in Legge in December 2011, establishing new preventive and informative initiatives.<sup>151</sup>

The importance of child education is confirmed by many researches: if children are made aware of the risks related to sexual crimes, as well as of all the judicial and social instruments foreseen for helping them in such situations, then it is predictable that less crimes will occur. Therefore, it is desirable not only a strong collaboration among Governmental bodies for the protection of young generations, but also between teachers and parents. Nowadays, the

---

<sup>150</sup> Art. 609- nonies, par. 3, n. 2 c.p.: il divieto di svolgere lavori che prevedano un contatto abituale con minori.

<sup>151</sup> "The Region supports, in collaboration with municipalities, provinces, provincial health authorities, the hospitals and university hospitals, the provincial school boards and other public and refuges institutions in the area, projects for the development of prevention initiatives against gender-based violence and promotion, particularly in schools and families, education for respect in the relationship between the sexes in respect of sexual, religious and cultural, non-violence as a method of civil society. The Region promotes the widest possible dissemination, through specific information campaigns, activities under this Act, including through the creation of a dedicated portal or through the use of existing portals. (...)" trend sees many families thinking that education on sexual crimes is a teacher's duty and, on the other hand, a school system that rarely provides such education. The optimal solution would be a joint collaboration between the two entities, namely family and school, for the benefit of the children.<sup>152</sup>

Associations defending children's rights, for example "Telefono Azzurro", put a lot of effort in explaining and claiming which is the better way to prevent and recognize children abuses. By reading informative papers related to this topic<sup>153</sup>, emerges that parents wishing to help children in understanding such issues should try to spend a lot of time with them, so that children feel free to talk to them about their sensations. As already written, exchanging of opinions between parents and teachers are very important, cause school is the laboratory where children's minds develop.

Finally, according to art. 9 of the Lanzarote Convention, children shall be involved in the development of the programs aiming at fighting sexual abuses: this issue is already taken into consideration by the Observatory for the Children and Adolescents.

iii. Italy has not yet created preventive intervention programmes dedicated to persons who fear that they may commit a crime against minors. Indeed, such kinds of programmes were not foreseen by the national legislation; they are foreseen by the Lanzarote Convention that has been only recently ratified. It is desirable that such programmes will be activated in the Country. This could mean creating a sort of figurative bridge between prevention of crimes, intended as pre- re-education of persons who are more probably to commit such crimes, and the re-education foreseen by art. 27 of the Constitution, according to which sanctions aim at the re-education of the convicted individuals.

iv. The high number of children and women suffering from abuses in the Italian Country pushed Governmental and private organizations to create social programmes to help and defend victims of sexual abuses. For this reason, Italian Government and European Social Fund (EFS) fund the realization of social programmes aimed to anticipate and put down

---

<sup>152</sup> SCHAFFER H. R. , Lo sviluppo sociale, 1998, Milano, Raffaello Cortina Editore; CORSO D., LA ROSA M.,

VERRECCHIA F. (A cura di), Coordinatore Dott.ssa GENDUSO G., "Gli insegnanti di fronte all'abuso", Telefono Arcobaleno in collaborazione con la Regione Siciliana those criminal behaviours. Their purpose is mainly to protect young victims, but at the same time, re-educate criminals. Those social programmes operate at four different levels, within the main administrative bodies of government: State, Regions, Provinces and Cities.

<sup>153</sup> "Come proteggere bambini e adolescenti dagli abusi sessuali - Quaderni", edited by Telefono Azzurro ONLUS.

In November 2010 Italian government created the Italian national programme against violence, to support victims of abuses and fight against violence, increasing cooperation between public and private organizations. In the GURI<sup>154</sup> of 9th May 2011, it was published the III Biennial plan about childhood and teenagers, a programme realized by the Italian Dipartimento per la Pari Opportunità (i. e. Department of Equal Opportunities), which is a body operating within the Ministero del Lavoro e delle Politiche Sociali (i.e. Ministry for Employment and Social Policies).

This Biennial Plan identifies also the main guidelines to set the minimum levels for the protection and education of children victims of sexual abuses, whose aims can be described as follows: creation of an on-line database with a complete collection of Government related acts; research and establishment of a common language, instruments and strategies against sexual abuse on minors; plan of cooperation between State and Regions in order to identify national minimum services to prevent abuses, to protect children abused, as well as to establish essential safeguard for children victims of sexual abuses and social distress; creation of checking programmes which follow the social and educational growing up of protected children implemented by the Italian National Health System.

Furthermore, coherently with this programme, in 2012, 10 million Euro were allocated to realize new anti-violence centres or fund the pre-existing ones.<sup>155</sup>

An important Department which is aimed to protect children against sexual abuses and children pornography is the Osservatorio per il contrasto della pedofilia e della pornografia minorile (i.e. Observatory to fight paedophilia and children pornography); it intends to guarantee children physical and intellectual goodness, and its core activity is the creation of a database containing a big number of data about acts of law which punish and prevent rape and social distress against children. Within the Ministero del Lavoro e delle Politiche Sociali it was also created the Centro nazionale di documentazione e analisi per l'infanzia e l'adolescenza: a special section of its Website is dedicated to papers regarding violence and distress against children.

---

<sup>154</sup> Gazzetta Ufficiale Repubblica Italiana, the journal where Italian acts of law are officially published in order to be known by the community (which is very important because of the principle ignorantia legis non excusat).

<sup>155</sup> This is the last data of Ministero del lavoro e delle politiche sociali, showed during the 24.01.2012 meeting of the Commissione Affari Costituzionali a body within the Italian Parliament.

On regional level, one of the first and best-practice social programme to help children victims of sexual abuse started in 1997 thank to the Health Service of the Abruzzo Region. The programme focuses on diagnosis, therapy and rehabilitation of children abused and it aims to give psychological support to victims and their families; at the same time, it informs, educates and organizes awareness campaigns for healthcare workers, school workers, families and children. Three teams work on this programme: one is the rehabilitation team, another is the defence team and the last one is the prevention team. Every team is composed by doctors, psychologists, psychotherapists and social workers dealing with activities of estimation, diagnosis and treatment of violence and social distress cases. They also implement health researching activities and organize social awareness campaigns. The Programme of Abruzzo Region has been recognized by Italian Parliament as example of good stewardship.<sup>156</sup>

In regard to Provinces, an example of social programmes to help children victims of sexual abuses is the one implemented by the Agrigento Province Administration, which created a website to inform how everyone can denounce cases of sexual violence and social distress against children: a good way to support children victims of abuses.

Finally, social programmes to provide support for victims are provided also by NGOs: in regard to those initiatives, it has to be said that they rarely achieve great attention by the general public and this happens not because they are not good initiatives, but because they are generally referable to limited geographical areas: this depends on the fact that in the Country there are many NGOs of little/medium dimensions, with a consequently difficulty in coordinating their projects (Italian situation differs from that of other countries, like England and France, where the presence of few big NGOs allows a coordination among many social programmes provided, like those in support for child victims, so that their performances are characterized by stronger outreaches than those normally registered for the performances of the most important Italian NGOs). The general impression is that child victims are not left alone, but the general public is not aware of these programmes. It is only when someone faces the problem, that becomes aware of such programmes.

---

<sup>156</sup> See the “Second Report about application of Law n. 269/1998 against children sexual exploitation”.

An example of a social project providing support for victims is the two year lasting programme organized in 2010 by the NGO “L’Isola che c’è” in cooperation with the public hospital local structures and the judiciary services located in Bologna, the area where the NGO is also active. Here, the cooperative dimension could be considered as a valuable approach, since it makes it possible for the NGO not only to overcome its limited dimensions (horizontal performance), but also to provide assistance under an umbrella of different activities (vertical performance). The main task within the programme is that related to assisting minors by listening to them during the time the judicial procedure takes place: medical doctors, psychologists, teachers and other experienced persons spend time with them in order to achieve a better understanding of their feelings and behaviours; they also accompany the minors to the Court when it is necessary.<sup>157</sup> Listening to the minors is the core of the project and, despite what it could seem, is also a very difficult task, that can be realized properly only with a great balance of doing and not doing, asking and not asking. As it is written on the Website of the NGO, the difficulty lies in the ability to listen to children in exploitation, without exploiting the listening.<sup>158</sup> The programme shall end with the publication of informative material regarding the best practices collected.

v. There is a help line in service of the victims: this line is created by the already mentioned NGO Telefono Azzurro (see also: Chapter II, part 4, par. 2). The National Counselling Centre<sup>159</sup> is the heart of Telefono Azzurro Onlus and its offices are located in Milan and Palermo, both answering to two different line numbers: 1.96.96 is addressed to minors seeking to report facts causing uneasiness, situations of abuse and maltreatments, whereas 199.15.15.15 is addressed to reference adults or educators wishing to report similar situations involving children and minors. Telefono Azzurro call centre is active throughout the Country 24 hours a day, 365 days a year. Moreover, since 2003 Telefono Azzurro coordinates all the cases that need an immediate action with the 144 Childhood Emergency<sup>160</sup> free

---

<sup>157</sup> According to art. 13 of the in Chapter II, part 3, par. viii. already mentioned Strasbourg Convention, it should be avoided any contact between minors and Judicial courts, except for the cases in which it is absolutely necessary: for those cases, it is desirable that the minor receives adequate information regarding the meaning of what is happening and that he/she is assisted by experts.

<sup>158</sup> “Per favorire l’ascolto dell’abuso e per evitare l’abuso nell’ascolto”, in <http://www.lisolache.it/progetti.htm>

<sup>159</sup> The National Counseling Centre, in <http://www.azzurro.it/>

<sup>160</sup> See: <http://www.114.it/>

number, created for the diagnosis and cure of child victims and their families: also this service is active 24 hour a day, 365 days a year. Finally, in 2010 the National Counselling Centre created Telefono Azzurro ch@t for helping children and adolescents: operators are available on chat 365 days a year, from 4.00 p.m. to 8.00 a.m.

Telefono Azzurro respects the will of the users to maintain their anonymity. Any personal data freely communicated shall be treated confidentially. Only in the event of a serious, imminent and irreparable danger to health or physical safety of the user, Telefono Azzurro forwards information given by the user to Police forces, Judicial offices, Health organizations and Social welfare institutions. More in general, help lines providing services in Italy are bound to national confidentiality rules, as stated by the Codice in materia di protezione dei dati personali or D.lgs n. 196/2003: art. 7 provides that the person whose the personal data are referred to can confirm the existence or otherwise of the data and that such data are made available to him/her in an intelligible form; made aware of the origin of the data and the logic and purposes upon which they are processed; cancel, transform into anonymous form or block the processing of data in violation of law and update, correct or integrate already collected data.

vi. When it comes to recovery, intervention programmes can be organized within three areas, namely the medical one, the socio-psychological one and the judicial one.

First of all, pediatric first aid can be involved if there is the suspect that a child has suffered abuse a few days before; then, doctors can carry out investigations and clinical examinations, designed to investigate the nature of any physical ailments experienced by the child. Secondly, social services, as those operating within the Azienda sanitaria locale, as well as Family planning centers are available in case there is a doubt over an abuse: in particular, social services make a psychosocial survey in order to collect detailed information. Thirdly, the Prosecutor at the Juvenile court deals with the protection of the minor and encourages the adoption of all measures necessary to reestablish familiar conditions tailored to his/her needs.

Even though the common impression is that the most State interventions are concentrated on the phase coming directly after the commission of the abuse, every program tries to provide minors with helpful assistance in order to start a new life: that is, programmes deal with a dynamic approach aimed at considering the possible evolution and development of the minor. However, it does seem neither that exist important State programmes for persons who experienced sexual violence a long time ago, nor that there is a significative level of information about interventions programmes for these persons. In this regard, the general impression is that a determining role by helping in conducting a life without sexual behavior problems persons who experienced sexual violence in the juvenile phase is played by family, partner and friends.

III NATIONAL POLICY REGARDING CHILDREN

i. In recent years, the political debate on children protection has been highly developed. As one of the main outcomes of the raising awareness on this delicate topic, Legge n. 41/2009, n. 41, led to the institution of the National Day against Child Abuse, due on 5th May of every year. This act of law also establishes that Regions, Provinces and Municipalities can promote special actions within the schools in coordination with local associations<sup>161</sup>. On May, 5th 2009, during the first day against paedophilia, it was held in Rome the show “Parla con noi”, (i.e. Talk to us) ; an opportunity to study paedophilia with the collaboration of politicians and people that every day work to protect children<sup>162</sup>.

The political debate led also to the creation of an Interministerial committee for coordinating the fight against paedophilia, which is called “Ciclope”<sup>163</sup> and brings together the representatives of 11 Ministries, collaborating with international organizations and local associations<sup>164</sup>. The Ciclope created the first national plan to contrast and prevent paedophilia in order to develop a common strategy to fight the phenomenon, also coordinating the actions being taken by each Government for the protection of children; moreover, it offers educational programmes for teachers, social workers and parents <sup>165</sup>.

The commitment of the Government and Parliament against sexual abuse of children has found its climax with the approval of Legge 38/2006, which tightens punishments for paedophilia and online child pornography and draws up a series of measures to tackle the phenomenon in a comprehensive manner, operating with actions on different levels. Furthermore, this act of law created, within the Presidency of the Council of Ministers, the

---

<sup>161</sup> Legge 4 May 2009, n. 41, in GU n. 101, 4.05.2009

<sup>162</sup> <http://www.fondazioneelucabarbareschionlus.it/>

<sup>163</sup> <http://www.pariopportunita.gov.it/>

<sup>164</sup> www.segretariatosociale.rai.it/codici/pedofilia/indice\_pedofilia.html

<sup>165</sup> <http://www.pariopportunita.gov.it/>

Observatory against paedophilia and child pornography, that was already described in Chapter II, part 4, par. iv.

ii- iii. As concerns data about child abuses in Italy, from July 2000 to June 2001 the NGO Telefono Azzurro (for the activities of this NGO, see also Chapter II, part 4, par. v.) received 480,000 calls related to child abuses: 60% of those abuses against minors were committed within their home; furthermore, nearly two out of three cases involved sexual violence, for which fathers were responsible in 32% of the cases, mothers in 4.3%, relatives in 21.1% and friends in 21.2%<sup>166</sup>.

Then, during the first half of year 2002, the NGO Telefono Azzurro received 195,000 calls related to child abuses: 60% of violence against minors were committed within the home. 608 cases in the first half of the year involved sexual violence, physical or psychological abuse, and negligence; fathers were responsible in 45.6% of the cases; mothers in 37.2%, and relatives in 7%. In 57.8% of the cases, the victims were female and in 41% they were ages 10 or even younger. Moreover, in the first seven months of the year, judicial authorities registered 425 allegations of sexual abuses against minors<sup>167</sup>.

In the same year police registered 431 complaints, conducted 259 searches for Internet-based child pornography and arrested 23 persons<sup>168</sup>. The Direction of the Central Criminal Police declared that the category most involved was the one between 11 and 14 years old, which counted 233 victims. He also added that in the majority of the cases, children know the person harassing them<sup>169</sup>. A special police unit monitored 27,200 Websites in the first half of the year, investigated 769 persons and arrested 21 of them<sup>170</sup>.

In 2004 the Chief prosecutor of the Supreme Court reported that complaints of sexual violence and exploitation of children increased by 28% compared to the year 2003. In the first 6 months of 2004, Judicial authorities registered 349 allegations of sexual abuses against minors and accused 392 persons of abuse<sup>171</sup>. According to the Direction of the Central Criminal Police, the highest number of cases were recorded in the regions of Lombardy (168

---

<sup>166</sup> Country Report on Human Rights Practices in Italy 2001, in <http://www.state.gov/>

<sup>167</sup> Country Report on Human Rights Practices in Italy 2003, in <http://www.state.gov/>

<sup>168</sup> Country Report on Human Rights Practices in Italy 2003, in <http://www.state.gov/>

<sup>169</sup> <http://www.poliziadistato.it/>

<sup>170</sup> Country Report on Human Rights Practices in Italy 2005, in <http://www.state.gov/>

<sup>171</sup> Country Report on Human Rights Practices in Italy 2005, in <http://www.state.gov/>

cases), Campania (111 cases) and Sicily (96 cases). Molise and Valle d'Aosta are the two regions where the phenomenon is less developed (there were no complaints)<sup>172</sup>

In 2005 the NGO Telefono Azzurro received 380,000 calls related to child abuses: 5% of them involved sexual abuses, 11% physical violence, and 8% psychological exploitations. In 60% of the cases, the victims were female and in 46% were 10 years old or even younger<sup>173</sup>. In the first six months of the same year, Judicial authorities registered 748 allegations of sexual abuses of minors and accused 276 persons of abuses<sup>174</sup>. Furthermore, a special police unit monitored 33,000 Websites, investigated 337 persons and arrested 16 of them<sup>175</sup>.

In 2006 Italian authorities registered 170 reports of sexual intercourses with minors, 290 reports of production of child pornography, and 180 reports of possession of child pornography<sup>176</sup>.

In 2007 over a total of 3,495 cases analyzed by Telefono Azzurro National Listening Centre, 923 calls were from children and adolescents victims of abuse and these 923 calls were identified in 1,155 different types of abuses: this means that some children were abused in more than one way. Most of the abuses reported to Telefono Azzurro were psychic (32.5%) and psychological (34.5%), but there are many cases of sexual abuses (12.2%) and severe negligences (20.8%)<sup>177</sup>.

In the first six months of 2009, Telefono Azzurro received 882 help requests: 5% of these involved sexual abuses, 12.5% physical violence, and 6% psychological abuses. In 53% of the cases, the victims were female; 62% of the victims were younger than 10 years old<sup>178</sup>. In the same year a special unit of the police monitored 26,600 Websites, investigated 1,155 person and arrested 51 of them, whereas Telefono Arcobaleno, between January and November, received 2,580 reports of online paedophilia. Those reports were made either by Internet users who came across child pornography online or by persons who reported suspected activity involving exploitation of minors<sup>179</sup>.

---

<sup>172</sup> <http://www.poliziadistato.it/>

<sup>173</sup> Country Report on Human Rights Practices in Italy 2006, in <http://www.state.gov/>

<sup>174</sup> Country Report on Human Rights Practices in Italy 2006, in <http://www.state.gov/>

<sup>175</sup> Country Report on Human Rights Practices in Italy 2006, in <http://www.state.gov/>

<sup>176</sup> Country Report on Human Rights Practices in Italy 2010, in <http://www.state.gov/>

<sup>177</sup> Child abuse, in <http://www.azzurro.it/>

<sup>178</sup> Country Report on Human Rights Practices in Italy 2010, in <http://www.state.gov/>

<sup>179</sup> Country Report on Human Rights Practices in Italy 2010, in <http://www.state.gov/>

In the first six months of 2010 the call line of Telefono Azzurro received 882 help requests: 5% of these involved sexual abuses, 12.5% physical violence and 6% psychological abuses. In 53% of the cases the victims were female and 62% of the victims were younger than 10<sup>180</sup>. In the same year Italian authorities registered 582 reports of sexual intercourses with minors, 380 reports of child pornography production or child pornography possession, and 175 reports of minors obliged to assist to sexual intercourses between adults<sup>181</sup>. From January to September a special police unit monitored 16,100 Websites; 685 persons were reported to authorities and 39 persons were arrested. Between January and March Telefono Arcobaleno detected more than 18,000 Websites used by paedophiles<sup>182</sup>.

Other statistics originate from the Help line 114. Between 1 January 2008 and 31 December 2010 this help line managed 5,161 emergency situations (206 cases of sexual abuses)<sup>183</sup>. Victims of sexual abuses were also children younger than 10 years. The number of victims decreases with increasing age: 0-10 years = 51.7%; 11-14 years = 27.8%; 15-18 years = 20.5%. The highest number of cases were recorded in Lombardy (35%), Campania (28%) and Lazio (25%)<sup>184</sup>. 114 help line highlights different types of sexual abuse: exhibitionism (9); forced to assist sexual acts (19); forced to watch pornography (6); verbal proposals (22); vaginal penetration (21); anal penetration (9); fellatio (9); forced to touch the genitals/breasts (20); be touched in the genitals/breasts (39); other sexual abuses (73)<sup>185</sup>. Sexual abuses are committed by father (30.2%), foreigner (14.8%), other parent (9.4%), mother or father partner (8.7%), friend (8.7%), mother (7.4%), grandparents (4.7%), other children/adolescent (4.0%), brother/sister (2.0%), priest (2.0%), mother or father new spouse (1.3%), teacher (1.3%), neighbour (0.7%), employer (0.7%), other (10.1%)<sup>186</sup>. The authorities involved are Carabinieri 112 (33.5%), Police force (29.3%), Social service (26.9%), Minor office (11.4%), Prosecutor at the Youth Court (7.8%), Prosecutor at the

---

<sup>180</sup> UNHCR 2011 Country Reports on human Rights Practices-Italy in <http://www.unhcr.org/>

<sup>181</sup> UNHCR 2011 Country Reports on human Rights Practices-Italy in <http://www.unhcr.org/>

<sup>182</sup> UNHCR 2011 Country Reports on human Rights Practices-Italy in <http://www.unhcr.org/>

<sup>183</sup> www.azzurro.it/materials/

<sup>184</sup> www.azzurro.it/materials/

<sup>185</sup> Category "other sexual abuse" includes cases in which there are suspicions from physical signs or behavioral. This category includes kisses on the lips or neck, constrictions to undress and cases of online soliciting.

<sup>186</sup> www.azzurro.it/materials/

Ordinary Court (5.4%), Police 113 (4.8%), ASL (4.2%), postal police (3.6%), Youth Court (1.2%), School (1.2%), Doctor (0.6%), Youth Justice Centre –USSM (0.6%), Other (0.6%)<sup>187</sup>.

In Italy the phenomenon of sexual abuse was finally analyzed by a group of doctor who have examined “the experience of over 200 children seen by the SVS (“Soccorso Violenza Sessuale”) Centre in Milan (...) This study is a retrospective study based on information contained in the files of children beneath the age of 14 seen at the SVS Centre between May 1996 and May 2003, who arrived with a suspicion of child sexual abuse. Over 80% of all cases fell within the normal-specific category according to Adam’s 2001 classification. The first Italian survey, though not based on substantiated cases but only on cases of suspected sexual abuse, supplies a perspective on a large northern European city such as Milan<sup>188</sup>.

iv. At the moment there are not significant promotional campaigns in the Country, except for the One in Five Campaign, jointly conducted by the Council of Europe and the Italian Ministry of Equal Opportunities. However, since the Lanzarote Convention has been recently ratified, it is foreseeable that few important campaigns will be launched in the next months.

v. The law making process is developing by considering children as individuals always more integrated within the society. In fact, while in the past years children were supposed to be in a safe place when being at home, nowadays the legislator is focusing his/her attention always more on what can happen behind house walls. More specifically, children are getting used to spend much time using new technology instruments and, in particular, Internet: such instruments can represent an actual risk for minors’ safety, since they could be end up interacting with unknown people. The new legal provisions, aiming at contrasting more effectively the crimes of pornography, detention and show of pornographic material, virtual pornography and the new crime of grooming, consider minors as individuals allowed to use those kind of instruments just to learn and legally interact with others. While children born in the last decades unlikely would run such a risk, now the legislator aims to avoid that those kind of interaction could become dangerous for children of the present.

---

<sup>187</sup> www.azzurro.it/materials

<sup>188</sup> CATTANEO C., RUSPA M., MOTTA T., GENTILOMO A., SCAGNELLI C., Child sexual abuse: an Italian perspective, in Am. J. Forensic Med. Pathol., 2007 Jun; 28 (2).

vi. Several main NGOs are working in Italy on the topic of children's rights. Sometimes, ONG also cooperate with Italian Government in the law-making process and in the administration of public services, but it is an optional involvement, not a mandatory one (see also Chapter II, part 4, par. iv). However, the Government listens to and welcomes the suggestions coming from Italian organizations very often.

Some Italian NGOs operate only in Italy: Telefono Azzurro and Associazione per la Tutela del Minore (ATM) are the main ones. Activities and statistics regarding the first one were already described (see, Chapter II, part 4, par. v. and Chapter III, par. ii.-iii.).

The Associazione per la Tutela del Minore - ATM<sup>189</sup> was created in Italy in the year 1991 and it focuses its action on the help and support of children, through the work of a team of specialists in childhood and teenagers, composed by psychologists, medical doctors, lawyers, welfare workers and sociologists, who offer their totally free advices to people. Moreover, ATM has created a calling line to give legal advices and counselling and a web page where people can lodge their complaint.

Furthermore, the NGO Aiutare i bambini is an organization created in Italy which has spread its work around the world, in order to defend children's rights. It has been created to help sick, poor, no schooling, socially excluded children and realizes several fund raising campaigns and a programme to guarantee an adequate number of day care centres in Italy.

Another group of NGOs is that comprised of international NGOs operating in many countries, such as Unicef and Save the Children. The United Nations programme provides long term humanitarian and developmental assistance to children and mothers in developing countries. The projects of Unicef Italia aim to defend children against abuses, violence and exploitation, organize campaigns on children's rights and create communities to protect children. Save the children, the biggest and most important World children organization, also operates in Italy with projects seeking to defend children's rights.<sup>190</sup> Save the Children Italia organizes campaigns for the diffusion of correct information about children's rights, fights against poorness in the Italian less developed areas, provides help in emergency situations<sup>191</sup>,

---

<sup>189</sup> Website www.tutelaminori.it

<sup>190</sup> In Italy, Save the Children is based in Rome and the Italian Website is www.savethechildren.it gives legal aid and counselling, and it has created a database concerning Italian and European legislation on this topic.

<sup>191</sup> As an example, Save the Children Italia has implemented the project to support children victims of the 2009 earthquake in Abruzzo.

Finally, the Gruppo di Lavoro per l'Adolescenza e l'Infanzia - CRC group - (www.gruppocrc.it), also connected with the NGO Save the Children Italy, is a research team established in the year 2000 with the intent to study the application of the Convention on the Rights of Child in Italy. The last report, namely that referred to the years 2011-2012 contains also recommendations to the Italian Government or other public authorities, in order to help them in the law making process.

IV OTHER

On October, 23rd 2012, the provisions of the Lanzarote Convention entered into force within the Italian systems. At that moment, the researchers working at this report had already mostly completed their analysis of the domestic law provisions. Nevertheless, with tenacity and group spirit they reviewed their material and updated it according to the new changes introduced in the national legislation by the ratification of the Convention. The report is submitted to ELSA International on November, 11th 2012, when no relevant judiciary comments on the impact of the Convention into the national legislation have been published yet.

V CONCLUSION

The report aimed at analyzing, on the one hand, the status of the protection of children within the Italian legislation and, on the other hand, the programmes provided by institutions and NGOs active in the Country in order to prevent children from sexual violence, as well as to assist those who experienced these terrible episodes.

From the legislative point of view, domestic criminal legislation provided significant rules for the protection of children even before the ratification of the Lanzarote Convention, which was made without any reservations, so that the text of the Convention is nowadays fully applicable within the Country. Then, with the ratification, Italian institutions recognized the necessity to fight against crimes on minors according to internationally shared rules. The importance given to crimes committed on the Internet is also a signal of the fact that the whole matter has to be updated according to the new behaviours of minors. Furthermore, from a more substantial point of view, the ratification has introduced for the first time the word paedophile in the Italian criminal code (art. 444 c.p.), as well as the new crime of grooming (art. 609- undecies c.p.), and has also modified provisions both of the criminal code and of the code of criminal procedure.

From a social point of view, the analysis of the statistics concerning the work made by associations active in the protection of minors delivered us a signal that is not very positive: in fact, despite the many efforts made, it appears that too many minors become still victims, even in a so called “industrialized” Country, as Italy is supposed to be. Indeed, the easy access to technology instruments by minors increase the danger of crimes against them, and this is a new reality that coexists with that the dimension of crimes against minors perpetrated in problematic familiar or social contexts.

Finally, the report highlighted the absence of proper preventive programmes addressed to children, their families and teachers. The hope for the future is that more human resources and more money will be employed used in order to develop a collective awareness of the importance of prevention of crimes against minors: such a new consciousness can decrease the number of crimes against minors. Considering the problem as it is raise a public awareness about it, and not as a taboo, something not to talk about, is also a sign of the maturity of a society and allows us to evaluate its grade of development in the protection of children rights.

ELSA LATVIA

I Introduction.....	715
1 General .....	715
2 The Lanzarote Convention.....	724
II National Legislation .....	725
1 General Principles Of The Jurisdiction .....	725
2 Substantive Criminal Law .....	729
2.1 Sexual Abuse.....	730
2.2 Child Prostitution .....	735
2.3 Child Pornography .....	736
2.4 Corruption of Children.....	745
2.5 Solicitation of Children for Sexual Purposes.....	746
2.6 Corporate Liability.....	748
2.7 Aggravating Circumstances .....	751
2.8 Sanctions and Measures .....	753
3 Criminal Procedure .....	767
3.1 Investigation .....	767
3.2 Complaint Procedure .....	776
4 Complementary Measures.....	782
III National Policy Regarding Children.....	785
IV Other.....	788

National Researchers:

Jānis Rozenieks

Dita Dzērvīniece

Aleksandrs Potaičuks

Laura Valtere

National Academic Advisors:

Dr.iur Artūrs Kučs

National Coordinator:

Domenico Grazioso

I INTRODUCTION

1 GENERAL

i. Legal system of Latvia is largely civil, as opposed to a common, law system, based on epitomes in the German and French systems. The Latvian legal system is grounded on the principles laid out in the Constitution of the Republic of Latvia and safeguarded by the Constitutional Court of the Republic of Latvia.

Since 1998 in the Republic of Latvia human rights and fundamental freedoms are guaranteed by the Constitution (Satversme), especially by Chapter VIII “Fundamental Human Rights”. From the case-law of the Constitutional Court follows, that the content of the norms of human rights, incorporated into the Constitution of the Republic of Latvia (Satversme) should be interpreted in compliance with the practice of application of international norms of human rights.<sup>1</sup> According to Article 91 of the Constitution of the Republic of Latvia (Satversme) all human beings in Latvia shall be equal before the law and the courts. Human rights shall be realised without discrimination of any kind.<sup>2</sup> Additionally, according to Administrative Procedure Law Article 6 in matters where there are identical factual and legal circumstances, institutions and courts shall adopt identical decisions (in matters where there are different factual or legal circumstances – different decisions) irrespective of the gender, age, race, skin colour, language, religious beliefs, political or other views, social origin, nationality, education, social and financial status, type of occupation or other circumstances of participants in the administrative proceedings.<sup>3</sup>

From 2008 to 2011 Latvia completed the takeover of a number of European Union anti-discrimination directives. The beginning of this process usually is regarded to the adoption of brand new Labour Law in 2001. A number of amendments were made after the ratification of the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities in January of 2010. Anti-discrimination norms are included in more than 30 legislative acts.<sup>4</sup> The list of

---

<sup>1</sup> The conference of European Constitutional Courts “The Criteria of the Limitations of Human rights in the Practice of Constitutional justice”, the National Report of the Constitutional Court of the Republic of Latvia, 2005, p.2

<sup>2</sup> The Constitution of the Republic of Latvia, Art.91.

<sup>3</sup> Administrative Procedure Law, Art.6

<sup>4</sup> Latvijas Cilvēktiesību centrs, Diskriminācijas novēršana Latvijā II, Latvijas Cilvēktiesību centrs, 2011, p.5

prohibited discrimination forms in different legislation acts range from 4 to 18, and, moreover, sometimes is left open-listed.<sup>56</sup>

Reports

Different reports reveal that Latvia has discrimination against women, incidents of violence against ethnic minorities, and societal violence and incidents of government discrimination against homosexuals.<sup>78</sup>

Amnesty International in 2009 reported racially motivated attacks against Romani people. Latvia lacks of comprehensive national legislation dealing with all forms of discrimination. Lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender (LGBT) people have faced discrimination by verbal abuse. There were reported allegations of deliberate physical ill-treatment of detainees by prison staff.<sup>9</sup>

According to Human Right Report of United States Department of State, Latvia generally respects the human rights of citizens and the large resident noncitizen community. However there were problems with violence against women, incidents of violence against ethnic minorities, and societal violence and incidents of government discrimination against homosexuals.<sup>10</sup> The same problems were reported by the European Commission against Racism and Intolerance.<sup>11</sup>

Currently there is no specialized institution working only for discrimination related issues.<sup>12</sup> Ombudsman of the Republic of Latvia has revealed the written complaints of discrimination. See below.<sup>13</sup> The population of Latvia is 2.04 million.<sup>14</sup>

---

<sup>5</sup> Ibid, p.5

<sup>6</sup> “open-listed” means that the list should not be considered as complete as there may be different discrimination forms which are not included in the list mentioned.

<sup>7</sup> United States Department of State, 2008 Human Rights Report: Latvia, viewed: 07.08.2012, <http://www.state.gov/j/drl/rls/hrrpt/2008/eur/119087.htm>

<sup>8</sup> Amnesty International, Amnesty International Report 2009, viewed: 07.08.2012, <http://report2009.amnesty.org/en/regions/europe-central-asia/latvia>

<sup>9</sup> Amnesty International, Amnesty International Report 2009, viewed: 07.08.2012, <http://report2009.amnesty.org/en/regions/europe-central-asia/latvia>

<sup>10</sup> United States Department of State, 2008 Human Rights Report: Latvia, viewed: 07.08.2012, <http://www.state.gov/j/drl/rls/hrrpt/2008/eur/119087.htm>

<sup>11</sup> European Commission Against Racism and Intolerance, ECRI report on Latvia (fourth monitoring cycle), viewed: 07.08.2012, <http://www.coe.int/t/dghl/monitoring/ecri/Country-by-country/Latvia/LVA-CbC-IV-2012-003-ENG.pdf>

<sup>12</sup> Ibid, p.13

<sup>13</sup> Latvijas Cilvēktiesību centrs, Diskriminācijas novēršana Latvijā II, Latvijas Cilvēktiesību centrs, 2011, p.17

<sup>14</sup> Central Statistical Bureau, <http://www.csb.gov.lv/en/dati/statistics-database-30501.html>

Form of discrimination	2007th	2008th	2009th	2010th	2011th <sup>15</sup>
Total	112	127	101	78	50
Discrimination on the basis of race or ethnicity	13	23	14	9	4
Discrimination based on gender	12	13	19	8	2
Discrimination on grounds of age	3	6	4	5	3
Discrimination on the basis of religion	11	1	0	0	1
Discrimination based on social origin, property status	3	4	1	0	0
Discrimination based on sexual orientation	2	2	2	2	0
Discrimination on the basis of health status	11	12	8	11	7
Discrimination based on political or other beliefs	6	0	0	1	1
Discrimination on other grounds	14	14	3	13	9
Principle of legal equality	20	32	36	25	21

Opinion polls and surveys

The Republic of Latvia lacks comprehensive studies on discrimination on various grounds. Although the case law on discrimination issues develops, it is still to be considered insufficient. The number of applications and complaints to state institutions and non-governmental organizations regarding the discrimination on various grounds is considered rather small. This means that the society has a low level of awareness and lack of knowledge, which in turn does not allow people to recognize discrimination and assert their rights.<sup>16</sup>

According to the Eurobarometer survey in 2009th population considers that the most common discrimination form in Latvia is the discrimination on the ground of age (67%; average in the European Union (hereinafter - EU) - 58%) and on the ground of disability (64%; average in EU - 53). A significant number of people believe that there is a discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation (40%, average in EU 47%), ethnical origin (34%; average in EU - 61%), gender (29%, average in EU - 40%).<sup>17</sup>

<sup>15</sup> Information on September 20, 2011

<sup>16</sup> Latvijas Cilvēktiesību centrs, Diskriminācijas novēršana Latvijā II, Latvijas Cilvēktiesību centrs, 2011, p.56

According to the survey of European Union Agency for Fundamental Rights conducted in 2009 5% of respondents revealed that they have faced multiple discrimination.<sup>18</sup>

According to survey conducted by SKDS “Treatment of sexual minorities” the question was asked – what would be your action if you revealed your colleague being homosexual? 47% answered that they would not changed their attitude towards the colleague, 33% respondents chose answers regarding the distancing themselves from a colleague. Moreover, 5% would force colleague to leave the job.<sup>19</sup>

The survey conducted by the Center for Education Initiatives “The Roma rights to education: situation of implementation in Latvia” revealed that key factors that make it difficult to Roma children to integrate into the education system are disdainful attitude of surroundings, stigma and mobbing at school as well as the adaptation and learning problems in school environment. In some cases, the training of Roma children was provided in separate classes with the correction status. There is observed a segregation of Roma children among the educational institutions, which advises the parents to send their children to so-called Roma schools – the schools where Roma children are more in number.<sup>20</sup>

ii. There is no legal definition for the term “family” in Latvia, but, however, there is definition for a marriage in Constitution – a union between a man and a woman.<sup>21</sup> But, however, in the narrow sense of the word “family”, it consists of the spouses and their children while they are still part of a common household.<sup>22</sup> It is considered that the understanding of the term “family” in Latvia is narrower than it is meant in international

<sup>17</sup> European Commission (November 2009 Discrimination in the EU in 2009. Special Eurobarometer 317. http://ec.europa.eu/public\_opinion/archives/ebs/ebs\_317\_en.pdf

<sup>18</sup> European Union Agency for Fundamental Rights (2009) EU-MIDIS European Union Minorities and Discrimination Survey. Main Results Report: http://www.eurofound.europa.eu/surveys/smt/ewcs/results\_lv.htm

<sup>19</sup> Latvijas Cilvēktiesību centrs, Diskriminācijas novēršana Latvijā II, Latvijas Cilvēktiesību centrs, 2011, p.59

<sup>20</sup> Izglītības iniciatīvu centrs, Romu tiesības uz izglītību: īstenošanas situācija Latvijā. http://www.iic.lv/lv/projekti/rti\_petijums\_isl.pdf

<sup>21</sup> The Constitution of the Republic of Latvia, Art.110

<sup>22</sup> The Civil Law of Latvia. Part One. Family Law, Art. 214

human right documents.<sup>23</sup> However, it must be emphasised that it is not because the court in general considers only married couples to constitute the family but rather because of legislators position.<sup>24</sup>

The Civil Law of Latvia has set the impediments to entering into marriage. According to the law, marriage before attaining eighteen years of age is prohibited.<sup>25</sup> By way of exception, a person who has attained sixteen years of age may marry with the consent of his or her parents or guardians if he or she marries a person of legal age.<sup>26</sup> A new marriage for a person who is already married is prohibited<sup>27</sup>, thus, Latvia protects monogamous marriage. Marriage between persons of the same sex is prohibited.<sup>28</sup> The Constitutional Court of Latvia has confirmed with its judgements that the law of State recognizes de jure family as well as de facto family.<sup>29</sup> Thus the Court has declared that the biological and social reality prevail over legal presumptions.<sup>30</sup>

As it was mentioned previously marriage is enshrined constitutionally. However, the constitution does not provide the content of the term. The real content follows from Civil Law. According to it, marriage is a union which shall be registered according to the Law, thus it creates particular rights and obligations.<sup>31</sup> Marriage creates an obligation on the part of husband and wife to be faithful to each other, to live together, to take care of each other and to jointly ensure the welfare of their family.<sup>32</sup>

Since 2000 the age in which the first marriage is registered has grown by 2.5 years. In 2010 males concluded their first marriage at the age of 29, but females at age of 27 years. The average age of the marrying persons was 34 years for males and 31 year for females.<sup>33</sup> In

---

<sup>23</sup> K.Dupate, I.Reine, "110.Valsts aizsargā un atbalsta laulību – savienību starp vīrieti un sievieti, ģimeni, vecāku un bērna tiesības. Valsts īpaši palīdz bērniem invalīdiem, bērniem, kas palikuši bez vecāku gādības vai cietuši no vardarbības" in Latvijas Republikas Satversmes komentāri. VII nodaļa Cilvēka pamattiesības, R.Balodis (eds), Latvijas Vēstnesis, Rīga, 2011, p.590.

<sup>24</sup> Civil department of Supreme Court of Republic of Latvia, decision No.SKC-4/2012.

<sup>25</sup> The Civil Law of Latvia. Part One. Family Law, Art.32

<sup>26</sup> Ibid., Art.33

<sup>27</sup> Ibid., Art.38

<sup>28</sup> Ibid., Art.35

<sup>29</sup> Constitutional Court of Latvia. 2004-02-0106. 11.10.2004. Paragraph 14.

<sup>30</sup> The judgement of ECHR Johnston and others v. Ireland. 9697/82, 18.12.86

<sup>31</sup> K.Dupate, I.Reine, p.586

<sup>32</sup> The Civil Law of Latvia. Part One. Family Law, Art.84

<sup>33</sup> Central Statistical Bureau, Changes of demographic situation in Latvia in 2010, <<http://www.csb.gov.lv/en/notikumi/changes-demographic-situation-latvia-2010-31979.html>>

Latvia the number of single persons is high. 40% of males and 31% of females aged from 25 to 49 years are not legally married.<sup>34</sup>

iii. There is no law stating the general status of children within the cultural and historical background. However, Latvia has constitutionally declared that:

“State shall protect the rights of parents and rights of the child. The State shall provide special support to disabled children, children left without parental care or who have suffered from violence”.<sup>35</sup>

Protection of the rights of the child is an integral part of State policy. The State and municipalities shall organise and monitor the protection of the rights of the child throughout the territory of the State.<sup>36</sup>

In lawful relations that affect a child, the rights and best interests of the child shall take priority.<sup>37</sup> It means that the courts and institutions shall make its decisions respecting the interests of children as well as it is possible. The same refers to the Parliament of Latvia - it shall adopt or amend law respecting children interests as well as it possible.<sup>38</sup> The Constitutional Court has stated that the human rights protection in every society begins within the protection of children rights; providing them with the living conditions which helps them to develop their potential in order to be ready for the sufficient adult life.<sup>39</sup>

As regards a general concern regarding children or children rights there still occurs some cases of violence in schools and ineffectiveness of state authorities to limit it. Recently, there was a dissuasion of access to free educational materials in primary and secondary schools – according to Art. 112 of constitution of Republic of Latvia the State shall ensure that everyone may acquire primary and secondary education without charge. In practice many schools demanded students and their parents to buy some educational materials. Ombudsman of Republic of Latvia caused a massive campaign and forbade schools and the Ministry of Education to demand parents to buy education materials, thus emphasizing that

---

<sup>34</sup> Ibid.

<sup>35</sup> The Constitution of the Republic of Latvia, Art.110

<sup>36</sup> Protection of the Rights of the Child Law, Art 2

<sup>37</sup> Ibid., Art.6

<sup>38</sup> Constitutional Court of Latvia. 2004-02-0106. 11.10.2004. Paragraph 10-11; K.Dupate, I.Reine, p.598

<sup>39</sup> Constitutional Court of Latvia. 2008-43-0106. 03.06.2009. Paragraph 9.2; K.Dupate, I.Reine, p.598

all the materials must be provided my schools and the state must ensure that primary and secondary education must be acquire without charge.

iv. According to the Law on International Agreements of Republic of Latvia the Cabinet of Ministers is responsible for the implementation of international contractual obligations.<sup>40</sup> If an international agreement approved by the Parliament of Latvia (Saeima) has different provisions than the legislation of Republic of Latvian, the provisions of international treaty shall be applied.<sup>41</sup> The classification of Latvia as a dualistic or monistic country remains unresolved.<sup>42</sup> But, however, the general opinion is that Latvia is moving to more monistic approach since the international treaties are recognized as the element of national legal system. It has been proven by the fact that acts of international law, if they have been passed under particular procedure, are recognized to be elements of the national system of laws. Besides, norms and principles of international law have priority of the norms of national law. It was already stipulated in the Declaration of 4 May 1990 “On Restoration of the Independence of the Independence of the Republic of Latvia” where Article 1 prescribed the dominance of fundamental principles of international law over national laws. Under Article 13 of the Law of 13 January 1994 “On International Agreements of Republic of Latvia”, provisions of an international agreements are applied if the international agreement that has been approved by the Parliament (Saeima) prescribes different provisions from those prescribed by legislative acts of Latvia. <sup>43</sup>

Historically, following the restoration of Latvia’s independence in 1990-1991 and as the result of the adoption of the State continuity doctrine, Latvia re-effected the 1922 Republic of Latvia Constitution. When adopting the Declaration on the Accession of the Republic of Latvia to International Instruments Relating to Human Rights the Supreme Council declared that it considers as binding more than 50 international instruments in the sphere of human rights, including the Universal Declaration on Human Rights and the “International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights”. Acknowledging the role of the Council of Europe and the European Parliament in guaranteeing human rights, the Supreme Council

---

<sup>40</sup> Law on International Agreements of Republic of Latvia, Art.12

<sup>41</sup> Ibid., Art.13

<sup>42</sup> M. Scheinin, International Human Rights Norms in the Nordic and Baltic Countries, The Hague : Nijhoff, cop. 1996, p.14

<sup>43</sup> The conference of European Constitutional Courts “The Criteria of the Limitations of Human rights in the Practice of Constitutional justice”, the National Report of the Constitutional Court of the Republic of Latvia, 2005, p.7

of the Republic of Latvia declared that it will be guided in its legislative activities by the documents relating to human rights adopted by these organizations.<sup>44</sup>

Specifically, the United Nations Convention on Rights of the Children was ratified in Latvia on the 4th of September 1991. Latvia did not make any reservation to the Convention.

The general status of implementation of the Convention follows from the actual action of the State and its reports on fulfilment of the 1989 United Nations Convention on Children Rights in the Republic of Latvia.

Just after Latvia recovered its independence in 1990, it has joined several international agreements regarding the protection of the children and its rights. The State launched a comprehensive legislative corpus to create modern child protection laws. The most important international agreements and legislation binding to Latvia are:

- United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child;
- The Hague Convention on Protection of Children and Co-operation in Respect of Intercountry Adoption (or Hague Adoption Convention);
- European Convention on the Exercise of Children's Rights;
- The Hague Convention of 25 October 1980 on the Civil Aspects of International Child Abduction
- Directive 2006/54/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council of 5 July 2006 on the implementation of the principle of equal opportunities and equal treatment of men and women in matters of employment and occupation.

There have been major changes in national laws in order to adopt them to international obligations of Latvia.<sup>45</sup> In 2006 the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography entered into force.<sup>46</sup> In March 2004 Cabinet of Ministers approved the guidelines "Latvia Fit for

---

<sup>44</sup> The conference of European Constitutional Courts "The Criteria of the Limitations of Human rights in the Practice of Constitutional justice", the National Report of the Constitutional Court of the Republic of Latvia, 2005, p.2

<sup>45</sup> Report on fulfilment of the 1989 United Nation Convention on the Children Rights in the Republic of Latvia from 2001 to 1 March 2004, viewed: 11.08.2012, http://www.lm.gov.lv/upload/berns\_gimene/bernu\_tiesibas/ano\_zinjojums.doc

<sup>46</sup> Legislation portal "Latvijas Vēstnesis", viewed: 11.08.2012, <http://www.likumi.lv/doc.php?id=131178&from=off>

Children", which is long-term policy planning document (from the 2004 until 2015), containing the basic principles of national policy, objectives and priorities for children's rights policy implementation.<sup>47</sup>

Currently Latvia has The State Inspectorate for Protection of Children's Rights which supervises and controls the observance of the Protection of the Rights of the Child Law and other regulatory enactments that regulate the protection of the rights of the child.<sup>48</sup> The Ministry of Welfare (1) organizes and coordinates the monitoring of compliance with laws and regulations for children's rights; (2) promotes children and family-friendly environments in the country; (3) coordinate the child adoption processes.<sup>49</sup> The Ombudsmen has a specific Department for Children Rights which secures, protects and promotes Children Rights.<sup>50</sup> Latvia has several non-governmental organizations working on children's rights.<sup>51</sup>

The Central Statistical Bureau collects statistical information on children's number, age structure, fertility, mortality, education, health, social protection, material deprivation and the risk of poverty for families with children, youth economic activity, the use of information technology, child abuse and children in conflict with the law.<sup>52</sup>

v. Latvia is the member state of European Union since 2004th. At the moment Latvia has established a working group in charge for the implementation of the Directive 2011/93/EU.<sup>53</sup> The working group has evaluated the regulation regarding criminal liability for the use of child prostitution and has declared that the current provisions of Criminal Law of Latvia are not sufficient and has agreed to initiate new amendments for the article 164 of Criminal Law of Latvia, thus including a new criminal offence – child prostitution.<sup>54</sup>

---

<sup>47</sup> Report on fulfilment of the 1989 United Nation Convention on the Children Rights in the Republic of Latvia from 2001 to 1 March 2004, viewed: 11.08.2012, p.6

<sup>48</sup> Republic of Latvia Cabinet Regulation No 898 By-law of the State Inspectorate for Protection of Children's Rights

<sup>49</sup> Republic of Latvia Cabinet Regulation No 49 Regulation for Ministry of Welfare

<sup>50</sup> Regulations of the Ombudsman's Office, viewed: 11.08.2012, <http://www.tiesibsargs.lv/lv/tiesibsarga-biroja-nolikums>

<sup>51</sup> Report on fulfilment of the 1989 United Nation Convention on the Children Rights in the Republic of Latvia from 2001 to 1 March 2004, viewed: 11.08.2012, p.12

<sup>52</sup> Central Statistical Bureau, viewed: 11.08.2012, <http://www.csb.gov.lv/11014000>

<sup>53</sup> According to Corrigendum to Directive 2011/92/EU of the European Parliament and of the Council of 13 December 2011 on combating the sexual abuse and sexual exploitation of children and child pornography, and replacing Council Framework Decision 2004/68/JHA shall be read: '2011/93/EU'.

<sup>54</sup> www.mk.gov.lv/doc/2005/TMInf\_130712\_prostit.761.doc

2 THE LANZAROTE CONVENTION

i. The European Convention on Human Rights as well as protocol 1st, 4th and 7<sup>h</sup> were ratified in Latvia in 1997th.

ii. Latvia is not a party to Lanzarote Convention.

iii. According to the official response of Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Republic of Latvia requested by the research team the possibility to sign the Convention in future is regarded as positive. Ministry explained that the signing of Convention is bound to several aspects. Firstly, in December 17, 2011 the regulation of Directive 2011/92/EU of The European Parliament and Council's of December 13, 2011 on combating the sexual abuse and sexual exploitation of children and child pornography (and replacing Council Framework Decision 2004/68/TI) came in force. In context of the Convention the Directive is important because it is based on the regulation of the Convention mentioned above. Thus a number of conditions will be taken over within the Directive. Secondly, at the moment there is no inadequacy between the regulation of Latvia and Convention in such matters as double criminality as a precondition for the realisation of the jurisdiction of Latvia over an offense committed in a foreign country or victim's application as a prerequisite for the initiation of criminal proceedings. Thirdly, after the transpose of the Directive it would be necessary to work out new amendments only regarding the Art.14(3) and Art.29 of the Convention. There are only a few amendments to make in order to reach the level of regulation of the Convention.

To conclude, as mentioned above, the possibility to sign and ratify the Convention in Latvia in future is regarded as positive, but no particular date stated the ratification being expected. The only obstacle hindering ratification stated is financial aspect.

iv. The hierarchy of the Latvian legal norms and the place of the international instruments in it are not clearly formulated in the text of the Constitution. At the moment it follows – even through indirectly – from Article 85 of the Constitution (Satversme), Article 16 of the Constitutional Court Law as well as from the Administrative Procedure Law.<sup>55</sup> Administrative Procedure Law Article 15 establishes that “the norms of international law, regardless of their origin, shall be approximated in accordance with their place in the hierarchy of the external legal force. If a discrepancy between the international legal norm and the Latvian legal norm of the same force is established then the international legal norm shall be applied”.<sup>56</sup> According to Official Publication Law State’s national order has 4 level normative acts:

---

<sup>55</sup> The conference of European Constitutional Courts “The Criteria of the Limitations of Human rights in the Practice of Constitutional justice”, the National Report of the Constitutional Court of the Republic of Latvia, 2005, p.7

- 1) Constitutional level
- 2) Law level
- 3) Regulation of Cabinet of Ministers
- 4) Local Municipalities binding rules

The Lanzarote Convention after ratification would reach the Law level rank.

II NATIONAL LEGISLATION

1 GENERAL PRINCIPLES OF THE JURISDICTION

i. Latvia was founded in 1918 as a democratic republic with a plural party system. The social-democratic labourers were the most popular party. In the base of constitution of Latvia best principles from the constitutions of Weimar, Switzerland, France and others where taken. These constitutions were popular at the beginning of 20th century as democratic and modern constitutions. President is the head of the state of Latvia, but he has limited rights to be involved in executive processes. His power in executive processes is limited with contrasignation institution. His role is more for stabilizing processes; he acts as a linkman between powers. The principle for interpreting the constitution is to read it taking into account the spirit of the time when it was written and using all methods of interpretation because it is not enough with grammatical interpretation. But it is not enough with traditional interpretation methods also. In addition to those methods it is necessary to have one more criteria – the unity of constitution, practice compliance to constitution and functional adequacy.<sup>57</sup> Although rules of this constitution are laconic and abstract beyond these short sentences one can find general principles of law.

---

<sup>56</sup> The conference of European Constitutional Courts “The Criteria of the Limitations of Human rights in the Practice of Constitutional justice”, the National Report of the Constitutional Court of the Republic of Latvia, 2005, p.8

Latvia was a parliamentary democracy from 1918 to 1934. In 1934 K. Ulmanis, the prime minister of Latvia, carried out a coup d'état and overthrew the government. That was the beginning of the authoritative dictatorship regime in Latvia led by K. Ulmanis.

In 1940 Latvia was occupied and incorporated in the USSR.

In 1941 Latvia was occupied by Nazi Germany and incorporated into Reichskommissariat Ostland which was made and controlled by the Nazi regime. Later in 1944 Latvia was again occupied by USSR. USSR did not change the governmental regime only; all legal system was changed from democratic to socialistic. Latvia was a part of a totalitarian regime. Latvia was one of the subjects in the federal government system under a name of Latvian Soviet Socialist Republic. Although formally USSR represented itself as a Federal republic it was a huge united totalitarian power with centralized system with the main power of the state - Communist Party.

Latvia renewed independence in 1991. Also constitution of Latvia and many legal acts were renewed. Latvia renewed independence using continuity principle. Namely, Latvia is the same state which was founded in 1918 and whose de facto existence was interrupted by 50 years of occupation.

Latvia again became parliamentary democracy with central government and three separate, independent powers which mutually control each other.

ii. In the process of constitution's adoption there were numerous discussions about the chapter of human rights. When constitution of Latvia was adopted it was without any bill of rights. At the first independence period there were some few bills of rights which consisted of human rights. For example the first constitutional law (the first constitution – temporary constitution) in Latvia was The Political Platform of Nations Council. This document determines state's governmental base. Third part of this document consisted of human rights. It was surprising that in this document that was created in 1918 there were rules that regulated gender equality.

---

<sup>57</sup> J. Pleps, E. Pastars, I. Plakane, Konstitucionālās tiesības, Latvijas Vēstnesis, Rīga, 2004, p. 60.

Provisional Rules of the State of Latvia (Latvijas valsts iekārtas pagaidu noteikumi<sup>58</sup>) was the second temporary constitution created in 1920. It also consisted of human rights rules, e.g., the press, speech, conscience, strike and assembly freedoms.

After restoration of independence, in 1998, chapter 8 - human rights - was included in constitution and entered into force as constitutional law. This chapter consisted of fundamental principles that reflected human rights protection in Latvia. But the constitution is not the only place where one can find human rights regulation.

In Administrative Law Act, judicial law and others there also are rules that provide human rights. The first rule of human rights chapter in the constitution determines that Latvia recognizes and protects human rights not only according to the constitutional law but also to those international treaties which are binding to Latvia.<sup>59</sup> Article 111 determines children protection. This rule means that state particularly helps disabled children and children without parents, and also it helps to those children who have suffered from violence.

iii. In Latvia there is a specific judicial body – Constitutional Court (Satversmes tiesa). Constitutional court is an independent judiciary body, which reviews cases that are in court's competence. Competence is determined in Constitutional court law and in constitution. In court competence there are cases regarding law conformity with Constitution, international contracts etc. And this also means monitoring the implementation of international and national human rights instruments. Individual claims can be submitted if an individual considers that the rule of law offends his rights which are protected by constitution or other law. Constitutional complaint can be submitted in court only after an individual has used all other opportunities to protect his rights with general remedies (a complaint to a higher body or official application to court of general jurisdiction). Only if there is not any other opportunity to protect rights generally or there is an emergency case or there is not an opportunity to avoid substantial damage, individual can bring a claim in Constitutional court directly<sup>60</sup>.

iv. In Latvia there is The Highest court. But there is not a separate Criminal Supreme Court. High court has chambers. That is the reason why in Latvia there is The Chamber of

---

<sup>58</sup> 1920, 1 of June, Latvijas valsts iekārtas pagaidu noteikumi

<sup>59</sup> 1922, 15 of February, Satversme

<sup>60</sup> 1996, 5 of June Law of Constitutional Court, Latvijas Vēstnesis, Nr. 103(588), 14.06.1996.

Criminal Cases of High Court. This chamber deals with criminal cases in appeal procedure. Chamber of Criminal Cases of High Court competence has the following categories: 1) crimes against humanity, peace; 2) war crimes, genocide, crimes against state; 3) crimes under current articles of Criminal Law; 4) crimes against virtue, sexual with under age or minor; 5) crimes where have been procedural actions against witnesses; 6) crimes with state's secret.

There are two opportunities – the case can be examined in opened or closed order. The examination process is closed if it is necessarily to protect state's or adoption's secret and also if there is motivated request from one party. Judgment is declared avowedly, also if the procedure of examination had been closed (then declare public only introduction part and operative part). Court investigation and court debate is limited by extent and frames of claim's or protest's moat. Court trial can be in written or verbal order. The case can be examined in written trial if in proclaim are only request about commutation of the sentence or compensation for damage. Or in proclaim there are only indicated to circumstances which are in the base to cancel the judgment of the first instance. And it is possible to apply written trial only with prosecutor or person's with affected interests and rights permit.

Other crimes which District court considers to be accepted because of legal complications or security can also be examined in Chamber of Criminal Cases of High Court. This court also examines cases about persons' extradition abroad.

But according to 2012 1st of July amendments of Criminal Law further all criminal cases as in the first instance will be examined in Regional courts, all appeal cases will be examined in the District courts. Cassation's order will be used to appeal court's decision in The Supreme Court Senate as the court of cassation. Thus, there are plans to refuse from examination of cases in Chamber of Criminal Cases of High Court<sup>61</sup>.

v. In Latvia a person is criminally liable when they become 14 years old. Underage are persons younger than 14 years and these persons are not criminally liable.

“Children crime prevention and child protection against crimes program 2009-2011” (Bērnu noziedzības novēršanas un bērna aizsardzības prēt noziedzīgu nodarījumu programma 2009.

---

<sup>61</sup> Kriminālietu tiesu palāta, 29.08.2009, available: <http://www.at.gov.lv/about/operation/judicial/criminal/>

– 2011. gadam ) entered into force on September 5, 2009 <sup>62</sup>. One of these program's tasks was to make a review about underage criminals` situation in Latvia. At this moment every one can get data with statistics about these crimes on the state police web site<sup>63</sup>.

In 2011 comparing with 2010 there are more registered crimes which is done by underage (14-18 years old) persons. In 2011 114 crimes more took place than in 2010. In 2011 underage persons have done 75 especially serious crimes and 420 serious crimes.

The most common underage crimes are thefts (694), damages of properties (114) and robberies (76).

But crimes done by underage persons are in latent criminality group that is why statistics data cannot reflect the real situation about registered underage offenses.<sup>64</sup>

2 SUBSTANTIVE CRIMINAL LAW

DEFINITIONS FOR THE CHAPTER

Minor – in criminal law, a person under the age of eighteen, regardless if he or she has under special circumstances been declared by a civil court as being of age of majority or has entered into marriage

Underage person – a person under fourteen years of age

Criminal violation – a criminal offence for which the law provides for deprivation of liberty for a term not exceeding two years, or a lesser punishment

Less serious crime – an intentional criminal offence for which the law provides for deprivation of liberty for a term exceeding two years but not exceeding five years, or an offence, which has been committed through negligence and for which the law provides for deprivation of liberty for a term exceeding two years, but not exceeding ten years

Serious crime – an intentional criminal offence for which the law provides for deprivation of liberty for a term exceeding five years but not exceeding ten years, or an offence, which has

---

<sup>62</sup> 03.09.2009. Order of Ministers of Cabinet Nr. 625. Bērnu noziedzības novēršanas un bērnu aizsardzības pret noziedzīgu nodarījumu programmas 2009.-2011.gadam

<sup>63</sup> <http://www.vp.gov.lv/?id=530&said=530>.

<sup>64</sup> Pārskats par nepilngadīgo noziedzību, cietušiem bērniem, stāvokli ceļus atīksmē un prevencijas jomā 2011.gada 12 mēnešos.Valstspolicijas Galvenās kārtības policijaspārvaldes Prevencijas pārvaldes Metodiskās vadības nodaļa. Available: www.vp.gov.lv/faili/relizes/2011\_PARSKATS.doc.

been committed through negligence and for which the law provides for deprivation of liberty for a term exceeding ten years

Especially serious crime – an intentional criminal offence for which the law provides for deprivation of liberty for a term exceeding ten years or life imprisonment

LVL – Latvian lats, the national currency; all monetary amounts throughout the report are given in lats and converted to euros according to official exchange rate of Bank of Latvia as of November 2nd, 2012.

Minimum monthly wage – an instrument for expressing the amount of fines levied, since January 1, 2011 minimum monthly wage is 200 LVL (284.90 €)

2.1 Sexual Abuse

i. In national legislation there is no explicit definition of the term „sexual activities”. Whether some actions are considered as sexual or not depends on the particular offence under consideration. For example, Article 162 of the Criminal Law (leading to depravity, i.e., corruption of children) includes sexual activities that are aimed towards sexually satisfying the offender or stimulating sexual desire of the victim. Such activities can happen with or without physical contact, including over communication devices.<sup>65</sup> Of the acts listed in paragraph 143 of the Explanatory Report to the Lanzarote Convention,<sup>66</sup> all are included in the national understanding of the term “sexual activities”. Further explanation of various types of sexual activities and their legal consequences can be found in answers to questions iv, xi and xv of this chapter.

ii. The Criminal Law defines intent in Article 9:

„A criminal offence shall be considered to have been committed deliberately (intentionally) if the person who has committed it has foreseen the consequences of the offence and has desired such (direct intent) or, even if such consequences have not been desired, nevertheless has knowingly allowed these to result (indirect intent).”

Therefore, in cases of sexual abuse where the victim is a minor, the offender must have known that the victim is under the legal age for engaging in sexual activities or must have foreseen such a possibility (dolus eventualis).<sup>67</sup> Criminal liability of an intentionally committed crime of sexual abuse varies depending on age of the offender, age of the victim, assent of the victim, degree and nature of violence used, type of sexual activities, etc. Sanctions always include deprivation of liberty (see further answer to question xxii of this chapter).

<sup>65</sup> Uldis Krastiņš, Valentīna Liholaja & Aivars Niedre, Krimināllikuma zinātniski praktiskais komentārs. Sevišķa daļa (Riga, AFS 2007) p. 348.

<sup>66</sup> Explanatory Report to Council of Europe Convention on the Protection of Children against Sexual Exploitation and Sexual Abuse <<http://conventions.coe.int/Treaty/EN/Reports/Html/201.htm>> accessed 5 November 2012

iii. The legal age for engaging in sexual activities (age of sexual consent, dzimumpilngadības vecums in Latvian) for both homosexual and heterosexual acts in Latvia is sixteen. However, if one of willing partners is between sixteen and eighteen years of age and the other partner is at least fourteen years of age, no criminal liability applies, unless the younger partner is in financial or other dependence on the offender.

Criminal liability applies to natural persons who, on the day of the commission of a criminal offence, have attained fourteen years of age (Article 11 of the Criminal Law). If both persons are underage, and both are willing, no coercive measures are prescribed. If a crime is committed by a person under the age of fourteen and over the age of eleven, either a court or a judge acting singly can apply a coercive measure, as listed in Law On Compulsory Measures of a Correctional Nature, Article 6, paragraph 1, starting from a warning and up to placing a child in an educational establishment for social correction.

iv. In national legislation contents and sanctions of the term sexual abuse, as defined in Article 18, paragraph 1 of Lanzarote Convention, can be found in five articles of the Criminal Law: Article 159 (rape), Article 160 (violent sexual assault), Article 161 (sexual connection, pederasty and lesbianism with a person who has not attained the age of sixteen years) and in some cases Article 162 (leading to depravity, i.e., corruption of children) and Article 162.<sup>1</sup> (encouraging to involve in sexual acts).<sup>68</sup>

Although Protection of the Rights of the Child Law in Article 1, clause 10, explicitly defines sexual abuse as involving of a child in sexual activities that the child does not understand or to which the child cannot knowingly give consent, such view differs from prevailing

---

<sup>67</sup> Supreme Court of Republic of Latvia, Court report on Article 160 and 162 of the Criminal Law (in Latvian, 2007) p. 9.

<<http://www.at.gov.lv/files/docs/summaries/2007/kriminalietas%20pec%20kl%20160.%20un%20162.p.doc>> accessed 5 November 2012

<sup>68</sup> such a view is supported by National Report on Violence against Children in Latvia (in Latvian, 2010) p. 5-7.

<http://www.bernskacietusais.lv/download.php?file=files/object\_files/1317553668510\_Bernu\_viktimizacija\_Latvija.pdf> accessed 5 November 2012 understanding under criminal law. One example of such unfoundedly narrow understanding can be seen in an internal assessment of Lanzarote Convention carried out by the Cabinet of Ministers, which states that, according to the Ministry of Interior, sexual abuse includes only rape and violent sexual assault.<sup>69</sup> Such different understandings of the term “sexual abuse” necessitate separate deeper analysis of understanding of use of force and violence in cases of sexual abuse.

Rape is defined as an act of sexual intercourse by means of violence, threats or taking advantage of the state of helplessness of a victim. Sexual intercourse in cases of rape is only vaginal intercourse, other types of intercourse falling under violent sexual assault. Offence is complete on the moment when penis enters vagina. Violence in this context is only physical violence, with or without infliction of pain.<sup>70</sup> The element of physical violence with the aim of acquiring assent or stopping resistance, and physical or psychological suffering caused thereby, is essential. Threats need to be explicit threats of physical violence towards the victim or a person intimate to the victim; they must be real, immediate and believed by the victim.<sup>71</sup> Rape of a minor and rape of an underage person are sanctioned separately from rape. An underage person is considered to always be in a state of helplessness and any vaginal intercourse with them is rape. If the victim is over fourteen years of age all preconditions apply. If no explicit physical violence or restraint can be established, the offence is not rape but sexual connection with a person who has not attained the age of sixteen years (see further).

Violent sexual assault is defined as “pederastic or lesbian or other unnatural sexual acts of gratification”, if such acts have been committed using violence or threats or by taking advantage of the state of helplessness of a person. Violent sexual assault on a minor and violent sexual assault on an underage person is sanctioned separately from violent sexual assault. Criminal sanction for violent sexual assault was lower until October 2011, when both sanctions were equalized.

---

<sup>69</sup> Ministry of Children and Family Affairs, Explanatory Report on Project of Cabinet of Ministers Ordinance "On Council of Europe Convention on the Protection of Children against Sexual Exploitation and Sexual Abuse" (in Latvian, 23 October 2008) p. 7. <http://www.mk.gov.lv/doc/2005/BMpask\_231008\_SexExplK.1836.doc> accessed 5 November 2012

<sup>70</sup> Uldis Krastiņš, Valentīna Liholaja & Aivars Niedre, Krimināllikuma zīnātniski praktiskais komentārs 2. Svišķā daļa (Riga, AFS 2007) p. 339.

<sup>71</sup> Dainis Mežulis, Personas kriminalitātesiskā aizsardzība (Riga, Zvaigzne ABC 2001) p. 314.

Any type of sexual connection with a person who has not attained the age of sixteen years and who is in financial or other dependence on the offender, or if such offence has been committed by a person who has attained the age of majority, is considered a separate crime. Consent of the victim is immaterial.

Corruption of children (leading to depravity) is defined as sexual activities against the will of the minor or if such have been committed by a person who has attained the age of majority. Such a definition has caused courts to have considerable difficulties separating violent sexual assault from corruption of children, since both are done against the will of the minor and differ mainly in the degree and nature of physical violence and degree of physical contact. It must be emphasized that many cases of sexual abuse fall under the national definition of corruption of children and full understanding of corruption of children is vital for acquiring a complete view of current legal situation regarding physical sexual abuse. Corruption of children is further explored in answer to question xv in this chapter. Encouraging to engage in sexual activities (grooming) is further explored in answer to question xvi of this chapter.

In conclusion, for an offence to be understood as rape or violent sexual assault, physical violence or threats of physical violence must be present and be essential for the commission of the crime. If threats or physical violence are used after the crime has been committed, the sexual activities in question are understood and sentenced as corruption of children and subsequent use of violence is a separate offence. If the will of the minor is overcome by, for example, the offender stripping and continued touching of the child after being asked to stop, such an act is not rape or violent sexual assault, because it lacks the element of explicit violence.

Understanding of taking advantage of a disability depends on whether the victim is in a state of helplessness when the offence starts being committed. State of helplessness exists when the victim experiences permanent or temporary psychological disturbances, is underage, is asleep, unconscious or under influence of alcohol or drugs to a degree that the victim can not adequately comprehend outside stimuli and respond to them. Such state of helplessness must be known to the offender and be used in commission of the crime. As such, the degree and nature of disability is important – if the person is physically incapable of showing resistance, he or she is in a state of helplessness.<sup>72</sup> If the person is temporarily or permanently psychologically disturbed to a degree that can not adequately comprehend outside stimuli and respond to them, he or she is in a state of helplessness; however, if he or she can't resist because of individual psychological traits that are not psychological disturbances, such traits are irrelevant.<sup>73</sup> After a 2010 judgment of the Constitutional court requiring different degrees of legal capacity to act under civil law,<sup>74</sup> there is an ongoing re-examination and reform of the concept of legal capacity. What, if any, effect such reform will have on capability to consent in criminal law is unclear.

v. Incest is not regarded as a crime in Latvia and there is no explicit legal definition of incest. Marriage is prohibited between kin in a direct line (lineal ancestors and descendants), siblings, and half-siblings (Article 35 of the Civil Law), adopter and adoptee, except in cases where the legal relationship established by adoption has been terminated (Article 37 of the Civil Law), as well as guardian and his or her ward or trustee and the person under trusteeship, before the termination of the relations of guardianship or trusteeship (Article 38 of the Civil Law). Under the aforementioned reform of the concept of legal capacity (answer to question iv of this chapter), Parliament is planning to abolish the restrictions on marriage between trustee and person under trusteeship.<sup>75</sup>

vi. Article 48 of the Criminal Law lists aggravating circumstances of criminal offences, including taking advantage in bad faith of an official position or the trust of another person (Article 48, paragraph 1, clause 3) and the offender taking advantage of victim's official, financial or other dependence on the offender (Article 48, paragraph 1, clause 7). Both victim's trust and dependence are defined with enough flexibility to be applicable outside official subordination or duty of care.

---

<sup>72</sup> Krastiņš, Liholaja & Niedre, Kriminallikuma zinātniski praktiskais komentārs 2. Svišķā daļa pp. 339-340.

<sup>73</sup> SKK – 47, Decision of Department of Criminal Cases of Senate of the Supreme Court of Republic of Latvia (in Latvian, 28 February 2002).

<sup>74</sup> On Compliance of Sections 358 and 364 of the Civil Law, with Article 96 of the Satversme of the Republic of Latvia, Judgement of Constitutional court of the Republic of Latvia in Case No. 2010-38-01 (27 December 2010) <http://www.satv.tiesa.gov.lv/upload/spriedums\_2010-38-01.htm> accessed 5 November 2012

<sup>75</sup> Bill No. 90/TA-2755 (2011) Amendment to the Civil Law (15 November 2011). <<http://titania.saeima.lv/LIVS11/saeimalivs11.nsf/0/F81AEAE4B081B277C225794A00253F71?OpenDocument>> accessed 5 November 2012

The list of aggravating circumstances in Article 48 is not specific to sexual offences against minors and is applicable to any criminal offence where the circumstance is not already a constituent element of the crime. Recognizing a particular circumstance as aggravating or not falls under the discretion of the court and the court can consider them not to be aggravating in a particular case. The court has to give its reasons for recognizing a circumstance as aggravating or mitigating, but doesn't have to explain why a particular circumstance was not recognized as aggravating or mitigating.<sup>76</sup>

2.2 Child Prostitution

vii. Latvia is party to the Council of Europe Convention on Action against Trafficking in Human Beings. Latvia signed the Convention on the 19th of May 2006; it was ratified by the Parliament on the 13th of February 2008, and entered into force on the 1st of July 2008. In accordance with Article 31, paragraph 2, of the Convention, Latvia has reserved the right not to apply the jurisdiction rules laid down in paragraphs 1 (d) and (e) of Article 31 of the Convention.

viii. Prostitution is legal in Latvia. In national legislation there is no explicit definition of child prostitution. Article 164 of the Criminal Law (Involvement of a Person in Prostitution and Compelling Engaging in Prostitution) defines as a crime involving a person in prostitution regardless of age or consent of the victim. Article 164, paragraph 3 provides a separate sentence for inducing or compelling a person to engage in prostitution if the victim is under 18 years of age and paragraph 4 if the victim is underage. Living on the avails of prostitution (procuring) is a separate crime with separate sentences for living on the avails of prostitution of minors or underage persons (Article 165 of the Criminal Law).

Prostitution is defined in paragraph 1 of Regulation of the Cabinet of Ministers Regarding Restriction of Prostitution as “provision of sexual services for a fee”. “A fee” in this legal context includes any kind of material remuneration or promise of such, but is vague regarding considerations that have no monetary value. There have been no known criminal cases involving prostitution in Latvia where the benefit was of non-material nature. “Sexual services” include manipulation of client's genitals until he or she achieves sexual gratification, no matter if its organizers call it “erotic massage”.<sup>77</sup> Whether erotic performances with a high degree of physical contact (lap dancing, etc.) would be considered prostitution under the current definition remains unclear. According to an evaluation carried out by the Ministry of Children and Family Affairs the definitions are compatible.<sup>78</sup>

---

<sup>76</sup> SKK-129/2012, Decision of Department of Criminal Cases of Senate of the Supreme Court of Republic of Latvia (in Latvian, 26 March 2012) <<http://at.gov.lv/files/archive/departments2/2012/skk-12912.doc>> accessed 5 November 2012

ix. The Criminal Law recognizes as crimes both the recruiting children for prostitution and using child prostitutes (Article 164), but does not separate these offences. The formula used – “inducing or compelling a minor to engage in prostitution” – in this legal context is recognized to be vague and, if construed strictly, would not include paying to conduct sexual activities with children over the age of consent. However, users of child prostitutes have been successfully prosecuted under Article 164.<sup>79</sup>

2.3 Child Pornography

x. Latvia is party to the Council of Europe Convention on Cybercrime. Latvia signed the Convention on the 5th of May 2004; it was ratified by the Parliament on 27th of October 2006, and entered into force on the 1st of June 2007. In accordance with Article 29, paragraph 4, of the Convention, Latvia has reserved the right to refuse the request for preservation under this article in cases where it has reasons to believe that at the time of disclosure the condition of dual criminality cannot be fulfilled.

xi. In Latvian national legislation child pornography is defined in the Law on Pornography Restrictions, Article 1, paragraphs 1 and 2:

“1) material of a pornographic nature – composition, printed matter, image, computer programme, film, video or sound recording, television programme, or radio programme, other material in any form or type, that does not have publicly educational or informative, scientific or artistic value and in which directly, specifically and openly naturalistically:

---

<sup>77</sup> SKK – 405, Decision of Department of Criminal Cases of Senate of the Supreme Court of Republic of Latvia (in Latvian, 27 October 2005)

<<http://www.at.gov.lv/files/archive/department2/2005/kd271005.doc>> accessed 5 November 2012

<sup>78</sup> referred to in Explanatory Report on Project of Cabinet of Ministers Ordinance "On Council of Europe Convention on the Protection of Children against Sexual Exploitation and Sexual Abuse" p. 4.

<sup>79</sup> Ministry of Justice, Informative Report „On Foreign Experience in Combating Prostitution and Recommendations on Allaying Prostitution in Latvia” (in Latvian, 2 August 2012) p. 16.

<http://www.mk.gov.lv/doc/2005/TMInf\_130712\_prostit.761.doc> accessed 5 November 2012

a) genitals are completely or partially depicted, sexual acts of gratification by masturbation are depicted or described, as well as sexual acts or sexual acts of gratification in an unnatural way are described, including imitation of the specified activities,

b) sexual acts or sexual acts of gratification in an unnatural way are depicted, as well as imitation of the specified activities; or,

c) sexual acts of gratification in a violent manner, brutality in sexual activities (sadistic and masochistic activities), sexual acts of gratification with animals or necrophilia are depicted or described;

2) child pornography – material of a pornographic nature, in which a child is depicted or described, or any other material in which:

a) a child who is involved in sexual activities, a child completely or partially without clothing in a sexual pose or in clothing of an obscene nature is depicted or described, children's genitals or pubic region are depicted in a stimulating way,

b) a person having the appearance of a child who is involved in the activities specified in Sub-clause "a" of this Clause is depicted or described or presented in a manner specified in Sub-clause "a",

c) there are realistic images with an actually non-existent child who is involved in the activities specified in Sub-clause "a" of this Clause or presented in a manner specified in Sub-clause "a";”

“Sexual act” in this particular context signifies vaginal intercourse, while “sexual acts of gratification in an unnatural way” include other types of intercourse, including homosexual.

While paragraph 142 of the Explanatory Report to the Lanzarote Convention excludes material having artistic, medical, scientific or similar merit from the definition of child pornography, national legislation grants such exclusion only regarding pornographic material. Child pornography is explicitly separated from pornographic material in general and no “informative, scientific or artistic value” exceptions are applicable to the definition.<sup>80</sup> While Article 9 of the Law on Pornography Restrictions grants such exceptions to restrictions of circulation of child pornography for, inter alia, the process of education, for scientific, research or medical purposes, such exemptions are applied after the material is already recognized as child pornography. Artistic material or material used for artistic purposes is not exempt. Together with the definition of child pornography referring to "any other material in which (...) a child who is involved in sexual activities (...) is depicted or described", it creates a potential for misapplication and a considerable need for interpretation.

---

<sup>80</sup> Andra Reinfelde, Bērnu pornogrāfija - kā noteikt tās robežas (2008) Jurista Vārds No.7 (511), 19 February 2008.

The formula "for primarily sexual purposes" used in Lanzarote Convention and the formula "in a stimulating way" (uzbudinoši in Latvian) used in national legislation, are liable to different interpretations. Sexual purposes refer to an intent towards sexual stimulation (subjective state), while "a stimulating way" requires an objective element. It is currently unclear what test courts will apply in practice – opinion of the court, opinion of an average person, expert opinion, or subjective intent to sexually stimulate.

The term "sexual organs" (Lanzarote Convention) is considerably wider than "genitals or pubic region" (national law). Under national definition genitals (dzimūmorgāni in Latvian) and pubic region (kaunums in Latvian) are separated, thereby implying a strict and narrow understanding of the term "genitals". While previously described problems in the definition are mainly potential, understanding of the term "sexual organs" has already caused difficulties in practice. In 2008 several rulings of Riga Centre Region Court (Rīgas pilsētas Centra rajona tiesa in Latvian), after considerable research, in the context of erotic performances defined sexual organs as excluding legs, breasts and buttocks. The rulings created some controversy in the legal press.<sup>81</sup> There is no information on whether the proffered definition continues to be used; even if it is considered obsolete, it shows the practical consequences of a strict understanding of the national definition.

Article 20(3) of the Lanzarote Convention provides for Parties the right to not criminalize producing or possessing child pornography "consisting exclusively of simulated representations or realistic images of a non-existent child." Therefore simulated representations of a non-existent child are a priori included in the definition of child pornography in Lanzarote Convention. While no definition of simulated representations can be found in either the Lanzarote Convention or its explanatory report, travaux préparatoires of Directive 2011/93/EU of the European Parliament and of the Council of 13 December

---

<sup>81</sup> Jānis Neimanis, Koncentrēšanās uz detaļām aizņēno lietas būtību (2009) Jurista Vārds No.16 (569), 21 April 2009.

2011 on combating the sexual abuse and sexual exploitation of children and child pornography understand simulated representations as “some comics, pictures, books or films (e.g. Lolita) if they refer to sexual activities with children, and which are produced without real images of existing children and are produced for private use and are not susceptible to further dissemination”.<sup>82</sup> As a result Directive 2011/93/EU as adopted must be interpreted so that “only realistic images of a child, for the production of which an existing child was originally misused, although its identity was later graphically modified, are (...) to be included in this provision”.<sup>83</sup> Similarly, Council of Europe Convention on Cybercrime Article 9, paragraph 2, clause c includes in child pornography “realistic images representing a minor engaged in sexually explicit conduct” thereby not including simulated representations. In conclusion, national definition of child pornography currently might not include simulated representations of a non-existent child, depending on the understanding of “material of a pornographic nature, in which a child is depicted or described” part of the national definition of child pornography.

It must be noted that “a person having the appearance of a child” in national definition can be interpreted as either a non-existing person as has been the case in the Netherlands,<sup>84</sup> or an existing person. The limits of interpretation have not been tested in courts.

In Latvia there has been a highly publicized case, called “Princeses” lieta in Latvian, where the pornographic material was a comic titled “Johnny the Mathematician” that was published in a pornographic magazine. It was drawn in manga (Japanese comics) style and depicted two persons of indeterminate age engaged in algebra homework, who subsequently engage in sexual activities. The comic was published in 2001, before the adoption of current national definition of child pornography. After confiscating the edition of the pornographic

---

<sup>82</sup> Roberta Angelilli, Proposal for a Directive of the European Parliament and of the Council on combating the sexual abuse, sexual exploitation of children and child pornography, 2009 p.2-3.
<http://www.europarl.europa.eu/meetdocs/2009\_2014/documents/libe/dv/wd\_child\_sexual\_abuse\_angelilli/wd\_child\_sexual\_abuse\_angelilli\_en.pdf> accessed 5 November 2012

<sup>83</sup> Council of the European Union Working Party on Substantive Criminal Law, Interinstitutional File: 2009/0049 (CNS) (20/21 April 2009) Article 1, para. (b).
<<http://register.consilium.europa.eu/pdf/en/09/st09/st09049.en09.pdf>> accessed 5 November 2012

<sup>84</sup> Bert-Jaap Koops, Cybercrime Legislation in the Netherlands (December 2010) Electronic Journal of Comparative Law vol. 14.3 p. 12. <<http://www.ejcl.org/143/art143-10.pdf>> accessed 5 November 2012

magazine<sup>85</sup> and beginning a criminal investigation,<sup>86</sup> no further action was taken by law enforcement authorities and the case never reached court.

It must be noted that, the relationship between Latvian law and international treaties being mostly monistic, and Latvia being a party to United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography as well as Convention on Cybercrime, definitions of child pornography given in aforementioned conventions are directly applicable.<sup>87</sup> If and when Latvia ratifies the Lanzarote Convention, the definition given in Article 20(2) will be directly applicable as well.

xii. Under Article 166, paragraph 2 of the Criminal Law liability applies to persons for:

„downloading, acquisition, importation, production, public demonstration, advertising or other distribution of such pornographic or erotic materials as relate or portray the sexual abuse of children, (...) or the keeping of such materials”

No special provisions exist regarding minors producing or distributing pornographic images. The prevalence among minors in Europe of so-called “sexting” – sending by mobile communication devices of erotic or pornographic images of oneself or others – exposes a potential problem. Under current legal circumstances a seventeen year old taking a pornographic picture of his or her consenting married partner can be sentenced to deprivation of liberty of up to two years (Article 65, paragraph 2 of the Criminal Law) and court would not be able to consider being a minor a mitigating circumstance.<sup>88</sup>

Acquisition is understood as acquiring into ownership, possession or use, not requiring will to acquire ownership, and is compatible with procuring such materials for oneself or another

---

<sup>85</sup> „Policija konfiscē bērnu pornogrāfiju saturošo komiksu” (Delfi.lv, 18 October 2001).
<<http://www.delfi.lv/news/national/criminal/policija-konfisce-bernu-pornografiju-saturoso-komiksu.d?id=1990314>> accessed 5 November 2012

<sup>86</sup> „Lūdz sākt kriminālvajāšanu ‘Princeses’ lietā” (Delfi.lv, 21 May 2002).
<<http://www.delfi.lv/news/national/criminal/ludz-sakt-kriminalvajasanu-princeses-lieta.d?id=3218443>> accessed 5 November 2012

<sup>87</sup> Diāna Hamkova, Vai bērnu pornogrāfija Latvijā nav sodāma (2007) Jurista Vārds No.13 (466), 27 March 2007.

<sup>88</sup> Decision of Meeting of Judges of Criminal Department of Senate of Supreme Court of Republic of Latvia and Chamber of Criminal Cases of Supreme Court of Republic of Latvia on Recommendations Regarding Uniform Application of Sentencing Regulations (1 July 2008) para. 9.
<[http://www.at.gov.lv/files/docs/conferences/paraugi/kl-01\[1\].07.08.doc](http://www.at.gov.lv/files/docs/conferences/paraugi/kl-01[1].07.08.doc)> accessed 5 November 2012 person.<sup>89</sup> Transmission also necessitates at least temporary keeping of such materials and therefore is included in the definition.

A potential problem can be seen in the difference between distribution (national definition) and making available (Lanzarote Convention Article 20 (1.b)). Distribution requires acquisition of the material by another person while making available is completed upon the material being potentially available to another person. Keeping such materials is not a necessary precondition to making them available, thus creating potential for complications in cases where materials are made available using communication technologies (peer-to-peer networks, torrent websites).<sup>90</sup> Whether such theoretical differences are grave enough to lay outside the bounds of interpretation of the norm in practice is unclear. Attribution of criminal liability for actions relating to child pornography is potentially compatible with the Lanzarote Convention, but such compatibility remains untested.

The “without right” exemption used in Article 20(1) of the Lanzarote Convention applies to the process of education, scientific, research or medical purposes, law enforcement institutions and courts (for the performance of duties thereof) and for a State or local government institution, in so far as is necessary for the performance of duties prescribed by law (Article 9 of the Law on Pornography Restrictions).

xiii. While the Law on Pornography Restrictions offers an explicit definition of pornographic materials, no such definition of erotic materials exists. Such a lack has been found to create difficulties in distinguishing between these categories.<sup>91</sup> The Law on Pornography Restrictions initially provided for an expert commission that, upon request by an investigative body, could evaluate potentially pornographic materials. Forming such a commission proved to be politically complicated and financially expensive, and provision for it was eliminated from the Law on Pornography Restrictions. Recently there have been calls to restore such a commission and expand its powers.<sup>92</sup> Therefore currently no centralized <sup>89</sup> Hamkova, Vai bērnu pornogrāfija Latvijā nav sodāma, referring to Decision of Plenum of Supreme Court of Republic of Latvia „On Practice in Criminal Cases Regarding Wrongful Acts with Arms, Munitions, Explosives and Special Resources” (2 June 1997) Latvijas Republikas Augstākās tiesas Plēnuma lēmumu krājums (Rīga, TNA 2002).

---

<sup>90</sup> see also Explanatory Report to Council of Europe Convention on the Protection of Children against Sexual Exploitation and Sexual Abuse para. 136.

<sup>91</sup> inter alia, Reinfelde, Bērnu pornogrāfija - kā noteikt tās robežas.

<sup>92</sup> Informative Report „On Foreign Experience in Combating Prostitution and Recommendations on Allaying Prostitution in Latvia” p. 22

system of control of pornographic material or expert body for evaluation of such material exists. In either administrative or criminal proceedings, both the investigative body and court can request an expert opinion on whether the materials under question are pornographic. No legal requirements for such experts exist.

Article 50 of Protection of Rights of Child Law states that it is prohibited to show, sell, give as a gift, rent or promote to a child toys and video recordings, computer games, newspapers, magazines and other types of publications, in which erotica and pornography are promoted and which pose a threat to the psychological development of a child. Such materials may not be accessible to the child, irrespective of the form of expression, devices for showing and location thereof. Sale, distribution or demonstration of pornographic materials requires a permit of the local municipal authority, such places being inaccessible to children and subject to municipal regulations. Advertising of material of a pornographic nature is prohibited. Restrictions do not apply to the process of education, scientific, research or medical purposes, specialized libraries, law enforcement institutions and courts (for the performance of duties thereof) and for State or local government institutions, in so far as is necessary for the performance of duties prescribed by law.

Depending on the form and usage of potentially pornographic materials, besides the Law on Pornography Restrictions, further and partly parallel restrictions exist in, inter alia, Law On the Press and Other Mass Media (Article 7), Electronic Media Law (Article 26), Advertising Law (Article 3, paragraph 2), Law On Information Society Services, Regulation of the Cabinet of Ministers on Restrictions of Entertainment of an Intimate Character, Regulation of the Cabinet of Ministers on Circulation of Computer Games, as well as further municipal regulations. Therefore, depending on the form and usage of such materials, there are several state institutions responsible for enforcement of the laws mentioned.

If pornographic materials are distributed to children with the aim of sexual gratification, such actions constitute either corruption of children (Article 162 of the Criminal Law) or encouraging to involve in sexual acts (Article 162.<sup>1</sup> of the Criminal Law), depending on the facts of the case. If there exists no aim of sexual gratification (e.g., selling a journal containing pornographic imagery to a person under eighteen years of age), violation of the requirements regarding the importation, manufacture, distribution, public demonstration or advertising of such materials carry an administrative sanction under Article 173.<sup>2</sup> of Latvian Administrative Violations Code. If the materials are erotic (undefined term), the sanction is a warning or a fine of 100 LVL (142.45 €) to a natural person or a fine of up to 1000 LVL (1424.50 €) to a legal person, with or without confiscation of property. For pornographic materials the fine is 100-250 LVL (142.45-356.12 €) for natural persons and 1000-2500 LVL (1424.50-3561.25 €) for legal persons, with or without confiscation of property.

The State Police is empowered to draw up the initial administrative violation report. Administrative violation matters in cases of distribution of pornographic materials are examined by district (city) court judges. If the administrative violation has been committed in the area of electronic mass media, it falls under the jurisdiction of National Electronic Mass Media Council, except for cases, when the administrative violation report has been drawn up by another institution's officials, who are authorized to examine the relevant administrative violation matters. If the administrative violation has been committed in the area of public advertising, further measures can be applied by the Consumer Rights Protection Centre. Furthermore, if the mass medium has repeated violations of provisions regarding the circulation of pornographic materials within a one year period or published child pornography, the Prosecutor General of the Republic of Latvia, the Chief State Notary of the Enterprise Register and the Minister of Finance have the right to initiate legal proceedings in regard to termination of operation of a mass medium (Article 7 and Article 12 of Law on the Press and Other Mass Media).

If violation of provisions regarding the circulation of pornographic materials is repeated within a one year period, it carries a criminal sanction of deprivation of liberty for a term not exceeding one year, or custodial arrest, or community service, or a fine not exceeding 150 times the minimum monthly wage (Article 166, paragraph 1 of the Criminal Law).

xiv. Making a child participate in pornographic performances is not a separate offence. If such a performance is recorded, the offence is production of child pornography (Article 166, paragraph 3 of the Criminal Law). If the performance includes displaying the child naked or inappropriate physical contact and the offender is an adult or the child does not consent, the offence is corruption of children (Article 162 of the Criminal Law). Underage victims are incapable of consent. If the performance includes a higher degree of physical contact and is aimed at achieving sexual gratification and the child is under sixteen years of age or in financial or other dependence of the offender or offender is an adult, the offence is sexual connection with a person under sixteen years of age (Article 161 of the Criminal Law). If the child receives a fee for the performance, depending upon the degree and nature of contact, involving a child in such a performance could be involving a person in child prostitution or living on the avails of prostitution regardless of age and consent of the child (Articles 164 and 165 of the Criminal Law).

It can be seen that the current legal situation, although inconsistent and vague, does consider making a child participate in pornographic performances an offence. Some theoretical exceptions can be imagined, e. g., a pornographic performance organized by a person between sixteen and eighteen years of age where the participant consents and is also between sixteen and eighteen years of age. Such exceptions remain purely theoretical. However, it is still strongly advisable to make causing or recruiting a child to participate in pornographic performances, as well as attending such performances, a separate offence, with differing sentences depending on nature of coercion and age of the child.

The difference between recruitment and coercion currently varies depending on the nature of coercion. If coercion is applied through physical violence or threats of such to the victim or person intimate to the victim, depending on the nature of the performance, the offence is rape or violent sexual assault. Nonviolent coercion is corruption of children (Article 162 of the Criminal Law). Recruitment without elements of coercion if the child is under sixteen years of age falls under solicitation of children for sexual purposes (Article 162.<sup>1</sup> of the Criminal Law). Recruitment of a child over sixteen years of age could be construed as attempted corruption of children if the recruiter is an adult and depending on the details of the particular case.

In an internal assessment carried out by the Cabinet of Ministers in 2008 it was found that knowingly attending pornographic performances involving the participation of children was not considered a crime under laws in effect at the time.<sup>93</sup> Although knowing attendance of such a performance could theoretically be understood as abetting (joint participation) – knowingly promoting the commission of a criminal offence, providing means, or removing impediments for the commission of such (Article 20, paragraph 4 of the Criminal Law) – and attendee could be held liable in accordance with the same article of the Criminal Law which provides for the liability of the perpetrator, such a possibility remains untested.

In the aforementioned internal assessment it was suggested that Latvia could use the reservation right stated in Article 21 paragraph 2 of Lanzarote convention not to apply

---

<sup>93</sup> Explanatory report on Project of Cabinet of Ministers Ordinance "On Council of Europe Convention on the Protection of Children against Sexual Exploitation and Sexual Abuse" p. 4.

Article 21 paragraph 1.c (knowingly attending pornographic performances involving the participation of children).<sup>94</sup>

2.4 Corruption of Children

xv. National definition of corruption of children (leading to depravity) is compatible with the definition given in Article 22 of the Lanzarote Convention. While it may be more appropriate to deal with some cases of corruption of children under the topic of sexual abuse, the same article of the Criminal Law deals with exceedingly different actions starting from intentional displays of nakedness around a minor and ending with performing oral sex on a minor against his or her will. Therefore it is necessary to examine understanding of the term sexual activities in this context and differences between rape or violent sexual assault and corruption of children.

Article 162 of the Criminal Law refers to leading to depravity of a minor against the will of the minor or if such have been committed by a person who has attained the age of majority and provides a separate sentence if the victim is underage. Text of the legal norm in Latvian refers to netiklas darbības, literally translated as “unvirtuous actions”. Such actions must be separated from any type of intercourse and “other unnatural sexual acts of gratification” as used in the definition of violent sexual assault. In 2007 Supreme court of Latvia compiled a court report<sup>95</sup> on separating violent sexual assault and corruption of children and attempted to stop the widespread miscategorization of such crimes. There has been no inquiry in whether the report succeeded in its aim.

The motive for both crimes is sexual gratification. Violent sexual assault is „pederastic or lesbian or other unnatural sexual acts of gratification”, while corruption of children is understood as deliberate actions that are aimed towards sexual gratification of the offender or causing sexual arousal in the victim.

On the non-physical side there are actions that correspond to the definition given in the Lanzarote Convention. Exhibitionism, public masturbation, showing pornographic images and providing inappropriate information on sexual matters is corruption of children, if the offender knew or suspected the age of the victims. If the victim is a minor he has to be unwilling or the offender must be an adult. If the victim is underage his or her will is irrelevant.

---

<sup>94</sup> Explanatory Report on Project of Cabinet of Ministers Ordinance "On Council of Europe Convention on the Protection of Children against Sexual Exploitation and Sexual Abuse" pp. 4-5.

<sup>95</sup> Court Report on Article 160 and 162 of the Criminal Law.

The legal consequences of physical sexual activities are considerably more vague. For example, imitation of sexual intercourse (insertion of penis between legs, insertion of foreign objects in vagina) is violent sexual assault. Initiating oral-genital contact with the offender's genitals is violent sexual assault, but initiating oral-genital contact with the victim's genitals is corruption of children. However, if the offender only attempts to insert his penis into victim's mouth, the offence is corruption of children, if there is no prolonged contact or rubbing of penis on victim's body. Forcing one underage person into oral-genital contact with another is corruption of children, due to non-involvement of offender's genitals. Making an underage person massage the offender's penis until ejaculation is corruption of children. In courts' judgments there exists an abundance of such detailed examples. In practical application the distinction is focused on offender's genitals and whether they were inserted in an orifice or rubbed on victim's body, thereby imitating intercourse and achieving sexual gratification.

While such differences in the definitions of sexual activities can seem minor, they cause serious practical consequences – violent sexual assault on a minor carries a sentence of deprivation of liberty of five to fifteen years, while corruption of a minor up to three years.

Causing a child to witness or participate in such sexual activities is corruption of children under national law regardless of any element of coercion, either explicitly or implicitly violent. Causation in these cases is understood as the standard sine qua non causative relationship.

2.5 Solicitation of Children for Sexual Purposes

xvi. Article 162.<sup>1</sup> of the Criminal Law recognizes as criminal both encouraging a person who has not attained the age of sixteen to engage in sexual acts regardless of the way in which it is expressed, if such have been committed by a person who has attained the age of majority. There is no requirement for attempting to achieve or achieving sexual gratification through such encouragement, since such actions can be performed on behalf of the offender or another person. The law provides a separate sentence in cases where the victim was underage. Grooming (encouraging a person under sixteen years of age to meet with the aim to commit sexual acts or enter into a sexual relationship) is included in encouragement to engage in sexual acts and is not a separate offence.

The offence was separated from corruption of children (leading into depravity) by an amendment of the Criminal Law that came into effect on October 30, 2008. Before the amendment intentional sexual gratification through communication technologies could be considered a criminal offence in cases where, inter alia, offender displayed his genitals<sup>96</sup> or provided pornographic images and inappropriately informed the victim about sexual matters.<sup>97</sup> The exact boundaries were unclear.

xvii. Aiding and abetting in national law is understood as either participation or joint participation. Participation (joint commission) is knowing joint commission of an intentional criminal offence by two or more persons. Each of such persons is a participant (joint perpetrator) in the criminal offence (Article 19 of the Criminal Law). A participant is held liable in accordance with the same article of the Criminal Law which provides for the liability of the perpetrator.

Joint participation is knowing commission of an act or failure to act, by which a person (joint participant) has jointly with another person (perpetrator), participated in the commission of an intentional criminal offence, but he himself or she herself has not been the direct perpetrator of it. Organizers, instigators and abettors are joint participants in a criminal offence. A joint participant is held liable in accordance with the same article of the Criminal Law which provides for the liability of the perpetrator. However, the nature of the participation of each person and his or her role in the committed criminal offence is taken into account during sentencing. (Article 20 and Article 54 of the Criminal Law).

Attempting a crime is a conscious act or failure to act, which is directly dedicated to intentional commission of a crime, if the crime has not been completed for reasons independent of the will of the guilty party. Preparation for a crime is the locating of, or adaptation of, means or instrumentalities, or the intentional creation of circumstances conducive for the commission of an intentional offence, if, in addition, it has not been continued for reasons independent of the will of the guilty party (Article 15 of the Criminal Law). During sentencing for preparation for a crime or for an attempted crime, a court takes into account the nature of the acts committed by the offender and the harm caused by such, the degree of realization of the criminal intent and the reasons why the crime has not been completed (Article 53 of the Criminal Law).

---

<sup>96</sup> Ilze Veitnere, Bernu seksuāla izmantošana. Psiholoģiskie aspekti un izmeklēšanas īpatnības, (Rīga, Latvijas Policijas Akadēmija 1997) p. 44.

<sup>97</sup> Decision of Collegium of Criminal Cases of Kurzeme District Court of Republic of Latvia No. K02-0009-06 (24 February 2006).

Liability for preparation for a crime or an attempted crime applies in accordance with the same Article of the Criminal Law as sets out liability for a specific offence. A person is not held criminally liable for an attempt to commit a criminal violation (see definitions). Of the crimes under review only solicitation of children for sexual purposes, if the victim is over fourteen years of age, is a criminal violation. Criminal liability applies only for preparation for serious or especially serious crimes (see definitions in conjunction with Table 1 in answer to question xxii of this chapter).

2.6 Corporate Liability

xviii. Criminal sanctions can not be applied to legal entities for criminal offences committed on their behalf by a natural person because of a particular legal understanding of the concept of guilt and constitutionally protected presumption of innocence.<sup>98</sup> However, in cases where a criminal offence has been committed by a natural person acting as an individual or as a member of the collegial institution of the relevant legal person on the basis of a right to represent the legal person, to act on behalf of or to take decisions in the name of such legal person, or realising control within the scope of the legal person or while in the service of the legal person, coercive measures provided for in Chapter VIII.<sup>1</sup> of the Criminal Law may be applied by the court (Article 12 of the Criminal Law). Coercive measures for legal persons were introduced by an amendment of the Criminal Law that came into effect on October 1, 2005.

Article 70.<sup>8</sup>, paragraph 2, clause 2 of the Criminal Law states that a court in applying coercive measures to a legal person among other circumstances must take into account the status of the natural person in the institutions of the legal person, but does not elaborate. The status of the natural person, together with the nature of the criminal offence, the harm caused, actions of the legal person, the nature and consequences of such actions, the measures, which the legal person has performed in order to prevent the committing of a

---

<sup>98</sup> Dana Rone, Report to Ministry of Interior On Institute of Criminal Liability of Legal Entities in Eight Countries – Nordic Countries (Finland, Sweden, Norway, Iceland and Denmark) and Baltic Countries (Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia) (15 March 2006) p. 37.
http://www.at.gov.lv/files/docs\_en/LEGAL%20SCIENTIFIC%20RESEARCH.doc accessed 5 November 2012 new criminal offence, and the size, type of activities and financial circumstances of the legal person are considered together by the court in deciding whether it is necessary to apply a particular coercive measure.

In national criminal law there exists no explicit definition of a legal person. The term “legal entity” in Latvia is understood considerably wider than legal person. Several entities, such as law firms and other personal, limited or general partnerships, are legal entities, but not legal persons. Whether coercive measures can be applied to such entities is unclear and untested in courts.

xix. Criminal liability for legal persons is carried out through the means of coercive measures as described in answer to questions xviii and xxiv of this chapter. The state not being able to apply coercive measures to itself, such measures are inapplicable to public law legal persons (e.g., municipalities). Whether such measures could be applied to government-owned corporations or municipally owned corporations is unclear.<sup>99</sup> Administrative liability exists in cases of violation of regulations regarding circulation of pornographic materials, as further described in answer to question xiii of this chapter.

A person upon whom harm has been inflicted by a criminal offence has the right to claim compensation for inflicted harm, taking into account the moral injury, physical suffering, and financial loss thereof, within the bounds of criminal proceedings (Article 22 of Criminal Procedure Law). Article 353, paragraph 1, clause 3 of the Criminal Procedure Law attributes liability to a legal person:

“(…) if, in the case of such legal person, a natural person has been found guilty of committing a criminal offence and such natural person committed such offence acting individually, as a member of a collegial authority of the relevant legal person, or based on the right to represent the legal person, act under the assignment thereof, or take decisions on behalf of the legal person, or in actualising control within the framework of the legal person, or being in the service of the legal person.”

A strict grammatical reading of the legal norm implies employment relationship (being in the service of a legal person) is enough in and of itself to find the legal person liable for any criminal actions of natural person. However systemic interpretation in conjunction with

---

<sup>99</sup> Rūta Rācene-Bērtule, Juridiskām personām piemērojamie piespiedu ietekmēšanas līdzekļi (2008) Jurista Vārds No.20 (254), 27 May 2008.

Article 70.<sup>8</sup>, paragraph 2, clause 2 of the Criminal Law as mentioned in answer to question xviii of this chapter, as well as taking into account ejusdem generis, leads to conclusion that “being in the service of the legal person” means carrying out the legal duties of an employee (volunteer, freelancer) with regards to the legal person during the commission of the offence. Whether there has to exist a causative relationship between the actions of the legal person (e.g., culpable negligence or direct order) and offence by the natural person is currently unclear due to infrequent application of the norm by the courts. National civil law standards are applied, insofar as they are in accord with applicable criminal law.

If a victim believes that the entire harm caused to him or her has not been compensated in criminal proceedings, he or she has the right to bring a civil suit without additional state fees (Article 350, paragraphs 3 and 4 of the Criminal Procedure Law). With respect to res indicata, adjudication in criminal proceedings regarding the guilt of a person is binding in the adjudication of the civil case (Article 350, paragraph 5 of the Criminal Procedure Law). Regarding the question whether a final adjudication of innocent is binding in civil proceedings Article 526 of the Criminal Procedure Law states both that:

“[t]he operative part of a judgment of acquittal shall indicate a court decision regarding the fact that an accused (...) has been found innocent in the prosecution pursued against him or her (...) and acquitted,” and

“If a court renders a judgment of acquittal, such court shall leave without adjudication an application regarding the consideration of harm caused as a result of an offence. The leaving of an application without adjudication shall not be an impediment to the raising of a claim for compensation for harm in accordance with the procedures specified by the Civil Procedure Law.”

Therefore the Criminal Procedure Law does not entirely preclude a civil claim for compensation even in cases where the accused is found to be innocent.

Once civil proceedings have begun, slightly different standards of proof and culpable negligence apply. Extensive analysis of national civil law regarding compensation for damages and moral injury is outside the bounds of this report. In general, a legal person “(...) who fails to exercise due care in choosing servants or other employees and to previously satisfy himself or herself as to their abilities and suitability to perform the duties as may be imposed on them, shall be liable for losses they cause a third person thereby” (Article 1782 of the Civil Law). Therefore, at least an element of culpable ordinary negligence as defined in Article 1646 of the Civil Law – “lack of care and due diligence as must be observed by any reasonably prudent and careful manager” – must be established. It must be noted that in criminal or civil proceedings the person harmed enjoys a presumption of moral injury caused by certain crimes only since 2006, where previously moral injury had to be proven.<sup>100</sup>

xx. Legal entities not being capable of being in the state of guilt under national criminal law, any coercive measures applied to such entities have no impact regarding individual criminal liability. Administrative fine in cases of violation of regulations regarding circulation of pornographic materials must be applied to both the natural and legal person under consideration; such liability can not be separated.<sup>101</sup> In civil suits against legal persons in connection with a crime committed by a natural person in their service, regardless whether they are claims for compensation within criminal proceedings or a separate civil suit, both the natural and legal person can be held liable (Article 1638 and Article 1781 of the Civil Law). Some exceptions, such as the natural person being non compos mentis during commission of crime, apply and the legal person acquires direct civil liability.

2.7 Aggravating Circumstances

xxi. Article 48, paragraph 1 of the Criminal Law lists circumstances that may be considered aggravating:

- “1) the criminal offence was committed repeatedly or constitutes recidivism of criminal offences;
- 2) the criminal offence was committed while in a group of persons;
- 3) the criminal offence was committed, taking advantage in bad faith of an official position or the trust of another person;

---

<sup>100</sup> Supreme Court of Republic of Latvia, Court Report on Compensation Regarding Moral Injuries in Criminal Proceedings (in Latvian 2010/2011) <<http://www.at.gov.lv/files/docs/petijumi/moralais%20kaitejums.pdf>> accessed 5 November 2012

<sup>101</sup> Edvīns Danovskis, Administratīvās atbildības regulejuma konceptuālās problēmas (2011) Jurista Vārds No. 20, 17 May 2011 p. 6. <http://rln.lv/lv/pdf/Administrativas%20atbildibas%20regulejuma%20konceptualas%20problemas\_Danovskis.pdf> accessed 5 November 2012, referring to SKA-19/2009, Judgement of Department of Administrative Cases of Supreme Court of Republic of Latvia in Case No. A42450305 (5 March 2009) p. 5-6, para. 13. <http://www.tiesas.lv/files/AL/2009/03\_2009/05\_03\_2009/AL\_0503\_AT\_SKA-0019\_09.pdf> accessed 5 November 2012

- 4) the criminal offence has caused serious consequences;
- 5) the criminal offence was committed against a woman, knowing her to be pregnant;
- 6) the criminal offence was committed against a person who has not attained fifteen years of age or against a person taking advantage of his or her helpless condition or of infirmity due to old-age;
- 7) the criminal offence was committed against a person taking advantage of his or her official, financial or other dependence on the offender;
- 8) the criminal offence was committed with particular cruelty or with humiliation of the victim;
- 9) the criminal offence was committed taking advantage of the circumstances of a public disaster;
- 10) the criminal offence was committed employing weapons or explosives, or in some other generally dangerous way;
- 11) the criminal offence was committed out of a desire to acquire property;
- 12) the criminal offence was committed under the influence of alcohol, narcotic, psychotropic, toxic or other intoxicating substances;
- 13) the person committing the criminal offence, for purposes of having his or her punishment reduced, has knowingly provided false information regarding a criminal offence committed by another person;
- 14) the criminal offence was committed due to racist motives;
- 15) the criminal offence related to violence or threats of violence was committed against a person to whom the perpetrator is related in the first or the second degree of kinship, against the spouse or former spouse, or against a person with whom the perpetrator is or has been in unregistered marital relationship, or against a person with whom the perpetrator has a joint (single) household.”

As already mentioned in answer to question vi of this chapter, the list of aggravating circumstances is not specific to sexual offences against minors and is applicable to any criminal offence where the circumstance is not already a constituent element of the crime. Recognizing a particular circumstance as aggravating or not falls under the discretion of the court. Definition of the term “serious consequences” used in clause 4 is given under Table 1 in answer to question xxii of this chapter. The circumstances listed include all aggravating circumstances required by Article 28 of the Lanzarote Convention.

Previous convictions by another state are taken into account in sentencing; however, repetition of criminal offences is defined narrowly by Article 25, paragraph 1 of the Criminal Law as:

“the commission by one person of two or more criminal offences, which are provided for in one and the same Section of this Law, or two or more criminal offences which are provided for in various Sections of this Law, if liability for such repetition is provided for in this Law.”

2.8 Sanctions and Measures

xxii. For reasons of clarity, sanctions for the crimes mentioned are best explained in the form of a table.

Table 1. Sanctions for crimes mentioned in the report
Sexual abuse
act of sexual intercourse by means of violence, threats or taking advantage of the state of helplessness of a victim (rape) if commission thereof is on a minor	deprivation of liberty 5-15 years, with probationary supervision up to 3 years rape, if serious consequences* are caused thereby, or rape of an underage person	life imprisonment or deprivation of liberty 10-20 years, with probationary supervision up to 3 years
pederastic or lesbian or other unnatural sexual acts of gratification, if such acts have been committed using violence or threats or by taking advantage of the state of helplessness of a person (violent sexual assault) if commission thereof is on a minor	deprivation of liberty 5-15 years, with probationary supervision up to 3 years
violent sexual assault if serious consequences are caused thereby, as well as	life imprisonment or deprivation of liberty 10-20 years, with probationary supervision

if commission thereof is on an underage person	up to 3 years
sexual connection, or pederastic, lesbian or other unnatural sexual acts of gratification, with a person who has not attained the age of sixteen years and who is in financial or other dependence on the offender, or if such offence has been committed by a person who has attained the age of majority	deprivation of liberty up to 4 years, or custodial arrest, or community service, or a fine up to 200 times the minimum monthly wage, with probationary supervision up to 3 years
cruel or violent treatment of a minor, if physical or mental suffering has been inflicted upon the minor and if such has been inflicted by persons upon whom the victim is financially or otherwise dependent	deprivation of liberty up to 3 years, or custodial arrest, or community service
Child prostitution
involving a person in prostitution if such acts have been committed repeatedly or by a group of persons, or commits inducing or compelling a minor to engage in prostitution, or commits providing premises to minors for purposes of prostitution	deprivation of liberty 3-8 years, with or without confiscation of property, with or without probationary supervision up to 3 years encouraging or compelling an underaged person to engage in prostitution	deprivation of liberty 5-12 years, with or without confiscation of property, with probationary supervision up to 3 years the same acts, if commission thereof is by an organised group	deprivation of liberty 5-15 years, with confiscation of property, with probationary supervision up to 3 years
taking advantage, for purposes of enrichment, of a person who is engaged in	deprivation of liberty up to 8 years, with confiscation of property, with probationary

prostitution, if commission thereof is by a group of persons, or with respect to minors	supervision up to 3 years
the same acts if commission thereof is by an organised group or if commission thereof is with respect to underaged persons	deprivation of liberty 5-15 years, with confiscation of property, with probationary supervision up to 3 years
Child pornography
downloading, acquisition, importation, production, public demonstration, advertising or other distribution of such pornographic or erotic materials as relate or portray the sexual abuse of children (...), or the keeping of such materials	deprivation of liberty up to 3 years, or custodial arrest, or community service, or a fine up to 200 times the minimum monthly wage, with or without confiscation of property involvement or utilisation of minors in the production (manufacturing) of pornographic or erotic materials	deprivation of liberty up to 6 years, with or without confiscation of property, with or without probationary supervision up to 3 years involvement or utilisation of underaged persons in the production (manufacturing) of pornographic or erotic materials	deprivation of liberty 3-12 years, with or without confiscation of property, with or without probationary supervision up to 3 years involvement or utilisation of minors or underaged persons in the production (manufacturing) of pornographic or erotic materials by an organised group	deprivation of liberty 5-15 years, with confiscation of property, and with probationary supervision up to 3 years
Corruption of children
leading to depravity of a minor against the will of the minor or if such have been committed by a person who has attained the age of majority	deprivation of liberty up to 3 years, or custodial arrest, or community service, or a fine up to 150 times the minimum monthly wage, with or without probationary supervision up to 3 years leading to depravity of an underaged person	deprivation of liberty up to 5 years, or custodial arrest, or community service, or a fine up to 200 times the minimum monthly wage, with or without probationary supervision up to 3 years

Solicitation of children for sexual purposes
encouraging a person who has not attained the age of 16 to involve in sexual acts or encouraging such person to meet with the aim to commit sexual acts or enter into a sexual relationship regardless of the way in which the encouraging is expressed, if such have been committed by a person who has attained the age of majority	custodial arrest, or community service, or a fine up to 100 times the minimum monthly wage, with or without probationary supervision up to 3 years
the same acts against an underaged person	deprivation of liberty up to 3 years, or custodial arrest, or community service, or a fine up to 150 times the minimum monthly wage, with or without probationary supervision up to 3 years

* serious consequences – as defined in the Law on the Coming into Effect and Application of the Criminal Law, Article 24, paragraph 1, serious consequences of a criminal offence are death of a person, serious bodily injury or psychological disturbance to at least one person, less serious bodily harm to more than one person, damage to property on a large scale (value of at least 50 times minimum monthly wage, i.e., 10 000 LVL or 14 245.01 €) or other substantial harm to the lawfully protected interests and rights of persons.

As can be seen from the table, all examined criminal offences, except solicitation of a child between fourteen and sixteen years of age, carry sentences that include deprivation of liberty. Confiscation of property as a separate criminal sanction is expanded upon in answer to question xxv of this chapter.

Extradition procedure under national law can not be fully described here both because of space constraints and wide scope of the issue. Latvia is party to European Convention on Mutual Assistance in Criminal Matters (entry into force in 1997, since 30 June 2004 inapplicable in relations with the Member States of the European Union), European Convention on Extradition (entry into force in 1997), and Convention on Laundering, Search, Seizure and Confiscation of the Proceeds from Crime (entry into force in 1999). Aforementioned conventions are fully implemented in national law.

Regarding specific requirements set out in Article 25 of Lanzarote Convention, Latvia claims jurisdiction over any offence established in accordance with Lanzarote Convention, when the offence is committed in its territory (Article 2, paragraph 1 of the Criminal Law), on board a ship flying its flag (Article 3 of the Criminal Law), by one of its nationals or habitual residents (Article 4, paragraph 1 of the Criminal Law). It should be noted that the term “nationals” here and in European Convention on Extradition is understood as citizens of the Republic of Latvia and non-citizens, i.e., permanent residents of Latvia with specific status regulated by the Law on the Status of Former USSR Citizens who are not Citizens of Latvia or any other State (non-citizens, nepilsoņi in Latvian).

Article 696 of the Criminal Procedure Law lists grounds for extradition of a person:

“(1) A person who is located in the territory of Latvia may be extradited for criminal prosecution, trial, or the execution of a judgment, if a request has been received from a foreign state to extradite or place under temporary arrest such person regarding an offence that, in accordance with the law of Latvia and the foreign state, is criminal.

(2) A person may be extradited for criminal prosecution, or trial, regarding an offence the committing of which provides for a punishment of deprivation of liberty the maximum limit of which is not less than one year, or a more serious punishment, if the international agreement does not provide otherwise.

(3) A person may be extradited for the execution of a judgment by the state that rendered the judgment and convicted the person with a punishment that is related to deprivation of liberty for a term of not less than four months, if the international agreement does not provide otherwise.

(4) If extradition has been requested regarding several criminal offences, but extradition may not be applied for one of such offences because such offence does not comply with the conditions regarding the possible or imposed punishment, the person may also be extradited regarding such criminal offence.”

Article 697 of the Criminal Procedure Law lists reasons for refusal to extradite a person:

“(1) The extradition of a person may be refused, if:

- 1) a criminal offence has been committing completely or partially in the territory of Latvia;
- 2) the person is being held as a suspect, is accused, or is being tried in Latvia regarding the same criminal offence;
- 3) a decision has been taken in Latvia to not commence, or to terminate, criminal proceedings regarding the same criminal offence;
- 4) extradition has been requested in connection with political or military criminal offences;
- 5) a foreign state requests the extradition of a person for the execution of a punishment imposed in a judgment by default, and a sufficient guarantee has not been received that the extradited person will have the right to request the repeated adjudication of the case;
- 6) extradition has been requested by a foreign state with which Latvia does not have an agreement regarding extradition.

“(2) The extradition of a person shall not be admissible, if:

- 1) the person is a Latvian citizen;
- 2) the request for the extradition of the person is related to the aim of commencing criminal prosecution of such person or punishing such persons due to his or her race, religion affiliation, nationality, or political views, or if there are sufficient grounds for believing that the rights of the person may be violated due to the referred to reasons;
- 3) a court adjudication has entered into effect in Latvia in relation to the person regarding the same criminal offence;
- 4) the person may not, in accordance with a Latvian law regarding the same criminal offence, be held criminally liable, tried, or execute a punishment in connection with a limitation period, amnesty, or another legal basis;
- 5) the person has been granted clemency, in accordance with the procedures specified by law, regarding the same criminal offence;

6) the foreign state does not provide a sufficient bail that such state will not impose the death punishment on such person and execute such punishment;

7) the person may be threatened with torture in the foreign state.

(3) An international agreement may provide for other reasons for a refusal of extradition.”

Paragraphs 6 and 7 of Article 25 of the Lanzarote Convention, including principle aut dedere aut judicare are included in Article 4, paragraph 4 of the Criminal Law:

“Foreigners who do not have a permanent residence permit for the Republic of Latvia and who have committed a criminal offence in the territory of another state, in the cases provided for in international agreements binding upon the Republic of Latvia, irrespective of the laws of the state in which the offence has been committed, shall be held liable in accordance with this Law if they have not been held criminally liable for such offence or committed to stand trial in the territory of another state.”

In conclusion, while one crimes described in the Lanzarote Convention currently does not include penalty involving deprivation of liberty which can give rise to extradition under national law (solicitation of children between 14 and 16 years of age) and several crimes are defined vaguely or not at all (viewing of pornographic performances involving children, questions regarding clients of underage prostitutes, “simulated representations” part of child pornography etc.), the national extradition system is in full accord with the Lanzarote Convention.

xxiii. Evaluation of the effectiveness of sanctions is a complicated issue, especially in circumstances where said sanctions are frequently changed. An amendment to the Criminal Law<sup>102</sup> that came into effect on October 1st 2011 softened some of the sanctions for crimes of sexual nature, while at the same time strengthening the role of State Probation Service, which exists only since 2004. As can be seen from Table 1 in answer to question xxii of this chapter, most crimes of sexual nature now carry a mandatory probationary period. Probationary supervision was seen as a replacement for police supervision (a parole-like system), thereby decreasing police workload and increasing the role of specialists with appropriate education.<sup>103</sup>

---

<sup>102</sup> Amendment to the Criminal Law (28 July 2011) Latvijas Vēstnesis No. 117 (4515) 28 July 2011.
<<http://www.likumi.lv/doc.php?id=233715>> accessed 5 November 2012

Same amendment increased length of deprivation of liberty for some crimes of sexual nature (rape, violent sexual assault) while at the same time decreasing it for others (grooming, corruption of children). Decreased sentences led to reclassification of some crimes in relation to their gravity (see definitions), thereby requiring the release from pre-trial detention of several suspects. Consequently several Members of Parliament initiated an amendment once again increasing the sentences, and the amendment was supported in Parliament. At the same time for several years there have been calls from Members of Parliament<sup>104</sup> to apply so-called “chemical castration” to persons who have been convicted of crimes of sexual nature, such calls increasing after media attention towards crimes against children.<sup>105</sup> In 2008 such initiatives were supported by Parliament’s Human Rights and Public Affairs Commission.<sup>106</sup> While leading NGOs urge caution<sup>107</sup> State Probation Service<sup>108</sup> and the Ombudsman of Republic of Latvia<sup>109</sup> are opposed, supporting their opinion by stressing the role of rehabilitative justice and non-exhaustion of alternative means respectively. It can be seen that, while the white paper Concept of Policy of Criminal Punishment<sup>110</sup> exists, in Parliament amendments are occasionally proposed and supported on an ad hoc basis, in conflict with stated policy and in a way that might be characterized as or alleged rape of a two-year old child where suspects were part of child’s extended family „Slimnīcā nogādāta divarpus gadus veka izvarota meitenīte” (Apollo.lv, 26 October 2010) <<http://www.apollo.lv/zinas/slimnica-nogadata-divarpus-gadus-veca-izvarota-meitenite/465129>> accessed 5 November 2012.

<sup>103</sup> Ordinance of the Cabinet of Ministers of Republic of Latvia No. 6 (9 January 2009), Concept of Policy of Criminal Punishment p. 26. <<http://polsis.mk.gov.lv/LoadAtt/file36425.doc>> accessed 5 November 2012

<sup>104</sup> „Deputāts rosinās Latvijā pedofilus ķīmiski un ķirurģiski kastrēt” (Delfi.lv, 30 March 2012) <<http://www.delfi.lv/news/national/politics/deputats-rosinas-latvija-pedofilus-kimiski-un-kirurgiski-kastret.d?id=42248500>> accessed 5 November 2012

<sup>105</sup> For example, alleged rape of a ten year old child where the suspect was previously sentenced for rape of a minor, „Divreiz sodīts vīrietis izvaro desmit gadus vecu, iemidzinātu meiteni” (Tvnet.lv, 9 December 2008) <http://www.tvnet.lv/zinas/kriminalzinas/289946-divreiz\_sodits\_virietis\_izvaro\_desmit\_gadus\_vecu\_iemidzinatu\_meiteni> accessed 5 November 2012

<sup>106</sup> Klinta Ločmele „Noziegums īso svārku mīta paēnā” (Lvportals.lv, 7 October 2009), <<http://www.lvportals.lv/print.php?id=198744>> accessed 5 November 2012

<sup>107</sup> Ilona Kronberga „Velc, pelīte drošu dzīvi” (Politika.lv, 29 October 2010) <<http://www.providus.lv/public/27379.html>> accessed 5 November 2012

<sup>108</sup> Kalvis Bormanis „Ķīmiskā kastrācija nav efektīva dzimumnoziedznieku ārstēšanā” (Tvnet.lv, 11 October 2012) <http://www.tvnet.lv/zinas/viedokli/439149-kimiska\_kastracija\_nav\_efektiva\_dzimumnoziedznieku\_arstesana> accessed 5 November 2012

<sup>109</sup> „Tiesībsargs: Ķīmiskā kastrācija nevar tikt piemērota kā sods” (Tvnet.lv, 11 September 2008) <http://www.tvnet.lv/zinas/latvija/224802-tiesibsargs\_kimiska\_kastracija\_nevar\_tikt\_piemerota\_ka\_sods> accessed 5 November 2012

<sup>110</sup> Concept of Policy of Criminal Punishment.

inevitably to a degree populist. Calls for tougher sentencing receive support among general public, while specialists generally call for more effective control over reintegration of prisoners in society and enforcement of existing regulations.

At the same time and while this report was being written, Ministry of Interior was once again engaged in a comprehensive overhaul of national regulation (mainly the Criminal Law and Criminal Procedure Law) of crimes of sexual nature to bring it in compliance with Directive 2011/93/EU of the European Parliament and of the Council of 13 December 2011 on combating the sexual abuse and sexual exploitation of children and child pornography.<sup>111</sup>

In 2009-2011 State Probation Service in cooperation with State Prison Administration and corresponding institutions of United Kingdom, Norway and Canada carried out a project on the development of sexual offenders' behavioral correction system in Latvia. Project's main goals included education of probationary specialists, better institutional support for interoffice and state-NGO cooperation, development of group therapy sessions, wider support for victims of sexual crimes as well as publicity efforts. In project's concluding document stressed several requirements for successful implementation and development of probationary control: continued education of specialists of State Probation Service, inclusion in purview of State Probation Service of persons who commit offences with a sexual element (such as sexual harassment) that are not considered sexual crimes and exclusion of persons without objective need of therapy (so-called "Romeo & Juliet" cases where the offender is underage), improved financial, institutional and psychological support for specialists of State Probation Service, and volunteer involvement.<sup>112</sup> Unfortunately, due to lack of financial resources in connection with global financial crisis, State Probationary Service received less budgetary resources and worked only part time, abandoning several probationary programmes. While Ministry of Justice considers restoring State Probationary Service to full functioning a priority, at the time of writing of this report probationary specialists are threatening a strike while calling for increased funding and monthly wages of

---

<sup>111</sup> „Atbildīgie vienojas pārskatīt KL dzimumnoziegumu nodaļu” (Tvnet.lv, 2 March 2012)
<http://www.tvnet.lv/zinas/latvija/413035-atbildigie\_vienojas\_parskatit\_kl\_dzimumnoziegumu\_nodalu> accessed 5 November 2012

<sup>112</sup> Andrejs Judins, Concluding Report of Project "On Development of Behavioural Correction System for Persons Sentenced for Sexual Crimes in Latvia" (in Latvian, 14 April 2011) pp. 101-116.
<http://www.probacija.lv/uploads/projekta\_nosleguma\_izvertejums-judins.doc> accessed 5 November 2012 at least 400 LVL (569.15 €), pointing to specialists leaving State Probationary Service en masse.<sup>113</sup> Parliament has tentatively supported restoring full functioning to State Probationary Service from March 1st, 2013.<sup>114</sup>

Three sanctions for crimes of sexual nature have to be increased to bring them in line with Directive 2011/93/EU:

- 1) sexual connection with a willing person under 16 and over 14 years of age (Article 3 Clause 4 of the Directive, Article 161 of the Criminal Law, increase from four to five years deprivation of liberty);
- 2) solicitation of persons under 16 and over 14 years of age for sexual purposes (Article 6 of the Directive, Article 162.<sup>1</sup> of the Criminal Law, increase from current sentence which does not include deprivation of liberty to at least one year);
- 3) coercing or forcing a minor in prostitution, or threatening a child for such purposes (Article 4, paragraph 6 of the Directive, Article 164. of the Criminal Law, increase from eight to ten years deprivation of liberty).

While better separation of physical and non-physical sexual actions involving children, explicit regulation of pornographic performances, and clarity in defining criminal liability for clients of child prostitutes is all necessary, such concerns do not directly influence evaluation of current sanctions.

In conclusion, sanctions are proportionate, with minor exceptions. However, effectiveness of sanctions and long-term rehabilitation of offenders is severely constrained by an insufficiently supported State Probation Service. Authors of this report consider a well-educated, properly funded State Probation Service empowered to carry out preventive intervention programmes, work with accused persons in pre-trial phase, during custodial sentence and afterwards, providing long-term rehabilitative support and supervision to be vital for a functioning probationary system. Dissuasiveness of sanctions is dependant on public awareness of them, as well as united, objective and foreseeable application of sanctions by the courts. Raising awareness is another stated role for State Probation Service that must be supported by Ministry of Interior, local municipalities and further education of members of the press. Indubitably, effectiveness of current trend towards rehabilitative, as opposed to retributive, justice must be evaluated, but only after it has been given a chance to work and provide statistical data without constant change in its legislative basis.

---

<sup>113</sup> „Probācijas darbinieki piedraud ar streiku” (Tvnet.lv, 23 October 2012) <http://www.tvnet.lv/zinas/latvija/440653-probacias\_darbinieki\_piedraud\_ar\_streiku> accessed 5 November 2012

<sup>114</sup> „Valdība atbalsta TM priekšlikumu par visu Probācijas dienesta funkciju atjaunošanu no 1.marta” (Leta.lv, 5 November 2012) <<http://www.leta.lv/home/important/554EFBB9-0FDA-4872-B263-3B7E74C522DF/>> accessed 5 November 2012

xxiv. If it has been ascertained during the course of criminal proceedings that a natural person has committed a criminal offence on behalf of a legal person (preconditions set out in answer to question xviii), the person directing the proceedings may take a reasoned decision to initiate proceedings for the application of coercive measures to the legal person (Article 439, paragraph 1 of the Criminal Procedure Law). The decision is communicated to the legal person. Upon completion of pre-trial proceedings and transferring the criminal case to a court, the public prosecutor indicates the grounds for the application of coercive measures to a legal person (Article 441 of the Criminal Procedure Law).

The court ascertains whether a natural person has committed a criminal offence in the interests of a legal person and the legal person, that is, one of the heads or owners of the legal person, had knowledge regarding such criminal offence and did not do anything in order to prevent the criminal offence or the consequences thereof (Article 547 and 548 of the Criminal Procedure Law). Having recognized such circumstances a court decides in a judgment regarding the application of coercive measure to the legal person.

It is possible to apply to a legal entity one of the primary coercive measures – liquidation, limitation of rights, confiscation of property or a fine. In addition to primary coercive measures it is possible to apply supplementary coercive measures – confiscation of property and indemnification.

Liquidation is compulsory termination of the activities of a legal person, a branch, representation or structural unit thereof. Claims of employees, the State and creditors are protected. Limitation of rights is the deprivation of rights as to a specific form of entrepreneurial activity for a term of not less than one and not exceeding five years. Confiscation of property is the compulsory alienation to State ownership without compensation, fully or partially, of the property owned by a legal person. Claims of employees, the State and creditors are protected. Property owned by a legal person, which has been transferred to another legal or natural person, may also be confiscated. A fine is a compulsory monetary levy, which in conformity with the seriousness of the criminal offence and the financial circumstances of a legal person, is determined in the amount of not less than 1000 and not exceeding 10000 times the minimum monthly wage (see definitions). Indemnification is the compensation of the material losses caused as a result of a criminal offence, as well as the rectification of other interests protected by law and rights jeopardized.

For criminal violations and less serious crimes (see definitions) only a fine is applicable as a primary coercive measure, unless the legal person, a branch, representation or structural unit thereof has been especially established for the commission of a criminal offence. For serious and especially serious crimes all coercive measures can be applied. Confiscation of property may be applied to a legal person as a supplementary coercion measure, if as a result of the offence by the legal person it has gained a material benefit and as primary coercion measures limitation of rights or a fine has been applied to it. Indemnification may be applied as a supplementary coercive measure to a legal person, if as a result of the criminal offence by the legal person substantial harm or serious consequences have been caused.

While the legal framework for application of coercive measures exists, at least until 2010, the courts applied such measures so rarely, that it was found that “in practice coercive measures are not applied to legal persons”.<sup>115</sup> Speculation as to the causes of such discrepancy between regulation and implementation lies outside the bounds of this report.

xxv. Under national criminal legislation there are three types of seizure and confiscation of property: confiscation of property as an either basic or additional separate criminal sanction, confiscation of illegally acquired property, and seizure or confiscation of material evidence and documents. These understandings of confiscation and procedure required to carry them out partially overlap.

Confiscation of property as a separate criminal sanction is the compulsory alienation to State ownership without compensation of the property owned by a convicted person or parts of such. Property owned by a convicted person, which he or she has transferred to another natural or legal person, may also be confiscated (Article 42 of the Criminal Law). As any other criminal sanction, it's applied by the court in a judgment. Confiscation of property of legal persons, while not a criminal sanction in a strict sense, is expanded upon in answer to question xxiv of this chapter.

---

<sup>115</sup> Ārija Meikališa and Kristīne Strada-Rozenberga, Regulation of Confiscation of Property in Latvia and European Union, Ensuring the Effectiveness of its Enforcement (in Latvian, 2010) p. 29 footnote.
<<http://www.tm.gov.lv/lv/ministrija/imateriali/MantKonf.pdf>> accessed 5 November 2012

Property is recognized as criminally acquired, if such property directly or indirectly has come into the property or possession of a person as a result of a criminal offence. If the opposite has not been proven, property, including financial resources, of persons who have engaged in criminal activities with child pornography or sexual abuse of children, or maintains constant relations with a person who is involved in such activities, is recognized as criminally acquired (Article 355 of the Criminal Procedure Law, amendment regarding sexual offences against children came into effect in July 2009). Such recognition is effected by a judgment of the court or a decision of a public prosecutor regarding the termination of criminal proceedings. Whether a decision of a public prosecutor can in and of itself be a basis for confiscation or only for returning the property to its owner, is a disputed question.<sup>116</sup> It is also possible during pre-trial proceedings under a special criminal procedure by a decision of a district (city) court. If confiscation of criminally acquired property is not possible, other property at the value of the property being confiscated may be subjected to confiscation or recovery. Confiscation also applies to property that the accused person, after the committing of the criminal offence, has alienated to a third person without corresponding consideration; property of the spouse of the accused person, if separate ownership of the property of the spouses was not specified at least one year before the commencement of the criminal offence; property of another person, if the accused has a common (undivided) household with such person. The third person who acquired such property in good faith has the right to submit a claim, in accordance with civil procedures, regarding compensation for the loss (Article 360 of the Criminal Procedure Law). Recognition of property as criminally acquired is very rarely used in practice.<sup>117</sup>

The court in a judgment or the investigative body in a decision, whereby the criminal proceedings are terminated, indicates what shall be done with material evidence and documents (Article 240 of the Criminal Procedure Law). Property and documents are returned to the owners or lawful possessors thereof. Instrumentalities of a criminal offence owned by a suspect or accused, objects which were intended or had been used for commission of a criminal offence, and criminally obtained property must be confiscated. Objects the circulation of which is prohibited are transferred to the relevant institutions. If a criminal offence has been committed with an instrumentality owned by other person,

---

<sup>116</sup> ibid. p. 29, para. 3.4.8

<sup>117</sup> ibid. p. 82, para. 8.3.

another property of a suspect or accused may be subject to confiscation. While the primary stated function of material evidence is its procedural role, it is often, arguably inappropriately, used as a tool for restitution and prevention.<sup>118</sup>

In 2010 professors and specialists in criminal law Ārija Meikališa and Kristīne Strada-Rozenberga compiled an extensive report on confiscation of property in Latvia and its effectiveness. Protection for third parties was found to be insufficient and disproportionate. It was proposed that confiscation should apply to third parties only in cases where the third party acquired the property under question without giving recompense, when the criminal origin of the property was known to the third party or comparable circumstances.<sup>119</sup> Such suggestions have as of yet not been implemented.

In a recent report by the State Police<sup>120</sup> it was suggested that current system of confiscation should be improved by establishing a detailed accounting of confiscated property, separating each investigative body to enable more accurate quantitative measuring of each investigative body's effectiveness.

Proceeds from sale of confiscated property are transferred to general state budget and no special funds currently exist. An exception exists regarding criminally acquired property – if the victim has requested compensation for harm within the bounds of the criminal proceedings, resources acquired from the sale are used first for the ensuring and payment of the requested compensation (Article 359 of the Criminal Procedure Law).

xxvi. Currently in cases when the crime has been committed within the family or within the close environment of the child, of the two primary approaches towards separating the accused from the victim, state practice favors removing the child. Unless the accused is placed under arrest or in custody, thereby physically removing him or her from child's environment, removal of the child is seen as best option for providing a safe environment for child's development.

The investigative body in a criminal case is empowered to apply prohibition to approach a specific person or location as a separate coercive measure (Article 253 of the Criminal

---

<sup>118</sup> ibid. p. 84, para. 8.17.

<sup>119</sup> ibid. p. 83-84, para. 8.12.

<sup>120</sup> Cabinet of Ministers of Republic of Latvia, Informative Report "On Capacity of Controlling Institutions to Prevent Possibilities of Corruption and Ensure Achievement of Full Control Functions" (in Latvian, 20 July 2012). <<http://polsis.mk.gov.lv/LoadAtt/file39912.doc>> accessed 5 November 2012

Procedure Law). Prohibition to approach includes both approach and communication through any means, except within the framework of criminal proceedings. The prohibition expires upon completion of the criminal proceedings. In a 2008 report on coercive measures by Professor Andrejs Judins prohibition to approach was found to be less than 1% of all coercive measures applied. Of the judges, public prosecutors and police surveyed only 54% had a positive view of its effectiveness, perhaps owing to lack of an effective control mechanism (e.g., electronic tagging). While it has been applied in cases of criminal sexual offences, Professor Judins argues for more frequent application.<sup>121</sup>

In cases where arrest or custody is not deemed to be appropriate, an official of an orphan's court (a guardianship and trusteeship institution established by a municipality) is informed of the circumstances. The official of the orphans court evaluates whether the child lives in conditions that are dangerous to health or life, as well as if the subsequent living of the child in the family may endanger his or her wholesome development, and makes an immediate individual binding oral decision on removal of the child care rights from the parents if such conditions are found (Article 23 of the Law on Orphan's Courts). The child is taken to a foster family, an institution of long-term social care and social rehabilitation, a hospital or other safe conditions. The immediate decision undergoes further review by the orphan's court, can be challenged in an administrative court and is reviewed at least every six months. Further possible protective measures are enumerated in answer to question i of chapter 3 of this report.

The current approach is seen to be problematic in regards to best interests of child and potential implementation of Article 14 of the Lanzarote Convention.<sup>122</sup>

3 CRIMINAL PROCEDURE

3.1 Investigation

i. During the investigation the principle of the „best interests of the child” is implemented as follows. A psychologist is invited to participate in investigation. It plays an important role

---

<sup>121</sup> Andrejs Judins, Safety Measures unrelated to Deprivation of Liberty (in Latvian, 2008) pp. 73-76.
<http://www.providus.lv/upload\_file/Publikacijas/Kriminalt/Judins\_Brivibas%20atnems.pdf> accessed 5 November 2012

<sup>122</sup> Explanatory report on Project of Cabinet of Ministers Ordinance "On Council of Europe Convention on the Protection of Children against Sexual Exploitation and Sexual Abuse" p. 3.

in the investigation. For example, according to Article 153, paragraph 1 of The Criminal Procedure Law:

„If a psychologist considers that the psyche of a person who has not reached 14 years of age, the psyche of a minor who has been recognised as a victim of violence committed by a person upon whom the victim is materially dependent or otherwise dependent, or the psyche of a minor who has been recognised as a victim of sexual abuse, may be harmed by a direct interrogation, such direct interrogation shall be performed with the intermediation of technical means and a psychologist. If an investigator or public prosecutor does not agree, the direct interrogation shall be performed only with the permission of the investigating judge, and in a court – with a court decision”<sup>123</sup>

Necessity of psychologist assistance is evaluated in each case. Psychologist should be trained to work with children in criminal proceedings. In the initial stage - the police station, - child protection is under the Protection of the Rights of the Child Law Article 59 paragraph 4, which states that, when the child gives explanations a professional must participate.

For the interests of the child a shorter time is set for questioning and it is accepted that the child does not repeat testimony in court. There is a very protective approach to the victims. About how children are protected during the trial read section viii. For the child is designated the best representatives, that would truly represent their interests (section viii).

ii. In Latvia there are no special units for investigating the crimes mentioned above within the legal force. The above-mentioned crimes are investigated by the general police units and officials. They are authorized to carry out covert operations. According to the Criminal Procedure Law Article 395, it is possible to create investigation groups (in case of large – scale of work or investigating complex crime). Yes, they investigate and analyse child pornography materials, they are entitled to call the industry experts. In relation to child pornography, the guidelines are created, to identify and investigate pornography. For example, The State Inspectorate For Protection Of Children’s Right created guidelines.<sup>124</sup>

<sup>123</sup> Law, Criminal Procedure Law (Latvia), <http://www.likumi.lv/doc.php?id=107820>, viewed on 12 October, 2012

<sup>124</sup> Valsts bērnu tiesību aizsardzības inspekcija, Vadlīnijas nelikumīgas un bērnu garīgajai attīstībai kaitīgas informācijas atpazīšanai internetā, <http://www.bti.gov.lv/lat/aktualitates/?doc=162>, viewed on 12 October, 2012

iii. It is required that the crime is reported in order to be investigated. However, the term – report – should be read broadly. If the victim is a child, there are many ways to report a suspected criminal offense, in some cases, reporting is mandatory. Article 369, paragraph of the Criminal Procedure Law states:

„(1)A reason for initiating criminal proceedings is the submission of information indicating the committing of a possible criminal offence to an investigating institution, Prosecutor’s Office, or court (hereinafter – institution responsible for the progress of criminal proceedings), or the acquisition of such information at an institution responsible for the progress of criminal proceedings.

(2)The information referred to in Paragraph one of this Section may be submitted:

- 1) as a submission by a person who has suffered as a result of a criminal offence;
- 2) by controlling and supervising institutions, in accordance with the procedures provided for in the regulatory enactments regulating the activities thereof;
- 3) by medical practitioners or institutions, as a report regarding traumas, illnesses, or cases of death the cause of which may be a criminal offence;
- 4) by non-governmental organisations, and authorities protecting the rights of children, as a submission regarding infringements upon the rights of minors the cause of which may be a criminal offence;
- 5) any natural person or legal person, as information regarding possible criminal offences from which such person has not directly suffered;
- 6) as a submission by any person regarding a criminal offence committed by such person;”<sup>125</sup>

Essentially, this provision requires that – even when a child makes a phone call to the hotline or provides information to the authority, for example, authority of the child rights protection, they are required to report the alleged offense. The same applies to doctors if they suspect that a child may be a victim of violence, including sexual violence. There are also a variety of public information campaigns. For example, State Police set up a pamphlet for residents, about who to notify in case of violence.<sup>126</sup>

---

<sup>125</sup> Law, Criminal Procedure Law (Latvia), <http://www.likumi.lv/doc.php?id=107820>, viewed on 12 October, 2012

Criminal Procedure Law Article 7, paragraph 2 sets:

“Criminal proceedings shall be initiated for the offences provided for in Articles 90, 130, 131, 132, 136, 157, Section 159, Paragraph one, Article 160, Paragraph one, Articles 168, 169, 180, Article 185, Paragraph one, Article 197, Article 200, Paragraph one and Article 260, Paragraph one of the Criminal Law, if a request has been received from the person to whom harm has been inflicted. Criminal proceedings may also be initiated without the receipt of a request from the person to whom harm has been inflicted, if such person is not able to implement his or her rights himself or herself due to a physical or mental deficiency.”<sup>127</sup>

It should be noted, that some of the above – mentioned articles relate to the research topic – sexual abuse, but these articles and paragraphs are not related to children.

Proceedings go on even in case of withdrawal from the statements.

iv. In order to determine what is the limitation period for the offense we must specify what is the classification of criminal offences in Latvia. It is stated in Criminal Law Article 7 – „crimes are sub-divided as follows: less serious crimes, serious crimes and especially serious crimes”<sup>128</sup>. Basically criminal offenses are classified by sanctions:

„A criminal violation is an offence for which this Law provides for deprivation of liberty for a term not exceeding two years, or a lesser punishment.

A less serious crime is an intentional offence for which this Law provides for deprivation of liberty for a term exceeding two years but not exceeding five years, or an offence, which has been committed through negligence and for which this Law provides for deprivation of liberty for a term exceeding two years, but not exceeding ten years.

A serious crime is an intentional offence for which this Law provides for deprivation of liberty for a term exceeding five years but not exceeding ten years, or an offence, which has

---

<sup>126</sup> Valsts Policijas buklets, <http://www.vp.gov.lv/?id=527&said=527&print=1> , viewed on 13 October, 2012

<sup>127</sup> Law, Criminal Procedure Law (Latvia), <http://www.likumi.lv/doc.php?id=107820>, viewed on 12 October, 2012

<sup>128</sup> Law, Criminal Law (Latvia), <http://www.likumi.lv/doc.php?id=88966>, viewed on 17 October, 2012

been committed through negligence and for which this Law provides for deprivation of liberty for a term exceeding ten years.

An especially serious crime is an intentional offence for which this Law provides for deprivation of liberty for a term exceeding ten years or life imprisonment”<sup>129</sup>

Limitation of the offense depends on the severity of the committed crime. For reasons of clarity, criminal liability limitation period for the crimes mentioned are best explained in the form of a table:

Table: criminal liability limitation period for the crimes mentioned in the report
Sexual abuse
act of sexual intercourse by means of violence, threats or taking advantage of the state of helplessness of a victim (rape) if commission thereof is on a minor	fifteen years after the day of commission rape, if serious consequences* are caused thereby, or rape of an underage person	thirty years after the day of commission *
pederastic or lesbian or other unnatural sexual acts of gratification, if such acts have been committed using violence or threats or by taking advantage of the state of helplessness of a person (violent sexual assault) if commission thereof is on a minor	fifteen years after the day of commission
violent sexual assault if serious consequences are caused thereby, as well as if commission thereof is on an underage person	thirty years after the day of commission *
sexual connection, or pederastic, lesbian or	five years after the day of commission

---

<sup>129</sup> Ibid

other unnatural sexual acts of gratification, with a person who has not attained the age of sixteen years and who is in financial or other dependence on the offender, or if such offence has been committed by a person who has attained the age of majority
cruel or violent treatment of a minor, if physical or mental suffering has been inflicted upon the minor and if such has been inflicted by persons upon whom the victim is financially or otherwise dependent	five years after the day of commission
Child prostitution
involving a person in prostitution if such acts have been committed repeatedly or by a group of persons, or commits inducing or compelling a minor to engage in prostitution, or commits providing premises to minors for purposes of prostitution	ten years after the day of commission encouraging or compelling an underage person to engage in prostitution	fifteen years after the day of commission
the same acts, if commission thereof is by an organized group	fifteen years after the day of commission
taking advantage, for purposes of enrichment, of a person who is engaged in prostitution, if commission thereof is by a group of persons, or with respect to minors	ten years after the day of commission
the same acts if commission thereof is by an organized group or if commission	fifteen years after the day of commission thereof is with respect to underage persons Child pornography

downloading, acquisition, importation, production, public demonstration, advertising or other distribution of such pornographic or erotic materials as relate or portray the sexual abuse of children [..], or the keeping of such materials	five years after the day of commission
involvement or utilization of minors in the production (manufacturing) of pornographic or erotic materials	ten years after the day of commission involvement or utilization of underage persons in the production (manufacturing) of pornographic or erotic materials	fifteen years after the day of commission involvement or utilization of minors or underage persons in the production (manufacturing) of pornographic or erotic materials by an organized group	fifteen years after the day of commission
Corruption of children
leading to depravity of a minor against the will of the minor or if such have been committed by a person who has attained the age of majority	five years after the day of commission leading to depravity of an underage person	five years after the day of commission
Solicitation of children for sexual purposes
encouraging a person who has not attained the age of 16 to involve in sexual acts or encouraging such person to meet with the aim to commit sexual acts or enter into a sexual relationship regardless of the way in	two years after the day of commission which the encouraging is expressed, if such have been committed by a person who has attained the age of majority the same acts against an underage person	five years after the day of commission * crime for which, in accordance with law, life imprisonment may be adjudged.

Criminal Law Article 56 states: the issue of the applicability of a limitation period, in respect of a person who has committed a crime for which life imprisonment may be imposed, shall be decided by a court if thirty years have passed since the day of commission of the crime. „The limitation period is calculated from the day when the criminal offence has been committed until when charges are brought or the accused has been issued an official extradition request if the accused resides in another state and a search warrant has been issued for him or her”.<sup>130</sup> It's certified by the court too, for example - Latvijas Republikas Augstākās tiesas Senāta Krimināllietu departamenta<sup>131</sup> judgment Nr. SKK – 352/2009.<sup>132</sup> In accordance with Criminal Law Article 56, paragraph 3:

„The running of the limitation period is interrupted if, before the date of termination of the period prescribed in Paragraph one of this Section, the person who has committed the criminal offence commits a new criminal offence. In such case, the limitation period provided for the more serious of the committed criminal offences shall be calculated from the time of the commission of the new criminal offence”<sup>133</sup>

In essence, the limitation period can not be suspended, but it can be interrupted.

v. In case when the age of the victim is not certain an expert-examination must be performed. Expert-examination is an investigative action performed by one or several experts under the assignment of a person directing the proceedings.<sup>134</sup> Expert-examination is

<sup>130</sup> Law, Criminal Law (Latvia), <http://www.likumi.lv/doc.php?id=88966>, viewed on 17 October, 2012

<sup>131</sup> The Republic of Latvia's Supreme Court

<sup>132</sup> The Republic of Latvia's Supreme Court judgment Nr. SKK – 352/2009 <http://www.at.gov.lv/files/archive/departament2/2009/skk%20352.doc>, viewed on 18 October, 2012

<sup>133</sup> Law, Criminal Law (Latvia), <http://www.likumi.lv/doc.php?id=88966>, viewed on 17 October, 2012

<sup>134</sup> Law, Criminal Procedure Law (Latvia), <http://www.likumi.lv/doc.php?id=107820>, viewed on 14 October, 2012, Article 193 made to give an opinion on an issue (in our case victim's age)<sup>135</sup>. In many cases, the examination is not required, at the same time, law states when an expert-examination is mandatory. Criminal Procedure Law Article 193 clause 3 and 4 states, that „An expert-examination is mandatory in order to determine:

- the age of a person, if age is significant in criminal proceedings but the relevant documents do not exist;
- Features that indicate the committing of a sexual offence.

An expert – examination is performed in Latvia State Centre for Forensic Medical Examination.

vi. Several public institutions are responsible of data recording and storage. In Latvia there are also several data records. Courts and judge, for example, are responsible of registering elaboration, after hearing details of the case and judgment are available in judicial information system<sup>136</sup>. In the system information is available on the Court's decisions and case's stage. Information is available, if the case is already in court. It should be noted that this information is only available for court employees. In International Cooperation in criminal matters, information can be transmitted to other public law enforcement authority (in other state).

The Ministry of the Interior has established a Criminal Information System (Sodu reģistrs). The purpose of this Punishment register is to establish uniform registration regarding persons who have committed criminal offences and administrative violations.<sup>137</sup> In this Punishment register, information about the criminal proceedings at any stage (police, prosecution, etc.) can be found. Police, Public Prosecutor's Office, investigating institutions can and are transmitting data to other competent authorities in other states. Report from criminal records can be issued upon request. Punishment register manager and holder is Interior Ministry's Information Centre. The following have the right to receive information from the Register:

---

<sup>135</sup> A.Denkovskis, A.Žitkovs, K.Kalmikovs, A.Matiševs, Tiesu medicīna, Rīga, 1981, p.3.

<sup>136</sup> TIS – Tiesu informatīvā sistēma, <http://court.jm.gov.lv/>, viewed on 18 October, 2012

<sup>137</sup> Law, Punishment Register Law (Latvia), <http://www.likumi.lv/doc.php?id=119360>, viewed on 17 October, 2012

„private individuals – regarding himself or herself, as well as in the cases and in the amount specifically indicated by regulatory enactments – other information at the disposal of the Register;

subjects of operational activities, investigative institutions, prosecutorial institutions and courts – for the performance of the functions specified by the regulatory enactments regulating the operation of the relevant institutions;

other State and local government institutions – in the amount specified by regulatory enactments and for the intended purposes;

employers - in order to verify the compliance of a natural person with the restrictions specified by regulatory enactments in recruiting such natural person for employment or into service (indicating the regulatory enactment that provides for the relevant restrictions);

sworn advocates – regarding a defendant in criminal proceedings or in an administrative violation matter;

The European Union members central authority – in order to get the necessary information about the person’s previous convictions.”<sup>138</sup>

Authorities respect protection of personal data rules, according to Personal Data Protection Law.

More recently the minor persons support information system was set up. This system includes necessary information to protect the rights of children. This system contains information even about suspected abuse of a minor, but system includes information only about the minor. Information relating to criminal proceedings is inserted in the system, only with the permission of a person directing the proceedings.

3.2 Complaint Procedure

vii. As already pointed out at the iii question, child has ample opportunities to complain about the violations of Substantive Criminal Law. A child may submit an application to the law enforcement authorities; he can call to an anonymous hotline and report the alleged violation. Child may submit an application to the law enforcement authorities in the case if he/she is older than fourteen. In the case if he is younger, for example nine year old – an application may be submitted by the school, teacher, doctor - anyone who may be the child's representative (specified in question vii).

---

<sup>138</sup> Law, Punishment Register Law (Latvia), <http://www.likumi.lv/doc.php?id=119360>, viewed on 17 October, 2012

So that reports about children's rights violation, including reports of sexual abuse in various cases can be accepted – 1) written – application to the police, child protection authority, 2) oral – a call to any child protection authority. In some cases, a child can do nothing but search for medical care, the doctor can report the alleged violation.

The purpose of these organizations and their duty is to investigate an alleged violations, analyze the data and, if necessary, go to another law enforcement authority and report.

viii. Representation is a legal relationship whereby one person (representative) performs within the mandate of the other person (represented) on behalf of the defense of her rights and legitimate interests [...].<sup>139</sup> Infancy in criminal proceedings make some special criminal procedure characteristics, in particular because of their limited procedural capacity.<sup>140</sup>

Criminal procedure law does not expressly regulate that the juvenile victims in criminal proceedings must be represented, at the same time Article 104, paragraph 2 provides that:

„If harm has been caused to a minor person, the victim shall be represented by:

- 1) a mother, father, or guardian;
- 2) one of the grandparents, a brother or sister of legal age, if the minor has lived together with one of such persons and the relevant kinsperson takes care of the minor;
- 3) a representative of an authority protecting the rights of children;
- 4) a representative of such non-governmental organization that performs the function of protecting the rights of children”<sup>141</sup>

This particular provision implies that a minor must have a representative, to represent and defend his rights.

Due to the fact that Criminal procedure law contains indication that the representative is a mother, father [...] (relative) we must provide a definition of those relatives.

---

<sup>139</sup> Group of authors, Juridisku terminu skaidrojošā vārdnīca, – Rīga: Nordik, 1998, 132.lpp

<sup>140</sup> Ā.Meikališa, K.Strada – Rozenberga, Kriminālprocess.Raksti 2005-2010, Rīga, Latvijas Vēstnesis, 2010, p.376

<sup>141</sup> Law, Criminal Procedure Law (Latvia), <http://www.likumi.lv/doc.php?id=107820>, viewed on 12 June 2012

According to the Civil Law mother of a child is the woman who has given birth to the child, which is certified by statement from a physician. The father of the child is a woman husband if a child is born to a woman during marriage or not later than 306 days.<sup>142</sup> While the Civil Law Article 154 notes:

„If the filiation of a child from the father cannot be determined in conformity with the provisions of Section 146 of this Law or a court has acknowledged that the child has not been born of his or her mother's husband, the filiation of the child from the father shall be based upon the voluntary acknowledgement of paternity or by the determination thereof by a court proceeding.”<sup>143</sup>

As regards the reference that the child's representative may also be a representative of an authority protecting the rights of children – it should be noted that in Criminal procedure law is not further defined what are these authorities protecting the rights of children. So it should be assumed that they are subjects that are mentioned in Protection of the Rights of the Child Law. In the Protection of the Rights of the Child Law Article 5. indicated following persons and institutions protecting the rights of the child:

(1) The protection of the rights of the child in the State shall be ensured by:

- 1) the parents (adopters), foster family and guardians of a child;
- 2) educational, cultural, health care and child care institutions;
- 3) State and local government institutions;
- 4) public organisations and other natural or legal persons whose activities are associated with the provision of support and assistance to children; and
- 5) employers.

The Criminal procedure law and The Protection of the Rights of the Child law is clear that juvenile victims may be represented by a relatively wide range of subjects that are not directly related to the victim. Usually separately identified – non governmental organizations and lawyers as representatives of the victim. In Latvia there are large number of non-governmental organizations that deal with children's right protection.<sup>144</sup> These organizations

---

<sup>142</sup> Law, Civil Law (Latvia), <http://www.likumi.lv/doc.php?id=225418>, viewed on 29 July 2012

<sup>143</sup> Ibid

<sup>144</sup> Nevalstisko organizāciju saraksts, http://www.bti.gov.lv/lat/noderigas\_saite/nvo/, viewed on 29 July 2012

brought together a wide range of people - concerned parents, specialists in their field, psychologists.

Non-governmental organizations are associations in accordance with Associations and Foundations Law. Non-governmental organizations offer a variety of services – such as anonymous hotlines. An example is the center of "Dardedze" – a non governmental, non profit organization working to prevent child abuse in Latvia and to provide direct help to children exposed to sexual, physical, emotional abuse and neglect.<sup>145</sup> If the child is involved in criminal proceedings as a victim of crime, they offer counseling sessions and support to children throughout the process.<sup>146</sup>

Article 104, paragraph 5 of the Criminal procedure law states that:

„If the rights of a minor and the protection of the interests thereof are encumbered or otherwise not ensured, or the representatives referred to in Paragraph two of this Section submit a substantiated request, a person directing the proceedings shall take a decision on the retaining of an advocate as the representative of a minor victim.”

So the lawyer can represent and protect the interests of the minor. A lawyer has the necessary training and knowledge to protect the child's best interests. We need to look at what are the rights of the above-mentioned representatives.

It should be mentioned that Article 107. of the Criminal procedure law states the rights of the representative of a victim:

„(1) If a victim implements his or her interests with the intermediation of a representative, the representative has all the rights of the victim.

(2) The representative of a minor victim who has reached the age of fifteen years may implement his or her rights together with the person to be represented.”

However, this article must be read in conjunction with article 104, paragraph 4, of the Criminal Procedure Law, that states:

---

<sup>145</sup> Dardedzes centra mājas lapa, http://www.centrsdardedze.lv/lat/par\_mums/, viewed on 29 July 2012

<sup>146</sup> Dardedzes centra ziņojums „Bērns kriminālprocesā”, 2012
http://www.centrsdardedze.lv/eng/child\_as\_a\_victim/, viewed on 29 July 2012

[..]all the rights of a victim belong completely to his or her representative, and the victim may not independently implement such rights, except for the rights of a minor to provide testimony and express his or her view.”

From the above it can be concluded that representative holds all the rights of victim other than personal (rights that can be exercised only by the victim), for example providing testimony. The victim's testimony is one of the most important evidence. This is particularly important in cases of child sexual abuse as the bodily injury on the victim or biological traces on clothes or body is not always detected. In such cases, person's guilt can be difficult to prove, and so the victim's testimony is especially important.

Certainly a major role in the representation of the child victim has An Orphan's court. “An Orphan's court is a guardianship and trusteeship institution established by a municipality or city local government”<sup>147</sup>. An Orphan's court is entitled to make representation, as well as legal actions to protect the interests of children (for example – had in an application in court).

In case if the complaint is brought against the parents, it is considered that the person/ persons are interested in the investigation/trial outcome – different representative is assigned for the child. As mentioned earlier the child can be represented by a relatively large range of subjects. Representative can be changed in the process (by investigator, prosecutor, court, etc.), for example, if the representative fails to represent the best interests of the child.

In relation to the rules of participation of minors in trials, it must be mentioned that in Latvia trials are divided into - open court session and closed court session. In a criminal case regarding a criminal offence against morals and sexual inviolability, and in order to not disclose intimate circumstances of the lives of persons involved in criminal proceedings - a court may determine a closed court session (Article 450 of Criminal procedure law).<sup>148</sup> In closed court session only persons involved in criminal proceedings can reside, consequently others or the media can not participate.

One of the general principle in victim's rights is that without victim's consent can not be published his image (in the press, the internet, television) during procedural actions, it is contained in Article 97, paragraph 9 of the Criminal Procedure Law. This is protecting victim's rights to an image and private life. As one of the most important forms of protection – special procedural protection. Special procedural protection is included in Criminal procedure law (Article 299):

---

<sup>147</sup> Law, Law On Orphan's Courts (Latvia), viewed on 29 September 2012

<sup>148</sup> Law, Criminal Procedure Law (Latvia), <http://www.likumi.lv/doc.php?id=107820>, viewed on 18 June 2012

„Special procedural action is the protection of the life, health, and other lawful interests of a victim, witness, and other persons who testify or have testified in criminal proceedings regarding serious or especially serious crimes, as well as of a minor who testifies regarding the crimes provided for in Sections 161, 162, and 174 of the Criminal Law, and of a person the threat to whom may influence the referred to [...] threatened person.”

Special procedural protection provides that in documents personal data is replaced by a pseudonym to ensure the protection of victim's name and other personal data. It contains special features of procedural actions in pre – trial proceedings too (Criminal procedure law Article 308, paragraphs 1,2, 3,<sup>1</sup> 4, 5:

“(1) A person for whom special procedural protection has been determined shall be summoned to an interrogation through the intermediation of a special protection institution.

(2) In recording in documents procedural actions wherein a protected person participates for whom personal identity data has been supplemented with a pseudonym, a person directing the proceedings shall only indicate a pseudonym in place of the identity data of such person. If an indication of the address of the receipt of a consignment is necessary, the address of a special protection institution shall be indicated.

(3) In performing procedural actions wherein several persons participate and wherein the prevention of the possibility of identifying a person under special procedural protection is necessary, technical means that do not allow for an identification of such person shall be used. Persons under protection have the right to not answer questions, if the answers may provide the opportunity to determine the identity thereof.

(3<sup>1</sup>) An official, who performs protection measures for a person involved in the criminal proceedings not exceeding his or her powers, has the right to be present in procedural actions which are performed with a person under special procedural protection.

(4) With the consent of the Prosecutor General, criminal proceedings against an accused for whom special procedural protection has been determined may be isolated in separate records.

(5) The address of a special protection institution shall be indicated instead of the address of a person under special procedural protection in the list of persons to be summoned to a court session. Only the pseudonym of a person whose personal identity data have been substituted with a pseudonym, and the address of a special protection institution, shall be entered.”<sup>149</sup>

In summary it can be concluded that the victim (child) representation offers a wide range of subjects, so that the child’s interests can be represented in the best possible way and be protected. In pre – trial and during the trial, the child is guaranteed with procedural safeguards (limited access to the media, protection of children’s data and image).

4 COMPLEMENTARY MEASURES

i. Centre „Dardedze” is non-governmental organization which target is to protect children from violence. Dardedze has many professionals who continuously improve their theoretical knowledge. Training is organized in inter-active way and there are certificate at the conclusion of these courses. Dardedze offers different kind of courses: 1) instructions for specialists of different groups (psychologists, doctors, lawyers, prosecutors, police, school, primary school and childcare professionals etc.); 2) seminars; 3) individual training programs; 4) special training programs for psychologists, psychotherapists and social workers who work to rehabilitate child victims. The main target of this program is to give all the necessary theoretical and practical information to provide help for children who have suffered from violation in a high level.<sup>150</sup>

State makes conferences to aware people about sexual violence against children. There are publications in official portals.<sup>151</sup> The state provides financial support for NGO projects, including “Dardedze”.

ii. There is a special subject (health education) in primary and secondary school where children are taught about these issues. There are also periodical researches, for example, The

<sup>149</sup> Law, Criminal Procedure Law (Latvia), <http://www.likumi.lv/doc.php?id=107820>, viewed on 19 June 2012

<sup>150</sup> Dardedze centrs. Available: http://www.centrsdardedze.lv/lat/apmacibas/liela\_vd/

<sup>151</sup> D. Strautiņa, Vardarbība prēt bērniem - realitāte, par kuru bieži klusē. 05.10.2012. Available: <http://www.lvportals.lv/likumi-prakse.php?id=218970>, Latvijas Republikas Labklājības ministrijas Bērnu tiesību aizsardzības inspekcija. APKOPOJUMS: Valsts bērnu tiesību aizsardzības inspekcijas paveiktais 2009.gada JANVĀRĪ. 06.02.2009. Available : http://www.bti.gov.lv/lat/zinas\_par\_iestadi/parskati\_un\_atskaites/?doc=1515

National Child Protection Inspectorate organized research for Children's Day. Participants were local city councils, children, parents, state's and non-governmental organizations.<sup>152</sup>

iii. There are no preventive intervention programs made by the state of Latvia for people who fear that they might commit a crime. But there is an opportunity to ask for help from probation service in such occasions. There is only one precedent in Latvia when a person asked for help and together with probation service a solution was found.

iv. There are three types of support provided. Hotline "Bērnu un jauniešu Uzticības Tālrunis" has been available from year 2006. It is a part of state's Children rights protection inspection. The users of this hotline can obtain advices on how to act in difficult situations. The second hotline "Bērnu un jauniešu uzticības tālrunis" is free of charge and it is for immediate help and support.<sup>153</sup>

The second section of help is legal help. The Legal Aid Administration subordinate body by the Ministry of Justice. One of the target is to pay compensations to victims. This compensation could be obtained only under Criminal Process law regulation. The person have to be recognized as a victim in a criminal proceeding criteria is that the crime against this person should be done intentionally. The second criteria is the result of crime – death, severe or moderate injuries, affronted person's sex, victim is infected with the human immunodeficiency virus, hepatitis B or C.<sup>154</sup>

Legal help are provided also by the University of Latvia legal practice and help center and the Business high- School "Turība" legal consultation office.<sup>155</sup>

The third type of help is sociopsychological help. There are two types of help provided. The First group - outpatient services is funded by the state, local governments, NGOs (fully and

<sup>152</sup> K. Ģērmanis. VBTAI izglītos bērnus par drošību uz ceļiem un peldvietās. 25.05.2007. Available: <http://www.lvportals.lv/print.php?id=157741>

<sup>153</sup> Bērns kācietušais. Available: http://www.bernskacietusais.lv/lv/pakalpojumi\_vardarbiba\_cietusiem\_berniem/uzticibas\_talruni/biedriba-bernu-un-jauniesu-uzticibas-talrunis-64/

<sup>154</sup> Juridiskās palīdzības administrācija. Available: http://www.bernskacietusais.lv/lv/pakalpojumi\_vardarbiba\_cietusiem\_berniem/juridiska\_palidziba/juridiskas-palidzibas-administracija-65/

<sup>155</sup> Biznesa augstskola "Turība" Studentu bezmaksas juridiskās konsultācijas birojs. Available: http://www.bernskacietusais.lv/lv/pakalpojumi\_vardarbiba\_cietusiem\_berniem/juridiska\_palidziba/biznesa-augstskola-turiba-studentu-bezmaksas-juridiskas-konsultacijas-birojs-67/ . Latvijas Universitātes Juridiskās prakses un palīdzības centrs. Available: http://www.bernskacietusais.lv/lv/pakalpojumi\_vardarbiba\_cietusiem\_berniem/juridiska\_palidziba/latvijas-universitates-juridiskas-prakses-un-palidzibas-centrs-66/

partly). The second group – crisis centers. Everyone can receive help by Social rehabilitation institutions funded by state for 30-60 days.<sup>156</sup>

These actions are coordinated by the project “Bērns kā cietušais”.

v. Are there any help lines in service of the victims? Are these help lines aware of the confidentiality principles?

Many help lines are available for the victims. The next are some examples: Center of Crises “Skalbes” help line, Riga Children Rights Center Children and Youth hotline. Center against Violence “Dardedze hotline”, Riga Children Rights Center Children and Youth hotline is for children and parents. One can get psychological, legal or social help there. And also a person can get help if he has problems with inner peace, worrisome mind, and feeling that you he is not needed by anyone. One can also get help there if someone does a physical or moral damage to him. It is also a shelter for those who have no place to go.

Center of Crises “Skalbes” help line’s main idea is to give a help generally not in any specific fields. There professionals will suggest where to find professional help.

Center against Violence “Dardedze hotline” is special help for children who have suffered from violence. Everyone can get answers to different kind of questions - what to do if a person has information that someone suffers from violence and also information about rehabilitation.

Those lines respect the principle of confidentiality.

vii. In 13 January 2012 European Social Fund project “Strengthening the administrative capacity of abused children and their families’ rehabilitation service delivery” was started. From year 2010 Children Fund of Latvia makes state’s social rehabilitation service for children who have suffered from violence administration. The experience and practice shows that generally there are no programs to help families with children who have suffered from violence. At the same time the number of children who have suffered from violence in families increases. There are no united systems and methodology for such cases.<sup>157</sup> There

---

<sup>156</sup> Sociālās rehabilitācijas institūcijas. Available:

http://www.bernskacietusais.lv/lv/pakalpojumi\_vardarbiba\_cietusiem\_berniem/socialpsihologiska\_palidziba/krizu\_centri/socialas-rehabilitacijas-institucijas-79/

<sup>157</sup> Latvijas Bērnu fonds. Available: <http://www.lbf.lv/lang/lv/esf-projekts> are no intervention programs for children who have suffered from violence and might have sexual behavior problems in the future.

III NATIONAL POLICY REGARDING CHILDREN

i. There is a political document – “ACTION PLAN for the protection of minors from criminal crimes against morality and sex 2012-2013”. This document consists of main tasks for implementation of the policy regarding children protection from sexual violation, including prevention measures, society’s education, society’s involvement into limiting of offenses against morality and sexual offences. This document sets penalty policy, inter-institutional cooperation developing and other measures and it also sets that those who have done sexual crimes against children have to be monitored.<sup>158</sup> ii The campaign “Sliktais pieskāriens<sup>159</sup>” was organized within the project “Protecting the right of child-victims of crime to psychological assistance and child friendly interviewing procedures”. Campaign was made against children sexual abuse. NGO of Poland “The Nobody’s Children Foundation” created this campaign in collaboration with public relation agency “Grey”. This campaign was realized in a several East-Europe countries – in Poland, Moldova, Ukraine, Bulgaria, Lithuania and Latvia. In Latvia this campaign was realized by NGO “Dardedze” in collaboration with seven partners – centers of crises in regions of Latvia. The main activities in this campaign was to inform society by information in media, to organize seminars and studies for parents “Audzināsim drošus vecākus nedrošā pasaulē”<sup>160</sup> where practical advises how to educate children about personal safety in relationship with other people were given, and also “what can be done if there is suspicion about children sexual abuse”.

This campaign also provided seminars and conferences for professionals, who work with children. During these seminars they were taught how to recognize children who suffer from sexual violence and they were also introduced with specific methods, which can be used to help children to get over trauma of sexual violence. This campaign also provided

---

<sup>158</sup> 25.08.2010. ORDER OF MINISTERS OF CABINET NR. 581. PAR RICIBAS PLANU NEPILNGADIGO AIZSARDZIBAI NO NOZIEDZIGIEM NODARIJUMIEM PRET TIKUMIBU UN DZIMUMNEAIZSKARAMIBU 2010.-2013.GADAM.

<sup>159</sup> “Bad Touch”

<sup>160</sup> “Let’s educate safe parents in unsecure world”

lessons for children “Džimbas drošības ceļojums”<sup>161</sup> which taught how to recognize insecure situations and how to act in those situations; also these lessons gave acquirements to avoid potential violence.

This campaign was realized in the period of 03/10/11-24/11/11.<sup>162</sup>

Center “Dardedze” also organized project „Bērns kā cietušais vai liecinieks kriminālprocesā”<sup>163</sup>. The aim of this program was to enhance children interests’ protection in the process of investigation and litigation. During this project new guidelines for interweaving children were used in five centers of crises in Latvia. 50 children were interviewed using new methods: it turned out that in 45 cases children were victims, in 5 cases – witnesses.

iii. There is a project “Multidimensional protection of child victims of crime” (EC action (Grant Agreement JLS/2008/ISEC/AG/032) where statistics on children’s sexual exploitation are available.<sup>164</sup> There is no unified system, which lists all cases of violence against children. In Latvia statistic data which reflects violence cases count is registered by Policy of state and it shows only crimes against children and number of litigated cases. There are registered about 1238-2285 crimes against minor, accordingly- in 2005 – 2285, in 2006 – 2304, in 2007 – 1901, in 2008 – 1629, in 2009 – 1238. There is a tendency for the number of sexually abused children to decrease. Regarding to statistics about number of cases where child have suffered from sexual violence: 2005 – 475, 2006 – 168, 2007 – 355, 2008 – 309, 2009 – 176 cases.<sup>165</sup>

Police of state report is available - crimes done by minors, minor victims, and condition of roads in Latvia – prevention – about 2011. All together there were 19 909 persons who had suffered from crimes, 653 form them were children. 312 children were in the group of age from 1 to14 but 341 were at the age group from 14 to18. 375 Children who

---

<sup>161</sup> “Safety trip of Džimba”

<sup>162</sup> Toma K. Centrs „Dardedze”. <http://www.centrsdardedze.lv/lat/kampanas/>, http://www.centrsdardedze.lv/lat/dardedzes\_hronika/?doc=416.
http://www.krizucentrs.lv/kr/data/Virselsis\_LV.pdf

<sup>163</sup> “Child as Victim or Witness in Criminal Procedure”

<sup>164</sup> “Multidimensional protection of child victims of crime” (EC action (Grant Agreement JLS/2008/ISEC/AG/032)http://www.bernskacietusais.lv/download.php?file=files/object\_files/1317552919225\_Vardarb%C4%ABbas\_pret\_bernu\_biezums.pdf

<sup>165</sup> “Multidimensional protection of child victims of crime” (EC action (Grant Agreement JLS/2008/ISEC/AG/032)http://www.bernskacietusais.lv/download.php?file=files/object\_files/1317552919225\_Vardarb%C4%ABbas\_pret\_bernu\_biezums.pdf

had suffered from violence were boys, 173 from them were at the age group from 1 to 14, but 202 were at the age group from 14 to 18. 271 from children who had suffered from violence were girls. 139 of them were at the age group from 1 to 14 but 139 were at the age group from 14-18.<sup>166</sup>

iv. In Latvia there are promotional campaigns organized by NGOs. The main aim in those campaigns is to inform the society how to recognize a child who has suffered from sexual violence and to support this victim with professional help. Most popular campaigns are “Sliktais pieskariens”, „Bērns kā cietušais vai liecinieks kriminālprocesā”, „Esmu mazs – saudzē mani!”<sup>167</sup>, “Redzi, dzirdi, paziņo”<sup>168</sup>, “Stopēt bīstami”<sup>169</sup>, “Neļauj sevi pazemot internetā”<sup>170</sup>

v. Children’s perspective and interests are represented by NGO’s in law making process. Government meetings are opened; all information about meetings is available in internet before every meeting. Representative of NGO participates in secretaries of state meetings. While there is a procedure - public participation, everyone can submit their suggestions. There are also expert groups which consist of representatives from NGO, and National Human Rights Office.<sup>171</sup> Expert groups hold meetings where they discuss the necessary regulatory frameworks. NGO’s also can give their opinions about law or policy document projects. All objections from opinions are reflected in reference of objections and protocol of inter-agency coordination. Policy documents` and law projects have an annex, where information about reconciliation of project with NGOs is written.

In every ministry there is a representative who makes collaboration with NGO.

vi. There is regulation for NGOs which determinate how to involve NGOs in law making process. Involvement in law making process of society is determined by political guidelines (declaration of government), policy planning documents in civil society’s development scope

<sup>166</sup> Police of state report - crimes done by minors, minors victims, and condition of roads in Latvia – prevention – about 2011. http://www.vp.gov.lv/faili/relizes/2011\_PARSKATS.doc

<sup>167</sup> “help me – I am small”. Palīgs vecākiem. <http://paligsvecakiem.lv/2012/04/uzsakta-sociala-kampana-%E2%80%99Esmu-mazs-saudze-mani/>

<sup>168</sup> „See, hear, inform”. Center „Dardedze”. http://www.centrsdardedze.lv/lat/kampanas/redzi\_dzirdi\_zino/

<sup>169</sup> „car sharing - dangerous”. police of state official home page. <http://www.sargi-sevi.lv/?id=272&sa=317,272&lev=0>

<sup>170</sup> „Don’t let to abase yourself in network”. LATNET biznesa klases internets. <http://ls.lv/?fl1m12p61>

<sup>171</sup> 14.04.2003. ORDER OF MINISTERS OF CABINET NR. 148. PAR DARBA GRUPU LIKUMPROJEKTA “GROZĪJUMI BĒRNU TIESĪBU AIZSARDZĪBAS LIKUMĀ” SAGATAVOŠANAI.

(Guidelines of Civil society's strengthening policy 2005-2014, program of Civil society's strengthening policy 2008-2012). Policy planning documents in public administration's scope (guidelines of public administration development policy 2008-2013, guidelines of development of policy planning system, guidelines of government communication policy 2008-2013) and also normative regulation such as State Administration Structure Law, Procedure of the Cabinet of Ministers, Rules of government about public participation in policy development planning process etc.)

IV OTHER

As already mentioned in answer to question xxiii of chapter 2 of this report, Ministry of Interior of Republic of Latvia is engaged in a comprehensive overhaul of criminal law relating to crimes of sexual nature. Several bills have already been submitted to Parliament, proposing changes in substantive and procedural law regarding, inter alia, definition of intent, aggravating circumstances, terms of limitations, abolishing custodial arrest, and classification of crimes depending on their gravity (seriousness). While proposed amendments may correct some of the shortcomings identified, inclusion of such propositions in this report must be regarded as both premature and impractical due to limited scope of the report.

1. Reports reveal that Latvia has discrimination problems against women, incidents of violence against ethnic minorities, and societal violence and incidents of government discrimination against homosexuals.
2. The marriage is enshrined constitutionally. In Latvia marriage creates an obligation on the part of a husband and a wife to be faithful to each other, to live together, to take care of each other and to jointly ensure the welfare of their family.
3. In lawful relations that affect a child, the rights and best interests of the child takes priority.
4. When adopting the Declaration on the Accession of the Republic of Latvia to International Instruments Relating to Human Rights it was declared that Latvia considers as binding more than 50 international instruments in the sphere of human rights.
5. Although Latvia is not the party to Lanzarote Convention the possibility to sign and ratify it in Latvia in future is regarded as positive, but no particular date stated the ratification being expected.

6. Although the Constitution of Latvia was adopted without a bill of rights, this bill was created and it consisted of human rights which is progressive for the time when the Constitution of Latvia was created, for example, gender equality.
7. After restoration of independence, in 1998, chapter 8 - human rights - was included in constitution and entered into force as constitutional law.
8. Constitutional court of Latvia is an independent judiciary body, which reviews cases that are in court's competence.
9. In Latvia a person is criminally liable when they become 14 years old. Underage are persons younger than 14 years and these persons are not criminally liable.
10. In Latvia there are NGOs which provide help for children victim. The state provides financial support for NGO projects.
11. There are no preventive intervention programs made by the state of Latvian for people who fear that they might commit a crime.
12. There are no intervention programs for children who have suffered from violence and might have sexual behavior problems in the future.
13. In Latvia there are promotional campaigns organized by NGOs. The main aim in those campaigns is to inform the society how to recognize a child who has suffered from sexual violence and to support this victim with professional help.
14. Children's perspective and interests are represented by NGO's in law making process. There is regulation for NGOs which determinate how to involve NGOs in law making process.
15. National definition of chld pornography is overly specific, constructed using flawed legal technique and incompatible with the Lanzarote convention.
16. Several offences, such as those relating to participation of a child in pornographic performances and recruiting and using child prostitutes, are defined insufficiently clearly and prosecuting some of them require inventive and broad interpretation of national regulations.
17. National definition of corruption of children (leading to depravity) is imprecise, doesn't differentiate between physical and non-physical activities, and continues to cause chronic difficulties in application.

18. While sanctions for crimes of sexual nature are generally proportionate, their dissuasiveness and effectiveness are seriously hampered by an unsupported and resource-poor State Probation Service.

19. Several legal instruments, such as coercive measures for legal persons, exist in regulations, but are not applied in practice.

20. In national substantive criminal law there is insufficient protection for children in so-called “Romeo & Juliet” cases, especially regarding child pornography and so-called “sexting”.

21. Confiscation of property under national criminal law is overly complex and often misused; current procedure offers insufficient protection to third parties.

22. State offers insufficient protection for child victims of crimes of sexual nature in cases where the offence occurs within the close environment of the child.

23. Both substantive and procedural criminal law is constantly being reformed to bring it in line with international and European obligations, while insufficient attention is given to continuing education of legal authorities regarding its application.

24. During the investigation the principle of the „best interests of the child” is implemented as follows: a psychologist is invited to participate in investigation, for the interests of the child, is set a shorter time for questioning and it is accepted that the child does not repeat testimony in court. There is a very protective approach to the victims.

25. In Latvia there are no special units for investigating the crimes mentioned in research within the legal force, crimes are investigated by the general police units and officials and they are authorized to carry out covert operations.

26. It is required that the crime is reported in order to be investigated, however, the term – report – should be read broadly. There are many ways to report a suspected criminal offense, in some cases, reporting is mandatory.

27. Crimes are sub-divided as follows: less serious crimes, serious crimes and especially serious crimes - limitation of the offense depends on the severity of the committed crime

28. In case when the age of the victim is not certain an expert-examination must be performed - expert-examination is an investigative action performed by one or several experts under the assignment of a person directing the proceedings

29. For data recording and storage are responsible a number of public institutions. In Latvia there are a number of data records, authorities respect protection of personal data rules, according to Personal Data Protection Law

30. Reports about children's rights violation, including reports of sexual abuse in various cases can be accepted – 1) written and 2) oral, in some cases, a child can do nothing but search for medical care, the doctor can report the alleged violation.

31. The victim (child) representation offers a wide range of subjects, so that the child's interests can be represented in the best possible way and be protected. In pre – trial and during the trial, the child is guaranteed with procedural safeguards (limited access to the media, protection of children's data and image).

ELSA MALTA

I Introduction.....	795
1 General .....	795
2 The Lanzarote Convention.....	801
II National Legislation .....	803
1 General Principles Of The Jurisdiction .....	803
2 Substantive Criminal Law .....	814
2.1 Sexual Abuse.....	814
2.2 Child Prostitution .....	816
2.3 Child Pornography .....	818
2.4 Corruption of Children.....	819
2.5 Solicitation of Children for Sexual Purposes.....	820
2.6 Corporate Liability.....	820
2.7 Aggravating Circumstances .....	821
2.8 Sanctions and Measures .....	822
3 Criminal Procedure .....	829
3.1 Investigation .....	829
3.2 Complaint Procedure .....	833
4 Complementary Measures.....	836
III National Policy Regarding Children.....	839
IV Other.....	856

Academic Supervisor:

Dr. Ruth Farrugia

National Co-Ordinator:

Gabrielle Tabone

Research Group:

Christina M Borg

James Debono

Ursula Farrugia

Patrick Gatt

Anselmo Mifsud Bonnici

Clement Mifsud Bonnici

Gaynor Saliba

Anthea Turner

Gabrielle Tabone

I INTRODUCTION

“Sexual violence is an attempt to the child’s human dignity and a serious violation of children’s rights. It causes irreparable damage to the victim’s physical and mental health and often has life-lasting effect.”<sup>1</sup>

1 GENERAL

i. The state of Malta’s commitment to regulate discrimination whilst also promoting and enforcing equal rights is evinced by the entrenchment of article 14 of the Maltese State’s Constitution, binding it to:

“promote the equal right of men and women to enjoy all economic, social, cultural, civil and political rights and for this purpose shall take appropriate measures to eliminate all forms of discrimination between the sexes by any person, organisation or enterprise; the State shall in particular aim at ensuring that women workers enjoy equal rights and the same wages for the same work as men”.<sup>2</sup>

Furthermore within the section Fundamental Rights and Freedoms of the Individual, of the said constitution, Article 45 defines discriminatory treatment as:

“means affording different treatment to different persons attributable wholly or mainly to their respective descriptions by race, place of origin, political opinions, colour, creed or sex whereby persons of one such description are subjected to disabilities or restrictions to which persons of another such description are not made subject or are accorded privileges or advantages which are not accorded to persons of another such description”.

The Maltese Government is prohibited from legislating in any discriminatory manner either of itself or in its effect, subject to sub-articles 4, 5 and 7 of the same article.<sup>3</sup>

The European Commission’s Eurobarometer public opinion report on “Discrimination in the European Union” published in January 2007, studied the sociological patterns of the different European States. According to this study the Maltese respondents declared that in their view with regards to the concept of multi-cultural society, the different ethnical origin of people does not enrich the culture of the society. Only 32% of the respondents claimed

---

<sup>1</sup> Mrs Maud de Boer-Buquicchio, Deputy Secretary General of the Council of Europe.

<sup>2</sup> Constitution of Malta

<sup>3</sup> Ibid

that it is beneficial, and so amongst the other members of the European Union, Malta placed the last.<sup>4</sup>

On the other hand on the same subject a report published by the same institution a year later, reported that only 14% of the respondents in the said previous 12 months, felt that they had witnessed someone being either discriminated against or harassed on the basis of discrimination: the lowest recorded amongst the 27 European states.<sup>5</sup> This positive result was signalled once more in the Eurobarometer's report: Discrimination in the EU 2009, where there only 12% of the respondents witnessed someone being discriminated in the previous 12 months. In the later report it was also recorded that, 7% of the respondents felt that in the previous 12 months, they had personally felt discriminated against or harassed, the second lowest amongst the other members of the European Union.<sup>6</sup>

Both in the 2008 and 2009 reports published by the Eurobarometer, respondents were asked whether enough effort was being made to fight all forms of discrimination in their respective country. The majority of Maltese respondents felt that enough is done, in 2008.<sup>7</sup> Yet this result contrasts with the 2009 report, where 43% replied positively, and a sharp drop of 9% of the respondents changed their views.<sup>8</sup>

ii. The term “family” is not defined under Maltese Law, although article 3 in the section ‘Of the rights and Duties arising from Marriage’ of the Civil Code, the clear indication is that there is a fore gone conclusion that a family is made up of two spouses.<sup>9</sup> The article reads:

“Both spouses are bound, each in proportion to his or her means and of his or her ability to work whether in the home or outside the home as the interest of the family requires, to maintain each other and to contribute towards the needs of the family”.<sup>10</sup>

According to the Maltese Census results published in 2005 by the National Statistics Office, the majority of the population's marital status is “married” with 59.3% an 8% increase over the span of 10 years. This document also records that the average marital age in the year

---

<sup>4</sup> Discrimination in the European Union January 2007

<sup>5</sup> Discrimination in the European Union: Perception, Experiences and Attitudes July 2008

<sup>6</sup> Discrimination in the European Union in 2009

<sup>7</sup> (n.4)

<sup>8</sup>(n. 5)

<sup>9</sup> Noteworthy to the foregoing discussion is that the Courts have a different viewpoint and there is sound jurisprudence which reflects family as not necessarily being within marriage – the emphasis is on relationships and children born to parents whether within or outside wedlock

<sup>10</sup> Chapter 16 of the Laws of Malta

2003 for women was 26.9 years whilst in the case of men 28.5 years.<sup>11</sup> In a more recent document published by the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe, Statistical Database the marital age in men and women has increased constantly and according to the latest data recorded in 2008 the average marital age of women is 27.5 years whilst in the case of men the average is 29.6 years.<sup>12</sup>

iii. Historically children have always been regarded as the foundation of the family, where importance is given to taking care of them by providing shelter, protection, affection and support. This is mainly due to the fact that the law and society reflect the Christian traditions. The cultural directions of the Maltese are taken clearly into consideration in the Laws of Malta. This is further reflected in article 3B(1) of the Civil Code, which states;

“Marriage imposes on both spouses the obligation to look after, maintain, instruct and educate the children of the marriage taking into account the abilities, natural inclinations and aspirations of the children.”<sup>13</sup>

The same genre of obligations is imposed on parents of children conceived and born out of wedlock.<sup>14</sup> The legal importance and judicial attention towards children’s rights and due protection has increased in the last two decades, mostly due to a higher awareness of the risks and vulnerability of children. The Maltese legislator has consistently updated and amended laws to protect and safeguard the status of children in an effective manner.

In 2003 through the Commissioner for Children Act, the government introduced the appointment of an official defined as the Children Commissioner who is specifically in charge of promoting the welfare and safeguarding the best interest of children whilst acting in an independent manner any person or authority.<sup>15</sup> Amongst other safeguards the government of Malta has also introduced the Child Offender Register through the Protection of Minors (Registration) Act in 2012, whereby a register has been introduced prohibiting persons found guilty of committing crimes against children (not limited to just sexual abuse cases) from finding employment in institutions where children are educated or taken care of.<sup>16</sup> This was a step further after the implementation of the Protection of

---

<sup>11</sup> Maltese Families, Social Statistics and Information Society (NSO)

<sup>12</sup> UNECE Statistical Database

<sup>13</sup> (n.8)

<sup>14</sup> Ibid Art 93

<sup>15</sup> Chapter 462 of the Laws of Malta

<sup>16</sup> This register is restricted to prospective employers and is only just starting to be used

Children Act in 2010,<sup>17</sup> and the introduction of the children's advocate in the Civil Code. These being a few of the numerous amendments made to the law regarding children.

One of the most prominent cases given great importance by the media regarding child sex abuse, was the case of the Priests' child abuse case which occurred in Gozo, resulting in the conviction of 2 priests (still awaiting the decision of the Court of Appeal).<sup>18</sup>

iv. The main piece of legislation regarding the ratification of treaties is the Ratification of Treaties Act of 1983 (hereinafter the 'RTA').<sup>19</sup> While the definition of 'treaties' is considerably broad,<sup>20</sup> its remit is clearly limited. The RTA regulates only those treaties which affect or concern:

- a) the status of Malta under international law or the maintenance or support of such status;
- b) the security of Malta, its sovereignty, independence, unity or territorial integrity; or
- c) the relationship of Malta with any multinational organization, agency, association or similar body.<sup>21</sup>

It is submitted that neither the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child (hereinafter the 'UNCRC') nor the Council of Europe Convention on the Protection of Children against Sexual Exploitation and Sexual Abuse (hereinafter the 'Lanzarote Convention') has any provisions which fall within the scope of the RTA. In such cases, the Maltese Government does not have its hands tied, as is clear from a reading of Article 5 of the RTA:

"Nothing in this Act shall be construed as in any way affecting the powers of the Government with respect to treaties to which article 3(1) does not apply".<sup>22</sup>

However, it is custom for the Maltese Government to implement an international treaty, whether in its entirety or only selected provisions, into Maltese law by primary legislation.<sup>23</sup>

---

<sup>17</sup> Chapter 507 of the Laws of Malta, Protection of Children (Hague Convention) Act

<sup>18</sup> <<http://www.timesofmalta.com/articles/view/20120706/local/priests.427421>>

<sup>19</sup> Chapter 304 of the Laws of Malta.

<sup>20</sup> Ibid., Art 2 reads "treaty" means an international agreement concluded between States in written form and governed by international law, whether embodied in a single instrument or in two or more related instruments and whatever its particular designation.

<sup>21</sup> Ibid., Art 3 (1).

<sup>22</sup> Ibid.

<sup>23</sup> For example, the Child Abduction and Custody implements the Convention on the Civil Aspects of

Maltese law is unclear on this point. While we have opted for the dualist approach with respect to treaties falling within the remit of the RTA, it is unclear whether we follow the monist or dualist approach with respect to the treaties falling outside the remit of the RTA. It is the generally the accepted view that Malta has inherited the dualist approach with respect to all international treaties from its colonial days. The RTA, which was promulgated after the severance of the umbilical cord from the British, merely confirms the dualist view, however, only with a specific class of treaties.<sup>24</sup>

The UNCRC was signed by the Maltese Government on 26 January 1990 and ratified on 30 September 1990.<sup>25</sup> The Maltese Government did make a reservation upon notification, yet it was withdrawn on 20 August 2001.<sup>26</sup> The reservation read as follows: '[t]he Government of Malta is bound by the obligations arising out of this article to the extent of present social security legislation'.<sup>27</sup> The UNCRC has not, to date, been incorporated into Maltese national law. Therefore, its provisions do not have direct effect in our legal system. This is in line with a dualist perception of international law. This would effectively mean that a private complainant cannot, at law, hold the Maltese Government accountable to its positive obligations emerging from the UNCRC before the Maltese courts.

The only proper reference made to the UNCRC in domestic legislation is in the Child Commissioner Act of 2003.<sup>28</sup> Under the Act, the Child Commissioner may exercise certain powers and enforcement measures with respect to the UNCRC. These include:

- d) promotion and advocacy of children's rights under the UNCRC;<sup>29</sup>
- e) ensure that children's rights under the UNCRC are taken into account by public authorities in policy-making;<sup>30</sup>

---

International Child Abduction; the Protection of Children (Hague Convention) Act implements the Convention on jurisdiction, applicable law, recognition, enforcement and cooperation in respect of parental responsibility and measures for the protection of children.

<sup>24</sup> Ian Refalo, 'Constitutional Change in Malta' (President's Forum on Constitutional Change, 2012). See also: Kevin Aquilina, 'The Parliament of Malta versus the Constitution of Malta: parliament's law-making function under section 65(1) of the Constitution' [2012] Common Law Bulletin for a view that Malta has adopted, with respect to European Union legislation a mixed monist/dualist approach.

<sup>25</sup> <http://treaties.un.org/Pages/ViewDetails.aspx?src=IND&mtdsg\_no=IV-11&chapter=4&lang=en> last accessed 16 August 2012.

<sup>26</sup> <http://treaties.un.org/Pages/ViewDetails.aspx?src=IND&mtdsg\_no=IV-11&chapter=4&lang=en#39> last accessed 16 August 2012.

<sup>27</sup> Ibid.

<sup>28</sup> Chapter 462 of the Laws of Malta.

<sup>29</sup> Ibid., Art 9 (a).

- f) investigation of alleged breaches of children's rights under the UNCRC, particularly a child's death;<sup>31</sup> and most notably,
- g) the issue of non-binding compliance notices recommending any person who is not in adherence with the UNCRCR to change his ways.<sup>32</sup>

The Council for Children, also set up under the Act, has some functions relating to the Convention which complement the role of the Commissioner.<sup>33</sup>

In any case, it must be acknowledged that Maltese law satisfactorily addresses the obligations arising from the UNCRC.

The United Nations Committee on the Rights of the Child in its 2000 Concluding Observations on Malta flagged a number of issues relating to the status of the UNCRC at Maltese law. The principal concern remains that the UNCRC has not been fully incorporated into Maltese law. Other issues were discussed including the low age of criminal responsibility (9 years of age).

Since 2000, Malta has addressed a number of these issues. For example, the distinction between legitimate and illegitimate children was removed from the Civil Code for purposes of succession law and the promulgation of the Domestic Violence Act has given remedies to the child where there is disproportionate corporal punishment.

Despite these concerns, it must be acknowledged that Maltese law satisfactorily addresses the obligations arising from the UNCRC.

v. The Directive on combating the sexual abuse and sexual exploitation of children and child pornography, and replacing Council Framework Decision 2004/68/JHA has been in part transposed in Maltese law by Act VII of 2010 amending various laws relating to criminal matters.<sup>34</sup> In its transposition, the Maltese Government had preceded the Directive's publication in the EU's Official Journal. Other aspects of the Directive were already in place in the Maltese legal system.

---

<sup>30</sup> Ibid., Art 9 (f)

<sup>31</sup> Ibid., Art 11 (c)

<sup>32</sup> Ibid., Art 17

<sup>33</sup> Ibid., Art 12 (6)

<sup>34</sup> <<http://www.doi.gov.mt/EN/parliamentacts/2010/ACT%20VII%20Various%20Laws.pdf>> last accessed 22 August 2012.

2 THE LANZAROTE CONVENTION

i. Malta signed the European Convention of Human Rights on 12 December 1966 and ratified the same on the 23rd January 1967<sup>35</sup>. One must highlight that this Convention has been fully ratified into the Maltese legislative framework via Act XIV of 1987 which created the European Convention Act, Chapter 319 of the Laws of Malta.

ii. In the year 2007, the Convention on the Protection of Children against Sexual Exploitation and Sexual Abuse was adopted and opened for signature on the occasion of the 28th Conference of European Minister of Justice Lanzarote, Spain. Subsequently, following its fifth ratification, the Convention entered into force on the first day of July 2010.

This Convention set out to be the very first instrument/international treaty to address and establish the various forms of sexual abuse of children as criminal offences, including such abuse committed in the home or family, with the use of force, coercion or threats. As well as programmes to support victims, encourages people to report suspected sexual exploitation and abuse and sets up telephone and Internet help lines purposely for children. The Convention also caters for preventive measures<sup>36</sup>. The Convention also established itself to strive and work hard to promote an awareness campaign to encourage people to report suspected sexual exploitation and abuse.

The new legal tool also ensures that child victims are protected during judicial proceedings, for example with regard to their identity and privacy. From a legislative domestic point of view, as catered for by recent legislation, the child interests are always protected.

The Convention's trademark is known as The Modern "4 Ps" approach:

- Prevent and combat sexual exploitation and abuse of children;
- Protect the rights of child victims;
- Prosecute the perpetrators;
- Promote appropriate policies and national and international co-operation against this phenomenon.

---

<sup>35</sup> Council of Europe Country Information <http://www.echr.coe.int/50/en/#countries-infos> accessed 21 September 2012

<sup>36</sup> Including the screening, recruitment and training of people working in contact with children, making children aware of the risks and teaching them how they should be protecting themselves and subsequently monitoring measures for offenders and potential offenders

The core of this Convention is its emphasis on keeping the best interests of children in the forefront.

On the 6th of September 2010, Malta signed the Council of Europe Convention on the protection of Children against Sexual Exploitation and Sexual Abuse. The Convention then came into force in Malta on the 1st January 2011.

The Ambassador Joseph Licari, Permanent Representative to the Council of Europe in Strasbourg, signed the convention on behalf of the Maltese government, he then deposited the instrument of ratification with the Treaty Office of the Council of Europe.

After signing this Convention, Malta together with the other parties have bound themselves to take the necessary legislative or other measures to encourage and support the setting up of information services, such as telephone or Internet help-lines, to provide advice to callers, confidentially and with due regard for their anonymity.

Malta did not make any reservations or opt-outs from the Convention. However, as required by the said convention, Malta made a declaration with regards to Article 37(2); which states that:

Each Party shall, at the time of signature or when depositing its instrument of ratification, acceptance, approval or accession, communicate to the Secretary General of the Council of Europe the name and address of a single national authority in charge for the purposes of paragraph 1.

Malta designated the Malta Police Force as the competent national authority for the purposes of Article 37.<sup>37</sup>

v. The Lanzarote Convention is locally ranked as a ratified and incorporated International Convention.

However, having said that, with reference to Article 65(1) of the Constitution of Malta, all Maltese legislation must be in accordance with Malta's international obligations. In this case, the convention is an international obligation.<sup>38</sup>

---

<sup>37</sup> Paragraph 2 referred to above

